If the fact is already known to the Police there cannot be a discovery again of that fact as a result of a statement made by the accused subsequent to the original discovery.

Where long prior to the furnishing of the information by the accused to the Police in the Police custody that he secreted the dead body of the deceased at a particular place, the whole village and the Police were knowing that there was a possibility of discovering some remnants of human body from that place in the vicinity of which the Police had recovered a human hand, it cannot be said that recovery of skull by the Police from that place subsequent to the information furnished by the accused was the result of such information furnished by him. The discovery made cannot, therefore, fall within the purview of S. 27 of the Act. Consequently, the statement made by the accused cannot be used under S. 27 of the Act: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 575: (1969) 2 Mys.L.J. 395: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1299.

If a Police Officer states that the accused had already told him that he would recover the stolen ornaments from his house and that he told so in the presence of witnesses for a second time who were not present when the disclosure for the first time was made to him, the evidence of the witnesses about the accused having shown his readiness to recover the property is not admissible. It cannot be said that the ornaments in question were discovered on the information given to the Police Officer in the presence of witnesses. The only information that can be said to have led to the discovery is the information given to the Police Officer when he was alone: 1951 Raj.L.W. 74: A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 20. (This case was doubted in A.I.R. 1955 Hyd. 200, cited supra).

A fact known to the Police cannot be rediscovered on the statement of an accused person so as to make such statement or such incriminating conduct admissible under S. 27: A.I.R. 1929 Sind 250. See also A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 350; 50 Mys. H.C.R. 106; (1947) 49 Punj.L.R. 16: A.I.R. 1948 Lah. 69.

The recovery of a kassi, weapon of offence with which the offence is alleged to have been committed, is not very material when the Police had already known that that was the weapon, as it was mentioned in the F.I.R., and there was no concealment of the weapon, as the accused had thrown it while running away and the witnesses examined had seen where it was thrown: (1972) 2 Sim.L.J. 118.

Weapon thrown in 'khud' discovered at instance of accused—Evidentiary value explained: (1972) 2 Sim.L.J. 349.

Where the evidence of the photographer, engaged and taken by the Police at the spot to take photograph of a skeleton, clearly indicated that the Police already knew that the dead body was a skeleton and nothing in the accused's disclosure statement before the recovery showed that he then knew that the dead body had become a skeleton, held, the irresistible conclusion was that the Police had already seen the dead body as a skeleton; the photographer's subsequent statement that the accused had taken them to the place where the dead body was lying, was prima facie of no consequence and, could not be relied on for proving the accused's guilt: 1990 Cr.L.J. 77 (All.) (D.B.).

The effect of recovery of incriminating articles in pursuance to the accused's disclosure statement is not destroyed because the complaint made to the Police has a mention of the place where the stolen property might have been kept; the complaint is not a prior information, but the basis for initiation of investigations. Where the evidence clearly showed that recovery was effected pursuant to the accused's disclosure statement as witnessed by an independent person, held, the recovery was neither illegal nor in contravention of S. 27: 1985 M.L.J. (Cr.) 410.

Where the accused first told the Police that he would show them the place where the knife used in the offence could be recovered and then took them to the place where the said knife was hidden, which ultimately led to the recovery of the said knife, held, it could not be said that this evidence was not admissible under S. 27 as the Police already knew about the place where the knife could be found: A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 1385: (1973) 3 S.C.C. 662: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1136.

Where the knowledge gained by the Police from a witness was a vague idea of the fact that the accused had thrown something at a particular place and that knowledge was acted upon and the result was in the negative, held, that knowledge would have no bearing on what happened subsequently, i.e., the accused leading the Police to a place and producing a part of the weapon of offence, because the accused alone obviously knew the exact spot where it had been thrown and, therefore, this discovery was of extreme importance in establishing the prosecution case: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 617 (D.B.).

23. Statement under section 162, Cr.P.Code.—Even though it is clearly wrong to use the statements made by witnesses in the course of investigation under S. 162 of the Code of the Criminal Procedure as substantive evidence but the same are permitted to be proved under S. 27, as an exception to the rule: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 873: 1980 Cr.L.J. 564: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 390.

S. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides a wholesome safeguard to the accused; its denial to him is justified only under exceptional circumstances as set out in Ss. 27 and 32(1): (1992) 1 An.W.R. 16.

Any statement which did not partake the character of a confessional statement envisaged by S. 27, Evidence Act, would not be admissible in view of the bar of S. 162, Cr.P.Code: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1755 (All.) (D.B.).

24. Place of recovery.—Where the recovery was made on the basis of disclosure made by the accused from a place which was open and accessible to all and sundry but the Police could not have recovered the articles unless disclosed by the accused himself, held, such disclosure could be taken into account: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1066: 1977 Cr.L.J. 642: (1977) 2 S.C.C. 131.

The circumstance that the recovery is made from an open place like a quarry which is accessible to all and sundry minimises the evidentiary value of the recovery: 1963 Ker. L.J. 487: 1963 Ker.L.T. 992: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 454. See also 1995 Cr.L.J. 792 (Bom.) (D.B.).

It is quite true that exclusive possession cannot be brought home to an accused if properties are discovered in open places equally accessible to members of the public as a result of the information given by him. But at the same time if the property is found to be so hidden away that no ordinary member of the public could know of its existence there, the fact that it is on that particular person's information and pointing out unaccompanied by any explanation of innocent knowledge, the incriminating article was discovered and recovered would lead to the presumption that he is the person who had secreted it there. It unmistakably shows that the accused was proceeding to the felony: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 829: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1196: A.I.R. 1958 Mad. 451.

In the case of property which is concealed, the property is in the same position as if it were kept under lock and key. Being concealed it is not accessible to other persons. It is true that as it is concealed in an open place it is possible that the accused person who pointed it out or delivered it, may be only knowing that it was there while somebody else have concealed it. It would, therefore, be necessary for the prosecution to prove that the accused not only knew where the property was and pointed it out or delivered it but had also concealed the property. Even when the property is delivered by the accused the statement made to the Police that he had concealed it is admissible under S. 27: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1134: A.I.R. 1956 Ajmer 57.

Where the stolen articles (drums) were recovered at the accused's instance from the compound of a Musafirkhana and it was not the prosecution's case that same were lying concealed or that the compound was under the lock and key of the accused, held, as it was possible that either it was the accused who had himself deposited those articles there or he only knew that they were lying there, the accused was entitled to benefit of doubt: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 483: (1976) 1 S.C.C. 828: 1976 Cr.L.J. 481: (1976) 1 S.C.R. 715. See also (1993) 3 All Cr.L.R. 118: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 20 (P.&H.) (D.B.); (1985) 59 Cut.L.T. 488; 1982 Jab.L.J. 744.

The fact discovered as a result of a statement to the Police Officer would become relevant only if such a statement leads to the discovery of the fact that the property is concealed in the place mentioned to the knowledge of the person making the confession and if the property is proved to have been connected with the offence. So where the confession leads to the discovery of certain jewels but there is no evidence to establish that the accused had anything to do with the house in which they were discovered, assuming it is stolen property, it is not sufficient even with the aid of the presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act to establish that the accused was guilty of an offence under Ss. 454 and 380 of the Penal Code or even alternatively under S. 411 of the I.P.Code: (1947) 2 M.L.J. 356.

When an accused person points out a place where property shown to be stolen property was kept concealed it shows his knowledge of the place where the property was so kept concealed. If the place where the property was kept concealed was in the exclusive possession of the accused, it may further show that the accused was in possession of the property which he had kept concealed. If, however, the place where the property was kept concealed was accessible to others, pointing out of the place would merely show knowledge of the accused of the place where the property was kept concealed unless he made a statement in consequence of which property was discovered: 1954 Cr.L.J. 801: A.I.R. 1954 Kutch 22.

Discovery of stolen property from places which are open and accessible to all at instance of accused persons—Words used by accused leading to discovery neither recorded at the time nor proved—Evidence of discovery discarded: 1958 M.P.L.J. 752: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 125.

Where the accused confessed having stolen railway property and which was, upon his disclosure statement, dug out next day from the place, indicated by the accused, in the Railway Sports Ground surrounded by walls and just behind his own house, and there was evidence that the accused had himself concealed the property at that spot and his confession was not involuntary, held, the accused was not merely in the knowledge of the property concealed but also in its exclusive possession; his guilt stood proved: 1980 M.P.L.J. 483: 1980 Jab.L.J. 344.

Unless it is shown that the recovery at the accused's instance was made from a place in his exclusive possession, the possibility of some one else concealing the incriminating article there cannot be excluded beyond reasonable doubt; thus, where discovery was made from a bari adjacent to a road but belonging to his brother, a co-accused, and there was no evidence of the two brothers living together, held, the factum of recovery could not be used against the accused. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1949; A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 911, Foll.]: (1982) 53 Cut.L.T. 121: 1982 Cr.L.J. 487. See also 1983 M.P.W.N. 166; 1982 M.P.W.N. 524.

Where the recovery of watch of the deceased was from a house not in the exclusive possession of the accused, who did not point out the specific place where the watch was kept, but on the mere asking, the accused's brother brought the watch and handed over it to Investigating Officer, held, such a recovery could not be attributed to the accused. [1982 M.P.W.N. 524, Rel. on]: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1150 (Madh. Pra.).

Where the recovery of weapon of offence was made at the instance of the accused from the bushes in a public park, held, exclusive knowledge of the accused regarding presence of that weapon had to be inferred: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 53 (Del.).

Weapon kept concealed in a bush by the side of a road—Held, even if accessible to all and sundary, so long as the concealment was known only to the accused, it could not be said to be an open place: (1990) 2 Ker.L.J. 534: I.L.R. (1990) 1 Ker. 619.

Where the articles recovered at the instance of the accused were not found lying on the surface but after unearthing dumping ground under the hillock, and they were not visible or accessible but were hidden under the ground, held, discovery of such articles was clearly admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 2420.

The gandasa with which the accused was leged to have killed the deceased was re-overed from an accessible place in the com-ound. This place was jointly owned by the usbands of the convict and the deceased. efore the actual recovery, a large number of ersons had an occasion to visit that place nd several of them including Police officials emained present there before actual recov-ry. There was therefore, ample opportunity plant the weapon. The weapon might have een already detected by the persons present the compound for such a long time. Held, iat even if it were assumed that the gandasa as recovered from that place and it was lood-stained, it did not lead to any definite onclusion in connecting the accused with ie crime, when the ownership of the andasa was not traced to the prisoner and as not identified to be the weapon of of-nce and the prosecution was unable to say iat the blood of this weapon belonged to the me group as that of the deceased: I.L.R. 954) Patiala 316: A.I.R. 1955 Pepsu 33.

The fact that a disclosure statement made the accused led to the recovery of the nife shows that it was within the exclusive nowledge of the accused that he had buried ie knife: 1969 Cr.L.J. 94 (Punj.).

Where the accused had made an extra-dicial confession to a person who in turn ld the Investigating Officer as to where the odies and other incriminating articles were ept buried and concealed by the accused, but ie Investigating Officer still could not know ie exact place where-from the dead bodies nd articles could be found as it was an open eld, held, as the knowledge of the burial place uld not be attributed only to the accused nd none else, the recovery could not be a rcumstance against the accused: A.I.R. 1988 C. 1705: (1988) 2 Crimes 942.

Corpse discovered by Police in open field here Police went on information given by cused—It cannot be said that the Police scovered the corpse as a result of the state-ent of the accused: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 198: I.R. 1964 Madh. Pra. 30.

Where the accused had stated that he had ept the weapon (wakas) in a village which as recovered from an open place in a anger's house, held, it could not be con-nded that the information given by the ac-sed was distinctly related to, and led to, the covery; S. 27 was not attracted: 1982 Cr.L.J. 56 (D.B.).

Where the accused had merely taken out the axe from beneath his cot and there was nothing to show that it was concealed at a place known to him alone and none else nor had the accused made a statement under S. 27 relating to its recovery, held, the production of the weapon is not admissible either under S. 8 or S. 27: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1262: 1979 All.W.C. 55.

Where a stone used in the murder, had no identifying mark, held, no conclusive finding could be drawn when its recovery was from a place accessible to all; merely because the stone was smeared with human blood cannot conclusively establish that it was the weapon of offence used by the accused; in ordinary course of life, children, and even grown ups, get hurt with stones lying in their way; those stones are likely to be smeared with the blood oozed out of such human injuries: (1993) 3 All Cr.L.R. 118 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Scope—Recovery of ornaments from fields accessible to all—If can form basis of conviction: 1959 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 11.

Where ornaments were recovered at the instance of the accused from underneath the grain in one of the bins in the house of the accused where his father and his elder brothers also lived and the accused did not explain or state that the ornaments had been hidden inside by somebody else and that he had found them there and gave no explanation of this recovery, but on the other hand, denied the recovery altogether:

Held, that in the circumstances, it was reasonable to infer that the accused himself had hidden the ornaments and that the recovery was from his possession inasmuch as he had knowledge of the place where they were concealed and control over those ornaments: 1965 All.L.J. 344.

Where the place from where the clothes of the deceased were recovered was a public place and accessible to people of the locality, held, it was difficult to believe that they had been so concealed that they were not noticed and were available to be collected from the very place a long time after; this evidence of recovery was of no value: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 1438: 1986 Cr.L.J. 1072: 1985 (Supp.) S.C.C. 599.

Where the shishi was recovered from beside a path where all and sundry could move about and that too a day after the disclosure statement when convenient witnesses could be procured by the Police, held, the recovery was only a farce: 1973 Sim.L.J. 103.

Where the blood-stained chhuri was recovered by the Police on information furnished by the accused from an open space, held, the recovery by itself did not connect the accused with the offence: 1973 Cr.L.J. 955 (J.&K.) (D.B.).

Recovery of shirt of deceased from house of accused on his own information—Evidence is admissible under S. 27: I.L.R. (1969) Cut. 119.

25. Absence or presence of human blood on articles recovered—Effect of.—Mere recoveries of alleged weapon of crime, without being stained with human blood, held, is of no effect: (1987) 1 Crimes 329 (Ori.); 1983 M.P.W.N. 92; (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 35 [When no blood stains were found by the Serologist on the weapon of offence allegedly recovered at the accused's instance, held, no reliance could be placed on such recovery]; 1994 Cr.L.R. 230 (Raj.) [When the lathi recovered at the accused's instance was not found to be stained with blood, what to say about the human blood and further its recovery was not made from the accused's exclusive possession, held, no reliance could be placed on such recovery].

Where the weapons recovered at the accused's instance had no blood-stains, particularly of human origin, held, the offence is not proved; the prosecution fails: (1981) 1 Karn.L.J. 498: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1157 (D.B.); 1982 All.L.J. 140 (D.B.); (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 106.

Where two knives were recovered at the instance of the accused but one of the knives did not contain any blood while blood on the other knife was disintegrated and the witnesses examined to prove the recoveries were interested in the prosecution, held, recovery was not of much significance: 1995 Cr.L.J. 248 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

That human blood found on the dress worn by the accused is an incriminating circumstance, particularly when the dress is recovered at the accused's instance: (1994) 1 Ker.L.J. 136 (D.B.). See also 1983 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 45. But when there is no positive evidence to show that the accused was wearing those clothes which were recovered with blood-stains on them, held, presence of blood on those clothes could not be said to be an incriminating evidence against the accused: (1990) 42 Del.L.T. 211 (D.B.).

Where in a murder case all other important circumstances were proved by witnesses shown on record to be stock Police witnesses upon whom no reliance could be placed, held, the mere circumstance that the accused's blood-stained clothes were recovered upon his disclosure is not sufficient to convict the accused for murder: 1995 Cr.L.J. 470: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 2585.

Where the knife recovered had neither any blood-stains nor was it shown to the Doctor conducting the autopsy, held, it could not be contended that the knife was used in the offence; the knife had no evidentiary weight: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1409 (D.B.).

Where it was the accused who had pinpointed the place of occurrence and the blood stained dagger was recovered at his instance—The blood being of the same group as of the deceased, held, his conviction was justified: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1106 (Del.). See also (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 25; Where evidence of recovery of blood-stained knife was held to be not conclusive. See 1982 Jab.L.J. 744.

Scope—Murder case—Discoveries of incriminating articles containing human blood given by accused—They are very strong incriminating circumstances to arouse suspicion that accused might have been author of murder, but suspicion however grave, cannot take place of legal proof: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 301.

Recovery of blood stained sword and dhoti from exclusive possession of the accused, held, is very important incriminating circumstance against him: 1982 M.P.W.N. 503. Where a blood-stained chopper was recovered, pursuant to the accused's disclosure statement, concealed at a place in his possession, held, it was an incriminating circumstance against the accused: 1985 Cr.L.J. 114; 1983 M.P.W.N. 142.

The discovery of the blood-stained weapon made on the basis of the information given by the accused, arouses grave suspicion against him but in the absence of other circumstances the mere existence of the motive would not be enough to justify the conclusion that the accused murdered the deceased. The information leading to the discovery is merely a link in the chain of circumstance. When other links are missing, even if motive is taken into consideration, the entire chain is not complete. The accused in such a case is entitled to benefit of doubt: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 351.

Though the fact that the article recovered had blood-stains of the same group as that of the deceased renders the information proving an incriminating circumstance, but that is not enough to implicate accused for the offence of abetting the crime involving criminal assault; unless other evidence is satisfactory about abetment, it will be risky to uphold the conviction of the accused for abetment of the principal offence: 1979 Bom.C.R. 680 (D.B.).

Where the weapon of offence discovered had no human blood-stains, held, it could not be discarded as of no substance if the eye witness's evidence is reliable; for recovery of the weapon is only a corroborative piece of evidence and its mere absence cannot negate the substantive evidence: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1443 (D.B.). See also (1988) 35 Del.L.T. 427 (D.B.).

In the trial of a case for murder the information given by the accused which leads to the discovery of a weapon with which the accused is alleged to have struck his wife is a circumstance which can be taken as incriminating the accused. The absence of blood stains on the weapon does not make the discovery inadmissible under S. 27 of the Evidence Act, as the corroborative piece of evidence relating to blood-stains falls to be considered thereafter by the Court: 1961 M.L.J. (Cr.) 311: (1961) 1 An.W.R. 406.

Where a constable confessed having murdered his wife and led the Police to his house where his wife's dead body, a knife, his blood-stained jersey and a brass pot containing mixed water and blood were recovered, held, as the Police was earlier not aware of the whereabouts of the discovered articles, their discovery was certainly in pursuance of the accused's disclosure statement; though other articles incriminated the accused but not the knife, for there were no blood-stains on it: 1984 Cr.L.J. 209 (Bom.) (D.B.).

26. Delayed recovery—Effect of.—Merely because the accused's disclosure statement which led to the recovery of the murder weapon was recorded 10 days after his arrest, held, does not render the discovery any the less useful; quite possibly, the accused might have agreed to give the statement after having been interrogated by the Police for several days: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1087: 1982 Kash.L.J. 194.

Where though the deceased was in Police custody, there was a delay of four to five days in effecting the impugned discoveries at the instance of the accused, held, the totality of the evidentiary value of the evidence of discovery got considerably weakened because of the delay factor: 1994 Cr.L.J. 274 (Bom.) (D.B.). Where recovery after 3 months was held to be not sufficient for convicting the accused: 1982 M.P.W.N. 559.

The mere fact that the accused took three days in making up his mind to give information to the Police cannot possibly afford a valid reason for rejecting the information, in consequence of which ornaments of the deceased and other articles connected with the crime have been discovered: 1977 Raj.L.W. 241: I.L.R. (1977) 27 Raj. 342: 1977 W.L.N. 227.

Where disclosure statement was made by accused after a lapse of 22 days of continuous interrogation and further Police was already in possession of the information before the statement of the accused was recorded in the presence of witnesses, held, it was inadmissible in evidence: 1994 Cr.L.J. 894 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

Recovery of Khukri in a murder case—Occurrence taking place on 21st November, 1963—Accused arrested on 5th December, 1963—Khukri recovered on 6th December, 1963 from possession of P.W. 4 at the instance of P.W. 5—Recovery is not within the mischief of S. 27—Delay in arrest of accused and recovery of incriminating articles, deprecated — Cr.P.Code (1898), S. 156: 1966 Cr.L.J. 772: A.I.R. 1966 Manipur 8.

27. Articles recovered must have some connection with the crime.—Under S. 27, a statement of an accused person made to a Police Officer leading to the discovery of certain ornaments belonging to a murdered person is admissible in evidence only if it is shown that those ornaments were connected with the crime of murder of the deceased, the connection being shown by some such circumstances as presence of blood on the ornaments. Mere proof that the ornaments discovered had been on the person of the deceased before death would not necessarily mean that they were connected with the crime of murder: I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 200: 50 Cr.L.J. 713: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 277: 1949 Nag.L.J. 216.

Unless a thing discovered has some relevance to the accused's involvement in the offence, held, the discovery would be wholly irrelevant: (1984) 2 Bom.C.R. 615 (D.B.). See also 1983 M.P.W.N. 256; 1981 M.P.W.N. (I) 288.

Discovery evidence, by itself, is subsidiary and cannot sustain a conviction, but where there is plenty of other evidence to sustain the prosecution case, discovery evidence is a valuable piece of corroborative evidence: (1970) 72 Bom.L.R. 405: 1970 Mah.L.J. 634: A.I.R. 1970 Bom. 438.

The principles concerning discovery by accused are no more in doubt. Not only the article and the place from where the article is taken out should not be within possible knowledge of the Police and, in other words, should be within the exclusive knowledge of the accused but also such article must be and should be shown to have some relevance or some connection with the crime in issue: (1985) 2 Bom.C.R. 518 (D.B.).

Statement made under S. 27 leading to the recovery of a pair of blood-stained shoes and dupatta, held, is inconclusive when they were in no way connected with the commission of the offence, i.e., there being nothing to show that those articles belonged to the deceased: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1572: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. 389.

Where the accused had stated that the sword he was handing over to the Police was used by him in a different dacoity, held, his statement was not admissible under S. 27; though the sword did have human blood stains, the sword could be of no avail as there was no evidence connecting it with the offence in question: 1971 All.W.R. 163 (D.B.). Where the knife seized was not proved to be the weapon of attack, held, its recovery was of no use: 1982 M.P.W.N. 86.

Where there was no evidence to show that the shots were fired from the recovered pistols and the test shots fired from those pistols did not match with the factual shots, held, in such a case, the recovery of pistols was inconsequential: 1995 Cr.L.J. 3165 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where it was not proved that the recovered clothes belonged to the accused, held, the recovery thereof as well as of knife at the accused's instance from an open place, accessible to all and made after about two months after the date of occurrence, did not connect the accused with the crime: 1992 Cr.L.J. 435 (Raj.) See also 1993 Cr.L.J. 1723 (Raj.) (D.B.). Where there was no positive evidence that the accused was wearing the clothes recovered at the time of the occurrence and when it could not be ascertained as to whether the human blood found on them was of the deceased or the accused himself, held, presence of blood on those clothes could not be an incriminating evidence against him: (1990) 42 Del.L.T. 211 (D.B.).

Where in a murder case, clothes recovered pursuant to the accused's disclosure statement were not shown to be those of the deceased, held, no case of murder was made out against the accused: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1416 (Raj.).

Prosecution must establish connection between fact discovered and the crime—Held, that there was total absence of evidence, direct or circumstantial, to connect the recovered objects with the crime. [A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 1788, Rel. on]: 1970 Cr.L.J. 603 (All.).

Piece of skin and some bones recovered at the instance of the accused—No proof connecting them with the deceased—Value in evidence. See 1952 Raj.L.W. 239: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 137.

It is permissible to connect the accused and the object with each other through the information but not either of them with the crime. In the course of such a strict construction of the section by precisely limiting the information admissible to so much of it as distinctly serves to connect the accused with the object alone, it sometimes happens that the admissible portion amounts to a confession, which it does in cases where the gist of the offence is possession of concealment. The law is not that S. 27 prohibits the same, except in such a special case the connection between the object and the crime must always be exclusively established by evidence aliunde. The connection between the crime and the accused however though it has to be established always by evidence aliunde is permissible on the facts of the given case to be inferred to some extent from the very connection established between the accused and the object itself by the admissible information; but it is not permissible to directly connect the accused with the crime through his own mouth: 55 Cr.L.J. 583: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 433.

Where in a murder trial, the deceased's gold ear-rings, were recovered but it was itself doubtful whether the deceased was wearing any ear-rings and there were also infirmities in the parade held by the Municipal Commissioner for identifying the ear-rings, held, the accused could not be convicted on the basis of recovery of the ear-rings: 1988 Cr.L.J. 39 (P.&H.) (D.B.). See also 1982 M.P.W.N. 504.

Where the deceased's chadar at the instance of the accused was recovered from the river and the deceased's dead body was lying close to its bank of river with other scattered things but the chadar's connection with the crime was not shown, held, any one would have expected the chadar to be in the river at some distance from the body and it had in fact taken about half an hour for about 8 to 10 persons to find out the chadar; the accused's information did not specifically indicate the exact place where the chadar could be found; the evidence of its recovery at the instance of the accused could not inspire confidence: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1676 (Ori.) (D.B.).

28. Common use article—Recovery of—Effect.—Where the 'Rakhady' allegedly recovered at the accused's instance was found to be a common ornament worn by ladies in general and there was nothing to show that it was the same which was snatched away by the dacoits and no specific description had been given about it, held, no reliance could be placed on such recovery: 1984 Raj.L.W. 286 (D.B.). Common article seized from the accused—Effect. See (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 273.

Where articles recovered pursuant to a disclosure statement were not found stained with human blood and those articles were such as are found in every house-hold, held, the recovery of those articles from within the house of the accused would not constitute any incriminating circumstance: A.I.R. 1971 Tripura 8.

Where the weapon of offence (an agricultural implement), which was commonly available article, was discovered from an open place and was not found concealed and further there was evidence to show that the Police already knew about it before it was discovered at the instance of the accused, held, it could not be said to be a discovery under S. 27: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3364 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where a wrist watch of common pattern was recovered after disclosure statement of accused but the F.I.R. was silent regarding the fact that a wrist watch was missing, held, recovery of wrist watch was not such a valuable piece of evidence so as to lead to a conclusion that the accused were the only persons who were guilty of the offence: 1995 Cr.L.J. 248 (P.&H.) (D.B.). See also (1995-1) 43 B.L.J.R. 706.

29. Effect of seizure or non-seizure of weapon of offence when direct evidence available.—Where direct evidence is sufficient to convict, held, seizure or non-seizure of the weapon used in the offence is of no material importance: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 881: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1111: (1992) 2 S.C.C. 62.

The fact that the firearms recovered at the instance of the accused were not proved to have been used in the commission of offence, held, is of no consequence when there was sufficient evidence of eye-witnesses against the accused: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 2249: 1989 Cr.L.J. 299; 1985 Cr.L.J. 1589: 59 Cut.L.T. 246.

Where the prosecution evidence is wholly insufficient to establish the offence, held, recovery of the weapon at the instance of the accused would be of not much consequence: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1042; A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 1131: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1426: 1992 All.L.J. 395.

30. Witnesses to recovery.—In the matter of search, S. 27 of the Evidence Act and S. 103 of the Code of Criminal Procedure stand on different footings; recovery under S. 27of the Evidence Act, can be proved by a solitary testimony, if otherwise unimpeachable, of the Investigating Officer; it is not a legal requirement that public witnesses should always be associated in recovery proceedings pursuant to disclosure statements. [1972 Cr.L.J. 606 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1700 (Del.).

Whether the evidence of the Investigating Officer alone is sufficient to prove the recovery depends upon the circumstances of each case. In a case where the investigation inspires confidence and no criticism can be levelled against the conduct of the investigating agency and good reasons are given for not producing the other witnesses, it is open to a Court to accept the uncorroborated testimony of a Police Officer after a strict scrutiny: 1957 Cr.L.J. 113 (All.).

The law has trusted a Police Officer to record the information given to him under S. 27 by an accused in custody because truth of that information ultimately finds guarantee from the discovery of the fact: I.L.R. (1977) 27 Raj. 342: 1977 Raj.L.W. 241: 1977 W.L.N. 227.

There is no harm in the Police Officer who makes the search being called as a witness at the trial but where the investigation of the case appears to be unfair and suspicious, it is neither safe nor desirable to act upon his uncorroborated testimony in respect of the search or recovery: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Ker. 492: (1962) 2 Ker. L.R. 499: 1963 Ker. L.J. 86: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 669.

Where the Police Officer testified that the accused had made the disclosure statement in the presence of the Panch which the Panch expressly denied, held, the Courts should be slow in preferring the Police Officer's testimony over that of the Panch; and all the more so, as in the present case, where the Panch was not sought to be declared a hostile witness: 1982 Cr.L.J. 2189 (Bom.).

The Investigating Officer should not associate any eye-witness with the recovery memos, because that partakes of an attempt to make the witness omnibus: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1066: 1977 Cr.L.J. 642: (1977) 2 S.C.C. 131.

Where the statement leading to the discovery of the incriminating thing was made by the accused to a Police Officer when no independent witness was present, held, non-presence of the witness is not fatal if the statement was indeed made voluntarily by the accused: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1244 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where though no public witness, who had been associated with recovery, was examined, but the Investigating Officer's deposition did not suffer from any infirmity and the incriminating articles found with the dead body had been identified by the other witnesses, held, no adverse inference could be drawn: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 2420.

Where the accused's disclosure statement led to recovery of the murder weapon, found stained with deceased's blood group, held, merely because neither the deceased's brother, at whose instance the accused was arrested, nor any public witness was associated with the disclosure statement or the weapon's recovery, the prosecution's evidence is not thereby rendered unbelievable; it is common experience that people are greatly reluctant to co-operate with the Police for variety of reasons and involving the deceased's brother might have been considered not proper by the Police: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1625: I.L.R. (1984) 2 Del. 388.

When the Investigating Officer has proved the statement of the accused in pursuance of which the weapon was recovered from the place of concealment, the same could be acted upon particularly when the attestors to the respective mahazars admitted to their having signed the mahazar and also with due regard to the attendant circumstance. In the absence of hostility, a Police Officer's evidence cannot be rejected. [A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 2783, Rel. on]: (1993) 1 Ker.L.J. 76 (D.B.). See also I.L.R. (1992) 2 Ker. 516 (D.B.).

Where the Investigating Officer had sworn to the recovery of weapon of offence on the basis of information given by the accused, held, his evidence can be acted upon even if not corroborated by other evidence but where recoveries were spoken to by the independent witnesses as well, recovery, on the basis of the information given by the accused, could certainly be accepted: (1992) 2 Ker.L.J. 952 (D.B.). See also 1991 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 16 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Merely because the witnesses of disclosure statement and recovery of weapons were not from that locality itself, held, is not sufficient to discard their evidence, more so when they had convincing explanations for their presence on the spot: 1989 Cr.L.J. 2486 (J.&K.) (D.B.). But when the witness to recovery was not only a close relation of eye-witness but also resident of a different village and his presence at the time of recovery was not explained, held, his evidence was to be discarded: 1992 Cr.L.J. 805 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Merely because the same set of Panchas had witnessed all the three discoveries as well as the attachment of the accused's clothes, held, their evidence could not be discarded if nothing in their cross-examination had detracted from its value; besides, the fact that such a witness was a neighbour and on good terms with the deceased would also make no difference: A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 1853: 1991 Cr.L.J. 2653: (1991) 3 S.C.C. 627; (1985) 28 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 1.

When the evidence of a Panch witness given in a subsequent case is found otherwise acceptable, the same cannot be discarded on the ground that in an earlier case, he had not supported the discovery about which the evidence has been led in the subsequent case: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3298 (Guj.) (D.B.).

Where a person alleged to be a witness to the recovery was not a witness to the production of the incriminating articles, i.e., knife and shirt, in as much as according to him they were already in the hands of the Investigating Officer, and further the accused had produced those articles with the help of his mother and the articles were not sent for forensic examination to ascertain whether they were blood-stained, held, the knife and shirt were not incriminating articles; S. 27 was not attracted: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1373.

Where positive evidence was very clear that the accused had led the Police party to the workshop owned by him and his father took out stolen gold and silver articles from a tin kept under a cot which were seized under mahazar, held, the recovery at the accused's instance stood proved; it could not be doubted merely because the accused had contended that an eye-witness of recovery owned a dry-cleaning shop and the Police were getting their clothes washed or that he was sought to be confused by an irrelevant site plan to show that the workshop was not owned by the accused: (1992) 1 An.L.T. 21 (D.B.).

Where the accused disowned the recoveries and signatures on panchnamas or recovery memos were obtained at the Police Station after the witnesses came back covering a long distance and the respectable persons of the locality were not joined as witnesses, held, such panchnamas or recovery memos did not inspire confidence but created a suspicion about the preparation of the documents at the spot. [1977 Cr.L.J. 167 and 1981 Cr.L.J. 410 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1150 (Madh. Pra.).

Where stolen currency notes and the sten-gun involved in a bank robbery and double murder were recovered from a house pointed out by the accused and mentioned in his statement, held, the prosecution was not required to adduce evidence of the house owner or a neighbour to establish that the accused was in occupation of the house: 1978 Cr.L.J. 324: 1978 All.Cr.R. 100 (D.B.).

Where the recoveries of the weapons at the instance of the accused persons had been attested by the Police Officers and some independent persons as search witnesses, held, the fact that the other witnesses were not examined, by itself does not effect the evidence regarding recoveries. [A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 951, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 472: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 158: (1977) 1 S.C.R. 280: 1977 Cr.L.J. 273. See also 1983 M.P.W.N. 256.

In a case where the accused charged with the offence of causing disappearance of the evidence of an offence of receiving illegal gratification by another by concealing the currency notes, had already revealed about the place of concealment to the Police Officers his repeating the same before witnesses in order to incorporate it in a memo. and to give it greater authenticity, would not make such second statement made before witnesses admissible in evidence. It is well settled that it is the first statement made by an accused leading to a recovery which is admissible in evidence. It, however, depends on the circumstances of each case. If the information derived as a result of interrogation was merely vague and the precise information was received as a result of the statement made by the accused before witnesses, the subsequent statement would be admissible in evidence. Likewise, if the previous statement made to the Investigating Officer merely indicated a willingness of the accused to disclose where the incriminating articles were lying and the actual information about that place was given in a subsequent statement, the subsequent statement is admissible if the incriminating articles are recovered in pursuance of the statement: 1968 Cr.L.J. 372: A.I.R. 1968 Punj. 120.

When respectable persons of locality, though available, were not joined before effecting recovery at the accused's instance and even the recoveries were not got identified to the satisfaction of the Court, held, it made the recovery doubtful: 1990 Rajdhani L.R. 154: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 86 (D.B.). Where the recovery was made during day time and there was a rush of traffic at the place of recovery, but no effort was made by the Investigating Officer to join any person from the public and there was no explanation as to why the signatures of even a constable were not obtained though present, held, no reliance could be placed on such recovery: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 560 (D.B.); (1987) 14 Cr.L.T. 206 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Although as a matter of law the presence of motbir witnesses at the time of recording information is not necessary but as a matter of prudence the Police Officer should secure the presence of motbir witnesses, if such witnesses are available without much inconvenience or difficulty. The presence of the motbir witness at the time of recording the information and the subsequent production of a motbir witness are likely to lend considerable support to the testimony of the Police Officer. As regards the proving of such information, ordinarily the Police Officer or a motbir witness should state in Court from memory what information was given by the accused and, if such a witness is in a position to give the precise information he should do so without referring to the written memo. containing the information. If the Police Officer or the motbir witness on account of lapse of time or otherwise, is not in a position to state with the help of memory what the information was and, thus, makes out a case for referring to the memo. for refreshing his memory, he is entitled to do so. But, even then, he should not merely remain content by proving his signatures on the information memo. but should reproduce in Court the information given: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 715: 1964 Raj.L.W. 171.

31. Procedural defects.—Where the articles, recovered at the accused's instance were not sealed nor any local witness was taken nor any entry in the General Diary was made before the Police party had left to effect the recovery, and the Investigation Officer admittedly had neither sent the recovered goods nor their list nor any other reference to the Magistrate when his remand was further sought, and the articles mixed with the recovered articles for identification bore no marks as were on the recovered articles, held, the prosecution evidence of recovery at the accused's pointing out was highly suspicious and not worthy of credence: 1990 Cr.L.J. 77 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the recovery memos in respect of the blood-stained swords and a chopper recovered at the instance of the accused contained no evidence of sealing of the weapons and the Police Inspector effecting the recovery could give no explanation therefor, held, the evidence of recovery could not be taken as a clinching circumstantial evidence fixing the accused's guilt: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3602 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where the gun was recovered at the accused's instance from the possession of another person, and the cartridges found at the spot were, according to the Ballistic Expert, fired from the gun but that person, who alone could prove the prosecution's version that the accused had borrowed the gun, was not examined, held, in absence of such evidence there was no legal evidence to connect the accused with the gun: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 349.

Where 'Pharsa' recovered alongwith the dead body was not sent for the Doctor's opinion alongwith the dead body but there was evidence of the recovery of 'Pharsa' and the photograph showed the dead body as well as the 'Pharsa', etc., held, there could possibly be no doubt about the recovery of 'Pharsa' along with the dead body: (1990) 42 Del.L.T. 211 (D.B.).

Where in a case of rape and murder, there was no mention in the inquest report as to how the dead body was recovered and even panchnama was not prepared and there were discrepancies in the evidence of the witnesses regarding recovery of dead body, held, discovery of the dead body at the instance of the accused was not proved: (1991) 3 S.C.C. 27: A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 1388.

Till the guns recovered at the instance of the accused are sent for ballistic examination and a report is obtained that they are in working order, mere recovery of guns cannot connect the accused with the crime. [1984 W.L.N. (U.C.) 15 (Raj.), Foll.]: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2952 (Raj.) (D.B.).

In case of inordinate delay in sending the parcels of empty and live cartridges and the katta to the Ballistic Expert who had also opined that the empty cartridges seemed to have been fired by the same katta, held, in absence of any explanation as to why the seized articles were kept in the Police Station for a long period and as to what steps were taken against tampering, the delay clearly raised suspicion and gave rise to the suggestion on the part of the accused in the cross-examination of the Investigating Officer that the empty cartridges were not fired by the accused from the katta and the live cartridges were not recovered from the spot: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1150 (Madh. Pra). Whether mere seizure of a pistol from the accused in itself is sufficient to establish an offence without examination of the Ballistic Expert, see (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 278.

Mere exhibition of relevant seizure lists does not satisfy requirements of law—Discovery must be proved, by producing in Court, the articles discovered pursuant to the information gathered from statement of accused: 1984 Cr.L.J. 217 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where it could not be shown by the prosecution that the articles sent to the Serologist were the same as were seized from the accused, held, the Serologists' report was not admissible in evidence: (1984) 1 Crimes 646 (Raj.).

Non-production of case property, and the weapons alleged to have been used in the crime, held, to be an infirmity fatal to the prosecution's case: (1990) 40 Del.L.T. 478 (D.B.); (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 307. Effect of non-seizing of container of alleged stolen articles: (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 142. See also (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 15.

The true objection to attestation of a statement under S. 27 of the Evidence Act, 1872, leading to discovery is not so much to the fact of attestation as to the object with which it is sometimes resorted to. The bar against signed statements in S. 162, Cr.P.Code, 1898, has no application, because the statement attested is not that of attestors. Sometimes, it happens that on questioning the accused, he makes a statement which gives information to the Police Officer which ultimately leads to the discovery of a fact, but instead of relying on that statement, the Police Officer proves a later statement of the accused containing the same information, but attested by witnesses and perhaps recorded in a more formal manner. This when done, is often due to a misapprehension on the part of the officer, that his own evidence as to the information, standing by itself, may not be accepted by a Court of law, but that such evidence when fortified by that of attestors might be accepted. In such a case the information, let alone the statement, which leads to discovery is really that contained in the first statement, and it is, therefore, that, which should be proved. But when the first statement is recorded and witnesses are present, nothing in law prevents them from testifying to it and even from attesting it, though such attestation is not necessary and might go against the spontaneity of the statement: 1966 Ker.L.T. 843: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 47: A.I.R. 1967 Ker. 197.

Merely because the accused's signatures were obtained on the recovery memo, held, the whole of the said document does not become inadmissible; it is inadmissible to the extent of proof of signature of the accused on it: 1984 Cr.L.R. 577: 1984 W.L.N. 445 (Raj.). Memorandum leading to recovery should be proved with the actual words used by the accused; proof of mere preparation of memorandum is not sufficient: 1982 M.P.W.N. 524.

Where the recovery of the tractor in consequence of the accused's disclosure statement was made from a place within the jurisdiction of a Police Station in another State, and the testimony of the recovery Police Officer that he had got entries made about his arrival before recovery in that Police Station was contradicted by witnesses as well as the daily diary, held, the recovery of tractor as alleged was not proved; and the defence version that the tractor was already with the Police becomes more credible: 1995 Cr.L.J. 248 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

32. Presumption as to stolen or robbed property.—(See also S. 114). Before any inference can be drawn against the accused under S. 27 two facts have to be proved. Firstly, that the recovery was made from the possession of the accused and secondly, that the property recovered was stolen property: 1957 Cr.L.J. 113 (All.).

Where accused purchased 9 Kg. of Silver for a paltry sum deliberately knowing it to be stolen silver and on his information several recoveries were made by the Investigating Officer of the silver ingots during the course of investigation, held, conviction of accused for receiving stolen property was proper: 1995 Cr.L.J. 625 (Raj.).

Information leading to discovery—Accused telling Police that he concealed the ornaments of which he gave discovery—Statement admissible in evidence—Theft detected and accused gave recovery of ornaments next day—Interval being small, the accused to be presumed thief—If interval were to be long, the presumption would be that he received the stolen articles: 32 Cut.L.T. 1083.

What are possible presumptions in case of recovery of stolen property at the instance of the accused. See (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 91; (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 317. When recovery of deceased's ornaments from the accused's possession or at his instance was made very promptly soon after the occurrence, held, an inference of murder and robbery, and not only of being receiver of the stolen or robbed property, has to be drawn: (1983) 2 Crimes 191 (Madh. Pra.). Recovery at the accused's instance—Presumption under S. 114(a). See (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 308.

The presumption to be drawn whether the accused were receivers of stolen property or dacoits depends upon the circumstances under which the discovery is made; if the gap of time is too large, the presumption of the accused being concerned with the crime itself gets weakened; the presumption is, however, stronger when the discovery is made soon after the offence. The obvious reason being that disposal of property requires finding a person ready to receive them; the shortness of time, the nature of the stolen property, its quantity and character, determine whether the person having the goods in his possession received them from another or was himself the thief or dacoit. Thus, where the goods stolen were a large quantity of cloth, looted from the cartmen by a score of persons after pelting stones, and immediately afterwards searches were made and the goods were recovered from various persons, held, the presumption was rightly drawn that the persons from whom the goods were recovered were dacoits themselves and not merely the receivers of the stolen property: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 196: 1971 Cr.L.J. 260: (1970) 3 S.C.R. 720. See also (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 299.

Where in a case of bank dacoity, a large quantity of currency notes bearing initials of bank's officers, 2 muskets and a gun were recovered, peculiarly concealed in a place he had mentioned in the disclosure statement and to which place the accused had taken the Police for recovery, held, a participator in the dacoity alone could have known the concealment; his conviction was justified: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1807 (Cal.).

Where the valuables alleged to have been taken from the deceased were shown to have been recovered on the basis of the statements given by the accused after the lapse of one month of the disappearance of the deceased, held, this delay was fatal to the prosecution; if the recoveries put forth by the prosecution was relied on, it could lead only to the inference that they were either receivers of stolen property or were persons who committed the theft but it could not necessarily indicate that the theft and the murder took place at one and the same time. Even for drawing a presumption under S. 114 the possession of the stolen article by the accused must be soon after the theft: (1994) 2 Karn.L.J. 215 (D.B.).

S. 27 is based on the doctrine of confirmation by subsequent facts; the fact discovered must have a direct link with commission of the crime. In a dacoity case, the accused's statement leading to the discovery of stolen property is a very valuable evidence against him; if the accused has no reasonable explanation therefor, the discovery of the plundered property in consequence of his information furnished would justify the presumption under S. 114 of his having participated in the dacoity: 1984 Cr.L.J. 1135: 1983 W.L.N. 573: 1984 Cr.L.R. 196 (Raj.). See also (1985) 28 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 1; (1985) 27 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 3.

33. Illustrative cases—(a) Evidence held admissible.—Where an accused person stated to the Police that he had buried an article at a particular place, took the Police to that place and delivered the article to them, the statement of the accused to the Police is admissible under S. 27: 112 I.C. 55: 29 Cr.L.J. 967. So also a statement that he buried the dead body at a particular place: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 530. The discovery of ornaments at his house by accused is clearly a fact discovered: I.L.R. 45 All. 300: 73 I.C. 62: A.I.R. 1923 All. 352.

If the accused produced the articles himself, the fact that he produced it at a particular place may be proved, but the accompanying statement that he buried it there is inadmissible: 19 I.C. 190: 171 P.L.R. 1913.

Where the accused made a disclosure statement, stating that they committed rape and thereafter inserted a stick in the vagina of the victim and thereafter at the instance of the accused, the said stick and some rags of cloth, which were hidden in the house of the one of the accused, were recovered with blood-stains on them and the same was corroborated by the report of Chemical Examiner, held, the disclosure statement was admissible under S. 27: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1129 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the witness to whom extra-judicial confession has been made described in detail about confession made by accused before him and his testimony was not shaken in the cross-examination and no material was elicited to discredit or impeach his evidence and further on the basis of the information given by the accused, recovery of some articles was made, held, S. 27 of Evidence Act was applicable in such a case: 1994 Cr.L.J. 552 (Ori.) (D.B.).

The fact that injuries to the deceased persons as well to the sole eye-witness were caused by the accused with same knife was corroborated by the medical evidence—There was also evidence of Deputy Suprintendant of Police regarding the recovery of knife and bush-shirt stained with human blood, at the instance of the accused—Held, conviction was justified. [1973 W.L.N. 330 (Raj.), Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1699: 1974 Cr.L.J. 1168: (1974) 4 S.C.C. 781.

Where the convict, proved to have been present at the spot, had himself inflicted no injuries on the deceased who in the opinion of the Doctor-witness had been hit by a branch of a Gulmohar tree standing at a distance and in his disclosure statement the convict stated that he could point out the branch used as the weapon of offence, and accordingly that branch wrapped in the convict's full pant was recovered and as per evidence of the Forest Officer the branch had been broken from that Gulmohar tree and as per the Doctor both the pant and the branch had blood on them which as per the Chemical Anayliser was human blood, held, the convict's presence and participation in the offence stood established: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1608 (Bom.) (D.B.).

(b) Evidence held not admissible.—A person accused under S. 328, I.P.Code, pointed out during the Police investigation a datura tree and said that he had taken the fruit of it. The statement was inadmissible: 32 I.C. 136: 13 All.L.J. 1077.

In a trial for murder, a witness stated that the accused offered to point out the place where the dead body was and on being questioned as to who had buried the body he said that he (accused) had done so. Held, that the accused's statement that he buried the body was not admissible in evidence: 55 I.C. 685: 21 Cr.L.J. 349 (L).

No reliance could be placed on the evidence of recovery of stolen property, in a murder trial when (i) there was a long delay between the date of arrest and recovery, (ii) there was nothing in the recovery memo to show that recovery was at the instance of the accused, and (iii) the accused was not charged for retaining stolen property: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 315: (1978) 1 S.C.C. 130: (1978) 1 S.C.W.R. 501. See also 1995 Cr.L.J. 3113 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the accused in his disclosure statement had averred that he had tied the deceased's severed head alongwith bricks in the deceased's dhoti and had thrown the same in the river but 20 days after the murder, only bricks and sand were recovered as intact in the dhoti bundle and head bones had completely disappeared, held, the accused's statement had led only to discovery of the bundle without the head, and not all that was actually claimed to have been dropped by the accused in the river; thus, the fact that the bundle contained the severed head or it was connected with the offence has to be proved by other evidence; S. 27 is of no avail: 1971 All.W.R. 163 (D.B.).

Where the deceased's mother on disappearance of her son, said to have gone to another village for a week, was informed thereafter by 'C', a concubine of her other son and reportedly having illicit relations with one 'M' who was maintaining both 'C' and her husband, that the deceased had been done to death and thrown in a well by her husband and paramour, and the dead body was accordingly recovered, held, when the only evidence on record was the testimony of the deceased's mother based on C's information who was, alongwith her husband and paramour put on trial for murder, there is nothing to connect the only accused with the murder, ('M' having died during trial and 'C' having been acquitted); besides, the recovery of the deceased's clothes from the accused's house is of no significance as it was also the accused's house as both were brothers living in the same house: 1995 Cr.L.J. 554 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the recovery of currency notes involved in a bank dacoity was made pursuant to the accused's disclosure statement but neither the recovery nor the accused's statement were proved, held, the accused could not be convicted by resort to S. 27: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1807 (Cal.).

34. Miscellaneous.—There is nothing unnatural or improbable on the part of the accused persons in keeping their share of the stolen articles concealed in the residence of one of them: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 739: 1994 Cr.L.J. 922.

Where discovery of hair from the fist of the deceased was made on the disclosure

28. Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, relevant.—If such a confession as is referred to in section 24 is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat or promise has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant.

29. Confession otherwise relevant not to become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, etc.—If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him.

statement by the accused, held, when C.F.S.L. report confirmed that said hair were those of the accused, it was an incriminating circumstance against the accused: (1994) 53 Del.L.T. 146.

Where the only circumstance against the accused was of his having been last seen with the deceased and another accused from whom an instrument of offence was recovered, who had a grudge against the deceased, had been let off, held, he could not also be convicted: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1507: 1987 Cr.L.J. 1852: (1987) 2 S.C.C. 480.

Where in a Court-martial for the offence of theft and conspiracy, there was no record of any disclosure statement and the recovery had already been made by the military authorities at the instance of persons other than the accused, held, S. 27 was of no avail; charges not proved: (1983) 1 Crimes 1025.

Section 28—Notes.

When once the existence of improper inducement, threat or promise has been established so as to bring the case within the provisions of S. 24, there is a presumption of its continuance, and the prosecution has to prove that the impression caused by the original inducement, threat or promise was fully removed when the prisoner made the confession. The word 'fully' in S. 28 is significant. It means 'thoroughly', 'completely', 'entirely' so as not to leave any trace of the impression created by the torture of fear; for, a confession forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by the torture of fear comes in so questionable a shape that no credit can be given to it: 1958 M.P.L.J. 745: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 17.

Confessions to the Magistrate made soon after inducements held out by certain Zamindars sent by the Police are inadmissible: 12 Cr.L.J. 199: 9 I.C. 718.

A confession by an accused in Police detention as a suspect made in the immediate vicinity of the Police to a zaildar could not be proved unless made to a Magistrate though the accused may not have been handicapped, as to all intents and purposes, he was in Police custody: 26 Punj. Re. 1916 (Cr.): 34 I.C. 642.

A confession recorded under the provision of S. 164, Cr.P.Code becomes voluntary and free when it is made by the accused out of repentance, after due caution with reasonable time for reflection in order to remove completely any threat or torture, inducement or promise by the arresting agency and it precludes the possibility of tutoring: 1989 Cr.L.J. 2058 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Section 29—Notes.

The provisions of S. 164 do not affect the provisions of S. 29, and, therefore, a confession cannot be excluded from evidence as irrelevant merely because all the provisions of S. 164 were not carefully complied with: 10 O.W.N. 937: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 404. See also 1937 Mad.W.N. 1325; (1950) 1 M.L.J. 659. S. 29 of the Evidence Act does not, in its practical application come in conflict with S. 164, Cr.P.Code: I.L.R. (1951) Cut. 65: A.I.R. 1951 Ori. 168 (F.B.).

Non-compliance with S. 164(3), Cr.P. Code—Confession, if otherwise relevant, is still admissible in evidence under S. 29, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 285: I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 484.

Sub-S. (3) of S. 164, Cr.P.Code, being a special provision for Magistrate's recording confessions elicited by person in circumstances mentioned in S. 29 and which are otherwise relevant. The provisions of S. 164, Cr.P.Code, therefore, would apply to the particular circumstances contemplated by it. Where a confession cannot be proved under S. 26, the provisions of S. 29 will not apply unless it is recorded is provided for under S. 164(3), Cr.P.Code: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 729: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1086.

30. Consideration of proved confession affecting person making it and others jointly under trial for same offence.—When more persons than one are being tried jointly for the same offence, and a confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some other of such persons is proved, the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession.

Failure to comply with S. 164(3), Cr.P.Code, or with the High Court Circulars containing instructions for the guidance of Magistrates while recording confessional statements, held, will not render the confessions inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1579: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1206: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 68.

Where the prosecution relies upon a confessional statement of the accused in proof of the charge, strict compliance with the provisions of S. 164, Cr.P.Code, is imperative. Where there is substantial compliance with the requirements of S. 164(3) of the Cr.P.Code, reliance can be placed on the provisions of Ss. 29 and 80 of the Evidence Act and any non-compliance with the provisions of S. 164 of the Cr.P.Code may be regularised by application of S. 533 of that Code. [I.L.R. (1970) Cut. 649, Overruled; Observation of Mohanti, J. in I.L.R. (1975) Cut. 1557 held not good law; 1977 Cr.L.J. 1018(Ori.), Approved]: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 19: 1977 Cr.L.J. 2053: I.L.R. (1977) Cut. 719 (F.B.). See also 1991 Cr.L.J 3239 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the Magistrate told the accused that he was free to say whatever he liked that amounted to a sufficient warning and S. 29 made the statement admissible in evidence. Even if the Magistrate had not complied fully with S. 164 the defect was not fatal: 1952 Raj.L.W. 269: I.L.R. (1952) 2 Raj. 93.

Statements made by the accused to a Magistrate when produced by the Police for purposes of remand are admissible: 148 I.C. 1002: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 78. See also I.L.R. (1941) All. 280: A.I.R. 1941 All. 145; (1950) 1 M.L.J. 659.

Admission of guilt made by accused to Magistrate before investigation of the offence and before his arrest, is admissible: 1963 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 235.

Usually and as a matter of caution Courts require some material corroboration to an extra-judicial confessional statement. Evidence of oral confessions of guilt ought to be received with great caution and more so when the same are said to have been made to lambardars, panchas and sarpanchas, who are interested to give evidence for the Police: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 127: 1962 All.Cr.R. 50: 1962 All. Where the accused had made three successive extra-judicial confessions on three different occasions just after the occurrence, held, they were voluntary; and corroborated by other evidence, they were also true: (1976) 42 Cut.L.T. 499: I.L.R. (a) A and B are jointly tried for the murder of C. It is proved that A said—"B and I murdered C". The Court may consider the effect of this confession as against B.

(b) A is on his trial for the murder of C. There is evidence to show that C was murdered by A and B, and that B said—"A and I murdered C".

This statement may not be taken into consideration by the Court against A, as B is not being jointly tried.

1. Scope and applicability.—The section introduces a departure from the ordinary rule relating to the admissibility of evidence and must be strictly construed. Before any statement made by one of the accused persons, tried jointly with the others can be taken into consideration against such others, it must fulfil two conditions: (a) it must be a confession of guilt affecting himself equally with the others; and (b) it must be proved against those persons who are jointly tried with him. The word 'proved' means proved before the prosecution case comes to an end, either proved in the course of the prosecution case or proved in some proceedings previous to the trial: A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 35. Whether the confession of an accused can be used against his co-accused should be determined on seeing whether the accused can be convicted on that confession of the crime with which he and the co-accused were charged: 60 I.C. 660: 22 Cal.L.J. 260 (L.). See also (1910-11) 15 Cal.W.N. 592: I.L.R. 38 Cal. 559; I.L.R. 50 Bom. 683: A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 513; 9 Nag.L.J. 80: A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 229; A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35: I.L.R. 18 Pat. 82; A.I.R. 1938 Sind 94.

A confession of an accused which may be used against his co-accused and acted upon must be confession for the offence for which they are jointly tried; (2) the confession need not be recorded in the presence of the co-accused but it must be offered against the co-accused as well as the confessing accused; (3) such confession is evidence as whatever is considered by the Court including probabilities is evidence in generic sense but as it cannot be considered as independent evidence it does not fall under S. 3; it merely corroborates or lends support to independent evidence on record; (4) such confession where its maker is not under oath nor subjected to cross-examination and the other accused were not present is a weak evidence, weaker than the approver's evidence; (5) it is an evidence created by the confessing accused; it only supplements the substantive evidence against the confessing as well as the other accused; its purpose is merely to tilt the scales where other evidence tends to establish the offence; (6) though not required to be corroborated in minutest detail, it must nevertheless find corroboration in other evidence; (7) to be used against the other accused, the corroboration must be not only qua the factum of the offence but also the identity of the accused involved in it; (8) it cannot be used against an accused if other evidence against him is uncertain and not sufficient to convict; the confession is not meant to fill up the lacunae in requisite evidence; and (9) the Court has to consider whether the confessing accused has understated his own guilt and has endeavoured to assign to the other accused higher culpability: (1988) 36 B.L.J.R. 720.

S. 30 is an exception to the rule of English law that an accused's confession is evidence only against him, and not others tried jointly with him; the section is, therefore, to be interpreted strictly and with due care; a confession under S. 30 is not evidence under S. 3; it merely clothes the Court with a discretion to consider the confession alongwith other evidence when evidence against the other co-accused tending to his conviction; the confession may be used to clinch the conviction; the confession of the accused by itself is not sufficient to proceed against the other co-accused involved therein also as an offender. [A.I.R. 1949 P.C. 257, Foll.]: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 159.

Confession of co-accused can be used against other co-accused of the case only when they are being tried jointly for the same offence: (1992-1) 40 B.L.J.R. 293 (D.B.).

S. 30 is the only provision permitting the reception of the statement of a co-accused person which is not a substantive piece of evidence and cannot sustain a charge against another accused, but can only be pressed into service to lend assurance to the conclusion of guilt which can be rested on the other evidence against him. S. 30 relates to a confessional statement of an accused person implicating himself and the co-accused made prior to and proved at the trial: (1985) 60 Cut.L.T. 91; 1987 Mah.L.J. 683: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 428; A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1883.

So far as the confessional statement of one accused is concerned, it may be taken into consideration against the other accused if it fulfils the conditions laid down in S. 30 of the Evidence Act. One of the conditions is that the confession must implicate the maker substantially to the same extent as the other accused person against whom it is sought to be taken into consideration. Where on reading the confession as a whole it appears that he was really trying to throw the main blame on the other accused and make out that he was an unwilling spectator of the crime committed by the other accused, the utmost that can be stated is that the confession cannot be used at all against the other accused. But because there are differences between his confession and the confessional statement of the other accused, the confessional statements cannot be condemned out of hand or in limine as untrue where some of the differences are immaterial, some others are due to the desire of the accused to throw the blame on the other and the rest stand clearly resolved by other evidence in the case: 1957 Cr.L.J. 431: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 216.

Scope—See 1966 Cr.L.J. 323 (2) (Cal.).

Confessional statement of the co-accused cannot be the foundation even for the purpose of framing of the charge against the accused: (1985) 2 Bom.C.R. 499.

The confession of a co-accused is not technically "evidence" and it cannot be treated as substantive evidence. The words "may take into consideration" show that if there is other relevant evidence tending to prove the guilt of the accused, the confession of a co-accused may then be used only in support of other evidence. The confession of a co-accused cannot be made the foundation of a conviction. If there is no other evidence or if the other evidence is insufficient, the confession of a co-accused is to be excluded and cannot be taken into consideration against a co-accused. Such a confession cannot be added to supplement the evidence otherwise insufficient nor can it be used to fill a gap in the prosecution evidence. The evidentiary value of the confession of a co-accused is extremely weak and a conviction solely on its basis is bad and is unsustainable in law: 1984 Cr.L.J. 1126: 57 Cut.L.T. 429; 1986 Cr.L.R. 567 (Raj.); 1984 Cr.L.J. 1055; 1982 Cr.L.J. 2162 (Ori.); 1982 Cr.L.J. 269: 53 Cut.L.T. 12; 1981 All.L.J. 991 (D.B.); 1977 Cr.L.J. 1243 (Pat.) (D.B.); 1977 Cr.L.J. 1309 (Gau.) (D.B.); (1971) 37 Cut.L.T. 1223 (D.B.); (1994) 54 Del.L.T. 20.

It is well settled that so far as the confessional statement of accused is concerned it may be taken into consideration against the other accused under S. 30 if it fulfils the conditions laid down therein. Confession of co-accused is not an evidence as defined under S. 3.

Where there are confessions of several accused and the confessions are retracted subsequently, the proper approach is to consider his confession as a whole on its merits and use it against the maker thereof, provided the Court is in a position to come to a unhesitating conclusion that the confession was voluntary and true: 1981 Cr.L.J. 430 (D.B.).

Joint trial of several accused—Confession by one of them can be used against co-accused: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1023: A.I.R. 1967 Manipur 11.

Statement under S. 342, Cr.P.Code made by one accused is not binding on co-accused—Cr.P.Code, 1898, S. 342: 1966 Raj. L.W. 460.

Statement of accused—Use of—Though not evidence under S. 3, Evidence Act, can be used against accused—If it is confessional statement, it cannot be so used: 1968 Cr.L.J. 992 (Goa).

Statement of an accused made at the Police Station against the co-accused is inadmissible and cannot be used as evidence as against the co-accused: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 259: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 167; 1959 All.L.J. 340 (statement by accused in F.I.R.).

S. 30 applies to a proceeding under S. 110, Cr.P.Code, against a number of persons, one of whom has made a confession implicating other persons whose conduct is also the subject of an enquiry: I.L.R. 57 All. 312: A.I.R. 1934 All. 927. See also A.I.R. 1936 Sind 236; I.L.R. 17 Lah. 547: (1936) 38 Punj.L.R. 1018; A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 31; A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 321: (1937) 1 M.L.J. 750; A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 39; 1936 O.W.N. 671; 1949 All.L.J. 413. But see infra.

Persons, against whom proceedings are being jointly taken under S. 117, Cr.P.Code in one and the same enquiry cannot be said to be on their joint trial for the same offence within S. 30: I.L.R. 41 All. 231: 49 I.C. 654.

A confession by an accused implicating himself and two others in a charge of dacoity is inadmissible against the others in a proceeding under S. 110 of the Cr.P.Code: (1917-18) 22 Cal.W.N. 408: 49 I.C. 649; (1920-21) 25 Cal.W.N. 239: 61 I.C. 793. See also 167 I.C. 162: A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 39.

Discovery statement made by one accused cannot be used against the non-maker accused persons but can be used only against the maker thereof and he only can be fastened with the knowledge of the concealment of the dead bodies: (1990-2) 38 B.L.J.R. 1242: 1991 Cr.L.J. 1030 (D.B.).

What is permitted to be proved having the information received from the accused pursuant to which discovery is made, is intended to be proved against such accused and not against non-informant co-accused. The statements containing information leading to discoveries under S. 27 may or may not, depending upon the facts and circumstances, be confessional. Those may be simply incriminating. To attract the provisions of S. 30, it should for all purposes be a confession, that is a statement containing an admission of guilt and not merely a statement raising the inference with regard to such a guilt: 1979 Bom.C.R. 680 (Bom.) (D.B.).

S. 10 is more effective than S. 30 in the matter of considering evidence pertaining to one accused as against the others; but S. 10 can be invoked only where "there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence"; a conspiracy is always hatched in secret; it is normally impossible to adduce its direct evidence; it can be proved largely from inferences drawn from acts committed by other conspirators in pursuance of a common desire: A.I.R. 1988 Ker. 1: 1988 Cr.L.J. 107: (1987) 1 Ker.L.T. 928 (F.B.).

Confession of a deceased co-accused, held, is relevant both under Ss. 30 and 32(3) as it is a confession which, if true, would have exposed him to criminal prosecution: I.L.R. (1979) Bom. 380 (D.B.).

Where the Court decided to proceed against the accused only after ordering that the charge against the co-accused be ignored and examined him as a witness, held, the statement of co-accused, not incriminating himself, could not be considered under S. 30: 1978 M.P.L.J. 547(D.B.).

Whether S. 30 applies to a domestic enquiry under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. See (1974) 45 F.J.R. 329 (Mad.).

The statement by the accused in the first information report regarding the fight over property that the co-accused was also present when the fight took place is not admissible against the latter. The mere fact that the co-accused is the son of the accused makes no difference in the matter: 1959 All. Cr.R. 267: 1959 All.W.R. (H.C.) 321: 1959 All.L.J. 340.

Where a person was put up for trial alongwith accused to begin with but he turned approver and was granted permission, under these circumstances, in the absence of corroboration, it is unsafe to act upon his statement alone: 1956 Cr.L.J. 233: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 86.

Approver's evidence—Corroboration in material particulars, if needed for relying on: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1305 (Cal.).

Extra-judicial confession—Corroboration by approver—Sufficiency: A.I.R. 1957 Him. Pra. 52: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1254.

Approver—Retracting the confession at the committal stage—Approver's evidence not corroborated on material particulars considering the evidence of prosecution witnesses (P.W. 16 and P.W. 59), as a whole, it must be stated that far from affording corroboration to the evidence of the approver on material particulars, it contradicts the evidence of the approver. A confession cannot be regarded as a piece of satisfactory evidence, because, it is not made in the presence of the person whom it incriminates and consequently cannot be tested by cross-examination. A confession, therefore, is a much weaker type of evidence than the evidence of the approver which is not subject to such an infirmity. Though by virtue of S. 30, of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) the confession may be taken into consideration by the Court and treated as evidence upon which the Court may act, S. 30 of the Act does not say that the confession amounts to proof. As observed by the Privy Council in L.R. 76 I.A. 147: (1949) 2 M.L.J. 194, 'the danger of acting on accomplice evidence is not merely that the accomplice is on his own admission a man of bad character, who took part in that offence and afterwards to save himself betrayed his former associates, and who has placed himself in a position in which he can hardly fail to have strong bias in form of the prosecution; the real danger is that he is telling a story which in its general outline is true, and it is easy for him to work into the story matter which is untrue'.

So far as the confessions of the approver and accused No. 3 are concerned, there is nothing to guarantee that the accounts which they have given of the incident in their confessions were independent and without previous concert as there is no proof that they were kept separate while in Police custody. As regards the confession of accused No. 4, the record does not show that when he was produced before a Magistrate and remanded to Judicial custody he was given due warning by the Magistrate and told that he should reflect whether he should make any confession at all and that any confession made by him is likely to be used against him. Finally, the evidence of the approver suffers from two infirmities. On his own showing he is a man of bad character and further at the committal stage he went back upon his confession. Thus his evidence, standing by itself cannot carry conviction: (1963) 2 S.C.R. 517: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 742.

Where besides the evidence of the approver and the confessional statement of a co-accused and the evidence of recovery of a stolen property from the house of the accused there is no other evidence to show that the accused was a party to the conspiracy or that he had abetted the other accused in the commission of robbery, the conviction of the accused on that evidence under S. 392 read with S. 120-B (1), Penal Code is bad. What S. 30 of the Evidence Act says: 'may take into consideration', which presupposes there being other evidence on record to which the statement can lend assurance. In other words, there must be a basis of substantive evidence to which the confessional statement may be added. If there is substantive evidence against the accused and there is some lingering doubt the confession of the co-accused may be taken into consideration to set that doubt at rest. Corroboration of an approver's evidence by the confessional statement of another co-accused amounts to one tainted piece of evidence being corroborated by another tainted piece of evidence and the conviction thereon is bad. The mere recovery of a stolen chain from the house of the accused would not by itself be a sufficient corroboration to the evidence of the approver to make the accused guilty of the offence of conspiracy and abetment of robbery: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 557 (Ker.).

The general rule is that the evidence of an accomplice should not be accepted unless there is adequate corroboration in material particulars not only in respect of the commission of the crime but also in respect of the participation of each of the accused in the commission of that crime. It is also well-settled that the corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime; it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. As to what would be a material particular would obviously depend on the facts of each case: I.L.R. (1956) Cut. 195: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1208: A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 177.

Where only evidence against the accused charged under the Customs Act for attempting to export foreign exchange was the confessional statement of his co-accused stating that they had procured the foreign exchange at the instance of the accused, held, the confessions at best showed material contravention of the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act; the offence charged under the Customs Act is not made out: 1988 Cr.L.J. 963 (Bom.).

As statements made in answer to a notice under S. 171-A of the Sea Customs Act are not made subject to the safeguards under which confessions are recorded by Magistrates they must be specially scrutinised to find out if they were made under threat or promise from some one in authority. If after such scrutiny they are considered to be voluntary, they may be received against the maker in the same way as confessions are received and also against a co-accused jointly tried with him. S. 30 of the Evidence Act does not limit itself to confessions made to Magistrates nor do the earlier sections do so and hence there is no bar to its proper application to statements under S. 171-A of the Sea Customs Act.

When an accused is tried jointly with others right to the end, and he dies when all that remains to be done is to pronounce judgment, a confession made by him in the trial becomes relevant under S. 30 read with S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act.

Confessions of co-accused are not evidence but if there is other evidence on which a conviction can be based, they can be referred to as lending some assurance to the verdict.

A retracted confession must be looked upon with greater concern unless the reasons given for having made it in the first instance (not for retraction as erroneously stated in some cases) are on the face of them false. Once the confession is proved satisfactorily any admission made therein must be satisfactorily withdrawn or the making of it explained as having proceeded from fear, duress, promise or the like from some one in authority. A retracted confession is a weak link against the maker and more so against a co-accused.

In the instant case, there is corroboration to the evidence of the accomplice connecting the accused with the crime, from the retracted confession of the co-accused given independently and in circumstances which exclude any collusion or mal-practice. Regard being had to the principles stated above and to S. 133 of the Evidence Act there is no scope for interference with the conviction of the accused: 1968 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 116: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 591: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 641; A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 832.

2. "Affecting himself and some other".— All that is necessary for a confession to be admissible against a co-accused is that the maker should inculpate himself in all the offences in which he implicates the other co-accused, and it is not necessary that he should ascribe to himself as major a part in the commission of the crime as he ascribes to the other co-accused. The Explanation to S. 30 makes it clear that an attempt to commit the offence and an abetment of the offence are included in the term offence. So, even if the maker of the confession implicates himself only in an attempt to commit, or, in the abetment of, the offence, or a minor part in the commission of the offence, the admissibility of the confession against the other accused is not affected. But where the confession implicates the maker in one out of the several offences and implicates the other co-accused in the other offences as well, it cannot be said that the confession "affects himself and some other of such persons" within the meaning of S. 30, because ex hypothesis the confession does not affect himself, and some other persons with respect to some of the offences. The words "affecting himself and some other of such persons" in S. 30 suggest that before the confession made by one person can be taken into consideration as against other persons, who are being tried jointly with him for the same offence, it must affect the maker as well as others. If the statement does not affect the maker thereof or only ascribes to him a part not sufficient by itself to justify his conviction for the offence for which he is being jointly tried with others, it will not be a confession of the nature contemplated by the section: A.I.R. 1949 All. 132: 50 Cr.L.J. 144.

Under S. 30, in order that a confession may be used against a co-accused, it is necessary that the admission or confession implicates the maker of the confession to the same extent as it implicates the co-accused, in the commission of the offence for which they are both being jointly tried: I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 27: A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 50; A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 267.

There is nothing in the terms of S. 30 to suggest that a confession is not admissible in evidence against a person who is being jointly tried for the same offence with a man who has made the confession, if the confession minimises the guilt of him who makes it and exaggerates the guilt of the other. The section only requires that it must affect both equally: A.I.R. 1938 All. 91: 1937 All.L.J. 1253.

In order that a confession may be used against a co-accused under S. 30, it is not necessary that it should implicate the maker substantially to the same extent as it implicates the co-accused. A confession is a statement which either admits in terms the offence or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence, and it is admissible in evidence under the section, whether the confessing accused ascribes to himself a major or minor part in the crime. Whether it has any value or not is a different matter: I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 312.

It is not the law that unless a confessing prisoner implicates himself as fully as his co-accused, the statement will not be admissible, the principles being that there is no guarantee that the maker of the confession is speaking the truth. All that is required is that the confession shall substantially implicate its maker in regard to the crime with which he and his co-accused are charged: 19 W.R. 67 (Cr.); I.L.R. 2 All. 444; 4 Pat.L.T. 505: 75 I.C. 705: A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 347; 72 I.C. 497: 24 Cr.L.J. 385; 2 Pat.L.T. 125.

Where more persons than one are being tried jointly for offences, one of which is a major and the other is a minor offence, and those offences are inter-connected, if the person making the confession does not incriminate himself so far as the major offence is concerned, it cannot be said that the confession affects him as well as others: 1949 All.L.J. 60: A.I.R. 1949 All. 391. See also (1949) 2 M.L.J. 428.

A statement by an accused which, read as a whole is self exculpatory, cannot be relied upon for convicting the maker thereof. Even a part of it which is inculpatory cannot be relied upon by the prosecution even against him. That being so it cannot at all be used against a co-accused. [(1939) 40 Cr.L.J. 364 (P.C.) and 1960 Cr.L.J. 514 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1516 (Gau.) (D.B.). See also 1984 Cr.L.J. 520 (D.B.); 1974 Raj.L.W. 459; 1977 Cr.L.R. 334 (Raj.); (1991) 3 Crimes 404 (Pat.) [A self-inculpatory confession implicating a co-accused may be relied on to convict the co-accused when it is corroborated by other evidence].

Self-implication is guarantee for truth of accusation against co-accused: A.I.R. 1930 All. 29.

The Court has discretion to use one accused's confession against the other accused as corroborative evidence; but such confession must implicate both the confessing as well as the other accused; that is the guarantee for the confession being true; but a self-exculpatory confession cannot be used against any other accused: 1974 Ker.L.T. 328 (D.B.).

The confession of an accused implicating the other accused has very little evidentiary value by itself: 6 Sau.L.R. 473: A.I.R. 1954 Sau. 129.

The confessional statement of one of the several accused may be taken into consideration against the other accused, if it fulfils the condition laid down under S. 30 of the Evidence Act, one of the conditions being that confession must implicate the maker substantially to the same extent as the other accused persons against whom it is sought to be taken into consideration. Where on a plain reading of the confession as a whole it appears that the maker was really trying to throw the blame on the other accused, the confession is not one admissible under S. 30. That statement is not substantive piece of evidence in its real sense: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 31: (1964) 6 Ori.J.D. 184: 30 Cut.L.T. 517: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 315; (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 127: 1962 All.Cr.R. 50: 1962 All.W.R. (Supp.) 18: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 580. Where in written statement filed by two of the four accused persons in prosecution for offences under Ss. 323, 341, they absolved themselves of the offences and put the whole blame on other accused by saying that it was the latter who assaulted the complainant and kept him under confinement, held, the evidentiary value of the said written statement against other accused is practically nothing: (1963) 5 Ori.J.D. 65.

Statements by accused—Admissibility—Self-exculpatory statements of an accused cannot be admitted as evidence against his co-accused, jointly tried for the same offence—Statement of an accused, though not evidence, can be used against him if it is proved—Statement of an accused under S. 342, Cr.P.Code cannot be used under this section against the co-accused: 1967 Cr.L.J. 357: A.I.R. 1967 Goa 21 (F.B.).

Per Guha Ray, J.—A self-exculpatory statement of accused could not be treated as a confession and could be used only as an admission as against the accused himself and it could not be used as evidence at all against

Applicability—Accused making confession exculpating himself and throwing blame on co-accused—Confession is not admissible against co-accused: 1969 Ker.L.T. 566.

Confession—Self-exculpatory statements —Statement of maker implicating other co-accused excluding himself—Confession of co-accused uncorroborated by other evidence cannot alone be sufficient to sustain conviction—Unless a statement unequivocally implicates the maker in the crime, as substantially as he implicates the co-accused, such a statement cannot be called a confession and is no guidance of guilt of co-accused—Cr.P.Code, 1898, S. 164: I.L.R. (1966) 16 Raj. 252: 1966 Raj.L.W. 382.

A statement before the Court, of the co-accused where it is deprecating his own guilt, is a statement seeking to clear himself at the expense of the accused and as such is inadmissible under S. 30: 152 I.C. 924: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 724.

Where a statement is volunteered by a co-accused to the effect that when he arrived on the scene of offence after hearing the cry of the complainant he noticed another accused in the act of assaulting the complainant, such a self-exculpatory statement is inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 350. See also 7 O.W.N. 980: A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 502.

A confession by each of co-accused implicating self and co-accused as regards robbery but throwing entire burden for murder on the other is admissible as regards former but inadmissible as regards the latter: A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 293; 12 Cr.L.J. 562: 12 I.C. 650.

A confession wherein the maker does not incriminate himself suggesting himself to be a simple spectator cannot be used against another co-accused as it does not give rise to a conclusion of guilt beyond reasonable doubt and, thus, cannot be trusted. Where accused while making the confession implicated another co-accused as one of the participants in the dacoity, held, that confession could not be relied upon for convicting the other accused for two reasons; (i) there was no independent evidence to connect the other accused with the crime, and (ii) the confession so made was exculpatory, it did not implicate the maker to the same extent as the other accused person against whom the confession was sought to be used as maker of confession had confessed that he was standing outside. [A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 599: 1988 Cr.L.J. 842 and 1972 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 67, Rel. on]: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1150 (Madh. Pra.). Opportunity of cross-examining the co-accused, who implicated others, was not given—Whether it can be said to be an evidence in strict sense. See (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 288.

Where an accused does not implicate himself in his statement, in respect of the offence of murder, but implicates himself in respect of the disposal of the dead body, such a statement is not admissible against the co-accused in respect of the offence under S. 300, I.P.Code, but is only admissible in respect of the offence under S. 201, I.P.Code: 1937 Mad.W.N. 1233. See also I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 312.

Charge under Ss. 302, 149 and 120-B, I.P. Code—Statement by accused under S. 164, Cr.P.Code—Accused exculpating himself but only admitting his presence at the place of occurrence—Statement does not amount to confession and what is stated by accused against co-accused cannot be used as evidence against other co-accused: A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 100.

Where an accused in a case of forgery admitted that the document was innocently written by him in obedience to the other accused and without knowing that a forgery was being committed, held, it is not a confessional statement; the accused exculpates himself but inculpates the other accused; it cannot be used against the co-accused. [(1939) 40 Cr.L.J. 364 (P.C.) and 1957 Cr.L.J. 481 (S.C.), Foll.]: 1975 Cr.L.J. 923: 1974 Raj.L.W. 459.

3. "Tried jointly".—A statement made by one accused can only be used against another if the provisions of S. 30 of the Act are applicable: 20 All.L.J. 178: A.I.R. 1922 All. 24. Confessions recorded in the manner provided by the Criminal Procedure Code, even though made to Magistrates outside British India, if proved against the persons who made them, may be taken into consideration against others who are being tried jointly for the same offence: 69 I.C. 257: 17 Nag.L.R. 113. As to joint trial, see also I.L.R. 45 All. 323: A.I.R. 1923 All. 322; 2 Pat.L.T. 125.

When two persons are jointly tried, one for the offence of rape of a girl and the other for the abduction of that girl, they are not tried for the same offence. Consequently, a confession made by one of them affecting himself and the other is not admissible in evidence against the other under S. 30: (1937-38) 42 Cal.W.N. 814: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 479.

Accused pleading guilty.—Where the confessing accused was immediately convicted and his confession was later on used against the other accused but without asking the latter in his statement under S. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 about the confession, held, the confession could not be used against the second accused; conviction set aside: 1981 All.W.C. 29: 1981 All.Cr.R. 13: 1981 All.L.J. 70.

A statement made by a co-accused admitting his guilt wholly or partially while being examined by the Court cannot be taken into consideration under S. 30 against other accused: (1985) 60 Cut.L.T. 91.

Where both the accused persons were not jointly tried, the statement made by one accused under S. 67 of the Narcotic Drugs and Pyschotropic Substances Act, 1985, held, cannot be read against another accused: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 281 (Raj.).

Where one of the accused pleaded guilty and was examined at the end of the prosecution case, and declined to call any witnesses, the trial was a joint trial, so that his confession could be taken into consideration against the other accused. A conviction under S. 456, I.P.Code, based on the confessions of a co-accused who was being tried alongwith the prisoner under S. 411, I.P. Code, is wrong: 20 I.C. 136: 14 Cr.L.J. 376.

The plea of guilty of one co-accused who is removed from the dock while the other alone is tried cannot be taken into consideration against that other: I.L.R. 38 Cal. 446: (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 49; 15 Punj. Re. (Cr.) 1911: 12 I.C. 981. See also 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 143, cited under Note 6, infra.

Death of co-accused.—Joint trial—Death of co-accused before pronouncement of judgment—Held, confession of deceased co-accused was relevant under S. 30 read with S. 32(3) of Evidence Act: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 591: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 641: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 832. But where the co-accused making confession implicating himself and other died immediately after confession, held, such confession did not fall within the purview of S. 30: (1987) 3 Crimes 540 (Cal.).

Accused absconded.—One of the requisites for admissibility of the confession of one accused against the other is that there should be a joint trial. Where a joint trial did start but could not last long as one of the accused absconded and, the case of that accused was separated under S. 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, S. 30 of the Evidence Act was not attracted and the statement of the other accused was not usable against the absconded accused: 1980 Cr.L.J. 618 (Del.) (D.B.).

S. 30 which makes confession of an accused admissible against a co-accused applies only to cases in which the confession is made by a person tried at the time with the accused persons against whom the confession is used. Therefore, a confession of an absconding co-conspirator who is not tried jointly with other conspirators cannot be used against the latter: 1979 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 95 (Goa).

Where the confessing accused at the feg end of his trial together with the other accused had absconded and his trial was separated, held, his confession could be used to corroborate other evidence which was by itself worthy of reliance in every detail; however, the confession could not be relied upon if its maker's separate trial had been directed at earlier stages of the trial: 1989 Cr.L.J. 336 (Pat.) (D.B.).

4. "Same offence".—'Same offence' means the identical offence and not an offence of the same kind: (1927-28) 32 Cal.W.N. 1004: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 14. See also A.I.R. 1937 Sind 218. S. 30 requires that the persons concerned must be tried jointly for the same offences, which expression means an offence coming under the same legal definition, that is, under the same section of the law: A.I.R. 1950 Him. Pra. 35: 51 Cr.L.J. 1004; A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 74: 52 Cr.L.J. 473.

The words "same offence" in S. 30, mean "identical offence" and cannot mean "offence of the same kind". Where two persons are jointly tried one for an offence under S. 457/380, I.P.Code, and another under S. 411, I.P.Code, a confession made by one of them cannot be taken into consideration against the other who has been implicated in the confession of the former: 49 Cr.L.J. 207: A.I.R. 1948 Sind 65.

Before S. 30 can be applied it must be proved that a confession has been made by one of the persons who are being tried jointly for the same offence and that the confession affects the person making it as well as some other persons so jointly being tried. The section is new to the Indian Evidence Act as contrasted with the English Law and must be construed strictly. When there is no such confession as affect, the person making it, any statement made by one accused cannot be treated as evidence against the co-accused or be taken as affording corroboration of the evidence of the approver: 1929 Mad.W.N. 698.

Where out of seven accused only two were convicted but under different charges under Indian Penal Code, held, the retracted judicial confession of one accused could not be relied upon against the other accused: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1793: (1984) 2 Crimes 914.

5. "Confession".—"Confession" means confession of the very offence for which the accused are being tried, not a confession of any offence connected with that offence nor of any other offence which may be disclosed by the evidence: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 75: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 177: 59 M.L.J. 471; 1939 Nag.L.J. 469: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 309.

Confession of a co-accused must be of the very offence for which they are being tried. In a case of murder the confession of one accused that the co-accused committed the murder but that he helped him in throwing the body in a pit cannot be taken into consideration: A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 124.

The word "confession" in S. 30 of the Evidence Act cannot reasonably be interpreted to mean a confession of any offence for which the accused persons are being tried but only of the very offence for which they are being tried, offence always including abetments and attempts. When a number of accused are tried for an offence under S. 302, I.P.Code, and one of them confesses to an offence under S. 201, I.P.Code, such confession cannot be used in evidence against the other co-accused: A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 124: (1945) 2 M.L.J. 479.

The language of S. 30 does not justify any distinction being made between a confession made before the trial and one made in the course of the trial; a confession made by an accused person in the course of trial, implicating himself and another accused, is admissible in evidence against the co-accused under S. 30. [(1936) 37 Cr.L.J. 508 (Lah.) and (1930) 31 Cr.L.J. 1137 (Bom.) and (1931) 32 Cr.L.J. 1222 (Nag.), Rel. on; (1924) 25 Cr.L.J. 305 (All.) and (1931) 32 Cr.L.J. 1099 (Mad.), Dissent. from]: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1947 (J.&K.) (D.B.).

A confession must either admit in terms the offence or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence. The admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact, is not of itself a confession. A statement which contains self-exculpatory matter cannot amount to a confession if the exculpatory statement is of some fact which if true would negative the offence alleged to be confessed. In a murder case, a statement by an accused A to the effect that B and C killed D with the help of a chord does not amount to a confession of A of an offence under S. 302, Penal Code and under S. 30, Evidence Act, it cannot be taken into consideration as against B under S. 302, Penal Code and cannot be taken into consideration as against B and C to import the knowledge of the factum of murder: I.L.R. (1962) Cut. 582: 28 Cut.L.T. 398: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 377.

A statement by an accused person which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making the statement may directly repudiate his participation in the crime. Such a statement may be taken into consideration against the person making the statement, but it may be unsafe to use it against a co-accused: 53 I.C. 691: 20 Cr.L.J. 787.

An accused's statement which does not incriminate him is not a confession and cannot be used against his co-accused: 16 Cr.L.J. 25: 26 I.C. 329. See also 46 I.C. 842: 19 Cr.L.J. 826; I.L.R. 45 All. 323: A.I.R. 1923 All. 322; 59 I.C. 913; 14 Cr.L.J. 570: 21 I.C. 171; 109 I.C. 351: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 416 (2); A.I.R. 1929 Sind 250.

A self-exculpatory statement of accused could not be treated as a confession: 1960 Cr.L.J. 338: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 183.

The word "confession" used in S. 30 clearly means such a confession as is required to be proved at the trial as a part of the prosecution evidence it cannot, therefore, signify any matter which comes on the record at the end of the prosecution evidence, namely, answers to questions put under S. 342, Cr.P.Code. Hence, the statement made by a co-accused confessing partially or wholly, his guilt when examined under

S. 342, Cr.P.Code, cannot be taken into consideration under S. 30, against the other accused: 190 I.C. 273: 41 Cr.L.J. 886: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 287; A.I.R. 1952 J.&K. 49: 1953 Cr.L.J. 150. S. 30 does not refer to statements made at the trial but the statements made before and proved at the trial: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 285.

Where an accused admitted the fact of selling adulterated milk but imputed liability to his master—the co-accused, held, it did not amount to a confession of guilt falling under S. 30: 1976 All.L.J. 321: 1976 Cr.L.J. 503: 1976 All.W.C. 128.

Whether a statement by an accused is a confession can be sure-tested by finding out if, on its own and without other evidence, it is sufficient to enter conviction for the confessor; thus, where an accused admitted that he and his companions were marching to the Police Station at night, held, it amounted to a confession of being members of an unlawful assembly: 1974 Ker.L.T. 328 (D.B.).

Self-exculpatory statement of the wife to the effect that a white substance was administered on the assurance by her paramour that it would bring about good feeling did not amount to a confession and could not be used against the paramour as criminal conspiracy was not proved: 21 I.C. 378: 18 Cal.L.J. 590; 9 Nag.L.J. 80: A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 229. See also 1941 O.W.N. 722: 1941 O.A. 483: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 359.

6. Confession of co-accused—Evidentiary value.—"May take into consideration" points to necessity of there being other evidence on record to which the statement can lend assurance: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 213: 29 Cr.L.J. 609. See also 47 Mad.L.W. 139: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 678.

It is not the law that the confession of one accused must be corroborated by other evidence before it can be accepted against a co-accused, the correct position is that there must be a basis of substantive evidence to which the confessional statement may be added. If there is substantive evidence against the accused and there is some lingering doubt, the confession of a co-accused may be taken into account to set that doubt at rest: A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 444: (1942) 1 M.L.J. 517. See also I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 419: A.I.R. 1946 Sind 43; I.L.R. (1946) All. 111: A.I.R. 1946 All. 15 (Reference to antecedent circumstances, nature of).

A confession by a co-accused may be taken into consideration against another accused; confessional statements under S. 27 come within the terms of S. 30. But there must be admissible evidence to point to the co-accused's guilt. In assessing the probative value of the evidence, a co-accused's confession may be taken into consideration. But where the evidence against the co-accused is only that he was in the company of the other accused before the crime and after the crime, there is no sufficient basis to convict him: 52 Mad.L.W. 420 (2): A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 238. See also A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 444: (1942) 1 M.L.J. 517.

Where a statement by an accused person implicates the other accused, it would require the strongest independent evidence if any reliance is to be placed upon it at all. Under S. 30 such a statement can only be taken into consideration; it is not evidence against the other accused: 52 Mad.L.W. 898: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 306.

A statement of co-accused is not evidence and a conviction cannot, therefore, be based on such statement. If the prosecution wishes to rely upon such statement, it should ask for a separate trial and examine the co-accused as a witness: 43 Cr.L.J. 556: A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 426.

It would be far too dangerous to consider that a confession of a co-accused amounts to evidence against a person. It is not stated under S. 30 and it had long been settled law that a conviction cannot be based on the confession of a co-accused: 35 Cr.L.J. 1180: A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 230.

The confession of a co-accused uncorroborated by any other evidence cannot be alone sufficient to sustain a conviction, and although this is not a rule of law but of practice, it has acquired all the reverence of law. This should be all the more so in a case where the confessing accused does not implicate himself as fully and substantially as he does his co-accused: 1958 Raj.L.W. 353: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1540: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 338.

Evidence and statement of co-accused in another case—Not a legal evidence against other accused. See Ss. 421, 479-A, Cr.P.Code, 1898: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 609.

Confession of co-accused—Admissibility in evidence: 1968 Cr.L.J. 347: A.I.R. 1968 Ker. 66.

Confessional statement of co-accused—Evidentiary value of—Not a substantive evidence under S. 3 of the Evidence Act—Can be treated as evidence in general way under S. 30: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1206 (Raj.).

A confession of an accused not being declared relevant by the Evidence Act as against a co-accused cannot be treated as substantive evidence and a judgment cannot be based upon it so far as he is concerned: 65 I.C. 561: A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 146.

Under S. 30 confession of a co-accused can only be taken into consideration but it is not in itself substantive evidence: 1957 Cr.L.J. 559: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 381.

Confession of co-accused—Not a substantive evidence: I.L.R. (1965) Bom. 648: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 616: A.I.R. 1965 Bom. 195.

The evidential value of a confession made by a co-accused is not very high. But the confession receives confirmation when it leads to the arrest and identification of the other accused: I.L.R. (1939) Lah. 67.

Where however, there is apart from the confessions a body of evidence and circumstances enough to support a conviction, if the evidence is accepted as free from untruth or exaggeration or serious mistake or distortion, the Court can take the confessions into consideration and consider together, the evidence, the circumstances and the confessions: I.L.R. 43 Bom. 739: 51 I.C. 657. See also I.L.R. 4 Rang. 45: A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 127.

Where there is no independent evidence establishing reasonably the guilt of an accused he cannot be convicted on the basis of a statement in the confession made by his co-accused. A confession of a co-accused can only be used to lend assurance to other independent evidence sufficient for sustaining a conviction: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 35: A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 1.

The confession made by an accused can be used against his co-accused only in support of other evidence and cannot be made the foundation of conviction against him: A.I.R. 1971 Tripura 8.

The accepted position of law in regard to confession made by a co-accused is that it must be kept aside and if there is other evidence which needs strength by way of corroboration then the confession of a co-accused could be imported to lend strength: 1974 Raj.L.W. 213; (1987) 1 Crimes 844 (Ori.).

When only circumstantial evidence is available and when other features are broadly proved by trust-worthy evidence, then confessional statements lending assurance to the same conclusions can be deemed as relevant material. [1964 S.C.D. 956; 1952 S.C.R. 1091, Disting.]: 1971 S.C.D. 347.

Regarding the worth of the confession of the co-accused and its impact against the other accused the point is well settled. If it is a mere statement it has no relevance and it becomes confession of a co-accused only if it inculpates the said co-accused: (1988) 2 Bom.C.R. 42.

Before a confession of co-accused can be taken into consideration under S. 30 of the Evidence Act, that co-accused must have been tried jointly for the same offence with the other accused. Where a co-accused pleads guilty and the Court has accepted his plea and directed his removal from the dock and the trial proceeds against the remaining prisoner alone, the confession by the former is not admissible under S. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, against the latter: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 143.

A confession cannot be treated as evidence which is substantive evidence against a co-accused person; or dealing with a criminal case where the prosecution relies upon the confession of one accused person against another accused person the proper approach to adopt is to consider the other evidence against such an accused person and if the said evidence appears to be satisfactory, and the Court is inclined to hold that the said evidence may sustain the charge framed against the said accused person, the Court turns to the confession with a view to assure himself that the conclusion which it is inclined to draw from the other evidence is right. Thus, where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction then the kind of confession described in S. 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 458: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 66.

It is not as if an extra-judicial confession or confession of a co-accused has only to be rejected as of no value. It has to be considered in the facts and circumstances of the case as brought out in the other evidence adduced in the case. A confession can be acted upon even in a case where the only other evidence available is circumstantial evidence. Confession of a co-accused, if sufficiently corroborated in material particulars can be treated as conclusive against the maker thereof and it can be taken into consideration alongwith other evidence against co-accused as well: (1994) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 405: (1994) 1 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 47 (D.B.).

Criminal trial—Confession of co-accused —Evidentiary value of—Not substantive evidence and can only be referred to as lending assurance to conclusions of guilt based on independent evidence: 31 Cut.L.T. 401: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 385: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 170.

Confession of co-accused—Cannot be used as substantive piece of evidence: (1964) 2 An.W.R. 43: 1964 M.L.J. (Cr.) 415: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 636: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 548.

The confession of a co-accused is a very weak type of evidence because it is not taken in the presence of the other accused against whom it is sought to be used and the latter has not even the right or opportunity of testing the truth of the confession of co-accused by cross-examining him. The evidence of confession of a co-accused being by its very nature and effect tainted, the Courts have been reluctant to look to that evidence in order to seek corroboration of the tainted evidence of an accomplice. The consensus of authorities shows that the confession of a co-accused can be used to lend assurance to the other evidence on record. Confession of a co-accused cannot form the basis of a conviction but if there is other evidence, it can also be put into the scale and weighed with that evidence: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 393 (Punj.).

As a result of the provisions contained in S. 30, Evidence Act, the confession of a co-accused has to be regarded as amounting to evidence in a general way, because whatever is considered by the Court is evidence, circumstances which are considered by the Court as well as probabilities do amount to evidence in that generic sense. Thus, though confession may be regarded as evidence in that generic sense because of the provisions of S. 30, the fact remains that it is not evidence as defined by S. 3 of the Act. The result, therefore, is that in dealing with a case against an accused person, the Court cannot start with the confession of a co-accused person, it must begin with other evidence adduced by the prosecution and after it has formed its opinion with regard to the quality and effect of the said evidence, then it is permissible to turn to the confession in order to receive assurance to the conclusion of guilt which the judicial mind is about to reach on the said other evidence. Thus, the confession of a co-accused person cannot be treated as substantive evidence and can be pressed into service only when the Court is inclined to accept other evidence and feels the necessity of seeking for an assurance in support of its conclusion deducible from the said evidence. In criminal trials, there is no scope for applying the principle of moral conviction or grave suspicion. In criminal cases when the other evidence adduced against an accused person is wholly unsatisfactory and the prosecution seeks to rely on the confession of a co-accused person, the presumption of innocence which is the basis of criminal jurisprudence assists the accused person and compels the Court to render the verdict that the charge is not proved against him, and so, he is entitled to the benefit of doubt: I.L.R. 43 Pat. 554: 1964 6 S.C.R. 623: 1964 M.L.J. (Cr.) 535: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1184; (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 566 (Mad.).

The confession under S. 30 cannot take the place of evidence against the co-accused or supplement evidence otherwise insufficient. The section only means where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction then the kind of confession described in S. 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence. It is only if there is substantive evidence against the accused and there is some lingering doubt that the confession of a co-accused may be taken into account to set the doubt at rest: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 92 (Ker.).

The confession of a co-accused is no evidence at all within the meaning of the Evidence Act and no conviction can be based thereon. But if there is other evidence on which a conviction can be based such confession may be referred to as lending assurance to that confession and for fortifying it: 25 Cut.L.T. 531: I.L.R. (1959) Cut. 581.

A confession intended to be used against a co-accused stands on a lower level than accomplice evidence because the latter is at least tested by cross-examination whilst the former is not. The confessions of co-accused are not evidence but if there is other evidence on which a conviction can be based, they can be referred to as lending some assurance to the verdict: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 641: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 832.

The confession of an accused should not carry the same weight as the evidence of the same person if he was examined as a witness: 21 I.C. 166: 14 Cr.L.J. 566.

The Court must, after the most careful consideration, decide whether the degree of proof prescribed by S. 30 has been reached or not: 21 I.C. 166: 14 Cr.L.J. 566.

A confession made by a co-accused must be regarded with suspicion: 65 I.C. 561: A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 146. See also 72 I.C. 497: 24 Cr.L.J. 385; 1939 Mar. L.R. 19 (Cr.).

A confession of a co-accused is obviously evidence of a very weak type. It does not indeed come within the definition of "evidence" contained in S. 3 of the Evidence Act. It can be used only in support of other evidence and cannot be made the foundation of a conviction: A.I.R. 1949 P.C. 257: (1948-49) 53 Cal.W.N. 609: (1949) 2 M.L.J. 194 (P.C.), followed in 1956 An.W.R. 926.

The confessions of a co-accused implicating his co-accused in the crime are of less evidentiary value than the testimony of an accomplice because the man in the dock cannot be cross-examined. They can only be taken into consideration under S. 30 alongwith such other evidence as there may be. While such a confession may help the Court to decide whether the other evidence is or is not credible, it cannot supply the place of positive evidence regarding the commission of the crime: (1939) 52 Mad.L.W. 258: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 267. See also 1940 Rang.L.R. 104: A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 402.

When the substantive evidence is not sufficient to establish a prima facie case against the accused it is not permissible to use the confession of a co-accused under S. 30 as if it were itself substantive evidence, which it is not. It may only be taken to lend assurance to any relevant evidence bearing on the accused's complicity in the crime. It can in no case be used to fill up the gaps in the prosecution evidence: 188 I.C. 146: 41 Cr.L.J. 553: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 230; A.I.R. 1929 All. 928.

The confession made by a person can be taken into consideration as against persons who are being tried alongwith him; such a statement however is always regarded as tainted and cannot be used to corroborate the testimony of the accomplice witnesses: I.L.R. 3 Lah. 144: A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 1. See also 13 All.L.J. 337: I.L.R. 37 All. 247; I.L.R. 9 Luck. 22: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 355; I.L.R. 11 Rang. 4: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 57; I.L.R. (1937) Mad. 695: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 616: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 60 (F.B.); I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 27: A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 50; (1939) 52 Mad.L.W. 898: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 267; 185 I.C. 205: A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 202; 1939 Nag.L.J. 442: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 295.

A conviction based solely on the evidence of a co-prisoner is bad in law. No doubt the confession is admissible under S. 30 of the Evidence Act, but the evidence is of a very weak type. Where the confession does not appear to have been voluntarily made, it cannot be the basis for convicting the co-accused: 1956 An.W.R. 926: 1957 Cr.L.J. 623: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 81.

The confessions of the co-accused cannot be used as evidence at all but they can be used only for the limited purpose of "lending assurance" if there is other evidence which, if believed, would support the conviction of an accused: I.L.R. (1956) Cut. 195: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1208: 22 Cut.L.T. 317: A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 177.

Confession of co-accused—Such confession can be only taken into consideration to lend support to any other evidence on which the guilt of accused can be inferred—Such confession however cannot be treated as evidence against another accused—Two persons found in a rickshaw with stolen property—One of the accused making confession implicating the other—Implicated co-accused convicted under S. 411, Penal Code, after drawing an inference on the strength of the confession that he was in joint possession of the property with knowledge that it was stolen—Presence of such co-accused with the other in the rickshaw with some stolen goods is no doubt highly suspicious against him but this circumstance by itself is not incompatible with his innocence—As the confession cannot by itself be treated as evidence against him, he must be given benefit of doubt—His conviction, therefore, is not correct—1967 Cr.L.J. 1179: A.I.R. 1967 Pat. 283.

Confession of co-accused, can only be used to strengthen evidence against accused —It does not supplement evidence against accused, which is otherwise insufficient—Other evidence should not only be worthy of reliance but must also be, by itself and unaided by confession, sufficient for finding of guilt of accused: 1970 Cr.L.J. 603 (All.).

Confession of co-accused—It is not substantive evidence—Court must begin with other evidence and then turn to the confession to confirm its view formed on the prosecution evidence—Retracted confession against co-accused has no value—While recording confession Magistrate must not subject the accused to cross-examination—He should be allowed to narrate his own story without interference: 1970 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 37.

The confession of a co-accused can be used only to lend assurance to the other evidence. Any little doubt that might be in the mind of the Judge as regards the acceptability of the evidence may be dispelled by the confession. It is an element as it were that tilts the balance against the accused. A Court may be inclined to believe a particular witness but may not be prepared to act upon it or accept it. The confession fortifies him in accepting the evidence. In whatever way it is put, a co-accused's confession can be used not as any substantive evidence but only as an aid to make up the Judge's mind after the other evidence is scrutinised by him. [1952 S.C.J. 201, Foll.]: 1955 An.W.R. 239: 1955 An.L.T. (Cr.) 99; 1955 An.W.R. 854; (1957) 2 An.W.R. 156: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 421: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 758.

S. 30 is a very exceptional indeed an extraordinary provision by which something which is not evidence may be used against an accused person at his trial. Such a provision must be used with the greatest caution and with care to make sure that it is not stretched one line beyond its necessary intention. Where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction, then the kind of confession described in S. 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence: A.I.R. 1955 Mys. 27: 1955 Cr.L.J. 372.

A confessional statement is good evidence as against the accused making it but as against other accused that statement cannot be considered as substantive evidence. In their case the law requires the Court first to consider the evidence in the case and it is only to bring assurance as regards the guilt of the accused that the Court may look to the confessional statement of the accused making it in the case of the non-confessing accused: (1957) 59 Bom.L.R. 244: A.I.R. 1957 Bom. 226.

A confession of a co-accused cannot be used to corroborate other evidence. It might assist the Court in coming to the conclusion that the other evidence is true and therefore that an accused is guilty. But the other evidence cannot be used to corroborate the confession of the accused. In short, the conviction must be based on the other evidence: 1952 Cr.L.J. 1343: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 618. See also A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 787: 52 Cr.L.J. 514; A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 12.

A co-accused's confession can only lend assurance to other evidence against a co-accused or be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing other evidence. It is wrong to use it to corroborate other evidence on record to seek corroboration for the co-accused's confession in the other evidence. A Court cannot make use of the co-accused's unsworn statement given behind the back of the accused and which has not been tested by cross-examination, to fill up the gap in the prosecution evidence: I.L.R. (1952) Trav.-Co. 937: A.I.R. 1953 Trav.-Co. 466.

The confession of co-accused do not furnish corroborative evidence. They are to be taken into account only after the Court is satisfied that other evidence is sufficient and credible to bring the charge home to the accused: 1954 Cr.L.J. 801: A.I.R. 1954 Kutch 22.

The confession of an accused is undoubtedly a very strong piece of evidence against the accused himself, provided it is voluntary and the Court is satisfied that it is true. But it is a weak piece of evidence as against the co-accused. There must be sufficient evidence independently of the confession which would warrant a conviction of the accused. It is only when there is such evidence that the Court may proceed further and look at the confession of the co-accused and consider it as additional evidence that would further weigh the balance against the accused: I.L.R. (1953) Bom. 670: A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 297. See however the undermentioned decision. The confession of a co-accused cannot be used as the basis for conviction on account of the position that it is not strictly evidence and further on account of the reason that the confession was not tested by cross-examination and the co-accused persons were not examined as witnesses. Other independent evidence must be weighed first. If it is rejected the confession of a co-accused is of no avail at all. If the Court accepts it but nevertheless it is still hovering and is in search of its view being strengthened and assured it is to take into consideration the confession of a co-accused only for the purpose of lending assurance to its view regarding the other independent evidence on record implicating the accused with the guilt. If in spite of this confession there is other sufficient evidence on which the conviction can safely be based and the Judge is in a position to make up his conclusion then it is not necessary to refer to the confession of the co-accused: A.I.R. 1957 Ori. 172: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 200.

Where there is no independent evidence of the offence against the accused, the confession of his co-accused cannot be considered at all. It can only serve as corroborative material of other evidence if it exists; but standing alone it must be rejected altogether: A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 74: 52 Cr.L.J. 1473.

Where an accused person after he is arrested makes a confession implicating the other accused and the confession is sought to be used against them, the prosecution must disclose the name of the officer who made the arrest and produce him, or any other person, who could speak to the circumstances under which the confession was made so as to enable the defence to ascertain by cross-examination what inducements were offered to the accused to make it: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 501: 25 M.L.J. 518: 40 I.A. 193 (P.C.).

Although a conviction founded upon the evidence of an accomplice supported only by the confession of a co-accused is justified in law under S. 133 and although the coincidence of a number of confessions of co-accused all implicating a particular accused, given independently, and without an opportunity of previous concert, might be entitled to great weight, held, the courts should be slow to depart from the rule of prudence, based on long experience, which requires some independent evidence implicating the particular accused: A.I.R. 1949 P.C. 257: (1948-49) 53 Cal.W.N. 609: (1949) 2 M.L.J. 194 (P.C.).

A confession of an accused person implicating a co-accused under S. 30 cannot be considered as the same thing as "testimony of an accomplice" under S. 133. S. 133 contemplates that the accomplice shall be examined as a witness. The provision that a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, has no application to the case of an uncorroborated confession taken into consideration as against a co-accused jointly tried with the confessing accused under S. 30. Therefore, an accused person cannot be convicted solely on such a confession made by a co-accused: A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 213: 109 I.C. 801. See also A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 338; (1936) 38 Bom.L.R. 1122: A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 31; I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 506: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 295.

The statement made by one accomplice is not strengthened by concurrent statements of any number of accomplices: 1977 M.P.L.J. 523.

Where the complainant, a Minister, who was offered a large bribe for a favour, gives impression of being interested and upon his complaint the conversation between the Minister and the accused is tape recorded, held, this not being a case wherein the demand emanated from the public servant, the Minister was not in the position of an accomplice; the accused could be convicted on the Minister's uncorroborated statement; on facts, the Minister's statement was amply corroborated: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2863 (Bom.).

Where the principal accused had judicially confessed that he had committed the murder on instigation by the co-accused but thereafter when he went to the co-accused for the promised help, the co-accused declined to do so, held, the case against the co-accused was also made out. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1184, Rel. on]: 1978 Cr.L.J. 276 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Scope—Person arrested by Police making confession before Magistrate—Such person not made co-accused—As such, his confession is not admissible in evidence against the other accused: 1968 Cr.L.J. 514: A.I.R. 1968 Manipur 34.

Where the accused was neither named in the F.I.R. nor named by any witness nor any property was recovered from his possession, held, he could not be proceeded against merely on the basis of statement of co-accused made to Police; that being a confession made to Police will not be admissible under Ss. 25 and 26: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1499 (Madh. Pra.).

Where a person was put up for trial alongwith accused to begin with but he turned approver and was granted pardon, under these circumstances, in the absence of corroboration it is unsafe to act upon his statement alone: 1956 Cr.L.J. 233: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 86.

Where the evidence of the approver is eliminated as against one of the accused whose name has been falsely substituted by the approver, it should not be accepted even against the other accused though to some extent it is corroborated by independent testimony: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 1010: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 871. See also 19 Pat.L.T. 801: I.L.R. 18 Pat. 82: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 35.

Confessional statement of accused cannot be used in corroboration of the evidence of the approver inasmuch as tainted evidence is not made better by being corroborated by other tainted evidence: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 97. See also 144 I.C. 829: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 134. But see I.L.R. 11 Rang. 4: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 57.

Confession of co-accused as against another accused stands on a lower footing than the evidence of an accomplice: 146 I.C. 1061: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 956; and it is still worse where not only did the confessing accused retract their confession but pardons are offered to two of them with a view to their giving evidence as accomplice, they refused to accept such pardon: 146 I.C. 303 (2): A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 320.

It is not quite clear whether "tainted evidence" means that the person giving the evidence is tainted morally; or that he is a person on whose word reliance cannot be placed. As regards an approver, there is the fear that he is giving evidence in order to save his skin and therefore, that he is liable to make statements which are not true if he thinks they will be for his benefit. But as regards the confession of a co-accused one cannot call this, tainted evidence, for the same reason. A person making a confession does so deliberately and after having been warned solemnly by the Magistrate of the consequences of making a confession and knowledge that he may be convicted thereon, if he still persists in his purpose and makes a confession, the statements that he makes cannot be considered to be tainted statements unless it be that they are tainted because he is an immoral person who has committed a criminal offence. But all immoral persons are not necessarily and always liars. But it is not to be supposed that because the confession is admissible, it must be believed. In such a case it has to be considered whether there are any circumstances which suggest that it is false or that some of the statements made therein are also false. The Court may take the confession of a co-accused person into consideration against the other co-accused, that is to say, the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused: 1938 Rang.L.R. 30: A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 92. See also A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 402.

Where apart from the approver, two accused in their confession had implicated other accused in the commission of the offence, held, the confessions of the two accused can be used to lend corroboration to the approver's testimony about the involvement of other accused: 1988 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 50 (Cal.) (D.B.).

7. Confession—Necessity for corroboration.—A conviction based entirely on statements contained in confessions of co-accused persons is not sustainable: 11 I.C. 1001: 12 Cr.L.J. 465; 1956 An.W.R. 926. See also 17 Cr.L.J. 156: 33 I.C. 636; 73 I.C. 262: A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 248; A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 213.

A conviction founded solely on the confession of co-accused cannot be sustained. It must be corroborated in material particulars by independent evidence: 21 I.C. 673: I.L.R. 38 Bom. 156; 170 I.C. 201: A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 433 (S.B.).

The Indian Statute differs from the English Law and the effect of the former should not be whittled down. The question of what corroborative evidence is sufficient must depend on the circumstances of each particular case: 119 I.C. 474: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 498. See also A.I.R. 1949 Assam 60.

Corroboration of the confessing accused's statement on particulars affecting a co-accused is necessary before acting upon his testimony against the co-accused—Where there is no corroboration and the only evidence is that of the confession of the co-accused in which he persists to the last, the accused cannot be convicted: A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 28; I.L.R. (1974) 2 Del. 706. See also (1984) 26 Del.L.T. 109.

The confession of the co-accused is not evidence against any person other than himself. It may be used as evidence against a co-accused provided it is corroborated in material particulars: 1956 Cr.L.J. 392: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 186.

Where the corroboration consisted of statements of witnesses which though giving rise to suspicion were consistent with the innocence of the accused, held, that the corroboration fell far short of what is required to support a conviction: I.L.R. 42 Cal. 789: (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 584. As to what amounts to corroboration, see 95 I.C. 938: A.I.R. 1926 All. 603.

Where the confessional statements before the Customs Officers were fully corroborated by the witnesses, held, same could certainly be relied on: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1224: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 259: 1980 Cr.L.J. 923.

Confessions of accused tried jointly implicating others have to be taken account against the other accused as well. But by themselves they cannot be made use of to convict other accused. When alongwith such confessions there is, however, a strong evidence, the confessions go further in corroboration of such evidence.

Held, that there was sufficient corroboration: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 562 (Manipur).

The confession spoken of by S. 30 has the limited value of being an addition to pre-existing evidence indicating the guilt of the person being tried alongwith the maker of the confession. By itself the confession vis-a-vis the person not making it is not of much assistance. Where two accused persons alleged that third accused was assisted in smuggling operation in a foreign country by the fourth accused and they also identified a photograph of fourth accused as the person who had assisted third accused in loading of smuggled goods but there was no independent corroboration to their such statements, held, fourth accused could not be convicted: 1992 Cr.L.J. 4014: 1993 Mah.L.J. 1020.

8. Sessions trial and Magisterial trial.—In a warrant case, although the statement of a co-accused amounts to an unqualified confession, he need not be forthwith convicted and removed from the dock. The co-accused is still to be deemed to be jointly tried with the others and this confession can be used as against the others. A summons case is to be distinguished from a warrant case for the purpose: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 880. See also A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17: I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 315 (F.B.).

In considering the question whether the confession of the co-accused who pleaded guilty can be used against the other co-accused under S. 30, a distinction must be made between summons and warrant cases on the one hand and sessions cases on the other. In sessions cases if the accused pleads guilty, the Court cannot try him but has forthwith to convict him. His conviction cannot be deferred so as to enable the Court to use his confession against his co-accused. But in warrant cases, it is discretionary with the Magistrate to defer conviction of the accused who pleads guilty and use his confession against the other co-accused under S. 30: I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 315: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.). It is the duty of the Judge to warn the jury that it would be dangerous in the extreme to act on a confession put into the mouth of the accused by a witness who has a strong motive for implicating some one else in the offence or crime. The jury must further be warned that confessions are not always true and that they must be checked more particularly in a murder case, in the light of the whole evidence on the record in order to see if they carry conviction: 58 Mad.L.W. 523: 1945 All.L.J. 511: A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 181 (P.C.).

9. Confession—Acceptance in part.—It cannot be said that a confession must be accepted as a whole. A confession must be accepted in its entirety so far as it affects the person making it. That is to say, anything which he puts forward in his confession by way of mitigation must be accepted, however, improbable it may appear: I.L.R. (1946) All. 111: A.I.R. 1946 All. 15.

Where the accused makes a confessional statement part of which is inculpatory and part exculpatory, and there is evidence to show that the exculpatory portion is false, the Court can ignore that portion of the confession and use the rest of it against him: (1945) 47 Punj.L.R. 11: A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 91.

Where both the accused in a case have made confessions severally, agreeing in material particulars and the differences easily explained, their credibility is not affected nor their admissibility. Where part of the confession is found to be false and the rest true and corroborated by other evidence, the confession can be admitted as to the part found to be true and the other part rejected: A.I.R. 1952 Him. Pra. 81: 1952 Cr.L.J. 1720.

A confession can be accepted by Court in part, after rejecting portions which are false: 6 O.W.N. 1017: A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 113: I.L.R. 5 Luck. 255. See also 1930 Mad.W.N. 785.

But see A.I.R. 1930 All. 192: 121 I.C. 550 [In cases where the sole evidence against the accused is that of a retracted confession, such confession, if it is relied on, must be relied on as a whole and not only in part].

Where a confession or an admission is separable there can be no objection to taking inculpatory part into consideration which appears to be true and reject the exculpatory part which is false: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1096.

Criminal trial—Voluntary confession by accused and circumstantial evidence proving guilt of accused—Court can reject the part of confession proved to be false by prosecution evidence and accept rest of confession: 31 Cut.L.T. 401: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 385: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 170.

10. Retracted confession.—I.L.R. 43 Bom. 739: 51 I.C. 657. See also A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 252; A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 108: I.L.R. 16 Pat. 612: 173 I.C. 507: 17 Mys.L.J. 238, retracted confession cannot be used against the maker and the co-accused: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 765.

The provisions of the Evidence Act do not prevent the Court from taking into consideration a retracted confession against the confessing accused and his co-accused. The amount of credibility to be attached to a retracted confession, however, would depend upon the circumstances of each particular case. As a matter of prudence and practice a Court would not ordinarily act upon it to convict a co-accused without the strongest and fullest corroboration on material particulars. The corroboration in the full sense implies corroboration not only to the factum of the crime but also as to the connection of the co-accused with that crime: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 1; 1978 Ker.L.T. 963 (D.B.).

The rule of prudence does not require that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession with regard to the participation of the accused persons in the crime must be separately and independently corroborated. It is well-settled by authorities that a general corroboration of retracted confession so as to lend assurance to the Court of the truth of the facts stated therein is sufficient: (1964) 6 Ori.J.D. 184: 30 Cut.L.T. 517: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 315: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 31.

A retracted confession receiving some general corroboration tallying with the confession may justify conviction: A.I.R. 1988 Ker. 1: 1988 Cr.L.J. 107: (1987) 1 Ker.L.T. 928 (F.B.); 1982 Cr.L.J. 2040: 22 Del.L.T. 139 (Retracted confession can be used to indicate prima facie involvement of other accused); 1975 Cr.L.J. 354 (Gau.) (D.B.) (Retracted confession may be taken into consideration against co-accused also).

An accused cannot be convicted on the basis of a confession of a co-accused alone, which does not implicate the author of it in the offence and which has also been retracted by the maker. A confession may subject to certain limitations be proved against the maker of it but it is not 'evidence' against the co-accused in the strict sense within the contemplation of S. 3, Evidence Act. It can only be taken into consideration against the co-accused under S. 30 which requires that the confession must implicate the maker substantially to the same extent as the other accused person against whom it is sought to be taken into consideration. S. 30 appears to be based on the view that an admission by an accused person of his or her guilt provides some kind of sanction in support of the truth of the confession against the person making it as well as against others. Since a confession is neither required to be given on oath nor is it required to be made in the presence of the other accused persons whom it also implicates and also it cannot be tested by cross-examination, it is not wrong to describe it as an extremely weak type of evidence which should not be permitted to form the foundation of a conviction but only be used in support of other evidence. On this view, the confession of a co-accused would not be in itself substantive evidence and can only be taken into consideration as provided by S. 30. The position of a retracted confession of an accused would a fortiori be still worse. In any case, even when the Court takes such a confession into consideration against a co-accused it requires, as a matter of practice and prudence, strongest and fullest corroboration on material particulars as to the connection of the co-accused with the crime: 1963 Cur. L.J. 542: (1964) 66 Punj.L.R. 530: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 335: A.I.R. 1964 Punj. 397.

Ss. 30 and 133—Retracted confession of co-accused corroborated in material particulars can be taken into consideration against non-confessing accused: I.L.R. (1962) Cut. 582: 28 Cut.L.T. 398: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 377 (Ori.).

A retracted confession must be looked upon with greater concern unless the reasons given for having made it in the first instance (not for retraction as erroneously stated in some cases) are on the face of them false. Once the confession is proved satisfactorily any admission made therein must be satisfactorily withdrawn or the making of it explained as having proceeded from fear, duress, promise or the like from some one in authority. A retracted confession is a weak link against the maker and more so against a co-accused: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 641: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 832.

Retracted confession by one of co-accused—Use of, against other co-accused—It has very weak evidentiary value—Great extent of corroboration is necessary for conviction. Case-law discussed: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 467: 1970 Cr.L.J. 403.

Confession is not evidence as defined by S. 3—It may be regarded as evidence in generic sense—The value of a retracted confession as against a co-accused is practically nil and it cannot form the basis of conviction without substantial and independent corroboration: 1970 M.P.L.J. 16.

The very existence of S. 30 postulates that a confession of a co-accused may be used in cases where the evidence afforded lacks the requisite volume and certainty to insure conviction. The retraction of a confession may throw doubt either on the truth of it or on the fact that it was voluntarily made, but it certainly does not follow because a confession is retracted that it was either untrue or involuntary and the truth or voluntariness of a confession operates equally—where a confession is self-inculpatory—in respect of the person who made it and the person implicated therein. The motive for making a self-inculpatory confession is the very simple one of an expectation of leniency in the matter of sentence and where a number of people are jointly tried and some have made confessions to a Magistrate before the trial and some have not, it is again not unnatural that persons who have made confessions should retract them under pressure and persuasion by their fellows who have not confessed. Retracted confessions must no doubt be used with caution but when it is possible to come to the conclusion that the confessions cannot be otherwise than true, they may be taken into consideration in connection with the evidence appearing in the case, whether they are retracted or not: I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 169: A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 115. See also I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 308: (1943) 2 M.L.J. 634 (F.B.).

A retracted confession by an accused may form the basis of a conviction of that accused if it receives some general corroboration from other independent sources. It cannot, however, be the basis for convicting co-accused though it may be taken into consideration against co-accused also. It is entirely wrong to think that a confession can lead nowhere: A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 866: 1985 Guj.L.H. 559: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1173: (1985) 2 S.C.C. 341; 1988 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 434; 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 4 (Cal.) (D.B.).

The confession referred to in S. 30 cannot be restricted to an unretracted confession and there is nothing to prevent a Court from convicting after considering the confession but the rules of practice of the High Courts in India are to be observed while exercising the discretion: (1913) 15 Bom.L.R. 975: I.L.R. 38 Bom. 156.

Though a retracted confession, if believed to be true and voluntarily made, may form the basis of a conviction, the rule of practice and prudence require that it should be corroborated by independent evidence: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 216: 1957 Cr.L.J. 481.

Where there is no real corroboration of the retracted confession, the accused are entitled to the benefit of the doubt and must be acquitted: 16 Cr.L.J. 469: 29 I.C. 101. See also 41 I.C. 155; 26 P.R. 1916 (Cr.): 34 I.C. 642; 5 P.L.R. 1915; 16 Cr.L.J. 157: 27 I.C. 221; 5 P.R. 1911 (Cr.): 10 I.C. 857; A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 252.

An accused can be convicted solely upon his own confession, even if retracted, if the Court finds it to be true and voluntary but not merely on the confession of his co-accused; that would require the strongest and fullest corroboration. [1952 Cr.L.J. 839 (S.C.), Disting.]: 1982 Cr.L.J. 2346 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Extra-judicial confession by boys cajoled or frightened but retracted before the committing Magistrate does not prove a case against persons jointly accused with the boys: 14 P.R. 1911 (Cr.): 12 I.C. 973.

As to value to be attached to a retracted confession of a co-accused, see 15 Pat.L.T. 711: A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 586; 148 I.C. 8: A.I.R. 1934 Pesh. 11; 148 I.C. 1064: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 30; A.I.R. 1955 Assam 51: 56 Cr.L.J. 437.

31. Admissions not conclusive proof, but may estop.—Admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted but they may operate as estoppels under the provisions hereinafter contained.

A retracted confession requires strong corroboration in all material particulars: 72 I.C. 497: 14 Mad.L.W. 474; A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 321: (1937) 1 M.L.J. 750; A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 755; A.I.R. 1955 Him. Pra. 15: 1955 Cr.L.J. 679.

Confession—Retracted—Corroboration by another retracted confession. See 55 Cr.L.J. 1329: A.I.R. 1954 Manipur 6.

The weight to be given to a retracted confession depends upon the circumstances under which it is made and on the intrinsic value of the confession: 18 Cr.L.J. 774: 41 I.C. 150; 19 I.C. 179: 14 Cr.L.J. 179.

Retracted confession—Voluntary confessions of accused recorded complying with provisions of S. 164, Cr.P.Code—Confessions detracted but retraction unbelievable—Such confessions materially corroborating one another and also evidence of approver—Such confessions can be relied upon not only to prove their own guilt, but also the guilt of their co-accused: 1968 Cr.L.J. 514: A.I.R. 1968 Manipur 34.

Where a confession is made 14 days after arrest by the Police but is retracted at the earliest opportunity before the trial Magistrate, its evidentiary value is negligible as against the co-accused: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 718. The confession of one was admissible against the other because it was not self-exculpatory and the fact that the confession was subsequently retracted did not render it inadmissible but it merely diminished the weight to be attached to it: (1927-28) 32 Cal.W.N. 1004: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 14.

A retracted confession of a co-accused cannot alone be sufficient evidence to justify a conviction, but if that confession is unrebutted it is admissible as a very strong piece of evidence: 114 I.C. 711; A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 167. See also A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 667; A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 412; A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 353.

A retracted confession does not come within the definition of evidence contained in S. 3. But, where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed to support his conviction, then the kind of confession described in S. 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence: A.I.R. 1955 Punj. 110: 1955 Cr.L.J. 737.

Retracted confession of co-accused—Though it can be taken into consideration against the other accused it can be used only in support of other evidence—It cannot be made the foundation of a conviction: 1970 Cr.L.J. 9: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 45.

The retracted confession of an accused can have very little weight as evidence against a co-accused; being untested by the cross-examination, it necessarily has even less value than the evidence of another accomplice which is not corroboration of the evidence of an approver: 230 I.C. 431: 48 Cr.L.J. 651.

It has been the well settled practice of the Courts in India not to convict on the evidence of an approver, unless it has been corroborated in material particulars. Similarly, it would be unsafe to take into consideration the retracted confessions of a co-accused against the other accused unless it is corroborated by reliable evidence in material particulars. An approver's evidence has always been regarded as tainted evidence and one piece of tainted evidence should not be taken as corroborated another piece of tainted evidence: I.L.R. 25 Pat. 347: A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 90: 27 Pat.L.T. 298.

Where the retracted confession is to be considered against the accused who makes it, it is not necessarily corroboration in the full sense that is required. It may be corroboration by circumstances which satisfy the Court that when the accused confessed, though the confession was retracted, the confession is true and voluntary and may be made the basis of conviction of the accused who makes it: I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 419: A.I.R. 1946 Sind 43.

What S. 31 means is that an admission, unless it amounts to an estoppel is not conclusive as against the maker, as it is open to him to prove that it was made under a mistake of law or fact or that it was made under threat or inducement: 1939 Rang.L.R. 97: A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 219. Admissions are not conclusive proof and though they may operate as estoppel, it is open to a party to correct an admission made by him if it is shown to have been made under a bona fide mistake and has not caused any prejudice to the other side: 1937 A.M.L.J. 86. See also 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 535: 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 430.

Admissions are relevant against the maker thereof and as laid down in S. 31, they are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted, but they may operate as estoppel: (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 359 (P.&H.) (D.B.); (1973) 2 S.C.J. 518; 1979 All.L.J. (N.O.C.) 54. See also 1982 Lab.I.C. 1902 (All.) (D.B.).

S. 31 lays down that an admission, unless it operates as an estoppel, is not conclusive proof but only raises a presumption of its truth unless the contrary is shown; in every estoppel there is representation which tantamounts to the admission of the existence of a fact; if that admission is acted upon by the person to whom it is made, the maker of the admission cannot subsequently be permitted to show that it was a false admission. Thus, a person taking a tenancy as a sole proprietor of a firm, cannot later on raise an inconsistent contention: A.I.R. 1983 Del. 555: (1983) 1 Ren.C.R. 33: (1983) 1 Ren.L.R. 27.

Where a suit was instituted by a partner of a registered firm claiming to be a tenant as proprietor of the firm but later on he sought an amendment in the plaint so as to substitute the firm as the plaintiff-tenant, which application was dismissed, the admission fell under S. 11(2) and was relevant for making probable or improbable the existence or non-existence of the fact in the issue, that is the plaintiff's tenancy; whether the admission amounts to an estoppel or not, but it certainly is evidence but not 'conclusive proof'. [A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 593, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Del. 221.

Admissions under S. 31 may become foundations of rights coupled with other facts, by themselves admissions are nothing more than items of evidence which are not in any sense final. They have no quality of conclusiveness. The essence of a waiver is estoppel and where there is no estoppel, there is no waiver. The fact that the lessee of property mortgaged who has been given a right to redeem the property by lessor, fails to redeem the property does not estop him from claiming to pre-empt the same, from the person to whom the property is subsequently sold by the lessor, and who has redeemed the property: (1953) 55 Punj.L.R. 377: A.I.R. 1953 Punj. 171.

Before the right of a party can be considered to have been defeated on the basis of an alleged admission, the implication of the statement made by him must be clear and conclusive; there should be no doubt or ambiguity about the alleged admission: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1542.

In order to bind a party by his admission the admission must be clear, precise and unambiguous. An admission is only a piece of evidence and the weight to be attached to it depends upon the circumstances under which it has been made. Thus, before the right of a party can be considered to have been defeated on the basis of an alleged admission made by him in a prior litigation, the implication of the statement must be clear and conclusive. There should be no doubt or ambiguity about the alleged admission: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 208: 1972 Raj.L.W. 522: 1972 W.L.N. 784.

Admission—What is—Kinds of admission—Judicial and extra-judicial admission—Distinction: (S.) A.I.R. 1957 All. 1.

Ignoring the provisions of S. 31 of the Evidence Act the Court cannot assume that whatever is written down in the form of admissions is conclusive proof of the words and happenings mentioned therein: (1969) 71 Bom.L.R. 569: I.L.R. (1969) Bom. 1024: A.I.R. 1970 Bom. 312.

A compromise is tantamount to an admission, and although an admission is not conclusive it can still operate as an estoppel under S. 31: 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 308: 1942 All.W.R. (Rev.) 188.

Where an admission was made in a compromise effected between parties to the suit but not incorporated in any decree as the suit itself was dismissed in default, held, being a gratuitous admission, it did not amount to an estoppel; it could be withdrawn or shown to be untrue and erroneous as and when it was sought to be relied upon against its maker; it can, however, be considered as a piece of evidence alongwith other evidence but not as a binding admission; of course, the position would have been different if an executable decree based on it had been passed: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 172.

A compromise entered into between parties in a criminal case for offences under S. 277 and the later part of S. 506 of the Indian Penal Code is illegal and void ab initio as the offences are not compoundable; they are not admissible even as admissions. On facts, held, there was no admission in the compromise even otherwise: A.I.R. 1979 All. 71.

The word 'statement' has been used in its primary meaning, namely, something that is stated. Under S. 17 read with S. 21 statements made by persons may be used as admissions against them even though they may not have been communicated to any other person: A.I.R. 1973 Mys. 280 (D.B.).

Use of statement recorded under S. 131 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 as an admission. See (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 61.

2. Admission—Evidentiary value of.— The provision that 'admission is not conclusive proof' is to be considered in regard to two features of evidence; (i) the weight to be attached to an admission, would depend upon whether the admission is clear, unambiguous and relevant evidence; and (ii) even a proved admission sought to be used against its maker who as a witness is under cross-examination, he should be given an opportunity, if the admission is to be used against him to offer his explanation and to clear up the point of ambiguity or dispute which is a general salutary and intelligible rule. A mere proof of admission, if its maker has concluded his evidence, will be of no avail; it cannot be utilised against him: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1712: (1977) 2 S.C.C. 49: (1977) 2 S.C.R. 671.

A party's admission as defined in Ss. 17 to 20 fulfilling the requirements of S. 21, is substantive evidence proprio vigore. An admission, if clearly and unequivocally made, is the best evidence against the party making it and though not conclusive, shifts the onus on to the maker on the principle that "what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so and until the presumption was rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established": A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1724: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 540: (1977) 3 S.C.R. 538.

The statements in the nature of admissions in a petition under S. 488, Cr.P.Code, when duly proved, may be admissible in evidence but such admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 325.

An admission is the best evidence of a point in issue, and though not conclusive, is decisive of the matter unless successfully withdrawn or proved erroneous: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 1039; A.I.R. 1974 All. 46: 1973 All.L.J. 473 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 100: (1960) 1 S.C.R. 773. See also (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 412.

Though the admission is a very material piece of evidence against a party making the same, yet the maker of it can always prove it to be wrong and even withdraw the same: (1984) 86 Punj.L.R. 96; (1994 -2) 107 Punj.L.R. 277.

Admission—Person making it can lead evidence to prove it to be erroneous: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1036: A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 110.

Though admissions are not conclusive evidence of the matter admitted, where there is no rebutting evidence at all, the admissions are enough to establish the facts contained in them: 1941 O.A. (Supp.). 420: 1941 All.L.J. (Supp.) 89.

Admission—Evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1968 Ori. 99.

An admission made by a party is a very strong proof against him and the fact admitted must be taken to be true unless the person making the admission explains that it was made under circumstances which do not make the admission binding on him. Inference as to partition drawn from admission of parties: 134 I.C. 888: 53 Cal.L.J. 222. See also 8 O.W.N. 306: A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 246; 1939 R.D. 299.

An admission need not be treated as conclusively binding on the person right to be bound by it. For, it is open to him to show that it has been made by mistake or it is untrue or that it was made fraudulently. Unless the party bound by the admission is precluded by the operation of the doctrine of estoppel from showing that the admission is not binding, an admission is not conclusive proof of the matters admitted: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 594.

Admission made under misapprehension—Binding, nature of: A.I.R. 1967 Pat. 287.

An admission is not conclusive evidence against any party. If from the facts it could be shown that the admission was wrong it would fail to have any effect. It is only prima facie evidence against the party making the admission and shifts the burden of proof: A.I.R. 1947 All. 281; I.L.R. (1956) Hyd. 69: A.I.R. 1956 Hyd. 43; (1957-58) 62 Cal.W.N. 589.

An admission does not conclude the party making it. He is entitled to explain it unless the person to whom it is made has acted on its faith which would preclude the author from going back on it and speaking the truth on the principle of estoppel: A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 199.

The proposition of law that admissions can be explained by the party concerned, held, cannot be applied where it was not contended that the statement made by the plaintiff were either inadvertently made or that there was a wrong recording by the trial Court: (1994) 1 M.L.J. 205 (D.B.).

A party can show that either the admission by him was made under a mistake or under different circumstances. And unless there has been a prejudice to the opposite party on account of the admission having been acted upon or on account of any representation made by the admitting party, it would not bind the party unless it amounted to an estoppel. Further, where each party makes admissions detrimental to itself, the mutual admissions cancel each other, with the result that the question for consideration may have to be decided on the material on record irrespective of such alleged admissions: 1961 M.P.L.J. 1251: 1961 Jab.L.J. 1489: A.I.R. 1962 Madh. Pra. 141.

Admissions are substantive evidence by themselves, though they are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted. The admissions duly proved are admissible evidence irrespective of whether the party making them appeared in the witness box or not and whether such party when appearing as witness was confronted with those statements in case it has made a statement contrary to its previous admissions: A.I.R. 1971 Pat. 215 (D.B.).

Ss. 31, 21—Admissions though not conclusive proof of matters admitted, are relevant under S. 21: I.L.R. (1964) 1 Mad. 1012: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 266.

An admission is the best evidence that an opposite party can rely upon, and though not conclusive, is decisive of the matter, unless successfully withdrawn or proved erroneous. The value of an admission contained in a registered deed of adoption formally executed by a party with an endorsement showing that the executant was fully aware of the contents of the deed executed with due deliberation and full understanding, is considerable unless it is explained satisfactorily. The admission of an adoption in a deed amounts to an admission both of the fact and of the validity of the adoption which shifts the burden of proving the contrary to the party which made that admission: 1964 All.L.J. 749: A.I.R. 1965 All. 258.

An admission can be explained by direct or circumstantial evidence but it is not necessary that the explanation must come in the pleading or in the evidence of the person making it: A.I.R. 1971 Pat. 363 (D.B.).

It is well-settled law that an admission is a substantive evidence of the fact admitted. In order to prove it the attention of the person admitting it need not be drawn to it before it becomes substantive evidence. The weight to be attached to an admission made by a party is a matter different from its use as admissible evidence. [A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 405, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809(D.B.).

An admission, it is well settled, is the best evidence that an opposite party can rely upon; though not conclusive, it is nevertheless decisive on the point unless proved erroneous or is validly allowed to be withdrawn. [A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 355; A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1724; I.L.R. 11 Cal. 588; A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 278 and A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 249, Foll.]: 1985 R.D. 135; A.I.R. 1971 Pat. 363(D.B.); A.I.R. 1982 Madh. Pra. 17: 1983 M.P.L.J. 679 (D.B.).

The law by no means regards admissions as conclusive proof of the matters admitted; for admissions are but statements which do no more than suggest an inference as to some fact or facts in issue. The Court should examine admissions to see if they suggest a clear inference on a fact in issue against the party making it; the admission must be unequivocal, comprehensive and must go the whole-hog, as it were, on the point at issue; an admission falling short of the totality of the requisite legal proof of the fact in issue would be only a truncated admission, and cannot support a valid judicial determination, unless there is other evidence to make up deficiencies in the admission: A.I.R. 1980 Mad. 212: (1979) 2 M.L.J. 466: (1979) 92 Mad.L.W. 736.

An admission is not conclusive, but unless it is explained suitably by a party who has made such an admission or who is bound by such an admission, it will have to be used against him: A.I.R. 1973 Mys. 280 (D.B.).

The evidentiary value of admissions depends upon the circumstances of the case, but ordinarily an admission is a valuable piece of evidence and it cannot be easily rejected: A.I.R. 1973 Mys. 280 (D.B.).

As an abstract proposition of law, the prosecution may be allowed in a given case not to be bound by stray admissions of its witnesses if it is shown that those admissions have been made either on account of mistake of fact or law, or on account of the witnesses being interested in the accused or if it is proved that he had any motive to give a false statement and the statement given, was not correct: 1979 Raj.L.W. 37.

Under Ss. 17 and 31, an admission is not a conclusive proof of the matter admitted; to arrive at its own conclusion the Court is duty bound to thoroughly scrutinise the entire evidence; it should not base its judgment on truncated or extracted portions of an 'admission' unless the same is both unequivocal and comprehensive; merely because the plaintiff admitted that 15 or 16 years back, the defendant had in his presence stated that the plaintiff had no share in the property, held, did not amount to an admission, much less a clear, certain and definite admission which law requires it to be. Case remanded to the Board of Revenue for consideration of other materials on record for making up its mind: 1985 R.D. 444.

A duly proved admission, even if its maker appears as a witness or not or has been confronted with it or not, is admissible in evidence. The purpose of contradicting the witness under S. 145 is quite different from the purpose of proving the admission; an admission is substantive evidence of the fact admitted while a previous statement used to contradict the witness is not; the latter only throws doubt on the veracity of the witness; but the weight to be attached to an admission as evidence is an altogether a different thing: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 161.

A.I.R. 1946 Lah. 65 (F.B.) does not give due weight to the difference between the language of Ss. 17 and 32 on the one hand and S. 145 on the other. S. 145 specifically requires the use of his previous statement, written or reduced into writing, in cross-examination of the witness to contradict him by drawing his attention to its relevant portions; there is no similar provision as to the statements admissible under Ss. 17 to 21 and 32. It was observed in A.I.R. 1957 All. 1 (F.B.) that for proving the parties' admissions, they need not be shown to them in their cross-examination provided the admissions were clear and unambiguous and that the party producing them could use them as substantive evidence as well without drawing the opposite party's attention to them in cross-examination: A.I.R. 1973 Mys. 280 (D.B.).

3. Admission in previous suit.—The statement of a person in a previous suit in respect of a particular property may be used as his admission in a subsequent suit in respect of the same property; he may be confronted with the same: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

The admission contained in a pleading of a former litigation, is indeed an admission in the true sense and is certainly available to be used for all purposes. It cannot be kept out by saying that it was an admission in a former litigation and was meant for that proceeding alone and, thus, cannot be taken to be an admission binding in any other suit or for all times to come. Such a distinction is not open in law to be made. If it is an admission, it is so and is certainly an admission for all times to come. Unless explained away properly, an admission is the best available support for the adversary: A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 267: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 253.

Admission by plaintiff in previous suit—Binding on him in fresh suit, unless rebutted: A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 550.

Admissions—Adverse admissions made in a prior suit, is not conclusive — Such admissions are, however, strong pieces of evidence against the maker—It can be proved wrong or untrue and the burden of proof is on the party making it—Such admissions made in a prior suit, though not binding on the party making it, have great evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1968 Raj. 51.

The Court is entitled to consider the admission solemnly made by a party in the course of a proceeding, in the other suit if it concerns the subject-matter in dispute. However, such an admission cannot be regarded as conclusive and the party can show that it was not true: A.I.R. 1984 Pat. 191: 1984 Pat.L.J.R. 407.

It is well known that an admission by the adverse party is decisive, though not conclusive proof of the facts admitted; an admission in the written statement in another litigation is a substantive evidence in a subsequent litigation even if its maker is not confronted with it; but the maker of the admission may explain it away by showing that it was not true and was made to serve an ulterior purpose. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 341 and A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 405, Foll.]: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 110. See also S. 18, Note 18, supra.

4. Admission in pleadings/written statement.—Though parties' averments in pleadings may become admissions and may be used against their maker but their value and the rule of admissions are controlled by Ss. 18 to 23 and S. 31; that is why S. 31 cautions that admissions are not conclusive proof but may operate as estoppel. The law is settled that admissions of a party bind the other if they have a common interest but not their status as parties arrayed in the proceedings. Case law discussed: (1994) 2 An.L.T. 445.

An admission by a party in his pleading can be considered against him. What a party admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, unless that presumption is satisfactorily rebutted by other evidence: 1958 M.P.C. 351: 1958 Jab.L.J. 512: 1958 M.P.L.J. 513: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 261.

Admissions in pleadings or judicial admissions by themselves can be made the foundation of the rights of the parties. [A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 471, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1986 All. 126: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 566: 1985 All.C.J. 507.

It is well established that admissions made in pleadings by a party against his own interest are conclusive; there can be no better evidence; no further evidence is required. But evidentiary admissions are not conclusive; they may be explained or shown to be wrong; they also shift the burden of proof. Admissions, if not shown to be wrong or not binding, they are best and substantive evidence of the facts admitted. But they must be clear and unequivocal: (1989) 1 Rev.L.R. 145: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 125 (P.&H.).

Where the defendant in his written statement had admitted the execution of a sale-deed in favour of the plaintiff in respect of half-share in the suit property, held, non-production by the plaintiff of the said sale-deed in the Court was of no effect: A.I.R. 1980 Ori. 54: 49 Cut.L.T. 215: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Cut. 542. See also S. 18, Note 16, supra.

5. Admission in evidence before Court.—Where in a suit for possession, the plaintiff in his evidence before the Court admitted that there was an agreement between him and his father, whereby the father was in sole cultivating possession of that part of the land which was mortgaged under the unregistered document to the defendant, though there was no plea to this effect in the written statement of the defendant, held, an admission made in Court regarding the true state of affairs will not dis-entitle the defendants from succeeding merely because of the absence of a plea; the admission made in the evidence was equally effective to defeat the suit of the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1971 Del. 316.

6. Admission in criminal case—Use of in compensation case.—An admission by the accused in a criminal case that he was driving the truck at the time of accident, held, is not in itself a substantive piece of evidence in compensation case but can be pressed into service against him to lend support to the testimony of witnesses that he was the driver of the truck involved in the accident: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 71: 1975 Raj.L.W. 399: 1975 W.L.N. 442. See also (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 596: A.I.R. 1963 Guj. 111; (1981) 1 Karn.L.J. 178 (D.B.), cited under S. 21, Note 6, supra.

7. Admission in ignorance of legal rights.—An admission made in ignorance of legal rights or under duress is not binding. Thus, where a candidate, very anxious to take an examination, gave an undertaking to the University to submit his employer's written permission and to abide by any other University order because the University would not otherwise permit him to take the examination, held, the undertaking was given by him in terrorem and in complete ignorance of his legal rights; he did not then know that the University Statute did not require him to obtain his employer's permission; his undertaking could not, thus, preclude him from challenging the cancellation of his candidature by the University: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 376: (1976) 1 S.C.C. 311: 1976 U.J. (S.C.) 15: (1976) 2 S.C.R. 722; 1973 Punj.L.J. 214.

8. Admission/concession by Counsel.—Where in a suit by a contractor for damages for breach of contract, the contractor (plaintiff) contended that the Counsel of the defendant conceded at the time of argument before the Special Referee that on termination of contract, the plaintiff would have been paid certain amount as one months remuneration in lieu of one month's notice, held, the lawyer's concession could not be treated as an admission of fact binding on the defendant as there was no occasion for adducing any secondary evidence as the original contract was before the Special Referee: (1988) 2 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 136 (D.B.).

9. Admission to be read as a whole.—An admission must be read as a whole. The law does not permit an admission to be truncated and taken piecemeal. One must take the whole of it or none of it: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 372: 1957 Cr.L.J. 707.

The Court is duty bound to (i) construe an admission as a whole to ascertain its true meaning and effect, and (ii) determine its probative value by considering the circumstances wherein the admission was made and the possible motives of interested persons to make incorrect statements: (1981) 2 Ren.C.J. 813. See also S. 18, Note 4; S. 21, Note 3, supra.

10. Admission shifts the onus of proof.—An admission shifts the onus on the person admitting the fact on the principle that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so and until the presumption is rebutted the fact admitted must be taken to be established. This principle is stated in 34 Ind. App. 27 (P.C.).

However, the question of onus loses its efficacy when it is never objected to in the lower Courts and evidence having been led by the parties, at the appellate stage the Court has to adjudicate on the material before it. Further, admissions are not conclusive, and unless they constitute estoppel, the maker is at liberty to prove that they are mistaken or are untrue. Admissions are mere pieces of evidence and if the truth of the matter is known to both parties the principle stated in the case above would be inapplicable. Admissions made by a Hindu widow, aged about 25 years, surrounded by the members of the family whose interest it was to foist an adoption on her, her own relations not seeming to have taken much interest in her or her affairs—a widow lonely and dependent upon her husband's relations—will necessarily carry very little weight: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 504.

Admission—Evidentiary value—Onus, shifting of: A.I.R. 1968 Mys. 309.

An admission does not conclude the party making it unless the person to whom it is made has acted on its faith. It is open to a party against whom the admission is sought to be proved to show that the facts alleged to be admitted are not correct or that the same were made as a result of mistake or ignorance.

Held, on facts, that the admission by plaintiff was not conclusive proof that the property belonged to the family: 1962 Ker.L.J. 929.

True, evidentiary admissions are not conclusive proof of the facts admitted or may be explained or shown to be wrong but they do raise an estoppel and shift the burden of proof on to their maker or his representative-in-interest; they are, if not explained away or shown to be wrong are an efficacious proof of the facts admitted: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 861.

The effect of the admission is that it shifts the onus on the person admitting the fact on the principle that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and until the presumption is rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established. The question of onus loses its efficacy when objection is not taken in the trial Court and evidence has been led by both parties: 33 Cut.L.T. 876: A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 103.

Admission can be used against the party making it. The party making the admission has a right to rebut the same and can plead and prove that admission so made is not true. Burden shall be on the party who wants to show that the admission so made is untrue: A.I.R. 1988 Raj. 188: 1987 Raj.L.W. 210: (1987) 1 Raj.L.R. 548.

Admissions made by plaintiff—Burden is on him to show that they are erroneous: I.L.R. (1963) Bom. 158: A.I.R. 1963 Bom. 110.

11. Miscellaneous.—Admission contained in document—Document secured at late stage—Admission can still be employed against its maker: (1965) 1 Mys.L.J. 442: A.I.R. 1966 Mys. 154.

Suit for partition by mother against her sons A and B—A pleading partition of property between him and B by registered deed—A admitting that disputed properties were joint family properties — Partition deed showing that partition was of joint family properties including properties purchased in A's name—Held, plaintiff was entitled to reopen partition and properties were liable to partition—Admission is best evidence that opposite party can rely upon: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 98.

Recital as to delivery of possession by donor in gift deed — Admission is not irrebuttable or conclusive on the question of delivery of possession—Further enquiry as to the factum of delivery of possession pursuant to the gift is admissible notwithstanding the recital in the deed: I.L.R. (1964) 2 Mad. 540: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 212: (1964) 2 M.L.J. 237: A.I.R. 1964 Mad. 373.

Applicability—Admission in writ petition before Supreme Court that certain lands in possession of petitioner were pasture lands and that they were used by him for grazing his cattle—It is not open to petitioner in subsequent writ petition before High Court to turn round and say that admission is not correct—He has to abide by that admission: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 59.

Oral admission by operator as to contents of stage-carriage permit—Inadmissible unless he is entitled to give secondary evidence of contents of the permit—Admission not conclusive proof: A.I.R. 1967 Del. 22.

Wrong statement made by party in mutation proceedings—Not binding on him in suit subsequently filed by him—Held, further, as it was not the defendant's case that they had made any change in their position qua the suit land on account of the said admission of the plaintiff, it could not act even as an estoppel: 1968 Cur.L.J. 213: (1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 510.

Writing admitting payment of money by mortgagor—Mortgagee can under Ss. 31, 95 to 97 contend that the admission is not conclusive and that some money had been paid towards any other deed than the mortgage deed in suit: A.I.R. 1954 Manipur 11.

An admission of a father is not binding on the son because he did not claim through the father. It cannot bind third persons: (1929-30) 34 Cal.W.N. 944: A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 105; 12 L.L.J. 187.

In a suit brought by a son, A challenging the alienation by his father of the joint family property on the ground of legal necessity, a statement made by his elder brother, B, in a previous suit admitting the genuineness of the sale-deed executed by the father is not binding on A when the admission is made by B in his individual capacity and prior to the receipt of the power of attorney executed by A in favour of B: A.I.R. 1953 Bilaspur 18.

Where an election petitioner had admitted that he had filed only one copy of the petition signed by him as required by law, held, the well known principle of law being that what is admitted by the party as true must be presumed to be true unless contrary is shown; such admission, though not conclusive, is nevertheless decisive of the matter admitted; it is, however, open to that party to explain or prove that the admission is wrong: A.I.R. 1975 Ori. 184: I.L.R. (1974) Cut. 64.

The admission made by a party to a marriage might be actuated by an ulterior motive; it cannot by itself be used as evidence; it has to be considered on facts of each case whether the admission is so actuated or not; in the absence of any occasion for any such ulterior motive, the admission would bind its maker unless it is explained away by the maker himself. Thus, where in a suit for declaration of title the plaintiffs produced a 33 years' old sale deed wherein their father had admitted their mother to be his wife and there could then be no motive for him to make a false statement in the deed, the admission conclusively proved that the plaintiffs' mother was indeed the legally wedded wife of their father: A.I.R. 1989 Mad. 252: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 348: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 29: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 656.

Where a wife in a divorce case for adultery explained that her confessional letter relied upon by her husband was got written by the husband under threat to obtain false evidence and that she being not well educated, she was incapable of herself writing that letter, held, the letter could not be taken as 'confession' of a matrimonial offence as it was neither voluntary nor true: A.I.R. 1974 Cal. 61: (1972-73) 77 Cal.W.N. 994 (S.B.).

STATEMENTS BY PERSONS WHO CANNOT BE CALLED AS WITNESSES

32. Cases in which statement of relevant fact by person who is dead or cannot be found, etc., is relevant.—Statements, written or verbal, of relevant facts made by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured, without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable, are themselves relevant facts in the following cases:—

(1) When it relates to cause of death.—When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question.

Such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not, at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, and whatever

Where a widow of the deceased alongwith his brothers were described in a sale deed as vendors of the property, and the admission so made was sought to be explained away by the male vendors that the widow was joined as a co-vendor at the instance of the vendee to dispel any cloud on the title being conveyed though she was a mere maintenance holder in the property, held, the explanation is ex facie not acceptable; that purpose could be served even by describing her as a maintenance owner consenting to the sale at the desire of the maintenance owner; the admission, thus, is determinative of the widow's ownership as admitted: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 74: 39 Cut.L.T. 774 (D.B.).

Where an accused obtained acquittal in a criminal revision in the High Court by admitting that he would not interfere with the defendants' rights, held, it did not amount to an unqualified admission; it only amounted to an undertaking not to take law into his own hands; besides, it was an admission made in terrorem; he was, therefore, not precluded from suing the defendants under S. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure for framing of a Scheme: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1569: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 780: (1976) 3 S.C.R. 721.

Where in an election petition, the issue involved was regarding the age of the elected candidate on the date of the scrutiny of his nomination and there were a number of clear admissions in prior declarations precisely and deliberately made in solemn documents by him which admissions were made ante litem motam during the decade preceding the election in question, held, these admissions were entitled to great weight and had shifted the burden on to the candidate to show that they were incorrect: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1724: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 540: (1977) 3 S.C.R. 538.

may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question.

(2) Or is made in course of business.—When the statement was made by such person in the ordinary course of business, and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty; or of an acknowledgment written or signed by him of the receipt of money, goods, securities or property of any kind; or of a document used in commerce, written or signed by him; or of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written or signed by him.

(3) Or against interest of maker.—When the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when, if true, it would expose him or would have exposed him, to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages.

(4) Or gives opinion as to public right or custom, or matters of general interests.—When the statement gives the opinion of any such person, as to the existence of any public right or custom or matter of public or general interest, of the existence of which, if it existed he would have been likely to be aware, and when such statement was made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter had arisen.

1. Scope and applicability of section 32.—Ill. (a) to S. 6, Ills. (j) and (k) to S. 8 and Ill. (i) to S. 14 show that S. 32 is not a complete code relating to the admissibility of statement made by persons who are dead: (1986-87) 91 Cal.W.N. 561 (D.B.).

S. 32 is not exhaustive: 1960 Cr.L.J. 894: A.I.R. 1960 Bom. 290.

The provisions of S. 32 are in the nature of exceptions, and the onus of establishing circumstances that would bring a statement within any of the exceptions contemplated by the section lies clearly upon that party which wishes to avail itself of the statement: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 423: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 465.

S. 32 speaks of statements both written and verbal, and a Court cannot refuse to admit oral evidence of a verbal statement which fulfils the requirements of the section, merely because the evidence offered is the testimony of a witness who is interested in the result of the litigation: (1937-38) 42 Cal.W.N. 359.

A statement made by a person that deceased had acquired certain property in benami, held, as that person had admitted that it was only his hearsay, same is not covered by any of the sub-Ss. (1) to (3) of S. 32 and, hence, such hearsay evidence could not be accepted: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 342: (1981-82) 86 Cal.W.N. 516: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 279 (D.B.).

There is a difference between the existence of a fact and a statement as to its existence. S. 11 makes the existence of facts admissible, and not statements as to such existence unless the fact of making that statement is itself a matter in issue. Hence, if a statement does not fall within S. 32, it cannot be admissible even under S. 11: I.L.R. 56 All. 766: 1934 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1934 All. 406 (F.B.).

There may be statements which are inadmissible under S. 32 but admissible under S. 6; at any rate, S. 6 is not controlled by S. 32; if the scope of S. 6 cannot be whittled down like that, the scope of S. 11 cannot be curtailed either by dragging it under S. 31. Nothing in S. 11 suggests that it is controlled by any other section (including S. 32); rather its language indicates that the provision is an exception to the other general provisions. Thus, if a fact is relevant under S. 32, S. 11 is not attracted; S. 11 operates only when other

(5) Or relates to existence of relationship.—When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship [1][by blood, marriage or adoption] between persons as to whose relationship [1][by blood, marriage or adoption] the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, and when the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

(6) Or is made in will or deed relating to family affairs.—When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship [1][by blood, marriage or adoption] between persons deceased, and is made in any will or deed relating to the affairs of the family to which any such deceased person belonged, or in any family pedigree, or upon any tombstone, family portrait or other thing on which such statements are usually made, and when such statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

(7) Or in document relating to transaction mentioned in section 13, clause (a).—When the statement is contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in section 13, clause (a).

(8) Or is made by several persons and expresses feelings relevant to matter in question.—When the statement was made by a number of persons, and expressed feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question.

sections, including S. 32, are not attracted: (1992) 1 Ker.L.J. 491 (F.B.).

Where the witnesses deposed that the plaintiff's deceased father had told them that the defendant had under the guise of executing a partition deed got a sale deed executed from him by practising fraud, held, evidence of the deceased's statement was not admissible to establish its truth as it was hit by the hearsay rule and did not fall within any exception set out in S. 32; it was, however, admissible to establish the fact that such a statement had been made which may reflect upon the mental state and the subsequent conduct of those witnesses: A.I.R. 1981 Cal. 444: (1981-82) 86 Cal.W.N. 76.

Section should be very liberally construed. See 104 I.C. 209: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 278. Whether this section overrides S. 10-A of the Dec. Agri. Rel. Act, see (1950) 52 Bom.L.R. 288.

Statements of living persons who had not been examined as witnesses are inadmissible: 5 O.W.N. 1111: A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 113.

Before statements can be admitted under S. 32 it must be proved that the makers of these statements are either dead or for any other reason are not available as witnesses: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 212.

A person may be said to have been not found when we know who he was and if in spite of search he was not found or was found to have been dead. But he may equally be said not to have been found if his identity cannot be traced or found and who, therefore, on account of the absence of his identity cannot be found: (1943) 45 Punj.L.R. 441: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 58.

The discretion vested in the Court under the section has to be exercised with great care and caution in the special circumstances mentioned in the section. The caution indeed must be greater where it is likely to be used against a party, who did not have the advantage of testing the correctness of the statements, by cross-examination of the persons who made those statements. Where it cannot be said that the attendance of the witnesses could not be procured without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances would have been unreasonable and the error, if any, was on the part of the Tribunal in not enforcing the attendance of these witnesses, whose names were mentioned in the election petition at the earliest stage, the statements of the witnesses made before the presiding officer should not be taken in evidence under the section: A.I.R. 1959 Assam 200.

Rent receipt by landlord in favour of plaintiff—Landlord though alive not examined as witness—Statement in receipt describing plaintiff as daughter of deceased tenant—Not admissible: A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 450.

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether A was murdered by B; or

A dies of injuries received in a transaction in the course of which she was ravished. The question is whether she was ravished by B; or

The question is, whether A was killed by B under such circumstances that a suit would lie against B by A's widow.

Statements made by A as to the cause of his or her death, referring respectively to the murder, the rape and the actionable wrong under consideration are relevant facts.

(b) The question is as to the date of A's birth.

An entry in the diary of a deceased surgeon, regularly kept in the course of business, stating that, on a given day he attended A's mother and delivered her of a son, is a relevant fact.

(c) The question is, whether A was in Calcutta on a given day.

A statement in the diary of a deceased solicitor, regularly kept in the course of business, that on a given day the solicitor attended A at a place mentioned, in Calcutta, for the purpose of conferring with him upon specified business, is a relevant fact.

(d) The question is, whether a ship sailed from Bombay harbour on a given day.

A letter written by a deceased member of a merchant's firm by which she was chartered, to their correspondents in London to whom the cargo was consigned, stating that the ship sailed on a given day from Bombay harbour, is a relevant fact.

(e) The question is, whether rent was paid to A for certain land.

A letter from A's deceased agent to A, saying that he had received the rent on A's account and held it at A's orders, is a relevant fact.

(f) The question is, whether A and B were legally married.

The statement of a deceased clergyman that he married them under such circumstances that the celebration would be a crime, is relevant.

The incapacity to give evidence contemplated by S. 32 need not be a permanent incapacity. Incapacity, however, must be proved. The onus of establishing the circumstances that would bring a statement within any of the exceptions in S. 32 lies on the party wishing to avail itself of the statement. Where a person has become very old and blind and cannot move, he must be held to have become incapable of giving evidence: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 21.

Ss. 32, 18, 13, 21—Mortgage executed by A and B—In it A admitting that B was adopted son of his deceased brother C—Admission of A is relevant under S. 32(3) being against his pecuniary interests inasmuch as he would lose his share in property of C if B was his adopted son—Admission relevant also under S. 32(5)—Admission binding on grandson of A under S. 18(2)—The words 'during the continuance of the interest' only mean while the interest was subsisting and before that interest was parted with—Document also constituted evidence of B's assertion of the right that he was adopted son of C and was relevant under S. 13 read with S. 32(7-B) being dead—Under S. 21(1) admission of B in his own favour as adopted son of C was relevant: I.L.R. (1962) Cut. 422: A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 45.

Statement of deceased inadmissible—Admissibility as evidence of his conduct. See (1954) 1 M.L.J. 194: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 215.

The value of the evidence admissible under Ss. 32, 49 and 60 depends on the characters of the witnesses who depose to what they heard from deceased persons and also on the characters of the deceased and whether they were expressing their own opinion or merely repeating hearsay. [I.L.R. 23 All. 37 (P.C.), Foll.]: A.I.R. 1933 Sind 213.

Affidavit of a person who died subsequently and was not subjected to cross-examination is not admissible. See A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 507: 52 M.L.J. 477.

Statement by person not examined as witness—Person making statement not proved to be dead or incapable of giving evidence, etc.—Statement is inadmissible in evidence: (1965) 78 Mad.L.W. 404: (1966) 1 M.L.J. 109: I.L.R. (1965) 2 Mad. 404: A.I.R. 1966 Mad. 99.

(g) The question is, whether A, a person who cannot be found, wrote a letter on a certain day. The fact that a letter written by him is dated on that day is relevant.

(h) The question is, what was the cause of the wreck of a ship.

A protest made by the Captain, whose attendance cannot be procured, is a relevant fact.

(i) The question is, whether a given road is a public way.

A statement by A, a deceased headman of the village, that the road was public, is a relevant fact.

(j) The question is, what was the price of grain on a certain day in a particular market.

A statement of the price, made by a deceased baniya in the ordinary course of his business, is a relevant fact.

(k) The question is, whether A who is dead, was the father of B.

A statement by A that B was his son, is a relevant fact.

(l) The question is, what was the date of the birth of A.

A letter from A's deceased father to a friend, announcing the birth of A on a given day, is a relevant fact.

(m) The question is, whether and when, A and B were married.

An entry in a memorandum book by C, the deceased father of B, of his daughter's marriage with A on a given date, is a relevant fact.

(n) A sues B for a libel expressed in a painted caricature exposed in a shop window. The question is as to the similarity of the caricature and its libellous character. The remarks of a crowd of spectators on these points may be proved.

2. Relative scope of section 32 and section 33.—Ss. 32 and 33 give different instances where evidence is relevant. It cannot be said that S. 33 governs S. 32: 1941 Rang.L.R. 258: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301.

S. 32 is not controlled by S. 33 of that Act: A.I.R. 1949 Sind 12.

Evidence in regard to a statement made to the complainant by a person who has not been examined as a witness, is not admissible either under S. 32 or S. 33: 79 Cal.L.J. 149: A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 360.

A previous statement by a person is not relevant when it is not covered by Ss. 32, 33 and 145, unless it is an admission in which case only it becomes relevant under S. 21: 1941 All.W.R. (Rev.) 501: 1941 R.D. 503: 43 Cr.L.J. 125.

Previous statements may be relevant: (a) when the person making the statement is not called as a witness, and (b) when such a person is called as a witness. In the former case previous statements may be relevant under S. 32 while previous depositions made in a judicial proceeding may be relevant under S. 33. Where the person making the statement is not called, they may be proved under S. 155(3) or under S. 157 of the Act. In the former case the provisions of S. 145 must be complied with: 1948 R.D. 461.

A previous statement which is not made in Court and at the trial can be used only for the limited purpose of corroborating or contradicting a witness and does not become substantive evidence in the case. When the statement of a witness previously made is used as evidence under the provisions of Ss. 32 and 33, then any other statement made by that witness can be used by virtue of S. 158 for the purpose of contradicting that witness as if such witness had appeared in Court and was cross-examined on such previous statement and on question being asked had denied the facts mentioned in the same: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 409: 127 I.C. 850.

Where a witness, though alive, was not produced in the Court, held, her previous statement made in another proceeding could not be relied on: A.I.R. 1972 All. 291.

The deposition of a witness in a previous suit would not be admissible when he was not called as a witness in the subsequent suit and it was not shown that the person was either dead or otherwise not available: (1972) 1 Mys.L.J. 473 (D.B.).

Where in a prosecution on the basis of private complaint for criminal breach of trust in respect of a company's funds, a witness at a later stage of the proceedings disappeared and was not available for cross-examination inspite of all reasonable efforts made by the prosecution to secure his presence, held, in these circumstances the evidence of the witness should not be discarded merely because he was not available, his evidence was very much part of the record and the same was certainly admissible but the same will have to be approached with a degree of caution: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3384 (Bom.).

The statement of a deceased recorded in the accused's absence is not admissible either under S. 33 or S. 32(1) unless it is proved either by the Magistrate who recorded it or some one else in whose presence it was recorded: 20 I.C. 220: 14 Cr.L.J. 396.

Where in a suit upon promissory note, one of the attesting witnesses to the execution of the promissory note cannot be called to prove execution, he being dead, his statement in a previous suit not inter partes cannot be brought on the record, when the statement does not fall either under S. 32 or under S. 33 of the Evidence Act: (1959) 61 Punj.L.R. 813: A.I.R. 1960 Punj. 261.

The accused was tried for the murder of B. When B's mother left the house in the morning B and her sister A were both in the house. The mother finding A alone in the house when she returned enquired from her about B. She made certain statement about B to her mother and later in the day to others. But A died before her statements could be recorded in a judicial proceeding. Held, that the statements of A were not admissible either under S. 32 or S. 33 of the Act and could not be referred to in stating the facts of the case. S. 33 was clearly out of the way because A made no statements in a judicial proceeding or before any person authorised by law to take her evidence. The only relevant clause of S. 32 which may be said to have any bearing was Cl. (1) which related to statements made by a person as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. The statements made by A did not relate to the cause of her death or to any of the circumstances relating to her death; on the contrary, the statements related to the death of her sister. Therefore, the statements did not come within S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 18.

3. Scope of clause (1).—Hearsay evidence is barred, but S. 32 is an exception thereto inasmuch as it permits proof of what the victim stated in his dying declaration as the cause of his death or the circumstances which resulted in his death where such cause or circumstances are relevant: 1985 Cr.L.J. 336: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 354: (1984) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 69 (D.B.).

The rule admitting a dying declaration is also subject to the rule against hearsay. It is immaterial to whom the declaration is made. It may be made to a Police Officer or to a private person. It does not become inadmissible by reason of its having been made in the course of the investigation. It may be oral or it may be reduced in writing by any other person but in either case it must be duly proved: A.I.R. 1951 Him. Pra. 1: 52 Cr.L.J. 50.

The dying declaration is only a piece of untested evidence. It must, like any other evidence, satisfy the Court that what is stated therein is the unalloyed truth and the whole truth and that it is absolutely safe to act upon it: A.I.R. 1970 Assam 137: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1599.

S. 32(1) is attracted where: (1) the cause of death is required to be ascertained; (2) the deceased's statement is related to the cause of death, or (3) to circumstances connected with death: 1987 Cr.L.R. 494 (Mah.).

A dying declaration cannot be interpreted like a legally drafted document so as to contain minute details. If on reading the dying declaration as a whole an impression is left that it contains substratum of truth, it can be accepted: 1979 Raj.L.W. 267: 1979 W.L.N. 384 (D.B.).

An omnibus statement by a group of persons including the deceased who are alleged to have met the witness and told him about the incident is not an exclusive statement made by the deceased as a dying declaration; the rigour of a dying declaration which enjoins its being recorded in the very words of the deceased would be completely dissipated if such general statements were accepted as the statement of the deceased; the sanctity attached to a dying declaration would thereby be destroyed: 1972 All.W.R. 521: 1972 All.L.J. 744.

There is no warrant for the view that a dying declaration cannot be acted upon unless it is exhaustive and discloses all the surrounding circumstances. Such a view is not consistent with S. 32 of the Evidence Act. The section only requires that there must be a statement made by a person about the cause of his death: 1952 Cr.L.J. 1558: A.I.R. 1952 Trav.-Co. 449.

Under S. 32 of Evidence Act it is the statement actually made by the deceased as to the cause of his death, etc., which is relevant and not what he omits to state. No inference can be drawn from the failure to mention a fact in the declaration: 1952 Cr.L.J. 600: A.I.R. 1952 All. 289.

Statement by deceased before Third Class Magistrate not competent to record statement under Cr.P.Code, S. 164, is yet relevant under S. 32(1): A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 60.

Where a statement is relevant under the provisions of S. 32(1), it is not inadmissible by reason of the fact that the Magistrate who recorded it was not competent to record it under S. 164, Cr.P.Code: 1941 Rang.L.R. 258: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301.

A dying declaration under S. 32 is not like a statement of the accused and other witnesses recorded under S. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; such persons are required to appear in the Court later on to testify afresh; the dying declaration does not fall under S. 164; it will not be invalid merely because the Magistrate recording it had not been conferred powers under S. 164. [A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 14; A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301; A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 243; (1958) 60 Bom.L.R. 153 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1994, Rel. on]: 1978 Mah.L.J. 324 (D.B.).

Evidence recorded under S. 512(1), Cr.P.Code [S. 299 of New Code]—Test of credibility—Dying declaration—Difference: A.I.R. 1958 All. 214: 1958 Cr.L.J. 324.

S. 162 of the Cr. P. Code provides a wholesome safeguard to the accused; its denial to him is justified only under exceptional circumstances as set out in Ss. 27 and 32(1): (1992) 1 An.W.R. 16.

Under S. 32 it is only statements made by the deceased as to the cause of his death or the circumstances of the transaction that resulted in his death which can be admitted. The circumstances must be circumstances of the transaction; general expressions indicating fear or suspicion, whether of a particular individual or otherwise and not directly related to the occasion of death cannot be admissible. Statement by the deceased which provide nothing more than grounds for supposing that the deceased suspected the accused of having betrayed a relation of his in a civil suit which are in no way associated with the actual murder cannot be admitted under S. 32 and must be excluded. Even if the accused does not object to such evidence, it must be excluded. At any rate it is the duty of Public Prosecutor to see that such wholly inadmissible evidence is not placed before the Court: I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 81: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 101: (1940) 2 M.L.J. 715. See also 1941 Pat.W.N. 255: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 362; I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 100: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 300; I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 423: (1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 332; A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 465.

The portion of the dying declaration made by one deceased person which pertains to the cause of death of another deceased person is beyond the scope of S. 32(1) and consequently inadmissible as evidence. The language of S. 32(1) clearly shows that the cause of death must be the cause of death of the person making the statement and the circumstances resulting in death must be the circumstances which led to his death and the question involved in the case in which the cause of death comes up for consideration must be the death of the person making the statement. Sanctity is attached to the truthfulness of a dying declaration because of the imminent idea of death hovering over the mind of the person making the dying declaration. The language employed in S. 32(1) fortifies the view that in order that the dying declaration may constitute evidence under that provision, it must be a dying declaration relating to the facts and circumstances resulting in the death of the person making it: 1969 Cr.L.J. 98 (Punj.).

The statement in a dying declaration of one dead person in regard to the death of another is not a relevant fact with respect to the question about the death of the latter and so would not be admissible in evidence with respect to the offence of murder of that person: 1947 All.L.J. 627: A.I.R. 1948 All. 170: I.L.R. (1948) All. 122. But see infra. The view that the statement of one dead person is not a relevant fact with respect to the question about the death of another person or with respect to the causing of hurt to a third is too narrow to be accepted. To exclude from the evidence of statements made by a deceased person as to incidents which occurred during the course of the transaction which resulted in his death statements other than those relating to the cause of his death, would be to import a limitation to the words used in the section which their natural meaning does not warrant. When a limitation like that is intended, the Legislature specially provides for it: A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 104: I.L.R. (1954) Trav.-Co. 1308.

Whether one person's dying declaration is a relevant fact in regard to the death of another person would depend on: (1) whether it was made in continum of the narration as to final occurrence concerning his own death; (2) whether the other person's death had occurred in the presence or sight or hearing of the first person; (3) whether the two final occurrences had some proximate relation; and (4) whether declaration, on the occurrence of the other person's death being excluded, would be rendered un-intelligible or distorted. Thus, where one victim declared that when the two of them were standing, the accused came to the spot and asked them whether they were in search of him for assaulting and, taking out an open knife, the accused stabbed the other person on chest twice and on the declarant's trying to save the victim, the accused stabbed the declarant also, held, the dying declaration was relevant and admissible to be used against the accused for murder of the other person; res gestae elaborately discussed: (1984) 1 Bom.C.R. 563: 1984 Cr.L.R. 194 (D.B.).

A statement by a dying person not about the circumstances of his death, but about a dacoity that was taking place at the time of his death is not admissible under S. 32 (1) in a trial for the dacoity. Nor can those statements be admissible under S. 32(3) unless they would have exposed him to criminal prosecution: 20 I.C. 990: 14 Cr.L.J. 510. See also (1944) 46 Punj.L.R. 135: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 377.

4. Constitutional validity of clause (1).— The Legislature under S. 32(1) in its wisdom has made dying declarations admissible out of necessity; authors of dying declarations may not survive to give evidence in the Court; being of persons usually close to death, great solemnity is attached to the dying declarations. The authors of dying declarations are thus, a class apart; and the classification is reasonable. S. 158, besides, provides an assurance that dying declarations are tested by other relevant evidence so that they may not lead to injustice. S. 32(1) is, therefore, not violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution: 1985 All.W.C. 399: 1985 All.Cr.R. 196.

5. Dying declaration—When admissible.—The authorities and the clear language of S. 32(1) suggest the following propositions: (1) S. 32 is an exception to the rule of hearsay; it makes admissible the statement of a person who dies, whether by homicide or a suicide, provided it relates to the cause of, or the circumstances leading to, his death; (2) The test of proximity should not be too literally construed to reduce it to a cut-and-dried formula of universal application confined in a strait-jacket. Thus, where death is a logical culmination of a continuous long drama, a final of the story, the statement regarding each step directly connected with the death would be admissible; it would have to be read as an organic whole, not torn from the context. Sometimes statements relevant to or furnishing immediate motives may also be admissible as a part of the transaction of death like where the death takes place within a very short time of marriage or the time is not spread over more than 3-4 months; (3) The second part of S. 32(1) is yet another exception to the rule of criminal law that evidence of a person, not subjected to or given an opportunity to be cross-examined by the accused is of no value; for a person on the verge of death is not likely to make a false statement unless there is strong evidence that the statement was secured by prompting or tutoring; (4) Importantly, S. 32 does not speak of homicide alone but includes suicide also, and all circumstances relevant to prove homicide would be equally relevant to prove a suicide; and (5) Where the main evidence consists of the deceased's statements and letters directly connected with or related to her death, revealing a tell-tale story, the same would be admissible as they clearly fall within the four corners of S. 32; the distance of time alone in such cases would not make the statements irrelevant. [A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 306, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1622: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 208: (1988) 4 S.C.C. 116: 1984 Cr.L.J. 1738.

Principles governing the law on dying declarations laid down by the Supreme Court are: (1) There is no rule of law or prudence that a dying declaration cannot be acted upon without corroboration; (2) The Court can, on being satisfied as to the truth and voluntary nature of the dying declaration, enter conviction without corroboration; (3) The Court should carefully scrutinise the dying declaration to ensure that the declarant was free from tutoring, prompting or imagination, that he had the opportunity to see and identify the assailants and that he was fit to make the statement; (4) A suspicious dying declaration should not be acted upon without corroboration; (5) A dying declaration of an injured, unconscious and unable to make the statement, must be rejected; (6) A dying declaration suffering from infirmities is no valid base for conviction; (7) A dying declaration should not be rejected merely because it lacks in details of the occurrence; (8) A brief dying declaration cannot be discarded for its brevity which itself guarantees truth; (9) Though the Court normally goes by medical opinion to ascertain the injured being fit to make statement, but where the eye-witnesses testified to the injured being fit, the medical opinion to the contrary is not to prevail; and (10) A dying declaration containing a version different from that of the prosecution version cannot be acted upon: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 1817: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2919: (1992) 2 An.W.R. 60: (1992) 2 S.C.C. 474: (1992) 1 Crimes 1180; 1994 Cr.L.J. 1886: 1994 M.P.L.J. 630 (D.B.); 1987 W.L.N. (U.C.) 560 (Raj.).

Before accepting a dying declaration, an uncross-examined statement taken behind the accused's back, the Court must seriously consider whether: (a) the dying man had an opportunity to observe the accused, (b) the dying man had the capacity to recollect and recite the facts stated by him, (c) he was consistent if he had more than one occasion to make the declaration, (d) the duration of time between the occurrence and the dying declaration was normal. The Court must also examine whether the dying man was possibly tutored or his statement was 'touched up' by interested persons: (1975) 1 A.P.L.J. 265 (D.B.).

The tests to ascertain the veracity and authenticity of a dying declaration are: (1) Could the deceased see and identify the assailant? (2) Is the deceased's version intrinsically sound and in accord with probabilities? and (3) Whether any material part of the statement is proved to be false by other reliable evidence on the record? Merely because the deceased did not disclose the names of his assailants to the person who took him to the hospital on a bus or to other co-passengers or to the Doctor attending on him in the hospital, held, was no ground to discard the dying declaration: (1981) 22 Guj.L.R. 426: 1981 Cr.L.R. 288 (D.B.).

S. 32 of the Evidence Act makes admissible in evidence a statement of a deceased person. That statement may be an oral statement or a written statement or a statement reduced to writing; and if it is a statement reduced to writing by a person other than the maker thereof, it must be a statement in the words used by the person making it and not in the words of a person reducing it to writing. If it is written in the words of the person reducing it to writing, it cannot strictly and properly be called a statement of the deceased person. The Court should know what precisely the questions were, though they might be leading questions. Unless the form and the words of a question are known, the effect of an answer may not be appreciated and the value of the answer may not be correctly assessed by the Court; and this must effect the evidential value of the answer. There is always a probability of some questions at least being put to the deceased in a leading manner and answers elicited from him by nods; and in such a case it would be difficult to say that what purports to be a statement of the deceased was made by him intelligently or of his own free will. If leading questions are put to a deceased, the weight of the answers would be effected. Inconvenience to the Magistrate or Sub-Inspector can be no justification or denying to the Courts the benefit of the actual words of the deceased which it is so essential to know for the proper administration of justice. Whenever it is practicable to record the statement in those words, there could be no valid excuse for not doing so, when the life and death of a prisoner at the bar depend upon the construction of that statement. When, however, the Sub-Inspector or the Magistrate recording the statement does not know the script of the language spoken by the deceased, though he understands and speaks that language, he may record the statement in English, and if it is recorded as the result of questions put to the deceased and the answers given by the deceased, those questions and answers must always be recorded to enable the Courts to understand the full significance of the statement. It is, therefore, essential, for proper compliance with the provisions of S. 32 of the Evidence Act to record the statement in the precise words in which the questions are put and take down the answers in the actual words in which the answers are given, when the statement is the result of questions put and answers given. If answers are given by gestures, the Court should know what those gestures were. The interpretation of those answers by gestures would ultimately be a matter for the Court and not for the investigating Sub-Inspector. When one expresses in his own words and in a different language what is stated by another person, there is always a probability which cannot be ignored that with the best of intentions he may unwittingly put his own gloss or construction upon the other person's statement in order perhaps to make that statement more intelligible, understandable or logical: I.L.R. (1957) Bom. 396: A.I.R. 1957 Bom. 223.

A dying declaration made to a Police Officer during the course of investigation is taken out of the limitations imposed by sub-S. (2) of S. 162, Cr.P.Code. The relevancy and admissibility of a dying declaration is governed by S. 32(1), Evidence Act. Such a statement is relevant whether or not the person making it was at the time under expectation of death and this is so irrespective of the nature of the proceedings in which the cause of his death comes into question. A dying declaration may in a fit case form the sole basis of a conviction, but each case has to be considered on its own fact in the background of the circumstances in which it is made. It, therefore, follows that for determining the trustworthiness and value of a dying declaration it is incumbent on the Court to bear in mind the capacity and opportunity of the person making the declaration, to observe the incident in question and to identify the guilty person his faculty to remember the facts observed by him and to reproduce them, the opportunity and the likelihood of his having been tutored or otherwise influenced by other circumstances or persons in the matter, and the consistency in the various declarations if he has made more than one. Where a dying declaration is oral and has not been recorded in the words of the author, then the Court has to take precautions of subjecting it to proper scrutiny in the light of all those facts which affect the reliability of such oral evidence. In case there is also a declaration made before a Magistrate the probative value of such a declaration has to be tested by considering the manner in which it has been recorded: whether it is recorded in the form of questions and answers and whether the words of the person making a declaration have been actually reproduced. Finally, a dying declaration from the very nature of things should be closely scrutinised because having been made in the absence of the accused its veracity is not tested by cross-examination and then the Court too has not had any opportunity of watching the demeanour of the person making it. Observations in A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 420, held to be obiter: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 1064: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Punj. 855: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 469: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 170.

Statement written or verbal of relevant facts made by a person who is dead is called 'dying declaration'. Dying declaration is an important piece of evidence and conviction can be based solely on the dying declaration. In the present days when there is spate of dowry deaths, dying declaration has assumed much importance. The principal on which the dying declarations are admitted in evidence is indicated in legal maxim nemo moriturus praesumuntur mentiri, i.e., a man will not meet his maker with a lie in his mouth. [1993 Cr.L.J. 426 (S.C.); 1986 Cr.L.J. 836 (S.C.); 1976 Cr.L.J. 1718 (S.C.); 1976 Cr.L.J. 1548 (S.C.); 1972 Cr.L.J. 828 (S.C.); 1958 Cr.L.J. 106 (S.C.); (1948) 49 Cr.L.J. 140 (All.); (1789) 1 Leach 500, Rel. on]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 312 (All.) (D.B.).

Dying declarations are important pieces of evidence, as they are made under a sense of impending death, concerning circumstances with regard to which the deceased is not likely to be mistaken. It is wrong to think that a dying declaration becomes less credible, merely because a number of persons are named as culprits. It is unsafe to found a conviction solely upon a dying declaration; unlike the evidence of an accomplice, a dying declaration is not tainted, nevertheless, it is a rule of prudence that to found a conviction upon it, a dying declaration should be corroborated in material particulars. This rule of prudence, however, does not affect the law of the matter, namely, that a dying declaration may well be the sole basis of a conviction. The Court must bear in mind the declarant's power of observation and such opportunity as he had of seeing his assailants and whether his capacity to remember the facts stated remained unimpaired at the time of the declaration. Evidence of enmity furnishes a motive for the crime as well as a motive for falsely implicating the accused persons; it is in such state of things that the Court requires strong corroboration as to the identity of the assailants before convicting the accused solely upon the dying declaration.

Where the deceased before making his dying declaration had a talk with his partymen, it was held that it was quite possible that the dying declaration, implicating many persons belonging to opposite party might be an inducted or prompted one and, hence, could not form the sole basis for the conviction of all the accused persons: (1962) 4 Ori.J.D. 17.

It is well settled law that the statement of a deceased person to be admissible in evidence as a dying declaration under S. 32(1) must satisfy two tests; firstly, it must refer to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted into his death, and secondly, it could be admitted in evidence in those cases only in which the cause of that person's death comes into question: 1973 Cur.L.J. 276: (1973) 75 Punj.L.R. 521.

The last statement of the deceased may very well be taken as admissible under S. 32(1) inasmuch as it is a statement made by a person as to the cause of his death, or the circumstances which resulted in his death, and much more so when the cause of that person's death is in issue; the law is clear that even on an uncorroborated dying declaration, if otherwise believable, a conviction can be sustained: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 1379.

A dying declaration, like any other piece of evidence, is to be appraised in the context of its surrounding circumstances and as per the rules of probative weight; the Court must consider whether the dying man had the opportunity to identify the accused, whether his faculty to recollect the facts was impaired, whether he was consistent in his version where he had, apart from his recorded statement, made several other declarations, whether the declaration was made at the earliest opportunity, and whether he was tutored by interested persons: (1977) 1 S.C.C. 762: 1977 S.C.C. (Cr.) 181; 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 183 (Del.) (D.B.).

It is well settled that dying declarations are admissible on the principle of necessity; an exception to the general rule forbiding hearsay evidence, they are made admissible because a dying person will not falsely implicate an innocent person; the requirement of oath and cross-examination of the dying person is dispensed with; to base conviction solely on the basis of a dying declaration, it must be shown that the deceased had the opportunity to see and identify the accused and the declaration should be thoroughly reliable and free from blemish and that the declaration was voluntary, uninfluenced by any tutoring and was made when he was in a fit state of mind; a dying declaration is an independent piece of evidence like any other evidence—neither extra strong nor extra weak; it can sustain conviction if otherwise true or reliable even without corroboration: (1991) 2 Hindu L.R. 71: (1991-1) 39 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 1 : (1991-1) 32 Guj.L.R. 125: (1991) 1 Crimes 349 (S.C.).

Dying declaration can be made a basis of conviction only if it is satisfactorily established that the victim had all the opportunity to observe the incident and identify his assailants: 1975 Cr.L.J. 285: (1975) 1 Karn.L.J. 193: 1975 M.L.J. (Cr.) 132: I.L.R. (1975) Karn. 355 (D.B.).

A dying declaration made by the victim in a fit mental condition and on the verge of death has a special sanctity; at that solemn moment, a person is most unlikely to make an untrue statement; the shadow of impending death is itself the guarantee of the truth of his declaration as to the causes or circumstances leading to his death; a dying declaration is almost sacrosanct: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 511 (S.C.).

The sanctity of a dying declaration is embodied in the maxim nemo moviturous procoumitus mentire, meaning that a man will not meet his maker with lie in his mouth. As Woodroffe and Amir Ali say, when a man is dying, the grave position in which he is placed is held by law to be a sufficient ground for his veracity, and, therefore, the tests of oath and cross-examination are dispensed with: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Pat.) (D.B.).

The victim of the assault is indeed its principal eye-witness; with death hovering around, truth sits on his tongue; he feels like a conscientious and virtuous man under oath; merely because the accused will be handicapped in testing the truth of the declaration by cross-examining the dying man is no ground to exclude the dying declaration from evidence in the case; it would certainly defeat the ends of justice: (1973) 75 Punj.L.R. 801 (D.B.).

The shadow of immediate death is the best guarantee of the truth of the statement made by a dying person regarding the cause and circumstances leading to his death which are absolutely fresh in his mind or are untainted or discoloured by any other consideration except speaking the truth and, therefore, special sanctity should be attached to a dying declaration: 1985 Cr.L.R. 675 (Raj.).

A dying declaration whether oral or written is a solemn and important statement since it comes from a person at a time when he is apprehending death and, therefore normally, not expected to lie: (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 33.

A dying declaration, oral or recorded, is made by a person not alive to admit or deny having made it, held, it is clearly necessary to scrutinise all such statements, if there are more than one, to find out whether they are substantially consistent. Where such a statement was found on scrutiny to be voluntary, without tutoring or concoction, it may be acted upon: for a dying person on the threshold of death is not expected to die with a lie on his lips; a dying declaration has a special sanctity unless variations therein amount to contradictions and its truthfulness becomes doubtful: 1991 Cr.L.J. 1636 (Bom.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration is undoubtedly admissible under S. 32; not capable of being subjected to cross-examination, the Courts must apply to it strictest scrutiny and the closest circumspection before acting upon it. While great solemnity and sanctity is attached to it as a man on the verge of death is not likely to tell lies or to concoct a falsehood to implicate an innocent person, yet such a statement may result from tutoring or prompting or a figment of his imagination. The Court, therefore, must satisfy itself that the deceased was in a fit state of mind to make the statement after he had a clear opportunity to observe and identify his assailants and that he was making the statement without any influence or rancour; once it finds the dying declaration to be true and voluntary, it can enter conviction even without further corroboration: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1994: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1548: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 618; A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 305: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1093 (F.B.); (1983) 3 Crimes 514 (Raj.); (1984) 3 Crimes 136 (All.): (1984) 2 Crimes 361: 1985 Cr.L.J. 248: (1984) 1 Ori.L.R. 756; (1986) 3 Crimes 106 (Del.); (1987) 3 Crimes 115 (Gau.); 1988 Cr.L.J. 1614 (Cal.) (D.B.); 1989 Cr.L.J. 193: (1989) B.B.C.J. (H.C) 422(Pat.); (1990) 2 Crimes 301 (Raj.); 1990 Cr.L.J. 119 (All.) (D.B.); 1993 Cr.L.J. 2696 (Raj.) (D.B.).

The danger of wrong identification has to be borne in mind in dealing with what are called dying declarations. Before acting on it the Court will apply to it every test of its genuineness and good faith which it is possible in the circumstances of the case to apply. Special caution is needed in dealing with a dying declaration when the prosecution evidence shows signs of attempt to improve and develop it at successive stages, or when there is serious room for doubt as to whether the contents of the dying statement include matter suggested to the deceased by the outsiders: 194 I.C. 186: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 409.

Before a conviction can be made on a dying declaration, the Court must be fully satisfied that the declaration is reliable in the sense that it was actually made by the deceased when fully possessed of the power to understand the implication of her statement and the same was made without any exterior influence or ulterior motive. It has further to be proved that the said declaration reflects a true version: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 542: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 10 (D.B); (1993) 3 Crimes 709 (Del.).

Where the injuries inflicted were grave, the night was foggy, the deceased had mentioned only the name of the assailant, and there was another relation of the convict with the same name in the area, held, the convict was not conclusively connected with the murder: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1110 (Gau.) (D.B.)

Where the dying declaration did not identify the accused beyond reasonable doubt, held, the accused is liable to be acquitted: (1992) 1 Crimes 1167: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2644: 1991 C.Cr.L.R. 297: (1991-92) 96 Cal.W.N. 233 (D.B.).

A dying declaration made at the time when a person is in a precarious condition does not cease to be such and become inadmissible under S. 32 merely because the declarant happens to linger for a few days more: 113 I.C. 177: A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 64.

6. "Statement as to cause of death or as to any circumstances of transaction which resulted in his death".—S. 32(1) takes in its ambit not only the statement as to the cause of the declarant's death, but also the statement "as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death." The whole statement of a person in regard to the entire transaction which resulted in the death of that person becomes admissible under S. 32(1) in any case where the cause of that person's death comes into question: (1980) 2 An.W.R. (N.R.C.) 34 (D.B.).

The dying declaration is the statement made by person as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death and such details which fall outside the ambit of this are not strictly within the permissible limits laid down by S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act and unless absolutely necessary to make a statement coherent or complete should not be included in the statement. In the Punjab no rules have been made in regard to the recording of dying declaration which has been done in several others States. It would be desirable if some such rules were framed and included in the Rules and Orders made by the High Court for the guidance of persons recording dying declarations. The authenticity of the dying declaration has to be judged in accordance with the circumstances of each case depending upon many factors which would vary with each case but those recording such statements would be well advised to keep in view the fact that the object of a dying declaration is to get from the person making the statement the cause of death or the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in death: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 904: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1459.

The Indian law on the nature and scope of a dying declaration is distinctly different from the English law where only the statements which directly relate to the cause of death are admissible: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1622: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 208: (1984) 4 S.C.C. 116: 1984 Cr.L.J. 1738.

The statements of the deceased which are admitted under S. 32(1) admittedly must be statements of circumstances intimately and inextricably connected with the transaction resulting in death. The date or dates on which the statements were made from the viewpoint of admissibility must be judged in the light of their link with the transaction that resulted in death: (1978-79) 83 Cal.W.N. 248: (1979) 1 Cal.L.J. 119 (D.B.).

The statement of a person, who subsequently dies, as to the circumstances resulting in his death is admissible under S. 32 (1): A.I.R. 1950 Trav.-Co. 41: 51 Cr.L.J. 988.

The test of relevancy of statement under S. 32(1) is not what the final finding in the case is but whether the cause of the death of the person making the statements comes into question in the case. The expression "any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death" is wider in scope than the expression "the cause of his death". In other words sub-S. (1) of S. 32 refers to two kinds of statements—(1) when the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or (2) when the statement is made by a person as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. The words "resulted in his death" do not mean "caused his death": 1952 B.L.J.R. 333: A.I.R. 1953 Pat. 354; (1959) 1 M.L.J. 246: 1959 M.L.J. (Cr.) 245.

'Circumstances of the transaction' is a phrase no doubt that conveys some limitations. It is not as broad as the analogous use in 'circumstantial evidence' which includes evidence of all relevant facts. It is on the other hand narrower than 'res gestae'. Circumstances must have some proximate relation to the actual occurrence and must be of the transaction which resulted in the death of the declarant. It is not necessary that there should be a known transaction other than that the death of the declarant has ultimately been caused, for the condition of the admissibility, of the evidence is that "the cause of the (the declarant's) death had come into question": (1980) 17 Del.L.T. 431 (D.B.). See also 1989 C.Cr.L.R. 25: (1988-89) 93 Cal.W.N. 899.

It is well-settled that declarations are admissible only in so far as it points directly to the fact constituting the res gestae of the homicide; that is to say the act of killing and to the circumstances immediately attendant thereon like threats. Acts, declarations and incidents which constitute or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue are admissible for or against either party as forming parts of res gestae. The statement made by witnesses for the prosecution that the deceased told them that he had brought the vessels and arrack of the accused a little while ago would afford a motive for the accused to commit the crime and is admissible under Ss. 8 and 32(1) of the Evidence Act: (1959) 1 M.L.J. 246: 1959 M.L.J. (Cr.) 245.

A statement falling under S. 32(1) may be made before the cause of death has arisen or before the deceased has any reason to anticipate being killed. A statement by the deceased, that he was proceeding to the spot where in fact he was killed later, or as to his reasons for so proceeding or that he had been invited by a particular person to meet him, or that he was going to such person would each of them be circumstances of the transaction, and would be so whether the person was unknown, or was not the person accused. Such a statement might indeed be exculpatory of the person accused. The "circumstances of the transaction" must have some proximate relation to the actual occurrence, though, as for instance in a case of prolonged poisoning, they may be related to dates at a considerable distance from the date of the actual fatal dose. The "circumstances" are of the transaction which resulted in the death of the declarant: 66 I.A. 66: I.L.R. 18 Pat. 234: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 473: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 47: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 756 (P.C.).

Where a person had stated that he was proceeding to meet a particular person at a particular place where his dead body was found, held, it was a circumstance of the transaction resulting in his death; his statement fell under S. 32(1): 1975 Raj.L.W. 286 (D.B.).

Just a day before the murder, the deceased had made a statement to one of the witnesses for the prosecution that the deceased had been to jungle in the company of the accused in order to procure certain herb to attract the husband of the deceased and that as the accused could not get the final medicine on that day, she promised the deceased to procure the same, on the next day. On the next day, the deceased was found in the jungle in an injured condition which resulted in her death.

Held, that the statement was admissible in evidence under S. 32(1) as it disclosed the circumstances under which the deceased was seriously injured ultimately resulting in her death: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 317: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 752: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 33.

Under S. 32(1) the statement of a deceased person will not be admissible unless it relates to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 423: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 465. See also (1940) 2 M.L.J. 715.

The expression 'circumstances of transaction which resulted in death' in S. 32(1) means only such facts or series of facts which have a direct or organic relation to death; they must have some proximate relation to the actual occurrence. Circumstantial evidence of the transaction is different from the circumstances of the transaction itself. Thus, a statement merely suggesting motive cannot be admitted in evidence unless it is intimately connected with the transaction itself as a circumstance; statements made by the deceased long before the incident suggesting motive are not admissible. [A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 136; A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 47, Foll.]: 1974 M.P.L.J. 429 (D.B.).

Statements by deceased as to the cause of his death are admissible, not only as against the person who actually caused the death of the deponent, but also against other persons concerned in the transaction which resulted in the deponent's death in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question: 162 I.C. 491: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 187.

S. 32(1) does not permit the reception in evidence of all such statements of a dead person as may relate to matters having a bearing howsoever remote on the cause or the circumstances of his death. Under the section are admissible only such statements as relate to matters so closely connected with the events which resulted in his death that they may be said to relate to circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death.

The alleged statement was made more than ten years before the death of the maker and its bearing in the present case was not that it related to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death but it afforded proof of the background of those embittered relations between the accused on the one side and the deceased on the other which ultimately led to the latter's murder.

Held, that the statement was clearly outside the purview of S. 32(1) and was not receivable in evidence: 1966 Cr.L.J. 369: A.I.R. 1966 All. 142.

Where the statement in question was said to have been made months before the alleged murder. Held, that it could hardly come within terms of S. 32: 66 Cal.L.J. 196: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 125. Dying declaration of accused recorded by Magistrate—Declaration containing statement amounting to confession—Declaration becoming inadmissible in evidence—Admissibility in evidence of declaration as confession. See A.I.R. 1954 All. 633: 1953 All.L.J. 614.

The test of the relevancy of the statement under S. 32 (1) is not what the final finding in the case is, but whether the cause of death of the person making the statement comes into question in the case. The words 'resulted in his death' do not mean 'caused his death'. Thus, it is well settled that declarations are admissible only in so far as they point directly to the fact constituting res gestae of homicide: that is to say, to the acts of killing and the circumstances immediately attendant thereon like threats and difficulties, acts and declarations and incidents which constitute or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue admissible for or against either party as forming part of the res gestae.

Held, in a murder case, that the statement of the deceased heard by the prosecution witnesses stating that he should not be assaulted and he would produce his brother who was wanted by the accused, the assaulting party was a circumstance which had some proximate relation to his death and was clearly relevant under S. 32(1): I.L.R. (1962) Cut. 582: 28 Cut.L.T. 398: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 377.

The expression 'any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death', in S. 32(1) is wider in scope than the expression 'the cause of his death'. The words 'resulted in his death' do not mean 'caused his death'. Thus, where a girl, after being subjected to rape, told her mother that she was raped by the two accused and after that a stick was inserted in her private part and after about 10 days she died in the hospital due to profuse bleeding from her private part, held, looking to the proximity of relationship to the actual occurrence and the alleged dying declaration, the statement attributed to the deceased as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death were admissible, as in this case, the cause of her death came into question: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1129 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased's modesty was outraged by the two accused who also intimidated her that she would be defamed in society and after a short interval she immolated herself, held, her statement before her death narrating the incident which drove her to suicidal was admissible as a dying declaration; conviction could be based on it: 1994 Cr.L.J. 767: 1993 M.P.L.J. 729.

Where a woman raped made a statement to her relative shortly after and committed suicide about three days after the occurrence, rape not being the cause of her death, her statement is not admissible under S. 32(1): 1930 Mad.W.N. 702: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 233.

The statement recorded by the Executive Magistrate of a witness does not amount to dying declaration under S. 32(1), if it is not proved that the witness died due to the cause or circumstances mentioned therein. If the maker of the statement is not proved to have died as a result of the injuries received in the incident, the statement cannot be said to be the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 900, Rel. on]: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.).

Sub-section (1) of S. 32 makes a statement of a person who has died relevant only when that statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question. When the deceased is not proved to have died as a result of injuries received by him in the incident where the deceased is alleged to have been killed, his statement relating to that incident cannot be said to be the statement as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death: (1964) 1 S.C.R. 688: I.L.R. (1963) 2 All. 708: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 900; (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 82.

Where the medical evidence clearly showed that the injured did not die of the stabbing injuries inflicted upon her, held, her statements made to her daughter or neighbours or even the Doctor and the Magistrate as regards the stabbing were not dying declarations; they were not admissible under S. 32: (1984-2) 25 Guj.L.R. 900.

Statement must relate to the injuries by which death was caused, sub-Cl. (1) applies to the class of statement made by a dying declaration as to the injuries which have brought him or her to that condition, or the circumstances under which those injuries came to be inflicted: I.L.R. 4 Lah. 481: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 253; A.I.R. 1929 Sind 250. See also 29 Nag.L.R. 251: A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 136.

Where direct and organic relationship between the death and the transaction which resulted in death is established, second part of S. 32(1) is attracted; the words 'which resulted in his death' are not synonymous with the 'cause of his death' appearing in the first part; obviously, the words resulting in death have a wider scope. Thus, where the injuries may not have caused the death, but it occurred due to septicaemia arising out of post-operative complications which but for the injuries would not have arisen; thus, the transaction's starting part was sustaining injuries and death was their culmination: 1988 Mah.L.J. 147: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 234 (D.B.).

If the injuries borne by the deceased had no connection with the cause of death then his dying declaration will lose the protection of S. 32: (1994-1) 14 Guj.L.H. 451: 1994 Cr.L.R. 246.

Where the statement of the victim of the assault was recorded in the Police Station diary the same day and he died later on due to infection, probably tetanus, developed in his wounds, held, the transaction of injuries inflicted and infection resulting in death is a single transaction; the statement is admissible under S. 32(1): 1991 Cr.L.J. 599 (Ori.). See however 1994 M.P.L.J. 862: 1995 Cr.L.J. 17 (D.B.) [Where as per autopsy report the murdered wife had suffered only one injury over the anterior mastoid and her death was caused by tetanus due to infection developed by the wound, held, the death being not attributable to probable causes of the injury, the deceased's declaration did not amount to a statement as to the cause of or circumstances resulting in her death; conviction set aside.]

Where the victim was stabbed in the abdomen and developed peritonitis and empyema which resulted in his death within a week, held, his death being a natural consequence of the injuries, his statement recorded as to the injuries sustained and other circumstances before death is to be taken as a dying declaration: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 479 (D.B.).

Injuries inflicted by the accused on the person of the deceased resulting in fracture of his ribs—Deceased when questioned, soon after, stating that it was the accused who inflicted injuries—Doctor's evidence establishing that the injuries to the ribs were a contributing factor to the death—Statement of the deceased is relevant under S. 32(1) of the Act as it was one made by a person who subsequently died and obviously related to the circumstances of the transaction which ultimately resulted in his death—It is also admissible under S. 6 of the Act, as it was made by the deceased very shortly after he sustained the injuries: I.L.R. (1964) 16 Assam 67: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 393: A.I.R. 1964 Assam 53.

In the absence of evidence to show that the acid burns suffered by the deceased indeed resulted in his death nearly 2 months and 23 days thereafter, held, the statements made by him immediately after the burns to a Magistrate or a Police Head Constable are not admissible under S. 32(1): 1971 M.L.J. (Cr.) 392: (1971) 1 An.W.R. 13.

Where though the deceased spoke about the assault by the accused, there was no evidence regarding any thigh injury caused by him and the deceased died due to non-healing of wound on thigh, held, deceased's dying declaration was not admissible in evidence. [(1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 727 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 244 (Ori.).

Evidence Act makes dying declarations relevant facts as written statements of deceased or written records of verbal statements which the deceased makes and which becomes substantive evidence of the cause of deceased's death: 31 I.C. 359: 16 Cr.L.J. 759 (M.). See also 160 I.C. 597: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 42.

The statement of the deceased that he was going to the accused to release his cow which the accused had confined, made almost immediately preceding the quarrel over the recovery of the cow during the course of which the deceased had sustained an injury from the accused resulting in his death is admissible in evidence under S. 32(1) as it relates to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 160: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 379.

Statement made by the deceased to her mother in the evening that he had dispute with the three accused earlier in the day, held, would be relevant when the cause of his death comes into question: (1971) 73 Punj.L.R. 11 (S.N.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased before going for a particular job told his father that he was being sent to spray insecticides and he died due to poisonous chemicals, held, his statement as to the cause of death was admissible: 1984 All.Cr.L.J. 233.

Statement of the deceased to a witness in the previous evening regarding presence of accused husband in the house is admissible under S. 32(1) since it relates to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death: (1986-87) 91 Cal.W.N. 561 (D.B.).

A statement of a rumour by the deceased who was murdered that a certain amount was offered by the accused for the head of the deceased, is hearsay of the very worst type, and cannot implicate the accused in the offence. Such statement is not admissible as a dying declaration. It is not, and cannot be a statement made by the person as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction resulted in his death: 1952 Cr.L.J. 623: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 231.

A complaint in writing, made to the Police by a person who died sometime thereafter, expressing apprehension of death at the hands of certain persons, is admissible in evidence under S. 32(1) and (8), when the person whose conduct is the source of the apprehension is charged with the offence of murder of the person making the complaint: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1764 (Punj.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased within three days prior to her death had told her daughter that she had a property dispute with her son, who was eventually prosecuted for killing his mother by strangulating her; the prosecution relied upon the deceased's statement about the property dispute with the accused as motive for the murder; held, the motive factor present in the deceased's statement to her daughter cannot be discarded as a remote circumstance; it is intimately connected with the circumstances of the occurrence; the circumstances specifically narrated have direct and proximate bearing on the causes which ultimately resulted in the murder; it is not necessary that the deceased, while making the statement, must have an apprehension of being killed for that motive: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1155: (1994) 1 Ker.L.J. 559 (D.B.).

Where the Court concluded that the death of a Sub-Inspector in his seat at the Police Station by bullets could have been homicidal and at the hands of his subordinates, yet it could not rule out the theory of suicide with reasonable certainty, and the other circumstance indicating that the deceased could not have committed the suicide because, as deposed to by his wife, the deceased while leaving for his duty in the morning had asked her to await him for lunch, and he had no reason to feel depressed, held, though the wife's deposition was certainly a 'circumstance' even if distant in time, it was not a circumstance of the transaction of his death; it was, therefore, not relevant under S. 32(1). However, as S. 32 does not control Ss. 6, 11, and 14, the wife's deposition is certainly admissible under these sections that the deceased had no intention at that time to commit the suicide, though it does not mean that he could not have changed his mind afterwards: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2860 (Ker.) (F.B.).

The accused were charged under S. 330, I.P.Code, with having, for the purpose of extorting a confession, caused hurt, to one R, who committed suicide owing to the ill-treatment: Held, that ill-treatment was the cause though not the direct cause of the suicide and although the accused were not legally responsible for the suicide, the whole affair, ill-treatment and subsequent suicide, being one transaction the statement of the deceased was admissible under S. 32(1): 20 P.R. 1916 (Cr.): 35 I.C. 998.

Where the deceased being in the Police lock-up made a statement to a person, who saw him bleeding profusely and marks of hitting with rods and burning by cigarettes ends on the body of the deceased, that he was assaulted by the Police, held, as the statement of the deceased was with regard to the cause of his death made shortly before his death, it was clearly admissible as dying declaration under S. 32(1): 1990 Cr.L.J. 2093 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where it was the case of the prosecution that the accused wanted to do away with the deceased because of her pregnancy through him: Held, that the statement of the deceased to the witnesses of her condition and of the person responsible for it would be admissible under S. 32(1) as it was a circumstance which had some proximate relation to her death: 1954 Ker.L.T. 801: A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 87.

Statement "as to circumstances of the transaction which resulted in death"—Murder to avoid scandal from pregnancy of deceased by accused—Her statement before death about her pregnancy is covered by Cl. (1): 1969 All. Cr.R. 556: 1970 All.L.J. 149: 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 865.

Deceased widow asking for Police protection on account of apprehension of trouble from her brothers-in-law at the time of undertaking sowing operation—Two months later deceased found murdered—Her application for Police protection held admissible under S. 32(1): (1970) 72 Bom.L.R. 405: 1970 Mah.L.J. 634: A.I.R. 1970 Bom. 438.

Ss. 32(1), 9, 7, 8, 11, 112, 60, 14, 151 and 145—'Statement of person as to cause of his death or as to any circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death'—Conviction based on identification—It is not every statement of a relevant fact made by a person who is dead that is itself made relevant: I.L.R. (1967) 2 Ker. 21: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 569: 1967 Ker.L.T. 466.

Where the victim stated in the ejahar that he could recognise the accused as one of the dacoits but without any statement as to the cause of death and the victim did not say anything before the Police or the public about his recognising the culprits and he died before the trial could commence, held, the ejahar, uncorroborated, was no substantive evidence: 1982 Cr.L.J. 572 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Voluminous evidence in the form of letters sent by deceased to her brothers expressing her plight, viz., constant torture, beating, non-supply of food and other necessities, which showed that it ultimately resulted in her death—Held, statements and letters written by the deceased being directly connected with or related to her death and which revealed a tell-tale story, same clearly fell within the four corners of S. 32 and, therefore, admissible: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3580 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where deceased during her visits to her parental place spoke about the harassment/cruelty to her and about the demands for dowry and ultimately she died by drowning in a well, held, such statements were admissible under S. 32 (1): 1992 Cr.L.J. 2455: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 196 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where the accused-husband was a Police Officer and the deceased-wife did not implicate him and his relatives in her dying declaration, however, there was documentary evidence in the shape of letters written over a period of time by her stating her intention to commit suicide for reasons of ill treatment and cruelty to which he was subjected by the accused, held, her dying declaration could not be said to be destructive of the other evidence; non-implication in dying declaration could be due to the fact that she was virtually terrified of her husband and he did make full use of his position as a Police Officer vis-a-vis the wife and her relatives: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1134: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 84 (D.B.).

Where the wife, tortured and burnt to death by her husband and in-laws for more dowry, had been writing to her parents about the maltreatment and torture she was being subjected to after the commencement of torture, held, the letters had direct nexus with the accused's design to administer to the victim slow and steady mental and physical torture to bring about her ultimate death; the earlier incidents were, even if somewhat remote in time, nevertheless parts of the same transaction; the letters are admissible under S. 32(1): 1981 Cr.L.J. 1373 (Punj.) (D.B.).

Where in a case for abetment to suicide, the deceased's letters to her relatives and friends written during the last two years of her life were sought to be proved as evidence of systematic ill-treatment, cruelty and instigation, held, the letters constituted a statement of relevant facts by a dead person as to the circumstances resulting into her death where the fact in issue is the cause of her death; the letters are relevant though not sufficient in the absence of proof of incitement to commit the suicide; whether the correspondence is proximate in time or not is of little importance: (1976-77) 81 Cal.W.N. 713 (D.B.).

Where the alleged statements made six months before the actual date of occurrence by the deceased to her cousin-brother about the torture by her husband-the accused, were vague to the extreme and did not disclose overt acts of such nature which were likely to drive the deceased to commit suicide or even endanger her life or limb and further the alleged circumstances had no proximate relation to the actual occurrence, namely, suicide, held, the alleged statements were not admissible under S. 32(1): 1992 Cr.L.J. 1017 (Cal.) (D.B.). See also 1982 M.P.W.N. 375.

7. Dying declaration—Evidentiary value.—It is safer to rely on the dying declaration rather than on the first information report, for a great sanctity is attached to the former as it is expected that the person who is on the verge of death will tell the truth: 1938 O.W.N. 1103: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 33.

There is one weakness in a dying declaration that the accused had no chance to cross-examine the deceased, and, therefore, it cannot be given the same value as a statement which is given in the Court: 1956 Raj. L.W. 178: 1957 Cr.L.J. 240. Evidence recorded under S. 512(1), Cr.P.Code—Test of credibility—Dying declaration—Difference. See A.I.R. 1958 All. 214.

The dying declaration is not by any means so important for the purpose of the prosecution when apart from it there is the evidence of four eye-witnesses that it was the accused who entered the house and attacked the deceased: 1966 Cr.L.J. 1012 (2): A.I.R. 1966 Madh. Pra. 261.

It is true that a dying declaration cannot be contradicted by reference to extraneous evidence of witnesses. It has to stand by itself or not at all. The witnesses may exaggerate the facts or introduce fresh matter in evidence in order to aggravate the offence. However, that would not in any way militate against the reliability of the dying declaration of the deceased. There is no rule of law permitting the dying declaration being tested on the crucible of evidence of witnesses; indeed such a doctrine would violate the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence, which is that the evidence in the nature of the dying declaration or otherwise has to be judged on its own in the light of the surrounding circumstances: 1967 All.W.R. (H.C.) 345: 1968 Cr.L.J. 227: A.I.R. 1968 All. 83.

Under ordinary circumstances a dying declaration has considerable evidential value, but in cases where the deceased was himself the aggressor and there was sufficient lapse of time between the occurrence and recording of his statement the dying declaration loses its value: 1946 M.L.R. 27 (Cr.).

A dying declaration which contradicts itself in its various parts is inadmissible. Even if it is admissible its evidentiary value is negligible: 108 I.C. 526: 28 Cr.L.J. 418.

It is not safe to base a conviction on the dying declaration of the deceased, when the other evidence in the case is tainted and has to be rejected: 150 I.C. 819: 11 O.W.N. 851: A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 405. See also 164 I.C. 139: 37 Cr.L.J. 990: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 324; 176 I.C. 683: A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 282.

Dying declarations no doubt are important pieces of evidence, as they are made under a sense of impending death, concerning circumstances with regard to which the deceased is not likely to be mistaken. A dying person would invariably tell the name or names of the actual culprits if he knows them. When only one person is pointed out, by the dying person, to have caused his death the statement will ordinarily be entitled to great truth unless of course there are circumstances to cast doubt on the same. Where the Judge pointed out that the deceased was accompanied by several persons who used to talk to him on their way to the hospital and, therefore, it was quite possible that the dying declaration implicating many persons might be an induced or prompted one. Held, that that was a matter of opinion under the circumstances of the case. Therefore, merely because that the Judge had been influenced by the statement made by a certain witness which itself was inadmissible could not be a sufficient ground to interfere with his finding: 1958 An.L.T. 580: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1118: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 571.

A dying declaration may well be the sole basis of a conviction. A dying declaration is not upon oath, is not made in the presence of the person affected, and is not tested by cross-examination. Again, the Court must consider whether the declaration was made at the earliest opportunity and to a proper person and whether it was recorded in a manner which reflected what the declarant had in fact said. The Court must also bear in mind the declarant's powers of observations such opportunity as he had of seeing his assailants and whether his capacity to remember the facts stated remained unimpaired at the time of the declaration. If the Court, after taking everything into consideration, is convinced that the declaration is true, it is its duty to convict, notwithstanding that there is no corroboration: 1960 Cr.L.J. 1075: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 509.

No doubt a dying declaration has to be subjected to a very close scrutiny bearing in mind that the statement has been made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity of testing the truth of the version. It is also to be seen whether the statement was the result of tutoring by interested persons. But when the Court after considering the evidence in the case comes to the conclusion that the dying declaration is the truthful version as to the circumstances of the death and the identity of the assailant, the dying declaration has to be accepted: 1960 Ker.L.T. 435: 1960 Ker.L.J. 377.

Before the aid of S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act can be availed of, the prosecution has to establish that the statement in the dying declaration is made by a person who is dead as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. Thus, the burden of establishing the requirements of S. 32 is on the prosecution: 1962 M.L.J. (Cr.) 25; (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 619: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 82.

A dying declaration cannot be relied upon when it does not record what deceased himself wanted to say, but records what he says on the suggestions of other persons: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 953: (1971) 1 S.C.C. 513.

The non-mention of the making of a dying declaration in the F.I.R. is fatal to the prosecution case concerning the alleged dying declaration—However, a conviction on the sole basis of a dying declaration can be recorded in the absence of any factors militating against the truth of said dying declaration: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1921 (Gau.) (D.B.).

The recording of a dying declaration is a grace and solemn proceeding. The proceeding should be so conducted that the declarant is as free from personal influence in making his declaration as he would be if he were giving evidence in a Court of law: 152 I.C. 741: A.I.R. 1934 All. 908. The dying declaration being an important piece of evidence must be as exact and full as possible: 15 I.C. 308; 22 M.L.J. 453. See also A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 12; I.L.R. 5 Lah. 205: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 581; I.L.R. 16 Pat. 593: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 52; 1937 Mad.W.N. 333.

A dying declaration which records every word of a dying man unattended by interested person is a most valuable evidence: 1995 Cr.L.J. 312 (All.) (D.B.).

Where a dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate was impeached as untruthful as containing alterations (scoring out or overwriting at two places which are neither very material nor change the text), held, that does not by itself render it untrue or lacking in veracity; rather it lends to the declaration more probative value; for if the Magistrate had tried to forge the statement, he could have written it afresh on another paper to avoid the mistakes: 1988 Mah.L.J. 641.

A dying declaration can be used as evidence even though the accused is not charged with the offence of homicide: I.L.R. 6 Pat. 747: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 162.

Sometimes, attempts have been made to equate a dying declaration with the evidence of an accomplice or the evidence furnished by a confession as against the maker, if it is retracted, and as against others, even though not retracted. But it is not right in principle to do so. Though under S. 133 of the Evidence Act, it is not illegal to convict a person on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Illustration (b) to S. 114 of the Act, lays down as a rule of prudence based on experience, that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless his evidence is corroborated in material particulars and this has now been accepted as a rule of law. The same cannot be said of a dying declaration because a dying declaration may not, unlike a confession, or the testimony of an approver, come from a tainted source. Generally speaking, the maker of a dying declaration cannot be tarnished with the same brush as the maker of a confession or an approver: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 100.

8. Dying declaration—Whether requires corroboration.—It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated; each case must be determined on its own facts keeping in view the circumstances in which the dying declaration was made; it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that a dying declaration is a weaker kind of evidence than other pieces of evidence; a dying declaration stands on the same footing as another piece of evidence and has to be judged in the light of surrounding circumstances and with reference to the principles governing the weighing of evidence; a dying declaration which has been recorded by a competent Magistrate in the proper manner, that is to say, in the form of questions and answers, and, as far as practicable; in the words of the maker of the declaration, stands on much higher footing than a dying declaration which depends upon oral testimony which may suffer from all the infirmities of human memory and human character, and in order to test the reliability of a dying declaration, the Court has to keep in view the circumstances like the opportunity of the dying man for observation whether the capacity of the man to remember the facts stated, had not been impaired at the time he was making the statement, by circumstances beyond his control; that the statement has been consistent throughout if he had several opportunities of making a dying declaration apart from the official record of it; and that the statement had been made at the earliest opportunity and was not the result of tutoring by interested parties. [(1940) 1 M.L.J. 124 (F.B.), Approved]: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 100; A.I.R. 1966 Manipur 12; 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 427: (1969) 1 An.W.R. 519; 1979 Cr.L.R. 493 (Raj.).

It is not an absolute rule of law that in every case corroboration must be sought for the dying declaration irrespective of the circumstances of the case. If the Court after taking into consideration all the factors feels convinced that the statement is true, it could convict the accused although there is no corroboration in the true sense: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 460: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 187; 1977 Cr.L.R. 402 (Raj.).

There is nothing in law to prevent the Court from regarding a dying declaration as sufficient to justify a conviction where the Court is entirely satisfied with regard to its truth, though there is no corroboration: I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 587; I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 298: A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 155.

Dying declaration—Reliability—To pass the test of reliability dying declaration has to be subjected to very close scrutiny—Once the Court has come to conclusion that it was true, there is no question of further corroboration: 1969 Raj.L.W. 610: I.L.R. (1969) 19 Raj. 626: A.I.R. 1970 Raj. 60.

A dying declaration may take the form of an F.I.R. and may be taken as a piece of substantive evidence under S. 32 (1) as a statement as to the cause of the informant's death. In order to pass the test of reliability, a dying declaration has to be subjected to a very close scrutiny keeping in view the fact that the statement has been made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity of testing the veracity of the statement by cross-examination. But once the Court has come to the conclusion that the dying declaration was a truthful version as to the circumstances of the death of the victim, there is no question of further corroboration. If on the other hand, the Court after examining a dying declaration in all its aspects and testing its veracity has come to the conclusion that it is not reliable by itself and that it suffers from an infirmity, then without corroboration it cannot form the basis of conviction. Thus the necessity for corroboration arises not from any inherent weakness of the dying declaration as a piece of evidence, but from the fact that the Court in a given case has come to the conclusion that that particular dying declaration was not free from infirmities. [Observations in A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 420, held to be in the nature of obiter]: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 100; (1990-2) 38 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 26.

Held, on evidence, that the dying declaration of the deceased represented the truthful version of the incident and it also got further corroboration from the recoveries and other circumstances. Thus, there was no legal bar to base a conviction on such a statement which was admissible under S. 32 (1) even without any independent corroboration: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 443: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 461; 1975 All.W.C. 34 (D.B.).

It is now well settled that it is neither a rule of law nor of prudence that a dying declaration requires corroboration before a conviction can be based thereon. The necessity for corroboration in certain cases arises not from any inherent weakness of a dying declaration as a piece of evidence but from the fact that it was tainted and not free from infirmity. Great value is generally attached to a statement which has been consistent throughout when the deceased had several opportunities of making a dying declaration, and the statement was made at the earliest opportunity and was not the result of tutoring by the interested parties. The dying declaration of a deceased husband cannot be said to have arisen from a tainted source so as to require corroboration where the evidence shows that though the husband and wife were having usual differences arising in married life and in conducting family affairs, there was no enmity between the two. It can itself constitute the basis for conviction provided the Court comes to the conclusion that the deceased died as a result of some poison administered to him by the accused in some eatable and version given by the deceased, that the accused gave chatni which tasted bitter whereafter he had vomiting on the next day, is a truthful one: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 321: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 38.

No rule of law or even of prudence enjoins that a reliable dying declaration cannot be acted upon unless it is corroborated: (1991-1) 32 Guj.L.R. 125: (1991) 1 Crimes 349: (1991) 2 Hindu L.R. 71: (1991-1) 39 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 1 (S.C.). A dying declaration if otherwise truthful, reliable and voluntary may alone sustain conviction for a dowry murder: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 1817: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2919: (1992) 2 An.W.R. 60: (1992) 2 S.C.C. 474: (1992) 1 Crimes 1180; (1988) 15 Cr.L.T. 450 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Law is well settled that the dying declaration, if true and reliable, can constitute the sole basis of the conviction: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 754 (D.B.); (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 619 (D.B.); I.L.R. (1971) 21 Raj. 541.

A dying declaration is relevant and material evidence in the prosecution of the assailants and a truthful and reliable dying declaration may form the sole basis of conviction, even though it is not corroborated. But the Court must be satisfied that the declaration is truthful. The reliability of the declaration should be subjected to a close scrutiny, considering that it was made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity to test its veracity by cross-examination. If the Court finds that the declaration is not wholly reliable and a material integral portion of the deceased's version of the entire occurrence is untrue the Court may, in all the circumstances of the case consider it unsafe to convict the accused on the basis of the declaration alone without further corroboration: 1968 All.L.J. 61; A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 939: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 510.

Held, on facts, that considering all the circumstances of the case, the dying declarations suffered from an infirmity and were not reliable by themselves and could not safely form the basis of the conviction of the accused without further corroboration. As no such corroboration was forthcoming in the case, the accused were given the benefit of doubt and were acquitted: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 510: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 939.

It is well settled that a dying declaration without any corroboration can solely form the basis of conviction, if it is reliable; in order to pass the test of reliability a declaration should be subjected to a very close scrutiny keeping in view the fact that the statement has been made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity of testing veracity of the statement by cross-examination. [A.I.R. 1958 S.C.

22, Foll.]: (1991) 4 Bom.C.R. 617 (D.B.); 1982 Cr.L.J. 400 (Gau.) (D.B.); 1982 Cr.L.J. 1163 (Ori.) (D.B.); 1982 All.W.C. 351: 1982 All.Cr.R. 197: 1982 All.L.J. 1027; 1982 Cr.L.J. 389; (1983) 2 Crimes 547 (P.&H.); (1985) 1 Crimes 1126 (All.); (1987) 3 Crimes 115 (Gau.); (1988) 1 Crimes 647 (Del.); 1989 C.Cr.L.R. 108 (Cal.); 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 191 (Cal.) (D.B.); (1990) 2 Crimes 301 (Raj.); (1983) 55 Cut.L.T. 145 [Unless one is certain about the exact words stated by the deceased, no reliance can be placed on verbal statements of witnesses and on such oral declaration made by the deceased].

A dying declaration found to be truthful and reliable and free from infirmities may be the sole basis for recording conviction; to discard it on flimsy and fanciful grounds would tantamount to wreaking gross injustice: (1992-1) 32 Guj.L.R. 646.

There is no rule of law prohibiting conviction solely on an uncorroborated dying declaration; corroboration is not meant to rectify inherent infirmities in the dying declaration as evidence; the corroboration is sought where a particular dying declaration is not free from some infirmities: (1974) 76 Punj.L.R. 57 (D.B.).

There is no legal bar to base a conviction for murder solely on the dying declaration if otherwise complete, categoric, true and reliable; not being evidence of an accomplice, it requires no corroboration; it is like any other piece of evidence to be appraised as such though it has to bear the Court's closest scrutiny and circumspection. The law would require corroboration only if the declaration is not reliable and suffers from any legal infirmity. [1958 Cr.L.J. 106 (S.C.); 1962 Cr.L.J. 479 (S.C.); 1970 Cr.L.J. 1415 (S.C.); A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1776: 1972 Cr.L.J. 828 and 1976 Cr.L.J. 1718 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1165 (Ker.) (D.B.); 1980 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 37; 1980 Raj.L.W. 159: 1980 W.L.N. 452: 1981 Cr.L.J. 852 (D.B.); (1977) 2 Karn.L.J. 350; 1977 M.P.L.J. 321 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2199: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1718; 1976 Cr.L.J. 828: 1975 Raj.L.W. 435: I.L.R. (1975) 25 Raj. 971.

A dying declaration can form the sole basis for conviction without any corroboration if the same is true and correct version of a dying man and is not stated to have been made under any doubtful circumstances. It is like any other prosecution evidence and subject to scrutiny. Corroboration is not sought for because it is a weak piece of evidence, but corroboration is sought for because it suffers from certain infirmity. Thus, where according to the prosecution the first wife caused death of the deceased who was second wife by burning but there was no evidence that the deceased and the accused were sleeping in the night together and the doctors did not opine whether the injuries were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death and further, the dying declaration was not free from infirmities as it was unsigned and uncorroborated, held, it would not be proper to sustain the conviction only on the basis of dying declaration: 1995 Cr.L.J. 2412 (Ori.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration does not come from a tainted source; the declarant is not an accomplice; the declaration ordinarily requires no corroboration. Thus, where the declaration mentioned the cause and place of the quarrel as well as the names of the accused and of the weapons in their hand, held, its veracity could not be doubted for want of corroboration: 1984 Cr.L.R. 441: (1984-2) 25 Guj.L.R. 1019: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 761.

Law is well settled that a dying declaration can be acted upon without corroboration; there is no rule of prudence hardened into a rule of law to that effect; the primary effort of the Court is to find out if declaration is true and if it is so, no corroboration is called for. Thus, where the deceased was in Policemen's exclusive custody in the Police Station where none else could influence or tutor him, and which also ruled out the possibility of his being assaulted by any one else, held, his dying declaration that he was beaten by the Policemen there could safely be accepted as true and acted upon: A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 416: (1985) 1 S.C.C. 552: (1985) 1 Crimes 344.

Where the prosecution rested its case for murder on circumstantial evidence and the dying declaration recorded by the Police in the presence of the Doctor on duty and the deceased's parents which was found on close scrutiny by the Court to be truthful, held, it is open to the Court to record conviction without independent corroboration of the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 190.

Once a dying declaration and its testifying witnesses pass the test of careful scrutiny by the Court, it becomes a very important and reliable evidence; if the Court is satisfied that the declaration is true and free from embellishment, it is by itself sufficient to record conviction without seeking corroboration: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 511 (S.C.); (1992) 3 Crimes 716 (Andh. Pra.).

It is accepted law now that when the Court finds a dying declaration to be true, that by itself can form basis of conviction: 1958 Ker. L.J. 1202. When the dying declaration has passed the test of reliability it is substantive evidence which does not require any corroboration: 1959 Ker.L.T. 914: 1960 Cr.L.J. 477; A.I.R. 1960 Ker. 120.

While considering the relevancy and admissibility of a dying declaration, the declaration has to be closely scrutinised as it is not given on oath nor is it subject to cross-examination. But it cannot be said that dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated by some other reliable evidence.

A dying declaration stands on the same footing as any other piece of evidence and has to be judged and tested in the light of surrounding circumstances and with reference to principles governing the weighing of evidence. In order to test the reliability of a dying declaration the Court has to see the circumstances in which the dying declaration has been made, for example, the opportunity of the dying man for observation, whether the capacity of the dying man to remember the facts stated had not been impaired at the time he was making the statement and also if the statement has been made at the earliest opportunity and was not the result of tutoring by interested parties. Once the Court has come to the conclusion that the dying declaration is a truthful version as to the circumstances of the death and the identity of the assailants of the victim, there is no question of further corroboration: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 96: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1081.

It is neither a rule of law nor of prudence that a dying declaration requires to be corroborated by other evidence before a conviction can be based thereon. The evidence furnished by the dying declaration must be considered by the Judge, just as the evidence of any other witness though undoubtedly some special consideration arise in the assessment of dying declarations which do not arise in the case of assessing the value of a statement made in Court by a person claiming to be a witness of the occurrence. In the first place, the Court has to make sure as to what the statement of the dead man actually was. In the second place, the Court has to be certain about the identity of the persons named in the dying declarations. Thus, the necessity for corroboration arises not from any inherent weakness of a dying declaration as a piece of evidence, but from the fact that the Court, in a given case has come to the conclusion that that particular dying declaration was not free from the infirmities as may be disclosed in evidence in the case: (1962) 1 S.C.R. (Supp.) 104: A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 439; 1968 Cr.L.J. 1237 (Manipur).

It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that the dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated. Each case must be determined on its own facts keeping in view the circumstances in which the dying declaration was made. Where a Court has come to the conclusion that the dying declaration was truthful version as to the circumstances of death of the victim, there is no question of further corroboration. The dying declaration is a sanctified statement because the sense of impending death creates a sanction equal to the sanctity of an oath. It is said that where a person is on the verge of death, the motive to falsehood is silenced and the mind is induced by the most powerful consideration to speak nothing but the truth. No doubt sometimes a dying declaration is not to be trusted but each case must be determined on its own merits: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 672 (Madh. Pra.).

A dying declaration by itself requires no corroboration if believed to be true, but if it suffers from inherent infirmities like any other evidence it requires corroboration, for in such a case it cannot form the basis of a conviction: (1961) 3 Ori.J.D. 360.

A truthful and reliable dying declaration even if not corroborated, may form the sole basis of conviction; but the declaration should be subjected to a close scrutiny as it is made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity to test its veracity by cross-examination. If the Court finds that the declaration is not wholly reliable and a material and integral portion of the deceased's version of the entire occurrence is untrue, the Court may, in the circumstances, consider it unsafe to convict the accused on its basis alone, without further corroboration. [A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 939; (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 619; A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1776, Rel. on]: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 636 (D.B.).

A dying declaration can be accepted without corroboration; all that is necessary for the Court is to satisfy itself that the statement is true; the Court is then duty bound to convict the accused relying on the dying declaration. Merely because the person giving the dying declaration belonged to a political party having no faith in the existence of God would make no difference in assessing the truth or otherwise of the dying declaration; may be the party may not believe in God, but persons belonging to it may have: (1975) 2 M.L.J. 318: 1975 M.L.J. (Cr.) 594 (D.B.).

A dying declaration can be the sole basis of conviction even in a murder charge provided it stands the test of reliability. However, the declaration has to be subjected to close scrutiny keeping in view the fact that the statement is made in the absence of the accused. One has to see that the declaration does not come from any tainted source; but once the Court is convinced that the declaration is a truthful version as to the circumstances of the death and the assailant of the victim, there may be no need for any further corroboration and conviction can be based on the strength of the dying declaration alone: 1961 Raj.L.W. 82: I.L.R. (1961) 11 Raj. 134.

A conviction can be based solely on a dying declaration provided it is a truthful version of the deceased. To test whether it is truthful or not, the Court must always be very careful. Since a dying declaration is made in the absence of the accused who has no opportunity for cross-examination, the Court is to carefully scrutinise the surrounding conditions, the intrinsic character of the dying declaration and decide whether it is true or not. Thus, when a deceased, fully conscious and in a position to understand the implication of the questions put to him and his answers thereto, has made a simple dying declaration to a Magistrate in the presence of a doctor, and both of them are unimpeachable witnesses with nothing to depose falsely and no enmity or ill-feeling is alleged between the deceased and the accused, such a declaration is a true version of the incident and it can itself without corroboration sustain the conviction of the accused: I.L.R. (1968) Cut. 809: 1969 Cr.L.J. 703.

Dying declaration is a piece of evidence, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that it is a truthful version, a conviction can be based on the dying declaration alone without any corroboration. It stands on the same footing as any other piece of evidence and has to be judged in the light of surrounding circumstances and the principle governing the weighing of evidence. When the statement of the deceased is not recorded in the presence of the accused and the deceased is not subjected to cross-examination with reference to that statement, the dying declaration must be very critically scrutinised. If the Court comes to a conclusion that the dying declaration depicts a truthful version of the occurrence, it itself will constitute the basis of conviction. A dying declaration in the form of questions and answers and as far as practicable in the words of the maker of the declaration stands on a much higher footing: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 841.

In a proper case, it may be permissible to convict the accused only on the basis of a dying declaration; thus, where the dying declaration was properly proved and no questions in cross-examination were asked as to the deceased's state of health nor any suggestion was made that the deceased was not in a fit state to make the statement and the Doctor's evidence also clearly indicated that the deceased could make the statement attributed to her and the dying declaration bore her thumb impression, held, in the absence of any of the witnesses of the declaration having any ill-feeling against the accused, his conviction was sustained: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 164: 1983 Cr.L.J. 221: (1983) 1 S.C.C. 211: (1983) 3 Guj.L.H. 337.

If the Court on materials on record is satisfied that the deceased had a clear opportunity to observe and identify his assailant, he was in a fit state of mind and had made his dying declaration without any influence or rancour, and that the declaration was true and voluntary, held, such declaration, without further corroboration, is sufficient to convict the accused; even otherwise, the testimony of other witnesses also corroborated the dying declaration: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1626: 1977 All.W.C. 657: 1977 All.Cr.R. 453 (D.B.).

Where deceased was in a fit state of mind to make a statement after he had a clear opportunity to observe and identify his assailant and made the statement without any influence or rancour, held, it can be accepted without corroboration and the conviction can be founded on it: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1294 (All.) (D.B.).

Dying declaration—Evidentiary value—Test of reliability—It can form sole basis of conviction—Corroboration—When necessary—Law laid down in. [1958 S.C.J. 198: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22 reiterated and applied]: 1961 Pat. L.R. 60.

A dying declaration, if believed, is a substantive piece of evidence. It stands on the same footing as any other piece of evidence and has to be judged in the light of the surrounding circumstances and with reference to the principles governing the weighing of evidence. There is no rule of law nor precedent that dying declaration requires corroboration: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1129 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.); 1988 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 71: (1988) 3 Crimes 530 (Cal.) (D.B.); (1988) 1 W.L.N. 387: (1988) 1 Raj.L.R. 396.

A dying declaration must be closely scrutinised to ascertain its truthfulness, like any other important piece of evidence, in the light of its surrounding facts and circumstances, bearing in mind, on the one hand, that the statement is by a person not examined on oath in the Court and, on the other hand, that a dying man is normally not likely to falsely implicate innocent persons. If the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is truthful, it may convict the accused without any independent corroboration: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1776: 1972 Cr.L.J. 828.

Although a dying declaration should be carefully scrutinised but if after perusal of the same, the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and is free from any effort to prompt the deceased to make a statement and is coherent and consistent, there is no legal impediment in founding the conviction on such a dying declaration, even if there is no corroboration. [A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 420 held overruled in view of A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 130]: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 207: 1980 Cr.L.J. 408.

It is well settled that there can be conviction on the basis of dying declaration alone and it is not at all necessary to have a corroboration provided the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is truthful and not vitiated in any manner. The satisfaction of the Court may be based on various circumstances and consideration: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1294 (All.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration even though untested by cross-examination stands on the same footing as any other evidence; if the Court after strictest scrutiny is satisfied about its truthfulness and reliability, it may convict the accused on the sole basis of the dying declaration though it may not always be safe to do so unless the declaration is corroborated on material points by other independent evidence: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Del. 118: 1979 Cr.L.J. 1477 (D.B.); 1979 W.L.N. (U.C.) 364: 1976 Cr.L.R. 112 (Raj.).

A conviction can be based solely on a dying declaration without corroboration, if the Court otherwise finds the same to be reliable and not to suffer from any inherent improbability or any other infirmity. But whether in a given case, it is or is not safe to do so would depend on the facts and circumstances of that case and other materials on record and the question must be left to the Court concerned without any attempt at generalisation: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2574 (Cal.) (D.B.). See also I.L.R. (1977) 2 Karn. 1276: (1977) 2 Karn.L.J. 350.

Even an uncorroborated dying declaration, it is now well recognised, may sustain a conviction where: (i) it was actually made by the deceased when he was capable of understanding its implications and was under no external influence and had no ulterior motive, and (ii) it was a truthful version of what had actually occurred; but the Court, before it enters conviction, must carefully and closely scrutinise the evidence to ensure that the two tests are satisfied: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1436: I.L.R. (1984) Him. Pra. 793.

The law is well settled by the judicial pronouncements that a conviction can safely be placed on a dying declaration provided the said dying declaration is free from vice of infirmities and if that dying declaration commands acceptance at the hands of the Court: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 129: 1994 Cr.L.J. 617.

A dying declaration, before it could be relied upon, must pass a test of reliability as it is a statement made in the absence of the accused and there is no opportunity to the accused even to put it through the fire of cross-examination to test its genuinity or veracity. The Court has, therefore, to subject it to close scrutiny. But once the Court is satisfied that it is a truthful version as to circumstances in which the death resulted and the persons causing injuries, law does not expect that there should be corroboration before it could be relied upon. However, if there are infirmities and the Court does not find it safe to base any conclusion on it without some further evidence to support it, the question of corroboration arises. No inherent infirmity as such attaches to a dying declaration as a piece of evidence: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1549: A.I.R. 1968 Guj. 296.

A dying declaration stands independently as a good piece of evidence for sustaining a conviction, if it is found to be true and free from infirmity, and corroboration need not be sought for. Necessity for corroboration arises only where the dying declaration presents suspicious features and infirmity. Invariably, it is subjected to strictest scrutiny and the Court should be on guard to ensure that declaration is not the result of tutoring, prompting or imagination and that the deceased had the opportunity to observe and identify the assailants and was fit for making the declaration. Where dying declaration is suspicious, it should not be relied upon without strong and convincing corroborative evidence: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1333 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where the person giving dying declaration in a murder case was in a fit mental state and the dying declaration was untutored and related to an incident where there could be no mistake as to identity of the assailants and had been given at the earliest opportunity, held, the same even without corroboration had to be accepted. There is no rule of law that such a dying declaration needs corroboration: 1978 All.L.J. 51: 1978 All.Cr.R. 11: 1978 Cr.L.J. 196 (D.B.).

A conviction can be based upon a dying declaration alone; it is not at all necessary to look for its corroboration, if the Court is satisfied about its truthfulness and reliability. But, where the deceased in hospital for eight days did not disclose to anyone that her husband had set her on fire and it was only on meeting her uncle on the 8th day that she made such an oral declaration to him and later to the Magistrate implicating her husband without even correctly naming him, held, probably her statement might have been inspired by her uncle; thus, it is not safe to base conviction on the dying declaration alone: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 274: 1983 Cr.L.J. 426: (1983) 2 S.C.C. 14: (1983) 1 Crimes 380.

A dying declaration is admitted in evidence on the principle of necessity. The fact that it is not tested by cross-examination on behalf of the accused merely serves to put the Court on its guard by imposing on it an obligation to scrutinize all the relevant circumstances. If the dying declaration is acceptable as truthful then even in the absence of other corroborative evidence the Court can act upon it and convict the accused: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1566: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1415.

Ss. 32 and 3—'Proved'—Evidentiary value of dying declaration—A dying declaration can well be on proper appreciation thereof, basis of conviction: 1968 Cr.L.J. 344: A.I.R. 1968 Guj. 77.

A dying declaration is not a weak piece of evidence; it can by itself form a basis for conviction without further corroboration, provided it is truthful and reliable; its truthfulness, reliability and acceptability is to be adjudged in the light of attendant circumstances of each case with strict scrutiny as in case of other evidence, direct or circumstantial; it should not be rejected merely because of some improvements made in the oral testimony of other witnesses: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 354: (1984) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 69: 1985 Cr.L.J. 336(D.B.).

There can be conviction on the basis of dying declaration and it is not at all necessary to have a corroboration provided the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is a truthful and genuine dying declaration. Thus, once the dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate is proved by the oral evidence and inspires confidence of the Court, it is admissible in evidence and conviction can be based on dying declaration alone in absence of any direct or corroborative evidence: (1991-1) 11 Guj.L.H. 307: (1991-2) 32 Guj.L.R. 850: 1992 Cr.L.R. 600 (D.B.). See also 1982 M.P.W.N. 362.

No conviction can be entered on a dying declaration recorded in suspicious circumstances or suffering from infirmities unless it is corroborated; to be accepted as reliable, it must be subjected to a very close scrutiny; it must be satisfactorily established that the deceased was in a fit state of mind: (1990-1) 38 B.L.J.R. 139 (D.B.).

Where the deceased as per evidence on record was in a fit state of mind and capable of making the statement which was recorded, when there was absolutely no scope for tutoring, in question and answer form by the Medical Officer wherein the deceased categorically named the accused as firing the gun, and the deceased's oral dying declaration as well as other evidence corroborated the recorded dying declaration, held, the dying declaration alone could form the basis of conviction: 1991 Cr.L.J. 2024 (Ori.) (D.B.). See also (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 297 [Where dying declaration was testified by independent witnesses and corroborated by promptly lodged First Information Report]; 1980 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 37.

A weak and unsatisfactory dying declaration implicating one accused while excluding others, held, cannot be made the basis for conviction: 1989 C.Cr.L.R. 1 (Cal.). See also (1990) 2 Hindu L.R. 140 (Bom.).

A dying declaration can be made the sole basis of conviction, when the witnesses proving it are reliable and their credibility is above board: (1984) 3 Crimes 379 (Raj.).

Where the dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate in question and answer form and in the words of the victim was consistent with the accident registers of two Government Hospitals to which he was admitted as also with his statement recorded under S. 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure at the earliest opportunity and there was no tutoring by interested parties, held, being a truthful version free from infirmities, the Court need not look for corroboration and may enter conviction relying solely on the dying declaration. [A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2199 and A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 2037, Foll.]: (1993) 2 An.L.T. (Cr.) 86: (1993) 2 An.W.R. (N.R.C.) 43 (D.B.).

Although a dying declaration can be taken as evidence and may in certain circumstances be accepted as the sole basis for conviction, normally some corroboration of the statement must be forthcoming from other evidence in the case. This is particularly necessary in relying on extra-judicial confessions, and particularly when there is no evidence in the case corroborating the dying declaration attributed to the deceased a conviction should not ordinarily be based on such uncorroborated statement: 1967 Cr.L.J. 714: A.I.R. 1967 Assam 26; 1982 M.P.W.N. 421.

Though an uncorroborated dying declaration, otherwise truthful and reliable, may justify a conviction, yet the rule, not so much of law but of prudence, has been that ordinarily it would be unsafe to do so unless the declaration is corroborated on material points; the rule has been evolved because there can be no scope for testing veracity of the dying declaration by cross-examining its maker: (1973) 75 Punj.L.R. 801 (D.B.).

It is quite unsafe to sustain a conviction on a dying declaration which is not corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. The corroboration need not be by way of direct evidence. It can be in the shape of circumstantial evidence: 1955 An.W.R. 435.

There has to be material corroboration of a dying declaration before it can be used as evidence: 1957 All.L.J. 459: A.I.R. 1957 All. 177. But see infra. A person can be convicted upon a dying declaration of the deceased without corroboration. When the deceased said that he was attacked by the respondent and that statement is believed, it follows that the respondent is guilty (in the absence of any mistake of identity); nothing remains to be done except to find him guilty. If the dying declaration is not believed, it is a different matter. But once it is believed, it leads to the conclusion of the respondent's guilt. There is no presumption that a dying declaration is false or that it is unworthy of belief. There is no justification for treating it as a piece of tainted evidence as if it were a confession of a co-accused or evidence of an accomplice. So it cannot be laid down as a matter of law that no dying declaration should be believed unless it is corroborated. The law contemplates its being believed and some dying declarations may be believed even though not corroborated. Whether a dying declaration should be believed or not would depend upon the circumstances of the case. It is essentially a question of fact to be determined by the Court on the basis of the circumstances of each case. As far as the credibility is concerned, it is just like the evidence given by a witness. It is for the Court to decide whether to believe it or not and no rule can be laid down either that it should be believed or that it should not be believed. Once it is believed, it is irrelevant and illogical to consider that it is not made on oath and that the maker has not been subjected to cross-examination. When the law had made it a "relevant fact" notwithstanding the absence of oath and cross-examination, it means that it will not be held to be unbelievable merely on account of the absence of these matters. If it is held to be unbelievable, it must be done on the basis of other circumstances. So long as it cannot be predicted in respect of a dying declaration that had its maker been subjected to cross-examination his credibility would have been shaken, it cannot be said that the dying declaration should not be acted upon because there has been no cross-examination: Held, that when the dying declaration was made, the deceased was under apprehension of death and that though his was not a condition for admissibility of the dying statement under S. 32, as under the English Law, still the apprehension of the approaching death gave the statement the sanction of an oath: 1953 All.L.J. 615: A.I.R. 1954 All. 153.

Generally speaking, a declaration relevant under S. 32 but not made by one in immediate expectation of death and not made in the presence of the accused, ought not to be acted upon unless there is some reliable corroboration: I.L.R. 58 Bom. 31: A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 479 (2).

Dying declaration—Unless one is certain about words uttered by deceased, it cannot be acted upon without sufficient corroboration: 1969 Jab.L.J. 186: 1969 M.P.W.R. 924: 1969 M.P.L.J. 901.

In considering the value of a dying declaration the circumstances and the surroundings under which it is made have to be taken into consideration. When it is proved that the deceased was already given information about the names of the assailants and the manner of attack, it is not quite safe to place much reliance on the dying declaration made by such person. It is hardly safe to act upon a dying declaration which is uncorroborated. It is incumbent on the Court to see how far it is corroborated: A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 105: 1955 Cr.L.J. 915.

Although the statement made by the deceased to the doctor just before his death is admissible in evidence as dying declaration still in order to convict the accused of murder there must be independent corroboration of facts and circumstances to prove the offence: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 249. See also I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 613: 1945 Nag.L.J. 139: A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 153.

In a murder trial, the dying declarations made by the deceased were put in evidence. The statement of the declarant had the stamp of outside influence and had been made in a spirit of revenge and the declarant was unwilling to state the facts in a consistent and coherent manner. There was enough material on the record to show that the different declarations made by the deceased had inconsistencies and contradictions in them. Held, that under the circumstances the conviction of the accused could not be based merely upon the dying declaration of the deceased: 1957 All.L.J. 295: A.I.R. 1957 All. 466.

Where dying declaration alone was held to be sufficient for proving the guilt of the accused. See (1989-2) 37 B.L.J.R. 116.

When the dying declaration of the deceased and the statement of prosecution witnesses corroborate each other on the main points, undue reliance should not be accorded to minor discrepancies in the details: (1983) 2 Crimes 828 (Raj.).

Where in his oral declaration made by the deceased to his son, he stated that some eleven persons belonging to the other feuding family had assaulted him but it was found that all the accused were not from that family and as per medical evidence, the deceased could not survive to make the declaration and the blow having been given to him from behind, he could not have seen the assailants either and there were also discrepancies in the evidence of the witnesses, held, no reliance could be placed on the dying declaration without independent corroboration: (1988) 3 Crimes 530: 1988 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 71 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where deceased made a number of dying declarations and the one made to the Executive Magistrate suggested that deceased might have committed suicide, held, the conviction of accused could not be sustained on dying declaration alone: (1987) 1 Crimes 96 (Bom.).

Where the deceased who made dying declarations, as well as the witnesses who spoke about the dying declarations had no animus against the accused, held, the dying declarations in themselves were sufficient to seek the conviction of the accused: 1984 W.L.N. 461 (Raj.).

Where the dying declaration is corroborated by circumstances that the accused alone had perpetrated the murder, held, conviction under S. 302, was liable to be confirmed: (1988) 1 Crimes 687 (Bom.).

Law permits the inference of guilt against the accused even on charge of murder on the sole testimony of a dying declaration provided it is coherent and trustworthy. [A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 274, Rel. on]: 1987 M.P.L.J. 495 (D.B.).

Conviction cannot be ordered solely on the basis of a dying declaration which has deliberately and meticulously attempted to involve the accused: (1984) 3 Crimes 26 (Guj.).

A dying declaration which names only one person where the killing took place under circumstances where there could be no doubt that the dying man identified his assailant, is the very strongest possible form of evidence. But where a large number of people are implicated, it is very different matter and in the absence of corroboration of the dying declaration, the accused should not be convicted: I.L.R. (1942) Lah. 619: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 368.

While closely scrutinising a dying declaration, like any other important evidence, the Court must bear in mind that it was not a testimony on oath recorded in the Court; that a dying person normally does not implicate innocent persons falsely; and if the Court is satisfied about its truthfulness it may enter conviction even without independent corroboration. Thus, where the dying man, burnt in the accused's house, had fallen unconscious and removed to the hospital, regaining consciousness by an intravenous injection, he called the Police for recording his dying declaration which the Tehsildar recorded in the presence of the Doctor who testified the dying man as not confused but having a clear understanding, held, the dying declaration was sufficient proof for the accused's conviction: 1979 W.L.N. (U.C.) 364 : 1976 Cr.L.J. 112 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration could not be proved to have in fact been made, held, it could not corroborate the statements of the eye-witnesses: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2013: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 401.

The accused alleged that he had been keeping out of the way of the Police because he was suspected in another case; and he had not left the city of Nagpur and gone out of the jurisdiction of the local Police. Held, that in those circumstances the Supreme Court was not prepared to say that the alleged absconding of the accused could afford sufficient corroboration of the dying declaration, if corroboration of the dying declaration was needed: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 100.

9. Dying declaration—Whether can be accepted in part.—The maxim falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus is generally not applicable in India; thus, where a dying declaration is partly true and corroborated by other evidence, and partly false, the declaration cannot be discarded as a whole; its true part may be relied upon but not if its false part is found to be a deliberate lie: (1973) 75 Punj.L.R. 801 (D.B.).

Though the rejection of a part of the dying declaration should put the Court on the guard and make it invoke the rule of caution, it does not necessarily justify rejection of the dying declaration as a whole; however, if two of its parts are indissolubly linked, the Court has to reject both of them but not where they are severable and the correctness of one does not depend upon the correctness of the other. Normally, the Court would not act upon a part of the dying declaration unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other evidence on record: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 2188: 1974 Cr.L.J. 1500.

Under S. 32 the whole of the statement must be taken into consideration. Parts of the statements made here and there cannot be divested from their context for purposes of propping up the prosecution case: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 729: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1086. See also (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 992: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 189.

The value of a dying declaration altogether disappears when part of it have obviously been supplied to the dying man by other persons, whether interested parties or Police Officers. A 'touched up' dying declaration has no value: (1934) 36 Punj.L.R. 24: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 805. See also A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 409.

If a portion of a dying declaration is untrue, the rest of it cannot necessarily be rejected. However, if a part of such statement is shown to have been concocted deliberately, the Court may decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration: A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 249: I.L.R. (1953) Madh. Bh. 343.

Where a portion of dying declaration gets corroboration from other evidence, the Court can accept it: (1990) 1 Crimes 381 (Del.).

Although a portion of a dying declaration is untrue, it need not necessarily be rejected in toto. The Court would decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration: I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 235: 1946 Nag.L.J. 241: A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 301. See also A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 189: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 992.

A dying declaration which comes under S. 32(1) from the point of view of admissibility, should not be put on a different footing from any other piece of evidence, so far as the appraisement of its evidentiary value is concerned. Merely because a part of the statement is untrue, it does not follow that the rest should be disbelieved. If a tribunal finds that a part of it is concocted, it would decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration; but the Court or the jury is not debarred from accepting the rest: (1935-36) 40 Cal.W.N. 1377: A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 793; A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 282; A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 290; A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 409.

Dying declaration of deceased mentioning A and B as amongst his assailants—No description of A sufficiently to identify him given—Description of B sufficient to identify—Accused A held could not be connected with assailant A and dying declaration could not be used against him—Accused B held same as assailant B and that dying declaration could be used against him—It did not amount to accepting dying declaration in part—It was accepting it wholly: 1953 All.L.J. 615: A.I.R. 1954 All. 153.

Dying declaration that both A and B gave injuries to deceased—A held to have been falsely implicated by deceased and, therefore, acquitted — Same dying declaration could not constitute safe piece of evidence for convicting B—For, ordinarily dying declaration should be either accepted or rejected as a whole: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 1064: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Punj. 855: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 469: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 170.

Where the deceased in his dying declaration stated that one accused had gagged him from his mouth and nose and the other had stabbed him with a knife and it was found that the gagging part of the declaration was not true but the stabbing part found corroboration from medical and other evidence, held, the true part of the declaration may be relied upon; though, generally, a dying declaration is to be considered as a whole but there is no bar to accept its true part and reject its other portion; however, the position will be different if the two portions are not severable: (1992) 1 Ker.L.J. 748 (D.B.).

Where the deceased engulfed in flames came out at night shouting that the accused had set her on fire and the accused was seen running away, chased and brought back and in her dying declaration the deceased stated that the accused had been threatening her (though never coming to her) with death to compel her to marry him to which she was not agreeable and it was he who had set her ablaze by pouring kerosene on her, held, in view of evidence that the two were on intimate terms, the portion pertaining to the accused not coming to her may be doubted or construed as the deceased not allowing him intimacies, yet it is severable from the other parts of the dying declaration which were found to be free from infirmities and had a ring of truth; it could be acted upon after discarding the doubtful part: 1987 Mah.L.J. 820: (1987) 3 Bom.C.R. 139 (D.B.).

10. Dying declaration—Whether necessarily to be made under expectation of death.—English law admits as dying declaration only such statements of material facts concerning the cause and circumstances of homicide, as are made by the victim under the fixed and solemn belief that his death is inevitable and near at hand. The solemnity of the occasion on which the statements are made is deemed to supply the sanction of oath. The approach of death is deemed to produce a state of mind in which the statements of the dying person are to be taken as free from all ordinary motive to mistake. The law in India does not make the admissibility of a dying declaration dependant upon the person's having a consciousness of the approach of death. Even if the person did not apprehend that he would die, a statement made by him about the circumstances of his death would be admissible under S. 32, Evidence Act: 1953 All.L.J. 615: A.I.R. 1954 All. 153; A.I.R. 1960 Punj. 310: 1960 Cr.L.J. 851. Thus, it is immaterial whether there existed any expectation of death at the time of dying declaration: 1995 Cr.L.J. 312 (All.) (D.B.).

The Indian Law on the subject of dying declarations differs from the English Law in that under the English Law the declaration should have been made under the sense of impending death, whereas under the Indian Law it is not necessary for the admissibility of a dying declaration that the deceased at the time of making it should have been under expectation of death. Thus, the view that such a declaration, in order to be relevant under S. 32(1) should have been made when the person making the same was in actual danger of death and had given up all hope of recovery at the time when he made the said declaration, is obviously erroneous: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1062 (Del.) (D.B.); 1994 Cr.L.J. 1886: 1994 M.P.L.J. 630 (D.B.).

S. 32 does not require that a statement made by the injured in expectation of death alone can be taken as a dying declaration: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1347: 1979 All.W.C. 57; 1980 Raj.Cr.C. 49: 1980 Raj.L.W. 112: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1474 (D.B.).

When a statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, such statement becomes relevant notwithstanding the fact whether the person who made it was or was not, at the time when he made it, under expectation of death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2415 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

A statement made by a person who is dead as to the cause of his death is evidence notwithstanding that he was not under expectation of death when he made it. Such a statement does not necessarily require corroboration. If the Court, after taking everything into consideration, is convinced that the statement is true, it is its duty to convict notwithstanding that there is no corroboration in the true sense: I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 158: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 196: (1940) 1 M.L.J. 124 (F.B.). See also 1940 Mad.W.N. 163: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 290.

Where liaison between the accused and the wife of the deceased is the alleged motive of murder, the statement of the deceased as reproduced by a witness to the effect that the accused had approached the deceased for the release of the latter's wife from marriage is admissible under S. 32(1), though the statement was not made before the murder and the deceased was not near his death when he made the statement as S. 32 (1) is not subject to these limitations: 1953 Cr.L.J. 1900: A.I.R. 1954 Him. Pra. 11.

The fact that a deceased person's statement was not made under apprehension of death, is no doubt to be considered in evaluating such a statement. But the law is not that such statement is not sufficient proof of its contents. The rule of law only says that a deceased person's statement is to be scrutinised just as a witness would be cross-examined. But if it passed such test, it is quite good evidence: A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 2. See also I.L.R. 16 Lah. 589: A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 94; 1940 Nag.L.J. 459: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 340.

Where the statement made by the deceased is one relating to the cause of his death and to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, the statement is relevant under S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act as a dying declaration even though at the time when the statement was made, the deceased might not be under expectation of death: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 321: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 38.

In regard to the admissibility of dying declaration, to say that when the deceased made the declaration if there was no prospect of his death then reliance cannot be placed thereon, is to overlook the language of S. 32(1) of the Act. Under that provision such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question. This part of the law is a departure from the English law where such statements should be made when the declarant is in settled hopeless expectation of imminent death. The second departure is that such statements are admissible in civil proceedings. Under the English law they are not: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 96: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1081.

It is immaterial that the person who made the statement was not at the time when he made them under expectation of death. The nature of the proceedings in which the death comes into question also does not matter. It need not necessarily be a proceeding on a charge of murder or homicide. It may be even a civil action: 1940 Nag.L.J. 459: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 340.

A statement of the deceased made to other caste members before attack but after the incident earlier in the morning is admissible, not regarding the cause of his death; but as one regarding a circumstance of the transaction which resulted in his death. The declarant need not have been actually apprehending death: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 198: A.I.R. 1964 Madh. Pra. 30.

Where soon after the making of statement after the assault, the deceased died, held, whether or not he was under expectation of death, said statement was admissible under S. 32(1): (1987-1) 35 B.L.J.R. 896 (D.B.).

11. When declarant survived.—Before a dying declaration may be admitted, it must be proved that the person who made it is dead. When a person making a dying declaration survives, his statement cannot be admitted under S. 32 but may be relied on under S. 157 to corroborate or under S. 145 to contradict his statement in Court: 1995 Cr.L.J. 312 (All.) (D.B.).

When a person who has made a declaration did not die but survived, held, his statement is not admissible in evidence as a dying declaration under S. 32; nor can it be used or relied upon even for the purpose of corroboration under S. 157, especially when the person making the declaration is not the complainant: 54 Mys.H.C.R. 120. See also A.I.R. 1958 All. 255.

Where a dying declaration was recorded but the declarant survived, held, there is no dying declaration in the eye of law; under S. 32 a dying declaration indicates the cause or other circumstances leading to the declarant's death: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Pat.) (D.B.).

Where an injured person who was in a serious condition made a statement as to the cause of injuries, etc. but he survived, held, his statement could not be called a dying declaration, it is only a formal statement under S. 157 to be used only to corroborate or contradict the witnesses in the Court: 1994 Cr.L.J. 978 (Pat.) (D.B.); 1980 All.W.C. 54.

Statements made by the persons in expectation of death, who are not only survived but deposed in the Court, are not admissible under S. 32; but the statements are admissible under S. 157 as their former statements to be used to corroborate their testimony in Court: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 126: 1982 All.L.J. 1524.

Where the maker of a dying declaration survives, held, it can be used not as a piece of substantive evidence but only to corroborate or contradict him: 1984 Cr.L.J. 1215: (1984) 57 Cut.L.T. 505.

Where the maker of a statement chanced to survive, held, that statement is clearly not admissible as a dying declaration; it could only be admitted as a previous statement for corroborating under S. 157 or for contradicting under S. 145 his evidence in Court: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1881 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.); 1978 M.P.L.J. 820: 1978 Jab.L.J. 741.

Statement of the injured recorded by the Magistrate, held, can be used as previous statement, when the injured survived; but the Magistrate must be examined to prove recording of the statement: 1975 Mah.L.J. 36: 1976 Cr.L.J. 871.

12. Statement recorded during investigation.—Statements made by witnesses under S. 162 of Cr.P.Code in the course of investigation cannot be used as substantive evidence except for those statements falling within the provisions of S. 32(1): A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 873: 1980 Cr.L.J. 564: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 390. See also 1973 Kash.L.J. 123.

Where deceased made a dying declaration a day after the occurrence which was recorded by a Police Officer, held, in view of the provisions of S. 162(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, no illegality or infirmity would arise affecting the admissibility of the statement on the ground of its being recorded by a Police Officer during investigation: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2574 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where though the doctor declared the injured to be fit for making statement but as his condition was not serious and he was not expected to die on that day, the Police Officer did not feel it necessary to call a Magistrate to record statement, held, in such circumstances, statement recorded under S. 161, Cr.P.Code. was admissible: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Del. 102 (D.B.).

In a proper case, it may be permissible to convict a person on the basis of statement under S. 161, Cr.P.Code which is treated as dying declaration later under S. 32 of Evidence Act: (1984) 1 Crimes 1: 1984 Cr.L.R. 216 (Del.). See however 1982 All.W.C. 596: 1982 All.Cr.R. 353.

Where Investigating Officer did not record statement of the victim of crime as a dying declaration but in the ordinary course of investigation under S. 161, Cr.P.Code and the victim died subsequently, held, the statement could be used as a dying declaration: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1062 (Del.) (D.B.); (1986) 1 Karn.L.J. 123: I.L.R. (1985) Karn. 2257 (D.B.).

Where after making the statement before the Police, the victim succumbed to his injuries, his statement could be treated as a dying declaration and was admissible under S. 32(1) and would be protected by S. 162(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1745 (Gau.) (D.B.). See also 1971 B.L.J.R. 353; 1982 All.L.J. 140.

Report made by deceased at Police Station—Report being dying declaration can be made before or during investigation and can still be substantive evidence—S. 161 of the Cr.P.Code not applicable: 1967 All.W.R. (H.C.) 345: 1968 Cur.L.J. 227: A.I.R. 1968 All. 83.

13. First Information Report lodged by deceased.—The F.I.R. lodged by the deceased himself and duly proved could be used as a dying declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. 848 (All.). See also (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 2.

First information report is admissible under S. 32(1) whereit is the statement of a person who is since dead relating to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in death: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 450.

Where after making the statement before the Police, which was recorded as F.I.R., deceased succumbed to his injuries, held, the statement could be treated as a dying declaration and was admissible under S. 32(1): A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2199: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 104: (1976) 2 S.C.R. 764: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1718.

First information report—Use of—Natural death of informant long after occurrence but before commitment proceedings—F.I.R. not admissible either under S. 32(1) or S. 8, Evidence Act: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 696: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 262.

Where the dying declaration is a long document and is a narrative of a large number of incidents which happened before the actual assault, such long statement being more in the nature of first information reports than recital of the cause of death or circumstances resulting in it, or likely to give the impression of their being not genuine or not having been made unaided and without prompting. The dying declaration, though in the form of F.I.R., was held prompted and voluntary: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1459: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 904.

Though the report lodged by the deceased under S. 323, I.P.Code, can undoubtedly be treated as his dying declaration, but where it was lodged with delay without any explanation therefor, held, it was unsafe to place reliance upon the same: 1990 Cr.L.J. 850: 1989 All.L.J. 468 (D.B.).

Where in a murder trial the prosecution depended on the deceased's statement made to the Police while she was in the hospital and the same was treated as first information report, held, that had not the deponent died that document would have been useful only to corroborate or contradict her testimony in Court. But by reason of her death it became a piece of substantive evidence under S. 32(1) as a declaration as to the cause of the informant's death or as part of the informant's conduct under S. 8 and was, therefore, admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1956) Trav.-Co. 311: A.I.R. 1956 Trav.-Co. 207. See also A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 249: 1954 Cr.L.J. 1764.

Where the Sub-Inspector, after reaching the hospital contacted the doctor incharge and obtained his permission for recording the statement of the deceased and thereafter he recorded it as first information report and there was nothing on record to show that the said statement was given on account of some deliberations or prompting and further, said statement was in consonance with the dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate, held, dying declaration recorded in the form of F.I.R. by the Sub-Inspector was not liable to be rejected: 1995 Cr.L.J. 2699 (Del.) (D.B.).

Informant belaboured—F.I.R. after occurrence—Informant dying natural death before examination as witness—Statement in F.I.R. admissible under S. 8 of the Evidence Act—Doubt regarding name of prosecution witness can be removed by looking into F.I.R.: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 309: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 270: A.I.R. 1961 Madh. Pra. 45.

Where deceased who was stabbed on beach himself gave report to the Police that the accused stabbed him with knife, held, statement was relevant under S. 32: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 297 (Mad.).

Where besides the F.I.R. lodged by the injured stabbed with a gupti by the accused there were other oral dying declarations proved by witnesses who were not even cross-examined and the gupti was also recovered at the accused's instance, held, it amounted to overwhelming, clear, cogent, convincing and credible evidence of murder; conviction upheld: 1984 Raj.L.W. 148 (D.B.). See also 1983 M.P.W.N. 86.

14. Recording of dying declaration—By whom.—A dying declaration recorded by a competent Magistrate stands on a higher footing than an oral declaration or one recorded by the Investigating Officer: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 354: (1984) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 69: 1985 Cr.L.J. 336 (D.B.); (1987) 2 Crimes 40 (All.); (1984) 1 Crimes 108: 1984 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 53: (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 405; (1987) 3 Crimes 115 (Gau.) [Recording of dying declaration by Investigating Officers should not be encouraged]. See however 1976 Cr.L.R. 102 (Raj.).

Law does not require that a dying declaration must necessarily be made to a Magistrate; the evidentiary value or weight to be attached to such a declaration must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each case: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 164: (1983) 3 Guj.L.H. 337: (1983) 1 S.C.C. 211: 1983 Cr.L.J. 221: 1983 All.W.C. 321: 1983 All.Cr.R. 170.

It is not the requirement of law that the dying declaration must necessarily be recorded by a doctor or a Magistrate. It will always depend upon variety of factors: (1986) 1 Crimes 13 (Del.).

Before recording a dying declaration, the Magistrate must obtain a certificate of the Doctor appended, regarding the mental state of the deponent and, secondly, the Magistrate should mention the time when such statement was taken down. It is unsafe to rely on the statement if it does not contain these rudimentary factors: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1626: 1977 All.W.C. 657: 1977 All.Cr.R. 453 (D.B.).

The Magistrate before recording a dying declaration should ask direct questions to the victim to satisfy himself about the victim's state of mind to ensure that it was a conscious and voluntary statement; however, if the Magistrate omits to do so, it would not detract from the dying declaration's reliability: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 354: (1984) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 69: 1985 Cr.L.J. 336 (D.B); (1984) 2 An.L.T. 94: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 337 (D.B.) [The Magistrate, while recording the dying declaration, to the possible extent, should insist upon the presence of the Medical Officer and obtain an endorsement from him that the declarant was in a fit condition to make a statement and not the usual statement that the declarant was conscious]; 1988 Cr.L.R. 376 (Raj.) [Where the Magistrate while recording the statement did not call doctor, nurse or ward boy or the attendants of the other patients, held, such a statement having not been properly recorded raised suspicion].

The necessity of recording a dying declaration arises only when the hopes of life of the man are given up: 52 C.L.J. 425: 32 Cr.L.J. 416. A statement intended to be proved as a dying declaration under S. 32 need not be recorded by a Magistrate. Law does not require such statements to be made necessarily under expectation of death: 190 I.C. 322. An injured man who is waiting to be operated on should not be subjected to anything like a third degree cross-examination, by the Magistrate who records his dying deposition but the Magistrate should not content himself with merely recording the statement made by the injured man; he should ask him such simple questions as may occur to his mind in order that the dying deposition may be an account of some value: 176 I.C. 683; A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 282.

Where dying declaration reduced to writing before Magistrate and was corroborated by medical report was accepted. See 1991 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 17 (Mad.).

Where a dying declaration was recorded by a Naib Tehsildar in the presence of the doctor in the very words of the deceased, then quite conscious and it was also corroborated substantially by the F.I.R. lodged by the deceased and the deceased's earlier statement to another witness, held, the dying declaration was sufficient to convict the accused. [A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22; A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1778 and A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 2138, Rel. on]: 1977 M.P.L.J. 321 (D.B.); (1987) 2 W.L.N. 311 (Raj.).

A dying declaration need not be recorded by the Executive Magistrate alone, it is an approved rule that once the Court is satisfied that the testimony regarding the dying declaration recorded by any officer who may or may not be competent officer inspires its confidence and does not leave any shadow of doubt, the Court can act upon and rely upon the dying declaration alone and need not require any corroboration. Thus, where dying declarations were recorded by a Special Executive Magistrate who was not entrusted with the duty of recording the dying declarations and there were no discrepancies in said dying declarations, held, impugned dying declarations could be relied upon. [1978 Cr.L.J. 1869 (S.C.); 1958 Cr.L.J. 106 (S.C.); 1983 Cr.L.J. 1457 (S.C.), Foll.]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1956 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where the Police had requisitioned an Executive Magistrate to record a dying declaration who deputed the Deputy Mamlatdar who did so, held, the declaration could not be faulted for on that ground; there is no requirement of law that dying declarations should be recorded by Executive Magistrates; they can be recorded by any one, including Police; but their probative value will vary and depend upon circumstances of each case; of course, a dying declaration recorded by an Executive Magistrate would be more reliable: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 131: (1989-1) 30 Guj.L.R. 262: 1989 Cr.L.R. 149 (D.B.).

The doctor is the best person to opine about the fitness of the deceased to make the statement; where the doctor found that life was ebbing fast and there was no time to call the Police or a Magistrate, the doctor would be justified, indeed, he would be bound, to record the dying declaration. He is a disinterested and respectable witness. The trial Judge would be unjustified in rejecting evidence of the Medical Officer: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1782: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1382: 1976 Cr.L.R. (S.C.) 260: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 351: 1976 S.C.C. (Cr.) 625.

Where dying declaration was recorded by the duty Doctor as condition of deceased was very serious and the impugned dying declaration was very natural and straight forward and there was no reason as to why the deceased implicated accused falsely and there was no scope of tutoring as no relation of deceased was present when his dying declaration was recorded by the duty Doctor, held, said dying declaration could be relied upon; there was no necessity, under the circumstances, to get a fitness certificate from the incharge of the hospital. [1980 Cr.L.J. 925 (S.C.); 1980 Cr.L.J. 408 (S.C.); 1987 Cr.L.J. 1065 and 1985 Cr.L.R. 73 (Raj.), Rel. on]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 25 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the Magistrate, being out of town, could not come when called for recording the injured's statement and the Doctor, apprehending death of the injured, who was fit to make statement, himself recorded the dying declaration which the injured thumb-marked after he had fully understood it, held, the dying declaration could not be discarded merely because it was not recorded by the Magistrate; in the absence of the Magistrate, the Doctor was the most capable person authorised to record the declaration: 1991 Cr.L.J. 3244: 1991 All.L.J. 1016 (D.B.).

Where dying declaration was recorded by a doctor and thereafter Sub-Inspector also recorded dying declaration of victim whereafter she died, held, merely because the Magistrate had not recorded the dying declaration of the deceased, the dying declarations which were recorded by doctor and Sub-Inspector and which were proved to be truthful, could not be said to be inadmissible: 1995 Cr.L.J. 689 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Under Rules and Orders of Punjab High Court, Vol. 3, Chap. 13-A, R. 2, it is mandatory for the Investigating Officer to apply to the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate to depute some Magistrate for recording of the dying declaration: 1990 Cr.L.J. 790 (Del.) (D.B.).

Evidentiary value of the dying declarations recorded by the Police Officers is much lower than the evidentiary value of the dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate or the Doctor. Thus, where the dying declarations recorded by the Executive Magistrate and the Doctor are both available, it is better to keep out of consideration the dying declaration recorded by the Police Officers: (1991) 4 Bom.C.R. 618 (D.B.).

A dying declaration cannot be said to be unsafe to rely on merely because it is recorded by a Head Constable and not a Magistrate. It is, no doubt, desirable that such a declaration should be recorded by a Magistrate but for the purpose of law this is not an indispensable requirement: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 96: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1081.

Where an attempt was made to procure the services of a Magistrate for recording the dying declaration but the Magistrate was not available and the dying declaration had to be recorded by the Head Constable and said fact was supported by several witnesses including independent witnesses, held, said dying declaration was acceptable. [A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 14, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 777.

Though a dying declaration recorded by a Police Officer during investigation is admissible under S. 32, it is better, in view of the exception provided in S. 162(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, to leave such dying declarations out of consideration until and unless the prosecution satisfies the Court as to why it was not recorded by a Magistrate or a Doctor. That, however, does not mean that such dying declarations are always untrustworthy; what is emphasized is that better and more reliable methods of recording dying declarations should be resorted to and the one recorded by the Police Officer may be relied upon if there was no time or facility for adopting the better method: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1173: 1979 Cr.L.J. 700; (1984-2) 25 Guj.L.R. 1019: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 761. Thus, where the deceased was in a critical condition and no other person was available in the village to record the dying declaration, held, such statement recorded by the Investigating Officer could be relied upon but was rejected as it contained a bit of false statements: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1173: 1979 Cr.L.J. 700. The broad proposition that a dying declaration made before the Investigating Officer should not be believed unless corroborated by other evidence cannot be accepted; dying declaration, cannot be rejected on the sole ground that they are recorded by the Investigating Officer. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 190, Rel. on]: 1982 M.P.L.J. 772.

Dying declaration taken down by Investigating Officer in presence of Doctor and other high officials and when deceased was conscious is not bad and its rejection in evidence is not proper: I.L.R. (1963) 15 Assam 552.

Where a dying declaration was recorded neither by a Magistrate nor a Doctor but by the Investigating Officer himself, though in the doctor's presence who had opined that the injured was in a fit condition to make a statement, held, the Investigation Officer being naturally interested in the success of investigation, the dying declaration recorded by him has to be scrutinized very cautiously and closely; it is only when the Court is satisfied about its truthfulness that it should enter conviction: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2696 (Raj.) (D.B.).

In regard to dying declaration and the admissibility of such declarations recorded by the Police Officers, the following propositions emerge: (1) A dying declaration recorded by a Police Officer during the course of investigation is admissible in evidence. (2) It is better to leave such dying declaration out of consideration until and unless the prosecution satisfies the Court as to why it was not recorded by a Magistrate or a Doctor. (3) It is not prudent to base the conviction on a dying declaration made to an Investigating Officer. (4) The practice of the Investigating Officer himself recording a dying declaration during the course of the investigation should not be encourged: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1049 (Gau.).

Investigating Officers are naturally interested in the success of the investigation; the practice of the Investigating Officer himself recording a dying declaration during investigation, thus, ought not to be encouraged. But no hard and fast rule can be laid down in this regard; each case depends upon its own facts and circumstances. Thus, where an Assistant Sub-Inspector belonging to a Police Station where the incident occurred, upon intimation that the victim was admitted in a hospital 92 Kms. away, falling in another district, straightway went to that place, met the doctor and recorded the victim's statement which also became basis of the F.I.R. and investigation was conducted at the Police Station where the incident had occurred, held, no fault could be found with the Police for not getting the dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 2013: 1989 Cr.L.J. 95. See also (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 43.

No law bars Police Officers from recording dying declarations; such a declaration, supported by another such statement recorded by a Magistrate constitutes evidence of a high order. That, however, does not mean that if the prosecution merely relies upon a dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer in the presence of a Doctor, a completely independent witness, the Court should ignore it simply because a Magistrate was not associated even when there was sufficient time to call him. The Court is required to evaluate the evidence adduced by the prosecution to form its opinion whether the case is proved beyond reasonable doubt or not: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2415 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration recorded by Police Officer was natural, coherent, truthful, narrating incident without embellishment and explicitly identifying accused, held, conviction under S. 302, Penal Code solely on such declaration, is correct: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Del. 752 (D.B.).

Dying declaration recorded by Investigating Officer—Held, it should have been recorded at least in presence of Doctor after obtaining his certificate of fitness: 1979 W.L.N. (U.C.) 474 (Raj.).

Where accused threw acid on the deceased and Investigating Officer recorded statement of the deceased implicating the accused and there was no possibility of false implication, held, dying declaration was admissible: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 294 (All.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration recorded by Police does not stand self-condemned though the Courts generally look at such a dying declaration with suspicion, particularly when the Police did not requisition the services of a Doctor or a Magistrate when there was opportunity to do so. But where the occurrence took place at an unearthly hour of night and the victim was in a very serious condition and had died shortly after his removal to the hospital necessitating the recording of his statement by a Police Officer, held, it cannot be said that the services of a Doctor or a Magistrate were readily available, and that too before the injured would succumb to his injuries; the Police Officer acted wisely in recording the dying statement: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2644: (1992) 1 Crimes 1167: 1991 C.Cr.L.R. 297: (1991-92) 96 Cal.W.N. 233(D.B.). See also (1989) 3 Crimes 315 (Bom.); 1978 Mah.L.J. 324.

Legally, there may be no bar against recording of dying declaration by the Police Officer, however, it is safe as well as prudent to get it recorded through independent persons or the same be recorded in their presence and attested by them. In case this course is not followed, the dying declaration requires strict corroboration before it is accepted in evidence. Thus, where the Head Constable who recorded the dying declaration, did not explain the circumstances why he could not associate the independent witnesses or associate the Doctor actively and attested the document through him, held, such a dying declaration could not be relied on in absence of corroboration: 1995 Cr.L.J. 3134 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration made before the Police when the deceased had no motive to falsely implicate the accused, if otherwise without infirmities, held, may be relied upon though the prosecution's failure to get it recorded by the Magistrate is criticised: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 692: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. 284: 1987 Cr.L.J. 537: (1987) 1 S.C.C. 467: (1987)1 Crimes 250.

It is laid down in S. 162, Cr.P.Code, that the statements recorded by the Police cannot be treated as substantive evidence with the exception, inter alia, those recorded under S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act. A statement recorded as dying declaration by a Police Officer conducting the investigation if recorded after the medical opinion as to the person making the statement being in a fit condition to make it, would be as good as recorded by a Judicial Magistrate provided there is nothing to doubt the veracity of the witness recording the statement and the record of the statement being true and correct as made by its maker: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 73.

Where on getting information that the victim was admitted in a hospital, the Assistant Sub-Inspector straightway went there, met the doctor and recorded the victim's statement and thereafter issued F.I.R. on basis thereof, held, as the A.S.I. did not record the dying declaration in the capacity of an Investigating Officer, its legality could not be doubted: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 2013: 1989 Cr.L.J. 95.

Where the Investigating Officer had recorded the dying declaration even before the victim was certified by the Doctor to be fit for making a statement and though the victim survived for two weeks thereafter, the Investigating Officer made no efforts to get his statement recorded by a Magistrate, held, no reliance could be placed on such dying declaration: 1995 Cr.L.J. 3180 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where in spite of their being enough time and the victim being in conscious condition and also inspite of Magistrate being available on the day when the crime in question occurred, no valid reason was given as to why the Magistrate was not requested to record the same, held, dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer could not be relied on: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2789 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the Police Officer neither called a Magistrate nor the Doctor but volunteered to record the statement by himself and though the deceased's relations were present in the hospital none of them was called and even though the deceased was literate her signatures were not obtained on her statement, and he neither noted down the time of recording the declaration nor he recorded it in question answer form, held, no reliance could be placed on such a dying declaration: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 250: 1986 Cr.L.J. 155: (1985) 2 D.M.C. 451: (1986) 1 Hindu L.R. 117.

Where the victim's statement under S. 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was recorded by the Investigating Officer three days after the occurrence when neither the Doctor nor the nurse was present and no corroboration of the statement was obtained from any other hospital employee and the victim died 17 days thereafter and no explanation was forthcoming for not calling the Doctor while recording the dying declaration and not following other necessary formalities, held, the dying declaration, though otherwise admissible under exception to S. 162 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be better left out of consideration because it was not even known whether the victim was then fit to make the statement; not that such dying declarations are always untrustworthy but the need to resort to better and more reliable methods of recording declarations is emphasised: 1991 Cr.L.J. 356: (1990) 2 Cal.H.N. 62 (D.B.).

Where the Investigating Officer failed to get the deceased's statement recorded by a Magistrate during the period of nine days he was alive, held, though statement made by him to the Police amounted to a dying declaration in law, it was not worthy of acceptance: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1097: 1989 Cr.L.J. 879: (1989) 1 Crimes 689.

Where on getting information, the Inspector of Police reached the spot and the Government Doctor, also arriving there on examining the injured opined that the victim would not survive, whereupon the Inspector recorded his dying declaration in the diary and after a short while the victim died but the Inspector offered no explanation as to why he himself recorded the dying declaration instead of asking the Doctor to do so, held, apart from non-recording of the declaration by the Doctor, the prosecution did not produce the Doctor, the best person to depose about the mental or physical state of the injured at the time he made the dying declaration; no reliance could be placed on the declaration: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1049 (Gau.).

Where on the victim gradually recovering, his dying declaration was got recorded on an un-numbered page of the case diary by a Sub-Inspector, and not by a Magistrate as required by R. 25.21 of the Punjab Police Rules, and the declaration was attested by a family friend of the deceased, held, the declaration could not be taken as a genuine document: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Del. 118: 1979 Cr.L.J. 1477 (D.B.).

Where a Police Officer recorded a dying declaration contrary to the requirement of R. 6.22(3) of the Rajasthan Police Rules, 1965 not in the presence of two or more reliable witnesses unconnected with the Police or the parties and it was not immediately sent to the Police Station, held, no reliance could be placed on the dying declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. 691 (Raj.) (D.B.); 1992 Cr.L.R. 704 (Raj.); (1987) 2 W.L.N. 454 (Raj.).

Where the dying declaration was recorded by Investigating Officer in the presence of a Doctor witness soon after the occurrence on the ground that deceased with 100% burns was in critical state and there was no hope of her survival but was in a good state of mind to make a statement, held, conviction could be based on such a dying declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1079 (J.&K.) (D.B.). See also (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 33.

Where the injured was conscious and fit to make statement which, recorded by the Police, contained full details of the occurrence, held, it could not be discarded merely because it was recorded by Police: 1984 Cr.L.R. 441: (1984-2) 25 Guj.L.R. 1019: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 761.

Where the statement of the injured was recorded as parcha bayan and a case under S. 448 and S. 324 of the Indian Penal Code was registered, when as per the Doctor and the Station House Officer's testimony the injured was conscious and in a fit state of mind to give evidence, held, the parcha bayan was then not a dying statement; had the injured been in fact unconscious the case would have been registered under S. 307 instead of S. 324 of the Indian Penal Code, thus, non-requisition of the Doctor then to record the injured's statement was not fatal; the case under S. 302 of the Code was registered only when the injured had later on succumbed to the injuries: 1994 W.L.N. (U.C.) 1 (Raj.).

Merely because the dying declaration recorded by a Police Officer does not contain his signature, it cannot be said that it is not truthful: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 183 (Del.) (D.B.).

Under the relevant rules applicable to Delhi area, the Investigating Officers were not to scribe the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 2500; 1989 Cr.L.J. 157: (1987) 33 Del.L.T. 254: (1987) 3 Crimes 747; 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 170.

15. Form of recording.—The dying declaration should be recorded in question and answer form. It has several advantages. Court can judge whether any leading question was put to elicit a certain answer. Secondly, it can be found whether the victim made a coherent statement which will indicate as to whether the victim was in senses: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2644: (1992) 1 Crimes 1167 (Cal.) (D.B.); (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 542 (D.B.) [Advantage of recording it in question and answer form is that while appreciating the same it is apparent as to how much was suggested to the patient while recording the statement]. See also (1987) 3 Crimes 115 (Gau.).

When a Magistrate records a dying declaration, preferably it should be in question and answer form: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1738: 1980 Cr.L.J. 1257: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 240: 1979 U.J. (S.C.) 830.

It is not an indispensable requirement of law that it should be recorded in a question and answer form, and not in a narrative form. Recording of a dying declaration in a question and answer form may perhaps be a better mode but there can be no hard and fast rule: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 96: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1081.

Though preferably a dying declaration should be in question and answer form, there is no such rule that a dying declaration recorded in the form of a statement cannot be acted upon or would be less reliable or less trustworthy only on that account: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1049 (Gau.); (1988) 15 Cr.L.T. 450 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Where dying declaration made by the deceased was prompt, voluntarily given and properly recorded, held, fact that it was not in question-answer form would not make it inadmissible: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1886 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.); 1985 Cr.L.R. 79: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 559.

Where the dying declaration, recorded in narrative form, appeared to be in the words uttered by the deceased which were put into inverted commas by the Investigating Officer, held, its authenticity or veracity could not be doubted on that ground alone: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1106: (1989) 39 Del.L.T. 128. See however 1980 All.W.C. 27.

It is not necessary that a dying declaration must always be recorded in the form of question and answer though it is desirable to do so, a dying declaration not in the question-answer form does not deserve to be thrown in the dust-bin; the dying declaration of a seriously injured person recorded by the Head Constable who had rushed to the hospital on being informed about the medico-legal case not discarded merely because it was not in a question and answer form: (1981) 22 Guj.L.R. 426: 1981 Cr.L.R. 288.

Dying declaration—Recording of—Correct mode—It must be recorded in the exact words of declarant—It need not be in the form of questions and answers—Further, it may be open to objection if information is elicited by putting leading question: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1327: A.I.R. 1970 Assam 121 (D.B.).

Where the Executive Magistrate, after the injured was certified by the Doctor as fit to make the statement, recorded her declaration substantially as she narrated it but not in question and answer form, and he admittedly did not put different and separate questions to her, held, the form of recording the dying declaration by itself not being important, the dying declaration if otherwise not suffering from any infirmity, could not be discarded: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 233: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 1180: 1993 Cr.L.J. 298.

Where accused husband was alleged to have caused death of his wife but there was no connection between dying declaration and death and the dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate was not in the form of questions and answers and there was no proof that said declaration contained version of the deceased, held, said dying declaration could not be acted upon though dying declaration was not vitiated for the alleged failure of the Magistrate to record it in question and answer form. [A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 1180, Foll.]: 1994 M.P.L.J. 862: 1995 Cr.L.J. 17 (D.B.).

Where a dying declaration is recorded in question and answer form by the Medical Officer, held, the dying declaration being a solemn piece of evidence, there was no reason to discard the same as the Doctor was an independent person and the same was also corroborated by the evidence of eye-witnesses: 1993 Cr.L.J. 984 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration was not recorded in questions and answers form but it was like a statement stating prosecution's case and medical evidence itself showed that the victim was in a critical condition, held, in absence of corroboration, conviction could not be based on such dying declaration: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 107 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration which does not contain the note of the Doctor that the deceased was in a fit condition to make the statement and was not in the question and answer form and recorded by the Investigating Officer himself, held, raises the suspicion regarding the truthfulness of the statement allegedly made by the deceased: 1995 Cr.L.J. 2837 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the couple having pre-marital illicit relations were forced by their elders to enter into a dowryless marriage some twelve years ago and gave birth to 5 children and the wife, in her dying declaration properly recorded by the Investigating Officer as per law but not in question and answer form, stated that her husband at the instigation of his mother had poured kerosene oil and lit her, held, mere absence of the question and answer form did not render the dying declaration of no effect; the wife in the circumstances could not have made the statement unless it was warranted by facts: (1993) 2 An.L.T. 365 (Cr.): (1993) 3 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 9 (D.B.).

Where a newly wedded wife admitted with 90 per cent. burns on her person in the Hospital told to one Doctor preparing the case history that she was set to fire by her nanad (her husband's sister) and to another Doctor she named her Padma, held, as her husband had only one sister named Padma, the identity of the accused, thus, stood established; the dying declaration was duly proved by the Doctor's oral evidence fortified by contemporaneous documents; the dying declarations, being admissible and reliable, can sustain conviction; merely because they were not recorded

Exact words spoken by declarant.—The genuineness of dying declaration essentially warrants ascertainment of the exact statement made by the deceased: 1988 C.Cr.L.R. 75 (Cal.). Though the safe, sound and salutary rule is to record a dying declaration to the extent possible, ipaissima verba, i.e., in the exact words spoken, it is, however, not a rigid or inflexible rule; if there is otherwise unimpeached evidence that the dying declaration contains a true and correct record of what the declarant had stated, it does not lose its evidentiary value merely because the declarant's very words were not reproduced; what is to be seen is not the language but the substance: 1985 Raj.L.W. 97 (D.B.).

It is always proper if the dying declaration is recorded in the words of the injured, but simply because the very words uttered by the injured are not reproduced it is no reason to reject the dying declaration if the Court is otherwise satisfied that the dying declaration as recorded correctly reproduces what was stated by the injured. The person who records the dying declaration should also note down the questions put to the deceased. But mere omission to mention the questions in the dying declaration cannot be a ground for rejecting it specially when only general questions are put to the declarant. Held, on facts that the document did not contain anything beyond what was stated by mouth of the declarant, though it might be that at the time of giving dying declaration the deceased was making gestures: 1964 Raj.L.W. 228: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 559: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 130.

In the case of a dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate, when the exact words stated by a deceased matter and are of importance, a suggestion that the deceased might have said something by mistake cannot be entertained: 1953 Cr.L.J. 1772: A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 420. [Held to have been overruled in view of A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 130 and A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22 on another point in A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559].

Language of declaration.—Where a dying declaration was recorded in the language of the declarant, held, the same acquired added strength and reliability: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2574 (Cal.) (D.B.); A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1347: 1979 All.W.C. 57 [Where though the language was of the writer, substance was what the deceased stated, held, no infirmity on that ground could be alleged].

When the person recording the statement is not well conversant with the language spoken by the declarant, held, there must be cogent and convincing evidence to show that the statement recorded in a language different from the one spoken by the deponent contained its true version: 1984 Cr.L.R. 74: 1984 W.L.N. (U.C.) 557 (Raj.).

Where there were many inconsistencies between the versions of the Head Constable, who recorded the dying declaration and the Doctor who dictated it to the Head Constable and also there was no evidence to show that the Doctor understood 'Marwari' so as to translate in Hindi, while giving dictation to the Head Constable, held, no reliance could be placed on such a dying declaration: 1980 W.L.N. (U.C.) 204 (Raj.).

Where a dying declaration was made by the injured in Punjabi but recorded in Hindi at the dictation of the Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police who was, however, not examined as a witness, held, it could not be said that the Hindi version was a correct, accurate and faithful reproduction of the deceased's statement; no evidentiary value could be attached to it: (1987) 1 W.L.N. 438 (Raj.).

In the Punjab the dying declarations are taken down in Urdu, though the deceased gave the narrative in the Punjabi and that has been so ever since the Courts were established and judicial authority has never held that to be an infirmity in dying declarations making them inefficacious. As a matter of fact in the Punjab language used in the Subordinate Courts and that employed by the Police for recording of statements has always been Urdu and recording of the dying declaration in Urdu cannot be a ground for saying that the statement does not correctly reproduce what was stated by the declarant. This is a wholly inadequate reason, for rejecting the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 904: 1958 S.C.J. 106: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 38.

Where the lady was questioned in Hindi but her statement was recorded in Marathi by a Sub-Inspector of Police well versed in both the languages and there was endorsement, admitted to be correct, that her recorded statement was further read over and accepted by her to be correct, held, the dying declaration could not be discarded for that reason alone; though it is much better and always desirable that as far as possible it should be recorded in the maker's language: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 559: 1985 Cr.L.R. 79 (D.B.).

Where the Magistrate's questions and the 100 per cent. burnt victim's answers were in Sindhi, which, on translation into Hindi, were communicated to the constable who in his turn recorded them in Marathi; the statements so recorded in Marathi were read over to the deceased, obviously, by reversion of the entire process; but the endorsement on the dying declaration indicated that it was read over and explained to the deceased in Hindi, not in Sindhi as deposed to by the Magistrate; held, the dying declaration, not inspiring confidence, could not by itself sustain the conviction: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3269 (Bom.) (D.B.).

The mere fact that the language used in dying declaration is chaste while that used in the First Information Report has some words which are spoken by villagers, held, is not of much significance because there is nothing abnormal or unusual in the same person using colloquial language while talking to one person and using refined language while talking to another person: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 839: (1974) 4 S.C.C. 258: 1974 Cr.L.J. 709: (1974) 3 S.C.R. 570.

16. Dying declaration—Proof of.—160 I.C. 597: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 42. An oral statement of the deceased about the cause of his death may be proved by any one who heard it as well as by the person who recorded it. Under S. 521, Cr.P.Code, it is not necessary that the Magistrate recording the confession should be called and be asked to refresh his memory by referring to statements of witnesses under S. 159, Evidence Act: 31 I.C. 359: 16 Cr.L.J. 759 (M.).

A dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate is not evidence unless proved by the statement of the Magistrate though he is himself the committing Magistrate in the case. A Court cannot go beyond the rule that every statement placed on the record must be properly proved. Dying declarations are not covered by the provisions of Chap. XLI of the Cr.P.Code: 18 I.C. 883. See also 17 Punj. Re. 1911 (Cr.): 14 I.C. 417.

The only way of proving a dying declaration is by the evidence of some witness who heard it made, the witness being at liberty to refresh his memory by referring to the note made by him and read over by him at or about the time the statement is made: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 12. See also I.L.R. 49 Cal. 358: 71 I.C. 685; A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 382; A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 450; A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 228.

It is settled law that unless a dying declaration is proved by cogent and reliable evidence, it cannot be relied upon: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2457: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2598.

Witnesses should not be allowed to prove a dying declaration as if it is a substantive piece of evidence in the case. The relevant fact to be proved is the statement made and that statement is not the document made by the Magistrate: 67 I.C. 577: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 12.

Where a Magistrate who heard the dying declaration being made and at whose instance and under whose supervision it was recorded, has sworn to its authenticity, the non-production of the clerk who did only the writing work does not make the evidence of the Magistrate inadmissible or less reliable: A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 111: 52 Cr.L.J. 883.

The only satisfactory and reliable way of proving the dying declaration of a deceased person is to let the person who recorded it or in whose presence it was recorded directly prove the writing itself. Otherwise the proceedings would be reduced to a farce. No human being can be expected to remember word for word what he had written long ago and either the witness will have to learn the evidence by heart before he enters the witness-box or no dying declaration could be proved in a satisfactory manner at all: 176 I.C. 471: A.I.R. 1938 Pesh. 33.

Where a dying declaration has to be proved by a Magistrate it is unnecessary for him to repeat the record seriatim in his evidence if he is satisfied that it was correctly recorded; it is sufficient for him merely to refer to the record and testify to its correctness, and that it was made by the person and under the circumstances in question: 1941 Rang.L.R. 258: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301.

Where the original dying declaration, testified by the Magistrate to have been given to the Head Constable who testified to have prepared a copy thereof and returned to the Magistrate, had been lost, held, the prosecution was entitled to give secondary evidence thereof which would consist the Magistrate's as also of the Head Constable's testimony that the copy prepared from the original was a true copy: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1567: 1979 Cr.L.J. 108: 1979 All.W.C. 56. But where the original dying declaration had been lost with no copy thereof having been made and nothing indicated that non-production of the dying declaration was deliberate or with an oblique purpose, held, no adverse inference could be drawn against the prosecution; mere plea that the dying declaration might have contained something different and favourable to the defence would not prove prejudice: 1984 All.W.C. (Supp.) 256.

Where the informant died before the commencement of the trial and the Investigating Officer who recorded the First Information Report was also not examined, held, such First Information Report cannot be admitted in evidence under Ss. 32 or 33: 1971 B.L.J.R. 353. See however 1976 Cr.L.R. 675: 1976 W.L.N. (U.C.) 403 (Raj.), cited under Note 18, infra.

17. Dying declaration—Oral or through signs and gestures.—It is well settled law that even an oral dying declaration quite apart from a written one and in some given instances a communication that is intelligible even if it is through signs and gestures could still be relied upon provided it inspires complete confidence in the mind of the Court. Where immediately after arrest, the two accused were taken to the hospital where the deceased was lying in a serious condition and he, by gestures, indicated that one of them stabbed him while the other was holding him when he was being stabbed and as many as three persons had in terms stated that the deceased had clearly conveyed the same to them without any ambiguity, held, even though there was no verbal statement that would constitute a valid dying declaration within the meaning of S. 32(1): 1993 Cr.L.J. 3883 (Bom.) (D.B.). See also I.L.R. (1971) 21 Raj. 541.

A dying declaration under S. 32(1) may as well be oral; though it may not be taken at an equal footing with a declaration formally reduced to writing. [A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 14; A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301; A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 243; (1958) 60 Bom.L.R. 153 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1994, Rel. on]: 1978 Mah.L.J. 324 (D.B.).

The word used is 'verbal' and not 'oral'. Such a dying declaration may, therefore, be in writing or oral or may be made by signs and gestures in answer to questions when the declarant is unable to speak: (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 186: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1058 (D.B.).

In a trial for murder, the doctor who treated the injured person deposed that after the said person had slightly recovered she stated that the accused had caused her the injuries. From the evidence it appeared that her answer was not in response to any leading question. This evidence of the Doctor was corroborated by that of the Investigating Officer and there was no evidence which went counter to it. Subsequently, the injured person succumbed to her injuries. Held, that this evidence of the person's dying declaration though not reduced into writing, could not be rejected: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 82: 1956 Cr.L.J. 509.

The questions put to the dying person who could not speak and the signs made by him taken together amount to verbal statements within the meaning of S. 32 of the Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 301: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 405; I.L.R. 49 Cal. 600: A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 409.

Signs made by an injured person either by a nod of the head to indicate assent or by the sign or motion of fingers or hand in answer to questions put to him for finding out the identity of the individual causing the injury amount to verbal statement within the meaning of S. 32(1): 1956 Cr.L.J. 1240: A.I.R. 1956 Sau. 83.

It is true that when the dying declaration is in writing, the Court is in a better position to assess the import of the declaration. But in a case where the verbal declaration asserts that the accused assaulted the deceased, there is no room for confusion or construction, if those witnesses are reliable and their evidence is acceptable. Therefore, the argument that the oral dying declaration should not be accepted as the Court is not in a position to know the exact statements made, cannot be accepted: 31 Cut.L.T. 387: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 907: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 118.

A dying declaration is not a statement which requires to be in writing. Oral evidence as to the statement made by the injured person who happens to die subsequently would prove the declaration. If the declaration is recorded the record would be merely a note made by the witness and would not be substantive evidence: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 540 (Guj.).

Gestures made before the death by the person murdered are admissible in evidence, but the opinion of the witnesses as to the meaning of such gestures is not evidence, the interpretation of the gestures being for the Court alone: I.L.R. 1 Pat. 401: A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 535. See also I.L.R. (1937) Bom. 68: A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 372; A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 153.

Where the witness had seen the boy, profusely bleeding from his neck wound and asked him as to what happened and the boy unable to speak pointed out at the accused whose clothes were blood-stained, held, in the context it amounted to the boy's oral dying declaration that the accused had caused the injury: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 9: 1988 Cr.L.R. 6 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration can be made in writing or oral or even by gestures. Thus, where a Magistrate, wholly independent and disinterested, in the presence of the Doctor, asked questions to which the injured replied by head nods, held, the dying declaration could not be faulted for that reason alone; on facts the Magistrate's performance lauded as ideal and doing credit to a judicial officer: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. (U.J.) 28 (D.B.).

Though the rule of 'ipsissima verba', i.e., before a dying declaration is accepted by a Court as such, 'actual words of the declaration must be proved' is a very salutary rule, it cannot be held that unless the actual words are repeated by each witness of the declaration, it is not possible for a Court to come to the conclusion that the declarant made a declaration or what the import or meaning of that declaration was. Thus, where the declaration of the deceased is also the evidence of his conduct which supplies a very important circumstantial link in the chain of circumstances of the case and where in the setting in which the witnesses find themselves, it is difficult for them to be able to correctly reproduce the words which they heard the deceased utter after he had been shot, all that they can be expected to say is that the words very similar to the words that they purport to put in the mouth of the deceased were uttered by him, and the witnesses can be relied upon to that extent: 1957 All.L.J. 459: A.I.R. 1957 All. 177.

Unless one is certain about the exact words uttered by the deceased, no reliance should be placed on verbal statements of witnesses and the oral declarations made by a deceased:1953 Cr.L.J. 1772: A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 420 [Held to have been overruled in view of A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 130 and A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 22 on another point in A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559]; 1963 Ker.L.J. 309: I.L.R. (1963) 1 Ker. 609: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 101.

When the dying declaration is oral, the exact words stated by the deceased to the witnesses are of the utmost importance and if witnesses improve upon their statements by varying their versions that evidence becomes unreliable. Where there is no consistent version as to what were the words used by the deceased, the alleged dying declaration has only to be eschewed: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 175: 1963 M.L.J. (Cr.) 194: A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 54.

Merely because oral dying declarations do not reproduce the exact words of the deceased in direct form or recorded declaration are not in question-answer form, held, they are not thereby vitiated; it has to be ascertained in each case on its own facts whether the declaration is truthful or not: 1994 M.P.L.J. 862: 1995 Cr.L.J. 17 (D.B.).

It is almost improbable, if not impossible, for the witnesses to remember the exact words of the deceased after lapse of almost a year, but where they had remembered the essential part of the version given by the deceased at the time when he was in the agony of death, held, the dying declaration cannot be discarded on this ground alone: 1990 Cr.L.J. 2720 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Oral dying declarations are to be scrutinised with care. Unless the Court is in a position to know the exact contents of the dying declaration, it would be difficult to base a conviction thereon. The Court has, therefore, to be sure as to what exactly was the statement of the deceased. There is no longer any controversy that a conviction is well founded on the dying declaration itself if it is reliable. Corroboration is not essential in all cases. There is no inherent weakness in dying declaration as a piece of evidence: If it is not free from any infirmity, corroboration, is necessary. Held, that the oral dying declaration satisfied all the tests usually adopted to scrutinise it, that is; the memory and the consciousness of the deceased consistency of the statements, definiteness about the identity of the accused and whether it was made at the earliest opportunity, and hence conviction on the basis of that was proper: 1966 Cr.L.J. 336 (Ori.).

Before the testimony of a verbal dying declaration can be accepted it should at least be consistent. There should not be serious discrepancies relating to the evidence of a dying declaration: A.I.R. 1955 All. 189: 1955 Cr.L.J. 473.

In an oral dying declaration, which is sought to be proved by the prosecution there is always a chance for something being added or something being subtracted by the person before whom it is made. But where the declaration has been recorded in writing by the Magistrate and it was read over to the deceased there can be no doubt about the fact that whatever is mentioned in the dying declaration is the faithful statement of the deceased himself: 1956 Raj.L.W. 178: 1957 Cr.L.J. 240.

In case of an oral dying declaration the Court must first satisfy itself on evidence whether the oral declaration had in fact been made and only then proceed to ascertain, as far as possible, the exact words of the dying person; it is only thereafter that the truthfulness and reliability of the statement may be determined: (1975) 1 A.P.L.J. 265 (D.B.).

Undoubtedly a dying declaration based upon oral evidence requires further evidence to lend assurance to the matter, not because the dying declaration is not true or could not form the basis of conviction, but because the judicial mind must be clear that mistakes are eschewed out: (1976) 42 Cut.L.T. 80: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1347: 1976 Cut.L.R. (Cr.) 209 (D.B.).

The witness testifying the deceased's statement as to the cause of his death, must faithfully reproduce it; he should make no additions or improvements in the deceased's statement; if the witness does so a serious infirmity would creep in the dying declaration; the Court shall have no option but to reject it: (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 33.

Where the victim had named the assailant to the witnesses who promptly conveyed the same to the Police, held, the victim's oral declaration could be considered as evidence: (1990) 2 Bom.C.R. 51 (D.B.); 1977 All.W.C. 20 [Evidence with regard to alleged dying declaration was found to be unbelievable].

In a trial for murder, the Doctor who treated the injured person deposed that after the said person had slightly recovered she stated that the accused had caused her the injuries. From the evidence it appeared that her answer was not in response to any leading question. This evidence of the Doctor was corroborated by the Investigating Officer and there was no evidence which went counter to it. Subsequently, the injured person succumbed to her injuries. Held, that this evidence of the person's dying declaration, though not reduced into writing, could not be rejected: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 82: 1956 Cr.L.J. 509; A.I.R. 1960 Punj. 310.

18. Satisfaction as to state of mind of declarant.—When a dying declaration is recorded, the person who records the statement must be satisfied that the person who makes the statement is consciously making the statement understanding the implications of the words he uses: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1776: 1972 Cr.L.J. 828; (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 108 (S.C.). See also (1987) 2 W.L.N. 444 (Raj.); 1982 All.W.C. 596: 1982 All.Cr.R. 353 [It is the first duty of the Doctor to certify about the fit mental condition before recording statement of a seriously injured person].

Though in absence of a medical certificate that the patient was in a fit condition to make a statement, the burden is on the prosecution to prove that the patient was in such a condition, but once the prosecution proves same through facts and circumstances of the case, it is then for the defence to successfully assail that position: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3883 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Merely because the Doctor did not certify on the dying declaration that the deceased was in a fit state of health to give the statement, it would be only an irregularity, cured by the Doctor's and Head Constable's statement in the Court: (1977) 2 Karn.L.J. 350: I.L.R. (1977) Karn. 1276.

Where the deceased in her dying declaration clearly implicated the accused as having set her on fire; even though she had 100 per cent. burns, they were generally superficial; and she was then fully conscious as certified to by the doctor, held, veracity of her dying declaration could not be doubted, even if the doctor had not certified that she was in a fit condition to make the declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2035: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 702 (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration was challenged on the ground that the deceased was in a state of shock, however, the Doctor was not cross-examined as to the fact whether or not despite the shock, the deceased had retained his mental faculties, on the other hand, the coherent and consistent statement made by the deceased clearly revealed the fact that the deceased was fully conscious and was not suffering from any confusion or hallucination, held, the challenge was without any force: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 207. See also 1979 All.W.C. 60.

Where the Doctor had deposed that the deceased was in a fit state of health to make a declaration and that when she recorded the dying declaration, the deceased was capable of deposing and was in her senses and that when she was recording her dying declaration, 'she had started going into coma', held, there was no reason for not placing reliance on the dying declaration recorded by the Doctor: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 860: 1987 Cr.L.J. 775: (1987) 1 D.M.C. 162: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 169: (1987-1) 35 B.L.J.R. 372: (1987) 1 Crimes 385: (1987) 2 S.C.C. 32.

Where both before and after recording the dying declaration the Magistrate obtained certificates from the Doctor that the deceased was in a fit state of mind to make the statement, held, simply because the Magistrate did not put a direct question to the deceased as to whether she was in a fit state of mind to make the statement, the dying declaration could not be discarded: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3414 (S.C.); 1994 Cr.L.J. 1275 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the injured had intensive burns and in great pain, held, it cannot be believed that she was mentally fit to make the statement; since the Magistrate, in disregard of his duty, had neither called the Doctor nor asked her direct questions to ascertain her mental capability, it would be unsafe to convict the accused on the basis of her dying declaration: (1988) 2 W.L.N. 102: 1988 Cr.L.R. 376: (1988) 2 Raj.L.R. 130: 1988 Raj. Cr.C. 214. See also 1978 M.P.L.J. 327: 1978 Jab.L.J. 513; 1983 M.P.W.N. 247.

Where the Special Executive Magistrate deposed that he had satisfied himself that deceased was in a perfectly fit condition to make a statement and the Police Officer also supported his version, and there were no interpolations and no apparent inconsistencies and the version set out in that dying declaration was consistent with the versions given in earlier two declarations, held, inspite of non-obtainance of the doctor's endorsement regarding fitness of the patient on the dying declaration, the same could be accepted and relied upon: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3883 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate in violation of Rr. 3 and 5 of Ch. 13-A of the Rules and Orders of Punjab High Court, i.e., without satisfying that the declarant was in a fit condition to make statement or without obtaining fitness certificate from the Medical Officer and without obtaining signatures or thumb-impression of the declarant, held, was not admissible: 1990 Cr.L.J. 790 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the difference and inconsistency between her statements was material and the deceased had suffered 80 per cent. burns, held, it is extremely doubtful that any of her statements could be true; they are liable to be

From the mere fact that the deceased had hundred per cent. burn injuries of second and third degree, held, it could not be presumed that the deceased was not physically and mentally fit to give dying declaration. [A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 860: 1987 Cr.L.J. 775, Foll.]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1004 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the injured admittedly had 88 per cent burns and must have been in grave agony and pain and administered sedatives and tranquilizers, held, her dying declaration when she could not have given a cogent and coherent statement even if she was conscious could not be expected to constitute evidence sufficient to prove the accused's guilt beyond reasonable doubt: 1986 Cr.L.R. 501 (Mah.).

Where the deceased, an educated house wife, admitted to hospital, had 95 per cent. burn injuries and had been injected with morphia, held, Doctor's certificate about the deceased being fit to make the statement was clearly doubtful; especially when the statement was not signed by the deceased but bore only her thumb-impression without any explanation therefor: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 10 (Del.) (D.B).

Where the dying declaration of a woman with 95 per cent. burns was recorded by one Doctor and another Doctor certified her to be conscious and fit to make statement, held, merely because another Doctor of the same hospital who performed the post-mortem examination had stated in cross-examination that she might not have been in a position to speak, a mere opinion based on the post-mortem certificate cannot be taken into consideration; the dying declarations including the one recorded earlier by the Police were sufficient to base conviction upon: 1995 Cr.L.J. 689 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where there was no evidence to show that the declarant was mentally conscious, had realised her dying condition or that she possessed memory consciousness or intelligence sufficient to understand what she was doing or saying, held, it would be hazardous to act upon it and convict the accused: 1972 Raj.L.W. 629: 1972 W.L.N. 648: 1973 Cr.L.J. 723. See also 1983 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 29; 1978 M.P.W.N. 165; (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 310 [Where declarant was seriously injured and was also in drunken condition, held, conviction could not be based on his dying declaration].

Where in the absence of any motive on the part of the accused to commit the offence the Court also found that the deceased, having 6 degree burns, could not possibly had made an intelligible statement and that the declaration recorded did not inspire its confidence either, held, it would be risky to act upon the dying declaration: (1992-1) 12 Guj.L.H. 577.

Where the two Medical Officers and the Investigating Officer recording the declaration clearly testified that the deceased was then in a fit state of mind to make the statement but the lay witnesses had testified to the contrary, held, it is well settled that in such a case weightage has to be given to the medical experts' testimony: (1990-1) 38 B.L.J.R. 139: (1990) 3 Crimes 168 (D.B.). See also (1986) 13 Cr.L.T. 317 (J.&K.) (D.B.).

It is the verification of the fitness of the deponent as evident from the written dying declaration which is of importance and not the subsequent statement of the person recording the statement or present at the time: 1984 W.L.N. (U.C.) 557: 1984 Cr.L.R. 74 (Raj.); (1989) 1 Raj.L.R. 594.

Where the two Doctors who had attended the deceased as well as the Executive Magistrate deposed that the patient was conscious and in a position to give his dying declaration when he made the same, held, reliance could be placed on such dying declaration: 1983 Cr.L.R. 303 (Guj.).

Even where the Magistrate who had recorded the dying declaration had died, held, his endorsement on the statement that he had satisfied himself about the mental condition of the victim could certainly be believed: 1976 Cr.L.R. 675: 1976 W.L.N. (U.C.) 403 (Raj.). See however 1971 B.L.J.R. 353 cited under Note 16, supra.

Where the Doctor had certified and deposed that the injured was conscious and fit to make the statement, held, it cannot be rejected merely because the injured person's pulse was not palpable, his blood pressure was not recordable and he was gasping; it does not necessarily render him unfit to make the declaration: A.I.R 1978 S.C. 1530: 1978 Cr.L.J. 1603. See also (1991) 1 Crimes 349 (Guj.).

Even an injured in serious condition being given oxygen may have moments of improvement; thus, it cannot be said that he could not be fit to make the statement: 1985 Cr.L.R. 691: (1987) 2 Raj.L.R. 600.

Before a conviction can be based on a dying declaration, it must inspire confidence so as to make it safe to act upon it. Thus, where the deceased's vital organs like the peritoneum, stomach and spleen were completely smashed, held, it was impossible to believe that he was in a fit state of mind and body to make any kind of coherent or credible statement relating to the circumstances which resulted in his death; his dying declaration could not be relied upon for any purposes and had to be excluded from consideration: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 554: (1983) 2 S.C.C. 411: (1983) 1 Crimes 1059.

19. Capacity of victim to make declaration.—Where a deceased received a serious spear wound which penetrated the chest wall and injured the diaphragm, liver and stomach. Held, that the deceased could not possibly have lived for two hours after receiving an injury of this description, much less could have been conscious. The probability of his ever living to make a dying declaration two hours later was too remote to be considered: 39 Cr.L.J. 508: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 268. See also 174 I.C. 989: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 262.

The deceased had received numerous and very serious injuries on his head and it was very doubtful whether under such circumstances he would have been able to utter even a single word. There was no definite opinion of the doctor as to whether deceased would have been then able to speak. Held, that the evidence of the prosecution witnesses in respect of the alleged oral dying declaration of the deceased should be discarded: I.L.R. 8 Luck. 570: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 333.

The prosecution alleged that the deceased who had been severely hit several times by the accused fell down unconscious. The eye-witness who was grazing his camels in a nearby field went to him and sprinkled some water on him. Thereon the deceased recovered consciousness and then was led to a threshing flood at a short distance where he made a statement to J regarding the assault. From there he was taken to a neighbouring town to the shop of G where he again made a statement to G. The prosecution relied on the evidence of the eye-witness and also the dying declaration proved by G and J for the conviction of the accused for murder. From the doctor's evidence it was found that it was improbable, that the deceased would have been in a position either to walk or speak so as to make a dying declaration. Apart from the fact that the statement of G and J suffered from material contradictions at various stages the evidence of eye-witnesses was also found to deserve being disregarded. Held, in these circumstances the evidence of G and J could not be a sure foundation for maintaining the conviction when the evidence of the sole eye-witness was disregarded. Ordinarily, the dying declaration of the kind which the prosecution relied upon in the case was by itself sufficient for sustaining a conviction on a charge of murder: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 589: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 478.

Where the dying declaration itself indicated that the injured could not have been in a conscious state after the incident when he was picked up and taken to the Hospital where he was soon operated upon and an attempt at night to record his dying declaration was also abandoned and yet the witness seeking to prove the oral dying declaration claimed that the deceased had told him the names of the accused, held, the witness is guilty of introducing absolutely untrue testimony; his evidence has to be discarded: (1984) 2 Bom.C.R. 633 (D.B.).

Where it was alleged that the deceased had made dying declaration to eye-witnesses, though the Doctor who examined the injured opined that there would have been instantaneous shock, the Doctor who conducted the post mortem was of the view that the deceased might have been conscious and might have been able to speak for some time, held, such variance was not sufficient to rule out the possibility of the deceased having made the alleged dying declaration: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1831: 1979 Cr.L.J. 1358.

Where the F.I.R. lodged by the father, after he had admitted his son to Hospital, with mention of the dying declaration as well as other material details and the witnesses of the declaration, though interested were declared hostile yet the High Court accepted the dying declaration after considering admissions made by the hostile witnesses in their cross-examination by the prosecution, held, since nothing in the Doctor's evidence indicated the deceased's inability to make the declaration, the accused's conviction was justified: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 250: 1993 Cr.L.J. 304: (1993) 2 (Supp.) S.C.C. 274: (1992) 3 Crimes 904.

Where medical evidence showed that deceased would have lost all his faculties after stabbing, held, the alleged dying declaration made by the deceased could not be relied upon: (1985) 28 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 19 (D.B.).

Where the Doctor's evidence was that the deceased was brought to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition and that he became unconscious while making out the statement and could not speak out anything more and died, held, his evidence that he read over the contents of the declaration to the maker after it was written and then took his thumb impression carried no meaning or value because at that time the patient was virtually dying or dead and had no sense whatsoever to understand the recital. Further, there was no endorsement on the said dying declaration to the effect that the statement was read over to the maker. Thus, these infirmities weakened the value of the dying declaration: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1333 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Mere omission of the Magistrate to ask the declarant whether he could speak or not would not invalidate the declaration: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1916 (All.) (D.B.).

Oral statements corroborated by testimony of more than one witness including independent witness, held, cannot be rejected merely because the ability of the injured to make declaration was not supported by medical evidence: 1981 Cr.L.J. 530 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where nature of injuries inflicted on the deceased was fatal so as to make it improbable that he could make any dying declaration and sufficient time had passed when the witnesses arrived at the place of occurrence where the deceased was lying and there were infirmities in witnesses' evidence, held, no reliance could be placed on such dying declaration: 1992 Cr.L.J. 161 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased was said to have made dying declaration to the Investigating Officer while in semi-conscious state, held, when in view of nature of injuries the dying declaration could not be said to be true version, it could not be acted upon: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 75 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Where the condition of the deceased and the injuries received by him raised a suspicion regarding making of any statement by the deceased to the Police. See 1994 Cr.L.J. 314 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased's post mortem report disclosed that his mouth, oesophagus and pharynx were choked and his stomach was full of food, making it impossible for him to speak, held, his oral dying declaration was not free from doubt; it had no evidentiary value: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1058 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased suffering injury at the back of his neck was in a speaking condition as his vocal cord was intact and the evidence of the witnesses before whom the deceased named the accused as the person responsible for causing his injury was satisfactory, held, dying declaration was reliable: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1516 (Pat.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased suffered injuries on the root of her neck but her speaking organs, i.e., the tongue, mouth, pharynx and larynx and windpipe, escaped injury and there was no impediment in her making the dying declaration; the Doctor had also opined that she could survive for half an hour and, with bleeding controlled, even for a longer period and he was not cross-examined on the point; held, it could not be contended that she was rendered incapable of speech and unable to make the statement; conviction sustained: (1992) 1 An.W.R. 631: (1992) 1 An.L.T. 562: (1992) 2 Crimes 796 (D.B.).

Where the deceased did not die at the spot but on the way to the hospital, held, even though seriously injured, it could not be said that he could not make dying declaration to a person taking him to the hospital: 1994 Cr.L.J. 494 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

20. More than one dying declaration.— When there are more than one dying declarations they should be treated as one to assess their evidentiary value and weight; if they are contradictory, the maxim morituris proesuniture mentiri—a man will not meet his maker with a lie in his mouth—stands wiped out; but keeping in mind that this maxim represents the psychic effect on the persons of all religions, it cannot so easily be done away with; the effort should be to ascertain if there is a real contradictory version or only some omissions; absolute truth is not the requirement of a valid dying declaration; the requirement expected is that the deceased is not making a false accusation: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3709 (All.) (D.B.).

If there are more than one dying declarations, the Court is required to scrutinise each one to find out whether it passes the test of trustworthy; the Court must also further find out whether they are consistence with each other in material particulars. It is only then that the declarations can be accepted and relied upon to record conviction: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 511 (S.C.).

Where there are more than one dying declarations, all the dying declarations should be consistent. The consistency must be with regard to the assailants and the manner in which the incident had happened. It is not right to say that in a case where there are more than one dying declarations, the Court has to compare all the dying declarations in order to assess the extent of incrimination. Thus, where in the subsequent dying declaration, names of some more persons as his assailants were mentioned which were not mentioned in the earlier dying declaration, held, this improvement introduced a serious infirmity in the subsequent dying declaration and in the absence of any other evidence on record corroborating the version contained therein, it could not be accepted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3782 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the earliest of several dying declarations was found to be truthful, held, it could be relied upon: (1977) 1 S.C.C. 762: 1977 S.C.C. (Cr.) 181.

In case of more than one dying declarations, held, the one first in time must be preferred to any of the subsequent statement: 1980 S.C.C. (Cr.) 334.

Where two dying declarations made by the deceased were inconsistent and unreliable on material points, held, the conviction could not be based on sole dying declaration recorded by Magistrate whereunder the deceased alleged that her father-in-law had set her on fire: 1994 Cr.L.J. 872 (All.) (D.B.).

The existence of two dying declarations of the deceased does not automatically and invariably mean that the earlier statement should be accepted and the later be necessarily rejected; in assessing their credibility, the Court has to apply the ordinary rules.

Thus, where the wife coming out from her house engulfed in flames and her statement in the Hospital before the Head Constable made it a case of suicide and later on her statement was recorded by the Judicial Magistrate in the presence of the Doctor after taking all necessary precautions wherein she mentioned her husband, troubling her for 3 months, to have lit her by a matchstick after having poured kerosene over her, held, the second declaration later in time was rightly preferred by the trial Court; there is nothing to indicate that the later statement emanated by any outside, hostile influence or tutoring; her first declaration was made in the hope of surviving with a view to shield her husband; she came out with truth as she found herself face to face with death, the moment of truth: (1993) 1 An.W.R. 131: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 140: (1992) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 49 (D.B.).

Dying declarations given by the deceased three times—All the three, free from blemish and inspiring complete confidence—Held, conviction could be based on such dying declarations, even if uncorroborated: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1583: A.I.R. 1967 All. 561.

Where the dying declarations by the wife about to die, having suffered 90 per cent. burn injuries, recorded by the Investigating Officer, the Medical Officer who examined and treated her in the hospital where she was brought and the Metropolitan Magistrate that her husband had killed her by pouring kerosene oil over her and setting her ablaze were found to be natural and voluntary and in consonance with other evidence on record, held, there being no ground to discard the dying statements, the husband's conviction was rightly founded upon them: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3454 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the first dying declaration, very short, recorded immediately on arrival in hospital of the injured, in great pain and agony, was found to be 'nothing but truth' and the second declaration recorded after his removal to another hospital contained more detailed particulars of the occurrence suggesting that the latter declaration might not have been given by the deceased, held, even if that be so, it did not in the least affect the validity or the weight of the first declaration which was sufficient to sustain the conviction. [I.L.R. (1971) 1 Punj. 437, affirmed on this point]: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 705: 1977 Cr.L.J. 347: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 311: 1977 U.J. (S.C.) 76.

Where in all the three dying declarations, the deceased had implicated the accused, held, the evidence of eye-witnesses who were related to the deceased could not be rejected when their presence at the scene place was most natural and probable especially when their evidence was amply corroborated by the medical testimony of Doctor and as well as by the other witnesses: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2173 (Mad.) (D.B.).

Where dying declarations made by the deceased before his parents and close relative soon after the incident and then to the Doctors and thereafter to the Investigating Officer after having been declared fit for making a statement were consistent, held, such a dying declaration could be relied upon: 1992 Cr.L.J. 730: (1991) 43 Del.L.T. 554 (D.B.).

Where the two dying declarations recorded by Head Constable and a Magistrate were proved to be authentic and were in the language of the deceased, held, merely because the wife of the deceased was present at the bed-side of her seriously injured husband could not cast any suspicion as in such condition her presence was natural: 1977 Cr.L.R. 402 (Raj.).

Where the dying declarations made to the Village Kotwal, Head Constable of Police and also to the Executive Magistrate, had been deposed to and proved by witnesses who were independent and these declarations had been made in circumstances which could not suggest that the victim was persuaded, forced or coaxed to make allegations against the accused, held, those dying declarations could be relied upon to convict the accused: 1979 Bom.C.R. 507 (D.B.).

Where first dying declaration was made by deceased a day after the occurrence which was recorded by Police Officer and second dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate eleven days after the occurrence and which was similar to the first dying declaration, held, the two declarations could safely be taken to have corroborated each other: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2574 (Cal.) (D.B.); 1986 All.W.C. 30. Where all the three dying declarations made to the Sub-Inspector, the Doctor and to the Magistrate had a distinctive feature of

When there is no material difference or contradiction between dying declarations, held, some minor discrepancies would not affect their genuineness: 1988 Cr.L.R. 705: 1988 W.L.N. (U.C.) 578 (Raj.); (1985) 2 W.L.N. 49: 1985 Cr.L.R. 691 (Raj.) [Minor infirmities in the statements given to the Doctor, the Station House Officer and the Judicial Magistrate, held, would not affect their veracity].

Merely because the injured had orally told his brother that the accused had given him a pick-axe blow while in his recorded written declaration he had stated that the accused had thrown the pick-axe at him, held, it could hardly be taken as an infirmity to reject the declarations: (1984-2) 25 Guj.L.R. 1019: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 761: 1984 Cr.L.R. 441.

Where the only discrepancy in the dying declaration of the injured, having 88 per cent burns and in great pain and agony, was about the factum of the accused having abused her through out the night or only most of the night, held, it was only a minor but natural discrepancy; it does not detract from the veracity of the declaration: 1985 Cr.L.R. 79: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 559 (D.B.).

Where three dying declarations, recorded respectively by a Doctor, by a constable and attested by a Doctor, by an Executive Magistrate and endorsed by a Doctor, that the deceased had been set on fire by her husband, held, none of the declarations suffer from any infirmity; they satisfy all the tests; merely because one of the dying declaration was not in question or answer form, they cannot be discarded; conviction upheld: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 1180: 1993 Cr.L.J. 298: (1993) 2 An.W.R. 29: (1992) 2 D.M.C. 516: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 8: (1993) 2 (Supp.) S.C.C. 242: (1992) 3 Crimes 633.

Where the deceased wife murdered by having been set ablaze had made six dying declarations, three of them fully exonerating the husband and the rest three completely implicating him; the two declarations of implications to her sister and brother-in-law who was a real brother of the accused, were rendered unproved as her sister and brother-in-law during the trial turned hostile, obviously to save the accused; the declarations exonerating her husband were made by the deceased to the Doctor on her medico-legal chart in the hospital and then to the Assistant Sub-Inspector of Police in the hospital itself further adding that the burning lamp had accidentally fallen on her bed; it is thereafter that the Police applied for recording of her dying statement by the Magistrate which was recorded after strict compliance with the procedural requirements and the Doctor's certification of her being fit to make the statement wherein she explained away her earlier statements of exoneration having been given by her under the threat and intimidation by her in-laws; this statement having been rightly accepted as true and voluntary, held, the accused's conviction based thereon sustained: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 90 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where two dying declarations, one recorded by the Doctor in the medico-legal history and other by a Judicial Magistrate after complying with all formalities and precautions, showed that the wife had been lit at night by her husband who had poured kerosene oil over her and both were duly proved and there was other evidence on record to corroborate their truthfulness, held, there being no infirmity in the evidence of the witnesses of the declarations, even otherwise independent and reliable, the dying declarations were rightly accepted; conviction upheld: 1985 Raj.L.W. 719 (D.B.).

Where the two dying declarations made within a period of $3^1/_2$ hours were consistent and were corroborated by ocular as well as medical evidence, held, the accused was rightly convicted: I.L.R. (1975) 25 Raj. 971: 1975 Raj.L.W. 435: 1975 W.L.N. 812. See also (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 126.

Where the two dying declarations were inconsistent, held, they could not be accepted without corroboration: 1977 Cr.L.R. 70 (Raj.).

Where in a case of bride burning, the deceased had made four dying declarations varying by stating therein that (1) her mother-in-law had poured kerosene on her and burnt her; (2) her clothes caught fire from the stove; (3) that her mother-in-law and father-in-law might have set the fire after pouring kerosene oil over her; and (4) when she turned to the store, she heard her parents-in-law talking who poured kerosene upon her and set on fire; she had admitted that it was her husband who had rescued her; and the husband testified that he had suffered burns while rescuing her when he heard her shrieks from the kitchen but stated that his parents were away to Dandi Swami Mandir on the date of occurrence; held, the dying declarations could not be accepted as they did not satisfy one important and necessary test that if there are more than one declarations they must be consistent in material particulars; the second, declaration attributes the occurrence to accident; conviction set aside: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 374: 1993 Cr.L.J. 68: (1993) 1 D.M.C. 4: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 489: (1992) 3 Crimes 1088: (1993) 1 S.C.C. 1.

Where the deceased had made two dying declarations which abounded in contradictions and the place of occurrence mentioned therein was found to be different from the one ascertained in the investigation and the deceased's letters on record pointed not towards death by murder but by suicide, held, conviction of the accused was totally unjustified: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1436: I.L.R. (1984) Him. Pra. 793.

Where there were improvements in subsequent dying declaration and certain persons not mentioned in earlier declaration were also named in the second one, held, it could not be relied on. [1976 M.P.W.N. 292, Rel. on]: 1982 M.P.L.J. 772.

Where the deceased had made two dying declarations and there was some scope for tutoring the deceased and in fact the case was developed from stage to stage even by the deceased himself when he made a second dying declaration, no reliance can be placed on the dying declarations: (1964) 6 Ori.J.D. 44.

Where the deceased in his earlier dying declaration in his village home had named the accused as his assailant but in his subsequent dying declaration before the Doctor he described the accused as somebody's sala, that some body having four salas, held, it would be safer to acquit the accused by giving him the benefit of doubt: 1979 Raj.L.W. 267: 1979 W.L.N. 384 (D.B.).

Where the injured was first beaten by sticks by the accused who later on in another incident also hurled a bomb on the injured who was then removed to the Hospital where his statement was recorded by the Police and about 4 hours thereafter the injured's statement was recorded by the Magistrate; however, while the injured narrated both the incidents in his statement recorded by the Police but in his statement before the Magistrate he stopped short at the stage where he had completed narration of the first incident, held, the injured might not have stated the second incident before the Magistrate due to exhaustion felt by him due to the fatal bomb injury; as both his dying declarations were corroborated even by independent evidence, conviction of the accused was justified: (1991) 2 An.L.T. 668 (D.B.).

21. Details/Particulars in declaration.— The quantum of details in a dying declaration depend upon the injured's capacity for observation, his condition at the time his statement is recorded, his anxiety to mention details and the manner in which questions are put and answers elicited; may be the wealth of detail in the declaration may arouse suspicion but it does not necessarily mean that the declaration is fabricated; the dying declaration on facts accepted as true: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1347: 1979 All.W.C. 57.

To enable the Court to assess evidentiary value of a dying declaration it must necessarily have the whole of the deceased's statement, untampered in its terms or tenor. Law does not require that a dying declaration must cover the whole incident or narrate the case history; indeed, quite often, all that the victim may be able to say is that he was beaten by a certain person or persons due to the suddenness of the attack or the conditions of visibility or the victim's physical condition preventing him to recapitulate the entire incident or to narrate it at length. In fact, many a time, dying declarations, copiously worded or neatly structured, excite suspicion for bearing traces of tutoring: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2199: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 104: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1717.

Under the law a dying declaration need not be exhaustive, and need not disclose all the surrounding circumstances. It cannot be ruled out because of an omission to refer to a particular circumstance of the transaction, namely, motive, nor can any argument be built upon what the declarant has not said in his declaration: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1656 (Raj.) (D.B.).

It is not the requirement of law that the person making the dying declaration should make an elaborate and exhaustive statement so as to cover each and every aspect of the incident and narrate the whole history of the case. Where deceased specifically stated that it was the accused who poured kerosene oil and set her body on fire by lighting a matchstick and there was hardly any occasion for the deceased to escape from there, held, when according to the medical evidence the deceased had suffered 90 per cent. burns and must have been under a severe stress and agony, and, therefore, it was not possible for her to make a very detailed statement covering the minutest details which could not be expected under the facts and circumstances of present case, the impugned statement did not suffer from any infirmity so as to render it doubtful or unworthy of reliance: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 777.

Where the dying declaration recorded by the Station House Officer in hospital in the presence of the Doctor, who certified that the deceased was in a fit state of mind contained necessary details such as the name of the accused, the manner of the assault and the weapon of the offence used, held, it was admissible in evidence: 1980 Raj.Cr.C. 49: 1980 Raj.L.W. 112: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1474 (D.B.). See also 1979 Cr.L.R. 11 (Raj.).

Where the dying declaration, recorded just after the incident and shortly before the death, clearly mentioned all the accused persons and there was no doubt about their identity, and it was substantially corroborated by medical evidence and also by the testimony of eye-witness, held, the dying declaration could not be discarded merely because it did not give precise description of all the instruments of offence and also the precise description of the manner in which the injuries were inflicted: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1328: 1987 Cr.L.J. 1065: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. 383: (1987) 3 S.C.C. 360.

Where the dying declaration is mentioned at the earliest in the fard beyan of the witness and it contained the manner and weapon of the assault and the assailants, corroborated by evidence of other witnesses as well as by medical evidence, held, it is a credible dying declaration; it has got sanctity because the deceased as he stands before his creator, is the last person to speak the untruth: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Pat.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration giving details or role played by the accused and also of the presence of prosecution witnesses, held, cannot be discarded: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 86 (Ori.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration is not complete unless complete names and addresses of the accused persons are given in the dying declaration. Thus, where the deceased had uttered only two words with difficulty which were the first names of the two accused, held, no reliance could be placed on such dying declaration : 1993 Cr.L.J. 3869 (Gau.) (D.B.). See also (1980) 2 M.P.W.N. 185.

Where deceased made a declaration implicating the accused but the Sub-Inspector who recorded the dying declaration committed a serious mistake in not eliciting the particulars of the accused so as to repel possibility of a mistaken identity and there was no material to identify the convicts with the assailants, held, conviction could not be based on such dying declaration: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2644: (1992) 1 Crimes 1167: 1991 C.Cr.L.R. 297: (1991-92) 96 Cal.W.N. 233 (D.B.).

Where the deceased in his statement recorded under S. 161, Cr.P.Code had simply named the accused as his assailant without giving name of his father or the place of his residence, held, no reliance could be placed upon the said statement because the identity of the assailant could not be established: 1990 Cr.L.J. 119 (All.) (D.B.).

Where in the dying declaration made to the doctor, the deceased had clearly implicated the accused giving his particulars, namely, his residence and his brother's name also and the Doctor who recorded his statement deposed that the deceased was conscious and was in a fit mental condition at the time of giving the statement, held, said dying declaration was rightly relied upon: 1994 Cr.L.J. 240 (S.C.).

Where the deceased in his dying declaration mentioned the date, time and place of occurrence, the names of the accused and their weapons, etc. and the testimony of ocular witnesses was also found to be reliable, held, the accused could be convicted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 848 (All.).

Where the dying declaration recorded by a stipendary Magistrate was very coherent and bore thumb mark of the deceased as his arm was injured, held, merely because the deceased failed to name a third culprit would not be sufficient to discard the dying declaration: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 79 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration was very detailed giving graphic narration of the entire history of the case, starting from the motive, the enmity and minutest features of assault, held, it smacked of concoction, especially when it was not attested either by the deceased's wife present there or the doctor present in the hospital: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1578: 1981 Cr.L.J. 998.

Dying declarations being the groaning utterances of a dying woman in the grip of dreadful agony, held, cannot be judged by the standards of fullness of particulars which witnesses may give in other situations. To discredit such dying declarations for shortfalls here or there or even in many places is unrealistic, unnatural and unconscionable if basically there is credibility: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1226: 1980 Cr.L.J. 925: (1980) 3 S.C.C. 301.

Where the deceased, while making dying declaration to a Magistrate, was in severe bodily pain, and words were scarce, held, his natural impulse would be to tell, without wasting his breath on details, as to who had stabbed him; the very brevity of the dying declaration, far from being a suspicious circumstance, was an index of its being true and free from the taint of tutoring: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1519: (1976) 2 S.C.C. 788: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1186.

The mere fact that though the deceased had stated in his dying declaration that he had objected to the accused abusing the deceased's son whereupon the accused had stabbed the deceased but did not mention how the accused had sustained injuries, held, the High Court was not right in rejecting the declaration on that ground; the injured being in great agony and his words being scarce, interrogating him further would have been sheer torture; the crux of the whole matter was as to who had stabbed him and why: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 617: 1981 Cr.L.J. 9: 1980 (Supp.) S.C.C. 455.

Where the prosecution had examined an eye-witness when the dying declaration mentioned the names of two others and not of this witness, held, it is doubtful whether the eye witness was in fact present there: 1988 Mah.L.J. 147: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 234 (D.B.).

Dying declaration—Evidentiary value—Dying declaration made under solemn sense of impending death—Deceased accompanied from place of occurrence to hospital by eye-witnesses to incident—Two of accused mentioned in dying declaration acquitted on basis of benefit of doubt—Name of one of eye-witnesses not mentioned—Occurrence taking place in day light—Eye-witness account strengthening reliability of such declaration—Such declaration is good evidence and is not untrue: I.L.R. (1969) 19 Raj. 641: 1969 Raj.L.W. 601.

Absence of names of eye-witnesses in the dying declaration would not by itself introduce an infirmity in the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1738: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 240: 1980 Cr.L.J. 1257.

Where the dying declaration was not produced in the Court by the prosecution because the victim had survived and examined as a prosecution witness who was confronted with her 'dying' declaration produced for her cross-examination by the defence under the Court's orders wherein she had not named two accused whom she had implicated in her statement before the Court, held, that by itself is no ground to give benefit to the accused named in the 'dying' declaration, particularly when the case rested on her sole testimony; but the two accused not named in the declaration were entitled to the benefit of doubt: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3251 (S.C.).

22. Signatures/Thumb-mark of declarant on dying declaration.—Generally the signatures of the maker of dying declaration are taken when it is reduced in writing; but when such signatures were not obtained and even the doctor, who was incharge of the Dispensary was not taken into confidence, held, no reliance could be placed on such dying declaration: 1986 Cr.L.R. 62 (Raj.).

Where the dying declaration, recorded by a Magistrate, did not contain the signature of the deponent, namely, the deceased and there was no explanation that the deceased was not in a position to put his signature and further neither the time of recording of the statement nor the date was mentioned in the dying declaration, held, no reliance could be placed on it: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 129: 1994 Cr.L.J. 617.

Absence of thumb-impression of deponent on the statement made to the Executive Magistrate, due to severe burn injuries, held, is immaterial, even though this fact was not mentioned in the dying declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 238 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration reduced to writing but not signed by the deponent is not admissible in evidence but must be proved by the oral testimony of the person who heard it. Notes of Police Officer relating to a dying declaration are not admissible in evidence, unless signed by the deponent, but in testifying to it, he can refer to them to refresh his memory: 23 I.C. 195: 10 Nag.L.R. 19.

Where a dying declaration recorded by the Tehsildar could not be signed by the victim because of his physical handicapness nor thumb-marked due to non-availability of the stamp pad, held, the declaration could be relied upon if otherwise truthful and trustworthy: (1990) 2 Bom.C.R. 51 (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration of the deceased recorded at the Police Station was a complete statement in that it made a clear accusation against the accused having stabbed the deceased and there was nothing to show that the maker of the statement had anything further to add but the dying declaration was not complete in the sense that on account of sudden collapse of the deceased his thumb impression to the statement was taken only after his death in the presence of witnesses.

Held, that the dying declaration was admissible in evidence and could be taken into consideration even without any corroboration: (1962) 3 S.C.R. 869: (1962) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 71: A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 1252.

Where the Doctor recording dying declaration failed to take either the left thumb impression or right thumb impression of the deceased on the statement and explained this lapse that because of extensive burn injuries on the body including two hands, he could not do so, held, as nothing prevented the Doctor to get the statement attested either by the Investigating Officer who was present, or by any of the medical staff or in the worst case by the relations of the deceased, said dying declaration could not be relied upon: 1995 Cr.L.J. 2412 (Ori.) (D.B.).

23. Non-examination of scribe of dying declaration—Effect.—Where the scribe of the dying declaration, a constable, was not examined and, thus, the defence had no opportunity to cross-examine him, held, in absence of any explanation regarding the cause for non-production of the scribe of the document, no reliance could be placed on it: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2457: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2598.

Absence of witnesses in dying declaration and non-examination of person who recorded it and above all contradictory to medical evidence make such dying declaration unworthy of reliance: (1988) 1 Crimes 673 (Pat.).

Where dying declaration was recorded by a Doctor and a witness attested it and also identified signature of Doctor, held, in such circumstances mere non-examination of Doctor would not make the dying declaration inadmissible: 1995 Cr.L.J. 689 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

24. Inconsistency between ocular/medical evidence and dying declaration.—A dying declaration not supported by medical evidence, held, cannot be relied on: 1988 C.Cr.L.R. 75 (Cal.). Where deceased in his dying declaration stated that he was stabbed twice by the accused while the medical evidence showed that there was only one incised injury, held, said statement of the deceased could not be relied upon: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1250: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 515 (D.B.).

Where according to the Doctor the deceased was not in speaking condition as his condition was precarious when the alleged dying declaration was recorded and his evidence ran counter to the evidence of Circle Inspector of Police who claimed to have recorded the dying declaration, held, no reliance could be placed on the said declaration: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2379 (Mad.) (D.B.).

Where in his dying declaration the victim stated that he was hit by a single shot and the Doctor who immediately thereafter examined the victim categorically deposed in the Court that the victim had one entry and one exit wound but the Doctor who performed the autopsy stated in his cross-examination that he was unsure whether the wound of exit was of entry or exit, held, it could not be contended that the dying declaration on the point was not credible when the defence had not suggested to either of the Doctors in their cross-examination that there were two shots, not one: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1916 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the accused, hacking the deceased with daos, had chased away the three eye-witnesses to whom, on their return to the scene, the injured gave the accused's names and died within an hour or so; the F.I.R. lodged without undue delay also contained the accused's names; and the Doctor opined from the nature of injuries that the deceased might not have been able to talk immediately after the occurrence, held, since the deceased as per the post mortem report was a 'stout built male' and only one out of the ten injuries was fatal, the Doctor's evidence could not be accepted as conclusive; the dying declaration accepted as true and acted upon: 1991 Cr.L.J. 199 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where there were suspicious features about a dying declaration that while the Doctor found not only burns on the deceased's body but also other injuries which could have been inflicted by lathis and caused lacerations and haematoma, the deceased in his statement made no mention at all of any such injuries even when one of the injuries had resulted in fracture of his sternum nor of the manner in which his sternum could have been fractured, held, the circumstances cumulatively led to the irresistible conclusion that the deceased was unconscious and had made no statement: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1021: 1982 Cr.L.J. 986.

Where the deceased in his dying declaration had attributed his injuries to a rebounded glass bottle and assault with an iron rod and cricket bat by the accused but it was not supported by medical evidence, held, it is not safe to act upon the declaration: 1984 Cr.L.R. 176 (Mah.).

Where there was inconsistency between ocular and medical evidence as to the cause of the injury on the deceased's body and the testimony of the prosecution witnesses of the dying declaration was found to be unreliable as it was most unlikely that the deceased was in a fit mental state to make the statement, held, the accused could not be convicted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1440 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the prosecutioon version regarding the incident as stated by the eye-witnesses materially differed from the version unfolded by the dying declaration, held, no reliance could be placed on the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1519: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1485; (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 405: (1984) 1 Crimes 108; 1988 Raj.Cr.C. 134.

25. Delay in recording/giving/disclosing about dying declaration.—Where the deceased wife was said to have been set on fire by her husband at 10 P.M. but she was removed to the village hospital next day at 3 P.M., her dying declaration was recorded in the presence of her relatives and there was no explanation for the delay, held, the husband's acquittal by the trial Court could not be reversed: (1988-1) 8 Guj.L.H. (U.J.) 22 (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration of the deceased, who was admitted at 2.30 P.M., was recorded by the Magistrate at 5.10 P.M. in questions and answers form after the Doctor certified that she was conscious and fit for making statement and same was corroborated by her statement earlier made to a Head Constable, held, the delay in recording statement was negligible in the circumstances of the case: 1994 Cr.L.J. 446 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Only evidence against accused-husband was the alleged dying declaration made by deceased to her mother—Mother disclosed to Police about such statement only after five days of occurrence—Her evidence suffered from a number of other infirmities which rendered her story inherently improbable—Accused acquitted. [(1975) 2 Cr.L.T. 119 (Him. Pra.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 436: 1980 U.J. (S.C.) 122: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 564.

Although the deceased was conscious at the place of occurrence, at the time when he was put on the lorry and also at the time when he was brought to the Nursing Home and was in a position to speak but he did not disclose the names of the assailants to anybody—Evidence showed that he did not know names of the accused nor was he able to identify them in darkness—There was also possibility of tutoring—Magistrate though knew that deceased was suffering from severe pain, did not put a direct question about his mental condition—Held, no conviction could be based on such dying declaration: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1994: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1548: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 618.

Where an oral dying declaration purportedly made to two witnesses was not submitted to the Police till their statement was recorded on the third day after the occurrence and there was no explanation for such unnatural delay and there was no corroboration of the accused having committed the offence, held, his conviction could not be sustained: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 464: 1994 Cr.L.J. 138.

Where the dying declaration allegedly recorded by the Sub-Inspector of Police was produced for the first time in the Court when he appeared in the witness box on the ground that though he had recorded the statement of injured in the hospital but as he was inexperienced, he did not submit it in the Court nor supplied a copy thereof to the accused, held, such a document was not entitled to any credence: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3782 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased implicated only her mother-in-law and not her husband and father-in-law, despite not being on good terms with them, and her dying declaration was corroborated by her statement in the Accident Register, held, the facts indicated the truthful nature of the dying declaration; a gap of two hours from her admission in the hospital and the recording of her dying statement would not justify the inference of her being tutored by her parents: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3240: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 692 (D.B.). See however (1990) 2 Crimes 574 (Bom.) [Where though conscious and in a condition to make statement, the deceased did not name the accused for three hours, held, the accused's complicity in the crime was improbable].

26. Illustrative cases.—Where immediately after the F.I.R. was lodged and the Station House Officer came to the scene and recorded the victim's dying declaration, removed him to the hospital where on the Doctor opining that the victim's condition was deteriorating, the Munsif Magistrate was called who also recorded another dying declaration and the Doctor certified that the victim was conscious and fit to make statement but the second dying declaration ended abruptly as the victim's condition had further deteriorated, held, it did not affect the declaration's evidentiary value as it was complete insofar as the accused's role was concerned. [1978 W.L.N. (U.C.) 103: 1978 Cr.L.R. 328 (Raj.), Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 705: (1989) 37 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 24: 1989 Cr.L.J. 845: (1989) 2 Crimes 181.

Where the Medical Officer, otherwise supporting the prosecution, stated at the fag-end of his cross-examination that he could not say whether or not the Assistant Sub-Inspector had correctly recorded the dying declaration, and that not satisfied with its recording he did not attest the declaration; no suggestion was put to the Medical Officer or indeed to other prosecution witnesses by the defence that though the deceased had mentioned a different person as the assailant, the Assistant Sub-Inspector had substituted him by the deceased's real brother; held, the suggestion was unbelievable; any way the Medical Officer's sporadic admission had no significance and did not affect the veracity of the dying declaration; it could be safely accepted and acted upon: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 559: 1992 Cr.L.J. 520.

The mere fact that some of the persons named by the deceased in her dying declaration were not challaned, held, does not detract from the value of the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559: 1980 Cr.L.J. 408: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 207.

Where the Doctor had asked all the necessary questions that could be asked from the deceased and he could not answer the last question 'what more you want to say', because he became semi-unconscious and was unable to answer any further question, held, the last question being merely of a formal nature, it could not be said that dying declaration was an incomplete one: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 559:1980 Cr.L.J. 408: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 207.

Where during the period of one hour the deceased was conscious, the bed ticket was written by Doctor wherein the deceased complained of misbehaviour by her brother-in-law and it stood not only corroborated but clarified by identifying, by entry in injury report, the brother-in-law as the person responsible for the crime, held, there was no reason to doubt its authenticity: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 2134: 1990 Cr.L.J. 2276.

Where the dying declaration was recorded by a Judicial Magistrate and the Doctor certified that the patient remained conscious during the period her statement was recorded and the Judicial Magistrate recorded a certificate that said statement was recorded by him and it contained true version of her statement and she had thumb-marked the same, held, such a statement clearly inspired confidence: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 2037: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 571: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3660: (1992) 2 S.C.C. 559.

Where (i) the names of the fathers of the accused and their addresses were known to the deceased and the persons who accompanied him to the Police Station were not mentioned; (ii) the assault had taken place in a jungle on a dark night which might cause mistaken identity; (iii) deceased or his relations had given no reason for the attack by the accused; and (iv) there were other persons in the same village on inimical terms with the deceased and having same names as the accused had, held, the deceased's dying declaration could not be acted upon without corroboration: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1557: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1045.

Where dying declaration was made within one hour of the occurrence and names of all the accused as well as of the witnesses were mentioned therein and the statement was a short one and even the Doctors who examined him did not say, that having regard to the injuries, the deceased would have become unconscious immediately, held, there was no doubt of the truth of the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1505.

Where name of one of the accused persons did not appear in the dying declaration but his name was clearly mentioned in the F.I.R. as having instigated the assault on the deceased which was lodged within an hour of the occurrence, held, the accused was not entitled to benefit of doubt, even though there was enmity between the accused and the informant, as there was corroboration by other independent witnesses: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1440.

Where on being attacked, during night time, the deceased shouted and his close relations woke up and came near him to whom he made a dying declaration and there was no finding that any independent witness from the village arrived at that time when the deceased was shouting the names of his assailants, held, the evidence regarding the dying declaration was reliable and believable: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1433.

Only weapon said to have been used was stated to be a saif, by the deceased in dying declaration—No mention of bhallas or use of any other weapon—One of accused who was stated by deceased to have first used said weapon, was not prosecuted—Version given in F.I.R. found to be entirely different—Held, conviction could not be solely based on such dying declaration: A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 1395: (1973) 3 S.C.C. 312: 1973 Cr.L.J. 335.

Merely because the two constables deposed that when they were coming for duty, the deceased came running towards them raising cries 'save me, I am stabbed by one person' and he did not name the assailants, held, such an involuntary exclamation, without being asked by those constables as to who his assailant was, could not be put on the same par as a dying declaration and cannot be a ground to reject the dying declaration recorded by the Sub-Inspector later in the presence of the Medical Officer in which he had named his assailant: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1181: 1979 Cr.L.J. 708.

Site plan prepared by the Investigating Officer supported dying declaration on the point of place of incident—Medical evidence too in tune with the manner of incident as stated in the dying declaration—It also found corroboration from oral testimony—Held, the fact that (i) deceased did not make any mention of his son, who was an eye-witness and who was also an informant, and (ii) it did not account for the injuries on the persons of the accused, would not effect the evidentiary value of the dying declaration: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1172: 1972 Cr.L.J. 746.

Though Magistrate did not obtain Doctor's certificate about fitness of the deceased to make statement, there was ample evidence that there was no room for any person tutoring her and nobody was present when Magistrate recorded her statement and that too in a very short form and there was other corroboration to such statement, held, such statement could be relied on for basing conviction thereon: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 945: 1972 Cr.L.J. 532.

Where the bed-head ticket in the hospital contained the endorsement that as per the patient, he was injured by somebody who shot at him and it was admittedly not a dying declaration which was later on recorded by an Executive Magistrate and which categorically averred that he saw the three persons at the scene out of whom the accused only had shot at him without exhortation of his companions, the deceased's bitter enemies, held, the declaration is not a result of tutoring; it is true and voluntary; conviction upheld: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 948: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1290: 1992 All.L.J. 1122.

Where the deceased had stated to his co-villagers that he identified two accused amongst the dacoits and this was written down on a paper and was signed by some of the villagers and there was also a reference to the said statement in the F.I.R. and the witnesses also deposed in the Court about the said statement having been made by the deceased, held, merely because there was no mention in the F.I.R. that the said dying declaration was made in writing, no adverse inference could be drawn: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 912: 1988 Cr.L.J. 936.

Where even though there was some enmity between the deceased and the accused—his son, held, if the son was not the real assailant, it was most unlikely that his father would, in his dying moment, try to falsely implicate his own son; this circumstance was sufficient guarantee of the truth of the dying declaration made by the deceased. [A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1776, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 519: 1978 U.J. (S.C.) 108: (1978) 1 S.C.C. 622.

Where the condition of the deceased, a boy of 12 years of age, was very serious when his dying declaration was recorded by the Investigating Officer and a person who bore enmity with the accused was all along with the deceased and accompanied him from the place of incident to the hospital, held, there being suspicious circumstances, said dying declaration could not be relied upon without corroboration: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 332: (1974) 4 S.C.C. 264: 1974 Cr.L.J. 361.

Where the injured's 2 paged statement recorded under S. 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was very detailed and extremely coherent but not signed by him or any witness and neither the Doctor nor a Magistrate was called to record it and the injured had been given no first aid and the Doctor had opined that the injured was likely to enter semi-comatic stage in an hour or two, held, the dying declaration was a concoction and fabrication liable to be rejected: 1991 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 22 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Where the gupti, the weapon of murder, recovered with the accused's assistance otherwise not possible, was stained with blood for which the accused had no reasonable explanation and the deceased, knowing the accused very well, told his own brother aged 14 years, the name of his assailant and died within half an hour of the assault, and the nature of injuries and eye-witnesses corroborated murder by the accused, held, the evidence of the dying declaration given by the deceased's brother, who had also seen the occurrence, could not be dubbed as tutored merely because of his tender years; the dying declaration stood proved; conviction upheld: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 65: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 1: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3704: (1992) 4 S.C.C. 225.

If a dying declaration is made in circumstances in which there arises a suspicion that the deceased might have been prompted by the friends or sympathisers to drop out some of the culprits and to substitute or add other, then it must be used with the greatest possible caution. At the same time, it may be remarked that imaginary suspicion should not be created and dying declaration should not be thrown out without good reasons. For instance, where a person is assaulted by only one or two persons and if his dying declaration is properly recorded, and if there is no circumstance to doubt his statement, his dying declaration should not be discarded simply on an imaginary suspicion that he might have substituted another person for the real culprit. Mere presence of relative cannot be considered to be a ground for suspicion, because it is but natural that friends and near relatives must reach the injured person as soon as information is received: 1956 Raj. L.W. 178: 1957 Cr.L.J. 240.

Dying declaration made to a relative by the deceased cannot be discarded on that ground: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2294: 1992 All.L.J. 749 (All.) (D.B.).

A dying declaration cannot be disbelieved merely because relatives of the deceased were

Mere fact that relatives of victim carried him to the hospital would not warrant inference of tutoring of victim: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1916 (All.) (D.B.).

Where the injured was taken to the hospital by her mother and two brothers, held, the possibility of her mother and brothers, inimical to the accused as they were, influencing her cannot be ruled out: 1986 Cr.L.R. 501 (Mah.).

Where right from the place of incident till the hospital, where the deceased's statement was recorded by the Magistrate, he was surrounded by his friends, well-wishers and brothers, held, it was quite likely that those persons availed every possible opportunity to tutor and brain-wash the deceased and in these circumstances, it could not be said that the statement was an untutored version given by the deceased; no reliance could be placed upon such dying declaration: 1993 Cr.L.J. 86 (All.) (D.B.).

Where dying declaration was recorded in the presence of the deceased's brother, held, as possibility of tutoring could not be ruled out, no conviction could be based thereon: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 107 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased before giving his declaration was practically in the midst of his friends and admirers right from the time of the incident till all of them were asked to clear the emergency ward evidently for the purpose of recording the dying declaration, held, it could not be relied on: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 129: 1994 Cr.L.J. 617.

Where the deceased, on his own, did not bear any enmity or hostility to the accused and none of the persons who were in the company of the deceased, after he was assaulted, had any particular animus for implicating the accused falsely, held, the fact that after the attack, the deceased was all along accompanied by a large number of persons was not enough to conclude that he was tutored; thus, his dying declaration could be relied on: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2199: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 104: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1717.

Great weight must naturally and necessarily be attached to the dying declaration, recorded shortly after the occurrence; merely because some friends and relatives happened to be with the deceased before his statement was recorded, the statement cannot be thrown out as tutored: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1181: 1979 Cr.L.J. 708.

Where the dying declaration was corroborated by the eye-witnesses and did not suffer from any inherent improbability or inconsistency, held, mere presence of relatives would not make it a tutored dying declaration: 1988 Cr.L.R. 705: 1988 W.L.N. (U.C.) 578 (Raj.).

Where the witnesses, who accompanied the injured, were present at the time of recording of dying declaration, held, as chances of influencing and tutoring could not be ruled out, such a dying declaration could not be relied upon: 1984 W.L.N. (U.C.) 557: 1984 Cr.L.R. 73 (Raj.). See also 1987 W.L.N. (U.C.) 560 (Raj.).

Where the deceased wife had made two oral dying declarations, one to her sister and the other to a Police Sub-Inspector, and her third statement was recorded by the Executive Magistrate without certificate of fitness from the Doctor but neither in Hindi which she understood nor in question-answer form but in English, the language she was not well versed with, and all this after she had first been shifted to her father's and then to her maternal grand mother's house and then to the Hospital, having all along been with her near relations, for almost 12 hours, held, her dying declaration was naturally influenced by her relatives and tutored; it was not safe to rely upon it: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 107: 1992 Cr.L.J. 616: (1991) 3 Crimes 709 (Del.) (D.B.).

Deceased assaulted and strangulated by accused—Dying shrieks of deceased, naming wife and son, deposed to by wholly independent, natural and reliable witnesses—Admissibility—Evidence of such witnesses consistent—Witnesses neighbours, having no animus against accused—Neighbours enquiring about shrieks duped by accused by explaining deceased to have been drunk—Morning after the incident, younger children sent to school as usual—Brother of deceased also told on that morning that deceased was still asleep—No explanation given at any stage by accused—Blood-stained rope recovered at instance of son—Motive for offence proved—Case is not precisely of circumstantial evidence alone—Dying shrieks of deceased are direct testimony and given hint regarding motive—Such shrieks are dying declarations and each gravely and conclusively incriminates qua the two accused—Conduct of accused is added circumstance against them—Recovery of rope is strong link in prosecution evidence against son—Failure of son to furnish any explanation and patent falsity of explanation of wife are additional factors against them—In case of circumstantial evidence non-explanation and false explanation are certainly factors from which adverse inference can be raised against accused—Evidence in the case is consistent only with guilt of accused wife and son and inconsistent with any other rational explanation—Hence, accused are guilty under Ss. 302 and 34, I.P.Code: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 280.

Where there was history of deep-rooted enmity between the accused and the victim as the accused had earlier kidnapped the victim's sister and the accused had lodged a case for attempt to murder against the victim, the accused stabbed the victim in the abdomen and made good his escape. Two of his dying declarations were recorded in the Municipal dispensary: (1) by the Sub-Inspector called there in the presence of the Medical Officer; and (2) by the Executive Magistrate in the presence of the Medical Officer and also attested by another Medical Officer; the victim expired within hours of stabbing. The evidence of the eye-witnesses was consistent and convincingly established the accused's guilt. Held, merely because there were some insignificant discrepancies as to whether the deceased was taken to the dispensary on foot or a cycle or whether the knife was lying on the road or carried away by the accused, is no ground to acquit the accused; acquittal set aside: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 475: 1994 Cr.L.J. 145.

Where the dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate in question and answer form was certified by the Doctor to have been made when the deceased was in a good and conscious mental state and was amply corroborated by evidence of witnesses whose presence at the spot was proved by the injuries suffered by them in the same occurrence, held, it could not be rendered inadmissible merely because of some incorrect particulars of the accused's motive mentioned therein; conviction sustained: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1607: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2191.

On instructions of casualty Medical Officer, a House Surgeon recorded dying declaration as Magistrate was not available—Such statement, in which victim had named his assailants, was read over to him who affirmed it to be correct and put his thumb impression thereon—Accused challenged such declaration relying on an entry in injury certificate where it was stated that somebody had stabbed the injured—Held, such entry in the injury certificate did not necessarily amount to a statement and the Doctor being highly independent witness, there was no reason whatsoever for him to speak falsehood and when there was ample corroboration to the dying declaration, conviction was justified: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3547 (S.C.).

Where the only piece of evidence was the dying declaration wherein the deceased had implicated four accused persons but two accused were discharged by the trial Court, held, the case of the other two accused was not distinguishable or separable from that of the two discharged accused; so, the entire prosecution case had to be discarded: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1333 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where a dying declaration was made at the earliest opportunity and the deceased named his brothers as his assailants but nothing on record indicated that the deceased had consulted other relations before naming his brothers and the declaration read as a whole had a substratum of truth, held, the deceased struggling between life and death could not be said to have falsely implicated his brothers even if he had strained relations with them: 1979 Raj.L.W. 267: 1979 W.L.N. 384 (D.B.). See also 1992 Cr.L.R. 591 (Raj.).

Ss. 32 and 158—Murder—Deceased beaten by the three assailants and stating names of assailants—Deceased in statement 5 years back stating that his vision was poor and blurred—Held, his previous statement was admissible in evidence.

Held, on facts, that the identity of the assailants could not be fixed by the testimony of the three eye-witnesses of the occurrence and hence in the circumstances it was not safe to convict them under S. 302 read with S. 34, Penal Code merely on the basis of a dying declaration made by a person who had admittedly borne enmity towards the respondents and whose eye-sight was poor and vision blurred. The first information report dictated by the deceased was admissible in evidence under S. 32(1) and could be read as the dying declaration of the deceased. Further the statement made by the deceased 5 years back was also admissible in evidence under S. 158: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 4: 1965 All.Cr.R. 34: 1964 All.L.J. 1134.

Where a dying declaration recorded during investigations by Police, by and large true, had also mentioned the accused having injured two persons, which could not then be in the knowledge of the injured, held, the declaration is rendered a bit doubtful; it is safe to leave it out of consideration: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1173: 1979 Cr.L.J. 700.

Where the language of the dying declaration was amenable to two interpretations regarding the accused being one of the assailants and the High Court adopted the interpretation favouring the accused, held, it is not proper for the Supreme Court in appeal to take the other possible view: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 315: (1978) 1 S.C.C. 130: 1978 Cr.L.J. 347.

Where the deceased was on evidence fully conscious when her dying declaration was recorded by the Police and she had named her assailants as also how the occurrence took place but the High Court disbelieved her without reasons whereby the evidence of most of the prosecution witnesses including Doctors stood rejected and disbelieved for no valid reason, held, the acquittal order of the High Court was liable to be set aside: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1543: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1785: (1989) 2 S.C.C. 425: (1989) 2 Crimes 13.

Where the Executive Magistrate recorded the dying declaration in narrative form and not in question and answer form and there was Doctor's endorsement that patient was fully conscious and in fit condition to make the statement and though the Magistrate deposed that Doctor was present at the time of recording, the Doctor denied it, held, no reliance could be placed on that dying declaration and history of patient recorded in Medico-legal register could not be regarded as dying declaration : 1978 Cr.L.J. 1017: 1977 Cr.L.R. (Mah.) 122 (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration of a wife set afire by her husband and in-laws was recorded about 3 weeks before her death by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in her very words in the absence of any interested persons when the Doctor was present and certified that she was fully conscious and in a fit condition to speak—the Doctor and the Magistrate also testifying thereto in the Court as well, held, the dying declaration was not rendered inadmissible merely because it was not made in question-answer form or her friends and relations were with her prior to the recording of the declaration; the declaration coupled with the medical evidence alone were sufficient to sustain conviction: 1995 Cr.L.J. 312 (All.) (D.B.).

Where dying declaration as a whole was recorded in the circumstances which were free from suspicion though it contained a recital which was untrue but which could be separated from the declaration, held, dying declaration could be relied upon: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1313: (1987) 89 Bom.L.R. 370: 1987 Mah.L.J. 820: (1987) 3 Bom.C.R. 1339 (D.B.).

Where the accused had stabbed his co-tenant to death by knife which was recovered pursuant to his disclosure statement and his conviction was based also on medical evidence as well as a dying declaration of the deceased made to the landlord and the landlord's wife as also on evidence of the neighbours, held, the conviction could not be set aside merely because there were some discrepancies as to who first came to the scene: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 1.

Where the Magistrate recorded the dying declaration of the victim in the Medical College Hospital after complying with all requisite formalities wherein she stated that her husband's sister had struck her on the back-side of her head whereupon she fell down immediately and when regained consciousness, she was engulfed in flames and smelt kerosene and she suspected, on asking, that she must have been set to fire by her sister-in-law, held, merely because in another dying declaration she had said that her sister-in-law had struck her by a firewood would not make them mutually contradictory; the dying declaration recorded by the Magistrate could be relied on. [A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1994, Foll.]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1711 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Where on the dying declaration, recorded by the Doctor, there was no attestations of the persons present there and it was not in the exact language used by the declarant and certificate of the Doctor was not produced in evidence, held, such a dying declaration could not be relied on: (1990) 40 Del.L.T. 238: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C) 170.

Where the victim brought in the hospital was kept under sedation but her statement recorded by the Investigating Officer was neither attested by any Doctor or nurse nor by any relations of the deceased or the accused though admittedly available and the statement was also not recorded in question-answer form, held, no reliance could be placed on the dying declaration: 1989 Cr.L.J. 157: (1987) 33 Del.L.T. 254: (1987) 3 Crimes 747 (D.B.).

Merely because the Investigating Officer had first narrated the facts as to how he reached the spot and what he had seen there and thereafter recorded the dying declaration in the narrative form as spoken to by the deceased and put under inverted commas, held, is not by itself sufficient to doubt the veracity of the declaration; more so when the dagger, weapon of the offence, recovered pursuant to the accused's disclosure statement had human blood-stains of the deceased's blood group: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1106 (Del.).

Where though it was admitted case that the deceased was lying injured in an open place and neighbours had gathered there, no one from them appeared to support the fact of making any dying declaration, held, the story of making dying declaration to his father at the spot could not be believed when in the First Information Report there was no hint of making such declaration and when the medical certificate showed that there was loss of consciousness immediately after receiving such injuries and, thus, it was very doubtful that the deceased could have made any such declaration: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3674: (1992) 2 Crimes 769 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the deceased, a boy of 12 years, had made a statement to his classmate that he was going with his cousin brother on scooter, held, as the prosecution failed to prove that the deceased had no other cousin except the accused, said statement was not admissible under S. 32: 1981 Raj.L.W. 370: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1244 (D.B.).

Where deceased in his dying declaration just before his death had clearly stated that he was assaulted by the accused by means of axe and lathi on the previous night and thereafter he became unconscious and motive of the crime was stated by the prosecution to be that the deceased had developed illicit relationship with the mother of the accused, held, said evidence, such as dying declaration and motive for incident, could be relied upon for connecting the accused with the crime: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1751 (Ori.) (D.B.).

In a murder case, in the dying declaration, even though the same was incomplete by reason of the deceased not being able to answer further questions in his then condition the statements so far as they went to implicate the accused in the affair were quite categoric in character and they definitely indicated that it was the accused who had shot the deceased. There was also corroboration for the dying declaration. Held, that the statement in regard to the accused having shot the deceased was complete in itself and it could not be said that any further questions would have elicited any information which would run counter to the same. Under the circumstances, the dying declaration, though incomplete otherwise was complete so far as the accused having shot the deceased was concerned and could certainly be relied upon by the prosecution. The corroboration of the dying declaration invested it with a stamp of truth which went a long way towards inculpating the accused: 1956 Cr.L.J. 334: A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 168.

Where the deceased, for want of sufficient light, could not have identified the accused; he was surrounded by interested witnesses who might possibly have tutored the deceased; where use of different inks in recording the declaration remained unexplained; there was mention of the presence of a witness in the declaration who was indeed not present at the scene; held, even if recorded in the presence of an independent and respectable Government servant, the declaration could not be made, in the absence of other acceptable evidence, a sole basis to enter conviction: 1980 M.L.J. (Cr.) 301 (Karn.) (D.B.).

Statement of the deceased was recorded after the assault not in his words but only in the form of a memorandum—Deceased dying after several days—Though incident alleged to have been occurred in the presence of several villagers, no witness was produced by prosecution to corroborate deceased's statement, held, even if said statement was admissible as dying declaration under S. 32, it was wholly insufficient for upholding the conviction of the accused: A.I.R. 1971 All. 482: 1971 All.W.R. (H.C.) 365: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1562.

Where the infirmities alleged in the dying declaration were fairly explained away from the facts and circumstances appearing on record, held, it can provide foundation for recording a finding of guilt against the accused: 1988 Mah.L.J. 147: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 234 (D.B.).

Where a wife and the child were said to have been administered fatal doses of poison by the husband and the wife's dying declaration was recorded neither by a Magistrate nor by a Doctor and there was no recorded version of the dying declaration or corroboration thereof, and the wife too had a disoriented mind, held, there was no proper dying declaration: (1983-84) 88 Cal.W.N. 238.

Where the deceased had ample opportunity to observe and identify his assailants as the incident took place in broad daylight and assailants happened to be his close neighbours and Doctor opined that the deceased might remain conscious and might also be in a position to speak and there was no scope for tutoring because the statement implicating the accused was made by the deceased immediately after he recovered from the initial shock, held, the dying declaration was reliable: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1614 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where the dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer was not recorded in presence of two or more credible witnesses as required by para 742(2)(c) of M.P. Police Regulations and though it named the accused it did not give the father's name or residential address, and mentioned the weapon used to injure the deceased wrongly and there was no trustworthy evidence showing that the deceased was capable of talking or that he infact talked, held, conviction could not be based solely on such a dying declaration: 1990 Cr.L.J. 2407: 1990 M.P.L.J. 770: 1990 Jab.L.J. 329 (D.B.).

Where the deceased asleep at night was hit by a gun shot, was bleeding profusely and in great agony and he named the accused having shot him, and the bullet taken out from his body was not sent to the forensic laboratory, held, no reliance could be placed upon such a dying declaration: 1994 Cr.L.J. 958 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

It is wrong to think that the dying declaration becomes less credible if several persons are named as assailants, though the Court has to scrutinize the evidence in respect of each of the accused: 1985 Cr.L.J. 336: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 354: (1984) 2 An.L.T. 69 (N.R.C.) (D.B.).

Where the injured was quite conscious while stating in his dying declaration as to how his own eldest son had inflicted injuries on him, he had made the statement voluntarily and there was no scope for tutoring or prompting him by anybody to falsely implicate his eldest son, held, the dying declaration was both truthful and reliable: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1146 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where in her dying declaration deceased stated that accused attempted to commit rape on her and next day he set her on fire but brother of deceased and neighbours of accused did not depose anything about attempted rape and though in her dying declaration deceased stated that after she had been set on fire in court-yard she rushed to her room and the accused bolted it from outside but the prosecution witness did not say anything about deceased rushing into the room and further the doctor who had testified about fitness of the deceased to make impugned statement was not asked to make his endorsement in the declaration even though he was present at the time of recording of statement, held, impugned dying declaration did not inspire confidence and it could not be relied upon for convicting the accused: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 135.

Where no explanation was given as to why the Judicial Magistrate at place where the hospital was situated was not requisitioned for recording the dying declaration when neither the Executive Magistrate had attempted to ascertain the deceased's mental condition or the Doctor present there had certified that the deceased was conscious and fit to give the statement which was voluntary and uninfluenced, held, the dying declaration could not be acted upon where there were discrepancies therein and there was no direct evidence of the accused-husband having set her on fire: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1242 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the case for the prosecution depends upon the deathbed statement of a man who was admittedly kept back from hospital in order to be instructed about his statement and it is also shown that his statement regarding witnesses to the occurrence was false, his declaration cannot be relied upon for convicting the accused named by him: 1930 Mad.W.N. 1211. See also 32 Mad.L.W. 940: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 180: 59 M.L.J. 876 [A dying declaration is relevant evidence under S. 32, but it is not entitled to any peculiar credit].

Two dying declarations made by minor—Answers given by her to questions put by Doctor making it evident that age did not handicap her in making the statement—Both declarations consistently stating that accused caused her the injury—Fact that she made inconsistent statements regarding the name of another who she said was also injured cannot minimise importance of that statement and make the declaration completely ineffective against the accused—So also the interested statements of prosecution witnesses who had turned hostile cannot weaken the dying declarations: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 4: A.I.R. 1965 All. 40.

Where a wife, burnt by her husband, made a dying declaration in a village hospital in the presence of witnesses; she was fit to make the statement though she could speak only in a low voice; the Sub-Inspector had questioned her and on his dictation, the Assistant Sub-Inspector had recorded her statement; she could not sign or thumb-mark her statement because, as noted thereon, both her hands had been burnt; the time of recording the statement was not mentioned on the declaration yet the Court could fairly gather it from other evidence on record; the Doctor being on leave, his certificate of fitness of the deceased for making the statement could not be obtained; the declaration was not recorded by a Magistrate because none was available within 74 Kms. of the hospital; and the hospital compounder corroborated and proved the contents of the dying declaration; held, the dying declaration was true and validly recorded: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1988 (Sikkim).

Where a dying declaration was recorded by a Doctor in the presence of two other Doctors wherein the bride had stated that she had brought no money from her parents when she was married two years ago and, therefore, was set on fire after her husband and mother-in-law sprinkled kerosene as she was lying with her infant child who died on the spot, and another dying declaration said to have been made by her to a person and attested by a Sarpanch who were not examined in the Court, but which was shown to the Police Inspector in his cross-examination by the defence, held, the first declaration satisfies all the necessary tests and requirements of a dying declaration; it cannot be discarded because of the other suspicious and unproved document: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 819: 1993 Cr.L.J. 75: (1992) 2 D.M.C. 506: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 2: (1992) 3 Crimes 758. See also 1975 All.W.C. 34.

Where a married girl, pressurised by her husband and the in-laws to bring money from her parents was burnt by them and suffered serious burn injuries and two Doctors who examined her found her fit to make the statement and died two days after the occurrence, held, her dying declaration could not be discarded merely because there were serious burn injuries on her body: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 138: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3935: (1993)1 An.W.R. 81: (1992) 2 D.M.C. 353 : (1992) 4 S.C.C. 212: (1992) 3 Crimes 581.

Where in her dying declaration made to a responsible Judicial Officer, the deceased had stated that she caught fire while preparing tea and her husband and other family members came to her rescue and the said officer had deposed in the Court that he was satisfied that the deceased made the statement voluntarily without any fear, persuasion or pressure, held, acquittal of the husband and other family members was proper: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1357: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1500 : (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 178.

Where the Courts below had concurrently found the mother-in-law as well as the husband not guilty of the wife's murder by burning because she had involved only the mother-in-law in one dying declaration and husband as well in another dying declaration and rejecting them as not credible, held, the inconsistency suggested the possibility of false implication of both the accused; possibility of suicide also not ruled out; acquittal upheld: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1641.

Where the Medical Officer who had treated and recorded the deceased's dying declaration in the presence of disinterested and independent witnesses having no special reason to falsely implicate the accused to the effect that she was assaulted by her husband by a geda, held, her dying declaration must be accepted as voluntary and true and sufficient to convict the accused. [1985 Cr.L.J. 248 (Ori.); 1986 Cr.L.J. 836 (S.C.); 1987 Cr.L.J. 1065 (S.C.) and (1989) 1 Ori.L.R. 224, Foll.]: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 47 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Where the wife-victim's declaration was taken by the Sub-Inspector in the hospital and was registered as an F.I.R. without either obtaining her signature or thumb impression and without certificate from a Doctor of her being fit to make the statement, and though the Tehsildar had claimed to be the recorder of the declaration he had in fact merely certified the declarant to be conscious, held, in the absence of any other evidence, her husband could not be convicted for having caused her death by burning; in the circumstances, the recorder had not performed his duty to record the declaration in the presence of the Doctor and obtain from him the certificate of the victim's fitness: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 840: 1994 Cr.L.J. 946.

Bride-burning—In the earlier stages the deceased not implicating the accused—Only at a later stage she implicating the accused—Weight to be given to such dying declaration. See A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1379: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1462; 1992 Cr.L.J. 972 (Cal.) (D.B.).

A statement of the deceased that even if she was dying having been burnt, her husband should not be beaten, held, could not be converted into one exculpative of the accused-husband: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1270: 1980 Cr.L.J. 1009: 1980 U.J. (S.C.) 571.

Accused pouring oil on clothes of wife and setting fire—Wife dying of burns—Conviction under S. 302, I. P. Code. based solely on her dying declaration—Held, correct. (Majority view): (1962) 2 S.C.R. 775: A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 130.

Where the deceased in her dying declaration stated that her mother-in-law brought kerosene in a canister and poured it over her but no canister was recovered and though the deceased had told numerous people about the manner of receiving the burn injuries but never had assigned them to her mother-in-law; probability is that she must have made the dying declaration as tutored by her relatives; further, there was every probability of the deceased having committed suicide; held, the mother-in-law could not be convicted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 691 (Raj.) (D.B.).

According to the prosecution, the victim was set on fire by her husband and she after tearing off her clothes ran towards a nallah, jumped into it and then went to the Police Station in utter panic at about 12. 45 A.M. and got her report recorded in daily diary of Police Station and thereafter made statement to Investigating Officer in hospital after being declared fit to make a statement and there were no inconsistencies in two statements of the deceased. Held, the later statement did not suffer from any infirmity and S. 32 was attracted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1398 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

An Executive Magistrate, called by the Police, recorded the dying declaration of the wife, then fully conscious and able to speak as testified to by the Doctor who was also present. The declaration faithfully and correctly recorded her statement that her husband had set her clothes to fire and such statement was read over to, and accepted as correct by, her. Held, the declaration had a high evidentiary value: 1978 Mah.L.J. 324 (D.B.).

Where the deceased in her earlier dying declaration mentioned the accused as having set her on fire but later on she stated that the accused was amongst those who tried to extinguish the flames, held, the material question was whether the accused had set the deceased on fire; what happened thereafter was secondary; the dying declaration was reliable: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2035: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 702 (D.B.).

Where the victim-wife on admission to the Hospital stated, on being asked by the Doctor, that she had been burnt by accidental bursting of the kitchen stove which was recorded in her medical history sheet; there were several other dying declarations, mostly implicating her father-in-law, the accused, having set her to fire after pouring kerosene as she was lying asleep; but nothing was indicated in any of the declarations as to what was the accused's motive; other prosecution evidence also suffered from several infirmities and inadequacies; held, the accused's conviction set aside: (1983) 2 Bom.C.R. 414 (D.B.).

Where accused was alleged to have murdered his wife and prosecution sought to rely upon dying declaration of the deceased but there was no evidence connecting death with the injury and there was no proof that the deceased had subscribed to said dying declaration or that it contained her version, held, said dying declaration was inadmissible: 1995 Cr.L.J. 17 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where in a remote village in the interior a woman set on fire by her husband was on her way to report it to the Chowkidar when she fell in a shallow brook and her dying declaration by way of abundant caution was recorded in the question and answer form by a Head Constable as there was no medical aid within 30 kilometers therefrom and she was to be taken there on a bullock cart and her declaration was corroborated from her oral statements by three witnesses who had asked her, when she was on her way to the Chowkidar, as to what had happened, held, the recorded dying declaration corroborated by three oral declarations of the deceased was sufficient to record conviction. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1173, Rel. on]: 1987 M.P.L.J. 382 (D.B.).

Where in her alleged dying declaration, the deceased had mentioned that she did not give any statement that her husband set her ablaze and an interpolation was made in dying declaration by the Investigating Officer and further the dying declaration was not recorded in question-answer form, held, the alleged dying declaration was not correctly and faithfully recorded by the Investigating Officer and thus, mere mention in the dying declaration that on the day of occurrence, the accused-husband had quarrelled with the deceased and latter's mother-in-law too had harassed her would not per se be sufficient to hold that the accused had adequate motive to commit the murder of his wife: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2192 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Where the Police Officer reached the hospital 6 hours after receiving the information to record the dying declaration, and while the Doctor deposed that glucose was being then administered to the deceased but he was not sure whether deceased's statement was recorded by the Police Officer himself or at his dictation and the Police Officer deposed that no glucose was then being administered, and the deceased-girl's parents were also then present in the Hospital, held, in the circumstances and when the possibility of her relations prompting the deceased could not be ruled out, the dying declaration could not be relied on: A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 305: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1093: (1983) 2 Crimes 547: (1983) 85 Punj.L.R. 763 (F.B.).

Where a wife sustaining burn injuries and admitted to hospital made a statement before the Investigating Officer that she caught fire accidentally in the kitchen due to non-switching off cooking gas, but later on she stated in her dying declaration recorded by the Judicial Magistrate that she had committed suicide by pouring kerosene oil and setting herself on fire after latching herself in the bath-room due to taunts, physical beatings and demands for more dowry by her mother-in-law and it was found that her judicial confession was consistent with what was found in the bath-room and that her first declaration of accidental fire was more likely to be a result of threats by her husband, held, her mother-in-law's conviction could not be set aside; first declaration was rightly discarded: 1984 Hindu L.R. 317 (P.&H.).

Where the deceased dying of burn injuries stated in her dying declaration that she committed suicide due to ill-treatment and beating by her husband, which found corroboration from the evidence of her mother and brother, and which was duly certified by the Doctor that the victim was conscious and fit to make the statement, held, her husband's conviction under Ss. 306 and 498-A of the Indian Penal Code was justified: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1418 (Andh. Pra.).

Where no dying declaration was made by the deceased at the earliest opportunity and during her journey to the hospital in the taxi she made a dying declaration where she categorically stated that the cause of her injuries was accidental in nature but for the first time after arrival of the Police on the next day, she accused her husband of having set fire to her body and before her dying declaration was recorded her parents, grand-father and grandmother had met her and, thus, there was ample scope for tutoring, held, dying declaration could not be relied upon to implicate the accused husband: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1818 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where deceased in her dying declarations gave a fair and vivid account of pouring of the kerosene oil and her being set on fire by the accused and in addition to that there was circumstantial evidence regarding the demand of dowry and harassment and torture inflicted on deceased by the accused, held, accused was liable to be convicted: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2043 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the wife had made a declaration in the Hospital to the Investigating Officer in the presence of the Doctor that her husband had beaten her with belan, poured kerosene on her and pushed her on the stove whereby she caught fire and the oral and medical evidence corroborated it and her declaration was also found to be reliable and truthful, held, merely because another Doctor in his cross-examination had stated—with nothing in writing to support—that the wife had told him that she was burnt by stove while working and cooking was not sufficient to discard the recorded declaration; the Doctor, busy as he was, could not have remembered after such long time as to what was told to him by a patient: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 42 (D.B.).

Where a bride in the medico-legal reports had stated to the Doctor that it was her husband who had poured petrol over her and set her to fire which was relied upon by the prosecution and proved, in the absence of the Doctor who had left service and whose whereabouts were not known, by record clerk who had in normal course of duty seen the Doctor writing and signing but finding that in other declarations she had assigned this role to her husband's brother and the prosecution to uphold conviction in appeal, desired to disown the first declaration as not having been properly proved, held, the prosecution could not be allowed to wriggle out of it to exclude the evidence of inconsistency of dying declarations; conviction set aside: 1991 Cr.L.J. 310: (1990) 42 Del.L.T. 299 (D.B.).

27. Clause (2).—Cl. (2) of S. 32 is subject to the main part of the section which presupposes that there must, in the first place, be proof that the statement in question was of the person who is dead or who cannot be found, etc. That means that the statement must be proved to have been written by the person alleged. The primary evidence would be of that person but since his whereabouts are unknown or his presence cannot be obtained without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense, the letter could be proved by several modes of proof of handwriting laid down by the Evidence Act. If there is no such proof at all, the contents of the letter would not be admissible as written by the person: A.I.R. 1955 Sau. 68: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1208.

'Course of business' meaning of. See 4 Bur.L.T. 185: 11 I.C. 854; (1908-09) 13 Cal.W.N. 71: 5 I.C. 376. See also A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193.

The expression 'in the course of business' in S. 32(2) means in the way that business (which may be of a purely private or even trivial nature) is conducted. It has no connection with a course of business, which suggests a series of acts of business; the section would therefore, apply to an act or acts of a simple and private nature: 44 Mad.L.W. 681: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 19.

The expression means a statement made during the course not of any particular transaction of an exceptional kind, but of business or professional employment, in which the deceased was ordinarily or habitually engaged: 65 Cal.L.J. 603: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 150.

The entries in a diary maintained in a Solicitor's office amount to a contemporaneou record maintained in the ordinary course of business and may be admissible under S. 32, Evidence Act. They may also become admissible under S. 157 as corroborative factor to other evidence. The entries however would not be admissible for showing the truth of the contents of those entries: (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 228: I.L.R. (1966) Bom. 420: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 112.

In a Limited Company books and papers kept in the usual course of business are the best evidence: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 227: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 233.

Where it is proved that a writer of some accounts kept in the regular course of business is absconding and cannot be found the entries in the accounts are relevant evidence under S. 32 and sufficient to charge a person with liability: 1 Mad.L.W. 136: 22 I.C. 627.

Where the writers of the account books produced by a plaintiff are alive and in his service, but are not examined by him, the books cannot be said to have been duly proved as required by law, and are inadmissible in evidence: 11 O.W.N. 1323: A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 160.

The Court is not bound to believe the accounts which are relevant under S. 32(2) without corroboration, especially when the witness examined to prove the account books says that he has no personal knowledge of any of the transactions which figure in them: I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 707: A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 106.

Suit for accounts—Accounts genuine—Entries made in regular course of business showing debt due to third party—Defendant claiming credit for discharging the debt—Burden to prove that creditor was not fictitious does not lie on defendant: (1964) 1 M.L.J. 103: A.I.R. 1964 Mad. 205.

Copies of entries in cash book maintained in regular course of business, held, are of no evidentiary value, when cash book itself was not produced and scribe thereof was not examined: 1972 Cur.L.J. 203.

Where statement of a deceased was made in the ordinary course of business and in particular it consists of an entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business or in the discharge of professional duty or the statement relates to the existence of any relationship between persons as to whose relationship the deceased had special means of knowledge and such statement was made before the question in dispute was raised such statement is admissible and relevant under sub-Cls. (2) and (5) of S. 32.

Held, on circumstances, that the entries in Jaimani book of the Panda of Mathura was admissible to prove the name of the grandfather of the deceased through whom parties to the suit claimed title: A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 390.

Entry in Rokad made by deceased admissible, but decree cannot be passed unless transaction is proved: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 287.

The words 'in the ordinary course of business' in S. 32(2) should be given a broad and liberal connotation. An important event in the history of a family communicated by either the husband to his wife or by an elder to a younger even in the ordinary course of conversation at a time when there is no controversy about it may well be held to be a statement made in the ordinary course of business: A.I.R. 1961 Him. Pra. 10.

In case of death of attestators written statement of deceased bond-writer as to signing by attestators is admissible. See (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 1148: 22 I.C. 654.

Collection papers—Admissibility of. See 6 I.C. 369. Value of an incomplete record of a deposition. See 22 M.L.J. 453.

An endorsement on the cover of a registered letter that the cover had been tendered to the addressee on a certain date and had been refused by him is at best a record of statement by the peon and would be admissible either under S. 32(2) or S. 33, if the requirements of those sections are complied with. Otherwise the post peon must be called to prove the facts relied on as being evidence of the endorsement: (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 489: 26 I.C. 962.

Proof of contents of letter—Person writing letters dead—Letter written in ordinary course of business—Competency of writer to give opinion contained in letters not shown—Opinion expressed in letter held not admissible under S. 32(2): (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1206.

Applicability—Contract of sale—Inspection of goods by representative of purchaser and reporting to purchaser—Statement of representative on such inspection admissible—[Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 5].

Per A. N. Ray, J.:—Where a representative of the purchaser under a contract of sales goes in the ordinary course of business for inspection of the goods and also reports to the purchaser, the statement of that representative on such inspection is admissible under S. 32 of Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 496.

S. 32—Entries in Jamabandi—Evidentiary value. The entries in the Jamabandi do not constitute conclusive evidence of title to the property in favour of the person recorded therein. All the best, a presumption of correctness attaches to such entries, and that presumption is clearly rebuttable. It is for the reason that the Jamabandis are primarily prepared by the Government for fiscal purposes and so they cannot create any title. The weight to be attached to the entries in such documents will depend on the circumstances of each case: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 50.

A deposition made by a Patwari of a village in the course of the enquiry relating to the Revenue Settlement under the Bengal Regulation does not come under the provisions of S. 32 and is consequently inadmissible in evidence: 9 Pat.L.T. 679: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 429.

Applicability—Statements before Registrar—S. 32(2) does not apply to statements made before Registrar: A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 7.

Where Jama Wasil Baki papers were proved to be 45 years old, the Court might presume that the writer was dead at the time they were produced and that the same might be admissible in evidence under S. 32(2): I.L.R. 55 Cal. 1216; A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 110. See also A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 541; A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 524: I.L.R. (1940) 2 Cal. 559.

The Zamindari papers can be used as independent evidence, provided they are brought within S. 32(2) by showing that the persons who prepared them are dead or cannot be found, but the weight to be attached to them must depend on circumstances: I.L.R. 11 Pat. 701: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 6.

Chowhuddibandi or boundary papers of Zamindaries were filed by the Zamindars in 1799 in pursuance of a duty. They are, therefore, admissible under S. 32(2), the persons making the statements contained in them being dead: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 935: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193.

A receipt executed by a deceased person who stood in the relation of cousin to the parties gave the boundaries of an adjacent plot. Held, that the document was admissible under S. 32 as a statement made by a deceased person in the ordinary course of his business: 5 O.W.N. 174: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 248.

Settlement entries—Presumption of correctness attaches to them—They are also evidence of conduct of persons at whose instance the entries were made: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

Entries made by the Amin in the Khatian and Chitta must be taken to have been made in the ordinary course of business and admissible under S. 32, sub-S. (2): I.L.R. 55 Cal. 1070: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 448. Report submitted by a process peon who is dead regarding service of notice is admissible: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 86: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 658. Evidence recorded under 'Fugitive Offenders' Act is admissible: 112 I.C. 673: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 161.

Where in a proceedings for fixation of fair rent under S. 14 of the Mysore Rent Control Act, 1961, the question in issue was whether the building had been constructed prior to 1-4-1947, held, counter foils were admissible under S. 32(2) to prove the same: A.I.R. 1972 Mys. 143: (1971) 2 Mys.L.J. 635.

Panjis are maintained by Panjikars who are professional genealogists and they systematically maintain pedigree tables in the community of Naithal Brahmins. They go from place to place and periodically ascertain the genealogies of their clients and enter them in Panjis (palm leaf manuscripts of genealogy) and add to them such fresh additions as occur in the family from time to time. They are considered important in this community because questions of marriage (who may marry whom) and relationship and caste turn on them. It is the business of these Panjikars to collect this information about pedigrees and presumably they endeavour to collect correct information because what they put down about one man will affect a whole family and the families of those who marry into it. Also, there are checks and counter checks as information pours in from different members and branches of the family. They would, consequently, fall into disrepute if their books contained glaring inaccuracies. Statements about pedigree are not, therefore, lightly made. Plaintiffs in a suit claimed as reversioners or the propositus and put in evidence, Exs. 4(a), 4(b), 4(d) and 4(e), the Panjis written by their family Panjikars. The witness who proved Exs. 4 and 4(a) deposed that the latter was written by his father and the former by a brother of his grandfather and that they were taken from the collection of Panjis which were in the handwriting of his father, grandfather, great grandfather and great granduncle. He also stated that he saw Ex. 4(a) long before the question in dispute arose. As regards Ex. 4 it was evident that it had been written long before Ex. 4(a) was written by the witness's father. The witness who proved Ex. 4(b) stated that it was written by his grandfather who died long ago and that he saw that before the dispute arose. As regards Exs. 4(d) and 4(e), the evidence of a witness who had been examined in a previous case stated that the former was written partly by his father, and partly by an ancestor whose writing he was unable to identify because they were written before he was born. As regards the earliest entries in Ex. 4 (e), it stated that the witness was not clear but presumed they had been written by his father. His father was dead long before the dispute in the suit in question arose. Held, (i) exhibit 4(a) was admissible under S. 32(2) and also under S. 32(6), (ii) exhibit 4 was admissible under S. 32(6) but even if it was written after the dispute arose it would also be admissible under S. 32(2) because that sub-section did not impose the limitation that the entry should have been made before the dispute arose, (iii) that the entries in Ex. 4(b) were made before the dispute arose [S. 32(6)] and were in any case admissible under S. 32(2), (iv) that Panjis, Exs. 4(d) and 4(e) were ancient and had come from proper custody and also were admissible under S. 32(2) and S. 32(6), (v) that the evidence of the witness who proved Exs. 4(d) and 4(e) was admissible under S. 33: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 601. Statement of deceased—Admissibility—Statement of deceased to Doctor regarding his age—Deceased not examined by Doctor from age point of view—Effect: I.L.R. (1960) 2 All. 580: 1960 All.L.J. 770: 1960 All.W.R. (H.C.) 584: A.I.R. 1961 All. 14.

A statement made by a father before a Government Tahsildar as to the age of his son is relevant to prove the age of the son: 9 M.L.T. 220: 9 I.C. 324. [I.L.R. 25 Mad. 183; I.L.R. 20 Cal. 758, Foll.].

Where the injury report prepared by the Medical Officer is proved by his compounder, it is admissible under S. 32 (2) if the attendance of the Medical Officer cannot be procured without delay and expense: 1953 All.L.J. 416: A.I.R. 1953 All. 520.

If a Medical Officer, available in the Court, is not examined, his medical certificate will not be admissible in evidence for the simple reason that it can be made use of only for corroboration or contradiction or refreshing memory; but if the Doctor is dead or is not available for examination in the course of trial, his medical certificate would be admissible and relevant. But the weight it would carry is altogether a different matter. [I.L.R. 9 Cal. 455; A.I.R. 1936 All. 363; A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 426, Disting.; (1958) 24 Cut.L.T. 495, Dissent. from]: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1816 (Raj.).

The general rule is that injury or post mortem reports are not substantive evidence; they are only reports prepared by the Doctor examining the victims; they become evidence only when the Doctor is examined or cross-examined in the Court and testifies that he had prepared the reports after having examined the victim or his dead body. S. 32 provides an exception to the general rule: (1990-1) 38 B.L.J.R. 462 (D.B.).

A post mortem report is no substantive evidence; unless proved by the Doctor as a witness, it is not admissible. However, if the Doctor is dead or is otherwise not available in the circumstances mentioned in S. 32, the report is rendered relevant and admissible; its probative value would, however, depend on the peculiar circumstances of the case itself: (1976-77) 81 Cal.W.N. 724 (D.B.); 1988 C.Cr.L.R. 98 (Cal.). See also (1990) 1 Crimes 28: 1989 Cr.L.J. 193 (Pat.).

When the accused admitted genuineness of the post mortem report filed by the prosecution, held, it can be read as substantive evidence. [1979 Cr.L.J. 236 (All.), Overruled; 1980 Cr.L.J. 853 (Bom.), Dissent. from]: 1981 Cr.L.J. 379 (All.) (F.B.).

Where in a case of rape, the Lady Doctor who had examined the prosecutrix and prepared in duplicate, in performance of her duty, the medical certificate, and who had gone on long leave on giving birth to a child and could not be examined without undue delay, the Court permitted the prosecution to prove carbon copy of the certificate, the original where of had been lost, by another Doctor associated with the Lady Doctor for about two years, held, the copy of the certificate is admissible under S. 32 as well as under S. 62 as primary evidence: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 702: 1989 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 8: 1989 Cr.L.J. 841: (1989) 1 S.C.C. 432: (1989) 1 Crimes 384.

Post mortem report—Admissibility—Not substantive evidence—Admissible under S. 32, Evidence Act—Court can come to independent conclusion from other evidence without medical evidence: 1966 Cr.L.J. 45: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 21.

Statements and entries made in ordinary course of business—Medical Officer performing post mortem not easily available—Report prepared by him is admissible in evidence: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 214: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 62.

Where in a dispute over standing crop the complainant was assaulted by the petitioner and was prosecuted for the same offence, he contended that the injury report of the complainant had not been legally proved and the same could not be admitted in evidence. The prosecution contended that since the Doctor who prepared the report could not be produced without undue delay, the report should be allowed to be proved by his compounder, who was present when it was made.

Held, that the injury report was prepared during the ordinary course of business in discharge of his official duty and since the Doctor could not be produced without undue delay, the report could be proved by secondary evidence, namely by the compounder who was present when the report was prepared: 1967 All.Cr. R. 271: 1967 All.W.R. (H.C.) 395.

Applicability—Murder case—Non-examination of Medical Officer who conducted autopsy—Evidence of Doctor could not be procured without an amount of delay of expense—Documents duly proved—No prejudice to accused—Documents held admissible under S. 32(2)—S. 32(2) relates to relevancy of evidence and not to manner of proof and before relevant statement is admitted, its authority must be proved in same way as any other document or fact: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1157 (Andh. Pra.).

Where the original dying declaration was lost and the Magistrate had deposed on oath that he gave original dying declaration to the Head Constable but the Head Constable said that after making a copy thereof, he gave it back to the Magistrate, held, the prosecution was entitled to give secondary evidence which consisted of the statement of the Magistrate as also of the Head Constable who had made a copy from the original and testified that the copy was a correct one: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1567: 1979 Cr.L.J. 108: 1979 U.J. (S.C.) 536.

The record prepared by a Magistrate of proceedings at an identification parade conducted by him cannot be regarded as a statement made by him in the ordinary course of business, and as such a document cannot be admitted under S. 32(2) and treated as a substantive piece of evidence and the proceedings of parades can only be proved by the oral deposition of the Magistrate who held them or perhaps, by the deposition of some other person in authority who was present when the parade was held. Admittedly Magistrates are called on occasionally to hold identification parades as part of their duty but this is a special form of duty, and seeing that liberty or even the lives of accused persons may depend on the result of such evidence, it is highly important that the proceedings in an identification parade should be properly proved by the deposition of the Magistrate who could then be subjected to cross-examination: A.I.R. 1925 All. 413, Considered: I.L.R. (1956) Punj. 140: 1957 Cr.L.J. 678.

Statement in Police diary can be brought into evidence in terms of S. 32(2) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872: (1993) 1 Crimes 258 (Ori.).

28. Clause (2) and section 34.—The term 'book' as used in S. 32(2) and S. 34 implies a collective unity of sheets even at the time when the entries are made therein. It connotes an intention that it should serve as a permanent record. But beyond these two ideas, it is not necessary that it should consist of a particular number of sheets or that it should be bound in a particular way. A number of sheets of paper stitched into a book before the entries have begun to be made, each entry covering both the sheets, i.e., the entry beginning on the left page and running on into the right page, and kept by a creditor as an account of his cash receipts and disbursements is a 'book within the meaning of Ss. 32 and 34', judged by the standards prevailing amongst not meant for trade purposes. Entries in such a book are admissible in evidence under S. 32(2); and the entries to be admissible need not necessarily be against the pecuniary interest of the persons making the entries: 44 Mad.L.W. 467: A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 871.

Where an entry appears in a book of account it comes both under S. 32, Cl. (2) and S. 34. The only material difference as between an entry relevant under S. 32(2) and one under S. 34 is that in the former case the person who made the entry may be available as a witness while in the latter case he is not: I.L.R. 55 Cal. 1167: (1927-28) 32 Cal.W.N. 580.

When the entries in account books are relevant not only under S. 34 but also under S. 32(2), they are sufficient evidence in themselves and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible only under S. 34, require any corroboration. But the Judge is not bound to act on them without corroboration; that is a matter on which he must exercise his judicial discretion as a Judge of fact: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 331.

29. Clause (3)—Statement against interest.—What is, and its admissibility. See (1911) 1 Mad.W.N. 363; 11 I.C. 380: 45 Cal.L.J. 138: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 918. See also 29 I.C. 607; I.L.R. 36 Mad. 19; A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 131.

In order to be admissible under S. 32(3), the statement must be of (1) a relevant fact, and (2) against the proprietary interest of its maker to his knowledge. [A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 167 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 1, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1976 Karn. 75: (1975) 2 Karn.L.J. 468.

S. 32 comes into play only after it is found or assumed as a fact that a particular statement was made by its purported maker; the expression 'if true' used in S. 32(3) refers not to the factum of the statement having been made by its maker but the truth of its contents which expose him to a criminal prosecution or a civil suit for damages; that would necessarily require corroboration by the independent evidence or attending circumstances: 1984 Mah.L.J. 709.

Statement of a deceased when not against his pecuniary or proprietary interest, held, is not admissible: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 279.

The interest that is predicated in S. 32(3) must be one which relates to the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it. It is not a kind of interest which a man may feel about a friend or a relation and it is in no sense sufficient to say that there may be some future contingency that may be affected by the statement. It must be the present pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making the statement that must be affected by the statement, in order that the same may be admissible: 19 Cut.L.T. 354: A.I.R. 1954 Ori. 52.

The sanctity attaching to a statement by a person who is dead on the ground that it was against his interest to make it must depend upon the measure of that interest, and when it appears that the statement was probably to the immediate interest of the person who made it, the fact that more remotely it was against his interest does not afford much guarantee of its truth: I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 573: A.I.R. 1939 Sind 145.

The principle upon which hearsay evidence is admitted under S. 32(3) is that a man is not likely to make a statement against his own interest unless true, but this sanction does not arise unless the party knows the statement to be against his interest: 76 I.A. 255: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 163: A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 1.

Where independent evidence is available and the recitals in the document which are against the evidence led cannot, in all cases, outweigh the evidence adduced, the recitals in the documents are at best to be taken as an item of evidence and their correctness or otherwise have to be judged in the context of other surrounding circumstances and in the light of the other evidence adduced: (1977) 2 Cut.W.R. 935.

The previous statement of dead person could also be one contained in a letter or other statement in the possession of private party: A.I.R. 1981 Andh. Pra. 34 (D.B.).

Under S. 32(3), in order to determine whether a certain statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, we must look to the statement itself and not to the nature of the transaction in the course of which the statement is made. An assertion in a deed of gift by the donor that the subject-matter of the gift is his property can by no strength of reasoning be held to be a statement against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the donor: 20 Pat.L.T. 877: A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 16. See also A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 666: (1941) 1 M.L.J. 754.

Merely because under S. 90 the documents are presumed to be duly executed if they are more than 30 years old, there is no presumption about the contents of these documents being true. But once the execution of the document more than 30 years old is presumed, it will show that the party's predecessor-in-title who was the signatory to the document had executed the same. Once that is established, it would amount to an admission, on the part of the executant about the truth of the statements mentioned therein. This document can also go in evidence under the provisions of S. 32(3) as it is a statement made against the proprietary interest of a person who is now dead: A.I.R. 1981 Guj. 142: (1981) 22 Guj.L.R. 389.

The statements made in a gift deed by a Hindu widow that the properties mentioned therein were already gifted away by her father-in law and her husband attract the terms of S. 32, sub-Ss. (3) and (7) as they are against her proprietary interest and relate to a transaction as is mentioned in S. 13. When the validity of the document is challenged after 50 years or more and the parties to the document are all dead and when it is not possible for the alienees to produce better evidence, the recital acquires importance. In such a case the recital, being consistent with probability and the circumstances of the case, is binding on him who is taken in adoption by the widow. No evidence aliunde is necessary: 1961 An.L.T. 150: A.I.R. 1961 Andh. Pra. 435.

A statement in a sale-deed by the executant that he was liable for a particular amount is a statement made against the pecuniary or proprietary interest: 30 Nag.L.R. 192: A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 106.

The statement in a sale deed by the deed vendor that he had received the consideration, is against his own pecuniary interest and is good evidence in support of passing of consideration. [A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 55; (1973) 2 Cut.W.R. 1759, Rel. on]: (1977) 44 Cut.L.T. 552: A.I.R. 1977 N.O.C. 301.

Where the deceased predecessor-in-interest of a party admitted passing of consideration under a document, it is not open to the party to allege to the contrary because it binds him as being against the pecuniary and proprietary interest of the predecessor-in-interest under S. 32(3): A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 55: 32 Cut.L.T. 510: I.L.R. (1966) Cut. 571.

Where out of two executants of a sale deed, one was already dead and the contents of said document showed that he admitted receipt of consideration, held, this admission is admissible under S. 32(3) and is a good piece of evidence in support of passing of consideration: A.I.R. 1977 Ori. 178: (1977) 44 Cut.L.T. 37.

Where in a suit for possession of certain land adjacent to plaintiff's house on basis of sale deed in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant a neighbour of the plaintiff wanted to file sale deed in his favour indicating that the property, land in question, belonged to the defendant, it could not be said that the other deed was inadmissible or irrelevant in evidence although the weight to be attached to the boundaries of land given therein was a different matter; the sale deed was admissible in evidence as a relevant piece of evidence: 1983 All.L.J. 226.

The statements of a particular person that he is separated from a joint family, of which he was a coparcener, and that he has no further interest in the joint family property or claim to any assets left by his father would be statements made against the interest of such a person, and after such a person is dead, they would be relevant under S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act. The assertion that there was separation not only in respect of himself but amongst all the coparceners would be admissible as a connected matter and an integral part of the same statement. It is not merely the precise fact which is against interest that is admissible, but all matters that are involved in it and knit up with the statement: A.I.R. 1969 Ori. 18: I.L.R. (1969) Cut. 146; A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 72: 1951 S.C.R. 603; A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 407.

Will by son of one of the members of the joint family—Will is admissible under S. 32(3) to show that there was a partition in the family: 1961 Jab.L.J. 616: 1961 M.P.L.J. 463.

Where in a cancelled will the testator has made a statement in the interests of other persons, his sons, against his own interest, it is admissible under S. 32(3): 1939 Nag.L.J. 421: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 274.

On the question as to the rule of inheritance followed in the family the testimony, touching the said question, of the deceased father of a party to the present suit and given in the previous case is admissible under S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act: 1959 M.P.L.J. 415: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 212. Affidavit containing admission against interest of deponent—Affidavit would be admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1955 Ajmer 28.

Where a conveyance was executed by the karta of a Hindu Joint Family but he was no longer alive, held, the averments made in the recitals of the deed are admissible in evidence under S. 32(3): (1990) 40 Del.L.T. 82 (D.B.).

A registered deed of mortgage containing statements of boundaries is not admissible under S. 32(3), Evidence Act in a suit between strangers to the deed unless the statements therein are of relevant facts and affect the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the persons making it: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 249: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 40.

Statement of a third party made in a document executed in favour of defendant about the boundaries of land in suit—Such third party not proved to be dead nor examined in the case—Statement is inadmissible in law against the plaintiff: 1962 B.L.J.R. 11: A.I.R. 1962 Pat. 273.

As to admissibility of recitals in documents between strangers regarding boundaries of lands, see 45 Cal.L.J. 55: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 948; 44 Cal.L.J. 582: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 230 and cases cited therein: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 63; A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 636: 145 I.C. 944; 152 I.C. 829: A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 617; 30 Mad.L.W. 422 (not admissible).

A recital of a boundary in a document between third parties is not ordinarily admissible to prove possession or title as against a person who is not a party to the document. This rule is subject to exceptions. Since statement can, for instance, be admitted under S. 32(3), when it is contained in a document against the proprietary interest of the person making it, when the executant of the document is dead. So also when the executant of the document containing the recital as to boundary is himself a witness in the case, it can be admitted as a contemporaneous statement to corroborate his evidence under S. 157: 51 Mad.L.W. 509: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 450; 1979 Rev.L.R. 500.

Recitals as to boundaries in documents not inter partes are inadmissible in evidence under Ss. 11, 13(a) and 32(3) and (5); they can be admitted in evidence by testimony in Court of the document's executants. [A.I.R. 1915 Mad. 746, Foll.; A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 226, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 154: (1971) 84 Mad. L.W. 691: (1972) 1 M.L.J. 317 (D.B.).

Recital of boundaries in sale-deed executed by third parties—Recital cannot be said to be statement made in ordinary course of business or statement made against pecuniary or proprietary interest—Recital is inadmissible in evidence: 1966 B.L.J.R. 706: I.L.R. 45 Pat. 314.

Statement of boundary contained in the sale deed executed by a third party is not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 215: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 393 (D.B.).

A document between strangers wherein one of the parties to the suit or its predecessor is shown holding land on the boundaries of the executant's land, is inadmissible as it is under S. 11(2); it is also inadmissible (if its executants are not alive) under S. 32(3) as well: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 9.

Recitals in documents relating not to suit land but to neighbouring land—Not admissible: 8 I.C. 268: 1910 Mad.W.N. 668; (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 262: 12 I.C. 149; 11 All.L.J. 139: 18 I.C. 752. See also 99 I.C. 910: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 234.

A person who is the 16 annas owner of a property cannot be expected under any circumstances to say that his interest therein was only 8 annas and that the remaining 8 annas right belonged to his brother's widow. Such a statement by an adult person, being against his own interest is admissible in evidence under S. 32(3), Evidence Act: 32 Cut.L.T. 343.

Assertion of right by husband of plaintiff in written statement in previous suit—Written statement held admissible in partition suit filed after husband's death: A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 110.

Under S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act, a statement of a person who is dead is admissible when the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when if true, it would expose him or would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages. In order the statement may be admissible, the person making the statement must know that it was against his interest and the question whether the statement was made consciously with the knowledge that it was against the person making it would be a question of fact in each case and would depend in most cases on the circumstances in which the statement was made, except when the statement is categorical in terms. There can hardly be any direct evidence to show that the person making the statement in fact knew that the statement was against his interest and so in most cases knowledge would have to be inferred from the surrounding circumstances. In a suit filed by plaintiffs for declaration and in the alternative for possession of certain properties question arose whether one B.N. (plaintiff's uncle's son) died before or after the death of his father (plaintiff's uncle). Plaintiff's case was that B.N. predeceased his father and, therefore, on the death of plaintiff's uncle his share came to them and that B.N.'s widow and daughter had no right over them. The suit was filed against the widow who was living on the date of suit and B.N.'s daughter. B.N.'s widow died during pendency of suit and B.N.'s contended that her grandfather died before her father's death and, therefore, she became entitled his share. B.N.'s widow who was a party to the suit had made a statement in a prior proceeding that her husband's father went away one month after her husband's death, thereby indicating that B.N. predeceased his father. Therefore, it became necessary to consider the admissibility of this statement as well as the value to be attached to it under S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act. Held, on the facts of the case, it was held that the statement of B.N.'s widow was admissible as that statement was against her proprietary interest and that B.N. died before the death of his father: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 153: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1134.

A statement made by deceased in the proceedings before the settlement officer, an authority competent to record evidence, against his own interest, held, was clearly admissible under S. 32(3) and could be proved by producing a certified copy thereof: A.I.R. 1981 Andh. Pra. 34 (D.B.).

Applicability—Statements against pecuniary or proprietary interest of person making it or when, if true, would expose him to prosecution—Statement by another person that he had lent money to the accused is not relevant under S. 32(3): 1970 Cr.L.J. 812: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 40.

Prior statement by mother that she was the concubine of alleged father—Admissibility in evidence: 10 I.C. 188. Admission of one co-plaintiff or co-defendant, evidence against other: A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 12: 33 M.L.J. 180: 44 I.A. 201: I.L.R. 40 All. 159 (P.C.).

The principle upon which a statement made by a dead person against his pecuniary or proprietary interest is regarded as admissible in evidence is that in the ordinary course of affairs a person is not likely to make a statement to his own detriment unless it is true. But a statement made by the deceased widow in proceedings to obtain mutation of names in the register in favour of the adopted boy was not against her pecuniary or proprietary interest and was not admissible under S. 32(3) of the Evidence Act: 57 I.A. 14: I.L.R. 52 All. 1: A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 79: 58 M.L.J. 446 (P.C.). See also I.L.R. 14 Rang. 11: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 5.

A statement by a deceased member of an undivided Hindu family resident in Bengal that he is governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law is admissible in evidence under S. 32(3), being a statement against his proprietary interest in properties possessed by him. It necessarily implies that his rights were limited by the rights of the other coparceners and that he had not the free and unrestricted power of disposal: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 395. See also A.I.R. 1939 Sind 145: I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 573 (Statement as to the status in the will of the deceased).

Assertion of private right to negative public right—Statement made by great grandson's son of original grantee in inam proceedings—Question whether grant was to temple or named person—Statement must be given great weight as one made after ante litem motam although it is in the interest of the maker: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 8.

An isolated piece of paper or memorandum made by a person who is dead, for his own information, about his property, which is not made by him in the ordinary course of business and which is not one of a continuous series of acts, and which contains nothing against his pecuniary interest and does not expose him to a criminal prosecution or a civil suit, is not admissible under S. 32: I.L.R. (1940) Kar. 334: A.I.R. 1940 Sind 173.

Part of statement against pecuniary interest—Entire statement, admissible: (1937-38) 42 Cal.W.N. 359.

A road-cess return filed by a Hindu widow under S. 95 of the Bengal Cess Act is admissible under this section: 18 Cal.L.J. 633: 22 I.C. 594.

Where in some documents deceased had described the plaintiff as his adopted son, held, such documents were admissible in evidence under S. 32(3) as he had made a statement against his own pecuniary and proprietary interest as the plaintiff would get a share in his property: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.).

Where the owner of the house-stead land had died leaving behind his widow and daughter and the agnatic brother of the deceased sued the widow for declaration that he was an adopted son of the deceased which was decreed as compromised wherein the widow admitted that the agnatic brother was adopted by the deceased as a son who had also performed as such the deceased's obsequial ceremonies; held, in the subsequent suit by the widow against the adopted son for declaration that she was the owner of the property left by her husband and the earlier compromise decree was vitiated by fraud, her admission on the compromise petition was admissible under S. 32(3) as it affects her pecuniary and proprietary interest as it amounted to her disinheritance rendering her only a maintenance holder; it is, however, not admissible under S. 32(5) as, though the widow had special means of knowledge about the adoption, it was not raised before the controversy about adoption had been raised: A.I.R. 1972 Ori 148: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 814 (D.B.).

Where the deed of adoption mentions conferment of the authority to adopt on the widow of the deceased, held, the deed is admissible under S. 32(3) and (5) both: A.I.R. 1972 Pat. 325: 1972 B.L.J.R. 842 (D.B.).

Even the statements made several years after the date of transaction are admissible under Ss. 21 and 32(3) for deciding whether the transaction was or not a benami transaction when such statements were against the proprietary interest of their maker: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 727: (1980) 3 S.C.C. 72: (1980) 93 Mad.L.W. 42 (S.N.): (1980) 2 Karn.L.J. 1 (S.N.).

According to S. 32(3) the statement of a deceased person which exposes him to a criminal prosecution or a suit for damages is admissible. Where a deceased has made statements to a witness as to the receipt of certain documents from a person accused of criminal breach of trust in respect of them and also as to his anxiety to ascertain their contents to find out how they could be useful to him, they are admissible as they expose him to a prosecution for abetting criminal breach of trust or for himself misappropriating the documents: A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 52: 51 Cr.L.J. 1139.

The principle underlying S. 32(3) is that when a person makes a statement rendering him liable to criminal prosecution, the statement is likely to be a true statement. But when there is already against him evidence which would inevitably lead to his prosecution and conviction, a statement made by him cannot be admitted in evidence under S. 32(3). The section does not apply in such a case: I.L.R. 25 Pat. 347: A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 90.

S. 32(3) cannot be stretched or extended so as to cover a statement made by a deceased person after proceedings have been instituted against him. As soon as criminal proceedings have been started against the person making the statement, the words of S. 32(3) cease to apply and cease to have force: A.I.R. 1947 Sind 122: 48 Cr.L.J. 74: I.L.R. (1948) Kar. 79.

There are serious reservations about the authenticity, genuineness and accuracy of hearsay evidence because it is not tested by oath or cross-examination. That test is inapplicable to statements contemplated under S. 32. Having been made against the interest of their maker, they also expose him to criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages; they, thus, carry a measure of guarantee of truthfulness and accuracy for it is improbable that such statement would be made unless they are true; that is the reason to presume that they must have been true and accurate. Use of such statement against other accused no doubt would to some extent cause inconvenience and prejudice to the co-accused but if not so used it would cause inconvenience and prejudice to the prosecution in establishing the truth; the law, thus, choses the lesser evil of making those statements admissible in evidence. But whether such statements were indeed against the interest of their maker would have to be determined by the Court as a question of fact. [A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 1; A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1134, Rel. on]: 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 161: 1983 Ker.L.T. 156: 1984 Cr.L.J. 753.

Confession of a deceased co-accused, held, is relevant both under Ss. 30 and 32(3) as it is a confession which, if true, would have exposed him to criminal prosecution: I.L.R. (1979) Bom. 380 (D.B.). See also 1972 Raj.L.W. 675.

Although under S. 32(3) a confession made by a deceased conspirator after he had rendered himself liable to criminal prosecution is not admissible, yet when general evidence of the existence of a conspiracy of which the deceased was a member has been given, such a statement is admissible under S. 10: (1933-34) 38 Cal.W.N. 1015: A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 26.

Charge of murder—Statement by wife of deceased made to Village Munsif charging accused—Deponent subsequently committing suicide—Statement not admissible against accused: A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 450: (1942) 1 M.L.J. 503.

Where in a murder case one of the eye-witnesses had made a statement to the Police and other persons which included a confession that he had, under duress, taken away the dead body and burried it in the river bed—an offence under S. 202 of the Indian Penal Code—as also his eye witness account of the murder committed by the accused and thereafter that witness being taunted for his failure to protect the deceased—the Headmaster of the School where the witness was employer—committed suicide, held, being a statement under S. 32(3) exposing him to prosecution and damages, it did not fall under S. 32(1) which relates to the cause of death; it was a weak type of evidence standing on a different footing; though admissible in evidence, it would nevertheless be extremely hazardous to implicitly accept such statement without corroboration to convict the accused named by the said witness: 1984 Mah.L.J. 709.

Joint trial—Death of co-accused before pronouncement of judgment—Held, confession of deceased—Co-accused was relevant under S. 30 read with S. 32(3) of Evidence Act: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1017: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 832.

Where the accused's mother in a case for murder of the accused's wife had stated, before she herself died, that her son had gone to his bed room at 10, at night, bolted the door from within, came out in the morning and ran away and she found her daughter-in-law lying dead in the bed room, held, since nothing in her statement indicated that the mother was aware or even suspicious of murder or that she herself was guilty of any offence or violation of law which would expose her to any prosecution or damages, the statement did not fall under S. 32(3); it was not admissible in evidence. [A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 1; A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1134, Foll.]: 1984 Cr.L.J. 753: 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 161: 1983 Ker.L.T. 156.

On trial for forgery one of the accused who had made a statement before the enquiring Magistrate died before the commencement of the trial. The statement was admitted by the Sessions Judge under S. 32, Cl. (3). Held, that the statement was inadmissible since its maker had already rendered himself liable to criminal prosecution at the time it was made: (1923) 25 Bom.L.R. 248.

Where in an attempt to commit a dacoity one member of the gang received gunshot wounds at the hands of a villager and when other members of the gang had run away, he disclosed the names of the companions to the villagers before he died. Held, that the statement of the deceased implicating himself as well as his companions was admissible in evidence under S. 32(3) and could be used against other accomplices named by him: 1960 All.L.J. 567: 1960 All.Cr. R. 297: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 591.

In a divorce suit filed in India by the husband on the ground of adultery, a letter written to him by the co-respondent who lives in England admitting adultery with the respondent, is admissible in evidence, as the admission of adultery would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution: I.L.R. 56 All. 570: A.I.R. 1934 All. 618 (S.B.).

30. Clause (4).—S. 32(4) allows evidence of opinion in respect of any matter of public or general interest, the test being whether the deceased person expressing the opinion was likely to have had knowledge. In the case of Mahants, even if they may have had knowledge by means of oral tradition handed down from Mahant to Chela, the opinion would be relevant but not particular facts: I.L.R. 12 Lah. 497: A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 161.

S. 32(4) of the Evidence Act will apply only when it is a public right or custom or a matter of general interest. When the paper or statement or recital does not state what exactly were the rights or customary privileges, etc., S. 32(4) is of no avail: A.I.R. 1952 Vindh. Pra. 36. See also I.L.R. 16 Pat. 258: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 69: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 631 (P.C.) [Question of limits of a particular revenue mahal not a matter of public right or general interest within S. 32 (4)].

The recitals in the boundaries of plots covered by a document do not constitute the opinion of the executant of the deed on any matter whatsoever and hence the recitals in the boundaries of place covered by certain documents are not admissible in evidence under S. 32(4) of the Evidence Act, to prove any public right or custom: 92 Cal.L.J. 72: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 125.

Where the question related to the local usage relating to the deep stream boundary rule, one of the witnesses who was the Zilladar for 36 years stated that such custom prevailed from time immemorial that he was told about it by the former Sarabarakar and a tenant, both of them, since dead. Held, that such evidence was admissible under S. 32(4): 146 I.C. 795: A.I.R. 1933 All. 376. See also 1937 Pat.W.N. 446: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 463 (Custom of land tenure).

Ss. 32(4), 43 and 48—Customary right—Claim for—Facts to be taken into consideration—Mode of proof—Ss. 13, 32(4), 43 and 48 of Evidence Act (1872) are relevant: 1965 Raj. L.W. 242: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 217.

Statements of deceased persons as to the existence of a family custom are admissible in evidence under S. 32(4): I.L.R. 8 Luck. 445: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246. Statement of deceased as to custom—Family custom made after controversy—Admissibility of: 41 I.A. 275: I.L.R. 42 Cal. 582: 27 M.L.J. 373 (P.C.).

Where witnesses examined to prove a custom in the parties community permitting marriage between the children of a brother and sister or two sisters had deposed about solemnisation of such marriages in their own families, held, theirs was direct evidence based on the personal knowledge about the relationship between the two spouses; it need not conform to the requirements of S. 32; the witnesses had direct knowledge of the birth of the persons concerned; theirs was not opinion evidence under S. 32: A.I.R. 1982 P.&H. 221: 1982 Hindu L.R. 26: (1982) 1 D.M.C. 176.

A statement in a gift deed executed by a third person in favour of the suit mosque as early as 1903 stating that the mosque was constructed by certain person as a matter of charity is relevant and admissible under S. 32(4) of the Evidence Act, 1872, when the question in issue is whether the mosque in question was constructed with the private funds of a particular person or from the public funds collected by a particular sect: A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 209: 1955 An.W.R. 1.

Where the question as to who is the founder of a religious endowment is in dispute, a recital in a deed executed by a Mahant, who was for sometime connected with the management of the religious endowment, mentioning the founder of the endowment is admissible in evidence under S. 32(4), though the Mahant is dead and though the endowment was not founded in his lifetime: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 257: (1963) 5 Ori.J.D. 241.

Where the question was whether certain property was dedicated to a wakf and certain documents which related to the neighbouring lands and which contained recitals as to the character of the suit property were put in: Held, that they were admissible in evidence under S. 32(4): (1928-29) 33 Cal.W.N. 439: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 533.

Where the question was whether the letting of certain premises was for the immoral purpose of carrying on prostitution and running a brothel, the facts (1) that the lessor herself was a woman of the town, (2) that the defendant (lessee) was also a woman of the town and a prostitute, (3) that the general reputation of the particular house was one of ill-fame and a brothel, and finally (4) that the locality where the premises were situate was the notorious quarters of the city where it was said in evidence that all the houses in the street were brothels, were all relevant and compelling facts and cogent circumstances leading to the only possible conclusion that the letting was for immoral purposes of prostitution and for keeping a brothel. The evidence of a family physician on a point which turns on the reputation of the locality and of the persons concerned is of great weight and cannot be lightly dismissed. Knowing the inmates of a brothel by name is not necessarily the only qualification to speak on the fact whether a particular house is a brothel or not. The evidence of reputation of a house by a person who resides in a part of the very same house as a shopkeeper saying what type of people visits such house is not only admissible but cogent and relevant. His incapacity to name the prostitutes or their paramours does not discredit the testimony of such a witness. An independent and responsible witness, who lived in the vicinity of the premises ever since his boyhood, is entitled to speak of the reputation of the premises as quarters for prostitution and brothel keeping. His evidence cannot be considered as unsatisfactory merely because it was only once he actually went inside the house. The importance of this evidence lies in the fact that it was the evidence of reputation under S. 32(4) of the Evidence Act coming from a man of the locality and its vicinity who spoke of the house and locality covering a time which went back to the period not only when it was let but even prior thereto: A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 713.

Applicability—Statements made after dispute had arisen—Admissibility: A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 7.

31. Clause (5).—Four conditions must be fulfilled for the application of sub-S. (5) of S. 32; firstly, the statements, written or verbal, of relevant facts must have been made by a person who is dead or cannot be found, etc., as mentioned in the initial part of the section; secondly, the statements must relate to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption; thirdly, the person making the statement must have special means of knowledge as to the relationship in question; and lastly, the statements must have been made before the question in dispute was raised: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914; A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 42: 91 Mad.L.W. 4: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 460.

Statements after dispute arose are not admissible. See 25 All.L.J. 861: A.I.R. 1927 All. 818. On this clause, see also I.L.R. 46 All. 665: A.I.R. 1924 All. 575; A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 7.

Statements are admissible under S. 32(5) and (6) only when they are made before the question in dispute was raised. Where the documents containing the statements as to relationship of the parties had come into existence after the dispute as to succession to certain jagir had been raised, S. 32(5) and (6) could not apply and the documents are not admissible under these clauses: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 46: 1955 Raj.L.W. 338. See also 1982 M.P.W.N. 60.

S. 32(5), embraces every statement made by a deceased person as to relationship if (1) he had special means of knowledge; and (2) it was made ante litem motam. These are the only pre-requisites to its admission and it does not affect its admissibility whether it was made in a judicial proceeding or otherwise. [A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 101, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1949 Him. Pra. 11.

The expression 'question in dispute' in S. 32(5), must be interpreted as meaning that the dispute raised in the latter suit must be identical, or in substance the same as in the former suit. It is not enough that the question was merely in dispute in the former litigation, but it must have been also directly in dispute. Even if the dispute has been raised collaterally, it does not matter: 53 Mys.H.C.R. 473.

The statement on which reliance is placed must have been made before the question in dispute was raised and the words "before the question in issue was raised" do not merely mean before the commencement of the particular legal proceedings in which such a statement is produced in evidence but even before the actual controversy regarding the subject-matter of the declaration has arisen. [A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 947, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: I.L.R. (1976) 26 Raj. 200: 1975 W.L.N. 931; A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 148: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 814 (D.B.).

The condition of ante litem motam involves the idea that the dispute, if any, on the former occasion must not be the same in substance as the dispute in the later suit; and the statement now sought to be used will not be excluded if it merely related to some matter foreign or collateral to the matter in controversy on the former occasion. The mere existence of the situation out of which the dispute subsequently arises does not render a declaration inadmissible nor on the other hand is actual litigation necessary to exclude it. But so soon as a controversy has actually arisen which would naturally create a bias in the mind of one standing in the relation of the declarant all subsequent declarations become inadmissible. The previous controversy, to render the declaration inadmissible, must have been on precisely the same point: A.I.R. 1952 Ori. 75.

S. 32(5) only requires that the statement tendered must be made by a person who had special means of knowing the relationship to which it relates, and that it must have been made ante litem motam. It is not further necessary that the statement in question should also be relevant to the matter in issue in respect of which it was made. It is also immaterial whether it was made in a judical proceeding or otherwise : 64 I.A. 92: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 101: (1937) 1 M.L.J. 646 (P.C.). See also A.I.R. 1939 All. 61.

It is well settled that statements or declarations made before persons of competent knowledge made ante litem motam are admissible to prove ancient rights of a public or general nature; but their value is considerably weakened if they pertain not to public but purely private rights. It is equally well settled that declarations or statements made post litem motam would not be admissible as they have the element of bias and may as well be concoctions. However, ante litem motam statements to be admissible must have been made not only before the actual existence of the controversy but also before the commencement of the legal proceedings: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684:

Illustration(k) to S. 32 shows that the relationship which may be proved by the statement of a deceased person may be relationship of the person making the statement: 25 M.L.J. 373. See also 163 I.C. 770: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 340.

In order to be admissible under S. 32(5) or (6), the statement of the dead person must have been made ante litem motam, that is before the commencement of the controversy, actual or legal, on the same point; the words 'before the question in issue was raised' do not necessarily mean before it was raised in the proceedings wherein the statement is sought to be adduced; as stated in Halsbury's Laws of England, they mean before even the existence of any actual controversy on the point even prior to the litigation: (1986) 34 B.L.J.R. 569: 1986 B.B.C.J. 743.

Statements of witnesses in a prior suit regarding the adoption of a party cannot be admitted in evidence in the subsequent suit in respect of the same question of adoption as they cannot be said to have been made before the question in dispute was raised: I.L.R. 55 Mad. 40: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 198: 62 M.L.J. 116; A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 446: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 227.

A statement of a deceased person relating to the existence of relationship by blood made in a suit not inter partes at a time when there was no dispute, is relevant under S. 32(5): 225 I.C. 8: A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 54.

There can be direct evidence about the relationship by blood. A witness may depose that he knows a particular relationship between some persons and his evidence may be from this knowledge; but if the witness has no direct knowledge he can give evidence about the statements relating to the existence of any relationship by blood between two or more persons, heard by him from persons who made such statements provided those persons had special means of knowledge about such relationship and such statements were made before the question in dispute was raised. Evidence about such statements only becomes relevant if persons making such statements are dead or cannot be found or have become incapable of giving evidence or their attendance cannot be procured without any unreasonable delay and expenses. It is only in those limited cases that a witness having no direct knowledge about the relationship by blood can give evidence of statements known by him from other persons about such relationship. This is what is clearly stated in S. 32 (5) of the Evidence Act. A witness can also give his opinion in evidence as to the relationship of one person to another that is in controversy before a Court, provided that opinion is expressed by his conduct and if he as a member of that family or otherwise has special means of knowledge of that relationship. That is according to the provisions under S. 50 of the Evidence Act, subject to the limitations as stated above, the statement or the opinion deposed to by a witness on the question of relationship of one person to another will be relevant. It is in this light that the depositions of the witnesses will have to be looked into, where none of them had any direct knowledge about the relationship between parties with reference to the common ancestor: 1964 B.L.J.R. 152: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 187.

Where question of a lady being wedded wife of a person and, consequently, her being entitled to the grant of succession certificate to his estate had admittedly become disputed prior to the date on which an affidavit was purported to have been sworn by a pandit who allegedly performed the marriage, held, as the said statement in the affidavit of the deceased pandit was given after the dispute had already arisen, same was not a relevant statement and, thus, the affidavit was not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 368.

Where the witnesses speaking to an alleged relationship depose to their having known of the said relationship from both the parties who are dead and alive, their evidence cannot be discarded as inadmissible: 1948 All.W.R. (Rev.) 54: 1948 R.D. 111.

Where the statement in question was made by an aged relation of the family, it was held that it was doubtful whether it was necessary for him to depose to any particular source of knowledge so as to render his statement admissible under S. 32(5) because he might, as a relation, be presumed to have been well acquainted with the pedigree of his ancestors: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 91. Recital in deeds how far evidence: 25 M.L.J. 373: 19 I.C. 740.

Statements of deceased mortgagor in mortgage deed admissible to prove relationship: 29 I.C. 974.

Witnesses should not be permitted by Court to give their testimony as to matters which could not be within their own knowledge without first stating the source of their information. They should be required to prove the statements relied upon with proper particularity and with due attention to the requirements that the person making the statement had special means of knowledge. The evidence of a family bard as to the relationship of parties is prima facie inadmissible if it relates to events long before his birth as it is hearsay: 176 I.C. 464: (1938) 40 Punj.L.R. 162: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 303. See also A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 446: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 227.

To prove the existence of relationship between persons deceased, evidence of the kind described in S. 32, Cls. (5), (6), (7) and S. 50 of the Evidence Act should be put forward whenever the question is in issue. There is no express provision in the Evidence Act making evidence of general reputations admissible as proof of relationship. The witnesses to prove the relationship should first be asked by the parties producing them to state the source of their information about the relationship sought to be proved. As observed by the Privy Council in A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 201 "it cannot be left to time or chance or cross-examination to disclose whether a statement has any basis which could give it value or admissibility": A.I.R. 1952 Madh. Bh. 12. But see infra.

There is nothing in the language of S. 32 which would bar a statement on the ground of hearsay if the statement is otherwise admissible under the provisions of that section. Where, therefore, A had gone to consult B about the position of stars at the time of the birth of A's daughter, the entry made by B in his panchang was admissible in evidence after his death, since the question of age is a question of relationship by blood and B had special means of knowledge of the fact: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 775: A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 38.

When a family migrated from one province to another years ago it is not possible to have in all cases anything but hearsay evidence which could be obtained from those having special means of knowledge (their ancestors) regarding the migration. Statements made to members of family by their ancestors are, thus, admissible in evidence to prove their relationship and their original place of residence where that relationship arose: I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 979: A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 253.

A statement prepared and signed soon after a marriage ceremony, by the priest who officiated at the ceremony, that he performed the marriage according to rites prescribed by religious scriptures and that the essential ceremonies constituting a valid Hindu marriage were performed, does not fall within the ambit of S. 32(5) of the Evidence Act. Such a statement relates to the performance of the marriage ceremonies and not to the existence of any relationship by marriage and, hence, not relevant under S. 32(5): (1943) 45 Bom.L.R. 924: A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 29.

Where the evidence of the plaintiff is that his deceased mother gave the names in the pedigree attached to the plaint for performing religious ceremony and the fact that she so gave the names to the plaintiff is not independently proved, the evidence of the plaintiff is only hearsay evidence and is not the statement of the deceased falling within the scope of S. 32(5): (1968) 81 Mad.L.W. 421: (1968) 2 M.L.J. 487.

Whether under S. 32(5) only statements of relevant facts are admissible and not statements of facts in issue. See (1943) 45 Bom.L.R. 924: A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 29.

Where the question at issue is whether a certain person died issueless, a statement of a deceased that that person died issueless amounts to a statement relating to the existence of a relationship by blood, because the question whether that person left a son involves the question whether there is any blood relationship between him and the person who claims to be his son. The existence of any relationship within the meaning of S. 32(5) includes the non-existence of such relationship. If a statement relating to the existence of such relationship is evidence under that sub-section, any statement which implies that there is no existence of such relationship between two persons also comes under that sub-section: 191 I.C. 674: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 205.

A reference made in the order of mutation giving effect to a gift to the relationship of the donee with the donor's husband is admissible in evidence under S. 32(5) although there is no such reference in any statement made by the donor before the Revenue Officer. In mutation proceedings, it is not the practice to record the statements of the persons appearing before the Revenue Officer in the way in which statements of parties or witnesses are usually recorded in civil or other proceedings. What happens is that the Revenue Officer concerned puts questions to the parties or other persons present before him and embodies the answers elicited in the order recorded by him: A.I.R. 1948 Lah. 113. A statement by a deceased person that there was a marriage between him and a certain woman is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the legitimacy of his children under the provisions of S. 32, sub-S. (5) as a statement as to marriage. The doctrine of Mohammedan Law do not exclude evidence of this nature and the Evidence Act applies: I.L.R. 55 All. 139: A.I.R. 1933 All. 329.

Statement of deceased that his consent to adoption was purchased, how far evidence: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 19: 18 I.C. 989; 160 I.C. 332: A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 1. Statement of deceased members of a family regarding family history and seniority of members is admissible: 1 Luck. Cases 97: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 278. See also 1941 Rang.L.R. 445: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 276 (Statement by a Burman Buddhist that his property would go to a particular person).

Evidence of a mirasi, who is a hereditary family bard, is admissible to prove pedigree: 58 I.A. 188: I.L.R. 12 Lah. 336: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 45: 60 M.L.J. 583 (P.C.). So also the evidence of a Hardwar purohit: 133 I.C. 874: (1930) 32 Punj.L.R. 696: A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 722. See also 176 I.C. 464: (1938) 40 Punj.L.R. 162: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 303.

Entries in the books of the priests at a place of pilgrimage should be accepted with care. The production of books before the trial Court is essential, and the probative value of such entries is considerably reduced, if they are not placed before the trial Judge: 151 I.C. 622: A.I.R. 1934 Pesh. 78. See also I.L.R. 18 Lah. 732: (1937) 39 Punj.L.R. 370: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 599.

A statement whether an ancestor of the person making the statement was related to him as an elder uncle or a younger uncle or an elder brother or a younger brother or an elder son or a younger son is a statement as to relationship within the meaning of S. 32(5): I.L.R. 20 Luck. 108: 1944 O.W.N. 83: A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 162.

Statement as to commencement of relationship—If, and when can be admitted: (1915-16) 20 Cal.W.N. 122: 21 Cal.L.J. 96; I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 872: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 73.

'Statement'—Meaning of: (1959) 1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 101: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 356.

Assertion of private right to negative public right—Statement made by great grandson's son of original grantee in inam proceedings—Question whether grant was to temple or named person—Statement must be given great weight as one made ante litem motam although it is in the interest of the maker: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 8.

Statements made by a person who is dead as to the name of her mother and other relations (except her husband) are admissible under S. 32(5), in a charge under S. 368, I.P.Code 120 I.C. 81: A.I.R. 1929 Sind 250. A recital in a testator's father's will mentioning the age of the testator is admissible to prove the age of the testator: A.I.R. 1929 Sind 250. See also 1936 O.W.N. 1167: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 179. But see 4 Sind L.R. 225: 10 I.C. 967.

A statement by a deceased person as to the existence of relationship, the person having special means of knowledge, and the statement being made before the legitimacy of a certain person was called in question, is admissible in evidence: I.L.R. 3 Luck. 416: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 233; I.L.R. 3 Luck. 326: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 397. See also A.I.R. 1939 Sind 145.

Statements of deceased relatives, servants and dependants are admissible, for proving family relationship. In every case it is a question of fact if the person who made the statement had special means of knowledge: I.L.R. 55 Mad. 40.

As to relevancy of entries in purohit's books to prove date of death, see (1924) 26 Bom.L.R. 563: 46 M.L.J. 541 (P.C.).

Where the plaintiff's own real mother stated that he was her son from her first husband, held, no reliance could be placed by him on kutumb register and voters' list where he was shown as son of his mother's second husband: 1983 All.W.C. 87 (Rev.).

Statements regarding legitimacy made after dispute about existence of relationship had arisen—Not admissible in evidence under S. 32(5): A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 32.

Where the question was as to whether 'A' was legally wedded wife of deceased and 'B' their daughter and there was record of hospital where 'A' was got admitted at the time of birth of 'B' wherein deceased was shown as her husband and at the time of admission of 'B' in school the deceased declared himself as her father and he also got an account opened with a Bank wherein he declared 'B' as her daughter and himself as father and natural guardian, held, these statements made by the deceased were relevant and material under S. 32(5): A.I.R. 1982 Del. 143: 1981 Rajdhani L.R. 82: I.L.R. (1981) 2 Del. 997.

Adoption—Evidence—Documents, describing plaintiff as adopted son, on dates subsequent to the date his adoption was disputed by other members of the family—Have not much evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 174.

Relationship by adoption—Factum of adoption—Proof—Statement by adoptive father in an earlier revenue case that plaintiff was his adopted son—Adoptive father subsequently becoming infirm and incapable of giving evidence—Suit by plaintiff against trespassers on property on the basis of adoption—Statement of adoptive father, held, admissible to prove factum of adoption: (1963) 2 An.W.R. 307: (1963) 2 An.L.T. 442: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53.

Application and statement before Tahsildar requesting him to enter the name of the person adopted in the revenue accounts in place of applicant—Held, certified copies of such documents which were in the custody of Government satisfied requirements of S. 32(5) and documents were admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1963) Andh. Pra. 1085.

Deed of adoption forming part of transaction of adoption—Statement therein by deceased adoptive mother about relationship by adoption—Relevant under S. 6—Admissibility under S. 32(5): (1961) 63 Bom.L.R. 726: A.I.R. 1962 Bom. 175.

The time of one's birth relates to the commencement of one's relationship by blood and a statement, therefore, of one's age made by a person having special means of knowledge, relates to the existence of such relationship as that referred to in S. 32(5). Hence, entry of the date of birth in a school register made on the statement of the mother of a boy would be admissible under S. 32(5): A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 21.

Sub-S. (5) cannot be construed literally and statement regarding age of person concerned cannot be said to be not one relating to existence of any relationship by blood or marriage or adoption: (1968) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 75: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 292: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 947.

The question of age is a question of blood relationship; thus, a person's age mentioned in recitals, held, is admissible under S. 32(5): 1977 W.L.N. (U.C.) 102 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Under S. 32(5) a statement relating to the existence of any relationship (by blood, marriage or adoption) is admissible to prove the facts mentioned in the statement. As the question as to existence of any relationship also includes the question as to the commencement of that relationship, declarations of deceased competent declarants are admissible to prove a person's date of birth and consequently his age, minority or majority or the order in which the members of the family were born. Such declarations are admissible to prove parentage, names of relations or the date of death of a member of the family, as death implies the termination of relationship just as birth implies its commencement: I.L.R. (1946) All. 649: A.I.R. 1947 All. 161.

Fosterage is not relationship within this section. Hearsay evidence of fosterage is not admissible under the section to prove the case of fosterage: 24 I.C. 643. A horoscope prepared ante litem motam by an astrologer, dead at the time of suit, whose handwriting had been proved by a near relation of his and who used to prepare horoscopes for others in the village and consequently must be taken to have special means of knowledge of the date of birth of a party is admissible: (1931-32) 36 Cal.W.N. 838: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 51. See also 174 I.C. 756: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 43.

The petitioner applied for rectification of his age in the Lekhpal's Register on the basis of a horoscope but he did not explain as to why he gave the wrong date of birth at the time of the entry in the register.

Held, that in the circumstances no importance could be attached to the horoscope. It was the duty of the petitioner to explain to the Court why he gave 26th June, 1898 as his date of birth in the first instance. The Court would then have been in a position to compare the basis of his first information with the evidence now produced in favour of correction: 1959 All.W.R. (H.C.) 140.

A horoscope can be used to help in proving the date of birth stated in it only under S. 159 or S. 160 and that of course only if the person who wrote it or a person who read it soon after it was written, is examined as a witness; no part of S. 32 can make any statement of a date in such a document, a relevant fact: A.I.R. 1986 Madh. Pra. 218: 1986 M.P.L.J. 25: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 213.

A horoscope which is not spoken to either by its writer or by one who had special means of knowledge as to its correctness is inadmissible in evidence: I.L.R. 38 Mad. 166: 24 M.L.J. 517; 174 I.C. 756: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 43. The horoscope by itself has very little evidentiary value. The date of birth as entered in such a document cannot be accepted as true and correct unless the person who prepared it or who caused it to be prepared is able to testify to the correctness of the date of birth as given in that document. In fact, the acceptance of the correctness of the date of birth as given in such a document, depends entirely on the reliability of the evidence of the person who prepared the document or who caused it to be prepared and who may be in a position to swear to the exact date of birth of the person concerned: I.L.R. (1957) Ker. 367: A.I.R. 1957 Ker. 103.

Statement as to child's age by father then deceased—Statement is admissible in evidence: 1966 B.L.J.R. 406: A.I.R. 1967 Pat. 172.

The statement contained in the admission register of the School as to the age of an individual on information supplied to the School authorities by the deceased father of the student is admissible in evidence under S. 32(5): I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 26: A.I.R. 1964 Raj. 126.

The entry of age of a person in the School Register is relevant piece of evidence and slight evidence to the contrary may displace them and in such a case non-production of parents might have serious effect: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 65: I.L.R. (1971) 1 Punj. 637.

An entry in the Scholars' Register made by the father, since deceased, as to his son's age would be admissible: 5 O.W.N. 1111: A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 113; 165 I.C. 523: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 170. So also statements of deceased father as to approximate date of birth of his son: I.L.R. 12 Luck. 606: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 170.

Where the author of a document, a Teva (Janma Patri) speaking of relationship of a father and a daughter was not traceable and hence could not be brought in witness box to prove the document, and where the witness (the father) was not knowing the language and, therefore, the execution of the document could not be proved, it was held that the document did not support the oral evidence of the witness: 1964 Raj. L.W. 606: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 483: I.L.R. (1965) 15 Raj. 6: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 90.

The words "relating to the existence of any relationship" are wide enough to include statements about the birth and death of relatives which events either commence or terminate the relationship. A statement in a guardianship petition made by a person's aunt that he was born on a certain day and that she was his aunt is admissible in evidence as it relates to the existence of relationship: 21 Cal.L.J. 621: 28 I.C. 595.

A recital of the date of birth in an application for appointment of a guardian is not by itself admissible in evidence upon mere production of the document but may be rendered admissible under certain circumstances. If the conditions, recited in S. 32(5) are satisfied, that is, a person who had made this statement had special means of knowledge and he is now dead or cannot be found such statement in the application will be admissible: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 533.

It is only a member of the family of the accused who can give evidence about his age. A person wholly disinterested and disconnected with him can have no knowledge of his date of birth. Therefore, it is no reasonable ground to reject the evidence of a family member as being that of an interested witness: 1969 All.Cr.R. 41: 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 41.

Statements as to age of adopted son by adoptive mother—Admissibility: I.L.R. 56 All. 766: 1934 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1934 All. 406 (F.B.).

Where the age of a witness is given in the paper containing the deposition of the witness and appears to have been recorded by the presiding officer, there is no reason either to presume that the presiding officer instead of following the usual course of asking age of the witness should have put down the age merely by guesswork. Similarly the entries in the registration endorsements are made by the Sub-Registrar himself and the presumption is that he also would follow the correct course of asking persons their age instead of guessing it: 1938 O.W.N. 1267: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 17. A statement put in during the inam enquiry by a vakil on behalf of certain inamdars, though not signed by them, may be presumed to be authorised and is admissible as evidence of the genealogical table contained therein: I.L.R. 55 Mad. 40: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 198: 62 M.L.J. 116.

Where the statement of a witness giving the pedigree is found to be inadmissible under S. 32(5), but he deposes to facts which established such treatment as is contemplated by S. 50, it should be admitted to that extent: 151 I.C. 338: A.I.R. 1934 All. 117. Statement made in a suit in which the issue was the same. See I.L.R. 7 Pat. 90: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 113. Though a person cannot claim a title under an unprobated will, he can rely upon a statement contained therein indicating the relationship of the parties: I.L.R. 7 Pat. 733: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 459.

Statement of defendant's mother that plaintiff was not her son made after dispute has arisen between parties—Statement would not be admissible under S. 32(5): 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 772: 1966 All.L.J. 318.

A member of a family can depose about what he has learnt about his own ancestors, provided it is an expression of his own independent opinion (even if based on hearsay derived from the dead); it is not merely the repetition of hearsay opinion of others, provided the opinion is expressed by conduct; thus, where a member of the family deposed that he had heard the names of his ancestors being mentioned at the fateha, held, the offering of fateha together with mentioning of the ancestors' names is certainly admissible. [A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 601, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 228: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 225: (1972) 1 M.L.J. 491 (D.B.).

Where in some documents deceased had described the plaintiff as his adopted son, held, the statement was admissible under S. 32(5) as the statement related to the existence of relationship between the plaintiff and the deceased by adoption and the deceased had special means of knowledge of knowing it and the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.). See also A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 148: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 814 (D.B.) and A.I.R. 1972 Pat. 325: 1972 B.L.J.R. 842 (D.B.), cited under Note 29, supra.

Statements contained in an unregistered will executed subsequent to the arising of dispute, held, could not be admitted under S. 32(5): A.I.R. 1973 Andh. Pra. 149: (1972) 2 An.W.R. 346 (D.B.).

In finding out whether a lady is wife of a person now deceased, statement contained in a gift deed executed by such person admitting her to be so, held, is admissible under S. 32 unless it is proved to be a document obtained by undue influence: A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 49.

If a statement relates to marriage or adoption between persons deceased and is made in any will or it refers to the affairs of the family and it was made before the question in dispute was raised, held, under S. 32(6), it becomes a relevant piece of evidence: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 921 (D.B.).

The statement made by the testator in the will about the adoption is certainly a piece of admissible evidence but there is no rule of law or prudence laying down the principle that such a statement must be regarded as conclusive: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 419: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 349: 1980 U.J. (S.C.) 110.

While evidence of general reputation as proof of relationship is not admissible in evidence, opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship is relevant when it is given by any person, who either as a member of the family or otherwise had special means of knowledge of the subject. Such evidence is relevant under sub-S. (5) of S. 32: 1961 Jab.L.J. 238: 1961 M.P.L.J. 253.

S. 60 of the Evidence Act, only bars hearsay evidence given by means of oral evidence. Statements under S. 32 may be brought on record either by means of writing which are documentary evidence, or by means of oral evidence. All that S. 32 requires is that statement sought to be admitted must be of a dead person or of a person otherwise not available as a witness. If such statement falls within S. 32, Cl. (5) it becomes admissible irrespective of, whether the information given by a person, possessing 'special means of knowledge' was based upon hearsay or upon direct personal knowledge. There is no bar in S. 32, Cl. (5) against any particular source of information. The statement would be inadmissible if it was not based on special means of knowledge possessed by the maker or if it was not made before the question in dispute arose. The whole principle underlying exclusion of statements which are not ante litem motam is that the presence of a particular dispute may induce them to make tendentious statements intended to support a particular claimant. If a statement is not made when the person making it is likely to suffer from a tendency to support one party or the other, which is presumed to exist after the particular question has become a subject-matter of controversy, the statement is admissible. This is the principle underlying admissibility of even hearsay statements under S. 32, Cl. (5), provided all the conditions of that provision are satisfied. A letter written by Sanskrit teacher in High School who was specially interested in preparing and keeping genealogical tables of Uniyal Brahmins stating about relationship on basis of information received from the deceased and an agreement between all reversioners of the deceased when there was no dispute regarding descent from common ancestor, the statements in the letter and agreement were held admissible as they were made both ante litem motam and by persons who had special means of knowledge though they were not by persons having direct or personal knowledge: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 75.

S. 90 no doubt raises some presumptions about the authorship of a writing if a document is 30 years old and if produced from proper custody but that is only a manner of proof. Whether the statements made in that document would be relevant will depend upon the fulfilment of the conditions laid down in Cl. (5) of S. 32. The writer must be shown to have special means of knowledge about relationship. If it does not become relevant, S. 90 will not be called for: 1964 B.L.J.R. 152: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 187; (1987) 35 B.L.J.R. 265: 1987 B.B.C.J. 122: 1987 Pat.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 25.

Where the deceased vendor had described the vendee's husband as son of a particular person in the deed more than 30 years old, held, in the absence of any proof that the vendor had any special means of knowledge about the relationship, the statement made in the deed was not admissible under S. 32(5): (1987) 35 B.L.J.R. 265: 1987 B.B.C.J. 122: 1987 Pat.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 25.

Girdawar Qanungo appointed to hold enquiry about relationship of parties—Report made 70 years back—It can be presumed that he must have died by now—Objection that the maker of the report has not been put in the witness-box nor have the defendants made any effort to prove that he is dead or he cannot be put in the witness-box any other reason is not insurmountable: I.L.R. (1953) Patiala 187: A.I.R. 1954 Pepsu 14.

Ss. 32 and 33—Use of admission of one accused against the other accused—Penal Code (XLV of 1860), Ss. 494 and 495—Proof.

Held: What is required by law, to sustain a conviction under S. 494 of the Indian Penal Code, as laid down by the Supreme Court in (1966) 1 M.L.J. (S.C.) 92: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1564, is that the prosecution must establish that the essential ceremonies for a valid marriage were gone through by the accused on a date on which either party to the marriage had a spouse living.

To invoke S. 32(5) the statement should be one which should have been made before the question in dispute was raised. In the present case, the complaint of the appellant was filed in 1963, while the complaint of accused No. 3 was filed in January 1964. Therefore, S. 32(5) is not attracted. It follows that the statement about the existence of relationship by marriage was made after the dispute about the matter had arisen between the parties. As regards the use of the statement under S. 33, one of the essential requirements is, as provided by the second clause of the proviso, that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine. The statement that is sought to be used is the statement of verification. Though accused No. 1 was an accused in that case, he had neither the right nor opportunity to cross-examine the complaint in that case. We are, therefore, of the opinion that even if the verification statement is admitted in evidence, the admissions therein cannot be used against any of the accused in this case: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 526: (1967) 10 Law Rep. 196: (1967) 1 Mys.L.J. 553.

32. Clauses (5) and (6)—Pedigrees.—Genealogical evidence may be of two kinds: firstly, direct that is of the persons who have the knowledge of the facts or acts that constitute the relationship; and secondly, traditional evidence. The latter consists of verbal or written declarations of various kinds mentioned in S. 32(5) and (6) of the Evidence Act. To ensure the testimonial trustworthiness of such statements, it has been made a condition precedent to their acceptance that they must have been made in circumstances ensuring freedom from plan, design, motive or self-interest on the part of the declarants, and they must have been made before the question in dispute was raised. In other words, the declarations must have been made ante litem motam: A.I.R. 1952 Ori. 75; A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914.

A statement in a family pedigree made long before disputes arose by a person who was aware of the relationship of a deceased person would be admissible both under sub-Ss. (5) and (6) of S. 32, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 85.

As ordinarily understood, a pedigree is an ancient family record handed down from generation to generation and added to, as a member of the family dies or is born; but a statement drawn upon a particular occasion, for a specific purpose, by a member of the family, is not a pedigree in the sense in which it is used in S. 32 (6) and has to be treated as a mere declaration made by the person who made or adopted it: 16 Mys.L.J. 137: 43 Mys.H.C.R. 21.

On the question of pedigree, the statements of deceased members of the family made ante litem motam before there was anything to throw doubt upon them are evidence to prove pedigree. And such statements by deceased members of the family may be proved not only by showing that they actually made the statements, but by showing that they acted upon them, or assented to them, or did anything that amounted to showing that they recognized them. If any member of the family, as a person who presumably would know all about the family, had stated such and such a pedigree, that evidence would be receivable its weight depending upon other circumstances. A statement made ante litem motam as to relationship of persons, by those who have special means of knowledge of such relationship is clearly admissible. Thus, it is not necessary to prove pedigree tables, such as pedigree tables prepared at the time of settlement, by direct testimony of witnesses having personal knowledge: (1961) 63 Punj.L.R. 177: A.I.R. 1961 Punj. 251.

Genealogies admitted or proved to be old and relied on in previous cases are relevant, and sometimes even conclusive; but before accepting or relying on them, the Courts must consider (a) their source and dependability; (b) their admissibility as evidence; (c) their proper use in earlier decisions or judgments relied upon; (d) their age; and (e) earlier litigations where they were accepted or rejected : A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. 93 (S.N.).

In considering the oral evidence regarding a pedigree, a purely mathematical approach is of no avail where a long line of descent, spreading over a century, is to be proved; obviously witnesses deposing as to genealogy have to depend on their special means of knowledge obtained by them through their ancestors; but there is also a great risk in relying solely on the evidence given from pure memory for, may be, they are interested witnesses having a tendency to draw more from their imagination or turn and twist the facts they may have heard from their ancestors. To appreciate evidence of such witnesses, the following considerations should be kept in mind: (1) the relationship or connection, however close it may be, of the witness with the persons whose pedigree is sought to be proved; (2) the nature and character of the special means of knowledge of the witness about the pedigree; (3) the interested nature of the witness; (4) the precaution which must be taken to rule out any false statement made by the witness post litem motam or which is based not on his special knowledge but is purely based on his imagination; and (5) the evidence of the witness must be substantially corroborated as far as time and memory admit: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. 93 (S.N.).

Evidence regarding the tribe of a person taken from public records for a series of years and recorded in accordance with the requirements of the law, cannot in a pedigree case be disregarded for the reason that a particular link in the chain is not found, especially when there is no suggestion that entries in the records were false or that there was an existing reason why deliberately false entries should have been made. Statements in public documents are receivable to prove the facts stated on the general grounds that they were made by the authorised agents of the public in the course of official duty: (1960) 62 Punj.L.R. 425.

While proving relationship by genealogical tables, every link in the chain has to be proved; a weak link of relationship would weaken the chain of relationship: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 228: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 225: (1972) 1 M.L.J. 491 (D.B.).

Where genealogy is the very basis of a suit, the interested party would tend to establish its claim by concocting, fabricating or procuring a false genealogy; the Courts should, therefore, try to do justice on the materials on record, uninfluenced by extraneous circumstances: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. 93 (S.N.).

A woman made a statement on her own behalf and on behalf of her three sons, as to a pedigree. The woman was dead and so was one of the brothers. Held, that the statement was as much a statement of the woman and one of the brothers who were dead, as a statement of brothers who were alive and was admissible under S. 32(5), if it was made ante litem motam: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914.

It is the duty of the party producing a witness on the question of pedigree to elicit from him, if it is a fact, that he heard from a person deceased so as to fulfil the requirements of S. 32(5): A.I.R. 1934 All. 117: 151 I.C. 338.

A pedigree in a Settlement Court is admissible in evidence upon proof that the person making the statement contained in the pedigree was dead and had special means of knowledge: 10 I.C. 199; 8 I.C. 727. See also 25 I.C. 823; 105 I.C. 26: I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 872: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 73.

A pedigree filed for purposes of preparation of khewat more than 30 years before, when there was no controversy in respect of it, is admissible under S. 32(5) when all the signatories to it are dead: 148 I.C. 1041: A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 210.

Pedigree table relied on in a suit of 1864 was held to be not admissible under S. 32: I.L.R. 15 Lah. 688: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 283(2).

The foot note of the pedigree table is good evidence to prove the partition: 1976 Punj.L.J. 77.

A pedigree or horoscope certainly fall under S. 32(5) if other conditions are satisfied; they need not have been made at the time of birth so long as they are made prior to the arising of the controversy sought to be resolved through them; however, their evidentiary value is little: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 42: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 4: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 460

Ss. 32(5) and (6), 74—Panda's Bahis and horoscopes—Panda's Bahis and horoscopes are not public documents—Entries in them cannot be regarded to be so conclusive or decisive as to turn scales in favour of one party or the other: A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 32.

Entries in Panda's Register or Note Books are admissible in evidence upon a question of family pedigree but they should be received with caution and subjected to severe scrutiny in order to guard against the possibility of fabrication: 15 I.C. 625. See also 178 I.C. 950: 1938 O.W.N. 1267: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 17. Pandah's Bahis are admissible under S. 32(5) and (6) and S. 90 only if evidence is led to prove the identity, signature and hand-writing of the writer. The mere fact that such Bahi is old is no justification for admitting it either under S. 32(5) and (6) or under S. 90: 190 I.C. 597: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 245.

Panda's Bahis which have got no index, in which several new pages have been added and in which it is not known as to who the writer of the particular entries was, are not admissible in evidence to prove the relationship of parties: A.I.R. 1952 Punj. 115. A purohit's statement regarding relationship is admissible only if it comes within the four corners of S. 32(5) and (6) or under S. 50 of the Act: 190 I.C. 597: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 245.

Unless a family pedigree is shown to be a statement or some member of the family or maintained in the families of taluqdars governed by the custom, it is not admissible in evidence either under clause (5) or clause (6) of S. 32. The word 'family pedigree' in the Act should not be understood according to the standard adopted by Courts of law in England in regard to English pedigrees: I.L.R. 20 Luck. 108: A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 162. "Family pedigrees"—Meaning of: 1 Luck. Cases 700. Panjis, which are palm-leaf manuscripts of pedigree systematically maintained by panjiars (or genealogies) in the community of Maithil Brahmins are valuable evidence of pedigree, even though the person producing them is made to prove the handwriting of the same. It is not necessary that the party producing the same should prove by whom the panjis were written, having regard to the admitted system of maintaining panjis in Mithila, where regular records of pedigree of the Maithil Brahmins are maintained by the panjiars or pangikars who are under a duty to keep these records up-to-date, and go on regular tours and make inquiries, for the purpose. A family pedigree may be one kept by a member of the family or some other person on its behalf. Such a pedigree would be admissible in evidence of relationship, and it is not necessary for the purpose of admitting the same in evidence to show who made the statements made in the pedigree. When an ancient and genuine document purporting to be a family pedigree is produced in evidence by a person who states that he received the same from his father or grandfather, but is unable to prove the handwriting, it cannot be rejected as inadmissible, but it is admissible under S. 32(6) of the Evidence Act: I.L.R. 28 Pat. 447: A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 356. Pedigree—

The description of the transferee under a document as a son of a particular named person denoting the relationship between the two by birth is not admissible within the meaning of sub-S. (5) of S. 32 of the Evidence Act in absence of any material that either the executant or the scribe of that document had any special means of knowledge about that relationship. So also a statement about the relationship between two persons by another person who is not shown to have any special means of knowledge cannot be relevant: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 301.

The only evidence to prove relationship which is receivable under the law is of the kind described in Cls. (5), (6) and (7) of Ss. 32 and 50 of the Evidence Act. When neither the parties nor the Court had kept in view the aforesaid provisions while the evidence on the question of relationship was tendered the case was remanded only for proof, in accordance with law, of the relationship: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 147.

A settlement pedigree can be admitted in evidence either under S. 32(5) or under S. 35. If the settlement pedigree is one signed by the members of the family it would be admissible under S. 32(5) as statements of deceased persons as to relationship since such statements would be considered to be of those persons, having special means of knowledge. It must, however, be proved that statements were made by them at a time when there was no dispute as to the pedigree set up. If, however, the pedigree is not signed by the members of the family, but is prepared by the settlement officer himself after proper enquiry and bears his signature, it can be admitted under S. 35, as an entry in a public record stating a fact in issue and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties: I.L.R. 4 Luck. 39: A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 129. See also (1937) 2 M.L.J. 772: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 310; 65 Cal.L.J. 520: (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 1103.

Before a pedigree or table of relationship can be admitted in evidence, it must be shown that it is a statement made by a person having special means of knowledge and made before the question in dispute had arisen: 43 Mys. H.C.R. 21: 16 Mys.L.J. 137.

Though Art. 187 of the Bihar and Orissa Education Code, 1928, has no greater sanction than an administrative order or rule, not being based on any statutory authority it has to be obeyed and followed by all the recognised Schools of the Education Department. The admission register is a public record maintained by the head of the institution, who is to maintain a register as required by the Education Code. The date of birth, as entered in such an official record, therefore, is a relevant fact, as contemplated by S. 35 and the same can be proved by production of that record. The question whether the person on whose statement the entry in the register is made had any special means of knowledge so as to make the entry relevant under S. 32(5), does not affect the admissibility of the entry under S. 35 though it may affect its value: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 21.

A reversioner whether male or female who consents to an alienation (execution of settlement) by a widow or other limited heir made without legal necessity or to an invalid surrender and transferees from him, are precluded from disputing the validity of the alienation, though he may have received no consideration for his consent. It is immaterial that the alienation is by way of gift. In this case K who had not yet become entitled to the property, has lost the right to file a suit and recover possession by joining in the execution of the deed of settlement. Hence, S. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act did not affect the settlement deed. All that S. 32(5) of the Evidence Act states is that when the statement of the deceased person relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption, the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, and when the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised, such statement would be a relevant fact. Here, the plaintiff in his evidence had stated that his mother gave him the names in the pedigree and relationship for performing the ceremony. If it was proved independently of the evidence of the plaintiff that the mother of the plaintiff had made such a statement in respect of the relationship that statement may come within the scope of S. 32(5) of the Evidence Act, but not the evidence of plaintiff as such. Consequently, the plaintiff's evidence being purely hearsay cannot constitute legal evidence: (1968) 81 Mad.L.W. 421: (1968) 2 M.L.J. 487.

The English Law with regard to evidence on matters of pedigree differs in some respects from the Indian Law. Under the Indian Law only such evidence will be admissible which consists of (1) statements by a deceased person regarding relationship who had special means of knowledge when the statements were made before the question in dispute was raised, and (2) like statements in a will or deed relating to the affairs of the family when made before the question in dispute was raised: 110 I.C. 428 (2): A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 539. See also 163 I.C. 770: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 340.

Under the English law admission of hearsay evidence in pedigree cases is confined to the proof of the pedigree and does not apply to proof of the facts which constitute a pedigree, such as birth, death and marriage, when they have to be proved for other purposes. The Indian law as laid down in S. 32 is not so strict: I.L.R. 56 All. 766: 1934 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1934 All. 406 (F.B.).

A pedigree prepared by a Mirasi, who is a hereditary family bard, is admissible under S. 32(5) of the Evidence Act. It is his business to acquaint himself with the relationship of his clients and the value of his evidence is not taken away by the fact that no documents were available to him and he spoke from hearsay: (1948) 50 Punj.L.R. 249: A.I.R. 1944 East Punj. 158.

A statement made by a deceased person in a proceeding for the correction of a pedigree table started not for the purpose of settling any dispute between any of the parties but for the purpose of avoiding a dispute that might arise in future, falls under S. 32 (5), Evidence Act, and is admissible: A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 81.

Pedigree—Admissibility—Proof of—Person making the statement not known. See I.L.R. 37 All. 600. See also I.L.R. 30 All. 510 (P.C.): 8 I.C. 728; 21 I.C. 274; (1937) 2 M.L.J. 772 (P.C.).

The statement of a deceased person as to the family pedigree, which is admissible under S. 32, has little evidential value when it relates to matters which occurred before his birth or in early youth, if the source of his information is not disclosed: A.I.R. 1946 P.C. 59: (1946) 2 M.L.J. 98 (P.C.).

As to the presumption of genuineness of pedigree tables, see 105 I.C. 81: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 20. In cases of families of taluqdars governed by the custom of lineal primogeniture importance is attached to seniority. Hence, where members of such a family give pedigrees and indicate the persons by number, it is natural to consider that the numbers are given for the purpose of showing the order in which each of the persons stated therein was born. When genealogical tables are made by members of such a family, there is a natural tendency to proceed from the eldest to the youngest, because such family members by tradition and by necessity develop the habit of stating the names in order of seniority. Where in addition, a number of genealogical tables are dictated by persons who have personal knowledge, at different times and for different purposes, and they consistently mention the names in one unvarying order, that order must be ascribed to a design or a plan to state the name in order of birth: A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 162: I.L.R. 20 Luck. 108. Where there are a number of pedigrees put in by the direct ancestors of parties to the case and they are always the same, a fact which cannot be due to chance; there is a design in the way they are prepared and that design can only have been to give the correct order: 1938 O.W.N. 1267: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 17.

Where in a reversionary suit the opposing parties produced old pedigrees produced at the time of settlement and they were mutually contradictory. Held, that there is no authenticity lent to a pedigree by the mere fact of its being part of a settlement record; it is also incorrect to say that a latter pedigree is to be preferred to an older one. There is often a conflict between several pedigree tables prepared in the various settlements; the proper course to adopt in the case of such a conflict is, therefore, to decide each case on the merits on its own peculiar facts. Where if one of the pedigrees is true the party relying on it would be entitled to a share of properties mutated on the basis of the other pedigree and yet they were not allowed their share the other pedigree was preferred to be correct: A.I.R. 1952 Bilaspur 9.

Where in a contested succession certificate proceedings the question of who was the nearer heir was in dispute between the parties and the applicant gave the pedigree as given to him by the kula-guru of the deceased and the objector caused the pedigree table to be produced into Court by the said kula-guru but the said guru could not state who wrote it or at whose instance, nor whether any person having special knowledge (dead since) had ever adopted the same. Held, that the evidence of the kula-guru under the said circumstances is valueless and the document too can have no value as evidence: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 231: A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 167.

A and B were joined with a connecting line in pedigree table though their father's name was not mentioned—Held, that clearly showed that they were real brothers: 1990 Punj.L.J. 1.

33. Clause (7).—The object of S. 32(7) of the Evidence Act is that the statement must have been made in relation to a transaction where it was necessary to make the statement. The section aims at keeping out gratutious statements which were either not necessary to be made at the time and on the occasion when they were made or which it was not the duty of the party who made them to make: A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 426. Statements of facts contained in a will executed by a Hindu coparcener to the effect that the properties dealt with in the will are his self-acquired properties are admissible in evidence under S. 32 (7) to prove the character of the properties. But being a self-serving statement it will require and justify scrutiny in the light of other evidence in the case: I.L.R. (1937) Mad. 1012: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 638. See also A.I.R. 1939 Sind 145.

Where the husband in his subsequently executed will had asserted his title to a property purchased from his own funds but in the name of his wife, held, S. 32(7) was attracted; the phrase 'which relates to any such transaction' would refer to the sale deed and the word 'statement' to the assertion of his right to the property in his will; the statements in the will fall within the purview of S. 13(a); the assertion of the right in the will, being a relevant fact, is admissible in evidence though not conclusive; but its probative value will depend on other facts and circumstances; in the absence of other evidence to the contrary, it would corroborate the plaintiff's testimony even if the will's execution was not proved as required under S. 63(a) of the Indian Succession Act: A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 141: (1974) 2 M.L.J. 442: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 119 (S.N.) (D.B.).

Ss. 32(7), 13(a)—Statement in will executed by deceased that certain property was joint property of three brothers held admissible under S. 32(7) read with S. 13(a), the deceased executor being disinterested person being a common aunt of three brothers: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

The recital in a will that the property dealt thereunder is property of the testator is relevant evidence. [(1916) 36 I.C. 852, Dissent. from; I.L.R. (1928) 56 Cal. 275, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 486: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 325.

The recital in the will can be taken as a statement made in the course of transaction under S. 13 of the Act: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 325: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 486.

Statement by deceased person relating to purchase of shops by him in the name of someone else—Held, statement was admissible in evidence since it did contain assertion of right: (1967) 69 Punj.L.R. 119.

Land acquisition—Sales of other properties—Recitals in documents about price paid Evidence if relevant under S. 32: A.I.R. 1969 Ker. 265.

Sub-S. (7) of S. 32 makes relevant statements made in deeds, wills and such other documents which relate to transactions, by which a right or custom in question 'was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied' (to add the words of Cl. (a) of S. 13). The clause does not allow introduction of parole evidence. Such parole evidence may be relevant under Cl. (5) of S. 32. But Cl. (5) requires that such a statement should have been made before the question in dispute was raised. The statements which were definitely made after the question in dispute in the suit had already arisen are not relevant: 1966 All.L.J. 129: (1965) 1 S.C.W.R. 947: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1549.

Words 'any right' in S. 13(a) include right to maintenance from joint family property—Statement in a will inconsistent with such right is admissible under S. 32(7): (1968) 1 An. W.R. 429.

The term 'transaction' in the realm of law bears the sense of 'any act affecting legal rights' which is not confined to a dealing with property between two persons inter vivos but can, without any strain of language, be taken to include a testamentary dealing with the property: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 486: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 325.

The recital in a deed of gift to the effect that the executant and her husband have made a gift of certain properties to the daughters as stridhanam at the time of her marriage and that she was executing a formal conveyance in pursuance of the oral directions of her husband is admissible in proof of the earlier gift in a case covered by S. 32: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 267: 61 M.L.J. 887. See also 162 I.C. 999: A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 315; 1940 Mad.W.N. 983: (1939) 52 Mad.L.W. 440 (Statement as to age of testator written in will by scribe at the instance of persons present at the time—and not by testator—not relevant).

33. Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts therein stated.—Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding, or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, when the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable:

Where the validity of an adoption made by a person who had two aurasa sons affected with leprosy is in question, the statement contained in the registered deed of adoption setting out that fact as the ground for the adoption is admissible in evidence under this clause: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 576: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 264: 61 M.L.J. 19.

Where the adoption deed as well as the will of the deceased-lady contained statements that she had authority from her husband to adopt and also referred to factum of adoption, held, such statements were admissible under S. 13(a). As she was dead and her statements were contained in the aforesaid documents, the statements were admissible under S. 32(7): A.I.R. 1975 Ori. 24: I.L.R. (1974) Cut. 364 (D.B.).

Where the only evidence of wife's authority from her husband for executing the registered adoption deed was her own statement in the deed itself and she was dead and not available for cross-examination, held, though her statement in the deed was admissible, it was not sufficient to prove her authority: A.I.R. 1981 All. 274.

Where documents, even if relevant, are not sufficient to establish the necessary facts, held, their admissibility need not be gone into: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 815.

Statements made before the Sub-Registrar by the deceased attestators to a will are admissible under S. 32(7) taken with S. 158, but not under S. 33: 1933 Mad.W.N. 1148. As to statements before Registrar, see A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 7.

A statement of a deceased person contained in a deed of family settlement to the effect that after the death of his father a partition was effected amongst the brothers is a statement which is not admissible in evidence under S. 32(7) or under any other provision of the Act to prove separation. The statement is obviously in the interest of the person who made it, and he, if alive, could not have made use of such an admission in his favour, nor could his sons do so: 1936 O.W.N. 1203: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 133.

S. 48 read with S. 60 requires that the person who holds the opinion should be called as a witness. Statements made by deceased persons after the controversy had arisen and, therefore, inadmissible under S. 32 are not admissible under S. 48 or under S. 32(7). Statements cannot be called instance: I.L.R. 8 Luck. 445: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246.

Where the permanent character of a tenancy is in issue and the tenancy would be transferable only if it meant it will require and justify scrutiny in a transfer will be relevant under S. 13(a) as a transaction by which such permanent right was asserted. Statements supporting such permanent right made by dead persons in the documents evidencing these transactions would, therefore, be admissible under S. 32(7): I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 44: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 541.

1. Conditions of admissibility of evidence.—S. 33 must be very strictly construed: 31 I.C. 354: (1915) 17 Bom.L.R. 590.

Before recourse can be had to S. 33 of the Evidence Act on the ground that a witness is incapable of giving evidence, that fact must be proved and proved strictly. The conditions laid down by the statute must be strictly proved: 51 Mys.H.C.R. 266: 25 Mys.L.J. 69. See also 54 Mys.H.C.R. 237; 16 Cut.L.T. 141: A.I.R. 1950 Ori. 202.

Temporary inability of witness is no ground to bring his previous statement on record under S. 33—Conditions of S. 33 must be strictly established: 1953 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1953 All. 660.

When evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding is sought to be used under S. 33 in a subsequent judicial proceeding or at a later stage of the same judicial proceeding on the ground that the presence of the witness could not be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which under the circumstances of the case the Court considers to be unreasonable, that fact must be proved strictly: (1949) 51 Punj.L.R. 74: A.I.R. 1949 East Punj. 228.

S. 33 is an exception to the general rule and has, therefore, to be construed strictly and applied sparingly: 1975 Kash.L.J. 391.

S. 33 engrafts an extraordinary exception to the normal rule of examining witnesses embodied in S. 138; the Court must be greatly cautious when S. 33 is invoked; it must insist on direct proof of all the requisite conditions for admitting secondary evidence under the section: 1979 Sikkim L.J. 1: 1979 Cr.L.J. 610.

S. 33 contemplates (i) a subsequent judicial proceeding in which that person has to be examined as a witness or (ii) a subsequent stage at which that person has to be examined as a witness in the same judicial proceeding, as the case may be: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.). See also 1988 C.Cr.L.R. 1 (Cal.).

Applicability—Conditions precedent to. See 1972 Ker.L.T. 728: 1972 M.L.J. (Cr.) 680; (1980) 82 Punj.L.R. 427.

S. 33 deals with statement of persons who cannot be called as witnesses; it does not restrict or override the provisions as to admissibility of admissions. [(1968) 70 Punj.L.R. (Del.) 71, Reversed]: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 409: (1977) 1 S.C.C. 60: (1977) 1 S.C.R. 967.

One of the essential requirements for attracting S. 33 is that "the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable"; such allegations, like any other fact, have to be proved according to law by the party invoking the section; merely because the accused had not challenged the report of the witness's death does not absolve the prosecution from its duty to prove the death; in criminal trials, the accused cannot waive the proof of death: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.). See also (1980) 2 M.P.W.N. 117.

The evidence given in an earlier proceeding is admissible in subsequent proceeding between the same parties, when they agree to that course, irrespective of the fact that whether or not conditions prescribed by S. 33 were satisfied: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 980.

It is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that the presence of the witness cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which it considers unreasonable before the statement of the witness in a previous judicial proceeding can be admitted. The mere statement of the Public Prosecutor to that effect is not sufficient. There must be independent evidence. Prima facie the consent of the accused or his Counsel is presumptive evidence of the absence of prejudice: 28 M.L.J. 329; I.L.R. 39 Mad. 449. See also A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 756; A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 1041; A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 542 (the consent of the accused's Counsel is immaterial).

A verbal application made by the Public Prosecutor for admission of evidence of a particular witness under S. 33, is not by itself a sufficient ground for admitting that evidence. It is necessary that under S. 33, the Judge must be satisfied that the evidence is admissible on the materials before him, namely, on the ground that the witness whose deposition is attempted to be put in was not or could not be found or was incapable of giving evidence: 10 J.&K. L.R. 1: A.I.R. 1954 J.&K. 19.

S. 33 does not enjoin upon the Court that the statement of a witness examined in the previous proceeding must be believed. This section only deals with relevancy. In other words, it only makes the statement of such a witness admissible in evidence. It would always be open to the person against whom the statement is produced to show that it should not be believed for reasons given by him: 1955 Raj.L.W. 434: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 179.

Under S. 165 of the Evidence Act a judgment must be based upon facts declared by the Evidence Act to be relevant and to be duly proved. S. 60 provides that oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct. If under the Evidence Act, two alternative modes of giving evidence are permitted and if before the second mode can be utilised, certain conditions must be fulfilled, it is open to the parties to admit that those conditions are fulfilled in which case the second manner of leading evidence is permitted under the Evidence Act. But the parties cannot admit by consent irrelevant evidence as relevant. (S. 5 of the Evidence Act). When the deposition given in a former judicial proceeding by one of the parties himself or that of a witness who is living is sought to be admitted, it is impossible to hold that the conditions stated in S. 33 are fulfilled. Therefore, the Purshis of the parties in such circumstances cannot be treated as an admission of the conditions requisite under S. 33 because on the record itself these conditions are not fulfilled: (1962) 3 Guj.L.R. 418: A.I.R. 1962 Guj. 68.

The provisions of this section are not in any way affected by S. 350 of the Cr.P.Code: I.L.R. 8 Lah. 570: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 332.

Where evidence of a deceased witness had already been recorded under S. 231 of the Code of Criminal Procedure read with S. 137 of the Evidence Act during the Sessions trial and there was no subsequent stage for giving his evidence, held, there could be no occasion to resort to S. 33 for giving relevancy to the evidence already recorded: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.).

Before admitting evidence of witnesses in earlier trial the Court should record its finding of satisfaction that the circumstances of the case did indicate good and lawful grounds and justify its admissibility: 1972 B.L.J.R. 397 (D.B.).

The law is very clear about the deposition of a living witness in a previous litigation; it is not admissible under S. 33; particularly when the witness is not merely alive but is also a party to the subsequent litigation: (1990) 1 Bom.C.R. 677.

The deposition of a witness in a previous suit would not be admissible when he was not called as a witness in the subsequent suit and it was not shown that the person was either dead or otherwise not available: (1972) 1 Mys.L.J. 473 (D.B.).

The statement of a person in a previous suit in respect of a particular property may be used as his admission in a subsequent suit in respect of the same property; he may be confronted with the same: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

A statement of a witness cannot be admitted in evidence under S. 33 if it has not been proved that he could not be found, or that his presence could not be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances was unreasonable. Where, all that is proved is that he has gone away to 'Disawar', that alone is not enough to prove that the witness could not be found: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 45: I.L.R. (1955) Raj. 191. See also A.I.R. 1951 Him. Pra. 1: 52 Cr.L.J. 50.

It is well settled that in order that a statement of a witness may be received in evidence under S. 33 of the Evidence Act there must be proof that the witness was either dead or could not be found or incapable of giving evidence, or was being kept back by the other side or lastly that his presence cannot be obtained without an unreasonable delay or expense. Where no summons is taken out to a witness whose place of residence is known, it is not a case where his statement can be brought on record under S. 33, Evidence Act: 1951 All.L.J. 677.

Before the evidence of a person who cannot be found can be admitted under S. 33, there must be a finding by the Court that reasonable exertion had been made to find him. The mere report of the process-server that the witness cannot be traced is insufficient for enabling the Court to base its finding upon such evidence: 1939 M.L.R. 12 (Cr.). See also A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 262: 1954 Cr.L.J. 6.

Before evidence of a witness recorded in a judicial proceeding can be admitted in a subsequent judicial proceeding under S. 33, the Judge must be satisfied by proper materials that the attendance of such witnesses cannot be obtained within reasonable time. The fact that the summons is not served upon a witness particularly when his whereabouts are known is no ground for holding that he is incapable of attending the Court or his attendance cannot be procured. An oral application from the Public Prosecutor for admission of evidence of the witness is not by itself a sufficient ground for admitting that evidence. In civil cases the other side may waive proof of the circumstances under which such evidence may be admitted under S. 33. But in criminal cases the fact that no objection was taken to the reception of such evidence cannot dispense with the necessity of seeing that the requirements of that section are fulfilled. In criminal cases the conditions laid down by S. 33 must be proved by legal evidence before evidence recorded in another judicial proceedings is admitted: 7 Sau.L.R. 45: A.I.R. 1954 Sau. 159.

Service of summons on witness—Witness not found at address—His evidence cannot be brought on record under S. 33 without first making a diligent search for him: 1953 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1953 All. 660.

Summons returned unserved with report that on account of floods, village where witness used to reside could not be approached—Finding cannot be recorded that witness was not found, merely because summons could not be served: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 301.

When a witness is incapable of giving evidence, as it was reported that he was too ill to appear in the Court, and when it was also shown that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine, the evidence given in the first proceeding can be accepted and read as evidence in the subsequent proceeding. [A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 165, Foll.; A.I.R. 1964 Lah. 75, Disting.]: 1972 Ker.L.J. 131: 1973 Ker.L.T. 28.

Where evidence of a witness already recorded is sought to be used by the prosecution under S. 33, alleging that the witness is seriously ill and incapable of giving evidence, the prosecution must prove these allegations. No admission by defence Counsel can relieve the prosecution of the duty of satisfying the Court by proper evidence that the witness is seriously ill. The law makes no provision for an admission by Counsel in a criminal case: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 435: 86 Cal.L.J. 21.

A heavy responsibility is cast upon the Courts of law to satisfy themselves that there exist circumstances which make the previous deposition admissible under the section. The satisfaction of the Court is to be in the form of a proof. In other words, therefore, before a deposition can be admitted under S. 33, all the reasonable steps should be taken to secure the attendance of the witness. If the Court is informed by the Police or through any other agency that a witness has shifted to a particular station an attempt should be made to serve that witness at that station. The whereabouts of a person can be said to be unknown when he cannot be found at all the places which he had, or was informed to have, visited either permanently or for a temporary stay: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1290: A.I.R. 1956 Bhopal 52.

A mere statement of a Police Officer that a witness is a man of another district and cannot be found is not a sufficient ground for the reception of evidence under S. 33: I.L.R. 41 Cal. 601: 26 I.C. 161.

Incapable of giving evidence—Court cannot on its own judgment discharge witness as being incapable of giving evidence—Court fortifying itself by inviting Doctor's opinion in form of report and discharging witness—Held that witness was proved to be incapable of giving evidence: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 910: A.I.R. 1953 Raj. 66.

Where the interests are identical and the object of litigation is to advance a common claim, evidence given in former judicial proceedings can be received in evidence under this section in a subsequent proceeding even against persons not parties to the previous litigation: 28 M.L.J. 669: 24 I.C. 519. Suit to enforce registration of will—Judgment based on evidence adduced before the registering officer and treated as evidence in the suit by the consent of parties—Judgment sustainable: I.L.R. 43 Mad. 609 (F.B.), Overruling I.L.R. 41 Mad. 731: 34 M.L.J. 526. See also 35 M.L.J. 657: I.L.R. 42 Mad. 103.

Where in an earlier proceedings the will was proved by the attesting witness as well as the scribe who were dead and other conditions of S. 33 were satisfied and as declared by the Full Bench in a reference, a decision in the earlier suit under O. 22, R. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure can never be res judicata, held, their evidence recorded in the earlier proceedings is admissible in the subsequent proceedings between the two parties: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 130: I.L.R. (1981) 1 P.&H. 259 (F.B.).

Admission under suspicious circumstances at the end of the trial of a case—Written statement not formally amended—Such admission has weak evidentiary value—Title cannot pass by mere admission: 1966 S.C.D. 485: (1966) 1 S.C.A. 35: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 605.

Admission made by witness in other litigation is admissible against him alone and not against other defendants: (1966) 1 S.C.A. 35: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 605: 1966 S.C.D. 485.

Plaintiff's documents, which are on the record, can be relied upon by the other side and by consent of both sides this evidence can be let in civil cases, though they might not be strictly admissible in evidence: 21 Cut.L.T. 423: A.I.R. 1955 Ori. 129.

Where the plaintiff's affidavits filed in an earlier suit in the High Court made certain admissions in regard to the ownership of a property as vesting in his brother's wife but in the subsequent suit he averred that she was a mere benamidar, held, the affidavits filed in the High Court were admissible in the subsequent suit under S. 33: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 342: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 279: (1981-82) 86 Cal.W.N. 516 (D.B.).

There is nothing in the Evidence Act to show that in a civil case the parties cannot waive the benefits conferred by S. 33 by consent. In a civil case the parties always have the right to settle the matter by agreement just as they please and there being nothing illegal or against public policy in such a course there seems to be no reason why they cannot be permitted to adopt such a course. S. 33 exists for the protection of the parties but if they do not want to avail of that protection then in a civil matter they are certainly entitled to have the matter decided in the manner they agree. Even a guardian ad litem of the minor can waive the benefit of S. 33 and to assume that a guardian ad litem has no discretion to give up his witness or to admit a thing in a case would create a position which it is impossible to accept: A.I.R. 1957 Tripura 1.

Departmental enquiry—Procedure—Enquiring authority delegating its power to record evidence—Validity: I.L.R. (1963) Raj. 840: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 203.

Neither the findings nor the evidence in ejectment proceedings in Revenue Court are admissible in a civil suit to recover possession by a person ejected in consequence of the proceedings in the Revenue Court: 106 I.C. 313: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 43.

Suit for recovery of rent—Plaintiff filing certified copy of a written reply filed by defendant in previous proceedings before Rent Control and Eviction Officer—Held, the document was admissible as the former proceedings before the Rent Control and Eviction Officer were between the same parties—No objection also taken against admissibility of documents in the ground of appeal in High Court—Held, it could not be allowed to be raised at that stage: 1966 All.W.R.(H.C.) 196: 1966 All.L.J. 285.

Where entries made by a medical witness in a Register were allowed to be proved and admitted in evidence by the Sessions Judge, the reasons given for the absence of the witness being that he had gone to Delhi, but it was not made out that the witness could not come to Bangalore at the place of the trial for giving evidence or that his presence could not have been obtained without any amount of delay or expense, which under the circumstances, would have been unreasonable, held, that admission of the evidence relating to entries made by a medical witness was not at all justifiable as the fact of incapacity of the witness to give evidence was not strictly proved: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 288 (Mys.).

Where the evidence of the Deputy Secretary was taken by the High Court itself by way of taking additional evidence which the Court in its Criminal Revisional Jurisdiction, had power to take, by virtue of S. 439, read with S. 428, Cr.P.Code, held, that the evidence of the Deputy Secretary was admissible in the criminal case. S. 33, Evidence Act had no relevance as the evidence was taken in the same proceedings: 27 Cut.L.T. 489: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 617: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 197.

In the absence of proof of the circumstances mentioned in the section, the importing in bulk in a civil suit of depositions of witnesses recorded in a criminal trial is a serious irregularity: I.L.R. 39 Bom. 441: 29 M.L.J. 34: 42 I.A. 135 (P.C.). See also 106 P.R. 1915: 32 I.C. 18.

Evidence otherwise inadmissible cannot be made admissible by consent of parties: A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 528: (1942) 1 M.L.J. 485.

Consent of parties to treat evidence in another case as evidence in the case—Legality. See 1914 Mad.W.N. 931; A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 1107: 104 I.C. 518. See also (1912-13) 17 Cal.W.N. 230: 18 I.C. 406.

The fact that the Counsel for accused gave his consent does not make any difference: I.L.R. 10 Lah. 837: A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 542.

It is beyond dispute that under S. 33 of the Evidence Act a previous deposition of a witness cannot be admitted and marked unless the conditions for its admission are strictly made out. To admit such a deposition when the essential conditions are not made out on the ground that the Counsel for the accused waived his objection to it is highly irregular. There can be no waiver on the part of the accused in a criminal case as regards any statutory requirements. Though, no doubt, in a civil proceeding strict proof of the conditions may be waived, in a criminal case there is no room for proof by waiver: 16 Cut.L.T. 227: 52 Cr.L.J. 685: A.I.R. 1951 Ori. 245.

Consent of the Advocate appearing for the accused does not do away with the proof of the fact of the inability of the witness: A.I.R. 1954 Punj. 286: 56 Cr.L.J. 86.

A and B were jointly tried. The depositions of witnesses in previous criminal proceedings between B and the complainant are not admissible even with the consent of the accused's Counsel: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 284.

Admission of accused—Effect of: 1966 Cr.L.J. 472: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 614.

Modification of charge—Accused expressing intention under S. 231, Cr.P.Code to recross-examine prosecution witnesses—Main prosecution witness who had been examined and also cross-examined in detail before original charge was framed not produced for recross-examination on the ground that he could not be procured without unreasonable delay—Magistrate convicting accused—Sessions Judge, in appeal, directing Magistrate to call the witness for cross-examination, or, if he could not be found without delay to certify it—Magistrate failing to secure presence of witness, recording such evidence and certifying it—Held that, in the situation, the Sessions Judge was right in taking into consideration the previous evidence of the witness, under S. 33, Evidence Act: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 142.

Applicability—Criminal trial—Witness examined at inquiry dying before Sessions trial—Deposition of—Admissibility at Sessions trial—Proof of death of deponent: (1970) 2 S.C.J. 223: 1970 M.L.J. (Cr.) 521.

Evidence taken in trial for dacoity is not admissible in a trial under the Arms Act: 36 I.C. 480: 10 Bur.L.T. 121. As to statement made before enquiring Magistrate, see A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 58. See also (1933) 35 Punj.L.R. 75: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 212; A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 766; I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 76; (1946) 1 M.L.J. 125 (P.C.).

R. 142 of the Army Rules, 1954 lays down that proceedings of the Court of Inquiry or confessions, statements or answers to questions in those proceedings are not admissible to a person subject to the Army Act; no evidence regarding those proceedings can be given against such person except on his trial for wilfully giving evidence before the Court of Inquiry; such documents or evidence is, thus, not admissible under S. 33: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 639 (P.&H.).

Suit on ordinary original side of Calcutta High Court—Trial remaining incomplete by death of Judge—Both parties inviting Judge to use evidence already recorded—Evidence is admissible: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877.

Evidence recorded for the purpose of proceedings under the Fugitive Offenders Act is admissible under Ss. 32 and 33 in proceedings under Penal Code against the same accused: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 161.

2. "Judicial proceedings".—S. 33 deals with the statement of a witness made in a judicial proceeding. Held, that the investigation made by the Junior Inspector of Mines was not a judicial proceeding as the other party at that time had no right or opportunity to cross-examine him: 1956 B.L.J.R. 288: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 299.

Settlement proceedings before a Settlement Deputy Collector are not judicial proceedings and so statements made therein as to the existence of a custom are not admissible in a subsequent civil suit between the parties: I.L.R. 57 All. 588: A.I.R. 1935 All. 187.

The compromise filed cannot be held to be a part of judicial proceedings under S. 33. Thus, the compromise alleged to have been filed in the civil suit does not amount to an admission: 1972 R.D. 190.

S. 33 applies not only to evidence recorded in a previous judicial proceeding but also given before any authority empowered to record evidence; that is the effect of the use of the word 'or' in the very first clause of the section. Thus, a statement recorded by the Registrar under S. 75(4) of the Indian Registration Act is, other conditions under S. 33 being fulfilled, admissible in subsequent proceedings between the same parties as the Registrar is empowered to summon and record evidence of a witness while holding the enquiry: A.I.R. 1983 Andh. Pra. 257: (1982) 2 An.W.R. 212: (1982) 2 A.P.L.J. 25.

3. "Expense".—The 'expense' contemplated by S. 33 is the expense of obtaining the presence of the witness and not the expense that will be incurred for and during the actual examination of the witness in the box: (1948-49) 53 Cal.W.N. 569. The statement of a witness as recorded before the Committing Magistrate cannot be transferred to the Sessions file under S. 33 merely because it would be expensive to retain the assessors until that witness is served with a summons: (1943) 45 Punj.L.R. 151: A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 118.

4. Evidence taken in proceeding coram non-judice.—Evidence recorded by Magistrate not authorised—Use of—Permissibility. See A.I.R. 1950 Lah. 34. Evidence taken before Magistrate without jurisdiction is inadmissible in a subsequent trial before competent Magistrate: I.L.R. 7 Lah. 396: A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 582.

For attracting S. 33, the previous deposition must be a judicial proceeding; proceedings without jurisdiction are not judicial proceedings and the evidence of witness given in such a proceeding could not be used under S. 33 on a retrial before a competent Court. [A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 575; A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 339; I.L.R. 7 Lah. 396, Rel. on]: 1976 Ker.L.T. 893.

The proceeding before a Magistrate who holds that he has no jurisdiction to try the offence with which the accused is charged, becomes coram non-judice from the very outset, or, in other words all evidence recorded by him becomes void ab initio for the purposes of S. 33, and therefore, cannot be used under that section on a re-trial before a competent Court: A.I.R. 1949 Him. Pra. 15.

No proceeding is a 'judicial proceeding' within the meaning of the section if it is conducted by a Court which has no jurisdiction to undertake it: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 561: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 575: 61 M.L.J. 120.

If a Court has no jurisdiction to try a suit then obviously it has no jurisdiction to record statement of witnesses and if any such statement has been recorded it could not be said to be a part of judicial proceeding within the meaning of S. 33 of the Evidence Act. Therefore, the statement of the defendant's mother recorded before the Revenue Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, would not be admissible in evidence. Even assuming that at the particular time when the statement was recorded the Court had jurisdiction but the Court was subsequently deprived of the jurisdiction which it had and had to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the statement lost its value as a statement made before a competent Court and could not be said to have been made in a proper judicial proceeding within the meaning of S. 33: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 772: 1966 All.L.J. 318.

Where the Munsiff, after the examination of a witness, returned the plaint as subject-matter was above his pecuniary jurisdiction, the evidence of the witness so examined is not admissible in evidence in the subsequent trial before the Sub-Judge even though the witness died in the interval and so could not be examined afresh: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 561: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 575: 61 M.L.J. 120. Evidence given in judicial proceeding which had taken place without jurisdiction cannot be admitted in evidence under S. 33 of the Evidence Act. A proceeding before a Court which has no jurisdiction to entertain it is not a 'judicial proceeding' within the meaning of that section. Where the entire trial had been declared by the High Court, to have been without jurisdiction, it cannot be said that the Magistrate who took deposition in such a trial was a Magistrate who was authorised by law to take deposition. [I.L.R. 3 Mad. 48; A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 582 and A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 575, Foll.]: (1951-52) 56 Cal.W.N. 835: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 339.

Where there is no lack of inherent jurisdiction in the Court and the Court records the evidence of witnesses for the purposes of deciding whether it has or has no local jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and on deciding that it has no territorial jurisdiction returns the plaint for presentation to proper Court, the evidence so recorded is admissible in the proceedings of the latter Court if the witnesses become incapable of giving evidence. The proceedings in the latter Court must be regarded as a later stage of the same judicial proceedings within the meaning of S. 33: I.L.R. (1961) 1 Punj. 508.

5. Evidence before Committal Court.— When the statements of witnesses before the Committing Magistrate are admitted and brought on record before the Sessions Judge, the depositions should be transferred from the file of the Committing Court to that of the Sessions Judge and the depositions should be given an exhibit mark and placed amongst the documents proved and duly exhibited: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1290: A.I.R. 1956 Bhopal 52.

Per May Oung, J.—The power given by S. 33 required to be exercised with great care and the Court must insist on strict proof, before holding that the requisite conditions have been satisfied. The Court must also in the judgment or preferably in a separate order, record the reasons for doing so: I.L.R. 1 Rang. 512: A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 209; A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 756. See also A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 254; I.L.R. 10 Lah. 837: A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 542. The requirements of S. 33, must be carefully proved before the statement of a witness before the Committing Magistrate can be transferred to the sessions recorded under the section: (1944) 46 Punj.L.R. 69: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 206. See also (1944) 46 Punj.L.R. 135: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 377.

Before any evidence of a witness is admitted under S. 33, Evidence Act, the Court must give its decision on evidence legally taken and recorded that the witness cannot be traced. Where the statement of a witness before the Committal Court is, therefore, sought to be relied upon at the trial in the Sessions Court, mere statement of the prosecution that the witness cannot be traced is not enough, it must adduce evidence to show that attempts were made to trace the person out. The evidence, reasons and the conditions under which the evidence is admitted under S. 33 of the Evidence Act, must be on record. Admission of evidence under S. 33, without any such evidence is illegal: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 54.

As the power under S. 33 is an extraordinary one, it is essential that a Judge exercising the same should record his reasons for its exercise either in the judgment or in a separate order. In a murder case the prior deposition of a witness given before the Committing Magistrate was admitted by the Sessions Judge under S. 33 upon the statement made by Circle Inspector of Police who said that the witness was a military man and although a telegram was sent to the Commanding Officer of his unit, the same was replied to the effect that the witness could not be spared due to the exigencies of service. The accused had no Counsel before the Committing Magistrate, nor was the witness cross-examined when he gave the said deposition. The Sessions Judge had not adverted to the section particularly, and given his reasons to admit the previous statement in evidence. The deposition, however, was not the principal evidence and there was ample evidence to prove the guilt of the accused, held, that though the so-called reasons given by the Sessions Judge were not enough to satisfy the requirements of S. 33, conviction under S. 302, Penal Code, was to be affirmed as the other evidence was sufficient: I.L.R. (1962) 1 Ker. 486: 1962 Ker.L.T. 873: A.I.R. 1962 Ker. 320.

In criminal cases, particularly where a man is being tried for his life and the evidence sought to be accepted is of signal importance, the Court must insist on strict proof before holding that the conditions required by S. 33, Evidence Act for admitting former deposition have been satisfied. It is an elementary right of an accused person that a witness who is to testify against him should give evidence before the Court trying him and, thus, afford an opportunity to the Court to see the witness and observe his demeanour and form a better opinion as to his reliability than is possible from reading his statement. It is only in exceptional circumstances, which should be strictly proved to exist that a previous deposition of a witness should be transferred in a serious case like murder. The prosecution should not easily be allowed to escape detailed cross-examination of its witnesses at the trial by taking up the plea of their non-availability and, thus, deprive the accused of the valuable right of being tried on viva voce testimony: I.L.R. (1953) Patiala 435: A.I.R. 1954 Pepsu 69.

Important witnesses in serious cases of murder or attempt to murder should be examined before the Sessions Judge so that he may be able to form his own opinion about their veracity by observing their behaviour in the witness-box. Courts should be loth to admit evidence under S. 33 by observing only formalities of law and the importance of examining witnesses before the Sessions Judge should, under no circumstances, be underrated. It is, however, difficult to lay down a hard and inflexible rule which should govern all cases in all matters. It is primarily for the Sessions Judge to satisfy himself that there are good and lawful grounds for admitting the evidence of witnesses examined earlier, under S. 33. Mere expense should not ordinarily be taken as a ground for refusing to summon a witness in a Sessions case. Consent of the accused to the admission of the evidence under S. 33 has practically no meaning. Consent given by an accused would not relieve the Court of the duty of examining the circumstances and coming to a decision as to whether or not the evidence was legally admissible. Consent can, however, lead to some inference on a point of fact, such as that a certain witness is seriously ill, or that the whereabouts of some witnesses are not known. (Statements held admitted on good grounds): 1954 Cr.L.J. 68: A.I.R. 1954 All. 59.

Where the Sessions Judge allowed the evidence of absent witnesses, already given in the Committing Magistrate's Court, to be tendered under S. 33 merely by acting on the Public Prosecutor's request without complying with the requisite formality and without satisfying himself that the presence of those witnesses could not be procured without an unreasonable delay or expense:

Held, that the evidence was improperly admitted, as merely acting on the statement of the Public Prosecutor was not sufficient. Under the Evidence Act the Judge has to satisfy himself that the presence of the witness cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which he considers to be unreasonable. There must be independent evidence before him before he can exercise the powers given to him under the Evidence Act. Further, the Appellate Court may not be prepared to act upon representations which have satisfied the Trial Judge. It is, therefore, incumbent on the lower Court to have on record some legal evidence on which he could act. S. 33 sanctions admission of the evidence of an absent witness only on certain specified grounds. It is well established that before such evidence is let in, the Court must arrive at a finding, on evidence formally and regularly taken and recorded, that one or the other of the grounds specified in the section exists: 1964 B.L.J.R. 850.

S. 33 sanctions the admission of the evidence of an absent witness only on certain specified grounds. It is well established that before such evidence is let in, the Court must arrive at a finding, on evidence formally and regularly taken and recorded, that one or other of the grounds specified in the section exists. Accordingly, the admission in evidence of the deposition of a witness before a Committing Magistrate without such a finding is illegal, when such witness is not called to give evidence at the trial before the Sessions Judge: I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 76: A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 137.

A Court making use of the provisions of S. 33 must place on record its satisfaction with the conditions laid down in that section which justify the admission of evidence taken before the Committing Magistrate. A bare statement that the witnesses whose evidence was put in under the section are Police Officers who have opted for India and their whereabouts are not known, cannot be regarded as sufficient: 1 D.R. 98.

The transfer of the statement of a witness as recorded by the Committing Magistrate to the Sessions record under S. 33 without examining him, is improper when summons was not issued for his attendance in good time as it is impossible in such circumstances to say that the witness could not be found or his presence could not be obtained without delay or expense: (1943) 45 Punj.L.R. 82: A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 89.

Where it is desired to have recourse to S. 33 on the ground that a witness is incapable of giving evidence that fact must be proved, and proved strictly. It cannot be laid down that in every case there must be evidence of a medical man, where excuse is sought on the ground of physical incapacity. There may be many cases in which the facts are such that the incapacity can be proved by a lay witness. But the evidence of a Police Officer who served the witness with a summons thirteen days before the trial, that he found that the witness was ill is not sufficient to prove that the witness was incapable of giving evidence on the day of the trial as the officer was not a proper person to prove from what disease the witness was suffering. Great care must be exercised before admitting a statement made before the Committing Magistrate at the Sessions trial. In very many of these cases, the accused is not represented at that stage; so, while he has the opportunity to cross-examine, it is not often that this would be effectively done: 72 I.A. 270: A.I.R. 1946 P.C. 1: (1946) 1 M.L.J. 125 (P.C.).

Before the deposition of a witness in the Committing Magistrate's Court is treated as evidence at the trial, the reason for such a course being adopted should be strictly proved, and unless the Court is satisfied about it, it should not be allowed. In the absence of proper explanation for not securing the attendance of the witness at the trial it would not be proper to treat his deposition in the Committing Magistrate's Court as evidence at the trial: 54 Mys.H.C.R. 237.

The principal evidence against the accused in a Sessions trial on a charge of murder was the deposition of a witness in the Court of the Committing Magistrate. The deposition was admitted as direct evidence at the Sessions trial under S. 33 on the ground that the witness could not be served as he had joined the army and his address was not known. There was no evidence as to what steps had been taken by the prosecution to discover his address. Subsequently his address was also ascertained. Held, that in the circumstances of the case the Sessions Judge was not justified in applying S. 33 and that any delay or expense which might be involved in the case could not be said to be unreasonable having regard to the public interests involved in examining in the box and in the presence of the trial Judge and the assessors, the principal witness in so serious a charge as murder: I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 651: A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 319: (1944) 1 M.L.J. 137.

When evidence given by a witness in the Court of the Committing Magistrate is sought to be transferred under S. 33, Evidence Act to the Sessions record on the ground that the witness is incapable of giving the evidence that fact must be strictly proved. This proof must be all the more stringent where the witness was not cross-examined in the Committing Magistrate's Court by reason of the accused not having been represented by Counsel. The fact that the Counsel for the accused consented to the evidence of the witness being read under S. 33 of the Evidence Act in the Sessions Court, does not do away with the necessity of the Court being satisfied by proof that the witness was incapable of giving evidence: 5 D.R. 1 (F.B.).

Where in view of the fact that sole eye-witness could not be produced in the trial Court as his whereabouts were not known, his statement made in the Committal Court was brought on the record and he was convicted under S. 302, Indian Penal Code, held, when later on that witness had been traced and was available for recording her evidence, the proper course was to order re-trial: 1978 Cr.L.R. 521 (Mah.).

If the Public Prosecutor gives up a witness examined before the Committing Magistrate but the statement of that witness is transferred to the Sessions record at the request of the defence Counsel, that statement should be brought on the record not as that of a prosecution witness but as that of a defence witness or Court witness: (1944) 46 Punj.L.R. 69: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 206.

The statement of a Doctor made before the Committing Magistrate was brought on record before the Sessions Judge under S. 33. At the trial the prosecution produced a Food Constable who deposed that he took the summons for this witness to the hospital where he was previously employed and the Superintendent of the hospital made a report that he was no longer in service and it was not known where he was. This witness also stated that 'from the inquiries made by me. I learnt that his whereabouts are not known'. In cross-examination he again stated that he made enquiries but he could not discover the whereabouts of this witness. After this statement, the Public Prosecutor made a statement that the Doctor's whereabouts were not known and prayed that his statement be transferred under S. 33 of the Evidence Act on the ground that there was no likelihood of the witness being available without unreasonable delay and expense and no objection was shown to have been taken by the defence at that stage. Thereupon the Trial Judge ordered the statement to be transferred under S. 33 of the Evidence Act. Held, that though the Judge might have been well advised to give fuller reasons for making the order transferring the statement, it was clear that he transferred it on the ground of unreasonable delay and expense and that there was no infirmity in this order of transfer: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 904: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 38 (S.C.).

When the law empowers a Magistrate to convert a trial into an enquiry on his realisation that the case is triable exclusively by the Court of Sessions without rendering the proceeding in the trial illegal, that trial will not become illegal when the Sessions Judge on appeal came to an identical conclusion that the case was exclusively triable by it and should be committed. It is, therefore, clear that the deposition of the dead witness can be brought on record under S. 33 of the Evidence Act: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1223 (All.).

Where the evidence of a witness because of his death could not be recorded in the Sessions Court, his evidence recorded in the Committing Court, held, could be used as evidence in the Sessions Court not under S. 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as the High Court erroneously considered but under S. 33: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1797: (1973) 2 S.C.C. 458: 1974 Cr.L.J. 1265.

Witness available before Magistrate—Whereabouts not known at the Sessions trial—Evidence tendered before Magistrate can be taken into account: (1928-29) 33 Cal.W.N. 918: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 765; (1930-31) 35 Cal.W.N. 143: A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 473 (witness absconding). See also (1943) 45 Punj.L.R. 82: A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 89.

Where in a Sessions trial under Ss. 366 and 367, Penal Code the only ground for admitting evidence under S. 33, Evidence Act was that the girls and their mother were not traceable and the Court while allowing the application advanced new grounds of unreasonable delay and expense in producing those witnesses, held, that the order admitting the evidence was not justified: 1959 Cr.L.J. 84: A.I.R. 1959 Raj. 21.

Applicability—Witness examined under S. 202, Cr.P.Code by Committing Magistrate—Cross-examination of such witness by accused not being possible at that stage of proceedings, his evidence should not be admitted under S. 33 by trial Judge: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1203: A.I.R. 1969 All. 489.

Applicability—Witness dying before Sessions trial began—Held, his evidence in Committing Court was admissible under S. 33: 35 Cut.L.T. 152: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1322.

Under S. 33 it is discretionary with the Sessions Judge to admit the statement of a witness who had been examined before the Committing Magistrate under S. 252, Cr.P.Code and the High Court cannot, and will not, interfere with the exercise of the discretion by him unless it was exercised arbitrarily or against the well established principles of law: 1956 Cr.L.J. 841: A.I.R. 1956 All. 385.

The depositions before the Magistrate of witnesses who are nomads and who could not be traced can on that ground be taken into evidence under S. 33 at the trial in the Sessions Court: A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 29 . A witness's evidence which has been recorded in committal proceedings cannot be admitted at the Sessions trial under S. 33 if the same witness has been partly examined in the Court of Sessions. Such evidence can be admitted only under the provisions of S. 288, Cr.P.Code: A.I.R. 1950 Assam 75.

Where a prosecution witness examined before the Committing Magistrate was not cross-examined by the accused's Counsel who preferred to cross-examine the witness at the Sessions trial and the witness, despite all reasonable steps including in the High Court to serve him during the hearing of appeal, could not be found, held, his statement before the Committing Magistrate had become admissible under S. 33 for being read as evidence in the Sessions Court: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1723: 1974 Cr.L.J. 1171.

Reservation by Committing Magistrate of cross-examination of witness suo motu—Evidence cannot be admitted in Sessions Court: A.I.R. 1930 Sind 54: 120 I.C. 534.

Where a witness examined in the Committing Court cannot be traced and in spite of the best efforts of the Police he could not be served with the summons to appear in the Sessions Court, that Court would be justified in admitting into evidence his previous statement under S. 33 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 25; 1981 B.L.J.R. 50: 1981 B.L.J. (Rep.) 279 (D.B.).

The deposition recorded by the Committing Magistrate of a prosecution witness, stated to have died prior to the trial in the Sessions Court, but whose death is not proved, is not admissible in evidence under S. 33: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 385: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 583.

Witness examined and cross-examined in Committing Court, suffering from paralysis at the time of Sessions trial—Sessions Judge is justified in admitting his evidence under S. 33—S. 33 applies to the case as the witness is unable to give evidence: 30 Cut.L.T. 43.

6. Evidence during ex parte proceedings.—Where an ex parte decree was set aside, the proceedings taken including evidence recorded during the period the defendant remained ex parte, held, become non est; by reason and justice, they do not bind the defendant unless some law specifically permit it; as the testimony recorded during ex parte proceedings did not satisfy the requirements of S. 33, they remain inadmissible and cannot be read in evidence. [A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 633, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1974 Andh. Pra. 1: I.L.R. (1972) Andh. Pra. 421 (F.B.).

When the witnesses previously examined at the time of passing an ex parte decree for the first time have not again appeared before the Court and their evidence recorded, the Court cannot rely on their evidence recorded originally and pass an ex parte decree for the second time. [I.L.R. (1972) Andh. Pra. 421 (F.B.), Applied; 1974 A.P.L.J. (S.N.) 2, Rel. on]: (1975) 1 A.P.L.J. 200.

O. 9, R. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure empowers the Court to set aside an ex parte decree on the necessary conditions being satisfied; the power of the Court is to set aside the ex parte decree which does not mean striking off from record the evidence already recorded; the legal effect of setting aside the decree is to relegate the defendant to the original position when the suit was heard ex parte, that is to do what he could have done if he was then present; the manifest object is to ensure that the defendant does not suffer any prejudice; that object can be achieved by affording him an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses examined-in-chief ex parte; similarly, if an inadmissible document was exhibited ex parte, the defendant may get it de-exhibited; there is no warrant for the view that on ex parte decree being set aside the ex parte evidence becomes non est or non-existing in the eye of law. [A.I.R. 1974 Andh. Pra. 1 (F.B.) and A.I.R. 1962 All. 381, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1980 Guj. 51: (1980) 21 Guj.L.R. 141 (F.B.).

Where the defendants were proceeded against ex parte and after the order proceeding ex parte was set-aside, they again defaulted and had to be proceeded against ex parte, held, defendants could not be allowed to agitate subsequently that Judge while passing the preliminary decree relied on evidence of plaintiff recorded in the absence of defendant. [A.I.R. 1980 Guj. 51, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1995 Del. 22.

S. 33 stipulates in the proviso that (1) the earlier proceedings should have been between the same parties or their predecessors-in-interest; (2) the other party in the earlier proceedings had the right and opportunity to cross-examine the other witness; and (3) the question in issue between the two proceedings was substantially the same. Thus, where a will proved by an attesting witness in an earlier suit decided ex parte was sought to be proved in the subsequent proceedings which were not between the same parties nor was it shown that the other party in the earlier proceedings had any opportunity to cross-examine that attesting witness, held, the evidence recorded in the earlier proceedings was not admissible in the subsequent proceedings. [1976 Punj.L.J. 224, Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1980 P.&H. 122: 1980 Rev.L.R. 80 (D.B.).

7. Evidence in cross-case.—It is elementary that each case—even though it might be what is loosely called a cross-case—must be decided on evidence recorded in it and not on evidence recorded in another case; this cannot be done even in civil cases unless agreed to by the parties; much more so in criminal cases where it cannot be done even with the accused's consent. The High Court was, thus, clearly in error in deciding the appeal in taking into consideration the evidence recorded in the other cross-case; the High Court judgment set aside: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 149: 1975 Cr.L.J. 236: (1975) 3 S.C.C. 529.

8. Expert's evidence in earlier case.—To invoke S. 33 to admit evidence of handwriting expert recorded earlier by the Rent Controller in the subsequent judicial proceedings before the same parties, the Court must first be satisfied that the presence of the expert could not be obtained without such delay or expense which in the circumstances the Court considers unreasonable; thus, where the Court admitted such evidence to avoid unnecessary delay and expense without any data or evidence placed on record by the party seeking admission of the expert's evidence, held, the admission of evidence being without the necessary supporting evidence, the Court's order is liable to be set aside in revision: A.I.R. 1976 Andh. Pra. 270: (1976) 1 An.W.R. 169.

9. Proviso (1).—A certified copy of the deposition of one of the brothers, regarding separation of some of them, as a witness in a previous mutation case where all the present defendants were also parties, though inadmissible on account of the non-fulfilment of the conditions of S. 32, may be admissible under S. 33. The deponent having died and the other conditions under the section having been fulfilled, the document cannot be taken to be inadmissible simply because the deponent and the present defendants were not arrayed as parties opposed to each other. In such a case the conditions of S. 33 will be deemed to have been fulfilled when all the present parties were also parties in the previous case and further the self same question of jointness and separation was required to be determined in the previous case where the deposition was taken and the witness was also cross-examined: I.L.R. (1954) Cut. 151: A.I.R. 1954 Ori. 176.

A statement of a deceased in a former judicial proceeding is not relevant in subsequent judicial proceeding when both the proceedings are not between the same parties: (1980) 17 Del.L.T. 225; 1982 M.P.W.N. 60.

First proviso to S. 33 covers not only cases of privity in estate and succession of title, but also cases where both the following conditions exist, viz., (1) the interest of the relevant party to the second proceeding in the subject-matter of the first proceeding is consistent with and not antagonistic to the interest therein of the relevant party to the first proceeding, and (2) the interest of both in the answer to be given to the particular question in issue in the first proceeding is identical: 1955 An.W.R. 87; A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 22 (It is not necessary that all the questions in issue in the two proceedings should be substantially the same).

Deposition given in previous criminal trial, held, cannot be used in subsequent trial of absconding accused when he was not a party to previous trial: 1975 Cr.L.J. 285: (1975) 1 Karn.L.J. 193: 1975 M.L.J. (Cr.) 132: I.L.R. (1975) Karn. 355 (D.B.).

'Representatives-in-interest'.—Meaning of: 60 I.A. 336: A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 202: 65 M.L.J. 479 (P.C.). The term 'representatives-in-interest' includes persons having the same interest in the subject-matter of the litigation and comprises all persons on whose behalf, though not in their names or as representing them, the previous litigation was carried on: 16 Mys.L.J. 77: 43 Mys.H.C.R. 113.

Representatives-in-interest are persons who derive their title through or claim under them, or shortly, are their privies. S. 33 cannot be applied without any reference to the subject-matter of the two suits. The interests involved in each case must be the same or similar: 102 I.C. 713: A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 733; such as partners and joint contractors: I.L.R. 5 Pat. 777: A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 61.

The phrase may not for all purposes be synonymous with the expression 'persons claiming under' in S. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code: I.L.R. 55 Mad. 40: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 198: 62 M.L.J. 116.

The admissibility of the evidence in favour of a party must be tested by its admissibility if tendered against him. It really does not matter by whom the evidence is tendered, the question in each case being whether a party's opposite number in the earlier proceeding can be said to be his representative-in-interest: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 22.

In seeing whether a person is the legal representative under S. 33, regard must be had to the state of affairs when the evidence is sought to be admitted. Where the defendant in a subsequent suit was the natural son of the plaintiff in the previous suit and claimed in the subsequent suit not as the natural son of the plaintiff but as adopted son of a third person, held, the depositions in the previous suits were not admissible: I.L.R. 51 Mad. 893: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 994: 55 M.L.J. 894 (F.B.).

10. Proviso (2).—The second proviso to S. 33 protects the right of the 'adverse party in the first proceeding' and not the right of the person who produces and examines the witness. The object of this proviso seems to protect those parties against whom the previous proceedings might have gone ex parte, or those who could have no right or opportunity to cross-examine them for some reasons. It would also protect co-plaintiffs or co-defendants who may not have the right or opportunity to cross-examine the witness produced from their own side: 1955 Raj.L.W. 434: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 179.

The 'adverse party' referred to in the proviso is none other than the party against whom the evidence is sought to be adduced. If the adverse party referred to in the proviso is taken with reference to the witness examined in the previous proceeding, the effect of proviso itself is rendered otiose and proviso may not have any meaningful application to the section. Thus, where the evidence of the plaintiff's witness in the first proceeding is sought to be used against the plaintiff, held, the plaintiff is the adverse party and when he had no right or opportunity to cross-examine that witness, his evidence cannot be used under S. 33: (1995) 1 Karn.L.J. 1 (D.B.).

The expression 'adverse party' in S. 33 is used to distinguish that party from the party who calls the witness; the distinction has nothing to do with the nature of the evidence given by the witness. A party calling a witness does not become the 'adverse party' because the witness gives evidence which favours the adverse party or is hostile to the party calling the witness. 'Adverse party' in the proviso can only refer to the party who was the adverse party at the time when the deposition was recorded in the first proceeding: 49 Cr.L.J. 558: A.I.R. 1948 Sind 122.

A deposition on which there was no opportunity at all to cross-examine is not admissible: 39 Mad.L.W. 34: A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 100. But S. 33 does not require that the adverse party should have actually exercised his right to cross-examine the witness: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 735: 151 I.C. 683: A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 413.

Under S. 33 one of the conditions to be satisfied is 'that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine'. Two things must co-exist: right and opportunity. Whether the accused had the opportunity to exercise his right to cross-examine is a question of fact to be determined in each case. The condition will not be fulfilled merely because the accused was physically present in Police custody at the time of the examination of a witness. The object of the section is to afford a genuine opportunity which would be effectively availed of and not for show only: A.I.R. 1946 Lah. 275: (1946) 48 Punj.L.R. 39; I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 405: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 222.

What is contemplated by S. 33 of the Evidence Act is an opportunity to cross-examine the witness and not an effective exercise of that right. All that the Court would have to do in such cases is to exercise caution before admitting such a statement. It could not be postulated, that in every case where the accused is not represented by Counsel and could not submit the witness to a searching cross-examination, he had no opportunity to cross-examine and therefore, that the evidence of the witness should not be admitted under S. 33 of the Evidence Act. In the circumstances of the case, it was held that the deposition in the preliminary enquiry of the son of the deceased who was an eye-witness to the murder of his parents was properly admitted in evidence in the Sessions Court as the witness had disappeared and could not be traced and that such evidence could safely form the basis of the conviction of the accused: (1951) 1 M.L.J. 478: A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 165: 53 Cr.L.J. 344.

The true reading of S. 33 is that the adverse party in the first proceeding had both the right and the opportunity of cross-examining and not 'the right or opportunity to cross-examine': 57 I.A. 14: I.L.R. 52 All. 1: 58 M.L.J. 446: A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 79 (P.C.). See also (1975) 1 Karn.L.J. 193.

One of the requirements for application of S. 33 is that the adverse party in a proceeding should have the right and opportunity to cross-examine. It does not say that the opportunity should have been availed of or the right should have been exercised. If opportunity for cross-examination was offered, but the party did not avail himself of the right and opportunity, the deposition would be clearly admissible. Once the evidence is admissible what weight should be attached to that evidence is a different matter and must necessarily depend upon other facts and circumstances of the case. To say that the evidence of such a witness, who was not cross-examined in spite of the right and opportunity being there, should not be accepted without due corroboration, is to import into S. 33 a limitation which is not there.

There cannot be any objection to act on evidence of such witness alone, but when the accused persons are being tried on a serious charge like murder, the Court should seek for some corroboration to the evidence given by such single eye-witness: A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 100: 36 Cut.L.T. 823 (D.B.).

The word 'right' used in S. 33 means a right conferred by a statutory provision such as that contained in S. 138, Evidence Act and not a right accruing from mere permission granted by the Court. If a Court permits an accused to cross-examine a witness, it is nothing but giving him an opportunity of cross-examining him and S. 33 expressly requires a right in addition to an opportunity: 1956 Cr.L.J. 841: A.I.R. 1956 All. 385.

Opportunity to cross-examine must be full: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.).

Where in a criminal case, apart from the right of the accused to cross-examine a prosecution witness at a particular stage, he was in fact allowed to and in fact did, cross-examine that witness, S. 33 of the Evidence Act would apply to the statement of that witness and it can be brought on record when that witness is not available: A.I.R. 1950 All. 167: 1950 All.L.J. 155.

Affidavit of person who died subsequently and who was not subjected to cross-examination is not admissible: A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 507: 52 M.L.J. 477.

In a warrant case before a charge is framed the accused has certainly the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses, but at that stage, he has no right to cross-examine them within the meaning of the proviso to S. 33, Evidence Act: 86 Cal.L.J. 21: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 435.

In a warrant case instituted otherwise than on a Police report, the accused has the statutory right to cross-examine the prosecution witness before the charge; the Magistrate cannot deny this right to the accused; it amounts to the right and opportunity of cross-examination envisaged in S. 33; whether or not the accused exercised that right or availed of that opportunity, the evidence of the witness before charge is admissible under that section: 1979 Sikkim L.J. 1: 1979 Cr.L.J. 610; 1981 Cr.L.J. 856 (Sikkim); 1989 C.Cr.L.R. 68 (Cal.).

In a warrant case until the stage provided for in S. 256 is reached the accused has no right to cross-examine and consequently the evidence of a witness given before framing the charge is not admissible: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 822.

In order that the evidence of a witness in the earlier proceeding be admissible under S. 33, Evidence Act, one of the conditions is that the opposite party should have had right and opportunity to cross-examine him. On a consideration of the provisions of Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI and XXIII, it is clear that in a warrant case an accused has no right to cross-examine before charge. His right to cross-examine prosecution witnesses arises after charge. Where in a prosecution under S. 420, Penal Code, the complainant dies before charge after his examination but without being cross-examined it cannot be said that the opposite party had the right to cross-examine the complainant before he died. Therefore, the complainant's evidence given before charge is admissible under S. 33, Evidence Act: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 954: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 395. But see infra. An accused has a right of cross-examination even when the witnesses have been examined under S. 252, Cr.P.Code, and it cannot be held that the accused has no right to cross-examine till the stage provided in S. 256, Cr.P.Code, is reached: A.I.R. 1953 Raj. 66: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 910. See also 31 Nag.L.R. 276: A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 8.

S. 33, Evidence Act, does not require that for a deposition to be admissible the adverse party should have actually exercised his right to cross-examine the witness. It is enough if he had the opportunity to cross-examine on the occasion. And such an opportunity is available to the accused in the committing proceeding under Chapter XVIII of Cr.P.Code. For unlike as under S. 251-A in Chapter XXI where cross-examination is allowed only after the framing of the charge, in commitment proceedings (Chapter XVIII) the accused has the right to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses under sub-S. (2) of S. 208 before the proceeding has reached the stage in which it may be necessary to drop the charge: 25 Cut.L.T. 307.

Prosecution witness examined and his cross-examination reserved—In the absence of anything on the record to show that the Magistrate afforded an opportunity to the accused to cross-examine the witness before he framed a charge, S. 33 would have no application—The Magistrate is right in omitting from consideration such evidence: I.L.R. (1952) 4 Assam 439: A.I.R. 1953 Assam 176.

Where the witnesses for the prosecution are not recalled under S. 256 because they are dead or otherwise not available, the result of not recalling them for cross-examination is not that their previous evidence can be expunged. The evidence which they gave before the charge continues to be relevant with reference to S. 33, Evidence Act: 1956 Raj.L.W. 305: 1957 Cr.L.J. 232.

Where after a charge had been framed the accused had only a partial opportunity to cross-examine the witness but not full opportunity as the witness ceased to be available before cross-examination could be concluded, the second requirement of the proviso to S. 32 is not fulfilled: 86 Cal.L.J. 21: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 435.

Death of witnesses before completion of cross-examination—Admissibility of deposition in evidence: I.L.R. 50 All. 113: A.I.R. 1928 All. 140. See also I.L.R. (1944) All. 241: A.I.R. 1944 All. 188; (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 908: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 679.

Where the prosecutrix in a rape case had been examined-in-chief and she died before her deferred cross-examination by the accused, held, her statement is inadmissible even though it satisfied all requirements of S. 33 except for its second proviso: (1975) 77 Punj.L.R. 594: (1975) 2 Cr.L.T. 328.

Where maker of statement was not proved to have died as a result of injuries received in the incident, held, such statement does not amount to dying declaration and if copies of such statement recorded by the Magistrate were not supplied to the accused, it could not be said that opportunity given to the accused for cross-examination of witness was not full: 1984 M.P.L.J. 492 (D.B.).

S. 33 does not apply to a case where a witness dies after his examination-in-chief but before his cross-examination. Such evidence is, however, admissible evidence, though the weight to be attached thereto would depend upon the circumstances of each case. The fact that the trying Magistrate does not take evidence as to the death of the witness when his death is reported to him is not a sufficient ground for excluding such evidence. It is not incumbent on the Magistrate to take such evidence when no suggestion or allegation is made that the witness is not really dead but is only keeping out of the way for some reason (or other): 47 Cr.L.J. 614: A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 384.

As the person against whom proceedings have been instituted under S. 476 of the Cr.P.Code has no right to cross-examine witnesses during that enquiry, the evidence of a witness in that enquiry, who is not forthcoming at the trial started on the result of such inquiry, is not admissible: 17 Cr.L.J. 249: (1916) 18 Bom.L.R. 284; also evidence given in proceedings under S. 145, Cr.P.Code, by one defendant for another: (1925-26) 30 Cal.W.N. 254: 93 I.C. 115: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 705.

At a Sessions enquiry an approver was examined-in-chief but the accused were not asked then and there to cross-examine him and he did not in fact dare to cross-examine and he died before trial in the Court of Sessions. Held, that it was doubtful whether his evidence was admissible and that in any case its value was small: 18 I.C. 406: (1912-13) 17 Cal.W.N. 230.

Where the party was not allowed to cross-examine in a prior proceeding the previous statement is not admissible in the later suit: 58 M.L.J. 446 (P.C.).

Where the earlier proceedings were between the same parties and the adverse party had the right and opportunity to cross-examine the two crucial witnesses who had thereafter died, held, merely because under the Portuguese Civil Procedure Code a party to the proceedings is not a witness on its own behalf but could be examined if the other party so desired, it does not mean that S. 33 was not attracted when as a matter of fact the party had been examined and cross-examined at length in the earlier suit; the evidence of the deceased witnesses recorded therein was admissible in the second suit: A.I.R. 1976 Goa 11.

11. Proviso (3).—Under S. 33 before certain evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding can be admitted in a subsequent judicial proceeding, it must be established that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding. It is not necessary, however, that any specific issue need have been raised regarding any particular matter in issue between the parties, but the matter must have been in issue between them: 49 Mad.L.W. 273: A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 446: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 227. See also A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 225.

Where the scope of the earlier suit between the parties was limited to the issue of possession only but the pleadings contained elaborate pleadings as to the fact of possession always lying with the defendant and never in the plaintiffs, and in the second suit the bone of contention was the benami character of the earlier transaction in which the issue of possession is substantially in issue in the second suit, held, S. 30 was attracted; it is not necessary that all questions in issue in the two cases should be substantially the same. [A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 202, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Goa 11.

12. Explanation.—Evidence taken in the Court of a Magistrate in Simla, can be received as evidence under S. 33 in a subsequent proceeding in Koti State although the former proceeding was between the Crown and the accused and the subsequent proceeding is between Koti Darbar and the accused. Explanation to S. 33 makes it clear that a criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused: A.I.R. 1949 Him. Pra. 15. The inquiry before the Coronor, although it may be a judicial proceeding is not a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused and therefore, the deposition of a witness taken in an enquiry before the Coroner cannot in the event of the death of the witness, be taken into account at the trial before the High Court: (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 1020: A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 479 (1).

13. Illustrative cases.—The deposition would not become admissible merely because of the death of the witness at any stage of the suit. If the party tendering had made no attempt before that event and happened to examine the witness in the ordinary course and if before closing his case, he had not established any of the grounds other than death mentioned in S. 33 which would make it receivable in evidence, the deposition could not be taken in merely because the witness happened to die during the trial of the suit: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 22.

STATEMENTS MADE UNDER SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

34. Entries in books of account when relevant.—Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

A sues B for Rs. 1,000, and shows entries in his account-books showing B to be indebted to him to this amount. The entries are relevant, but are not sufficient, without other evidence, to prove the debt.

Where a case under provisions of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 was instituted on complaint of a Food Inspector but the accused could not cross-examine Food Inspector as he was dead, held, accused could not be convicted on the evidence of Food Inspector who had not been cross-examined and when Panch-witnesses had not supported his case; evidence of said witness could not be used by invoking S. 33 of the Evidence Act: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1270 (Madh. Pra.).

Where a person making statement that he could recognise the accused as one of the dacoits, died before trial of the case, held, his statement was not admissible under S. 32: 1982 Cr.L.J. 572 (Gau.).

Where the deceased wife had written a series of letters to her relatives beseeching their help stating that she intends to commit suicide because of ill-treatment and cruelty to which she was being subjected to by the accused-husband, held, as the witnesses, to whom such letters were written, had deposed to what they saw and observed and had referred to the statements made to them personally and as the deceased was no more, she was relegated to the category of witnesses who are no longer available and if the correspondence was otherwise proved to have been addressed by her, it was then clearly admissible in evidence and was not hit by the rule of hearsay: 1993 Cr.L.J. 1134 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where the victim stated in the ejahar that he could recognise the accused as one of the dacoits but without any statement as to the cause of death and the victim did not say anything before the Police or the public about his recognising the culprits and he died before the trial could commence, held, the ejahar, uncorroborated, was no substantive evidence: 1982 Cr.L.J. 572 (Gau.).

Where the informant died before the commencement of the trial and the Investigating Officer who recorded the first information report was also not examined, held, such first information report cannot be admitted in evidence under Ss. 32 or 33: 1971 B.L.J.R. 353: 1970 Pat.L.J.R. 412.

The deposition of a material witness which was relied upon by the Judge in his summing up to the jury, who resided within the jurisdiction and could be procured without unreasonable expense and delay is not to be admitted as justice requires that such a witness should be examined in the presence of the accused: 31 I.C. 354: (1915) 17 Bom.L.R. 590.

Where in a suit for specific performance, the objection allowed to be raised for the first time in the appellate Court was that the plaintiff had not proved of his being ready and willing at all material times to perform his part of the contract and it was shown that the plaintiff had so pleaded and deposed to in ex parte evidence and again after the ex parte decree had been set aside and the plaintiff was called for examination in the Court and was cross-examined by the defendant but not on this point, held, the evidence so recorded was admissible under S. 33: A.I.R. 1981 All. 96.

1. Scope and applicability.—It is only the account books that are properly kept that are admissible in evidence as relevant: I.L.R. 51 All. 519: 27 All.L.J. 115: A.I.R. 1929 All. 170.

Entries in account books which are not regularly kept are not relevant under S. 34 of the Evidence Act. [10 Nag.L.R. 44, Ref.]: I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 307: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 414: 1949 Nag.L.J. 398. An entry in an account book is an admission by the maker thereof in his own favour and it is accepted as evidence only if it strictly complied with the requirements of being kept regularly and in the ordinary course of business: A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 417: (1931) 33 Punj.L.R. 168. See also 1940 O.W.N. 555: A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 385.

Under S. 34 of the Evidence Act, entries in account books regularly kept in the course of business are relevant, but such statements cannot alone be sufficient to charge any person with liability. The rule embodied in this section is apparently an exception to the general rule as to admission in S. 21 and the principle seems to be to admit only such statements recorded by a party in his own behalf as are ordinarily considered by their nature and circumstances beyond his power to tamper with undiscovered, to the purposes of a particular case. Since the entries themselves cannot fix liability on a person, the attending circumstances are accordingly always taken into consideration by the Court. The entry should purport to record the whole of the transaction alleged and the appearance of the book containing entries must be honest and no suspicious dealing should be apparent. The entries should not be a recital of past transactions but must be an account of transactions as they occur, of course, not necessarily to be made exactly at the time of occurrence. It is sufficient if they are made within a reasonable time when the memory could be considered recent. Such entries, though relevant, are only corroborative evidence and it has to be shown further by some independent evidence that the entries represent honest and real transactions and that the transactions took place in accordance with those entries: I.L.R. (1967) 1 Punj. 435.

What has to be seen under S. 34 of the Evidence Act in each case is whether besides the entries in the account books there is any evidence to prove that the transaction referred to in the entries actually took place. In the case of transactions, which are numerous and which extend over some length of time, it is not reasonable to expect independent evidence to prove each particular transaction. In such cases, the genuineness of the account books, if they are kept in regular course of business, will be the determining factor. It must, however, be understood that mere proof of the correctness of the entries in the account books would not be enough. There must be some further evidence to corroborate the entries in the account books. The testimony of person should be considered enough corroborative evidence of the entries made in his account books: (1964) 1 An.L.T. 82: (1964) 1 An.W.R. 69: A.I.R. 1965 Andh. Pra. 33.

Account books of a business kept in regular course of business are supposed to be accurate; strongest improbability of untruth is attached to their entries; and that precisely is the reason that they are made admissible under S. 34 even though they are admission in favour of their maker. But it has to be first established by proper evidence that they were kept in the regular course of business though if the Court is satisfied that it is impossible to produce the writer of the books, the books may be proved otherwise. But the proof of such entries by the accountant without any other evidence in support of the claim is not sufficient to decree it: A.I.R. 1991 N.O.C. 108 (Gau.).

To rely upon a document as evidence, the Court has to see: (i) the proof of its execution; (ii) the proof of its contents; and (iii) the evidentiary value of the document as a whole. Consent to exhibit a document merely proves its execution; but the document thereby does not gather any probative or evidentiary value if otherwise it has none; if the document (a ledger book in this case), is intrinsically inadmissible in evidence, no amount of consent can make it admissible: A.I.R. 1981 Bom. 446.

For the purposes of S. 34 no particular form of books of account is prescribed. All that is necessary is that the book should be such a regular and usual account book as explains itself and as appears on its face to create a liability in an account with the party against whom it is offered. The person making the entries should have personal knowledge of the facts stated therein: I.L.R. (1954) Madh. Bh. 237: A.I.R. 1955 Madh. Bh. 49.

All that S. 34 of the Evidence Act requires is that the entries in the accounts should be regularly kept in the course of business and the person making them should have personal knowledge of the facts stated therein. It is not necessary that the entries in the books should have been made from day to day or from hour to hour as the transactions take place. Accounts prepared from rough books or memoranda should be treated as original accounts and cannot be rejected on the ground that they were not entered regularly from day to day: A.I.R. 1952 Madh. Bh. 55.

Where an almanac consists only of loose sheets of paper with blanks left at different places, and the writer thereof is not available, it cannot be said that the entries in it have been made in the regular course of business and have the necessary probative value. The weight which could be attached to documents which on the face of them all regularly kept cannot attach to these papers: A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 431; 17 Cut.L.T. 73.

'Account' implies reckoning and totalling and balancing. When these are not done there is no account: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 212. See also 10 Nag.L.R. 44: 23 I.C. 193.

Books of account, if no balances have been struck in them may be inadmissible under S. 34, but they are, however, admissible under S. 32(2) as entries or memoranda, made by persons who are dead, in books kept in the ordinary course of business: 30 Nag.L.R. 192: A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 106. Book of account, in order to be relevant under S. 34, of the Evidence Act, must be kept regularly in the course of business and they must be in conformity with some known system of accounting. Where the books produced in a case are merely ledgers of the defendant and they are not supported by any day book or roznama and do not contain entries of transactions as they take place and there is no daily opening or closing balance, and what has been shown from these books is that there was plaintiff's account and in that account entries were made which could all have been made on any one day, the books could not be regarded as relevant under S. 34, Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1951) Assam 329: A.I.R. 1952 Assam 92.

In account books regularly kept in due course of business usually the pages are interconnected, and particularly in daily accounts, the balance of one day or one page is carried over to the other day or the other page so that interpolation or replacement of a particular page becomes very difficult and sanctity is to be attached to such books. Where that is not the position and the account book is not a bound book but is a stitched one and each customer is allotted a particular page or pages, the sheets and the entries can be substituted or interpolated at different places, and, therefore, it cannot be taken to be an account book regularly kept in the course of business to be relevant under S. 34: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 4: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 437.

Kachchi rokar, the genuineness of which is not seriously contested and in which the balances were struck daily, is a book regularly kept in the course of business within the intendment of S. 34. But where certain entries have been made at the other end of a copy book and not as a part of the entries purported to have been made in continuation of an earlier cash book and they are admitted by the person who made them as his private noting which has been mentioned in the pakki and kachchi rokar bahis maintained by him, the entries in the copy book cannot be said to have been made in a book of account regularly kept in the course of business within the intendment of S. 34: 1959 Cr.L.J. 268: A.I.R. 1959 All. 149.

Provisions contained under S. 34 do not apply to credit entries of accounts which reduces liability of customer by giving credit: A.I.R. 1978 N.O.C. 171 (Cal.).

Error apparent on face of record—Quasi-judicial proceedings—Proceedings under S. 32 of Rajasthan Act VI of 1952, for determination of compensation payable to expropriated Jagirdar—Jagir Commissioner, in deciding compensation claims has to act in quasi-judicial manner—Neither Evidence Act, nor C.P.Code applies—Board of Revenue disallowing claim by erroneously holding that it was not proved according to S. 34 of Evidence Act which was attracted—Certiorari can be issued: 1964 Raj.L.W. 83: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 90.

Entries in property register of society showing properties gifted to the society—That the entries were made not immediately but after some time will not by itself make the document inadmissible in evidence to show what properties were gifted: A.I.R. 1969 All. 248.

Where a tenant sought to prove payment of rent by him to the landlord by the receipts given by the landlord on the tenant's bahis, held, S. 34 is not attracted; this section applies only to such entries in the accounts made in the regular course and which create liabilities, and receipts on the bahis create no liability on any of the parties: A.I.R. 1991 P.&H. 254: (1991) 2 Rev.L.R. 152: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 112.

Finding of lower appellate Court as to maintenance of accounts in usual course of business—Finding cannot be interfered in second appeal: A.I.R. 1967 Andh. Pra. 64.

2. "Books of account"—What is.—A document, to be relied upon as a book of account, must have the characteristic of being foolproof; a detachable bundle of sheets replaceable at a moment's pleasure is no account book; besides, S. 34 requires the book of account should be regularly maintained in the course of business: A.I.R. 1981 Bom. 446.

An entry in a book of account to be relevant must be shown to have been in a book of account regularly kept in the course of business; ordinarily, a collection of paper sheets bound together permanently in one volume and used collectively alone is a book envisaged under S. 34; unbound sheets containing continuous account are not a book of account: A.I.R. 1993 Gau. 35: (1992) 1 Gau.L.R. 440: (1992) 2 Ren.C.J. 20: 1992 Ren.C.R. 357.

'Books' means sheets of paper permanently bound. Unbound sheets are not books of account: 15 Cr.L.J. 241: 23 I.C. 893: 10 Nag.L.R. 44.

3. "Regularly kept".—Account books maintained according to a particular system from day to day and balances struck at the end of each day, should be held to have been regularly kept in the usual course of business. The phrase 'regularly' means that the accounts must be kept according to a system, though that system need not be elaborate. Again, it is a mistake to think that the expression 'regularly kept' is synonymous with 'correctly kept', though if they are not correctly kept, that would affect the weight to be attached to the entries made therein but not their admissibility: 1963 Raj.L.W. 195: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 579: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 212.

An entry in bahi khata is an admission by its maker in his own favour; it is accepted as evidence only if the khata was indeed kept regularly and in the ordinary course of business. The words 'regularly kept' mean the account kept in accordance with a certain fixed method or form; although S. 34 dispenses with formal proof of the accounts having been kept in the regular course of business, it is a matter of intrinsic evidence whether the books were the books of account regularly kept in the course of business. Thus, where the books on examination were not found to have been regularly maintained, held, they could not be relied upon. Moreover, the rule in S. 34 is subject to the salient proviso that such entries shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability: A.I.R. 1992 Raj. 149: (1992) 3 W.L.C. 636.

The words 'regularly kept' do not necessarily mean kept in a technically correct manner. Even the roughest memoranda of accounts kept by petty shop-keepers are admissible if they are authentic. Where not a single entry in the account book running for a period of five years is false or bogus, and the only mistake is about an entry which was entered as debit entry instead of credit entry, but the accounts, though not scientifically maintained, were regularly kept in the course of business carried on by the plaintiff and the entries were made by the plaintiff himself who had personal knowledge of the dealings, the account book can be relied upon: 1960 Ker.L.T. 184: 1959 Ker. L.J. 1386: I.L.R. (1960) Ker. 51.

An account book, not regularly maintained, is not relevant evidence under S. 34: A.I.R. 1969 Tripura 26.

A book of account may be said to be regularly kept although the book is not entered up from day to day or from hour to hour as the transaction takes place: (1933-34) 38 Cal.W.N. 861.

No doubt an account book kept in the form of daily entries of debits and credits is far more satisfactory. But it is not essential that the accounts should be made up daily. An account book containing entries made in time of all transactions would be regular one even if it is made up every month: A.I.R. 1957 Madh. Bh. 118.

Accounts kept in regular course of business—Practice of noting transactions of eight days, at one time in rokar system followed regularly.

Held, that though the system was defective, it could not be said that the account books, on that ground, were not maintained in regular course of business—The fact that these books were not filed before Income-tax Department would not show that they were not maintained in the regular course of business. Words and Phrases—'Accounts kept in regular course of business': 1959 B.L.J.R. 769: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 271.

Books regularly kept in the course of business—Meaning of, see 19 I.C. 534: 14 Cr.L.J.

262. As to what constitutes 'regularly kept' accounts and as to the effect of irregularity in keeping accounts, see 95 I.C. 128: A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 407; 136 I.C. 716: 9 O.W.N. 932. See also I.L.R. 4 Bom. 576; 13 Cal.L.J. 139: 8 I.C. 81; 13 I.C. 678; 7 I.C. 1011.

Though statements, oral or otherwise, made in ones own favour are normally not admissible but entries made in account books regularly kept in due course of business, if so proved, are admissible. However, where the books of accounts were not maintained till after the alleged payment had been made, held, not regularly kept in course of business, the books were not admissible under S. 34: A.I.R. 1976 Gau. 103.

4. Entries in account books—Evidentiary value.—Normally the entries in books of account, if regularly kept, carry some weight, unless there be counteracting elements to throw sufficient doubt as to their genuineness: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1283: A.I.R. 1956 Assam 170.

It is a matter of intrinsic evidence as to whether the books in question were books of account and kept regularly in the regular course of business. The only limitation imposed by the statute is that the statement, contained in the account books 'shall not alone be sufficient to charge any one with liability'. The value of the entries is corroborative and they cannot be used as independent evidence to charge any person with liability: I.L.R. 51 All. 864: A.I.R. 1930 All. 38. See also 1930 All.L.J. 987: A.I.R. 1930 All. 710: 1930 O.W.N. 582; I.L.R. 16 Luck. 36: A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 385.

S. 34 cannot be read as meaning that there should be independent evidence, besides the entries in books of account, that such and such articles valued at such and such amount were supplied on such and such date. What is necessary to be seen in each case is whether besides the entries in the account books, there is any evidence to prove that the transactions referred to in the entries actually took place. In the case of transactions which are numerous and which extend over some length of time it is not reasonable to expect independent evidence to be given to prove each and every particular transaction. In such case the genuineness of the account books, if they are regularly kept in the course of business, will be the determining factor. But mere proof of the correctness of the entries in the account books would not be enough. There must be some evidence to corroborate those entries. The evidence of the person who wrote the account books and in whose presence the transactions took place would be the best corroboration. Since he cannot possibly have independent recollection of the various transactions, he may, as provided in S. 159, refresh his memory by referring to the account books. But, it is not necessary for him to prove that such and such articles valued at specified amounts were supplied on specific dates. If he proves the entries written by him and states that the transactions referred to in those entries actually took place in his presence or to his knowledge, the effect would be the same. Where, however, the dispute between the parties is confined to some particular items only, specific evidence may be available and should be insisted upon to prove those particular transactions. Mere general evidence to prove that the account books were regularly kept is not enough: I.L.R. 20 Pat. 273: 22 Pat.L.T. 383: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 430. See also (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 308.

Entries in account books unless corroborated not sufficient to fasten liability: 1930 All.L.J. 987: A.I.R. 1930 All. 710. Proof of accounts, see 100 I.C. 863: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 177; (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 308; I.L.R. 16 All. 161; I.L.R. 18 All. 92; 1 M.I.A. 47: 5 W.R. (P.C.) 29. They would be good corroborative evidence: 23 W.R. (P.C.) 27. See also (1987) 2 An.L.T. 574.

Even if the books of accounts were regularly kept mere entries in the books of account would not be sufficient to charge the defendant with liability and there should have been evidence to corroborate the entries: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 255: 1958 Raj.L.W. 483.

Though account books by themselves are not sufficient to charge the defendant with liability to pay, the defendant can be made liable if there is sufficient evidence on record in support of account books: A.I.R. 1965 Assam 10.

Books of account must have been regularly kept in the course of business for dispensing with the formal proof of the entries therein. Even then the entries alone would not be sufficient evidence of the liability sought to be fixed on any person. It is necessary to prove the shortage of cash by independent evidence, and the entries could then be used as a piece of corroborative evidence: A.I.R. 1952 Him. Pra. and Bom. 46: 1952 Cr.L.J. 1128.

It is no doubt true that entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business are relevant under S. 34 of the Evidence Act. But as provided in the illustration to the section itself the entries by themselves are not sufficient to charge any person with liability for the debt unless there is evidence to prove the debt: (1961) 2 M.L.J. 333.

No person can be charged with liability merely on the basis of entries in the account books, even though those books are kept in the regular course of business, except when the person charged with liability thereunder accepts the correctness of the books of account and does not challenge them.

There should be independent corroborative evidence: (1973) 2 Cut.W.R. 1054. See also (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 309.

Mere entries in one's own account books is neither conclusive nor binding on the other party; under S. 34, they are relevant and constitute corroborative evidence if made in the account books kept in the regular course of business; but by themselves such entries are not sufficient to found a decree thereupon, if the other party does not admit the entries; otherwise, there must be other cogent evidence like correspondence, vouchers and bills to support the entries. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1058: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 898; A.I.R. 1952 Assam 92; (1968) 9 Guj.L.R. 1078; A.I.R. 1972 Guj. 208: (1972) 13 Guj.L.R. 179, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Guj. 57; (1980) 1 M.P.W.N. 276; (1980) 1 M.P.W.N. 299. See also I.L.R. (1987) Karn. 2673 [Mere proof of correctness of account books is not sufficient; each and every entry has to be proved].

S. 34 has constantly been interpreted as laying down a rule of evidence that entries in account books are not sufficient to fix liability against a person; there should be additional evidence, independent of the entries to prove the payment; thus, entries in account books are corroborative evidence: A.I.R. 1972 Guj. 208: (1972) 13 Guj.L.R. 179.

An entry in an account book is an admission by its maker in his own favour; thus, it is acceptable evidence only if it strictly complies with the requirement of having been kept regularly and in the ordinary course of business. If the entries or the books are suspicious or do not inspire the Court's confidence, they should not be relied upon: A.I.R. 1978 Karn. 10: I.L.R. (1977) 1 Karn. 385: (1977) 1 Kam.L.J. 756.

To attract S. 34, it is necessary to establish that the account books were regularly kept in the ordinary course of business; such entries are merely corroborative; primary evidence, namely, the original books, is always needed to prove the transaction: A.I.R. 1972 All. 494.

A book of account, being only a corroborative evidence, must be supported by some other evidence: A.I.R. 1993 Gau. 35: (1992) 1 Gau.L.R. 440: (1992) 2 Ren.C.J. 20: 1992 Ren.C.R. 357; (1990) 1 An.W.R. 6: (1991) 1 Hindu L.R. 65 (D.B.).

Account books by themselves do not charge a party with liability unless it is further shown by independent evidence that the entries or transactions indicated therein reflect true facts: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 56: (1977) 90 Mad.L.W. 636: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 331: I.L.R. (1978) 2 Mad. 95 (D.B.).

Under S. 34, the production of account books alone is not enough to make a person liable. But it is a question of fact as to how much evidence is required to create the liability when taken together with books of account. Every case will have to be decided on its own merits. In a case where the witness, who produces the account books, is reliable and has personal knowledge, the Court may accept his statement as enough proof combined with the books of account. In cases, however, in which the witness is not reliable at all, the Court would require more proof: A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 103.

If in addition to the production by the plaintiff of account books regularly kept in the course of business, there is evidence of witnesses who prove a number of items claimed by the plaintiff, the requirements of S. 34 are fulfilled: (1933) 35 Punj.L.R. 539.

Mere production without more of account books, does not prove anything. There must be proof, not only of the books, but of each entry and item of account: 23 Mad.L.W. 272: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 955. See also A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 903; 1930 All.L.J. 987; A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 384: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 46; 1938 All.L.J. 449: A.I.R. 1938 All. 353.

Scope—Entries in account books regularly kept in the course of business—Entry in A's account books of certain payment made to B—Relevancy and value of—Absence of corresponding entry in B's account book regarding receipt of such payment—Non-existence of such entry though not relevant under S. 34 is relevant under Ss. 5 and 11 and can be proved by B's account books: (1964) 3 S.C.R. 297: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 671: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1850.

S. 34 of the Evidence Act does not require any particular form of corroborative evidence, and where in a suit the plaintiff produces books of accounts and a witness on his behalf gives evidence in support of the entries and there is no cross-examination of the witness with respect to his personal knowledge of the facts stated, that is sufficient corroboration. The plaintiff's own statement on oath in support of the entries made in the account books would also be sufficient to fix the defendant with liability: 1963 Raj.L.W. 195: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 579: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 212.

Entries in books of accounts must receive corroboration to charge any person with liability—Law does not prescribe any particular form of corroboration and quantum of evidence required for corroboration would vary in each case—Held, on facts, that excess payment by defendant in particular year could be treated as satisfactory evidence corroborating balance brought forward from previous year maintained in Khata kept in regular course of business: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 413: 33 Cut.L.T. 825: (1968) 1 L.L.J. 59: A.I.R. 1968 Ori. 19.

Where the transactions in dispute are numerous and extend over a large number of years, it is not necessary to prove each and every item in the account books but only the specific disputed entries are required to be proved. In such a case, the question to be determined is whether the account books are regularly kept and are genuine. Where the plaintiff has made a definite statement that the account books are regular and he was not cross-examined with regard to the genuineness of the account books, the plaintiff's own statement on oath in support of the entries is sufficient to fix the defendants with liability. Even the plaintiff's own testimony on oath in support of the entries in his books could be sufficient to fix defendant with liability: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 27.

Per Dua, J.—S. 34, Evidence Act, merely makes relevant the entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business, and it further clearly lays down in the negative that such entries shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 27.

Where in the accounts kept in the ordinary course of business, quite a number of entries in the ledger stand corroborated by some other admitted transactions evidenced by documents of unquestioned genuineness and some other transactions which have been fully proved before the Court, the mere fact that the party has not produced the day-book of his business which is admittedly preserved in the firm, does not detract from the evidentiary value to be attached to the ledger. The evidence of the party himself is a substantial compliance with the provisions of S. 34 corroborating the entries to fasten the liability: A.I.R. 1955 Ori. 6: 1955 Cr.L.J. 162.

The effect of S. 34 is that a mere entry in an account book by itself is not evidence of any liability. But merely because the writer of the account is not examined, the plaintiff cannot be non-suited, when most of the items claimed by the plaintiff are shown to be real by other independent evidence; it is not necessary that each entry should be further corroborated apart from the evidence of the plaintiff himself: A.I.R. 1957 Trav.-Co. 184.

Where the plaintiff's only evidence comprised of entries in their account books, held, it was not sufficient to charge the defendants with liability. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1058, Foll.]: (1990) 2 Bom.C.R. 692.

Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant but alone not sufficient to charge any person with liability. Thus, where the sole managing partner of the firm in fiduciary relationship with its other partners had produced books of account which were vitiated by false and not genuine entries, the books' prima facie evidentiary value stood destroyed. He was bound to render accounts to other partners, de hors those books: A.I.R. 1994 Mad. 140: (1994-1) 113 Mad.L.W. 112 (D.B.).

Where in a suit for the price of the articles alleged to have been supplied by the plaintiff to the defendants on a certain day, the plaintiff relies upon the entries in his credit register on that particular date, the witness in corroboration must assert that in fact the plaintiff had supplied the article for the value of which he has brought the suit and that also on credit. Then only there will be corroboration of the position that this transaction has been rightly entered in the credit book. If the statement made by the witness, read as a whole, does not particularly refer to the transaction in suit which was on credit basis on the date, it cannot in law serve as evidence for the purpose of satisfying the requirements under S. 34: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 437: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 4.

Suit for recovery of price of goods supplied on credit—Neither any receipt nor any writing given by defendant acknowledging the transaction—Plaintiff relying on certain entries in Jama Bahi and ledger but failing to establish that the books of account relied by him were kept in regular course of business—Mere entries in books of account cannot by themselves fasten the defendant with liability: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 211.

In a suit for recovery of price of wheat sold on different dates, the defendants pleaded payments shown in their accounts, neither page marked, nor relating to accounts of other parties; defendants claimed to have paid a sum of Rs. 10,000 to the plaintiff at one time but his signatures were not obtained, held, when entries in the defendants' account books did not relate to other parties, they could not be said to be regularly maintained in the course of business; the entries in the bahis, which remained with the defendants and were not produced before any authority could be conveniently made up. No authenticity could be attached to those entries. It was for the defendants to prove the entries by cogent evidence. Mere entries in the account books showing payments were neither sufficient nor believable: (1985) 87 Punj.L.R. 252. See also (1988) 1 Raj.L.W. 288.

Where the plaintiff's son and attorney had orally deposed on the basis of entries from account books of the relevant period to prove sale and delivery of goods but without having any personal knowledge about the transactions, held, his evidence was not sufficient to decree the suit for price of the goods: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. (U.J.) 1 (D.B.).

No person can be charged with liability merely on the basis of entries in books of account, even where such books of account are kept in the regular course of business. There has to be further evidence to prove payment of the money which may appear in the books of account in order that a person may be charged with liability thereunder, except where the person to be charged accepts the correctness of the books of account and does not challenge them. The original entries alone under S. 34 of the Evidence Act would not be sufficient to charge any person with liability and as such copies produced under S. 4 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act obviously cannot charge any person with liability: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 898: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1058; 1979 Mah.L.J. 494.

Since books of account admissible under S. 34 constitute only corroborative evidence and not by themselves sufficient to prove the transaction, the copies produced under S. 4 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act obviously are in no better position. However, where the entries were supported by other oral and documentary evidence and the other party had not challenged most of the entries, held, the transaction, corroborated by the entries, stood proved: A.I.R. 1979 N.O.C. 15 (Cal.).

The rule that plaintiff's own statement on oath in support of entries can be sufficient to support the entries in his Bahies so as to fix the defendant with liability is applicable only if it is found that the plaintiff's books are regularly kept in the course of business and free from any doubt. It is essential that entries of all the available Bahies (e.g.), Rokar, Pakki and Kachi, Nakal and Khata relating to the money claimed should be filed alongwith the plaint. The tendency on the part of creditors to base their claim solely on entries in Khata Bahi is to be strongly deprecated: 1939 M.L.R. 216 (Civ.).

There is no doubt that entries in the account books maintained by a creditor are not by themselves evidence to attach a liability on the debtor, but they can be used to corroborate the evidence given by the creditor that the payment had been advanced to the debtor, and a decree can be passed on the basis of such corroborated evidence: (1978) 80 Punj.L.R. 503: 1978 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 386: 1978 Rev.L.R. 373; A.I.R. 1978 Karn. 10: (1977) 1 Karn.L.J. 385.

Books of account regularly kept—An entry in a book of account is relevant to prove a matter if the entry was made at the time of the transaction—Entry made in 1917 in the account book of creditor is not relevant on the question whether a person had taken a loan from the creditor in 1916: 1960 Nag. L.J. 113: (1960) 62 Bom.L.R. 322: A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 169.

Where the plaintiff relies on the entry in his credit register which he has himself scribed, but does not even assert that the transaction on credit took place actually and that, therefore, it was so entered, it is a very material omission on account of which his evidence cannot be treated to be corroborative of the entry: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 437: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 4. See also (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 17.

Entries in books of account—Corroborative evidence—Plaintiff, a bank, claiming an amount on the basis of entries in its ledger book—Books maintained in regular course of business and entries and the transactions proved by its ex-Secretary—Entries, held, sufficiently proved—Adverse inference, held, could not be drawn against the Bank for the non-production of its cash book: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 157: A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 169.

Suit for money as per accounts from plaintiff's account books—Whether such entries are basis of suit: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 474.

Account prepared at considerable intervals from memory or possible inadequate materials cannot be treated as proof of the actual income and expenditure of the estate to which they relate although they may be useful in cases where they corroborate other evidence: I.L.R. 51 Mad. 291: 54 M.L.J. 703.

Admissibility in evidence—Khata Bahi is a book of account and if maintained in regular course of business can be admitted in evidence—Entries are not, however, admissible if not supported by corresponding entries in Rokar and Naqual Bahi: 1965 Raj.L.W. 346: I.L.R. (1965) 15 Raj. 1035: A.I.R. 1966 Raj. 229.

Such entries must be corroborated by other evidence in order to fix a liability upon: 22 W.R. 549; 23 W.R. (Cr.) 27.

Where the plaintiff produces account books and deposes that they are regularly kept and are correct, and he is not cross-examined on the point, his testimony supported by the account book is legally sufficient to establish his claim: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 212: 145 I.C. 157.

Where a number of blank spaces are left in the Rokar Bahi in different places, the conclusion by the Court that it is unreliable is fully justified: (1939) 41 Punj.L.R. 295: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 412.

Suit for rent—Account books produced by plaintiff showing absence of entry of receipt of rent for relevant period—Account books proved—Defence that rent was paid to servant of plaintiff not believed—Finding that rent was not paid held legal: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 84: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 145.

Question whether house was built by deceased with joint family funds—Party tendering account books—Parties should not rely on entries here and there—All the entries have to be taken together and an inference which is consistent with the surrounding circumstances and the probabilities has to be drawn in deciding whether the cost was met by deceased exclusively from his funds, or whether it was met by the joint family funds be it partly: I.L.R. (1953) Cut. 343: A.I.R. 1953 Ori. 315. Account books are sufficiently discredited if a certain number of entries therein are proved to be bogus by independent evidence which precludes the possibility of error or accident: A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 39: 54 M.L.J. 208 (P.C.).

Where entries in a Hindu Undivided Family's books of account were not challenged as to their genuineness or truthfulness and there was no evidence otherwise, held, the Income-tax Authorities could not contend that the money shown as received therein was not received by the karta for the Family but as guardian of a minor; the basic principle, in the civil law or the law of income-tax, is the same. Without impeaching them as not genuine or not truthful, the entries have to be accepted as truthful: (1980) 19 Cur.Tax Rep. 105: 129 I.T.R. 573: 1981 Tax L.R. 918 (Guj.) (D.B.). See also 1978 Tax L.R. 972: 113 I.T.R. 389: 1978 Rajdhani L.R. 240 (D.B.).

Proof of accounts—Entries in certified copies of statement of accounts corroborated by certificate of its truth—They are sufficient to charge debtor with liability: (1962) 32 Comp. Cas. 511: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 191.

Where the defendant had categorically denied the transaction in his written statement and the plaintiff had not proved the original entries in his books of account and there was no material whatsoever, apart from the books of account or the balance sheet of the plaintiff, to prove the transaction of loan advanced, held, the plaintiff was not entitled to any decree: A.I.R. 1991 Gau. 92: (1991) 2 Gau.L.R. 180.

Where entries in the Bank's account books were produced in the Court and corroborated by its Manager and other officials, and the defendant had himself admitted having taken the loan from the Bank in his written statement, held, the loan stood established: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1644.

Where the plaintiff deposed that he had paid money by cheque to one person and later on that he had paid to another and eventually that he did not know who the payee was and the entry of payment in the ledger was not supported by producing counterfoil of the cheque, held, the payment was not proved: A.I.R. 1977 Andh. Pra. 164: (1976) 2 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 337: (1977) 1 An.W.R. 114 (D.B.).

Where Bahis were neither relied nor produced till after the plaintiff's evidence had been recorded and the explanation offered was that they had then been misplaced and entries on 13 sheets thereof were sought to be proved by the mason for payment of wages under his signatures to him and his son for doing construction work, and the Bahis did not contain the name of the owner, was not proved to have been kept regularly in the normal course of business, did not contain the date of payment nor was it shown as to who was the author of the entries, held, the entry was not admissible under S. 34: A.I.R. 1977 Him. Pra. 1: 1977 Sim.L.C. 294: I.L.R. (1976) Him. Pra. 499 (D.B.).

Where the loan sought to be recovered was substantiated by the plaintiff mainly from entries in his account books which appeared not to have been kept regularly, and in the ordinary course of business and which were, being interpolations in between the lines, even otherwise suspicious, held, the entries were not sufficient to prove the loan; even if they were not suspicious, other evidence of the loan also had to be adduced: A.I.R. 1978 Karn. 10: I.L.R. (1977) 1 Karn. 385: (1977) 1 Karn.L.J. 756.

Where the defendant managing the family affairs had engaged clerks to maintain accounts and no moneys could be spent without his instructions and the plaintiff had admitted not only that the defendant had no need to come up with false accounts but had also kept the books with him for checking them, held, the books proved by the defendant without any suggestion about falsity of any entry contained therein, could not be discarded as untrue: (1991) 1 Hindu L.R. 65: (1990) 1 An.W.R. 6 (D.B.).

An entry in the Sales Tax Register is sufficient corroboration especially when the impugned entry in the books of account was not the last transaction and did not appear to have been subsequently made or interpolated: (1979) 48 Cut.L.T. 38.

Where the words 'deposit karaya' in the roznamcha (a book of accounts) were confronted to the witness even though he was not the writer thereof as having not been written on the same day and the Court had itself found the same to be a genuine entry, held, the other party could not contend that the account book was not proved when it had been deposed to on behalf of the party which had produced the book that the books of account were properly maintained and it was not possible to arrange the presence of the writer of the book: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2551.

Where account books and diary found admissible established payment of consideration by the plaintiffs, who were in possession of the sale deed as well as the property purchased by them held, the title in the property vested in the plaintiffs; its ostensible owner was a mere benamidar: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 109 (Cal.).

Where entrustment of money in prosecution under S. 408 of the Indian Penal Code was sought to be proved by a debit entry in the employer's books of account, held, though under S. 34 entries in the books of account, regularly kept in the course of business are relevant, they alone are not sufficient to charge the accused with liability; the prosecution ought to have adduced evidence to establish that the books were maintained in regular course of business and that the money was indeed paid to the accused; the prosecution must also have proved how its offices worked and the method of making debit and credit entries in the books: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 388: 1974 Cr.L.J. 447: (1974) 3 S.C.C. 630.

Where a witness merely deposed about the suit claim but the other witness specifically spoke about and referred to entries made in the security registers of equitable mortgages maintained by the Bank, held, the second witness, thus, corroborated the entries in the registers which stood legally proved: (1994-2) 114 Mad.L.W. 315 (D.B.).

The illustration to S. 34, Evidence Act refers only to the entries in the account books of a plaintiff. The entries are not sufficient to charge the defendant with liability unless there is other corroborative evidence.

Where the books of account on which the plaintiff has relied are not those maintained by the plaintiff itself but they are the account books of an entirely different institution, namely, the High Commission of India in London, neither the illustration to S. 34 nor the argument that self-serving admissions without more cannot be the sufficient basis to charge a defendant with liability can strictly speaking be applicable. The circumstances surrounding the existence of the books of account and the circumstances surrounding the transaction which is recorded in the book of account may well constitute sufficient corroborative material. No hard and fast rule can be or has been laid down as to the nature of quantum of evidence necessary to support the entries in the books of account under S. 34 of the Evidence Act. The quantum of other evidence required in each case will depend upon the circumstances of that case: A.I.R. 1960 J.&K. 136.

A debit entry at the end of a page in an account book showed certain goods as sold at a certain rate. The description was written down closely in a cramped style on the same page, though it could have been written on the next page. Further the total amount debited was written in different ink. The entry was relied upon to prove the price agreed by the parties.

Held, that the circumstances detracted from the value of the entry and the Court would be justified in accepting the opinion of the trial Court on the point which had the original document before it, rather than of the High Court: (1963) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 110: (1963) 2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 995: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 818.

5. Relevancy of entries.—See 5 M.I.A. 432; 4 Beng.L.R. (P.C.) 31; 13 M.I.A. 365; I.L.R. 16 Luck. 36; 3 N.W.P. 308; 5 W.R. 242. Such books can be used to refresh memory of witness: I.L.R. 29 Cal. 334.

Such entries need not be made by or at the dictation of a person who had a personal knowledge of the truth of the facts stated: I.L.R. 1 Bom. 610.

Entries in account books are relevant as admissions against the party even when the entries are written by his agent: (1933-34) 38 Cal.W.N. 861. The noting of the items in an account book kept regularly by a munim in whose presence the money was not paid is no evidence: A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 431(1). As to what constitutes being kept in the regular course of business, see I.L.R. 4 Bom. 576.

Although the actual entries in books of account are relevant, the book itself is not relevant to disprove an alleged transaction by the absence of any entry concerning it: I.L.R. 10 Cal. 1024, followed in 3 I.C. 291. See also 7 C.L.R. 256; I.L.R. 30 Cal. 231 (247). But see contra A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 22 in which it was held that the absence of an entry in an account book is a relevant fact admissible in evidence. [(1900) 4 Cal.W.N. 207, Foll.].

It is settled law that jamabandis do not create title; they are only corroborative evidence under S. 34 and cannot by themselves establish title of the person purportedly recorded as the owner: A.I.R. 1990 Pat. 201: 1990 B.B.C.J. 367: 1990 Pat.L.J.R. 645: (1990-2) 38 B.L.J.R. 1048: (1990-2) 38 B.L.J.R. 780.

6. Non-production of documents to support entries.—Non-production of account books — Court can presume adversely: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 51.

Non-production of account books—Case proved by other evidence—Adverse inference against plaintiff for non-production need not be drawn: A.I.R. 1968 Mad. 203.

Where none of the witnesses deposed as to the account book entries being correct nor did the party offered any explanation for non-production of documents that could support the book entries, held, the account books are unreliable as their contents, the entries made therein, have not been proved: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1269: (1989-2) 30 Guj.L.R. 1051: (1989) 2 S.C.C. 630.

Where the tenant had pleaded payment of rent to the landlord by adjustment against the price of cloth sold by him to the landlord's wife and sought to prove it by his bahikhatas which were found to be unreliable and suspicious and had stated in his cross-examination that the details of cloth sold were in the bills not produced in the Court, held, the payment of rent by the tenant was not proved: (1992) 3 W.L.C. 636: A.I.R. 1992 Raj. 149; 1982 M.P.W.N. 243 [When ledger and vouchers were not produced in support of claim based on mere entries in books of account, held, claim could not be decreed].

Where at the instance of the defendant a ledger account was opened to enable the defendant to purchase petrol on credit, the ledger account kept in the regular course of business, unless proved to be wrong, is prima facie the relevant account book for ascertaining the liability of the defendant. No adverse inference can be drawn against the plaintiff from the non-production of the credit memo. book if the non-production has been explained and there is nothing to cast any doubt on that explanation: A.I.R. 1965 Assam 10.

7. Entries—By whom to be proved.—Transactions evidenced by entries in account books—Proof of—Accountant who made entries not examined—Transaction noted in account books can be proved by person whose account books they are and who had knowledge of the transactions: I.L.R. (1962) 11 Raj. 1022: 1962 Raj.L.W. 103: A.I.R. 1962 Raj. 118.

Where the writer of the account books is alive but has not been examined, the account books cannot be said to be duly proved and are, therefore, inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 27.

Account books kept in regular course of business—Proof of—Entries of transactions—Transactions can be proved by person having knowledge of transactions—Books of accounts are admissible as corroborative evidence—Entries need not be proved by persons who made them: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 1304: A.I.R. 1961 Raj. 52.

Where neither the writer of the entry nor the person who made payment indicated in the entry, were examined as witnesses with no explanation therefor but only the Manager, having nothing to do with either, was examined as a witness, held, mere production of account books does not satisfy the requirements of S. 34: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 262: (1992) 2 M.L.J. 481.

8. Firm's books of account.—Where other partners entrust the management of the firm to the managing partner whereby he alone acts for and on behalf of the other partners, held, a bond of fiduciary character is created between him and other partners; he is bound to render account of what he receives or spends on his own as well as on behalf of other partners; they have the right to challenge the books of account maintained by the managing partner; they are not joint tenants of debts due to the firm under the English common law or equity; the presumption of the genuineness of the books of account maintained by him is certainly not available to him; the Court may reject the account books and direct reopening of the whole account instead of disallowing individual entries in the books: A.I.R. 1994 Mad. 140: (1994-1) 113 Mad.L.W. 112 (D.B.).

The correct approach is that the Court shall not reopen a settled account unless the account books have been shown to be erroneous to a considerable extent both in amount as well as in number of entries or where fiduciary relationship exists and one or more fraudulent errors or omissions are shown. The ratio is that where the accounting partner did not properly maintain accounts and mixed up his private affairs with those of the firm and the accounts do not truly reflect the firm's income and expenditure, the Court must reopen and/or reject the accounts. (Case law discussed): A.I.R. 1994 Mad. 140: (1994-1) 113 Mad.L.W. 112 (D.B.).

It is hardly proper to stigmatise the books of a respectable firm as books which it is not difficult to fabricate, without coming to a specific finding that the books produced were as a matter of fact fabricated and without giving reasons therefor: 14 Pat.L.T. 61: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 145.

Credit entry of deposit made by wife of assessee in account books of firm—Value of: A.I.R. 1968 Assam 1.

9. Probative value of entries in ledger.—The law relating to the probative value of entries in ledgers is: (1) the ledger by itself is no proof of the transaction and fastens no liability unless the entry therein is corroborated by other evidence; (2) the ledger would become relevant only when there is corroboration either of the entries therein or of the suit transaction; and (3) the nature of corroboration would depend on facts of each case like if the entries in the ledger are not denied by the other party, no corroboration would be necessary: A.I.R. 1985 J.&K. 85: 1985 Kash.L.J. 341.

A ledger by itself is not a book of account; other books including primary books of account if are not made available to check and cross-check it, a ledger by itself has no evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1981 Bom. 446.

Certified copy of ledger account maintained by a banker in regular course of business is admissible under S. 34: A.I.R. 1995 Ori. 244.

Where the Tribunal declined to rely on the ledger accounts prepared by the tenant for the sole reason that many pages thereof had been left blank, held, the decision was erroneous in law. It is common knowledge, and judicial notice can be taken, that whereas a cash book or journal or other primary books of account may not have blank pages, there will be few

35. Relevancy of entry in public record, made in performance of duty.—An entry in any public or other official book, register, or record stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register or record is kept, is itself a relevant fact.

ledgers without blank pages; ledgers are meant to contain accounts of different parties, each account being allotted a certain number of pages, usually for a whole year; they are bound to have blank pages: A.I.R. 1990 Del. 51: (1989) 38 Del.L.T. 445: (1989) 2 Ren.L.R. 486.

10. "Account stated"—Meaning of.—An 'account stated' means an account no longer open or current but closed by a statement, agreed to by both the parties, of a balance due to one or the other party whereupon action at law may be brought; it also means an 'account settled'. [The term elaborately discussed with reference to Osborn's Concise Law Dictionary, Black's Law Dictionary and Halsbury's Laws of England]: A.I.R. 1988 Gau. 33: (1988) 1 Gau.L.R. 90 (D.B.).

Where total of different items was stated and the balance struck and acknowledged by signatures of the party underneath which is neither denied nor explained away, held, its binding nature as 'account stated' cannot be denied merely by branding it as based on slips and not being a formal account—The word 'account' has no definite legal meaning; the primary idea of 'account computatio' is some matter of debit and credit implying that the parties are liable to each other in respect thereof either on contract or some fiduciary relation, public or private, created by law: A.I.R. 1988 Gau. 33: (1988) 1 Gau.L.R. 90 (D.B.).

11. Objection to admissibility.—Where entries in certain books of account are proved to be in the handwriting of a person since deceased, any objection to their admissibility on the ground that they were not proved to have been kept in the regular course of business ought to be taken at the time of trial: 32 I.C. 665: 17 Cr.L.J. 73 (M.).

In the absence of evidence that the books produced were account books regularly kept in the ordinary course of business, the account books should not be admitted. In such cases, however, it is essential that objection should be taken at the earliest stage, i.e., as soon as the books of account are sought to be admitted in evidence. If no objection is taken at that time it cannot subsequently be taken in appeal. However, even if no objection could be taken in appeal to the admissibility of the evidence, their reliability and the weight to be given to the account books have still to be considered: 1960 Nag.L.J. 113: (1960) 62 Bom.L.R. 322: A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 169.

Where what was introduced in evidence by the plaintiff, albeit with no objection from the opposite side, was an exercise book, without page numbers, containing some slips of papers and none of the entries therein was proved by any witness, held, they do not constitute evidence under S. 34; non-objection by the opposite party does not take away the Court's right to question or scrutinise its evidentiary value; not having been proved as required under S. 61 by primary or secondary evidence, the documents must be brushed aside as mere scraps of paper not kept in the regular course of business. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1058, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1995 Gau. 23.

Where a ledger was produced, proved and exhibited with consent or without objection from the other party that corresponding day books had not been produced in the Court, held, the objection to its proof in appeal is not competent. Besides, the ledger is an old account book kept in the regular course of business; it was written at a time when the dispute in suit could not be in contemplation of the deceased; it contained seal of the Income-tax Department, sufficient to show that it could not be fabricated thereafter; the entries' genuineness is beyond suspicion: (1988-1) 101 Mad.L.W. 48 (S.N.) (D.B.).

1. Scope of section.—See 68 I.A. 1: I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 154: A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 21 (P.C.). An entry in an official record is admissible if it states a relevant fact. It is not necessary for the admissibility of the entry that it should relate to a fact known to the public officer recording it: 27 Sind L.R. 101: A.I.R. 1933 Sind 317. As to admissibility of statements contained in public documents, see I.L.R. 6 Lah. 269: A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 170: 50 M.L.J. 120 (P.C.).

An entry in a Register made by a public officer in the discharge of his duties, held, squarely falls within the four corners of S. 35 which requires the following conditions to be fulfilled before a document can be admitted under this section: (1) the document must be in the nature of an entry in any public or other official book, register or record; (2) it must state a fact in issue or a relevant fact; (3) the entry must be made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties or in performance of his duties especially enjoined by the law of the country in which the relevant entry is kept: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118; A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1796; (1988) 36 B.L.J.R. 539; (1992) 2 Rev.L.R. 147 (P.&H.) (D.B.); (4) merely because such a document has been exhibited does not dispense with its proof: A.I.R. 1995 Madh. Pra. 134.

To fall within the orbit of S. 35, the register need not be one enjoined by law to be maintained; the section contemplates two types of official or public registers (i) those maintained by public servants in the discharge of their official duty; and (ii) those maintained by persons other than public servants in performance of duty specially enjoined by law. The qualification 'being specially enjoined by law' does not apply to the first type of registers. They are public documents: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

A document's admissibility is one thing; its probative value quite another; and the two cannot be combined. A document may be admissible and yet, carrying no conviction, its probative value may be nil: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118.

Admissibility of evidence and the weight and value to be attached thereto are two distinct things; the former is a matter of law, the latter a question of fact; public documents cannot be taken into consideration unless they have been adjudged as admissible; besides, relevancy, admissibility and proof being different aspects, all of them must exist before the document can be admitted; similarly, evidence and proof of a fact are not synonymous; proof, strictly speaking, is merely the effect of weighing the evidence: A.I.R. 1977 Del. 73: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 321.

A document, admissible or ancient, cannot carry the same weight or probative value as a document prepared under a statute which requires certain conditions to be fulfilled therefor; thus, a report by a responsible Officer, based on evidence of witnesses and documents and having statutory flavour, having been given not merely by an Administrative Officer but under the authority of a statute, has a very high probative value and it would be entitled to great weight: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118.

In the absence of anything on the record to show that the document is not genuine it is incorrect to hold that the record is a collusive one: 1972 All.W.R. 341: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1377.

The combined effect of Ss. 35, 65(e), 76, 77 and 79 is to enable the proof of public documents by the certified copies of the extracts therefrom: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

A mere production of a certified copy of a public document is no proof of its contents; its admissibility depends on its contents being facts in issue in the case or otherwise relevant under the law of evidence; thus, a mere production of a copy of a self-serving statement made before another Tribunal would not become relevant and admissible: A.I.R. 1977 Del. 73: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 321.

File of papers containing official communications maintained according to practice—Such Official Register is official document within S. 35 and public document within S. 74—Copy of sanction for prosecution lost—Case comes under S. 65(c)—Original from file can be produced as secondary evidence: (1953) 1 M.L.J. 636: A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 785.

Under S. 74 documents forming the acts and records of official bodies and public offices are public documents; their certified copies are admissible in evidence without calling for or proving their originals; but opportunity has to be given to the other party to adduce evidence to controvert presumption arising out of such documents admitted in evidence; otherwise the proceedings would be vitiated: (1982-83) 87 Cal.W.N. 294 (D.B.).

Ordinarily, it is not necessary to prove that a particular entry really represents an act of the public servant concerned because this may reasonably be presumed from the fact that he was in charge of the preparation of the record in which the entry finds place, but the presumption is destroyed by admission or clear proof of the fact that the entry in question is not in the handwriting of that public servant. In such a case it is not possible to receive the entry in evidence unless there is proof either direct or circumstantial that it does, in reality, constitute an act of the public servant whose duty was to prepare the record containing the entry. To presume from the mere existence of an entry in a public record that it was made by a public servant despite admission or clear proof that it was not in his handwriting would amount to curtailing the express requirements of S. 35 of the Indian Evidence Act. Such entries are to be excluded from consideration: 1964 All.L.J. 1139: 1964 All.W.R. (H.C.) 311.

S. 35 only provides that any entry in an official or public book, which is duly made by a public servant in the execution of his duty, is of itself a relevant fact but does not make the public book evidence to show that a particular entry has not been entered in it: 1960 Cr.L.J. 1181: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 441.

Records maintained in the Post-office are public records; thus, an entry therein of sending the money order, its refusal and its return are admissible: A.I.R. 1982 All. 44: 1981 All.W.C. 612: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 70.

So long as the opinions expressed in official publications are not treated as conclusive in respect of matters requiring judicial determination, there would appear to be no objection in referring to the report for the purpose of gathering historical facts which are not in issue: A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 97.

The words 'an entry' in S. 35 are not intended to apply to the opinions of public officers based on or inferences drawn from the allegations made before them in the course of enquiries conducted under S. 202, Cr.P.Code, or under O. 26, C.P.Code: I.L.R. 16 Lah. 377: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 890. See also 165 I.C. 626: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 37.

The words 'an entry' in S. 35 are not intended to apply to the opinions of public officers, based on, or references drawn from, the allegations made before them in the course of inquiries. Moreover, the very wording of S. 35 conveys the idea that the entry will be of a permanent nature and excludes all such writings as are merely of an ephemeral character. Further, the person making the entry should be such as is invested with authority to record a decision which so far as the matter before him is concerned will be final.

Where a copy of a report of a Settlement Naib Tahsildar submitted, in connection with the application for correction of the entries in revenue records was relied on by the party, but neither the Settlement Naib Tahsildar who was not invested with authority to record final decision in the matter of correction of entries in the revenue papers, nor the original report submitted by him was produced.

Held, that the copy of the report of the Settlement Naib Tahsildar was not admissible in evidence as the report constituted merely his opinion based on allegations, made before him and it could not be regarded as an entry in any public or other official record within the meaning of S. 35: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 54.

Where the Tehsildar had, after examining the spot, prepared a report as well as a site plan of the area where one of the parties had held melas, which he had submitted to the Sub-Divisional Officer, held, it amounted to the Tehsildar's expression of his impression of what he observed at the spot; it was merely evidence of his having been deputed to inspect the spot and having prepared his report; the report is certainly not admissible under S. 35 without the Tehsildar having proved it by his evidence: A.I.R. 1976 All. 121: 1975 All.W.C. 632 (D.B.).

A Naib Tehsildar's report of spot inspection made to the Tehsildar, held, is only an expression of his own opinion; it is neither a public document under S. 74 nor admissible under S. 35 unless it is proved by proper evidence adduced in the Court: A.I.R. 1990 All. 175.

Document neither shown to be prepared by public servant nor shown as forming the act or record of public officer is not admissible: A.I.R. 1930 All. 26.

The mere fact that a public servant when making an entry in an official record acts under a misconception about his official duty, is not sufficient to take such entry by such an official out of the class referred to in S. 35: I.L.R. 21 Luck. 1: A.I.R. 1946 Oudh 163.

'Official duty'—Meaning of—Act done contrary to law—If done in discharge of official duty. See (1958) 1 An.W.R. 527.

Documents proved to have been received in official correspondence by the witnesses and found to be genuine are admissible under S. 35, Evidence Act: 1958 M.P.C. 156: 1958 M.P.L.J. 192: 1958 Jab.L.J. 235: (1958) 28 Comp. Cas. (Ins.) 19: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 297.

Upon the question whether a talukdar was a convert to Islam or was chief of a Rajput clan, it is permissible to prove that the fact of such conversion was unknown to the district and local officers and was not ascertainable from anything to be found in official publications: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 66: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 249.

A book of copies of communications sent by the Collector to various subordinate officers, maintained in the Collector's office, that being the prevalent official practice is itself an official register within the meaning of S. 35, and a public document under S. 74. A certified copy of such a document is clearly admissible in evidence, and should not be rejected as being a copy of a copy: 1939 Mad.W.N. 841.

Official reports have no judicial value when they express any opinion on private rights of parties. But being reports of public officers made in the course of their duty and under statutory authority, they are entitled to great consideration. Though such official reports are valuable and in many cases the best evidence of the facts stated therein, the opinions therein expressed need not be treated as conclusive in respect of matters requiring judicial determination: I.L.R. (1960) Cut. 230.

An entry in the register of powers-of-attorney maintained by the registering officer under the Registration Act, is undoubtedly relevant under S. 35 to prove the contents of the power-of-attorney. The abstract of the power which appears in the entry is made by the Sub-Registrar in the discharge of his official duty, and the Court is entitled to presume its correctness: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 907: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 569.

A mere production of the power of attorney authenticated by the Notary Public is not sufficient to raise presumption of its validity and effect unless it is further shown that the grantor was possessed of power to confer the power granted under the power of attorney: (1982) 2 Bom.C.R. 612.

Although S. 35 primarily meant to apply to old records and entries in old registers, there is no reason why it should not be applied to a report if it is proved to have been prepared by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty or by another person in performance of a legal duty: 1958 B.L.J.R. 6: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 166.

The underlying principle of S. 35 is the 'fact that record made by authorised and accredited agents appointed for the purpose and publicised is presumed to be true and is admissible'; thus, the Collector's decision under S. 5(1) of the Orissa Estate Abolition Act, 1951, is not only admissible but, being between the same parties and the same properties, is entitled to great weight: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 88 (D.B.).

Report of the Court of Enquiry appointed under R. 75 of the Aircraft Rules, 1937 cannot be regarded as an entry in a public or official book, register or record within the meaning of S. 35 of the Evidence Act. However, this enquiry is a formal and statutory enquiry under S. 7 of the Aircraft Act, 1934 read with R. 75 of the Aircraft Rules. It is not a private enquiry. The enquiry relates to the causes of accident. This report is relevant fact under S. 5 of the Evidence Act because it bears on the question of the existence or non-existence of every fact in issue and of such other facts which are regarded as relevant under the Evidence Act. This report is also a fact which speaks of the occasion, cause or effect or facts in issue under S. 7 of the Evidence Act. The report is also admissible as a fact under S. 9 of the Evidence Act, because it is a fact necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue or relevant fact or which supports or rebuts an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact or fixes the time and place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact happened. The report was produced by the defendant's witness, from his file under cross-examination. It was a printed report and was published by the Governme of India under S. 75, of the Indian Aircraft Rules. The witness was the Assistant Aerodrome Officer under the Civil Aviation Department, Director-General of Civil Aviation, Union of India. The report bore all the authentic marks of official recognition such as the title 'Government of India, Ministry of Communication', the insignia of three lions and the Ashoka Chakra with the official caption and a title 'report of the Court of Enquiry on the accident to Indian Airlines Dakota VT-CHF on the 12th December, 1953, near Nagpur'. Its very first page contained the communication by the Court to the Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Communications, New Delhi.

Held that, on those facts the report must be held properly and duly proved under S. 81 of the Evidence Act. But although the report was admissible and had been duly proved as a fact of this case, yet the evidence tendered before the Court of Enquiry was not necessarily evidence in the suit unless the questions and answers put to the witnesses were put to those witnesses who deposed at the trial and only those portions of that evidence before the Court of Enquiry which was tendered before the witness concerned would be evidence in the suit and not otherwise. This report, however, did not become evidence under Ss. 2 and 3 of the Commercial Evidence Act, 1939: A.I.R. 1965 Cal. 252.

The report embodying the findings as to the causes of the accident of an aircrash being of a formal investigation by a Court under R. 75 of the Aircraft Rules is admissible in evidence. The investigation under R. 75 is to be conducted by an authority who is designated in the rule as a 'Court'. Though designated as a 'Court' it is not a civil Court which can deliver judgment and pass a decree. Nevertheless, it has all the powers of a civil Court to enable it to conduct an enquiry and make a report. The report so made is not admissible as a judgment under Ss. 40, 41 and 42 of the Evidence Act, but is admissible under S. 35 of the Act. Its findings and conclusions both as to facts and its opinion as to cause of disaster is not binding on the Court that is deciding a suit brought under the Fatal Accidents Act. However, the Report must be given adequate weight and its findings as to matters of fact cannot be rejected or set aside unless sufficient acceptable evidence is tendered before the Court hearing the suit, to indicate a contrary finding: A.I.R. 1962 Cal. 544.

Trunk-call tickets are official records and the entries therein are made by public servants in the discharge of their official duties. As those entries relate to a relevant fact, namely, whether trunk-calls were booked from the residence of an accused to his co-accused at Bombay, the entries themselves become relevant piece of evidence under S. 35, Evidence Act. Under S. 35, it is necessary that the entry should be made either in a public book, register or record. In the latter category, it would not also be essential to show that official book, register or record is public document which should be open to inspection by the general public. The trunk-call tickets are not inadmissible in evidence because their writers were not called as witnesses. There is a presumption about their genuineness because those tickets purport to be documents kept under R. 49, of the Posts and Telegraphs Financial Rules Handbook and were produced from proper custody, vide S. 81 of the Evidence Act: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 393 (Punj.).

Notification No. 2252/49, dated 27th February, 1950 issued under S. 135-B, Bombay Land Revenue Code—It does not fall within scope of S. 135-B—Presumption under S. 135-B is not attracted—But notification is not ultra vires—Entries made in record of rights in pursuance of said notification—Such entries to be considered under S. 35, Evidence Act: (1964) 5 Guj.L.R. 701.

Impression gathered or circumstances ascertained by Police Officer at spot are not required to be entered in general diary—They are not relevant facts under S. 35, Evidence Act and hence not admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1965) 1 All. 298: 1966 Cr.L.J. 498: A.I.R. 1966 All. 222.

Proceeding regarding industrial dispute before Labour Court—Nature of—It is not strictly judicial but is quasi-judicial—Evidence Act does not apply: (1963) 6 Fac.L.R. 161 (Cal.).

Constitution of India, Art. 134—Accused contending that War Diaries of 6. Bombay Pioneers and Chief Engineer, Burcorps were not admissible in evidence as they were not public documents—Accused further contending, for the first time in appeal under Art. 134, that persons maintaining diaries were not servants of Indian Government—Held, diaries were records of official acts and were, therefore, admissible in evidence—In interpreting S. 35, decision on common law in England could not be of much help—Second contention involved mixed question of law and fact, but the case being proceeded on basis that persons maintaining diaries were servants of Indian Government—Court could not go into question of fact whether prosecution led evidence to show that officers maintaining diaries were in service of Government of India: 1967 Cr.L.J. 656: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 211: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 752.

Orders of detention passed under R. 26(1)(b) of the Defence of India Rules are not public records and, therefore, S. 35 has no application: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 33 (F.B.).

Official reports—Facts stated in—Reports valuable and in many cases the best evidence: But the opinion as to nature of estate—partible or impartible is not conclusive: A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 10 : 55 I.A. 45: I.L.R. 55 Cal. 403: 54 M.L.J. 397 (P.C.).

In a criminal prosecution the prosecution cannot take advantage of the entries on the bin-cards in the absence of proof as to who their author was, that such author was a public servant and that he had made the entries in the discharge of his official duties: 1974 Cur.L.J. 371 (P.&H.).

Where extracts from the property registers maintained by the Town Area Committee were relied upon to establish title, held, the registers were public documents; their extracts were admissible under S. 35. [A.I.R. 1948 All. 309, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1978 All. 292.

Entries in an official book made by a forest guard and checked and initialled by the officer responsible for the correctness of the marketing are entries in an official record which is admissible: I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 358: A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 139.

An assessment order of the Sales Tax Officer is a public document and where the question is whether a person was a partner of the firm of assessee during the relevant period, the order is a relevant piece of evidence and is admissible.

The return of sales tax filed by an assessee under the U.P. Sales Tax Act is also a public document. Apart from S. 35 of the Evidence Act, this return of the sales tax is also admissible under S. 11 of the Evidence Act, as it makes the existence of the fact in issue highly probable: A.I.R. 1958 All. 829: (1958) 9 S.T.C. 699: I.L.R. (1958) 1 All. 673.

Entry made by bill collector in discharge of his official duty and not under any statutory duty—Entry is not admissible: (1965) 78 Mad.L.W. 157: I.L.R. (1965) 2 Mad. 107.

Printed copy of index register of lands granted on lease in city is admissible in evidence. See (1942) 44 Bom.L.R. 295: I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 307: A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 161.

Canal papers are documents which are prepared in ordinary course of business, and there is no reason why they should not be admitted into evidence. They are certainly evidence of possession; but what weight should be attached to such evidence must depend upon the facts of each particular case. [A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 429 and A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 453 and I.L.R. 32 Pat. 903, Ref. to]: 1958 B.L.J.R. 64: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 353.

A canal parcha is very good evidence of possession and is admissible to prove khas possession. The canal authorities grant parcha for irrigation of the land to those persons whom they find in possession of land and the parcha has, therefore, great evidentiary value: 1941 Pat.W.N. 428. See also 23 Pat.L.T. 42: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 346.

The Jail Registers are official records kept by public servants in the discharge of their official duties and as such admissible under S. 35: 1942 O.W.N. 530: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 1.

2. Non-examination of maker of entries—Effect.—Though entries may be admissible under S. 35 without examining their makers, it does not mean that they have the same probative value in all cases and under all circumstances; that depends on a host of circumstances as also other evidence on record. Of course, if the maker of the entries is examined, the Court will be in a better position to assess their probative value; however, the Court has still to assess such probative value even if the maker is not examined as a witness: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

The Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal is legally competent to use entries in the scene mahazar without examining its maker or any person connected therewith; however, any party disputing its correctness is at liberty, subject to principles of natural justice to examine a relevant witness to establish its unreliability: (1990) 2 Civ.L.J. 296: A.I.R. 1991 N.O.C. 17 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Applicability—Proceeding started on basis of report by Patwari—Patwari need not be examined—Report is admissible: 1959 Nag.L.J. (Notes) 55 (Rev.).

An endorsement of refusal on registered notices by the Postman, held, is per se admissible without examining the Postman as it is made by a public servant in the discharge of his duties: 1987 Punj.L.J. 376.

Where an inquest report, proved by the Investigating Officer, contains the record of what he had seen with his own eyes, held, the record of his observations is admissible under S. 35 even if the officer did not repeat the observation in his oral testimony before the Court: (1993) 1 Ker.L.J. 839 (D.B.).

Cultivation Registers and Paddy Producers and Rent Receivers' Registers are prepared by the village assistant, a public servant; though not maintained under any law, they are necessary records for official and public purposes; they are official registers; they can be proved by their certified copies without examining their makers: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

Where bigamy was sought to be proved by a wedding card and an extract from the marriage register of the Gram Panchayat but without examining the owner of the printing press where the card was printed or the informant of the second marriage to the Panchayat, held, this evidence itself is of no help to the prosecution; the extract from the marriage register was no doubt a public document and could be proved by certified copy but it had little probative value when no explanation was furnished by the prosecution as to who the informant was and why could not he be produced as a witness: A.I.R. 1981 Bom. 283: 1981 Mah.L.J. 614: (1981) 83 Bom.L.R. 312.

Where inter-departmental communications between the Reserve Bank of India and the Controller of Capital Issues in the custody of the C.B.I. were tendered as evidence in the Court, held, they are admissible evidence even without being proved by their writers but having very weak probative value, they can be used only for corroboration; but if they are proved by their respective writers they can be taken as independent evidence: A.I.R. 1980 Cal. 83.

A recital in the order of a President of a Union Board is not admissible under S. 35 or S. 13 unless such President has been examined with regard to the fact mentioned in his order: 131 I.C. 654: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 487.

3. Letters passing between officials before final decision is reached—Admissibility.—The very wording of S. 35 conveys the idea of a duty imposed upon the maker of the entry by law or his official position to record the information he possesses or has gathered in an official document of the nature described therein. It further imports that the entry will be of permanent nature and thus excludes all such writings as are merely of an ephemeral character; and in so far as they do not incorporate the result of personal inquiries they are not intended to be used for reference in future. Another idea which runs underneath this section is that the person making the entry should be such as is invested with authority to record a decision which, so far as the matter before him is concerned, will be final. It thus excludes all views expressed before the final stage is reached and makes only those decisions relevant which constitute the final word in the matter. Hence, letters which have passed between the various officials cannot be admitted under S. 35 so as to make the remarks made therein legal evidence in the case; and if the final conclusions arrived at are recorded in the settlement papers, those are the only documents which can be admitted in evidence: (1936) 38 Punj.L.R. 748: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 37. See also 1939 Mad.W.N. 841: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 273.

4. Date of birth—Proof of—General.—It is well settled that a birth entry in a public or official record or register, though relevant under S. 35, is not conclusive presumptive proof of what is recorded there; in case a dispute arises, none can insist that the entry be accepted and acted upon as conclusive proof; the dispute perforce has to be resolved in an ordinary civil Court: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 738: (1987) 1 M.L.J. 82.

(1904) 31 Ind. App. 38 (Privy Council) and A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 558 cited as authorities for the proposition that the age mentioned at the head of a witness's testimony in Court is no evidence, held, are no sealing authorities for the blanket proposition that such age can never be treated as evidence. Thus, where the witness mentions his age after he had been sworn, that age is certainly 'evidence proper': A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 14: (1988) 1 Cal.L.J. 250: (1988) 1 Cal.H.N. 219: (1988) 1 Ren.L.R. 555: (1987-88) 92 Cal.W.N. 929: (1988) 2 Ren.C.R. 179: (1989) 1 Ren.C.J. 702 (D.B.).

The ossification test is not a sure test regarding the age. It gives only an approximation which may vary by two years on either side: 1992 Cr.L.J. 4073 (Del.). See also (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 118.

Where in a case of rape on minor, the mother of the prosecutrix stated that victim was above 16 years of age while ossification test showed that she was below 16 years and there was no evidence to establish the age of the prosecutrix and further the Doctor had opined that she was used to sexual intercourse, held, the trial Court was not right in concluding that the prosecutrix was below the age of 16 yeas on the date of occurrence: 1992 Cr.L.J. 4073 (Del.). See also (1986) 3 Crimes 189 (Madh. Pra.); (1984) 3 Crimes 295 (All.).

When the question of birth date of a person is in issue birth entries in books kept for the purpose by Police Patel and in the books kept by Police Station, are relevant facts under S. 35 and their certified copies are admissible in proof of original entry under S. 77. Similarly, the entries of vaccination in Vaccination Report are also relevant and their certified copies are admissible: A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 290: I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 709.

Birth entry in Police records—That the entry relates to the person whose birth date is in question must be established: A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 290: I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 709.

It will not be proper for the Court to base any conclusion about the age of a candidate for election on the entries in the School Admission Register, Matriculation Certificate or application for a Government post: (1964) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 140: (1965) 1 S.C.A. 378: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 282.

Entry of age in service book. See (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 118.

5. Birth and Death register.—The Municipal register in which births and deaths are registered is admissible as it is kept by a public servant in the discharge of his duties: 11 O.W.N. 416: A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 167; 177 I.C. 517: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 120; 1939 All.W.R. (B.R.) 4: 1939 R.D. 80; 1936 All.L.J. 404: A.I.R. 1936 All. 218; A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 285. See also I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 382: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 264; (1941) 54 Mad.L.W. 411: A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 129; 175 I.C. 263: A.I.R. 1938 All. 242.

Entries in Birth and Death Registers are public documents and are admissible under S. 35, Evidence Act. The ground of reception of such evidence is that it is the public duty of a person who keeps the register to make such entries after satisfying himself of the truth. When it is the duty of a public servant to make such entries in any public or official register, it becomes admissible to prove the truth of facts entered as well as the fact that the entries were made by the officer. Entries in a register of birth, death or marriage are at least prima facie, though they may not be always conclusive evidence. It is not necessary to prove who made the entries and what was the source of his information. [A.I.R. 1947 All. 429, Rel. on]. No doubt, identity of the person whose birth and death is entered has to be established by other evidence if that is in dispute. In that case, the informant, if available, will be competent witness. Other kind of evidence may also be led to identify the person. But when the identity of a particular person is established, the description of the deceased person in the entry as the widow of that person can be accepted. The whole entry, which is admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, need not conform to the special provisions of S. 32 or S. 50 of that Act. Relevancy of an evidence can be established under any of those three sections: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 301.

Where the Municipal By-laws prescribe the mode of maintaining birth and death registers, they have to be regarded as the record of official acts performed by public servants in the discharge of their official duties; they are, thus, admissible under S. 35: A.I.R. 1972 P.&H. 199: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 67.

The Birth and Death Register is no doubt a document within the meaning of S. 35, Evidence Act, and is, therefore, relevant and has evidentiary value. But this does not mean that each and every entry made in that register is admissible in evidence. Only such entries as are made therein by persons in the discharge of their official duty are admissible: A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 74: I.L.R. (1956) Nag. 282. See also (1973) 2 Mys.L.J. (S.N.) 63.

An entry in a birth and/or death register as to age would be excellent evidence and may have to be preferred to entries in the records of educational institutions. The same rule cannot, however, apply where the evidence furnished by the birth registers is not available at all. Each case must depend upon its own facts and circumstances and must be decided on the net balance or the various counts of proof offered therein.

The entries in the School records as to the age of a candidate for election were proved to have been made on the basis of information supplied to the School authorities by the candidate's own father, while the entries in previous electoral rolls betrayed a motive behind them to enable the candidate to stand for certain election and did not inspire confidence.

Held, that no finality could attach to the entries in the electoral rolls and they were at best a piece of prima facie evidence liable to be rebutted. In the instant case the entries in electoral rolls were successfully rebutted by the entries in School records: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 26: A.I.R. 1964 Raj. 126.

The entries in Birth and Death Registers are public documents and are admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act and it is not necessary to prove who made the entries and what was the source of his information. The register being a public document, presumption of correctness attaches to it and heavy onus lies on the party who wants to dispute the presumption: I.L.R. 47 Pat. 636: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 481.

The entry in a birth register is no doubt admissible in evidence under the provisions of S. 35 of the Act; but the fact that it relates to a particular person and none other is further required to be proved. The possibility of there being more persons than one of the same village bearing the same name, to whom a son might have been born and his birth recorded must be ruled out. Mere filing of a birth certificate by the opposite party may be sufficient to prove that a son was born in the village to the person named therein, but that will not per se prove that the birth entry relates to a particular person. The mere possibility of the entry that is produced relating to the petitioner is not enough. The connection between the birth entry to be relied upon with the particular person to whom it is sought to apply must be established by evidence aliunde. The assumption without any proof that it relates to a particular person is unwarranted: 1962 All.W.R. (H.C.) 495: 1962 All.L.J 1094.

Age—Proof—Admissibility and value of entry in birth and death register: A.I.R. 1964 Punj. 231.

It is an accepted principle that an entry in the Register of Births as originally recorded or recorded under orders from a Magistrate is not conclusive of the disputed date of birth: A.I.R. 1976 Karn. 231: (1976) 1 Karn.L.J. 283: I.L.R. (1976) Karn. 800.

S. 15(c) of the Bihar Gram Panchayat Act, 1948 having cast upon Panchayats the duty to maintain Registers of Births and Death empowering the Gram Sewak, a public servant, to make entries in the Register, held, such an entry is admissible as well as relevant under S. 35: A.I.R. 1985 Pat. 35: 1985 Pat.L.J.R. 36.

Certificate of the entry of a date of birth, duly made as per the Registration of Births and Deaths Act, 1969 and issued by the Registrar is admissible under S. 35; and though an ossification test may be a surer basis for age than a medical expert's opinion under S. 45, but that opinion cannot be preferred to the positive evidence of the entry in the Register of Births and Deaths: 1993 Cr.L.J. 549 (Madh. Pra.).

Birth Register—Entries therein furnish best evidence of the date of birth and can safely be accepted unless they are shown to be wrong—Birth entries in registers of public Schools though relevant under S. 35 they are of far less evidentiary value and of little avail to show correct age: 1966 Ker.L.J. 545: 1966 Ker.L.T. 1129: A.I.R. 1966 Ker. 305.

A birth register is the conclusive proof of age, but entry does not prove itself and is no proof of age of any particular person unless the persons connected with the entry either by making the entry or giving information come forward and speak regarding the entry and connect it with the individual concerned: (1964) 6 Ori.J.D. 1: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 917: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 102.

It is wrong to assume that mere filing of a copy of an entry in the birth register or the kotwari book proves ipso facto that the entry relates to or proves the birth of the person concerned; evidence has to be introduced to connect that entry with the person whose date of birth has to be established. Connection of the identity of the person under the entry must be established by other evidence: 1962 Nag.L.J. 54: (1962) 64 Bom.L.R. 86: I.L.R. (1961) Bom. 963: A.I.R. 1963 Bom. 25.

It is not safe to accept a mere entry in the birth register as proof of the age of the child concerned without some evidence or admission of the parties about the identity of the parents and the child mentioned in the register: A.I.R. 1957 Ker. 106: 1957 Ker.L.T. 804: 1957 Ker.L.J. 912.

Though entries in a birth register, being a public document, are admissible per se but mere production of their copy does not, as a matter of law, connect them with the person concerned; thus, where it was not shown that the entry pertained to the person concerned, the burden for which lies on the party propounding it, the age of the person cannot be determined as per the birth entry: A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 366; (1978) 5 Cr.L.T. 215: 1978 C.L.R. 146 (P.&H.).

A mere entry in a birth and death register to the effect that child was born to a person without any statement as to the identity of the child is not sufficient to prove the birth of a particular person. The identity of that person has to be fully established by the other evidence: A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 74: I.L.R. (1956) Nag. 282; A.I.R. 1957 Him. Pra. 42: 1957 Cr.L.J. 847.

Where a birth entry merely stated that a girl child was born to a certain villager without any indication or other evidence to show that there was no other person of that name to whom that girl could at that time be born or that the entry pertained to the party who claims to be that daughter, held, the entry had no evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 24: 1975 Rev.L.R. 567.

Ss. 35, 76—Madras Registration of Births and Deaths Act (III of 1899), S. 17(2)—Dispute as to date of death of person—Extract from register of deaths under Madras Act III of 1899 is bound to be accepted as conclusive of the matter when there is no controversy that the extract did not relate to the person, the date of whose death is in question—Death register is covered by language of S. 35: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 679: I.L.R. (1965) 2 Mad. 556: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 205.

Birth Register extract obtained from Municipality is a valuable piece of evidence as regards the age of a person in a kidnapping case and can be relied upon: 1995 Cr.L.J. 632 (Mad.).

When information is given by a village servant to the Registering Officer that a child was born to a male and a female, it is his duty to make entries. The birth register is maintained under Act III of 1889. Under S. 17(2) of the Act, an extract of the entries from the book is proof of the entries. The second proviso to S. 8 provides for the manner in which the entries in the register should be made in the case of an illegitimate child. The registering officer, however, cannot be supposed to have knowledge of the fact that the male was the paramour of the woman or that the servant informed him that the child born was the illegitimate child of the male, and, it cannot be said that when he made the entries, he did not discharge his official duty within the meaning of S. 35, and therefore, the entry is inadmissible: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 308.

Where to show the age of prosecutrix, a copy of entry in the birth Register was produced, held, the facts that (i) the author of the entry in said register was not known and (ii) disputed entry was procured after a lapse of more than six months of the occurrence, did not rule out the possibility of the entry having been manoeuvred or at least made afterwards in the register and in any case it did raise a doubt of which benefit should be given to the accused: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1758 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where none was produced to prove an affidavit, unattested and bearing no date but signed by a person who was proved to be illiterate and incapable of signing, and the admission form and the School's admission register had interpolations, unpaged and in loose sheets, held, the date of birth shown therein could not be relied upon; besides, it being a private School, no presumption of authenticity could be raised about the School record: 1991 Cr.L.J. 687 (Del.).

Where age of the prosecutrix was established by evidence of the radiologist, the Headmaster of her School and certified copy of the entry in the birth register, held, the birth register, kept by the concerned official in discharge of his official duties, could not be excluded from consideration because that official had not been examined; the extract was admissible under S. 35: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 361: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1: 1981 U.J. (S.C.) 63: (1981) 1 S.C.C. 560. See also (1986) 3 Crimes 193 (Madh. Pra.).

The age certificate of the prosecutrix in a rape case issued by the Municipal Corporation on the basis of the Register of Births and Deaths, held, is admissible under S. 35; it is not necessary to prove the certificate by the official who had made the entry: (1991-2) 11 Guj.L.H. 263: (1991-2) 32 Guj.L.R. 1243 (D.B.).

The reason why an entry made by a public servant in a public or other official book, register, or record stating a fact in issue or a relevant fact has been made relevant is that when a public servant makes it himself in the discharge of his official duty, the probability of its being truly and correctly recorded is high. That probability is reduced to a minimum when the public servant himself is illiterate and has to depend on somebody else to make the entry. Accordingly, an entry made in an official record of births maintained by an illiterate chowkidar, by somebody else at his request does not come within S. 35 of the Evidence Act: (1964) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 140: (1965) 1 S.C.A. 378: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 282.

An entry in a Death Register maintained by a Municipality is admissible evidence under S. 35 but by no means conclusive; merely because a party produced a certified copy of the entry which showed a different date of death than pleaded by it in an earlier proceeding does not tantamount to fraud by the party producing it: A.I.R. 1974 Cal. 393: (1973-74) 78 Cal.W.N. 1039 (D.B.).

A Choukidari Hat Chitha Book recording the birth of a child cannot be discarded as of no importance merely because the name of the child is not given there; that certainly is very improper reason; children are normally not named by the time their birth is recorded in the Register: A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 230.

An entry in the Choukidari Hata Chitha becomes admissible under S. 35. But, where an entry of birth or death is made on official record maintained by an illiterate Choukidar by some body else at his request, such entry does not come within S. 35: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 797; 1971 Cr.L.J. 1656 (Raj.) (D.B.); A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 230; A.I.R. 1974 P.&H. 31. See also A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 78: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 339.

But see: The Hath chitha of the Chaukidar containing the date of birth of a person is admissible to prove the age of a person though the entry was made by the defadar, the Chaukidar being illiterate: 14 Pat.L.T. 441: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 473. See also 26 Pat.L.T. 225: A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 489.

Hath chitha—No proof as to who made the entry or whether it was made in the discharge of any official duty—Hath chitha, if admissible in evidence.

The learned Additional Sessions Judge had rejected the version of the prosecution regarding the shooting of Kaleshwar Yadav mainly on the basis of entries in an attested copy of the chaukidar's hath chitha according to which the death of Kaleshwar took place in Gopalpur mauza on 12th August, 1960, that is, three days prior to the occurrence.

Is the hath chitha admissible in evidence?

Held that, the reason why an entry made by a public servant in a public or other official book, register, or record stating a fact in issue or a relevant fact has been made relevant is that when a public servant makes it himself in discharge of his official duty, the probability of its being truly and correctly recorded is high. No proof has been led in this case as to who made the entry and whether the entry was made in the discharge of any official duty. As the High Court rightly pointed out, the Additional Sessions Judge should have dealt with the question of the admissibility of the document. Therefore, the document was inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 326: 1970 B.L.J.R. 144: (1970) 1 S.C.R. 694.

An entry made in a Chaukidar's register of births and deaths is not admissible if it neither purports nor is proved to be signed by the station writer, the register not being one directed to be kept by any law: 22 O.C. 250: 54 I.C. 166; 23 Mad.L.W. 688: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 985 (Birth register). In proof of the age of a person, a certified copy of an extract of an entry in the birth register maintained in the Thana was produced. On a question to its admissibility and evidentiary value, held, that it was admissible under S. 35 being a certified copy of a public document and that though it could not be trusted for the exact date of birth, it was accurate within a few days and was valuable evidence of age: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 1: 1947 O.W.N. 180. Entries in the register of births maintained at the Thana are admissible in evidence under S. 35 as such a register is a public document and the entries are made by an employee of the Police Department. It cannot be said that they are not admissible unless it is proved as to who wrote those entries and what his source of information was: 1947 All.L.J. 76: 48 Cr.L.J. 449; 46 Cr.L.J. 864: A.I.R. 1947 All. 429. Where the copy produced is that of an entry in the register of births and deaths kept by the Circle Registration Officer under para. 306 of the Police Regulations, it is a copy obtained from a public office and is a copy of a public document within the terms of the Evidence Act and is, hence, admissible in evidence: 1940 R.D. 6: 1940 All.L.J. (Supp.) 1.

Where the age and date of birth for admission to a medical course was required to be furnished 'as found in S.S.L.C. or H.S.C. or other records', held, an extract from the Register of Births maintained by a Municipal Committee could also be taken into consideration; its evidentiary value under S. 35 is well settled: (1989-2) 104 Mad.L.W. 257.

Where the date of birth of a student seeking admission to a Medical College was different as recorded in her birth certificate from her School register, held, the University could not insist that it would accept only the age recorded in the School register, as required by its Rules, for the purposes of admission, and not the age recorded in the birth register; the function of every public body is to do elementary justice and observe fair play: 1988 Mah.L.J. 1085.

Entry in death register—Certificate of death—More than thirty years old—Admissibility in evidence—Certificate mentioning caste of deceased—Produced by returned candidate in election petition against him—Person whose death was recorded alleged to be father of returned candidate—Candidate not deposing to it in his statement—Mere production of copy would not, as a matter of law, connect the entry with the returned candidate's father—Document has to be excluded from consideration as evidence of caste of the returned candidate: A.I.R. 1966 Punj. 282.

Death Registers are maintained in all Police Stations under R. 126(a) of the Bihar and Orissa Police Manual; they are public documents and donot require proof as to how the entry in the Register was made; presumption of correctness attaches to it; heavy onus lies on the party disputing the presumption. [A.I.R. 1918 Mad. 451; A.I.R. 1919 Cal. 721; A.I.R. 1925 All. 78; A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 353; A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 481, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1974 Pat. 68.

Entry in Births and Deaths Register, regarding birth of certain person made on information given after expiry of the period prescribed by S. 7, Bengal Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1873—Still it is admissible in evidence under S. 35 as the Registrar was maintained by public servant, namely, the Registrar in the discharge of his official duty: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 353.

Birth certificate.—The birth certificate does not prove itself and is no proof of age of any particular person unless the person connected with that entry either by making the entry or giving information comes forward and speaks to the entry and connects the entry with the individual concerned: A.I.R. 1949 Ori. 22: 50 Cr.L.J. 650.

Birth certificate—Proof. See (1983) 1 Karn.L.J. 344.

Birth certificate—Certified copy—Certified copy signed by Chief Executive Officer of Municipal Corporation—It is automatic evidence as public document under conjoint effect of Ss. 35 and 77—It is conclusive evidence unless disproved: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292.

Where a respectable person, not shown to have any statutory duty to keep record of births and deaths, issued a certificate of death of the deceased whose family once resided in the respectable person's place, held, does not satisfy the requirements of S. 35: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1234: (1984) 3 S.C.C. 619: 1984 U.J. (S.C.) 687: (1984) 26 Del.L.T. 118: (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 181.

Entry of parentage.—Where the fact to be determined is the paternity of a person, held, entries of parentage made in the birth registers or School admission registers are of no evidentiary value unless they are proved by evidence of a person who had special means of knowledge as to the relationship or the source of that knowledge; in the absence of such evidence, the entries or recitals therein cannot by themselves be treated as substantive evidence; entries relating to relationship or paternity are extraneous to what is strictly enjoined to be recorded in those registers: A.I.R. 1977 Karn. 115: (1977) 1 Karn.L.J. 206 (D.B.).

Though a certified copy of an entry in a birth register, a public document required to be maintained by public officials, may be a relevant fact but not sufficient to establish the reliability of its contents; all that would depend as to the time when the entry was made and the character of the informant; if the entry is recent and information was given by the mother or her well wishers or close relations, it would have little evidentiary value if it is impeached by the purported father; but if it is made by the father or his well wishers, it would amount to either admission of paternity by the father or his well-wishers, having a higher evidentiary value: 1984 Hindu L.R. 655 (Ker.).

Entry in birth register—Column requiring Officer to record name of father of new born child—Father's name entered as A son of B—Held, entry was not admissible with reference to parentage of A: I.L.R. (1969) 1 Mad. 459: (1970) 1 M.L.J. 105: A.I.R. 1969 Mad. 329 (D.B.).

An entry in a birth register mentioning the names of the father and mother of a new-born child made by a villageMunsif in the course of his official duty is a public document and admissible under S. 35. The authenticity of this entry assumes importance when it was produced not from the custody of the village Munsif but from the office of the Registrar of Assurances; the entry cannot be challenged: 1978 Cr.L.J. 752: 1978 M.L.J. (Cr.) 327: 1977 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 217.

Where the entry in the birth register contained name of the child though not required under law and the name of the informant was left blank, held, no presumption can be raised that the child was the progeny of the purported father; there must be other independent evidence to connect the child with the birth entry and prove his parentage: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 175 (D.B.).

The factum of marriage between the parents of a child cannot be proved by the entry of the child's birth in the birth register; particulars other than that of the birth of the child are not strictly covered by the entries; marriage of the child's parents is not proved by birth entries. [A.I.R. 1969 Mad. 329 (D.B.); (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 175 (D.B.), Foll.]: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 17.

When X was shown as daughter of Y in the School record, more than 30 years old, prepared and maintained when X was minor and there was no circumstance to create any doubt about it, held, X was to be treated as daughter of Y: (1988) 1 Bom.C.R. 421.

A statement made by the father of the child to the Vaccination Register which is given three years after the birth of the child is not admissible for the purpose of proving the paternity of the child: 1929 Mad.W.N. 696: A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 194.

Where the dispute in a matrimonial cause for restitution of conjugal rights at the wife's instance involved her earlier marriage having been automatically dissolved under custom, the factum of the second marriage was sought inter alia to be proved by a certified copy of the birth entry which was only tendered in evidence by the wife at the fag end of the trial as additional evidence, held, in the absence of any material on record as to who was the informant, no reliance could be placed on the entry to prove the identity of her husband as father of her son; the register of births is no doubt a prima facie evidence but it is not conclusive; more so when such entry attributes parentage of the child to a man outside the lawful wedlock as her earlier marriage to her husband's brother was validly subsisting: A.I.R. 1987 P.&H. 37: (1986) 90 Punj.L.R. 581: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 594.

Entries to prove religion.—Entry in death register proved to be prepared in a somewhat casual way is of little value: A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 636. Entries in a death register are at best reliable only with regard to the date of death and the fact of death. It is not safe to rely on them for the purpose of proving the religion of a particular person in a case in which there is much conflicting evidence as to his religion: A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 630: 67 M.L.J. 389; (1987) 100 Mad.L.W. 895.

6. School record.—The Education Code enjoins upon the Head-master of each School to prepare and maintain an admission register of the pupils admitted to that particular School. Of the several particulars to be entered in such a register the date of birth of the pupil as stated by the parent or guardian is an important item. Thus, there can be no doubt that the admission register is a public record maintained by the head of the institution who is duty bound to maintain such a register containing certain particulars relating to each pupil as required by the Education Code. In making such entries in the admission register the head of the institution, who is a public servant, is merely discharging his official duty. The date of birth as entered in such an official record is a relevant fact as contemplated by S. 35 of the Evidence Act and the same can be proved by production of that record. The entry thus made in such an official record by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, has to be presumed to be correct in the absence of other reliable evidence to the contrary. Where the father who presented the application for getting the pupil admitted to the School, is no more, the particulars as stated by him in his application, can be proved and admitted in evidence under S. 32 by the production of the document containing those statements: I.L.R. (1957) Ker. 367: A.I.R. 1957 Ker. 103.

Since every School is under statutory compulsion to maintain registers of admissions together with the prescribed particulars, held, they constitute official records admissible under S. 35: A.I.R. 1983 Andh. Pra. 181: (1983) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 78 (D.B.).

An entry in a School register which is maintained by a recognised School is evidence of the date of birth of a pupil: 1959 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 143.

Admission register in a School is maintained as per Government Rules in the usual course of business and the true copy of the entry therein signed and issued by the Headmaster of the School after verification with the original is relevant and admissible under S. 35: 1966 Cr.L.J. 210 (2) (Ker.).

An entry in the scholar's register made by the father since deceased as regards his son's age is admissible as one made in a public register made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty: 114 I.C. 801: A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 113; 28 Nag.L.R. 127: A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 117; 12 Mys.L.J. 133: 39 Mys.H.C.R. 406.

Where the date of birth in the scholar's register is entered on information given by the parents, a certified copy thereof has a evidentiary value for determining the age of the scholar; however, if that information came from a stranger who had no special means of knowledge of the date of birth, the entry has no evidentiary value whatsoever; mere proof of documents is no proof of their contents: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1796.

A School register containing an entry as to the age of a student is admissible to prove his age but much value cannot be attached to it if it is not clear on whose statements the age was recorded: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 41: 72 Cal.L.J. 208; A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 38.

The entries as to the age of pupils in the High School registers though they might have been merely copied from the Secondary School registers are admissible as entries made by a public servant in public or official register in the discharge of his official duty. Whether he had any special means of knowledge so as to make the entry relevant under S. 32(5) does not affect the admissibility of the entry under S. 35 though it may affect its value. S. 35 stands by itself independently of S. 32(5): 1940 Nag.L.J. 150: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 217. See also A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 38.

An entry in a School register stating a fact in issue or a relevant fact, made by a public servant on official duty or by any other person performing a duty specially enjoined by the law upon him, is relevant under S. 35; but how much weight should be attached to it is a pure question of fact: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 272: 1972 W.L.N. 245: 1972 Raj.L.W. 573 (D.B.); 1976 Rev.L.R. 119 .

Question regarding age of girl—Certified copies from School register and affidavit by father stating date of her birth and statement of girl to Police with regard to her age amount to evidence under Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1964) 2 All. 423: (1964) 5 S.C.R. 86: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1625.

Where S. 35 properly comes into play, an entry made by a public servant in any public or official book in the discharge of his official duty (Entry as to age of student in School register of Government School) becomes relevant by itself, and no other proof of such entry is required as a matter of law by Evidence Act; but this does not exclude the possibility that such an entry may become admissible otherwise if it is properly proved to have been made by a person ordinarily competent to make it: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 26: A.I.R. 1964 Raj. 126.

Entry in School register is public record and is admissible in evidence under S. 35: 1969 Kash.L.J. 27 (J.&K.).

In actual life it often happens that persons give false age of the boy at the time of his admission to a School so that later in life he would have an advantage when seeking public service for which a minimum age for eligibility is often prescribed. The Court cannot ignore this fact while assessing the value of the entry and it would be improper for the Court to base any conclusion on the basis of the entry, when it is alleged that the entry was made upon false information supplied with the above motive: (1964) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 140: (1965) 1 S.C.A. 378: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 282.

It is well known that School certificates do not afford reliable proof of age and it often happens that the correct age is not disclosed to the School authorities and a lower age is mentioned in these certificates: 1957 All.L.J. 383: 1957 All.W.R. (H.C.) 339.

A presumption may certainly be drawn that the School admission registers are based upon information furnished in the application seeking admission to the School; in the absence of any material on record to indicate that the date of birth so furnished was not correct or there was a possible motive to give a wrong date of birth, its truth cannot be doubted in every case merely because it is not uncommon to give lower age—for which there is absolutely no evidence, either oral or documentary—or that law provides alteration of the date of birth by Railway servants: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 34 (S.N.).

Under R. 52 of the Madras Educational Rules (21st Edition, 1958), every School is required to keep a register of admissions and withdrawals in the form prescribed in Appendix VI. The register of a Municipal High School is, therefore, an official register. Under S. 358 of the District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), every Municipal officer or servant shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of S. 21 of the I.P.Code. It follows that the clerk of the Municipal High School was a public servant and that he maintained the register in the discharge of his official duty. The register being an official register, the entries therein are relevant under S. 35 of the Evidence Act. The section embodies an exception to the rule of hearsay and, if its requirements are satisfied, it is unnecessary for the purpose of proving the entries that the clerk who has made the entries himself should be called as a witness. It is, however, only as a matter of probability and the ground that the public servant, who maintained the register, would not have omitted any transaction which has to be entered in it that the absence of entries becomes relevant under S. 9 or S. 11 of the Evidence Act. But the absence of entries by itself may be capable of some other explanation such as that the public servant was not enjoined to enter every transaction or was negligent or had some motive to omit some of the transactions. It is from this point of view that the non-examination of the clerk that maintained the register becomes material: (1959) 2 An.W.R. 249: 1959 M.L.J. (Cr.) 651: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 253.

Where the Headmaster proving the date of birth from the School records, free from any discrepancy was not shown to have any motive or interest, held, his evidence could be safely acted upon: A.I.R. 1983 Andh. Pra. 181: (1983) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 78 (D.B.). But where the Headmaster did not produce material on basis of which entry was made in School register, held, no reliance could be placed on it: 1980 W.L.N. (U.C.) 292 (Raj.).

Where an accused child's age is to be determined and anti-litem motam entries in two Schools (St. Teressa Primary School, Ajmer and St. Paul's School, Jaipur) where he was admitted one after the other and which were supported by other documents kept by the Schools, showed same date of his birth, held, their genuineness could not be doubted; they were relevant and admissible and could not be brushed aside merely because the records were not maintained by a public officer; under S. 35, all that is necessary is that the documents should have been maintained regularly by a person whose duty is to maintain the record; there is no legal requirement that they should be maintained by a public officer only; that is a requirement only for public documents. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1625 and A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 18, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1057: 1982 Cr.L.J. 994: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 202: 1982 U.J. (S.C.) 426.

Public documents—Official records—Register for admission and withdrawal in a Municipal School and application for admission made to such School duly endorsed by the Headmaster are public documents—Proof by secondary evidence permissible: (1963) 2 An.W.R. 307: (1963) 2 An.L.T. 442: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53.

In an election petition, challenging the election of the respondent to the State Assembly, on the ground inter alia, that some of the votes polled were minor votes that is, votes of those who, though registered as electors on the electoral roll, had not completed twenty-one years of age on the qualifying date, the admission registers of Government Schools being admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, could not be discarded on the ground that the petitioner failed to examine the parents or guardian in support of the School records.

The oral evidence of the voters alone, who according to the electoral roll were adults and most of whom have voted, that the relevant entries in the School registers showing them as minors are erroneous or incorrect is as unsafe to be acted upon, as the evidence of those who after voting as adults come forward and say that they were minors and rely on the registers.

Entries in the School registers are of far less evidentiary value than the entries in the electoral roll. On a close study of the relevant provisions of the Travancore Education Code pursuant to which entries were made in the admission registers and of the Representation of the People Act, 1950 and of the Representation of the People (Preparation of Electoral Rolls) Rules framed thereunder according to which the electoral rolls are compiled, the same conclusion is reached.

Considerations are different in the case of the entries in birth registers. Those entries furnish the best evidence of the date of the birth and can safely be accepted unless they are shown to be wrong. If according to the entry in the birth register an elector whose vote has been cast is below the age of 21 on the qualifying date, then a case of minor vote is established.

Often the admission register, where available, is the sole evidence or reliable evidence as to a man's age on which a Court of law might choose to act, depending on the facts and circumstances of the case. The birth register extracts, however, are the most dependable evidence as to age. But in determining whether a person had completed 21 years of age on the qualifying date or not, as between the competing entries in the electoral roll and the admission register, uncorroborated by anything else, the former is entitled to greater probative value than the latter: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Ker. 65: 1962 Ker.L.J. 810: A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 18.

Where a Doctor, stating in his examination-in-chief that the accused was aged between 18 and 20 years, was not cross-examined, it was in his examination by the Court that the accused had contended that he was only 15 years of age and the accused produced a School certificate at the stage of seeking special leave to appeal, held, since the certificate mentioned the accused's date of birth on the basis of transfer certificate from another School whose name was not mentioned, the certificate could not be relied upon to prove the accused's age: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2448: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2886.

The plaintiff was compelled to retire from service with the defendant on grounds of his attaining the age of 60 years. The year of his birth was entered in the staff card on the statements made by the plaintiff himself. The plaintiff alleged that he was born much later and produced a document relating to the entry in the School Admission Register. Both the documents were found to be genuine. However, no one had been examined to prove that the plaintiff was actually born on that date nor had any one been examined to prove that he made the statement before the School authorities at the time of plaintiff's admission and that the statement made by him was correct.

Held, that the mere entry in the School Admission Register could not be taken to be conclusive to prove the allegation that he was born on that date and, hence, the lower Court committed an error of law in preferring the entry in the School Admission Register to that of staff card: A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 458.

Where a Railway employee on joining in 1955 declared his date of birth as 6-9-1930 which he also reaffirmed in his provident fund withdrawal form, dated 20-2-1980, and had not even availed the opportunity provided by the Railway Board in 1972 to literate employees to apply, latest by 31-7-1973, for correction of their date of birth, and it was only on 25-12-1985 and 12-3-1987 that he made representations for correction of his date of birth but it was only in 1988 that he relied on three school leaving certificates belatedly procured by and containing contradictory assertions, one of the certificates having been prepared on 19-9-1988, a mere 11 days before his retirement had become due, held, the case was clearly covered by A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 1367, but the Tribunal, ignoring it, deemed the Railway servant not to have been superannuated and allowed him reliefs on that basis while in view of the three decades unexplained delay and unsatisfactory nature of the evidence adduced by him the case was liable to be dismissed: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 1349.

Entries in admission registers kept in private Schools cannot be considered as entries made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties. Nor can it be said that these registers are kept in the performance of a duty specifically enjoined by the law of the country within the meaning of S. 35, Evidence Act. The rules in pursuance of which these registers are kept do not show that they have been framed, in the exercise of any statutory power by the Government of Madras. In these circumstances the rules cannot be said to be statutory rules and thus, law within the meaning of S. 35: 1958 Ker.L.T. 388: I.L.R. (1958) Ker. 916: A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 12.

An employee in a School other than a Government or a State School is not a public servant and any entry in its register made by him is not one made in a public or official register by 'a public servant' in the discharge of his official duty. Hence, entries in registers of Schools other than Government or State Schools are not admissible: 1940 Rang.L.R. 481: A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 191. See also I.L.R. (1941) 1 Cal. 234: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 41.

Private School teachers are not public servants and the registers of the students' dates of birth are neither public nor official registers—Entries made therein by the teachers are not admissible under S. 35: A.I.R. 1975 P.&H. 198: (1975) 77 Punj.L.R. 75.

An entry in the record of a private School as to the age of a student, held, may be admissible under S. 35 if the School is run under the Education Code framed by or under the authority of the State Government. [A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 1; A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 21, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1971 J.&K. 62 (D.B.).

Entry of birth date in non-Government School's General Register under Statutory Rules—Entry admissible under S. 35—However, its evidentiary value depends on other factors—Kidnapping case—Parents of girl not examined as to her age—Entry held could not be held to have proved the age: A.I.R. 1970 Guj. 178: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1348 (D.B.).

School leaving certificates and transfer certificates issued by (Government) School authorities giving the date of birth are admissible proof of age under S. 35; documents maintained by public servants in discharge of official duties are relevant and admissible without being proved by the public servants as witnesses: (1982) 1 Karn.L.J. 210: 1982 Hindu L.R. 248 (D.B.).

Date of birth recorded in the transfer certificate issued by the School authorities is to be accepted as true: (1995-1) 43 B.L.J.R. 701.

Where the School Leaving Certificate was exhibited and duly proved in accordance with law, held, it was not necessary to examine the Headmaster who had issued it; the certificate would speak for itself; if the other party impeaches its contents, burden would be on it to disprove them: A.I.R. 1978 All. 472.

School certificates duly prepared according to authority are admissible: 149 I.C. 660: A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 44. Evidentiary value of entry as to age in School Register, see I.L.R. 14 Lah. 473: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 601. See also (1936) 38 Punj.L.R. 69: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 598; A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 41: I.L.R. The School certificate or the admission form is not a conclusive evidence of the age when it is based on no evidence at all: 1992 Cr.L.J. 4073 (Del.).

Applicability—Age, proof of—Unproved and unexhibited School certificate cannot be relied upon. [Criminal Appeal No. 913 of 1966 (Punjab and Haryana), Reversed]: (1970) 1 S.C.W.R. 767: 1970 Cr.L.J. 991: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1029.

Matriculation certificate and entries in admission register of Schools—They are admissible in evidence: 1966 B.L.J.R. 571: A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 383; A.I.R. 1962 Cal. 265: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1165.

Once the matriculation certificate is produced, in absence of any cogent reason, held, it should ordinarily be accepted as correct in respect of date of birth shown therein: (1990-91) 95 Cal.W.N. 142: (1990) 2 Cal.H.N. 412.

Matriculation certificate held admissible as proof of age of the person concerned: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 1053: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 211; A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 533: (1957-58) 62 Cal.W.N. 336.

The matriculation certificate is only a piece of evidence and the Government, although it normally accepts it, may for good reason decline to consider it as setting out the true date of birth but not on the ground that it was not a party to the proceeding taken by the University for correcting the matriculation certificate: 1976 Lab.I.C. 1233: I.L.R. (1975) Him. Pra. 641 (D.B.).

Though for proof of age the High School certificate is a piece of evidence which may be considered but it is not a conclusive proof, especially when there is contrary evidence: 1979 W.L.N. 667 (Raj.) (D.B.); 1974 Lab.I.C. 1190 (D.B.). See also A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1251 reversing (1980) 1 Serv.L.R. 251 (Del.).

7. Record-of-rights.—It is true that a presumption of correctness attaches to entries appearing in the record-of-rights but such entries are not the foundations of title but are mere items of evidence. The presumption raised by them is not conclusive, but 'prima facie' merely, and while it must prevail where there is no rebutting evidence, it may be repelled by other evidence and circumstances showing that the entries are not correct: (1954) 56 Punj.L.R. 468: A.I.R. 1955 Punj. 37.

There is no abstract principle that whatever will appear in the record-of-rights will be presumed to be correct when it is shown by evidence that the entries are not correct: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1712; A.I.R. 1994 Sikkim 6 (D.B.).

An entry in record-of-rights neither creates nor extinguishes a right; it merely records that right to be used as evidence in future. A fard abpashi does the same in regard to irrigation. The presumption of its correctness is rebuttable. But it cannot be contended that such presumption refers to the point of time when it was prepared for that would completely negative the presumption and render wholly waste the energy spent in preparing the records of rights. However, as laid down by the Supreme Court in 1966 B.L.J.R. 147, if a state of thing is shown to exist at a certain time, an inference of its continuity within a reasonably proximate time, forwards or backwards, may be drawn, though that presumption would weaken with the passage of time: A.I.R. 1980 Pat. 89: 1979 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 584: 1979 B.L.J. 619.

Record-of-rights—Entries in—Whether conclusive proof as to the rights and customs recorded therein: 1957 Pat.L.R. 288.

Though the record-of-rights is not a document of title, the Court is perfectly entitled to take into consideration the entry in the record-of-rights for coming to the conclusion that certain person was the 'raiyat' of the land in question: 1954 B.L.J.R. 225: A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 481.

It is entry in the record-of-rights and not an entry in the Tenancy Register that has presumptive value: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 649 (Guj.).

Entry in record-of-rights—Evidentiary value—Rebuttal of presumption—Admissibility of prior facts. See A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 279.

Record-of-rights—Conclusiveness—Conclusiveness attaches to character of land and not to nature of title. See A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 482.

The parchas, or the draft record-of-rights, issued by public officers in due discharge of duties prescribed under the Survey and Settlement Manual, are admissible under S. 35; but they have no presumptive value of correctness as is attached to the finally published record of rights under S. 117(3) of the Orissa Tenancy Act; the only, inference to be drawn is that the person to whom the Parchas were issued was then found to be in possession: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 794.

Entries made in draft record-of-rights, which are made by public servants in discharge of their public duties, are relevant evidence under S. 35: A.I.R. 1979 Cal. 50.

Where the entry in the record-of-rights shows the suit lands in the name of plaintiff, the onus is on the defendant to prove that the said entry in favour of the plaintiff is not correct: A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 29.

Record-of-rights—Presumption of correctness of entry—Party relying on presumption of correctness need not prove foundation or basis of correctness: (1964-65) 69 Cal.W.N. 210: A.I.R. 1965 Cal. 328.

Entries in record-of-rights—Evidentiary value under S. 30(3), C.P. Land Revenue Act—Entries can be presumed to be correct until the contrary is shown: (1962) 64 Bom.L.R. 322: I.L.R. (1962) Bom. 417: A.I.R. 1963 Bom. 100.

Presumption and onus of proof—Record-of-rights showing land in plaintiff's name—Presumption is in favour of plaintiff that he holds the land in the right mentioned therein—Onus lies on defendant to prove his own independent title to half land and his alleged korfa right to the other half under an agreement alleged by him: A.I.R. 1968 Tripura 5.

Record-of-rights—Particular land of certain khata recorded as jointly belonging to branches of L and B—Such entry must be deemed to be correct unless contrary is shown—Mere fact of possession is not sufficient to rebut presumption attached to entry in record of rights—(Tenancy Laws—Bihar Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 103-B): A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 450.

When the factum of partition was evidenced by entries in the record-of-rights, which was maintained in official course of business, held, said entries is a relevant piece of documentary evidence in support of the oral evidence given by the respondent and his brother to prove the factum of partition: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 1728.

Record-of-rights—Entries in—Conflict between entries—Evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 361. See also (1979) 2 Cal.L.J. 44.

Record-of-rights—Order under Record-of-Rights Act directing name of respondent to be entered in the record—Order is by no means conclusive—It is always open to petitioner to institute a suit to establish his title—In that suit such order can have no effect since title will be decided therein on evidence provided by parties: (1969) 2 Mys.L.J. 198.

Where registers of Government properties maintained by the Cantonment area were not shown to have been prepared after notice to individual owners of properties and there was no Act or Rule which permitted issuance of a public notice, held, no presumption of truth is attached to entries in such registers; the registers are not record-of-rights under the Land Acquisition Act: A.I.R. 1980 Bom. 9 (D.B.).

Dag chithas prepared under R. 66 of the Manipur Land Revenue and Land Reforms Rules, 1961, constitute an important basic step in the preparation of the 'record-of-rights' which expression, according to R. 56, consists of jamabandi and tenants khatian. The dag chithas without dispute do not form part of record-of-rights. But equally indisputably the dag chithas are documents in the nature of revenue records and they are prepared by public servants in discharge of their statutory functions and as such they are relevant under S. 35 of the Evidence Act. They cannot be declared inadmissible because of their non-publication for purpose of attestation: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 7.

Entry in dag chitha maintained under Manipur Land Revenue and Land Reforms Rules—Public document—Evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 79.

Record-of-rights like dag chitha and jamabandi have presumptive value as to the possession of persons named there as being in possession of particular lands: A.I.R. 1975 Gau. 47(D.B.).

The entry made in the record-of-rights in respect of the property A, a khorposh grant, that they are kabilzapti properties on failure of legitimate descendants of the original grantee is not only admissible in evidence but has a much higher value, namely, that it carries with it the presumption of correctness and will prevail until rebutted by proper evidence. In view of S. 81(j), Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act it would be difficult to hold that the entry with regard to primogeniture or kabilzapti properties does not constitute an incident of the properties and that as such there can be no presumption attaching to such an entry: 1953 B.L.J.R. 531: A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 173.

As the law does not require valuation to be given in the register of record-of-rights, held, entries as to valuation are irrelevant and, therefore, inadmissible: 146 I.C. 152: A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 310.

Tenancy Laws—Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1964, S. 29—Proceedings for preparation of record-of-rights—Though record-of-rights is only a piece of evidence, its evidential value will be great with passage of time and might be practically conclusive in respect of rights of parties—Proceedings for preparation of record-of-rights are, therefore, quasi-judicial in character and amenable to be quashed in certiorari: 1966 Ker.L.T. 1051.

Where the record-of-rights contained no entry that the defendant was in possession of land nor was there any receipts in token of having paid rent therefor and the evidence adduced by him was not sufficient to rebut the plaintiff's possession as shown in the record-of-rights, held, the finding of fact by the Courts below that the defendant was tenant in possession could not be sustained in second appeal: 1981 Sim.L.C. 426.

'Record-of-rights'—Tabdilat papers—Maintained under Revenue Rules, these are public documents—Entry therein showing separate mutations in favour of different persons—Agreement under which they claim also referred to in the papers—Entry proves that there existed such a document and that mutation was made in favour of such persons—Entry does not lose its evidentiary value if the document referred to cannot be produced: I.L.R. (1966) Cut. 816: 33 Cut.L.T. 960.

Record-of-rights—Entries in—Admissible even though the record is not finally published: A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 84.

Record-of-rights and jamabandi papers: 31 Nag.L.R. (Supp.) 202: 163 I.C. 179: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 71.

Entry in record-of-rights prepared for diary purposes, value of. See (1945-46) 50 Cal.W.N. 382: A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 326. Survey register: 98 I.C. 166: A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 204; (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 419: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 345; (1935-36) 40 Cal.W.N. 821.

Record-of-rights—Entries in—Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879, S. 135-J—Section raises presumption of correctness of entries: (1969) 2 Mys.L.J. 202.

8. Survey record.—The value to be attached to entries in Survey Records depends on the evidence and probabilities in each case; there is no hard and fast rule governing it. The entries are no doubt entitled to weight as having been made in the ordinary course of official duty several years ago, there being no motive or reason at that time for anything being recorded contrary to existing facts. The entries while they are admissible as a piece of evidence and a valuable piece of evidence, cannot be conclusive. It is not part of the duty of Survey Officers to determine questions of title or the nature of the rights of persons in occupation of the lands. Whether the occupants are khadim or permanent tenants is a question which has to be decided on a consideration of materials which may be of a varied kind with respect to the several lands in a village. The presumption in the case of lands in a jodi village is against permanent tenancy and in the absence of satisfactory proof that any one has acquired a particular right to the land, the land would be at the absolute disposal of the jodidar: I.L.R. (1952) Mys. 172: A.I.R. 1953 Mys. 44: 30 Mys.L.J. 115.

The entry in a survey record or khewat raises a presumption that the particulars recorded therein were right but such presumption may be rebutted: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 589: A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 182: 64 M.L.J. 450 (P.C.). See also A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 671: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 51.

Discrepancy between Gangetic Survey Map and later Cadastral Survey Map—Preference: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 671: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 51.

Where the Thak and revenue survey maps differ and the Thak map agrees with the local landmarks, the Thak map and the boundary shown in it can be accepted in preference to the revenue survey map and the boundary ascertained by the pleader commissioner upon its basis: 73 Cr.L.J. 47.

Map prepared under Calcutta Survey Act, 1887, depicting certain property—Map, though admissible has no presumption of correctness attached to it: (1964-65) 69 Cal.W.N. 759.

9. Settlement record.—Entries in the settlement records are not by themselves conclusive evidence of the facts stated therein; they may only supply gap: (1988) 36 B.L.J.R. 539.

The Settlement record is not a document of title. It does not create or extinguish title to land. At the most, it may be relevant as some evidence of title to the recorded Dags and may raise a presumption of title by virtue of the statutory presumption of correctness attaching to its entries under S. 103-B (5), Bengal Tenancy Act. Such evidence, however, is rebuttable and so also the presumption and they may be effectively rebutted by production of contrary evidence. An admission by the party (in whose favour the settlement entry stands) declaring that he had or has no title or possession in the disputed property and that the settlement entry to the contrary effect, in his favour is incorrect, save where such admission can be explained or shown to be wrong, usually binds him and it is normally the best evidence against him on the point, and it is certainly relevant and ordinarily quite sufficient to rebut the presumption of correctness of the record of rights. The admission is certainly relevant and in the normal course of things, it ought to prevail over the record: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 793: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 669.

The Survey and Settlement Report is a public document and is admissible in evidence. The official reports regarding the nature of the estate are valuable and in many cases the best evidence of facts stated therein, but opinion therein expressed should not be treated as conclusive in respect of matters requiring judicial determination. [A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 260 and A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 10 and (S.) A.I.R. 1955 Ori. 97, Foll.]. For the Settlement authorities to determine the net annual yield different modes are available. One mode of determining may be more accurate than another mode. But it cannot be said that the mode adopted by them which is incorporated in the report for determination of the out-turn is inadmissible or has no probative value at all: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 785: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 49.

The fact that entries in the settlement records show that the Math was the recorded owner in respect of certain properties by itself leads to a strong presumption in favour of the Math: 25 Cut.L.T. 345.

Where the western strip of land in question was bereft of graves and the oral evidence was also to the effect that in the recent past as well burials had been made in the eastern portion, held, mere absence of any demarcation line between the two portions or mere entry in the settlement khasra of qabristan and masjid could not lead to the conclusion that the entire land was in use since time immemorial as graveyard: A.I.R. 1981 All. 52.

Where no right existed, settlement entries by themselves will not create rights and their value on the question of jointness or separation of the members of the family is slight. But there is a slight difference between the presumption attaching the settlement entries made in areas where the Orissa Tenancy Act is in force and in areas like South Orissa where the Madras Estates Land Act is in force and in Sambalpur district where the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881 is in force. The difference in language between the three Acts is very marked. In North Orissa, the presumption of correctness of settlement entry can be rebutted only by evidence and not by mere general presumptions under the ordinary law.

The question as to whether a settlement entry in rebuttal is essentially a question of fact and the conduct of the parties both before and after the making of the settlement entries is undoubtedly very relevant. Where the party does not rely on settlement entries but also the conduct prior and subsequent to the settlement entries of persons at whose instance the entries were made, presumption of correctness is confirmed: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

Patta of property in settlement records by itself cannot confer title to property. It is of no consequence in adjudicating the proprietary right in respect of property in a suit for possession: 1969 Ker.L.R. 894.

Where the entry in the current settlement definitely shows that a uniform rent was being realised as the annual rent of a holding, such entry raised a presumption that the holding has been held on an invariable rent. The mere fact that some counterfoils of rent receipts, which are produced by the landlord contain entries showing that a higher rent was realised cannot outweigh the value to be attached to the settlement entry particularly when the rent receipt counterfoils are not above suspicion or challenge and are not duly proved: A.I.R. 1951 Ori. 262: 18 Cut.L.T. 117.

10. Revenue record.—Though revenue record entries should generally be accepted at their face value but the presumption of truth attaches to genuine and not forged or fraudulent entries; the distinction, fine but real, is that though one cannot challenge the entry as incorrect but one can always impugn it as having been made fraudulently or surreptitiously; fraud and forgery would rob the entry of all its legal effect: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1485: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 642: 1976 (U.J.) S.C. 573.

The entries in annual Revenue Records are no evidence of title for they are kept for fiscal purposes. At any rate, on question of title, the evidentiary value of revenue papers varies with circumstances. Where entries in them are made after a most careful public enquiry, they are cogent evidence of the facts recorded though not conclusive. However, where from an entry in a revenue register the fountain source of right cannot be traced, it is not safe to rely upon the entry itself but recourse must be had to the origin of the entry itself: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 105.

Entries in revenue documents are not conclusive but their importance in a case for possession cannot be denied: I.L.R. 8 Rang. 556: A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 40. Entries in parapetrak papers and revenue receipts have always been looked upon with considerable reliance in the Hyderabad High Court, as such entries are made in the discharge of official duties to keep up the Revenue record of the cultivators. They are of high evidentiary value unless rebutted effectively by evidence: A.I.R. 1952 Hyd. 75.

The entries in the survey and settlement records and other documents maintained by revenue department are not evidence of title: 15 Law Rep. 118: (1968) 2 Mys.L.J. 439.

The record of the Revenue Authorities is not conclusive of title. It is only a record of possession and is made for fiscal purposes: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 246.

Revenue authorities do not hold judicial proceedings; they are fiscal enquiries to ascertain as to which claimant should be put in possession of immovable property with better certainty of realising the revenue from him. Thus, certified copies of such proceedings or of extracts from the revenue records are not conclusive of title; they are only prima facie evidence of possession and title and conclusive only in the revenue proceedings, not in civil Courts where the same is to be determined in the light of all relevant evidence: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 6 (Andh. Pra.).

The entries in the revenue records, though they may be relevant evidence under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, are not evidence of title. Though the entries in the Diglot Register may be evidence, they are by themselves not conclusive evidence of the facts which they purport to record: A.I.R. 1961 Andh. Pra. 361.

Revenue Officer inspecting land to be acquired—His report is not admissible as evidence under S. 35: (1966) 2 An. W.R. 186: A.I.R. 1967 Andh. Pra. 230.

Reports made by Revenue officers though not regarded as having judicial authority where they express opinions on the private rights of the parties are entitled to great consideration being reports of public officers made in the course of their duties in so far as they supply information of official proceedings and historical facts and also in so far as they are relevant to explain the conduct and acts of the parties in relation to them and the proceedings of the Government founded on them: I.L.R. (1952) Nag. 318: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 271.

Reports submitted by a Revenue Inspector and a Tahsildar as to the state or features of a place after local inspection are clearly admissible in evidence under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, although on the particular facts noticed by them, they may be a weak piece of evidence unless the officers themselves come forward as witness and face a cross-examination regarding the facts said to have been noticed by them at the time of their local inspection: 17 Cut.L.T. 120. Revenue records are admissible in evidence under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, if it is shown that under the rules or the law in force it was a part of the duty of the officer preparing them to mention the facts which appear therein: A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 91: I.L.R. (1951) Raj. 166.

The statement of the Patwari, the report of the Tahsildar and the order of the S.D.O. in regard to the entries relating to the disappearance of pattis whose names are entered in the Revenue records, are all acts prescribed by the rules as part of the official duties of the officers concerned and would, thus, be admissible in evidence, where the disappearance of the party is in question: 1947 O.W.N. 242.

Report of the Revenue Supervisor who was directed by the Tahsildar in a proceeding under the Orissa Land Reforms Act, to report about possession is admissible but it is not of any evidentiary value so far as factum of possession is concerned, in view of the fact that the report is based upon evidence gathered at the spot and not on his personal knowledge: (1974) 1 Cut.W.R. 115: 41 Cut.L.T. 52.

The mutation of names is not conclusive and the civil Court can go behind the pattas issued by the Revenue Authorities: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 56.

The order of the Ruler of Mandi sanctioning mutation in favour of A and directing that the name of B be recorded as tenant of A would not relieve A of the burden to establish his case affirmatively, by cogent and convincing evidence: A.I.R. 1956 Him. Pra. 50.

The object of mutation is to keep entries in the record of rights uptodate; presumption of correctness attaches to record of rights under the Land Revenue Act. But entries in the record of rights or in mutation do not by themselves determine the right and title; they are rebuttable. Thus, where a mutation based on oral gift of land indicated that both the donor and the donee had acknowledged the factum of gift but the donor denied the same on oath in the civil Court and neither the Revenue officer nor the person who had identified the donor and the donee were examined as witnesses, held, much reliance could not be placed on the mutation proceedings: A.I.R. 1982 Him. Pra. 38: 1982 Punj.L.J. 26.

Admission or consent in relation to possession in mutation proceedings, under S. 34 of the U.P. Land Revenue Act (1901), held, is admissible in title suits: 1979 All.L.J. 640.

For determining under S. 2(f) of the Punjab Occupancy Tenants (Vesting of Proprietary Rights) Act, 1953 as to who is an occupancy tenant, the entry in the revenue record, is final and conclusive: I.L.R. (1985) Him. Pra. 6 (D.B.).

Entries made in the mutation register by a Patwari in the discharge of his public duties or the orders passed thereon by the Revenue Officer is indisputably relevant evidence under S. 35 to prove any fact in issue or a relevant fact; but a copy of the mutation is admissible only to prove the factum of sale and not the terms and conditions thereof in view of the bar under S. 91. [1979 Rev.L.R. 107: (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 27, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42: 1985 Punj.L.J. 583: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 109: I.L.R. (1986) 1 P.&H. 90 (F.B.); 1989 Punj.L.J. 15.

A presumption of correctness is attached to official acts; it arises because Government officials are supposed to act independently, without bias and without personal interest in the matter. However, where a Mondal ('Surveyor of lands') was related to one of the parties and was, thus, not supposed to give a report in the matter and had made misleading reports for that reason, held, no presumption of correctness could be attached to his official reports and acts: A.I.R. 1986 Sikkim 22.

Reports of Patwari and Wasil Baqui Nawis—Reports showing that petitioner was in cultivating possession as tenant since 1946-47—Presumption should be in favour of correctness of reports: 1967 Cur.L.J. 283: (1967) 69 Punj.L.R. 495.

Any entry made a considerable time ago by the Patwari in village papers, would be treated as an entry in a public document maintained in the course of business: 1939 R.D. 325: 1939 All.W.R. (B.R.) 277.

Mutation does not confer any title on a person in whose favour it is so attested. Thus, even though S. 34 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887 requires that the acquisition of rights of mortgage should be reported to the Patwari, so that he could make an entry in his register of mutations in respect of acquisition of mortgage, held, non-reporting of same would not mean that such a transaction did not take place at all: A.I.R. 1976 Him. Pra. 41 (D.B.).

Patwari cannot be permitted to give evidence against the records prepared by him unless he has made a report against the entries: 1951 R.D. 43: 1951 All.W.R. (Rev.) 23.

Where an entry was made in revenue record in performance of duty but the Revenue Officer had done so under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure when there was no such provision in the W.B. Estates Acquisition Act, held, the entry, not having been made in performance of duty, was not relevant under S. 35; it did not fall under S. 74 either. [A.I.R. 1975 Cal. 257, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

The Financial Commissioner (Revenue) while hearing a revision arising out of mutation proceedings acts as a Revenue Officer; his revision order is, thus, an entry made in official record stating a fact in issue or a relevant fact, having been made by a public servant in discharge of his official duty is itself a relevant fact, admissible under S. 35: 1980 Rev.L.R. 581 (P.&H.).

Where the Land Register prepared under S. 6(2) of the Orissa Consolidation of Holdings and Prevention of Fragmentation of Land Act, 1972, describes the property as bagayat unfit for consolidation, held, having been prepared by the Assistant Consolidation Officer, it is relevant evidence under S. 35 and can be considered along with the other evidence: A.I.R. 1980 Ori. 183: (1980) 50 Cut.L.T. 178.

Even if there is no statutory presumption regarding the entries of Fard Hissa Kossi or Parat Mal Guzari, documents prepared by Revenue authorities, it can be presumed, where they are old, that in the absence of anything proved to the contrary, the entries contained therein were correct: A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu 55. Entries in revenue records—Presumption—Finality—Entry of persons being adopted son—Finality—Recital is not binding on rightful holder. See I.L.R. (1954) Nag. 692: A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 319.

The mere recording of sir land as the plaintiff's occupancy in the revenue records is only presumptive evidence which can be adequately rebutted by the evidence showing that it was the plaintiff's sir: 1963 Jab.L.J. 590: 1963 M.P.L.J. 542: A.I.R. 1963 Madh. Pra. 344.

The Collector's book is intended for purposes of revenue and not of title and definition of shares in revenue and village papers affords, by itself, but very little indication of an actual separation of a Hindu family; in no case can it be regarded that such definition of shares is sufficient evidence to find that the members of the family had separated: A.I.R. 1952 Madh. Bh. 146.

The words Naqdic Hasab Partah Deh recorded in the tenant's column in revenue records, even as per their literal translation, do not per se indicate that the person in whose favour the entry is in adverse possession, nor are they any proof of adverse possession at all; they merely denote that the rent payable is equal to the land revenue; the reference is only to the quantum of rent payable. The existence of other facts or circumstances providing evidence of adverse possession, however, is a different matter which the Court may consider: A.I.R. 1973 J.&K. 53: 1972 Kash.L.J. 398 (F.B.).

11. Family pedigree.—Pedigree-tables prepared at the time of settlement form part of the records of rights as prescribed under S. 31(2)(d) of the Punjab Land Revenue Act. Presumption of truth must, therefore, extend to such pedigree-tables until the contrary is proved. The burden of proving that an entry in the pedigree-table so prepared is wrong must in the circumstances rest heavily on those who make such assertion. Apart from the statutory presumption permissible under S. 44, Punjab Land Revenue Act, Ss. 35, 114 and 90 of the Evidence Act read together would also give rise to a presumption that the settlement pedigree-tables represent the correct position: (1961) 63 Punj.L.R. 177: A.I.R. 1961 Punj. 251.

The principle underlying S. 35 of the Evidence Act is that the person making the entry should be a person vested with authority to record a decision which so far as the matter before him is concerned, will be final. In other words, that section excludes all views expressed before the final stage is reached and makes relevant only those decisions, which constitute the final word in the matter. Therefore, a judgment is not relevant under that section to prove the pedigree mentioned therein, when no decision is given on any of the issues that arose in that case upon the pedigree: (1952) 54 Punj.L.R. 226: A.I.R. 1952 Punj. 301.

The family pedigree which accompanied a statement by certain members of the family in an inam enquiry of 1865 and two of which were enclosures to reports by the Collector to the Board of Revenue under the Court of Wards Act are relevant and admissible in a later proceeding: I.L.R. 55 Mad. 40: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 198: 62 M.L.J. 116. See also 1939 R.D. 20: 1939 All.W.R. (B.R.) 127.

Where a handwritten pedigree is prepared under a form prescribed by the Rules framed under the Court of Wards Act, it is admissible in evidence under S. 35: 189 I.C. 757: A.I.R. 1940 All. 353.

A pedigree contained in an estate note book, maintained under the Court of Wards Manual prepared under the U.P. Court of Wards Act, is an official document prepared by a public authority in pursuance of a statutory duty, and is admissible in evidence though it is not conclusive evidence of the facts stated therein. A criticism against this document that it does not show the sources on which the Court of Wards based its findings, is not a criticism of weight against a public document. The Court must assume that the Court of Wards did its duty to the best of its ability, and based the pedigree on material of the accuracy of which it was satisfied: (1945-46) 50 Cal.W.N. 729: A.I.R. 1946 P.C. 103: (1946) 2 M.L.J. 235 (P.C.).

A pedigree table prepared for purposes of settlement, which is the basis of the entries in khewat, is relevant under S. 35, if prepared in discharge of public duty: A.I.R. 1949 Him. Pra. 11. See I.L.R. 4 Luck. 39: A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 129, as to admissibility of settlement pedigree.

The decision of a Naib Tehsildar, confirmed in appeal by the Deputy Commissioner, but based on an untrue genealogy, has, little evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 681. See also A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 162 and A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 329: 1970 Punj.L.J. 776, cited under Note 12, infra.

12. Jamabandi.—It is settled law that entries in the jamabandi are not proof of title; they are only statements for revenue purpose: (1994) 1 M.L.J. 50 (S.C.).

It is settled law that the jamabandi entries are only for fiscal purpose and they create no title when it is not the case that the opposite party had any knowledge and acquiesced to it: 1993 D.N.J. 166 (S.C.).

Entries in jamabandi are presumed to be correct: A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 32.

The entry of a person's name in the jamabandis of the fields does not confer any right on him: A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 95: I.L.R. (1956) Nag. 64: 1956 Nag.L.J. 654.

The presumption of truth attaches to a jamabandi under S. 45 of the H.P. Land Revenue Act: A.I.R. 1977 Him. Pra. 1: 1977 Sim.L.C. 294: I.L.R. (1976) Him. Pra. 499 (D.B.).

Lands settled on annual patta—Entries in jamabandi—Indicate only possession of that year: A.I.R. 1967 Assam 9.

Where the jamabandis and the pedigree table wherein it was specifically stated that the widow had inherited the property from her husband which she had sold to another person and ceased to be its owner, held, the facts stood validly proved; the finding cannot be disturbed in appeal merely because the mutation of inheritance from the husband to the widow was not produced: A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 162.

Where land sold by a widow was sought to be pre-empted by her husband's brother's son under S. 15(2)(b) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1960 and the pedigree table and the jamabandi adduced by him in evidence merely proved the widow to be so related to him and in occupation of the land sold as its owner, held, no presumption could be drawn that she must have inherited it from her deceased husband or son; the burden lay on the plaintiff to establish the factum of inheritance by positive and independent evidence: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 329: 1970 Punj.L.J. 776.

Where in a suit for permanent injunction, the plaintiff based his claim on ownership with possession, supported by entries in jamabandi and khasra girdawari, while the defendant pleaded possession as a tenant and both the Courts below found in favour of the tenant, held, being a finding of fact, it cannot normally be disturbed in second appeal; but since the Courts below did not take into consideration the jamabandi, a record of rights to which the presumption of truth is attached, and the khasra girdawari, a public record made by a public servant in discharge of his duties, the presumption arising from the jamabandi and khasra girdawari can be rebutted only by convincing and reliable evidence to the contrary; it is, thus, the plaintiff who was in possession as owner; concurrent findings of the Courts below set aside: A.I.R. 1985 Him. Pra. 10: 1984 Sim.L.C. 283: I.L.R. (1984) Him. Pra. 363.

13. Khasra girdawari.—When there is no other cogent evidence on the record, much less any documentary evidence, which might detract from the correctness of the khasra girdawaris, held, presumption of truth can be attached to the khasra girdawaris: (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 503: (1986) 1 Cr.L.J. 502.

The khasra girdawari embodies the record of a public servant's acts performed in the discharge of his official duties and is, thus, admissible under S. 35; true, it carries no presumption of correctness but its evidentiary value is certainly not nil; the Court should not start with the presumption that it is not correct or, unless supported it can be rejected only if it is found on evidence to be false or its genuineness becomes suspicious: A.I.R. 1972 P.&H. 393: 1972 Punj.L.J. 118.

Though the record of khasra girdawari is admissible under S. 35, held, the statutory presumption of correctness under S. 44 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act does not extend to it; that presumption is available only to record of rights and jamabandis; and where the record of girdawari was itself found to be suspicious on its face, the presumption under S. 114(e) would also be not available to it either: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 223: (1974) 1 S.C.C. 138.

Public document—Khasra girdawari is public document and, hence, certified copies of entries are admissible in evidence—Not obligatory to produce Patwari preparing khasra girdawari: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 48.

Entries in khasra girdawari in Rajasthan are to be presumed true until there is proof to the contrary: 1959 Raj.L.W. 381.

Under S. 35 an entry in any public or other official register stating a fact in issue or relevant fact and made by public servant in the discharge of his duties becomes a relevant fact and is provable in the prescribed manner. Entries in Khasra register maintained under an Act are entries in a public and official register and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties and the columns provided in the register are to be filled up in the discharge of an official duty of the public servant concerned. Till those entries are proved to be false, they will be good evidence of what is stated thereunder: 1964 B.L.J.R. 152: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 187.

Khasra is, under S. 45(2) of the C.P. Land Revenue Act, 1917, a record of rights and, under S. 80(3) thereof, it is to be presumed to be correct unless contrary is shown. The burden of proving adverse possession lies heavily on the person who contends so in opposition to the entries in the khasra girdawari: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1178: (1974) 1 S.C.C. 675.

Khasra Paimaish of Municipality—Value of as record of title: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 885: I.L.R. 16 Lah. 313.

Where the defence raised was that the defendant was a tenant under the plaintiff's predecessor in interest without stating either the time the tenancy was created or the terms and conditions thereof and it was found that the khasra girdawaris produced to sustain the defence were contrary and changed from time to time at the Patwari's sweet-will, held, the defendant was rightly found to be a trespasser liable to be evicted: 1991 Punj.L.J. 408.

Khasra girdawaris—Entries in—Are relevant in considering surplus area for purposes of Pepsu Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 983: 1969 Punj.L.J. 310.

See also A.I.R. 1985 Him. Pra. 10: 1984 Sim.L.C. 283: I.L.R. (1984) Him. Pra. 363, cited under Note 12, supra.

14. Entry in Khatian.—An entry in a khatian is relevant to establish a fact recorded therein as a public record under S. 35: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 188 (Sikkim).

In case of a conflict between entries in R.S. khatians, it is the latter entry which is presumed to be correct, and not the earlier ones. [A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 361, Foll.]. But an unauthorised latter entry cannot prevail over a valid earlier entry: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

Where the earlier C.S. Khatian described the land as tenure and the later R.S. Khatian showed it as non-agricultural whose correctness is not even challenged, held, the R.S. Khatian will prevail. [A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 361, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 556.

Where the entry in C.S. Khatian showed a female to be a limited owner of the property but R.S. Khatian, prepared thereafter, showed her as a full owner thereof in pursuance of the commencement of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, held, the latter entry would prevail; a finding by the lower Court that C.S. Khatian could not be rebutted is perverse. [A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 361 and A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 556, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1981 Cal. 74: (1980-81) 85 Cal.W.N. 357: (1981) 1 Cal.H.N. 195.

Entry in clause 10-A of Khatauni—Evidentiary value—Entry not decisive regarding nature of occupation: 1964 All.L.J. 1127.

Returns (Khatauni papers) made or purported to have been made under the U.P. Land Revenue Act, are admissible in evidence both under S. 35 of the Evidence Act and also under S. 44 or S. 57, as the case may be, of the said U.P. Act itself, read in the light of Ss. 32, 33 and 56 thereof and the relevant Rules, prescribing the particular form. Under S. 57 or S. 44, of the U.P. Act the entries in these returns would have a presumptive value and the presumption of correctness would prevail until rebutted: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 724.

15. Riwaj-i-am.—Entries in Riwaj-i-am, an official record, kept by a person in performance of his public duty after satisfying himself of their correctness, are presumed to be correct; they are themselves evidence of their truth until their falsity by proper evidence by which evidentiary value of any public book, register or document may be attacked. However, if the custom recorded in the Riwaj-i-am is opposed to the general custom or to the rights of females, not consulted when it was prepared, the initial presumption of truth is weakened but nevertheless it is sufficient to shift the burden of proof on the party impeaching the existence of the custom and that too only by proof of instances where the custom was not acted upon; thus, if the custom recorded in a later properly prepared Riwaj-i-am is different from the one recorded in the earlier Riwaj-i-am, the Court is duty bound to uphold the modified custom recorded therein: A.I.R. 1978 P.&H. 98: I.L.R. (1977) 2 Punj. 61: (1978) 80 Punj.L.R. 373 (F.B.).

No statutory presumption attaches to the contents of a Riwaj-i-am or similar compilation, but, being a public record prepared by a public officer in the discharge of his duties under Government Rules, the statements to be found therein in support of custom are admissible to prove facts recited therein and will generally be regarded as a strong piece of evidence of the custom. The entries in the Riwaj-i-am may, however, be proved to be incorrect and the question of evidence required for the purpose of rebutting them will vary with the circumstances of each case. The presumption of correctness attaching to a Riwaj-i-am may be rebutted, if it is shown that it affects adversely the rights of females or any other class of persons who had no opportunity of appearing before the revenue authorities: (1953) 55 Punj.L.R. 25: A.I.R. 1953 Punj. 196. A certified copy of Riwaz-i-am, prepared by the Settlement Officer in the year 1913 may be of very high evidentiary value: (1958) 60 Bom.L.R. 1022: I.L.R. (1959) Bom. 77: A.I.R. 1959 Bom. 241.

As regards the customary law, the entries in the Riwaj-i-am are relevant evidence under S. 35. There is an initial presumption of correctness as regards the entries in the Riwaj-i-am and when the custom as recorded in the Riwaj-i-am is in conflict with the general custom as recorded in Rattigan's Digest or ascertained otherwise, the entries in the Riwaj-i-am should ordinarily prevail except that where the Riwaj-i-am affects adversely the rights of females who had no opportunity whatever of appearing before the Revenue authorities, the presumption would be weak, and only a few instances would suffice to rebut it: I.L.R. (1960) 2 Punj. 615: (1960) 3 S.C.R. 975: A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 1118.

Riwaj-i-am—Evidentiary value—Riwaj-i-am of Gurdaspur district—Validity. See A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 266: (1955) 1 S.C.R. 1191.

Hindu Succession Act, 1916, S. 14 (2)—Riwaj-i-am is not an instrument but a record of custom—Hindu Succession Act, 1956, S. 14 (2)—Custom (General)—Custom (Punjab): (1967) 69 Punj.L.R. 391.

Entries in Riwaj-i-am are presumed to be correct—Proof of custom—Oral and documentary evidence of mutations and other transaction recognising custom, are material. See under S. 13, Note 1: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1555.

16. Wajib-ul-arz.—Wajib-ul-arz is village administration paper prepared with due care and after due enquiry by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties; it is a part of the settlement record. Statutory presumption of correctness attaches to it: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 861.

S. 31(2) (a) and (b) of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887 makes it evident that Sharait wajib-ul-arz is included in the record of rights of an estate; James Thompson, the first Administrator of Punjab, had directed the Settlement Officers preparing the record of rights to prepare Ikrarnamas or sharait wajib-ul-arz (Village Administration Papers) which were most important to him as they intended to show the entire constitution of the village; they are public record made in performance of duty: A.I.R. 1991 P.&H. 134 (D.B.).

Entry in wajib-ul-arz is admissible in proof of custom—Admissibility does not depend upon verification of wajib-ul-arz by proprietors: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 608.

Entry in wajib-ul-arz—Presumption as to correctness. See (1957) 59 Punj.L.R. 263. In the case of discrepancy in the khasra entries and the wajib-ul-arz, the entries in the latter must prevail: I.L.R. (1954) Nag. 96: A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 103.

Entries in wajib-ul-arz—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 286. See also 101 I.C. 820: 1 Luck. Cases 73.

Though the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957 provides for regulation and development of mines or minerals but it does not vest any particular mineral in the State Government; whether a particular mineral vests in the State Government or a private owner of the land is to be determined as per wajib-ul-arz to which is attached the presumption of truth: A.I.R. 1972 P.&H. 50: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 897 (D.B.).

17. Inam register.—The preparation of the inam register is an important act of State; its compilation is a result of an elaborate enquiry based upon oral evidence, on the spot enquiry and based upon available accounts and records: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 182: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 613: (1973) 2 M.L.J. 317 (D.B.).

The entries in the inam register are evidence of the true intent and effect of the transactions and of the character of the right which was being recognised and continued. The entries in the inam register and the description of the inamdar therein can be accepted as indications of the nature and quantum of the right and the interest created in the land. The entries made in the inam register are the result of an elaborate enquiry based upon oral evidence, on-the-spot enquiry and scrutiny of available accounts and records. The inam statement is only one of the pieces of evidence which the Inam Commissioner might have taken into consideration in compiling the inam register. The recitals in the statement must, therefore, give place to the recitals in the inam register though an attempt shall be made to harmonize them, if possible.

Held, on a consideration of the recitals in the inam register and statements filed before the Inam Enquiry Commissioner, that the grant to the deity was of both the warams, viz. Melwaram and Kudiwaram: (1964) 8 S.C.R. 347: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 516.

Though in the absence of the original grant the inam register is of great evidentiary value, it does not mean that the entry or entries in any particular column or columns of the register should be accepted at their face value without giving due consideration to other matters recorded in the entry itself. There is no doubt the entries cannot displace actual or authentic evidence in individual cases: A.I.R. 1919 P.C. 62.

Thus, the fact that the Inam Commissioner treated certain grant to be in support of Sadavarti and for the support of the temple of Sri Jagannadhaswami, would not make the grant for the purposes of the temple when the temple itself was not in existence at the time the grant was made and when a later sanad referring to it definitely stated that the original villages were granted for the purposes of charity: (1962) 2 S.C.R. (Supp.) 276: (1962) 2 An.L.T. 274: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 510.

Although there is no statutory presumption of correctness regarding entries in the inam register as in the case of entries in a record of rights, yet as the inam register was prepared after thorough inquiry at the spot by public officials, entries contained therein should, in the absence of actual and authentic evidence to the contrary, be given the utmost importance, and cannot be brushed aside as a real piece of evidence: A.I.R. 1953 Ori. 92: 18 Cut.L.T. 33.

Decision of Inam Commission in inam register has great evidential value as to the nature and quantum of right and interest in land in absence of authentic evidence to contrary: A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 100.

Absence of original grant—Entries in inam register are of great evidentiary value and are almost conclusive: (1953) 1 M.L.J. 164: A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 580.

See also I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 194: A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 468: (1944) 2 M.L.J. 56 (Inam register—Entries in Wallace's Register).

It is true that Inam fair register is entitled to great weight as the preparation of Inam register was a great act of State and its preparation and the contents were the subject of much consideration under elaborately detailed reports and minutes. But that is not to say that the entries therein would override or nullify the effect of registers prepared long before. It is only in the absence of authentic evidence that utmost importance will be given to the Inam fair register, but it will not displace earlier documents, the authenticity of which could not be questioned: (1958) 1 An.W.R. 343.

It is well established that the preparation of the Inam fair register was a great act of state; it was prepared by Government Officials after an on the spot enquiry and examining all relevant and available documents; though not conclusive, it has great evidentiary value; yet its entries may be rebutted by authentic and clinching record: A.I.R. 1976 Andh. Pra. 295: (1976) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 114 (D.B.).

18. Batwara khasra.—Batwara record is not conclusive evidence but merely evidence under S. 35, as an official record. It is a weak type of evidence when it conflicts with the record of rights: (1933-34) 38 Cal.W.N. 268: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 488.

Batwara papers are admissible in evidence: 1980 All.W.C. 501.

A batwara khasra is not a public document within the meaning of S. 35; but if it had been prepared under the provisions of the Estates Partition Act by the Deputy Collector in discharge of his official duty, it is admissible as a public document: I.L.R. 7 Pat. 85: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 32. See also A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 333: 170 I.C. 187; A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 463; 18 Pat.L.T. 464: 171 I.C. 732: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 567; (1938) 40 Punj.L.R. 693: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 440; 1939 Pat.W.N. 700: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 591 (Decision in settlement proceedings); A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 561 (Road cess return); 1929 R.D. 325 (Patwari papers); (1925-26) 30 Cal.W.N. 689: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 862 (Record of rights); A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 161 (Parepatraka); A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 328 (Khatardhar paper); A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 290 (Map prepared for the purposes of partition); A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 88; A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 97; A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 134. See contra A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 893 (Sale certificate). See also I.L.R. 56 All. 766: 1934 All.L.J. 318: A.I.R. 1934 All. 406 (F.B.).

Batwara khasra is admissible: A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 447; I.L.R. 15 Pat. 584: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 189; A.I.R. 1944 Sind 176: I.L.R. (1944) Kar. 14 (Evidentiary value of entries in Revenue records); Batwara papers, see A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 261; 59 I.C. 963.

19. Municipal record.—The report of a Municipal overseer as to when the construction of chajja took place is inadmissible: 26 I.C. 670: 12 All.L.J. 740. Municipal register containing entries as to ownership of property: 163 I.C. 867: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 965.

Municipal records—Presumption of correctness—Presumption relates only to the period when entries were made: 75 I.T.R. 318: (1970) 2 I.T.J. 17: A.I.R. 1970 Pat. 327.

An extract from the khewat khasra of 1921 and an extract from the Register of immovable property of 1931, kept by the Municipal Board under the orders of Government are admissible in evidence as extracts from public documents: I.L.R. (1948) All. 215: A.I.R. 1948 All. 509.

Under S. 136 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, the authority is limited to inspection, survey and measurement and does not extend to making of any entry in a book described as 'Inspection Book of Lands and Buildings'. If the making of the entry is neither authorised nor required by the statute it cannot be said that the Assessment Inspector made the entries in discharge of his official duty or in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of this country: (1956-57) 61 Cal.W.N. 175.

Certified copies of the entries made in the assessment register, a public record maintained by the Municipal Corporation under S. 135 of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation Act, 1923, are admissible: [(1956-57) 61

Cal.W.N. 175, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 148 (Cal.). See also (1992) 2 Cal.L.T. 89.

Assessment registers of a Municipality are public documents prepared in performance of public documents; they can be proved by certified copies: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.). A certified copy of the document from 'Inspection Book of Land and Buildings' maintained by the Corporation, held, is not admissible under S. 35: (1988-89) 93 Cal.W.N. 1045; (1984) 2 Cal.L.J. 329: (1985) 1 Cal.H.N. 84. Relevancy of an entry in Municipal House Tax Register regarding mortgage, when no such entry is required to be made by law. See (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 179.

Municipal parcha—No presumption available as to its correctness: 1966 B.L.J.R. 761.

The question in dispute was whether Municipal plot No. 106 was a part of the cadastral survey plot No. 1090 which was recorded as raiyati. To prove this, copies of Municipal survey map and cadastral survey map prepared by an Amin were produced but the Amin was not examined. Instead another witness who was a survey passed pleader was examined. He deposed that he checked these copies of maps with the cadastral survey and the Municipal survey maps and by superimposition of the two copies he found that plot No. 106 was a part of plot No. 1090. Held, that when the accuracy of the copies of maps prepared by the Amin had not been established, the conclusion derived from superimposing one map upon the other could not be accepted: 1955 B.L.J.R. 626: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 57.

20. Certificate of guardianship.—Certificate of guardianship under S. 7 of Guardians and Wards Act is admissible in evidence—Entries therein as to period of minority are relevant under S. 35, Evidence Act—(Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, S. 7). [(1896) I.L.R. 18 All. 478, Not Foll.; (1890) I.L.R. 17 Cal. 849, Disting.; A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 152, Ref.; A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 88 and A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 134, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1969 All. 162.

A certificate of guardianship issued by the Court is not admissible in evidence under S. 35 to prove the minority of a person. Such certificate is neither a book nor a register nor a record kept by any officer in accordance with any law. It is a certificate, as it professes to be, and is a document issued to a person, giving that person and only to him a particular kind of authority: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 533; A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 438: 199 I.C. 10.

21. Voters' list.—Electoral rolls are public record made in performance of duty specially enjoined by the Representation of the People Act; it directly comes under S. 35 as well as S. 74(1)(iii); the presumption under S. 81 being available to it, the Court has to (shall) presume its genuineness and regard the entry in the roll proved unless it is disproved: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 158: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 57: 38 Cut.L.T. 82: I.L.R. (1972) Cut 161 (F.B.). See also A.I.R. 1980 All. 109: 1979 All.W.C. 698.

The electoral roll is a public document and is admissible in evidence; it is not necessary to prove the source of information on the basis whereof the facts stated in the roll were recorded, nor is it necessary that the person who prepared the electoral roll has to be examined in Court to prove the electoral roll: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 107: (1973) 2 Cut.W.R. 1108.

The voters' list which are public records prepared in accordance with the provisions of the Representation of the People Act, 1950 and the Rules made thereunder are admissible under S. 35 and S. 74(1)(iii) of the Evidence Act: 1978 B.L.J.R. 165 (D.B.); 1978 Cr.L.J. 752: 1977 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 217: 1978 M.L.J. (Cr.) 327 (Entries in voters' list of village showing relationship of husband and wife supported by karnam of village, held, are admissible to prove marriage).

It is one thing to say that a document is conclusive evidence and another that it is one of the pieces of evidence; thus, the voters' list by itself is not conclusive or final; but being a public document under S. 74(1)(iii), it is admissible in evidence and together with other evidence connecting the list with the person concerned, the two supplement each other and may prove the fact in issue: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 235: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 901.

A diary shown to have been maintained and written by the Returning or Election Officers while discharging their official duties as polling of votes was in progress, held, is relevant and admissible under S. 35: A.I.R. 1977 N.O.C. 254 (All.).

Where in a suit for partition of ancestral properties belonging to the grand father, the plaintiff's status as son of the grandfather was impeached who relied, inter alia ,on the voters' lists which were rejected by the trial Court on the ground that two of its pages do not bear the seal of the Panchayat or Election Office and there were no signatures on the seal of the Police Station, held, the voters' lists prepared under the Representation of the People Act were public record under S. 35 and public document under S. 74(1)(iii); they were admissible in evidence as such without examining their author or the authority furnishing copy thereof. [A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 158 (F.B.), Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1983 Ori. 279 (D.B.).

Where the extract from the village electoral roll and family register, proved by a certified copy thereof showed that Bachan Singh was husband of Purna Devi and father of her three children, held, they, being public documents, were not required to be proved by evidence aliunde; they were presumptive evidence and the burden lay on the other party to rebut truth of the entries: A.I.R. 1980 All. 174.

Where there was no evidence to show that at whose instance the father's name of the voter was mentioned and the person preparing the voters' list was not examined, held, no reliance could be placed on the voters' list affecting the proof of relationship claimed in the voters' list: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 1211 (D.B.).

Voters' list has practically no evidentiary value on question of identity of house under occupation of a person and cannot displace what is established by entries in Municipal record: I.L.R. (1953) Nag. 126: A.I.R. 1953 Nag. 146.

Where in a suit for maintenance by a widow, it was contended that she had been dispossessed and driven out from the village and the voters' lists of 2 villages showed that her name was entered in the voters' list of both the villages, held, much importance cannot be attached to such entries; it merely indicated that she would have lived in both the villages at the time of enumeration: A.I.R. 1971 Mad. 282: (1970) 1 M.L.J. 222 (D.B.).

22. Hospital record.—An outdoor ticket and the discharge certificate granted by authorities of a public hospital are public documents and are, therefore, admissible in evidence on the combined effect of Ss. 35 and 74 of the Evidence Act, as these documents show the entries in the Official Register made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 600: A.I.R. 1965 Tripura 17.

In patient bed head ticket kept in the office of a Government hospital being a public record, it is admissible under S. 35: 1975 Raj.L.W. 161: 1975 W.L.N. 858: I.L.R. (1975) 25 Raj. 623.

Certified copy of a post mortem report can be taken into consideration: (1989) 2 Raj.L.W. 60.

Prescription register in Government hospitals is admissible though handwriting of the entry is not proved: 103 I.C. 512: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 310.

Accusation of adultery—Establishment of—Evidence by spouse—Corroboration necessary—Statements of adulteress recorded in Government Maternity Home and Rescue Home registers can be used for corroboration: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 686: A.I.R. 1964 Mys. 280.

23. First Information Report.—The first information report, strictly speaking, can be used only for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting the maker thereof. Omissions of important facts in the first information report affecting the probabilities of the case are relevant under S. 11 of the Evidence Act in judging the veracity of prosecution case. [A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1026, Foll.]: (1984) 57 Cut.L.T. 27. See also (1984) 58 Cut.L.T. 422 [Effect of non-mentioning of names of some of witnesses].

F.I.R.—Use of—Oral complaint reduced to writing by officer in charge of Police Station—Report signed by complainant and countersigned by Police Officer—Handwriting of Police Officer not proved—Document not admissible in evidence for corroboration—Complaint entered in prescribed book under S. 154, Cr.P.Code—Entry not complaint—Report made to Magistrate as prescribed under S. 157—Not relevant under S. 35, Evidence Act: (1962) 3 Guj. L.R. 107: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 55: A.I.R. 1962 Guj. 214.

First information report not signed by informant—Admissibility: 1960 Cr.L.J. 461: A.I.R. 1960 Bom. 146.

First information report taken down by Police Officer—Admissibility and use of: 11 Mys.L.J. 475: 39 Mys.H.C.R. 75; I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 315: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.) [Entries in village crime note books]. Judgment not inter partes: 9 Nag.L.J. 215: A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 19; I.L.R. 18 Mad. 73: A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 388: (1948) 1 M.L.J. 215.

Where in a divorce case on the ground of cruelty under S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act 1955, the wife in her written statement had admitted that she had lodged a report with the Police and a constable appeared as a witness with the original report and having testified that it was made by the wife, produced its copy but was not at all cross-examined nor any objection was raised to its admissibility, held, the report was admissible: 1982 Hindu L.R. 30: 1982 Hindu L.R. 124 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

24. Police report.—The reports made by officers of the C.I.D. Special Branch who cover public election meetings comprising, inter alia, the mental notes made by them, constitute valuable evidence to establish the number of public meetings and other particulars thereof, held, are undoubtedly reports made by public servants in discharge of their official duty and, thus, relevant and admissible under S. 35; same is the case with the chart of such meetings, the places they were held at and the names of the speakers prepared and furnished by the Police: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 308: (1975) 3 S.C.C. 646.

Where a candidate had obtained Police permission to hold an election meeting and use a loudspeaker therein and the Police Inspector deputed a Head Constable to attend the meeting and submit a report of the speeches and proceedings thereof, held, the reports were clearly made by a public servant in discharge of his official duty; the reports are extremely relevant: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 39 (S.N.).

Where under the State Government's direction, a Deputy Inspector General of Police had submitted his report after investigation into the blinding by the Police of 24 undertrials while in Police custody, held, the report is relevant and admissible evidence under S. 35; it is an official record and related to facts in issue as to how and by whom were the undertrials were blinded: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1068: 1981 Cr.L.J. 597: (1981) 2 S.C.C. 493: 1981 B.L.J.R. 425: (1981) 1 Karn.L.J. (Sh.N.) 116.

An application sent to the Superintendent of Police is not a public document; its contents have to be proved; mere proof of signatures of the applicant are no proof of its contents. [A.I.R. 1925 All. 413, Disting.]: 1985 All.Cr.C. 141.

Police records of levy of punitive tax—Value of as record of title: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 885: I.L.R. 16 Lah. 313.

25. Commissioner's report.—A local Commissioner's confirmed report is admissible as evidence and becomes part of the record of the case. The confirmed report of a local Commissioner, appointed by the Court in a suit is admissible in a subsequent suit; it cannot be brushed aside out of hand simply because the party relying upon it did not produce the Commissioner to prove it in the latter suit; the report could be used to judge the reliability of a witness's evidence. [A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 890; A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 192, Dissent. from]: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 41: 1981 All.L.J. 1349.

There is no doubt that being public documents, certified copies of the Commissioner's report and inspection note in the earlier suit are admissible in evidence without further proof under S. 77 as proof of their contents; however, if the Commissioner's report was not confirmed in the earlier suit, it would be of no evidentiary value; and even if it was confirmed in the earlier suit, it might have been open to the parties who contested that report to call for the Commissioner for cross-examination in order to test its correctness, or to show that it was incorrect by some other evidence; it could not be brushed aside out of hand simply because it was a report made in an earlier suit and the party who relied upon it did not produce the Commissioner to prove that report in the present suit. As to the inspection note of the Presiding Officer, the report could be used to judge the reliability of evidence of witnesses in the subsequent case. Even the Commissioner's report could be primarily used for the same purpose; but none of them were substantive evidence on which the plaintiff's case could be based: (1981) 7 All.L.R. 293.

Commissioner dying after filing his report—His report is admissible in evidence under the provision: A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 385.

26. Entry in order-sheet regarding service of notice.—An entry in the order-sheet recording that a notice of a proceeding had been served is admissible under S. 35 as evidence of the fact of service of the notice: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 114: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 22. See also A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 658.

Report by process peon who is dead regarding service of notice: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 658: 191 I.C. 45; (1940) 42 Punj.L.R. 288: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 312.

A process-server is an officer of the Court so that his report that a person is not served is admissible under S. 35 read with S. 74, Evidence Act: 1964 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 13.

27. Witness's deposition.—The depositions of witnesses in an heirship inquiry under S. 71 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code are inadmissible as substantive evidence relating to title but they might be used as corroborating or contradicting the witnesses examined in the case: (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 118: A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 126. So also family traditions recorded by settlement officer: 163 I.C. 770: A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 340.

Where a deposition of a witness had been recorded in the ordinary way, that record and not an abstract of the evidence in the judgment is the proper evidence of the statement; but where the Court has acted upon an oral admission and recorded in its judgment which constitutes the only official record of it, it is admissible: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 184: 142 I.C. 548; 40 Mad.L.W. 810: A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 268.

28. Admissibility of previous judgments/ inquiry.—The Evidence Act does not make a finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the Court in one case evidence of that fact in another case. A judgment, not inter partes, which is not admissible under Ss. 40 to 43 of the Evidence Act, does not become relevant, merely because it contains a statement as to a fact which is in issue or relevant in the suit, and to such a judgment S. 35 of the Evidence Act does not apply. Where a judgment is not in rem, nor relating to matters of public nature nor between the parties to a subsequent suit, the fact that the Court by that judgment decides a point in a particular way is not relevant for the purpose of the decision of the same point in the subsequent suit. Therefore, a statement of a relevant fact in previous judgment, not inter partes, is not admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act: 1962 B.L.J.R. 323: A.I.R. 1962 Pat. 420.

A previous judgment though not inter partes is admissible under S. 35 to prove a statement made by a predecessor-in-title of the party against whom the document is sought to be used. Thus, an admission contained in such judgment as to the date of the death of the father of the predecessor-in-title is admissible to prove the date of death of such person: A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 388: (1948) 1 M.L.J. 215. See also A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 19.

(Process-server's report as to giving possession in execution of decree). The Evidence Act does not make a finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the Court in one case, evidence of the fact in another case when the parties are not same. A recital, therefore, in a judgment not inter partes of a relevant fact is not admissible in another litigation, though the judgment may be used in certain circumstances as a fact in issue or as a relevant fact or possibly as a transaction: 121 I.C. 509: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 237.

Where the finding that the suit land had been mortgaged was based on a judgment in a previous pre-emption suit whereby on its being decreed, the plaintiff needed money to satisfy the decree, held, the judgment established the factum of its existence as well as the circumstances leading to its delivery; it was admissible under S. 40: A.I.R. 1972 Him. Pra. 135.

An admission made in a written statement which is no longer available but is mentioned in the judgment of an earlier suit, held, is admissible. [(1883) I.L.R. 9 Cal. 586; (1895) I.L.R. 18 Mad. 73; A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 157 and A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 77, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1977 Pat. 23: 1976 B.B.C.J. 509: 1977 Pat.L.J.R. 25 (D.B.).

Though a criminal judgment may not be admissible in a civil proceeding in so far as it discusses evidence or speaks of confession of guilt by the defendant, yet it is certainly relevant and admissible to show that the two defendants had been charged with and convicted for theft; the lower appellate Court's finding that the defendants had not been established to be responsible for theft is perverse and clearly against evidence and law: A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 14: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 395.

Where relationship between persons is in dispute, a finding thereon in inter partes proceeding before a Settlement Officer, a public officer acting in discharge of his public duties, is relevant and admissible in subsequent civil suit between those parties: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 154 (Ori.).

Copies of statements of certain persons made during an enquiry into the conduct of Mahant wherein the issue was whether he should be removed from his office, held, is not admissible in a proceedings wherein the issue was regarding the character or nature of the institution of which he was Mahant: (1992) 2 Rev.L.R. 147 (D.B.).

29. Miscellaneous.—An entry as to ownership in 'frad baghat' is admissible, but is not admissible when it does not appear who made the entry: 14 R.D. 444. An entry in Mouxawari Register is admissible as regards title to land: I.L.R. 58 Cal. 858: 60 M.L.J. 142: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 1 (P.C.). See also A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 463 (Sifton's Settlement Report). Report of Government Officers, nature of: I.L.R. 13 Pat. 517: A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 33.

The Gazette of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. III published in 1879, is admissible under S. 35 read with S. 81 of the Evidence Act, 1872. The Gazette is admissible being official record evidencing public affairs and the Court may presume their contents as genuine. The statement contained therein can be taken into account to discover the historical material contained therein and the facts stated therein is evidence under S. 45 and the Court may in conjunction with other evidence and circumstances take into consideration in adjudging the dispute in question, namely, whether Kalika Mataji temple was a public trust, though it may not be treated as conclusive evidence: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 167.

Register Sikni being a duly kept record by the official of the department, its contents are admissible in evidence under S. 35: 1976 Punj.L.J. 43.

It is extremely doubtful whether Inter-departmental Secretariat notes are admissible in evidence and whether they should have been allowed to be exhibited. It cannot be stated clearly as to under what section of the Evidence Act these Inter-departmental Secretariat notes are admissible. They do not come within the purview of S. 35, Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1952) Cut. 109: A.I.R. 1952 Ori. 289.

A report prepared by the State Statistical Department on out turn of winter rice based on sample survey method may not be appropriate for other purposes; the report is not necessarily a safe guide for assessing market value of any particular plot acquired. On the other hand, in the context evident mistakes found in the Departmental report, the receipts of rent given to the adhiars are more certain of the land yield when nothing on record rendered the receipt to be incorrect: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1905: (1975) 2 S.C.C. 645.

As to value of entries in fahrist-tabdilat, see I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 331: A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 314. Register of information at pargana watandars: (1937) 39 Bom.L.R. 288. Entries in village crime book: I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 315: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.). Entries in public record consequent on a decree are admissible: I.L.R. 16 Pat. 258: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 69: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 631 (P.C.). See also 1939 Pat.W.N. 577: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 591; Police records: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.).

The following are examples of books, registers and registered records in India which come within the purview of this section:—Log books (see Ss. 103-108, Act I of 1879 and Ss. 280-285 of the Merchant Shipping Act 17 and 18 Vict., C. 194); Marriage registers, see Ss. 28, 32 and 54 and Schedules III and IV, Act XV of 1872, 14 and 15 Vict., C. 40: Act XV of 1865 (Parsees); and Act III of 1832; S. 44, Act V of 1865, S. 6 and Schedule of Act Registers directed by Part XI of the Indian Registration Act, 1908; Registers of printing presses: newspapers, and books published in India, Act XXV of 1867; of Copyright Act, Act XX of 1847; Act III of 1914 of new inventions, designs, patterns, etc.; S. 11, Act XV of 1859; Act XIII of 1872 of literary, scientific and charitable societies, Act XXI of 1860; of joint stock companies, etc., under the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882 (I.L.R. 9 All. 366): of British ships S. 4, Act X of 1841; 17 and 18 Vict., C. 104; registers prescribed by the various Municipal Acts, Proceedings of Registered Companies and Municipal Committees recorded in accordance with the provisions of the particular Act applicable thereto of vessels on the river Indus, Act I of 1863(B.C.); Record-of-rights; (see 23 Pat.L.T. 345: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 466); S. 14 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act XXXIII of 1871, and Ss. 94-106 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act XIX of 1873, the settlement record prescribed by Cl. 9; S. 9, Bengal Regulation VII of 1822; Registers of Chakeran land, W.R. 1864, 358; Quinquennial registers in the Bengal Presidency, 7 W.R. 14; Registers of tenure under the Chota Nagpur Tenure Act II of 1869 (B.C.): I.L.R. 19 Cal. 91; Register of Mahomedan Marriages Act I of 1976 (B.C.): I.L.R. 10 Cal. 607. Revenue registers in the Madras Presidency: I.L.R. 15 Mad. 19; Rennel's Maps: 181 I.C. 824: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 539; 72 Cal.L.J. 320: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193; A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 520; Khewat entry: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 427; Register under the Bengal Land Registration Act, VII of 1876 (B.C.)—Entry is no evidence of title though it may be of possession: I.L.R. 8 Cal. 853; I.L.R. 9 Cal. 431: 12 C.L.R. 12. Entries in canal papers are admissible in evidence of possession, but the value of the evidence is entirely a matter for the Court of facts: I.L.R. 24 Pat. 379: A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 453; A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 353. An entry in the Goshwara Register is admissible in evidence in view of the provisions of S. 35 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1951 J.&K. 6.

Measurement books can be accepted as evidence without further proof: (1983) 56 Cut.L.T. 21.

Relevancy of decisions of Nyay Panchayat. See 1985 R.D. 462.

Where certain persons were tenants on the lands when the Karnataka Land Reforms Act, 1962 came into force and they admittedly continued to be as such in possession in and under S. 25 of the Land Reforms Act their landlords were prohibited entry on the lands unless the tenants had—and they never did—surrendered the lands, held, the Court below must have presumed that the tenants were, and continued to be, in possession and entitled to injunct their landlords from committing trespass; merely because the landlords had produced levy demand notice with numbers noted thereon in their favour which were no record of rights, no presumption of truth was attached to them: A.I.R. 1975 Karn. 111: (1974) 2 Karn.L.J. 484: I.L.R. (1975) Karn. 739.

Transcripts of newspapers produced to prove the Chief Minister's statements that there were very few big landlords in Goa, held, are not relevant: A.I.R. 1979 Goa 21.

Entries in public records consequent upon a decree are admissible under S. 35: I.L.R. 16 Pat. 258: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 69: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 631 (P.C.).

A letter from Superintendent, Archives Office explaining character of certain land, as to whether it is agricultural or residential, held, is admissible: 1976 W.L.N. (U.C.) 416 (Raj.).

Entry of records in native State. See 99 I.C. 307: A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 11: (1926) 28 Bom.L.R. 716. Mutation register, see I.L.R. 1 Luck. 529: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 594.

An extract from a list prepared by or under the directions of a Maharaja for the purpose of assisting in the preparation of the lists under the Oudh Estates Act, though kept as a separate file with the official records by the Board of Revenue, cannot be treated as an official paper and consequently is not admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act. There was no duty imposed upon the Maharaja to prepare such a list and he could not be expected to have personal knowledge of the claims of all the taluqdars in Oudh: I.L.R. 22 Luck. 522: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 307.

Admissibility of hukumnama whereby land was donated for charitable purpose. See A.I.R. 1977 Pat. 23: 1977 Pat.L.J.R. 25: 1976 B.L.J.R. 640: 1976 B.B.C.J. 509 (D.B.).

Any entry in a register of previous convictions where the conviction is relevant is admissible and can be proved by a certified copy under S. 65 and upon it accused might be asked if he admitted the conviction. On this section, see A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 654; A.I.R. 1925 All. 79; A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 135. Report of Kanungo on criminal complaint is admissible: 1 I.C. 259: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 323. See also I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 315: A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 17 (F.B.); 1936 R.D. 479 (Patwari papers).

Statement as to relationship made by Kanungo Settlement Officer if admissible: I.L.R. 3 Luck. 326: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 307.

Recital of ekrarnama and its terms in ancient public document like Rubakari whose authority has not been doubted furnishes a strong evidence of the existence and genuineness of the ekrarnama and its terms: I.L.R. (1954) Cut. 398: 1954 S.C.R. 842: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 139.

Register of persons converted to Buddhism—Register not regularly maintained—Signatures of converted person not taken according to dates of conversion—Signing in register by every converted person not obligatory—Absence of a person's signature in such register would not necessarily negative his being converted to Buddhism: (1965) 2 S.C.A. 85: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1179.

Adhivasi rights—Conferment of—Record of occupation as distinguished from fact of occupation material—Conflicting entries in Revenue registers—Entry cannot form basis of Adhivasi right: 1964 All.L.J. 1127.

Where execution of a registered adoption deed was denied by its executant and it was duly proved by one of the attesting witnesses as required by law, held, the burden shifted on the executant to disprove its execution by expert evidence if he could; there was no burden cast on the plaintiff to examine the other attesting witness. However, if the Court felt it necessary to satisfy its own conscience to examine the other attesting witness nothing in law could stop it but no burden was cast on the plaintiff to produce the second witness: A.I.R. 1978 All. 472.

R. 72 of the Madras Registration Rules requires the Registrar to place on record a summary of the evidence taken by him when enquiring under S. 41(2), Registration Act, into the execution of a will or authority to adopt. This summary would be admissible, quantum valet, under S. 35: 1933 Mad.W.N. 1148.

Registration of will—Registrar's certificate containing recital that testator admitted execution—Thumb-impression of testator affixed—Recital in endorsement mentioning that signature could not be affixed because of testator's physical incapacity—Fact that testator was duly identified mentioned—But no signatures of identifying witnesses taken because soon after testator became unconscious—Endorsement held was admissible to prove execution—Facts recorded therein could be presumed to be correct—Fact that no deposition of testator why he could not sign, was taken as required by Standing Order 675 of the Madras Registration Manual was utmost an irregularity curable under S. 87—No adverse inference could be drawn because of the non-examination of the Sub-Registrar: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 178.

Entry in account books made by deceased admissible, but decree cannot be passed unless transaction is proved: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 287: 1961 Jab.L.J. 393.

Correspondence from a Government Officer to his superior in due performance of duty—Copies filed with plaint—Statements contained therein made before institution of suit—Documents are evidence under S. 35: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 452: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 191.

A letter of the Government of India in which Anaesthesine is included in the list of recognised preparations is not admissible: 42 I.C. 166: 32 P.W.R. 1917 (Cr.).

Entries in Ledger account of High Commissioner for India in London—If relevant facts from which inference of liability of defendant can be drawn—Presumption under S. 114 that official acts have been regularly performed and common course of business has been regularly followed can serve to strengthen acceptability and reliability of entries: A.I.R. 1960 J.&K. 136.

Where certain item of property is a puduval registry in the name of a certain person who also holds the adjoining items of properties on mortgage, the normal presumption is that he is the owner of that property. The mortgagor who claims that the item is an accretion to the mortgage holding has to make out the case by clear and convincing evidence: A.I.R. 1958 Ker. 335.

Kotwari book kept in serial and chronological order—Some pages torn—Evidentiary value of entries: 1958 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 135.

Right to compensation—Proceeding under Hyderabad Land Acquisition Act—Grant of land in 1930 with reservation of tamarind grove—Entry in revenue register—Held, on construction, that tamarind grove did not pass with grant—Agreement in 1945 that if grantee paid Rs. 25,000 he would be allowed to cut and remove tamarind trees—Non-payment of that sum—Grantee could not acquire any title to those trees—Their value less than Rs. 25,000 amount payable to grantor deductible—Grantee not entitled to compensation in respect of tamarind trees: (1967) 1 Mys.L.J. 159.

Custom—Hindu Jats of Jullunder District—Divorce by husband recognised: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 142.

Irrigation slips are good evidence of the fact of possession: 1951 All.W.R. (Rev.) 140: 1951 R.D. 119.

The certificate of marriage issued by the Devanathaswamy Temple's Executive Officer who is a public servant, held, is legal evidence in prosecution for contracting second marriage during the subsistence of the first marriage; its contents stand proved by mere production of its original: (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 783 (Mad.).

Certificate of marriage in the Hyderabad State are of particular importance and cannot be lightly brushed aside in view of the many circulars or orders issued by the Ecclesiastical Department of the State laying down stringent rules to safeguard against the preparation of false or incorrect marriage certificates: I.L.R. (1952) Hyd. 7: A.I.R. 1952 Hyd. 3.

Endorsement by Sub-Registrar may be treated as sufficient proof of the execution—Specific denial of execution is necessary before the document is required to be proved. [A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 382; A.I.R. 1946 All. 178; A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 155, Foll.]: 1952 A.M.L.J. 33: A.I.R. 1953 Ajmer 19.

Income-tax documents—Suit to recover business dues—Plaintiff claiming defendant to have transacted through intermediaries—Income-tax assessment order against a plaintiff's witness produced to show dealings by defendant through intermediary—Such order being a public document within the meaning of S. 74, its certified copy is admissible under S. 65(a)—Yet it cannot be used as evidence against the defendant: 1967 Ker.L.J. 237.

Extracts of village records—Admissibility: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 367.

Land—Land recorded as 'Gair Mumkin land' is not 'land'—Burden to displace presumption of entry: A.I.R. 1966 Punj. 185 (F.B.).

The statement taken by the Tehsildar who has given a certificate that it was read over, explained and admitted to be correct by the deponent is admissible under S. 35; refusal to admit the same is illegal: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 35: 1974 Cr.L.J. 215.

When a Tehsildar has not been authorised by the Tamil Nadu Act 50 of 1982 to issue any income certificate, held, a certificate issued by him to that effect cannot be taken into account unless the Tehsildar figured as a witness and testified to his certificate: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 462.

Section 36—Notes.

Maps and surveys made in India for revenue purposes or official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested will be admissible and are valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they are made. They are not conclusive, and may be shown to be wrong but in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be properly judicially received in evidence as correct when made: 68 Cal.L.J. 293. See A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 1: 45 M.L.J. 444 (P.C.); 9 Cal.L.J. 415: 2 I.C. 648; (1942) 44 Bom.L.R. 295: A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 161.

There is nothing wrong in the operation of superimposition of maps and plan from the legal point of view and the Court may rely on a plan which is superimposed, provided both these plans are brought to the same scale and no cogent reasons have been shown for rejecting the plan: 1959 An.L.T. 305.

Where the Thak and Revenue survey maps differ and the Thak map agrees with the local land-marks, the Thak map and the boundary shown in it can be accepted in preference to the Revenue survey map and the boundary ascertained by the pleader Commissioner upon its basis: 73 Cal.L.J. 47: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 148. As to evidentiary value of Thak map, see (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 472: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 403; 68 Cal.L.J. 293. As to reliability of Rennel's map, see 56 Cal.L.J. 369: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 222.

The maps of Rennel published in 1914 were withdrawn and the sales of copies printed in 1914 were stopped under orders of Government. They are, therefore, not admissible: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 935; (1941-42) 46 Cal.W.N. 218: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 520.

So far as river surveys and road surveys are concerned Rennel's maps (1769-71) are scientific and accurate ones, only the village sites shown in his maps are approximate. Rennel's maps can be made the basis for adjudication of land revenue: 197 I.C. 5: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 520: (1941-42) 46 Cal.W.N. 218. Maps prepared under Calcutta Survey Act: (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 419: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 345; 68 Cal.L.J. 293: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 148. Entry in Revenue Survey Map, see 98 I.C. 166: A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 204; A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 36: 1 Pat.L.T. 817; A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 148.

For determining a plot's distance from the deep stream of a river, held, a map prepared by Education Department is admissible and cannot be rejected merely because it was not prepared by the revenue authorities: 1986 All.W.C. 701.

Ex parte statements in Survey maps should be regarded not as primary proof but merely corroborative proof—but if they relate to distant times or no direct evidence is available, their value assumes greater proportion: 113 I.C. 703: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 284.

Plots or properties where atleast three walls or three sides meet, commonly known as 'Sihadda' should be taken as fixed points for purpose of measurements while preparing survey maps; corners of houses where only two walls meet ought not to be taken as fixed points because the position of such walls could change during reconstructions. If measurements taken on the basis of a fixed point do not tally with entries in the khasra and the survey map, that fixed point should be given up and another fixed point be fixed: 1982 All.L.J. 561.

Where in a survey map, the various boundaries were plotted and surveyed and not the constructions within those boundaries, though they were shown within the respective boundaries, the question whether a well was in the concerned plot should be decided from what such plot was shown to contain and not whether the well was marked as being near the boundary or far from it: 1982 All.L.J. 561. See also 1982 All.L.J. 533.

Even if a plan prepared by a Commissioner is not an integral part of the trial and appellate judgments, it is admissible in evidence to render those judgments intelligible: 1959 Ker.L.T. 1110: I.L.R. (1960) Ker. 7: A.I.R. 1960 Ker. 127.

Site plan prepared for a case has very little probative value on question of title: A.I.R. 1930 All. 26. An entry in the current settlement record carries with it a strong presumption of correctness unless it is rebutted: 22 Pat.L.T. 699: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 260.

Where in order to prove distance between scene of occurrence and the village of dacoity, map kept in the library was relied on, see 1977 All.W.C. 671: 1977 All.Cr.R. 468.

Ss. 36 and 83: Proof of Maps.—A map which is not a published map generally offered for public sale nor one made under the authority of Government, is not within S. 36. It is on the contrary within the provision of S. 83, that maps made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate: I.L.R. 16 Pat. 258: A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 69: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 631 (P.C.). See also A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 935.

Printed maps prepared by Government of the different wards of a city and coming from the office of a Government Officer are admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 357: A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 161.

Where the diara operations extend over a very wide area and the diara map is not prepared with reference to any particular survey trijunction of certain mouzahs named, the presumption of correctness of the diara map is in no sense rebutted by the mere fact that that particular trijunction has not been located: A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 574.

A map by itself is nothing but statements made by the maker by means of lines and pictorial representation instead of by word of mouth as to the state or configuration of a particular site and the objects standing thereon. To admit in evidence a map without calling the maker thereof is the same as admitting in evidence statements made by a third party who is not called as a witness.

In other words, it amounts to admitting hearsay. The Evidence Act having prepared all rules of evidence not contained in any statute or regulation, the party seeking to put any document in evidence must show under which section of that Act such evidence is admissible. A map prepared in connexion with a previous suit between the defendant and another in which there was no dispute as to the lands in dispute in the present suit, is not admissible in evidence under S. 13 or S. 32 or S. 36: (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 791: A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 492.

S. 36 of the Evidence Act mentions two kinds of maps, viz. (1) published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, and (2) maps or plans under the authority of Government. The first kind is considered relevant because the publication being accessible to the whole community and open to criticism of all, the probabilities are in favour of any inaccuracy being challenged and exposed. But the statements made in such a map are merely relevant. There is no presumption as to accuracy. On the other hand, S. 83 of the Act lays down that the Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of the Central Government or any State Government were so made and are accurate but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate. The onus of proving that such a map is accurate lies on the party who produces it: A.I.R. 1965 Cal. 282.

Maps prepared by private persons and not under authority of Government—Are irrelevant unless proof of fact that they were generally offered for public sale is given—So also no presumption in favour of the accuracy of such maps can be drawn under S. 83: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 644.

Section 37—Notes.

[See also Ss. 78 and 81, infra].

It clearly follows from Ss. 37, 78, 81 and 114(e) that issuance of a notification in the eye of law is notice or imputed knowledge of its contents to the citizens in general; that obviously cannot be so in the case of a mere order or decision of the Government; an order derives its sanction or source when the authority vested with lawful power to pass it appends its signature thereto but it is only the factum of its proclamation or publication in the gazette or by other prescribed modes which alone would impress it with the indicia or requisite stamping of a notification; till then it remains a mere order or decision cloistered in the knowledge of its author and of no legal effect: A.I.R. 1984 P.&H. 87: (1983) 85 Punj.L.R. 741: 1983 Punj.L.J. 549: 1984 Rev.L.R. 1: I.L.R. (1984) 1 P.&H. 78 (F.B.).

The statement of facts contained in the Official Gazette on private affairs or historical facts in some cases is the best evidence of facts stated therein; though entitled to due consideration, it is not conclusive of the matters requiring judicial adjudication; in an appropriate case where the evidence on record is not sufficient to prove the fact in issue, the statement of such facts in the Official Gazette may be relied upon without further proof as corroborative evidence. Thus, where the question in issue was whether Dhangars (by caste) of Bombay Province, were governed by the

38. Relevancy of statements as to any law contained in law books.—When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant.

HOW MUCH OF A STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED

39. What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, book or series of letters or papers.—When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.

Banaras School of Hindu Law, held, the facts stated in the Indore State Gazette regarding their social status and habitation may be relevant and may in an appropriate case presumed to be genuine but not conclusive; however, in complete absence of evidence to prove the party's family or ancestors' migration from Mathura area, the Indore State Gazette could not be accepted as sufficient to prove such migration for connecting Holkars of Indore with Dhangars of Bombay Province: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 306 (S.C.).

Proof of foreign law.—Certified copy of Burma Gazette before Court—Copy attested as true copy by seal of Court in Burma—Held, this was no satisfactory proof of Act published in that Gazette: A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 135.

The only effect of Ss. 38 and 84 read together is that the Court may take judicial notice of a publication containing a foreign law, if it is issued under the authority of the foreign Government concerned and may accept the law as set out in such publication as a law in force in the particular foreign country at the relevant time. But such a publication cannot be evidence that what is contained in it is the whole law. What the whole law of a foreign country at a particular point of time is cannot, therefore, be proved except by calling in an expert, as provided for in S. 45, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 48.

Hidayat Ghair Mansukshuda, Sigha Dewan, bearing Kota Coat of Arms, purporting to have been published under authority of His Highness of Kota, is presumed to be genuine—Law of Limitation contained therein is relevant: 1959 Raj.L.W. 323.

Going strictly by S. 38 of the Evidence Act, the report of a judgment in a case in a newspaper does not appear to be relevant, because a newspaper cannot be regarded as a book purporting to be a report of the rulings of the Courts. The presumption under S. 84 of the Evidence Act cannot also arise, strictly speaking. All the same, a report of a case reported only in the newspaper 'Salesman' was allowed to be relied upon: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 547: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1120: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 451.

Section 39—Notes.

S. 39 cannot be invoked for the purpose of letting in a confession in respect of which the bar created by Ss. 24, 25 and 26, has not been removed by S. 27: I.L.R. 10 Lah. 283: A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 344 (F.B.).

Only pertinent and not all recitals in the admitted document are admissible: A.I.R. 1930 All. 299.

Where in a prosecution for murder, the appellant, in the appellate Court, produced a book by Professor of an Agriculture University, but its author was not examined, held, no reliance could be placed on it: 1979 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 89 (All.) (D.B.).

JUDGMENTS OF COURTS OF JUSTICE WHEN RELEVANT

40. Previous judgments relevant to bar a second suit or trial.—The existence of any judgment, order or decree which by law prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognizance of such suit or to hold such trial.

Section—40 Notes.

Ss. 40 to 43—A judgment is conclusive evidence for or against all persons whether parties, privies or strangers only of its own existence, date and legal effects distinguished from the accuracy of the decision rendered; in other words, the law attributes unerring verity to the substantive as opposed to the judicial portions of the record except upon matters of a public nature in which they may be evidence, though not conclusive, of that which they state. As between the same parties or those claiming under them a judgment is admissible also as res judicata or as proof of the particular point which it decides but in any case not of the recitals made therein and under certain circumstances and in certain cases a judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in a subsequent suit was not a party may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes and with certain objects in the subsequent suit. All these principles are founded on the assumption that a judgment is a public transaction of solemn nature and as such should be taken to be faithfully recorded and also that the record of a Court of justice has two portions: (1) the substantive portion and (2) the judicial portion. In the substantive portion of the record, the Court records or attests its own proceedings and acts while in the judicial portion the Court expresses its judgment or opinion on the matter in question and in forming that opinion it is bound to have regard only to the evidence and arguments adduced before it by the respective parties to the proceedings. The questions as to whether the pleader guardian did or did not appear on behalf of minor defendants at the trial stage or as to whether any written statement was or was not filed on their behalf or as to whether guardian ad litem appointed in the case did or did not appear and make any submission in the High Court are questions which relate to the course of proceedings, or in other words, are matters connected with the substantive portion of the record and not with the judicial portion. Therefore, the aforesaid facts endorsed in the judgment may be used in evidence if they are found relevant under one or other of the provisions of the Evidence Act. S. 35 cannot be held relevant for the admissibility of such a judgment but it is admissible under S. 13 and also under Ss. 11 and 5. The point in issue being whether there is any previous judgment against the minor the provision of S. 5 is at once attracted and so also the provisions of Ss. 13 and 11, S. 13 to prove that in the former litigation the guardian ad litem had not as such exercised his right on behalf of the minors and S. 11 to establish that the facts stated in the judgments are inconsistent with the fact in issue to the effect that the guardian ad litem had not done anything that he should have done on behalf of or in the interest of the minors: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 477.

The actual decision and the findings arrived at in a previous judgment cannot be used as evidence to decide the points which are in issue in a different case except in cases coming under Ss. 40 to 42: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 690.

Ss. 40 to 44—Scope—Judgment in rem and judgment in personam—Estoppel: (1959) An.W.R. 72: A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 280.

See also (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 132.

Ss. 40 to 42 deal with judgments which are res judicata, in rem and relating, to matters of public nature; but they raise no presumption that prior judgments embody correct adjudications; the law only prohibits going behind them in certain cases on the ground of public policy; judgments qua judgments and as expression of the pronouncing Court's opinion are relevant only under Ss. 40 to 42; if they do not fall under any of the sections, they are inadmissible; thus, findings in non-inter partes judgments about title and possession of property are not admissible in suits for injunction to restrain inference with the plaintiff's possession: A.I.R. 1972 Ker. 196: 1971 Ker.L.J. 578.

The principles of admissibility of judgments are: (1) a judgment in rem is always admissible; (2) a judgment in personam in inter partes is not at all admissible except f three limited purposes of proving as to who were parties thereto, what was the decree passed and what were the properties involved therein; (3) where neither of the parties were parties in the earlier judgments in personam, the recitals or finding or genealogies referred to in the judgment in personam are wholly inadmissible; (4) the probative value of documents, however ancient, is precious little if they do not disclose the sources of their information or have not attained sufficient notoriety; and (5) no statements or declarations or depositions made post litem motam are inadmissible: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 93.

Judgment referred to in S. 40 is relevant only when its existence bars Courts from taking cognizance of suit or deciding it, namely, when it operates as res judicata, and not otherwise: (1990) 1 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 52 (D.B.).

S. 40 applies to a case in which the Court has jurisdiction to decide a matter and one party says it should not do so because that matter has been decided before. [I.L.R. 6 Cal. 171, held not good law in view of I.L.R. 23 Cal. 533 (P.C.); I.L.R. 19 All. 277 (P.C.) and I.L.R. 25 Cal. 522 (P.C.)]: (1928-29) 33 Cal.W.N. 795: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 374 (F.B.).

S. 40 does not lay down that the judgment must prevent the Court from taking cognizance of the entire suit as against all the parties. If the judgment prevents the Court from taking cognizance of the suit so far as it relates to some of the parties thereto then also S. 40 would apply. Accordingly, a judgment passed in a previous suit against some of the defendants is admissible in evidence under the section in a subsequent suit filed against them as well as others: (1940-41) 45 Cal.W.N. 420.

An appellate order modifying imposition of punishment awarded in disciplinary proceedings does not fall under any of Ss. 40 to 42 as it is neither an inter partes judgment nor judgment in rem nor relatable to matters of public nature; it may, if at all, fall under S. 43 and be conclusive evidence for or against all persons, parties or privies to it. But a statement therein that a person was actually enjoying certain lands since the specified time, will not be admissible evidence under S. 43: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 662.

As to evidentiary value of judgment, see 19 Sind L.R. 370: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 161; 43 Cal.L.J. 135: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 698 (decision in previous rent suit admissible); decision as to age in guardianship proceedings—Admissibility in suit by ward for property. See 7 I.C. 505.

Previous judgment—Relevancy and admissibility of—Words 'right' and 'transaction'—Interpretation of: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 66.

Previous decision as to part of matter in controversy by competent Court—Would be binding in subsequent stage of the same proceeding: 1968 Cr.L.J. 50: A.I.R. 1968 Del. 13.

Though S. 40 does not use the term res judicata, it nevertheless refers to its consequences; it is because of S. 40 that the previous judgment relied upon in the subsequent suit to raise the plea of res judicata becomes relevant and admissible. S. 44 has, however, the overriding effect as it permits the other party to show that the earlier judgment was incompetent or without jurisdiction or was obtained by fraud or collusion and rendered irrelevant and inadmissible: A.I.R. 1984 All. 216: 1984 All.C.J. 141: 1984 All.W.C. 230 (D.B.).

A previous judgment between the same parties even if it does not operate as res judicata is good evidence which cannot be ignored: (1946) 48 Punj.L.R. 195: A.I.R. 1946 Lah. 387.

Finding in previous suit inter partes—Finding not operating as res judicata —Still party against whom finding is given is bound to displace that finding: 1959 Ker.L.T. 1110: I.L.R. (1960) Ker. 7: A.I.R. 1960 Ker. 127.

Previous judgments are relevant under S. 40 to bar a second suit or trial as res judicata; such judgments would ordinarily be between the same parties as in the second suit; the earlier judgment can, thus, be shown by the adverse party as not of a competent Court or having been obtained by fraud or collusion. It is only judgments relevant under Ss. 41 and 42 that even a third party can impeach them under S. 44: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 197: (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 593.

Judgments in earlier mortgage suit and appeal therefrom are admissible in a suit to declare mortgage decree as not binding: (1973) 2 Mys.L.J. 176.

Where in prosecution for murder by administering 'dhatura' mixed in a 'laddu', a judgment of the accused's conviction for an earlier pick-pocketing by resorting to similar trick of 'dhatura' poisoning in 'laddu' under S. 328 read with S. 392 of the Indian Penal Code was relied upon to show the accused's character, held, as the judgment in that case was rendered subsequent to the incident in question, that subsequent decision was not covered by Ss. 40, 41 and 42; it could not be relied upon: 1976 Raj.L.W. 450: I.L.R. (1976) 26 Raj. 655: 1976 W.L.N. 478 (D.B.).

Judgment is not admissible to prove that the plaintiff has filed a false case: (1962) 3 Guj.L.R. 107: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 55: A.I.R. 1962 Guj. 214.

The decision in prior proceedings under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, is admissible in a later suit for possession between the same parties: I.L.R. 60 Cal. 1171: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 923.

An award or compromise made in a Criminal Court assigning certain property for maintenance is not admissible in a later civil suit to prove title: I.L.R. 21 Pat. 601: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 432. Decree for confirmation of possession not conclusive proof of actual possession: I.L.R. 15 Pat. 336: A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 537. See also 19 Nag.L.J. 285.

Obtaining of possession after passing of the decree in accordance therewith, even if without execution, amounts to satisfaction to the decree for possession; if the decree holder is dispossessed thereafter, he can file a second suit on a fresh cause of action; the judgment in the earlier case will be admissible to establish his title: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 106: 1970 Punj.L.J. 837: (1971) 73 Punj.L.R. 88 (D.B.).

Where the revisional order against the striking out of defence was neither filed nor challenged, held, it is not relevant under Ss. 40 to 43; if it was taken note of by the Courts below and not challenged in the High Court, the High Court cannot ignore it: 1981 B.L.J.R. 637.

On a question whether a judgment passed by the British Indian Association in 1859 which had not been filed in the Court of Financial Commissioner within 6 months after passing of the Oudh Estates Act was admissible, it was held, that Ss. 40 to 43 are not applicable so as to make it relevant: I.L.R. 18 Luck. 346: 1942 O.W.N. 657: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 91.

Where there are two decrees the earlier decree upholding a party's right and the later decree negativing that right, the earlier decree cannot be deemed to be subsisting as a valid and enforceable decree. It has been superseded by the later decree. In order to render the earlier decree inoperative it is not necessary that it should be reversed or superseded by proceedings arising out of the same case. On the other hand, it may be collaterally superseded and rendered ineffective even by some ulterior and independent proceedings. What is material is that the parties to the first decree must also be parties to the subsequent proceedings so that the decision in such subsequent proceedings may be binding on them. The rights and liabilities covered by the decree must also have been considered and adjudicated upon in the subsequent proceedings. When there have been two adjudications binding on the same parties in respect of the same right the later adjudication has to prevail over the earlier one. It cannot be said that so long as the earlier decree has not been reversed or superseded in express terms the executing Court is bound to enforce that decree. Where the existence of the later decree having the effect of superseding the earlier decree is brought to the notice of the execution Court, it is bound to realise that the earlier decree has become inoperative and unenforceable and thus to refuse to execute it: A.I.R. 1952 Trav.-Co. 294: I.L.R. (1952) Trav.-Co. 252.

Judicial precedents—Binding nature: A.I.R. 1967 All. 414.

Judgment in writ proceedings—Binding character of: A.I.R. 1960 Ori. 46. See also I.L.R. (1984) 2 Karn. 1546.

There does not appear to be anything in the Evidence Act to warrant the view that the statement of facts in a previous judgment can be admissible in a subsequent case and used as evidence in a subsequent case to decide the points which are in issue in that case: I.L.R. 2 Pat. 890: A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 340.

The prosecution for an offence of failure to furnish the return due under R. 11(1) of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, Rules punishable under S. 15(a) of the Act, ended in an acquittal on the ground that the prosecution had failed to prove the guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt. On subsequent assessment based on the same questions, held, (1) that Ss. 40 to 43 of the Evidence Act may be taken as embodying primary and fundamental principles governing admissibility of judgments and unless the assessees are able to bring their case within the permissible ambit of the said provision, they may not be heard to rely on their success in the criminal Court. Neither the Sales Tax Act nor the Rules provide for an election between the two courses criminal prosecution and the making of an assessment. Both courses were open concurrently to the department. Action in respect of one of the sanctions was no bar to proceedings in the other direction; (ii) that, the assessees could not seek shelter under the doctrine of autre-fois-acquit. That principle can apply only to a second prosecution for the same offence; (iii) that the principle of res judicata embodied in S. 11, C.P.Code, could have no application as its operation is limited to civil actions; nor could the department be precluded from proceeding with the assessment on the ground of acquiescence in the Magistrate's finding and decision: (1958) 1 An.W.R. 405: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 371.

Where in an earlier decision the Court had given adequate and cogent reasons for rejecting the prosecution's case, held, on the basis of same facts, the accused cannot be convicted in a later case: (1985) 1 Crimes 186 (Del.).

Discharge under S. 253(1), Cr.P.Code, in earlier case—Subsequent suit for malicious prosecution—Copy of first information report of earlier case not filed nor proved otherwise—Held, that the judgment in question would not be relevant or admissible to prove the contents of the First Information Report: 1978 All.W.C. 63: 1978 All.L.J. 1391.

Autre-fois-acquit—Applicability—Plea when arises—Two different trials for distinct offences arising out of different transactions—Common object in both cases different—Acquittal in one does not bar conviction in another—Reasoning of judgment of acquittal not admissible as evidence: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 116: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 781: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 83.

Evidence of dishonest intention of accused—Previous judgment convicting accused for same offence is relevant and admissible to prove such intention: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 787: A.I.R. 1961 Manipur 43.

Principle of res judicata—Applicability—Dacoity—Several persons apprehended, tried and acquitted—After conclusion of trial two more persons connected with same dacoity and who were absconding arrested and tried separately—Finding given in previous trial not binding in second trial: A.I.R. 1964 All. 139: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 378.

Acquittal in trial on charge of attempt to murder—Judgment—Relevancy in subsequent trial on charge of murder. See I.L.R. 23 Pat. 95: A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 247.

Accused cutting certain neem trees standing on the land which is with the usufructuary mortgagee—Trial Court holding that the mortgagor was entitled to the trees on redemption and that the accused had cut them with the intention to cause wrongful loss to mortgagor convicting the accused—In revision against conviction subsequent judgment of civil Court recognizing right of accused to cut and remove the trees brought to the notice of Court—Judgment of civil Court should be admitted as additional evidence in the interests of justice by the revisional Court and the accused acquitted as the judgment showed that the right claimed by him was justified and even a bona fide claim of right would rule out criminal intention on his part: (1964) 2 M.L.J. 583.

Relevancy of criminal Court's judgment in civil case.—A judgment of acquittal in a criminal Court is irrelevant in a civil suit based on the same cause of action, just as a judgment of conviction cannot, in a subsequent civil suit, be treated as evidence of facts on which the conviction is based: I.L.R. (1962) 12 Raj. 202: 1962 Raj.L.W. 77: A.I.R. 1962 Raj. 127.

Though reasons for acquittal in earlier case nor evidence on record is relevant in a later case. The previous judgment is relevant and admissible. [(1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 116 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1975 Cr.L.J. 345 (All.) (D.B.).

It is wrong for a civil Court to rely too much on decisions in criminal cases when deciding questions of title in civil suits: 21 Pat.L.T. 873. See also I.L.R. 21 Pat. 601: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 432 (awarded in criminal Court in maintenance proceedings). The findings of a Magistrate in a criminal case, far from operating as res judicata between the parties, are not relevant even in any other dispute between the parties. Such findings are wholly inadmissible. A judgment in a previous criminal case can only be admissible in evidence to establish two facts; the first being that there was such a case and the second being that in the case the accused were or were not convicted as the case may be: (1949-50) 54 Cal.W.N. 186.

Judgment of civil Court in title suit which is not final can be admitted in criminal proceedings as proof of fact of possession of disputed property: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 578: A.I.R. 1965 All. 511.

The judgment of criminal Court is not admissible in a civil Court as proof of the point decided by the criminal Court. The judgment of a criminal Court convicting a person is relevant in a civil Court only to show that there was such a trial resulting in conviction and sentence. A civil Court is not bound to adopt the finding of the criminal Court and must find the facts for itself and independently of what was decided by the criminal Court. The judgment of conviction cannot in a subsequent civil suit be treated as evidence of facts on which the conviction is based: I.L.R. (1966) Guj. 500: (1966) 7 Guj.L.R. 662.

Decision of criminal Court—It cannot be relied on as one binding in civil action: (1966) 79 Mad.L.W. 107: (1966) 1 M.L.J. 348: 1966 Mad.W.N. 47: A.I.R. 1966 Mad. 425.

A finding on certain facts by a civil Court in an action in personam is not relevant before the criminal Court when it is called upon to give a finding on the same facts and vice versa. To hold that when a party has been able to satisfy a civil Court as to the justice of his claim and has got a decree which is finally binding upon the parties it would not be open to criminal Courts to go behind the findings of the civil Court is to place the latter without any valid reason in a much higher position than what it actually occupies in the system of administration and to make it master not only of cases in which it is called upon to adjudicate but also of cases in which it is not called upon to determine and over which it has really no control. There is no reason why the decision of the civil Court particularly in an action in personam should be allowed to have greater sanctity: 217 I.C. 284: 46 Cr.L.J. 296: A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 23 (F.B.).

Where a judgment in a civil suit has simply been used for the purpose of showing that the civil suit was dismissed on a finding that the agreement was forged and the Sessions Judge has examined the evidence adduced in the case independently and come to the finding that the document was forged, the Judge cannot be said to have committed any illegality: 21 Cut.L.T. 296: A.I.R. 1955 Ori. 156.

The judgment of a criminal Court and the depositions of the witnesses therein are inadmissible in a civil suit, to prove the liability of defendants: 106 P.R. 1915: 32 I.C. 18. See also 117 P.R. 1912: 16 I.C. 491. On a question as to the caste of a particular family evidence of members and decisions in previous litigation are relevant: I.L.R. 48 Mad. 1: A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 497.

Criminal proceedings against employee ending in his acquittal—Judgment of criminal Court admissible in evidence in the civil proceedings for the purpose of showing that there was a criminal case of identical charges, ending in acquittal: 1968 Lab. I.C. 1074: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 300.

Criminal proceeding—Conviction or acquittal has no evidentiary value in a subsequent civil proceeding—Findings of criminal Court are inadmissible: I.L.R. (1968) 49 Pat. 1305: 1968 B.L.J.R. 197.

Relevancy of criminal Court's decision in departmental enquiry.—Where the acquittal of a delinquent workman in a criminal case is being proceeded with by way of domestic enquiry for the misconduct based on the same occurrence, held, the judgment of acquittal does not take away or fetter the employer's power and discretion to continue with the domestic enquiry though it has to be taken into consideration as a factor for the exercise of the power and discretion vested in the employer. [A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 626, Foll.]: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 99 (D.B.); (1980) 18 Del.L.T. 369. See also Constitution of India, Art. 311, N. 35 (Volume 13 of this Manual).

Relevancy of criminal Court's judgment in case for damages.—Judgment of criminal Court not admissible in subsequent suit for damages: I.L.R. 2 Rang. 549: A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 143. Judgment in civil suit giving rise to criminal trial—Not legally admissible in a trial for the offence: I.L.R. 6 Cal. 247.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, the judgment of the criminal Court can only be used to establish the fact that an acquittal has taken place as a fact in issue in the civil suit. The grounds upon which that acquittal was based are inadmissible: I.L.R. 56 Mad. 641: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 429: 65 M.L.J. 146. See also 41 Mys.H.C.R. 283; A.I.R. 1959 Manipur 32.

Scope—Suit for malicious prosecution—Criminal Court's judgment—Admissibility of—Civil Court must go into evidence and decide for itself whether want of reasonable and probable cause or malice existed or not: A.I.R. 1960 Ori. 29.

Malicious prosecution—Suit for damages—Criminal Court's judgment as to acquittal of plaintiff—Value of: A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 91: 35 Cut.L.T. 835: 1970 Cr.L.J. 819: I.L.R. (1969) Cut. 821 (D.B.).

The judgment of the criminal Court is admissible in evidence in the civil suit for damages caused by such negligence but only as a prima facie evidence of negligence: 1972 Acc.C.J. 115 (D.B.).

Where an occurrence resulted in criminal proceedings as well as a civil suit for damages and the accused were ultimately acquitted, held, the judgment of the criminal case is not relevant in the civil suit; the standard of proof for imposing liability is widely different between the two proceedings; while a defendant in a civil suit can be made liable on probabilities or on mere consideration of the burden of proof if there is no other evidence, no accused can be convicted on such uncertain grounds: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 238: 1982 Ker.L.T. 49.

Relevancy of criminal Court's judgment in motor accident claim case.—A Motor Accident Claims Tribunal is not bound by the judgment of the criminal Court about the accident having been occasioned due to the vehicle driver's negligence; judgments of the criminal Court do not fall under the ambit of Ss. 40 to 42: A.I.R. 1977 Goa 15.

Decision in civil suit—Order in claim case—Use of in criminal case—Legality. See A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 212, cited under S. 11, supra.

Judgment of criminal Court determining guilt or innocence of driver of vehicle is not binding on Claims Tribunal under Motor Vehicles Act: A.I.R. 1970 Punj. 137: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 452: I.L.R. (1970) 1 Punj. 617 (D.B.).

In case of a motor accident, the judgment in the criminal Court is not relevant in the claim petition under the Motor Vehicles Act, and certainly not for establishing the fact in issue, by virtue of Ss. 40 and 43. Similarly, the judgment in the claim petition is equally not relevant in the criminal case and certainly not for establishing the guilt of the accused therein; thus, proceedings in the claim petition cannot be stayed pending disposal of the criminal case: A.I.R. 1992 All. 28: 1992 All.L.J. 318: (1991) 18 All.L.R. 585. See however 1979 Acc.C.J. 282 (Karn.) (D.B.) [Fact of conviction before criminal Court is relevant before the claims Tribunal].

While a finding of the criminal Court that the accused was guilty of having driven the vehicle rashly and negligently may be taken as prima facie evidence by the Motor Accidents Claim Tribunal in a compensation claim, the reverse is not true; the acquittal of the accused by the criminal Court is of no relevance in the compensation case where the degree of proof required is much lower: (1989) 3 Del. Lawyer 320: A.I.R. 1990 N.O.C. 40 (Del.).

Acquittal in a criminal trial for rash and negligent driving, held, has no effect on a motor accident claim case arising from the same accident: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 1354: (1980) 93 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 28: (1980) 3 S.C.C. 437. But it is admissible to prove who were parties, date of order and what order was passed: A.I.R. 1979 Pat. 204: 1979 B.L.J.R. 348: 1979 B.B.C.J. 273 (D.B.).

Where the Motor Accidents Claim Tribunal had declined to dismiss the claim merely because certain witnesses whose evidence was cogent and convincing and who were disinterested and direct witnesses of the fatal accident, had not been examined in the criminal case; the Tribunal had rightly declined to give primacy to the criminal judgment of acquittal of the vehicle driver: A.I.R. 1990 Andh. Pra. 162.

Magistrate's judgment under S. 145/144 Cr.P.Code.—A Magistrate's judgment under S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not relevant as a previous judgment barring a second suit and trial; it is a Police order and does not operate as res judicata; it may be relevant under S. 42 but only to show that there was a dispute between the parties as to the factum of possession decided by the Magistrate in a particular manner: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 4: I.L.R. (1971) 1 Punj. 474.

The decision of the Magistrate in a proceeding under S. 145, Cr. P. Code in favour of the defendant on the question of possession is not binding on the civil Court dealing with a suit for declaration of title and possession. The civil Court is entitled to come to different finding altogether: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 406; 1981 B.B.C.J. 212.

It is settled law so far as the Patna High Court is concerned, that the judgment of a Magistrate under S. 144, Cr.P.Code, is not evidence of the possession of the party in whose favour the proceeding terminated. The report of a Magistrate deputed by the Court to make a local inquiry is only evidence of the fact that the Magistrate was deputed to make the inquiry and that, on his inquiry, he came to the conclusion that a certain party was in possession. The report itself is not evidence of

41. Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc., jurisdiction.—A final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, [1][order or decree] declares it to have accrued to that person; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, [1][order or decree] declared that it had ceased or should cease; and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, [1][order or decree] declares that it had been or should be his property.

Since proceedings under S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are not in the nature of trial and do not determine any criminal liability, held, judgments of acquittal in an earlier instituted criminal trial for trespass in the property of a party to the proceedings have no relevance in the proceedings under S. 145 of the Code: (1983) 1 Bom.C.R. 313. See also (1984) 1 Crimes 128 (All.).

On this section, see 2 Mys.H.C.R. 276; 14 M.I.A. 367; I.L.R. 6 Bom. 703; 7 W.R. 388 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1954 All. 8.

A judgment is conclusive proof, as against persons and privies, of facts directly in issue in the case, actually decided by the Court, and appearing from the judgment itself to be the ground on which it was based. But there are certain exceptions to this general rule and the provisions contained in S. 41 are by way of exceptions. This section consists of two parts. The first one makes certain judgments, orders of decrees relevant, and the second one makes those judgments conclusive evidence in certain matters. In order that a judgment should come within the purview of S. 41, it must be (1) of a competent Court in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction; and (2) it must (a) confer upon or take away from any person any legal character, or (b) declare any person to be entitled to any such character, or (c) to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely. Under S. 4(2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, a decision of an Insolvency Court is final between a debtor and the debtor's estate on the one hand and all claimants against him or it and all persons claiming through or under them or any of them on the other hand. Thus, a decision is not binding on the plaintiff who were not debtors or claimants as against the debtors inasmuch as they were not parties to the insolvency case or the appeal arising therefrom. S. 4(2) of the Act is not at all attracted to the case: 196 B.L.J.R. 544: 1969 Pat.L.J.R. 343: A.I.R. 197 Pat. 138.

To fall within the ambit of the section (1) the judgment must be a final judgment or decree of a competent Court; (2) it must have been exercised in probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction; (3) it must confer upon or take away from any person any legal character or declare any person to be entitled to any such character or specific thing absolutely, not merely against specified persons but the entire world: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 180: 1972 Raj.L.W. 169: 1972 W.L.N. 49.

It is well settled that a judgment in rem like in proceedings for probate, insolvency, matrimonial causes and guardianship etc., are admissible whether or not they are inter partes: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 93.

Under S. 41 only four kinds of judgments (rendered in exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction) as specified therein are in rem and are binding on the whole world; other judgments are in personam and are binding on the parties thereto alone. Thus, a judgment of eviction not against all but only some of the joint tenants is not, and cannot be, a judgment in rem; it does not bind the joint tenants who were impleaded in the eviction proceedings: A.I.R. 1977 All. 239: (1977) 3 All.L.R. 147. See also A.I.R. 1972 Ker. 196: 1971 Ker.L.T. 578, cited under S. 40, supra.

An appellate order modifying imposition of punishment awarded in disciplinary proceedings does not fall under any of Ss. 40 to 42 as it is neither an inter partes judgment nor judgment in rem nor relatable to matters of public nature; it may, if at all, fall under S. 43 and be conclusive evidence for or against all persons, parties or privies to it. But a statement therein that a person was actually enjoying certain lands since the specified time, will not be admissible evidence under S. 43: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 662.

No judgment except that passed by a Court in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction upon any matters indicated in S. 41 can have the effect of a judgment in rem and, therefore, a judgment holding that A is not the adopted son of B is not conclusive against the whole world: 26 All.L.J. 797: A.I.R. 1928 All. 395.

A judgment under S. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure removing the Pujari and directing him to deliver possession of the public temple and its properties to the Trust is not delivered in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction; it is, thus, not a judgment in rem; it binds only those whose interest in the subject-matter is akin to those of the plaintiff or the defendant: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 180: 1972 Raj.L.W. 169: 1972 W.L.N. 49.

The principles of admissibility of judgments are: (1) a judgment in rem is always admissible; (2) a judgment in personam not inter partes is not at all admissible except for three limited purposes of proving as to who were parties thereto, what was the decree passed and what were the properties involved therein; (3) where neither of the parties were parties in the earlier judgments in personam, the recitals or finding or genealogies referred to in the judgment in personam are wholly inadmissible; (4) the probative value of documents, however ancient, is precious little if they do not disclose the sources of their information or have not attained sufficient notoriety; and (5) no statements or declarations or depositions made post litem motam are inadmissible: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 93.

The meaning of 'legal character' means something equivalent to legal status, in the nature of a decision announcing to the whole world what the legal status of the person is; and the 'legal character' must be narrowly construed as any decision thereof would be a judgment in rem: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 445.

The term 'legal character' used in the section means something equivalent to status; it must be narrowly construed because an action in rem is not an action against a thing but availing against all the world: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 180: 1972 Raj.L.W. 169: 1972 W.L.N. 49.

The legal characters that can be conferred or taken away in the exercise of the jurisdiction mentioned in S. 41 do not include the state of being a partner: 22 Sind L.R. 105: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 121.

The words 'not as against any specified person but absolutely' only mean that the finding also binds persons who are not parties and are not entitled to challenge it; it has to be treated as having been given against the whole world: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 445.

(Per Hidayatullah, J., in a dissenting judgment): Conclusiveness, from the point of view of the law of evidence, will attach to a judgment, order or decree, only if it falls within the categories mentioned in S. 41. Once a judgment, etc., falls within it, the law dispenses with the proof of the fact and the conclusion of the former judgment, etc., about the legal character which it confers or declares, together with the declarations of property arising from that legal character, is final. The status of being joint or separate in relation to a Hindu coparcenary property is not one of the legal characters mentioned in it: (1963) 3 S.C.R. 22: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1.

Compromise decree with regard to easements of light and air between owners of adjacent houses—It is not judgment in rem—Such decree cannot be executed against third party purchasing house after decree, although decree provided that it shall bind assignees of parties—Such provision not valid under law of execution: 1967 Mah.L.J. 985: (1967) 69 Bom.L.R. 749 .

An injunction order restraining the other party from interfering with the possession of the plaintiff is a judgment in personam, not in rem; it is, thus, not competent for the civil Court, even in exercise of its inherent powers, to direct the Police for providing protection to the plaintiff; it is rather for the plaintiff to produce a copy of the order before the Police and seek protection; the Court cannot fetter the discretion of the Police or Magistrates to deal with the situation as deemed fit; Police officials are not like members of the Court's staff: (1991-1) 107 Mad.L.W. 513.

Interveners permitted to intervene after rejecting their application for impleading themselves in the application—Interveners do not become parties—Judgment in the application cannot be judgment in rem: A.I.R. 1968 Del. 6.

Order under—Nature of—Order is not order in rem: I.L.R. (1968) 47 Pat. 1.

Judgments in rem declare, define or otherwise determine the status of a person or of a thing, that is their jural relationship to the world generally: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 180: 1972 Raj.L.W. 169: 1972 W.L.N. 49.

Judgments mentioned in S. 41 are usually referred to as 'judgments in rem'; though the phrase used is not defined, yet it has always meant to be a judgment which is conclusive not only against the parties thereto but also against the whole world: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 180: 1972 Raj.L.W. 169: 1972 W.L.N. 49.

Judgment in rem and in personam.—There is a broad distinction between the effect of a judgment in rem and a judgment in personam. The point adjudicated upon in a judgment in rem is always as to the status of the res and is conclusive against the world as to that status, whereas in a judgment in personam the point whatever it may be, which is adjudicated upon (it being as to the status of the res), is conclusive only between the parties or privies: 22 Sind L.R. 105: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 121.

Judgment in rem.—No Court can pronounce a judgment in rem outside the State in which the Court exercises jurisdiction unless such judgment affects either a thing situate, or a person domiciled, within such State. Where the Court of a State gives a judgment affecting the status of a person domiciled within its territory, such judgment is treated by the comity of nations as analogous to a judgment in rem. There is no rule of international law which requires a British Indian Court to accept the judgment of the Supreme Court of His Britanic Majesty Alexandria, as the law of domicile of a deceased, which is the domestic law of British India, as binding outside the limits of that Court's jurisdiction. S. 41 cannot be read as going further than the rule of international law applicable elsewhere. The section clearly deals with what are known as judgments in rem though that expression is not used in the section. The words 'competent Court' in S. 41 mean the Court of any country which is competent to pass a judgment in rem: I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 529: A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 394.

Wadia, J.—In order to be a judgment in rem binding on the world, there must be a finding on status which is not only the foundation of the judgment but is necessary for it. It cannot be conclusive if it relates to a matter which need not have been controverted or which was not material or which only came collaterally into question or which was only in identity cognizable. The only judgment in rem as to status absolutely is the judgment pronounced not only according to the law of domicile but also by the Court of domicile: A.I.R.1938 Bom. 394: I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 529. See also I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 507: A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 693: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 499.

A decree likely to be passed in a suit for declaration of title to land binds only the parties thereto; it will be a judgment in personam and not in rem: (1992-2) 102 Punj.L.R. 81.

Where two Division Benches of the same High Court had taken two contrary views on the same point, held, neither the decision of the earlier Bench could be deemed as a judgment in rem nor the later decision be characterised as without jurisdiction and non est or per incurium: 1982 Lab.I.C. 1389: (1982) 1 Sim.L.J. 228 (F.B.).

A judgment regarding the validity of an anti-adoption agreement between the adopting mother and the natural father of the adopted son will not come in the category of a judgment in rem so as to be binding against the whole world: 1956 Madh. B.L.J. 822: A.I.R. 1957 Madh. Bh. 159.

A decree granted by a Court not exercising matrimonial jurisdiction, in a suit under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, that the plaintiff in that suit was no longer the wife of the defendant is not a judgment in rem to which S. 41 of the Evidence Act will apply. Such a decree is one which falls under S. 43, Specific Relief Act: I.L.R. 59 Bom. 278: (1934) 36 Bom.L.R. 1021: A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 5. So also a decision in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights: I.L.R. 11 Rang. 198: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 250. So also an order in lunacy: I.L.R. 56 Mad. 904: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 624: 65 M.L.J. 279.

But it is still relevant and binding upon the parties thereto and those who claim under them just like any other judgment of a civil Court: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 624: I.L.R. 56 Mad. 904: 65 M.L.J. 279.

Where a daughter of a deceased coparcener sued on behalf of all his reversioners for declaration of title and lost and later on the son of her sister sued for the same declaration, held, though the decision in the earlier suit was binding on all the reversioners, it was nevertheless not a judgment in rem; the earlier judgment does not fall under S. 41; it does not fall under S. 42 either as it did not relate to matters of public nature: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 269: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 263: (1972) 2 M.L.J. 112.

Where petitioners in execution proceedings were not parties to another case against same judgment-debtors, held, Order passed in that execution case could not be held to be a judgment in rem binding on other decree holders: 1979 B.L.J.R. 688: 1979 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 663.

Partition suit—Judge declaring right of party to share in property—Force of—Is not a judgment in rem: A.I.R. 1952 Trav.-Co. 176.

Orders passed in the guardianship proceedings cannot be treated as a judgment in rem as in the case of a grant made under the Succession Act. Even though an order is not a judgment in rem or inter partes it may be admissible only to prove that such an order had in fact been made but not to prove its contents. The certified copies of the orders passed by the Court in the guardianship proceedings are not, therefore, available even as being judgments to prove the age of the minor: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 533. See also A.I.R. 1959 Mad. 410.

A judgment inter partes in a heirship proceeding is not a judgment in rem so as to be binding on a stranger: A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 126: (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 118. Decision as to custom—Relevancy. See (1938) 40 Punj.L.R. 29: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 309.

Foreign judgments.—The section applies to the foreign judgments of a competent Court no less than to domestic judgments: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 727: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 474: 61 M.L.J. 774. See also 43 Mad.L.W. 75: A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 197; A.I.R. 1950 Mys. 57.

A foreign judgment declaring that a person is the adopted son of a Hindu widow is binding on the Courts in India in a suit relating to immovable property in India belonging to that widow. It is true that the judgment of the foreign Court declaring the party to be the adopted son is not a judgment in rem under S. 41, but inasmuch as the Courts of India recognise the validity of the declaration of status by a foreign Court in a matter of succession to movable property in India because the personal law applies, the same should be recognised in a matter of succession to immovable property where the law requires the personal law to be followed. Treating the personal law as the lax situs, the Courts of the country of domicile are best able to decide questions of status. The comity of nations treat such a declaration by a Court affecting the status of a person domiciled within its territory as being analogous to a judgment in rem: I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 507: 1939 Mad.W.N. 180: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 499. See also I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 529: A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 394.

A foreign judgment is not binding on High Court particularly in a case where conviction is based on the accused's pleading guilty: 1957 Cr.L.J. 537: (1957) 59 Punj.L.R. 282: A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 86.

What the law or custom in a foreign State is, is a question of fact to be proved by evidence, and there can be no better evidence as to the state of the customs prevailing in that foreign country than a judgment of the highest tribunal in that state. Though the judgment as a judgment cannot bind the parties to a suit in India, it is sufficiently cogent evidence against the parties who are governed by the law of that State: I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 467: A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 185.

The judgment of foreign Courts which declare the status of persons domiciled within their territory are by the comity of nations treated in India as analogous to judgments in rem. It is difficult to predicate what are all the matters comprehended by the term 'status'. The status of a person means his 'personal legal condition', that is to say a man's legal condition only so far so his personal rights and burdens are concerned, to the exclusion of his 'proprietary relation'. An adjudication on adoption will in law amount to a declaration of status and is decided according to the law of domicile of the party making the adoption. But the claim to succession is not a matter of status in this sense and would relate to the 'proprietary relation' of the claimant with reference to the deceased estate-holder and hence, will not be decided according to the law of domicile: A.I.R. 1965 Mys. 97.

A Hindu marriage solemnised in India and annulled by a decree of divorce obtained by the husband from a foreign Court having jurisdiction in the husband's place stands validly dissolved if neither the foreign Court's competence is impeached nor the decree is assailed as having been obtained by fraud or collusion: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 80: (1970) 72 Punj.L.R. 235: 1971 Cr.L.J. 399: I.L.R. (1971) 2 Punj. 147.

Probate and administration.—The judgment of a Probate Court granting probate of a will in favour of the petitioner must be presumed to have been obtained in accordance with the procedure prescribed by law and it is a judgment in rem: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 875.

Judgment of Probate Court is one in rem; it binds not only the party to proceedings but also other persons: 1983 Mah.L.J. 830.

Judgment in Probate Court, is a judgment in rem and binding on all parties and is final: 9 P.R. 698; 1951 Ker.L.T. 53: A.I.R. 1951 Trav.-Co. 229.

A judgment of a Court of Probate which confers the status of administrators, of the estate, is, on the face of it, a judgment in rem which is binding not only on the parties to it but upon all other persons and all Courts regarding the legal character involved, till it is set aside: A.I.R. 1950 Mys. 57.

The decision of a Probate Court must be considered to be a judgment in rem. The action of the Probate Court in admitting the will to probate so long as the order remains in force is conclusive as to the due execution and validity of the will, and a party to those proceedings cannot be permitted to contest the will unless the grant of probate is revoked: A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 209: 1956 Nag. L.J. 524; (1958-59) 63 Cal.W.N. 615: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 715.

A final judgment or order of a Court in exercise of its probate jurisdiction, referred to in S. 41 of the Evidence Act, is the probate as defined in S. 2(f) of the Succession Act, for it is the grant which declares or confers the legal character on the propounder or the applicant. Parole evidence and even evidence of conduct is admissible to prove grant of probate under the seal when the document bearing the seal of the Court is lost, destroyed or cannot be produced. There is nothing in S. 41 of the Evidence Act which excludes proof by secondary evidence or by evidence of conduct in respect of matters dealt with in that section: (1958-59) 63 Cal.W.N. 615: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 715.

Grant of letters of administration—Its effect on contentions that might be raised in title suit. See A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 177: I.L.R. (1955) Trav.-Co. 704. Such grant is no bar on matters not in issue in administration proceedings: A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 104.

A judgment of the Probate Court is inadmissible in a proceeding under S. 193, Penal Code for perjury committed in a testamentary suit: 76 I.C. 417: A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 104; I.L.R. 5 Pat. 777: 8 Pat.L.T. 510: A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 61; 5 Mys.L.J. 107.

Where letters of administration based on a will were granted by the High Court of Ma laya and an ancillary probate under S. 228 of the Indian Succession Act were also granted by a Court in India, held, they constitute judgments in rem; the truth validity, genuineness and due execution of the will stands established conclusively; it binds not only the parties thereto but the whole world. The probate Court is a Court of exclusive jurisdiction; it is a Court of conscience; it does not decide rights between the parties; once it renders its decision, that will take precedence over the decisions of the Courts of ordinary jurisdiction at all levels. This proposition is so well known that it needs no authorities in its support: A.I.R. 1992 Mad. 136: (1991) 2 M.L.J. 86: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 487: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 397 (D.B.).

Where a will was executed by an Indian then working in the United Kingdom and letters of administration had been issued on that basis by the High Court of Justice at Birmingham, held, that constituted a judgment in rem; it conclusively proved execution of the will; it bound not only the parties but the whole world; the matter of the will could not be gone into or reopened in a Court in India; the letters operated as res judicata: A.I.R. 1979 P.&H. 250: 1979 Punj.L.J. 543: (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 709: 1979 Rev.L.R. 693.

Where a judgment in rem in a probate matter had finally determined that the widowed married daughter had no legally enforceable right of maintenance against her father or brother or their heirs, held, the binding nature of that judgment cannot be affected by a fresh suit by her where some more persons are impleaded in the suit as trespassers in the disputed property; even if the earlier judgment is not binding and does not operate as res judicata, it is relevant and possesses considerable evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1982 Raj. 119.

Under S. 41, judgments of Probate Courts are conclusive only with respect to the various legal characters or declarations within the scope of the proceedings; the civil Court has no jurisdiction to decide that a document is forged for the purposes of criminal trial and it cannot bind the criminal Court; the judgment of the Probate Court is not admissible in evidence in a criminal case. Letters of administration or probate once granted constitute a judgment in rem; they bind all, whether parties thereto or not, unless revoked by a Court of competent jurisdiction in accordance with the procedure provided in the Succession Act: 1994 Punj.L.J. 358.

As to the finality of order granting letters of administration on condition of appellant executing bond. See (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 824.

Matrimonial matters.—Though S. 41 makes a final judgment of a competent Court of matrimonial jurisdiction conclusive as to the legal character it confers or takes away but it must be, as laid down in S. 44, a 'competent' Court having jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter; even a judgment in rem is open to attack on the ground that the Court delivering the judgment in rem had no such competence. Judgments in rem are, therefore, not inviolable. [A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 105: 1975 Cr.L.J. 52: (1975) 1 S.C.C. 120.

A Subordinate or District Judge while exercising jurisdiction vested in them under the Hindu Marriage Act, act in exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction; their final orders or decrees are judgments in rem; they bind not only the parties thereto but the entire world. [A.I.R. 1963 Andh. Pra. 158, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1971 Bom. 183: 1970 Mah.L.J. 788 (D.B.).

If a finding on judicial separation by the matrimonial Court admittedly declares the status of the parties and thereby their legal character, held, there can be no logic or reason to contend that when the wife is found entitled to live separately in the proceedings for restitution of conjugal rights, it would not amount to a declaration of status or legal character under S. 41: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 445.

The judgment in a matrimonial case for restitution of conjugal rights, though not a judgment in rem, is binding on the parties in personam and admissible under S. 41 without further proof: A.I.R. 1992 Karn. 211: (1992) 1 Karn.L.J. 42.

Where the husband's earlier petition for restitution of conjugal rights was dismissed for the reason that he had treated the wife with cruelty and committed adultery whereafter the wife sued him for dissolution of marriage under S. 10 of the Divorce Act, held, the findings in the earlier case are relevant though they do not operate as res judicata; marriage dissolved on the basis of evidence on record: A.I.R. 1975 Karn. 23: (1974) 2 Karn.L.J. 422 (S.B.).

Though the husband had already obtained an ex parte decree under S. 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act but did not disclose this fact in his written statement in the wife's subsequent suit for the same relief but raised the plea of res judicata by way of amending his written statement, held, the plea was available to him and the ex parte decree constituted a bar under S. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the wife's subsequent suit: A.I.R. 1982 All. 138: 1981 All.W.C. 830: (1982) 2 D.M.C. 181.

Where in response to the wife's suit for maintenance under S. 18 of the Hindu Adoption and Maintenance Act, the husband sued her for restitution of conjugal rights under S. 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act pleading that he neither maltreated the wife nor did any thing entitling her to live separately but during the pendency of the maintenance proceedings, the husband's case for restitution was dismissed and, on appeal being filed, its judgment given in the exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction became final, conclusive and binding on all the world; it is not permissible for the husband to challenge it nor for the Courts in the maintenance proceedings to ignore it, much less to come to a different conclusion: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 445.

Where during the pendency of a petition for maintenance by the wife in which illtreating and desertion on the part of the husband was proved, the husband obtained divorce on the ground of desertion by wife, held, the wife was still entitled to maintenance: 1983 Cr.L.J. 36 (Cal.). See also 1979 Cr.L.J. 1301 (Cal.).

Previous decision in maintenance suit by wife—Does not operate as res judicata in subsequent petition by husband under S. 10, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955—Judgment falls under S. 41, Evidence Act and is judgment in rem: (1962) 2 An.W.R. 259: A.I.R. 1963 Andh. Pra. 158.

A decree of divorce under the Hindu Marriage Act on the ground of the wife living in adultery, held, constitutes conclusive proof of the wife having been divested of her status as such; it is no conclusive proof of the reasons for which she was divested. Thus, in proceedings for enhancement of maintenance by the divorced wife under S. 127(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the husband has to prove his defence independently that she had committed adultery; the judgment of the matrimonial Court would not be taken as evidence thereof: (1991) 2 Hindu L.R. 627 (Andh. Pra.).

Where a husband had obtained an ex parte decree of divorce and the wife after his death sought to set it aside under O. 9, R. 13, of the Code of Civil Procedure, held, the proceedings for setting aside the ex parte decree were competent; the ex parte decree was a judgment in rem; it could be set aside under S. 44 on the ground of the Court's lack of competence or having been obtained by fraud; there was, thus, no reason why it could not be set aside under O. 9, R. 4 if grounds therefor were made out: A.I.R. 1987 Karn. 241: (1987) 2 D.M.C. 208 (1987) 2 Hindu L.R. 312: I.L.R. (1987) Karn 1955.

Where a decree for divorce was granted to the wife on the ground of cruelty by her husband, held, it is a judgment in rem, binding on all the world; it is, thus, not open to the husband to contend in revision against grant of inadequate maintenance under S. 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that he had not contested the divorce proceedings because the wife had consented to accept lower maintenance: (1991) 44 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 29 (D.B.). Where marriage between the complainant and the accused had been declared as void by a matrimonial Court because of subsistence of first marriage, held, in a trial for offence under Ss. 493, 495 and 496, I.P.Code, the first marriage need not be proved: (1992) 2 Crimes 44 (P.&H.).

Decision of Admiralty Court.—The decision of the Admiralty Court restoring the certificate of an officer of a ship which has been suspended is a judgment in rem so far a the status and certificate of that officer is concerned. The decision is not binding on a person who was not a party to the suit: A.I.R. 1939 Sind 349.

Order of Insolvency Court.—An order adjudicating a person as an insolvent and vesting his property in the Official Receiver no doubt operates as a judgment in rem but the grounds on which the order is based have no such effect: 110 I.C. 730(1): A.I.R. 1928 Sind 121; 46 M.L.J. 580 (order of adjudication is a judgment in rem). Refusing to adjudicate a person a bankrupt is not a judgment in rem. See 46 M.L.J. 580: A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 622. So also order vacating order of adjudication against one partner: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 121.

The judgment of a High Court declaring a person to be a partner of an insolvent firm would not operate as a judgment in rem under S. 41 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1951 Sau. 37.

A declaration of a legal right is a different thing from a declaration of a legal character. The word 'character' means status, it is something more than a mere right. The declaration of a person's right operates as against a particular person or group of persons against whom the right is claimed, whereas a man's status is something which defines his position not in relation to any particular person or group of persons but in relation to the rest of the world; his status distinguishes him from the rest of the world. To say that a person is not a partner of a firm is not to declare his status or legal character; it is merely to declare his position with respect to the particular firm. Therefore, a finding of the Insolvency Court that a certain person is not a partner of the insolvent firm does not confer upon or take away from him any legal character within the meaning of S. 41 and hence is not a judgment in rem: 190 I.C. 537: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 225.

The adjudication of a person as an insolvent has the effect of taking away from that person his legal character of being not insolvent. An order by which such adjudication is made would thus, be clearly covered by S. 41. When on appeal the order adjudicating a person insolvent is set aside, the effect of the judgment of the appellate Court is to declare that person to be entitled to the legal character of being not insolvent and the judgment should be deemed to fall within the ambit of S. 41 of the Indian Evidence Act. It is thus a judgment in rem only in respect of matters before insolvency Court. Where, therefore, the question as to whether the gift by a person against whom insolvency proceedings have been instituted, was made with a view to defraud and delay the creditors, had not come up for adjudication before Insolvency Court then and the judgment of Insolvency Court could not operate as a judgment in rem in that respect, the judgment was relevant only to show that donor was not insolvent at the time the proceedings to adjudicate him insolvent took place. The question as to whether the gift was made with a view to defraud and delay the creditors, would have to be determined by the intention of donor at the time of making the gift and in the light of facts then existing and not in the context of subsequent period. The finding of Insolvency Court given 6 years after gift was made related to the time when the proceedings to adjudicate donor as insolvent took place and not to the state of affairs as they existed six years before that finding was given and as such could not form a good basis for upsetting the finding of facts of the Courts below which runs contrary: I.L.R. (1965) 1 Punj. 160: A.I.R. 1965 Punj. 206.

Debtor adjudged insolvent—Petitioning creditor applying under S. 53, Provincial Insolvency Act for annulment of certain transfers by insolvent—Transferee cannot challenge order of adjudication on ground that petitioning creditor was not creditor of the insolvent: I.L.R. (1963) Bom. 173: A.I.R. 1963 Bom. 212.

In order that declaration of title to a specific thing should have the conclusive character as against the whole world, it is not enough to show that under the judgment of the Insolvency Court, one has become entitled to a specific thing, but his title to such a thing must have been declared not as against any specified person but absolutely. A decree declaring that A is entitled to a debt is not an absolute declaration but only made against a specified person; so it is not conclusive proof of title to a debt: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 601: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 541: 61 M.L.J. 229 (S.B.).

Scope—Insolvency—Effect of adjudication order—Parties same—It is conclusive only as regards status and not as regards grounds on which order of insolvency passed: 1959 Nag.L.J. (Notes) 46.

42. Relevancy and effect of judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in section 41.—Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry; but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state.

The existence of a decree in favour of the defendant, in a suit by A against C for a trespass on the same land, in which C alleged the existence of the same right of way, is relevant, but it is not conclusive proof that the right of way exists.

On this section, see I.L.R. 22 Cal. 533 (P.C.); I.L.R. 25 Cal. 522 (P.C.); I.L.R. 19 All. 277 (P.C.) and A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 374 (F.B.); 163 I.C. 924: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 929. The provisions of Ss. 42, 43, 57, 74 and 84 deal with matters such as relevancy of the judgment, the mode of proof, the presumption as to the genuineness to be drawn and so on, but they do not deal with the question of the binding nature of the judgments, or even of the effect of those judgments: 1955 Nag.L.J. 498: A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 236.

Ss. 40 to 42 deal with judgments which are res judicata, in rem and relating, to matters of a public nature; but they raise no presumption that prior judgments embody correct adjudications; the law only prohibits going behind them in certain cases on the ground of public policy; judgments qua judgments and as expression of the pronouncing Court's opinion are relevant only under Ss. 40 to 42; if they do not fall under any of the sections, they are inadmissible; thus, findings in non-inter partes judgments about title and possession of a property are not admissible in suits for injunction to restrain inference with the plaintiff's possession: A.I.R. 1972 Ker. 196: 1971 Ker.L.T. 578.

Where earlier judgments not inter partes were not res judicata but they determined the legal character of a defendant qua suit property, held, they are relevant under S. 42: (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 486: 1986 Rev.L.R. 34.

A judgment not inter partes is inadmissible except for the limited purpose of ascertaining the parties thereto, the decree passed therein and subject-matter thereof; they cannot be used to establish the title of the contending parties in the suits wherein those judgments are produced. An appellate order modifying imposition of punishment awarded in disciplinary proceedings does not fall under any of Ss. 40 to 42 as it is neither an inter partes judgment nor judgment in rem nor relatable to matters of public nature; it may, if at all, fall under S. 43 and be conclusive evidence for or against all persons, parties or privies to it. But a statement therein that a person was actually enjoying certain lands since the specified time, will not be admissible evidence under S. 43: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 662.

When a question of status is in issue, judgment and orders between the parties in mutation proceedings, succession certificate cases, rent suits and suits for possession, etc., are admissible in evidence. They are of high evidentiary value and constitute proof sufficient to shift the burden: A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 387.

Where a daughter of a deceased coparcener sued on behalf of all his reversioners for declaration of title and lost and later on the son of her sister sued for the same declaration, held, though the decision in the earlier suit was binding on all the reversioners, it was nevertheless not a judgment in rem; the earlier judgment does not fall under S. 41; it does not fall under S. 42 either as it did not relate to matters of public nature: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 269: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 263: (1972) 2 M.L.J. 112.

A judgment in which a custom has been judicially recognised is admissible as evidence of the custom: 3 Sind L.R. 5; 1 I.C. 937.

A previous judgment is relevant under S. 42 for the purpose of proving a custom: 190 I.C. 35: A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 31. On a question of custom a decision in a case as regards the Where on an application under S. 12-A (1), West Bengal Bargadars Act, for restoration to cultivation, the Sub-Divisional Officer orders restoration of possession, the order of the Sub-Divisional Officer is relevant only to the extent that by virtue of that order the applicant got restoration of possession. The decision of the Coroner under the Coroner's Act is not a decision, but a prima facie opinion and stands on no higher footing than an order of commitment to the Sessions. It is not a judgment, much less a judgment inter partes; nor can it be admitted as an opinion since it represents the opinion of laymen often arrived at even before the Police investigation is complete. It is, therefore, a piece of relevant evidence admissible under S. 42, or any other section: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 997: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 184.

Section 43—Notes.

See 168 I.C. 109: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 86. When a judgment in a previous case is not relevant under Ss. 40, 41 and 42 of the Evidence Act and it cannot be shown to be relevant under any other section of the Act, it cannot be produced as a piece of evidence. S. 43 of the Act lays down that such a judgment, even if it relates to a fact in issue in the subsequent case, is not relevant at all: A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu 76.

Afterwards, C is prosecuted for bigamy in marrying B during A's lifetime. C says that she never was A's wife.

The judgment against B is irrelevant as against C.

(c) A prosecutes B for stealing a cow from him, B is convicted.

A, afterwards, sues C for the cow, which B had sold to him before his conviction. As between A and C, the judgment against B is irrelevant.

(d) A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B. C, B's son, murders A in consequence.

The existence of the judgment is relevant, as showing motive for a crime.

[1][(e) A is charged with theft and with having been previously convicted of theft. The previous conviction is relevant as a fact in issue.

(f) A is tried for the murder of B. The fact that B prosecuted A for libel and that A was convicted and sentenced is relevant under section 8 as showing the motive for the fact in issue.]

1. Inserted by Act 3 of 1891, S. 5.

S. 43 excludes all judgments as irrelevant in a former suit if they are not inter partes unless the existence of such judgment is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provision of the Act. The existence of the judgment may be relevant but not the decision of the Judge or the opinion expressed by him. It is immaterial if the defendant in both cases is the same and the decision of the Privy Council in I.L.R. 22 Cal. 533 is no authority for the general proposition that a judgment against a party can always be used against him in a subsequent suit by another person: (1929-30) 34 Cal.W.N. 1113; A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 239. See also 59 Cal.L.J. 320: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 788.

A judgment is not admissible to prove the truth of the fact which it states, nor is any fact stated as part of the reasoning in arriving at the fact in issue, evidence of the truth of that fact. But in cases where the right of a party has already been concluded by previous judgment, that fact can be proved by the production of the judgment, since the existence of that judgment, itself is relevant: 1938 Nag.L.J. 466: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 72: I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 699.

The words 'other provisions of this Act' in S. 43 do not include S. 13: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 93.

Under S. 44, a party or its successor-in-interest is permitted to avoid the effect of a decree obtained by fraud or collusion by the other party as a basis for the plea of res judicata under S. 40; however, since S. 44 does not override S. 43, a collusive decree can still operate as estoppel if requisite ingredients thereof are made out. [A.I.R. 1927 All. 494; A.I.R. 1971 All. 439, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1984 All. 216: 1984 All.W.C. 230 (D.B.).

An appellate order modifying imposition of punishment awarded in disciplinary proceedings does not fall under any of Ss. 40 to 42 as it is neither an inter partes judgment nor judgment in rem nor relatable to matters of public nature; it may, if at all, fall under S. 43 and be conclusive evidence for or against all persons, parties or privies to it. But a statement therein that a person was actually enjoying certain lands since the specified time, will not be admissible evidence under S. 43: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 662.

In a suit for perpetual injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with the plaintiff's possession, the judgment of the President of the Municipal Council is relevant under S. 13 or S. 43 for establishing the transaction that permission to raise new construction was accorded by the Municipal Council but the reasons and the finding of fact set out in such judgment are not relevant: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 91: 1975 Raj.L.W. 561: I.L.R. (1975) Raj. 959: 1975 W.L.N. 563.

Where a specific provision deals with admissibility of a document, the Court cannot resort to the general provisions to determine its admissibility; thus, if a judgment was not admissible as it did not fall under Ss. 40 to 42 and did not fulfil the conditions of S. 43, it is not relevant under S. 13; the words "other provisions of this Act" do not cover S. 13 which does not at all deal with judgments

A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 684: (1983) 3 S.C.C. 118: (1983) 96 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 93.

In prosecution for offence under S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code regarding sale of shares resulting in hidden loss in the previous year to the Company, held, a finding of the Board for Industrial and Finance Reconstruction under the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985 negativing such loss is relevant though not conclusive: 1992 Cr.L.J. 1448 (Cal.).

Where Directors of a Company were convicted for the offence of non-implementation of awards given under the Industrial Disputes Act by the Company with their knowledge and consent and they were thereafter again tried for that very offence as a continuing breech, held, the earlier judgment of conviction was not relevant under S. 43; judgments other than those mentioned in Ss. 40 to 42 are relevant unless the existence thereof was a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provision of the Act; the appreciation of evidence and findings by the Court in the earlier judgment are not relevant in the subsequent trial; earlier criminal judgments are not relevant in the subsequent criminal trials merely because they are inter partes: 1978 Raj.L.W. 488.

An order of the Board of Revenue is not evidence in a case before the High Court but the latter should not pass any decree in dissonance with the Board's decision without fully considering the reasons and grounds advanced in the impugned decision: 3 P.L.J. 188: 43 I.C. 393.

A judgment in respect of another sale agreement for another portion of the same building owned by the defendants where the plaintiffs in the two suits were different, held, is not relevant under any of the Ss. 40, 41 and 42; it is, thus, clearly irrelevant under S. 43: (1993) 50 Del.L.T. 671: (1993-2) 104 Punj.L.R. 51.

A judgment in land registration proceedings is no evidence of the facts mentioned therein, more particularly when the proceedings were not between parties to a subsequent suit, in which the judgment is sought to be admitted in evidence: I.L.R. 16 Pat. 84: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 73. As to judgment in guardianship proceedings, see A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 569: (1941) 1 M.L.J. 492.

Where the decree of the Calcutta High Court not relevant under Ss. 40 and 42, Evidence Act was a fact in issue, and as a matter of fact, an issue was specifically raised about its existence and also its effect on the suit, the decree is relevant under S. 43 of the Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 94.

Where a judgment, not inter partes, was sought to be adduced as an additional evidence to show that a certain allottee of land was only a non-existent, fictitious, person, held, the judgment was not relevant under any of Ss. 40 to 43; only such non inter partes judgments are relevant which are either in rem or bar the second suit or trial: 1989 Punj.L.J. 711.

Plaintiff's title to suit property challenged—Initial burden to prove his prima facie title discharged by plaintiff—Burden shifts on to defendant—Judgments not inter partes—Evidentiary value of: 1962 Ker.L.J. 1277.

Though orders passed in maintenance proceedings are not relevant under S. 40 or S. 41 or S. 42, but in proceeding under Hindu Marriage Act they can be relevant under any other provision of the Evidence Act. Under S. 43, an order though not relevant under Ss. 40, 41 and 42 may be relevant under other sections of the Act. Where documents of maintenance proceedings were relied upon by wife in proceeding under S. 10 of Hindu Marriage Act initiated by husband to show the conduct of latter towards former, they were relevant and admissible under S. 8 of Evidence Act: 1966 Cr.L.J. 1438: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 70.

A was the Managing Director of a Co-operative Bank, which went into liquidation. As a result of certain proceedings taken against A by the liquidator of the Bank, a payment order was made by the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies. In the findings given by the Deputy Registrar in his payment order, the liability of A was, inter alia, based on a breach of trust. In pursuance of this order a bungalow belonging to A was attached and sold. In a suit brought by a son of A for partition of joint family property and possession of his separate share it was contended that the debt incurred by A was avyavaharika. In support of his contention, the son attempted to prove that the debt fell within the term avyavaharika by relying upon the payment order and the findings given by the Deputy Registrar in the payment order. Held, that any opinion given in the order of the Deputy Registrar as to the nature of the liability of A could not be used as evidence in the present case to determine whether the debt was avyavaharika or otherwise. The order was not admissible to prove the truth of the facts therein stated and except that it may be relevant to prove the existence of the judgment itself, it would not be admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 282.

Where in a proceeding for revocation of the grant of probate under S. 263, Succession Act, the question is whether the son of the testator murdered him, it cannot be assumed on the basis of a previous judgment of a criminal Court convicting the son for the murder of his father and sentencing him to transportation for life that the son was the murderer of the testator.

The judgment of the criminal Court is relevant only to show that there was such a trial resulting in the conviction and sentence of the son to transportation for life. It is not evidence of the fact that the son was the murderer of the testator. That question was to be decided on evidence: (1955) 2 S.C.R. 270: A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 565. Magistrate's finding in criminal case is irrelevant in civil proceedings: A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 269: I.L.R (1955) Nag. 860.

Different items of properties mortgaged—Liability contribute towards payment of mortgage-debt—Fixation of price of mortgage properties to be with respect to date when properties were mortgaged—Evidence as to: A.I.R. 1962 Pat. 236.

Admissibility of judgment 'inter partes'—See 1 Cal.W.N. 146; 7 P.R. 1895 (Cr.); 11 B.H.C.R. 90; 9 C.P.L.R. 8 (Cr.). Previous judgment in main suit—Admissibility in subsequent execution proceedings: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 212. Where all the persons who are parties to a present case were parties to a former litigation, the judgment in the former proceedings is certainly evidence of what were the points in issue between the parties in that suit and of what was the result of the suit: 168 I.C. 109: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 86.

Admissibility of judgment not 'inter partes'—In a suit to contest a notice of ejectment the only evidence of a lease was a judgment in a suit not inter partes. Held, that the lease could not be held binding between the parties to the ejectment suit: 54 I.C. 574. On this section, see also 9 C.P.L.R. (Cr.) 8: (1907) 9 Bom.L.R. 1134; 72 Cal.L.J. 320: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193; (1904-5) 9 Cal.W.N. 402; 1939 R.D. 162: 1939 All.W.R. (B.R.) 161 (Rent suit).

Previous judgment not inter partes though not res judicata is valuable proof of title and admissible in evidence: 101 I.C. 774. Suits not inter partes—Finding of fact in one—Admissibility in evidence in another in which that fact is in issue: A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 99: I.L.R. 56 Cal. 1003: 56 M.L.J. 562: 56 I.A. 119 (P.C.).

Findings in previous judgment are not admissible: 96 I.C. 998: (1925) 27 Punj.L.R. 544. See also I.L.R. 16 Pat. 84: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 73.

Though the recitals and findings in a judgment not inter partes are not admissible such a judgment and decree are admissible to prove the fact that a decree was made in a suit between certain parties and for finding out for what lands that suit had been decreed: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 935: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193. Judgment in a previous suit not inter partes is not admissible as evidence of an admission said to have been made by one of the parties in the course of that suit. The judgment is no better than any other hearsay evidence of the admission: (1915-16) 20 Cal.W.N. 648: 30 I.C. 821. See also 101 I.C. 774: A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 359; (1939) 41 Bom.L.R. 561: A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 313; 202 I.C. 203: A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 40 (P.C.); I.L.R (1945) Kar. 40: A.I.R. 1945 Sind 57.

Judgment not inter partes—Redemption suit—Evidentiary value of previous decisions. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 13: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 735.

Judgment upholding right of dependant as adopted son is relevant though plaintiffs not parties to that judgment: 1965 Raj.L.W. 168.

Where an adopted son, the next heir, was sought to be excluded from succession to his adoptive father's property on the ground that he had murdered his adoptive father when he had been convicted and sentenced for homicide not amounting to murder under S. 304 of the Indian Penal Code, held, the Criminal Court's judgment in subsequent succession proceedings is only relevant to show that the adopted son had been tried, convicted and sentenced; the judgment does not bind the civil Court to enter the finding of homicide not amounting to murder; the civil Court has to find out on evidence adduced before it as to whether it was a case of murder. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 566, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1980 P.&H. 164: 1980 Rev.L.R. 24.

Finding regarding right in previous suit not inter partes—Right cannot be proved on basis of such finding: A.I.R. 1964 All. 302.

Judgment not inter partes—Relevancy of and value of: (1960) 62 Bom.L.R. 322: A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 169; 97 I.C. 282: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 577; 93 I.C. 321: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 161; 202 I.C. 203: A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 40; (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 935: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193; A.I.R. 1960 Bom. 78; (1956-57) 61 Cal.W.N. 970. See also and Notes under S. 11.

It is relevant though not conclusive: I.L.R. 8 Pat. 783: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 739. See also A.I.R. 1938 Sind 198 (Binding nature of finding of fact in previous judgment).

Judgment not inter partes fixing market value of contiguous land—Held admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 18.

Precedents—Judgment of High Court—Not binding on Judges of same High Court or of other High Courts. (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 541: A.I.R. 1964 Guj. 223.

Precedents—Judgment of High Court—Not binding on another Judge of the High Court: A.I.R. 1963 Guj. 305.

Judgment of High Court in previous Criminal Case—Use by Court to prove possession of land—Evidence quantum valebat—Though not relevant under S. 43 relevant under S. 13: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1197: A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 317.

Prior suits between some of the parties to the present suit—Subject-matter being same, judgments in those suits admissible to test acceptability of the case in the present suit: 1969 Pat.L.J.R. 4.

Where a litigant's earlier suit for declaration of title against two other contenders was dismissed on the ground that she could not prove her title to the property, held, the judgment therein cannot operate as res judicata as between the two contenders thereof in a fresh suit for declaration of title between them; it was not necessary in that suit to decide the contention between the two co-defendants; however, the earlier judgment in so far as it negatived the claim of one of the co-defendants is relevant as evidence of an instance under S. 43: A.I.R. 1972 Andh. Pra. 132.

Question whether trade mark is identical or deceptively similar to trade mark of opponent—Opponent citing judgments in which parties, facts and trade-marks were entirely different—Such judgments or facts cannot be used against applicant: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 80.

A judgment not inter partes is admissible only as showing that certain observations were made on certain facts found in a certain judgment but is not admissible as evidence of the truth of the facts found or observation made: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 368.

Judgments in previous suits as regards the value of entries in revenue papers are admissible: 7 L.R. 10 (Rev.).

A judgment given in a proceeding between the owner and the tenant of the first degree is admissible in evidence in an application against the latter by the sub-tenant for standardisation of his rent, for the purpose of proving that the rents of the premises concerned were standardised at a particular rate by the appropriate authorities though it is not inter partes: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 607.

A judgment of criminal Court is admissible to prove only, who the parties to the dispute were and what order was passed. Facts therein stated, or statements of the evidence of the witnesses examined in the case, or the findings given by the Court, are not admissible at all. Technically, such judgments are inadmissible as not being between the same parties, the parties in the prosecution being the State on the one hand, and the prisoner on the other, and in the civil suit the prisoner and some third party, because the issues in a civil and criminal proceedings are not the same, and the burden of proof rests in each on different shoulders. Even an admission cannot be proved by a recital in such a judgment. Therefore, a proceeding of a criminal Court is not admissible as evidence, a civil Court is bound to find the facts for itself: 1955 B.L.J.R. 705: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 49.

The decision of an Income-tax Officer holding that an assessee was separate from his joint family and had separate business is a mere opinion and is irrelevant in a civil suit involving a dispute as to whether a particular property is separate property or joint family property: 19 Nag.L.J. 287.

Ss. 43 and 44—Judgment appointing guardian for minor is not open to attack collaterally: (1941) 1 M.L.J. 492: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 569.

Where a suit for permanent injunction was instituted against the Karta of a Joint Hindu Family neither in his capacity of Karta nor as representative of the family, and the injunction, under law, being operative only against the person actually sued, held, a subsequent suit by the Karta's wife and two sons against the decree holder for cancellation of the earlier decree is not barred by res judicata; the judgment in the earlier suit is not relevant under S. 43 either: 1981 Hindu L.R. 566 (Madh. Pra.).

Where in a suit for partition between a father and his two sons their respective shares in the property were ascertained, in the absence of any contract or other material on record, on the basis of their wealth and income-tax assessment orders containing their respective admissions, held, though the orders were not admissible under Ss. 40 to 42 but they were certainly admissible under S. 43: A.I.R. 1991 Del. 325.

Where a confession for misappropriation of three items was obtained on oath by a person who had no power to administer oath which by itself amount to a concealed threat and it was found in an earlier trial to be not voluntary and, therefore, inadmissible, held, the earlier judgment containing the finding was admissible in the subsequent trial for misappropriation of the third item; the confession's veracity having been shaken to a very great extent, it could not be used against the accused as sole basis for conviction: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1080.

Where a person is charged with criminal breach of trust as regards certain items and the question of civil liability about the same items has been determined by a competent civil Court, the judgment of that Court would be the best evidence of the civil rights of the parties and hence a relevant fact: I.L.R. 41 Bom. 1: (1916) 18 Bom.L.R. 195.

Where a criminal case was instituted against an exporter of handloom cloth for having tampered with the bails, exported under two invoices but the case was split into two according to the invoices and he, acquitted in the first trial, sought quashing of his second trial, held, it is not the requirement of law that after acquittal in the first case, trial in the other case would be illegal; the second trial could not be quashed merely because the judgment in the first trial was of acquittal: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1017: (1978) 2 S.C.R. 460: 1978 Cr.L.J. 775: (1978) 2 S.C.C. 514.

Where in a woman's suit for declaration of her status as unmarried on the ground that the certificate of her marriage under the Special Marriage Act was obtained by fraud and forgery by the 'husband' and she had never married him and she sought to support he case by the report of Government handwrit ing experts submitted to the criminal Court a evidence in a criminal case under S. 466 of th Indian Penal Code but proved afresh in th civil suit, held, as no provision of law had bee cited to show that it is inadmissible, no objec tion to its being read as evidence is competen even though it was not made at the plaintiff' instance: A.I.R. 1978 All. 515.

Discharge under S. 253(1), Cr.P.Code, i earlier case—Subsequent suit for maliciou prosecution—Copy of first information re port of earlier case not filed nor proved other wise. Held, that the judgment in questio would not be relevant or admissible to prov the contents of the first information repor 1978 All.W.C. 63: 1978 All.L.J. 1399.

Record and judgment in a trial in which th principal was convicted of breach of the peace if admissible against surety. [I.L.R. 25 Cal. 44 Dis.]. See 32 P.R. 1903 (Cr.); 12 Cr.L.J. 404: 1 I.C. 588.

It is true that the judgment of the crimina Court cannot be used for the purposes t prove that whatever has been written in this correct as S. 43 clearly lays down that they ar irrelevant unless comes under exceptions cov ered by Ss. 40, 41 and 42 and, thus, it is no necessary to consider, whether any of th exceptions can be invoked or not, when th admission in the criminal proceedings wa not on the question of law but on question fact: 1986 Raj.L.W. 217.

Proceedings or judgments of a crimina Court constitute no evidence in civil proceed ings; plaintiff alleging fraud and collusion ha to independently plead with requisite pa ticulars and prove by evidence, oral and docu mentary: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 436. See als 1982 Lab.I.C. 1920: (1982) 2 A.P.L.J. 200: (198 2 An.W.R. 376.

Judgment of conviction by Magistra though admissible in civil proceeding to prov the fact of conviction of accused in that case, not strictly admissible to prove the facts co stituting the offence, in another case, in whic the party against whom the judgment in th criminal case was sought to be admitted wa not a party to the criminal case. [A.I.R. 19 S.C. 566, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 117: 19 Mah.L.J. 974: (1971) 73 Bom.L.R. 418.

The judgment of a criminal Court is on relevant about conviction and acquittal. Th findings recorded by the criminal Courts cannot be received as a piece of evidence: 1972 All.L.J. 15: 1972 R.D. 35.

44. Fraud or collusion in obtaining judgment, or incompetency of Court, may be proved.—Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.

Where a tenant was sought to be evicted from a premises on the ground that his wife had used the premises for possession of illicit liquor and the judgment of the Magistrate recording her conviction was produced by the landlord as evidence, held, the judgment of conviction was admissible only to prove the factum of the wife's conviction and not the facts which led to her conviction; eviction set aside: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 117: 1971 Mah.L.J. 974: (1971) 73 Bom.L.R. 418.

Where the accused were neither the prosecutors nor accused in the counter case which resulted in acquittal, the judgment of acquittal is not relevant in the accused's trial; they cannot object to the Court taking cognizance of the offence and proceeding with their trial: 1988 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 86: 1988 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 9 (D.B.).

Judgment in respect of adjoining lands in land acquisition cases.—A judgment in a land acquisition case not inter partes is not in rem but in personam; unless it falls within the ambit of Ss. 40 to 43, it would be irrelevant unless the judgment itself is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provisions; even then, the judgment's contents would not be relevant. Thus, where nothing on record or in the judgment itself shows that the land under acquisition and the land in the judgment were materially similar, no benefit of the judgment's contents can be availed by the party producing it in evidence: A.I.R. 1980 Ker. 176 (D.B.).

For determination of the quantum of compensation for the land acquired, held, judgments not inter partes fixing compensation of adjoining lands acquired at the same time are admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1986 All. 172: 1985 All.W.C. 733 (D.B.); (1974) 1 Karn.L.J. (Jr.) 21 (S.N.) 70; (1976) 2 Karn.L.J. 189 (S.C.); I.L.R. (1978) Karn. 1522.

Where in a land acquisition case two earlier judgments of the District Judge were produced to substantiate the claim for enhanced compensation and the lands in the three cases were similar and acquired under the same scheme, held, the judgments were relevant and admissible to determine the valuation of the land under acquisition: A.I.R. 1984 Pat. 40: 1983 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 673: 1984 B.L.J. 16: 1983 Pat.L.J.R. 723: 1984 B.L.J.R. 18: 1984 Bih.L.T. (Rep.) 140 (D.B.).

Determination of compensation—Market value—Award of Court fixing market value of comparable lands, both in time and quality, serves as piece of evidence and can be looked into Civil Appeal No. 176 of 1962, dated 10th April, 1963 (S.C.), Foll.—But where no attempt is made by claimant in trial Court to produce award of trial Court in respect of land sought to be relied on as comparable with lands under acquisition, he cannot be allowed to produce as additional evidence, appellate judgment of High Court in that case, in appeal filed against award of trial Court—Such evidence was not allowed either under O. 41, R. 27, Nor could, on facts of case; be admitted under S. 151 of the Code: (1967) 8 Guj.L.R. 37.

Section 44—Notes.

S. 44 applies both to civil and criminal proceedings. A private complainant has a definite role assigned in him under the Code of Criminal Procedure. In cognizable cases brought on private complaint, the Magistrate no doubt controls the proceedings. But even in such cases it is possible for a private complainant to collude with the accused and obtain an acquittal by perpetrating fraud upon the Court. Such an acquittal is a nullity in view of S. 44: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1246: A.I.R. 1956 Vindh. Pra. 30. Section is subject to S. 11, C.P.Code: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 819: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 506.

The Court's discretion under S. 44 is not a mental discretion to be exercised ex gratia; it is legal discretion to be exercised in conformity to law; the section is remedial; it is intended to provide a simple, speedy and efficient means of relief in a most worthy class of cases: (1980) 1 An.W.R. 295.

Pat. 456; (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 630: A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 398.

A decree cannot be set aside as fraudulent on the ground that it was imposed on the Court by letting in perjured evidence; it is dangerous to allow such exercise because the passion for litigation prevailing in the country might turn it into almost incurable mania which might go on alternately ad infinitum: (1980) 1 An.W.R. 295.

S. 44 contains inbuilt safeguards to salvage orders obtained by fraud and collusion: A.I.R. 1979 Ker. 194.

Previous judgments are relevant under S. 40 to bar a second suit or trial as res judicata; such judgments would ordinarily be between the same parties as in the second suit; the earlier judgment can, thus, be shown by the adverse party as not of a competent Court or having been obtained by fraud or collusion. It is only judgments relevant under Ss. 41 and 42 that even a third party can impeach them under S. 44: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 197: (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 593.

Though S. 40 does not use the term res judicata, it nevertheless refers to its consequences; it is because of S. 40 that the previous judgment relied upon in the subsequent suit to raise the plea of res judicata becomes relevant and admissible. S. 44 has, however, the overriding effect as it permits the other party to show that the earlier judgment was incompetent or without jurisdiction or was obtained by fraud or collusion and rendered irrelevant and inadmissible: A.I.R. 1984 All. 216: 1984 All.C.J. 141: 1984 All.W.C. 230 (D.B.).

Where a party puts in evidence a decree and relies on it, it is open to the opposite party to avoid its effect by challenging its genuineness in the same proceeding itself: 1952 All.L.J. (Rev.) 86: 1952 R.D. 114.

A decree can undoubtedly be attacked successfully, without going in appeal, for having been procured by fraud or collusion; a Court's decision whether on construction of documents or inferences from or trustworthiness of evidence, even if wrong, can only be corrected by appeal or review; therefore, the ground for fraud or collusion must be extraneous to everything which has been adjudicated on in the decision. Ground of fraud or collusion for attacking the judgment is not an exception to res judicata; it is really a defence, rather independent and outside the scope of that principle because only a judgment not obtained by fraud can be a foundation for res judicata: A.I.R. 1993 Ker. 273: (1993) 2 Ker.L.T. 969 (D.B.).

S. 44 clearly says that it is well open to a party to contend that the judgment relied upon by the other party was obtained by fraud; it does not mean that the Court can set aside that decree on such a ground; the section merely relates to procedure and confers no substantive rights: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 223: (1977) 90 Mad.L.W. 718: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 5.

S. 44 lays down not merely a rule of evidence but also of procedure; it provides not only for impeaching a conclusive judgment on the ground of fraud or collusion but also in the same suit or proceeding in which the judgment has been produced as evidence of its contents; it is not necessary that the judgment should first be set aside in a separate suit or proceeding: (1974-75) 79 Cal.W.N. 936 (1975) 2 Cal.L.J. 209.

S. 44 would apply in any proceeding, civil or criminal, if the decree sought to be challenged is proved by the adverse party. It can not be said that it applies only in a suit for revocation. A judgment in a probate suit is no doubt a judgment in rem, but it can be contested on the ground of fraud or collusion. A stranger to a suit in which a decree in rem has been passed may impeach that decree for fraud and have it set aside if the fraud be proved. Under S. 44, it is not necessary for the party against whom a judgment is set up to bring a separate suit to have it set aside; he may show in the suit or proceeding in which it is set up against him that it was obtained by fraud. It would be open to a party offering evidence of forgery of a will to prove that the probate decree was obtained by fraud if it were set up against him by the other side instead of admitting the probate and the title of the executor: I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 403: (1940) 42 Bom.L.R. 231: A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 131. See also (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 354.

But see infra. A grant of a probate is not a decree. It is not a judgment or order and hence S. 44 has no application. The grant cannot be revoked except by the Court which granted it. Therefore, it is not open to a party to adduce evidence to show in another proceeding that the grant of probate was obtained by fraud and that the will in respect of which it was

S. 44 of the Evidence Act is not exhaustive of the grounds on which a decree can be set aside. It deals only with cases in which a party to a suit or other proceeding has been properly represented. The section, therefore, does not cover cases of decrees passed against dead persons and against minors and lunatics who are not represented before the Court in the manner required by law or against whom a decree has not been duly obtained. So a decree can be set aside also on one of these further grounds. Further, in the case of a compromise decree, it can be set aside on the ground of misrepresentation, undue influence, etc.: 1951 All.W.R. (H.C.) 407: 1951 R.D. 203.

Where a party relies on a proceeding of a Tribunal or Court to substantiate his claim, held, the opposite party is entitled to show that the proceeding was incompetent and without jurisdiction or was obtained by fraud or collusion: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 38: 1981 Ker.L.T. 721 (D.B.).

'Fraud' has not been defined in the Act; under S. 25 of the Indian Penal Code, a person does a thing 'fraudulently' if he does it with the intent to defraud but not otherwise; fraud, infinite in variety, defies exact definition; the human mind's fertility in devising new modes of fraud is great; it is not possible to delimit or delineate it; broadly speaking, fraud includes all acts, omissions and concealments involving breach of legal or equitable duty, trust or confidence justly reposed but unduly and unconscientially taken advantage of; deception and deceit is its decisive element. A mediated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the Court in ignorance of material facts to obtain the decree amounts to fraud; but a decree cannot be set aside as fraudulent because the claim was false or based on perjured evidence: (1980) 1 An.W.R. 295.

Fraud does not make a judicial act or transaction void but only voidable at the instance of the party defrauded. The judicial act may be impeached on the ground of fraud or collusion in an active proceeding for rescission by way of suit or application for review. But the judgment may also be impeached in a collateral proceeding in which fraud may be set up as a defence to an action on the judgment or as an answer to a plea of estoppel or res judicata founded upon the judgment. Where one of the main issues in the case was concerned with the title of the plaintiff to redeem the property mortgaged and the defendants relied upon a previous decree in a money suit and the sale certificate as plea in bar either as estoppel or as res judicata, held, S. 40 would apply and the plaintiff would be entitled under S. 44 to show that both the decree and sale in the execution proceedings were vitiated by fraud of the mortgagee and should be ignored and treated as a nullity in the present suit. Reuben, J. (Contra): The point at issue was whether the mortgagor's reversionary interest in the suit property was still vested in the mortgagor. The defendants denied it and in support of their denial tendered in evidence the sale certificate and the writ of delivery of possession to show that the interest claimed by the plaintiff had been sold in execution and had been purchased by them. There was no attempt here to prevent the Court from taking cognizance of the suit. This was not for supporting a plea of 'res judicata' but to explain how the property came to be sold in execution. It was admissible for this purpose under S. 43, Evidence Act and, therefore, did not attract the application of S. 44. Further the certificate of sale was not a judgment, order or decree within the meaning of S. 44. The order of the executing Court under O. 21, R. 92, making the sale absolute, if it had been put in evidence, it would not come within the mischief of S. 44. S. 44, therefore, had no application and the plaintiff could not challenge the validity of the execution sale either on the ground of fraud in the execution proceeding or on the ground of fraud in obtaining the decree: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 66.

Though S. 125 of the Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1963 bars the civil Courts' jurisdiction in the matters decided by the authorities under that Act, held, it does not debar the civil Court from deciding whether or not those orders have been obtained by fraud or collusion; most solemn proceedings stand vitiated by the presence of fraud and collusion. To say that a Tribunal or statutory authority can hear a case involving fraud to which that authority itself is a party, is shocking to judicial conscience; if such a view is accepted, it would tantamount to conceding that such orders are above Art. 141 of the Constitution: A.I.R. 1979 Ker. 194.

The plea of res judicata presupposes that there is a decree or judgment which has legal existence or validity. If the decree is a nullity and non-existent in the eye of law, no plea of res judicata can be founded upon it, the defendant in the suit in which the decree was passed, just as much as any stranger to the suit, being free under S. 44 of the Evidence Act to show that it is so: I.L.R. (1951) 1 Cal. 168.

A judgment/decree obtained by false evidence or by suppression of evidence is not sufficient ground for setting it aside; Court commits no illegality or irregularity in exercise of its jurisdiction in refusing to record evidence to contradict proof of document which had been duly proved in another suit between same parties and thereby nullify effect of judgment decree in that suit: (1979) 1 Ren.L.R. 446 (Del.).

Where an eviction order under S. 14(1)(j) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, was passed on the ground of causing substantial damage to the demised premises without affording an opportunity to the tenant to remove the damage and in execution the objector claiming to be the sub-tenant raised the plea that the eviction order was a nullity, held, his locus standi to challenge the validity of the eviction order under S. 44 could not be disputed: A.I.R. 1986 Del. 305: (1985) 28 Del.L.T. 418.

Where an employee having purchased a property on behalf of his employer had thereafter released the same in the name of the employer by a registered deed but sued for partition of the property and obtained a preliminary decree without disclosing that he had so released his rights in the property, a fact which came to the knowledge of the defendants when final decree proceedings were pending, held, basing his case on fraud, the employee could be summarily thrown out of Court at any stage; he was bound to produce all documents executed by him relevant to the litigation; by with holding the transfer deed, he was guilty of playing fraud on the Court as well as on the opposite party; preliminary decree stood vitiated: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 853.

Where a deed creating a religious trust was capable of two views as to the nature of dedication and a compromise decree obtained by the parties based on one of the views, not beyond the orbit of reasonable possibility, held, could not be impeached as having been obtained by fraud or collusion: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1329: (1978) 3 S.C.C. 215.

Where a purchase certificate is issued to a person during the pendency of an appeal under the Kerala Land Reforms Act, 1964 held, the appellate authority is competent to decide at the instance of the opposite party under S. 44 that the certificate was issued by an incompetent authority or that it was obtained by fraud or collusion; the appellate authority can also direct the lower authority to ignore the certificate: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 38 1981 Ker.L.T. 721 (D.B.).

A Hindu marriage solemnised in India and annulled by a decree of divorce obtained by the husband from a foreign Court having jurisdiction in the husband's place stands validly dissolved if neither the foreign Court's competence is impeached nor the decree is assailed as having been obtained by fraud or collusion: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 80: (1970) 72 Punj.L.R. 235: 1971 Cr.L.J. 399: I.L.R. (1971) 2 Punj. 147.

Where the High Court in a case of land acquisition issued certain directions to the Government under its writ jurisdiction but the State Government instead of complying therewith issued a fresh notification to initiate fresh acquisition proceedings, held, the decision of the writ petition is binding on, and res judicata between, the parties unless it could be shown to have been obtained by fraud or collusion: A.I.R. 1988 All. 309: (1988) 14 All.L.R 497: 1988 All.W.C. 1082 (D.B.).

Where a husband had obtained an ex parte decree of divorce and the wife after his death sought to set it aside under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, held, the proceeding for setting aside the ex parte decree were competent; the ex parte decree was a judgment in rem; it could be set aside under S. 44 on the ground of the Court's lack of competence or having been obtained by fraud; there was thus, no reason why it could not be set aside under O. 9, R. 4, if grounds therefor were made out: A.I.R. 1987 Karn. 241: (1987) 2 Hind L.R. 312.

Where a person transferred his properties for consideration to a third party when dispute about their title was pending in a suit or appeal and later, on compromise in the litigation, ceded half their share to the opposite party and the Consolidation Court and Appellate Authority found him guilty of fraud held, the High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution declined to interfere as it was

Where a judgment, not inter partes, was sought to be adduced as an additional evidence to show that a certain allottee of land was only a non-existent, fictitious, person, held, the judgment was not relevant under any of Ss. 40 to 43; only such non inter partes judgements are relevant which are either in rem or bar the second suit or trial: 1989 Punj.L.J. 711.

Where in a suit for partition of property decree was alleged to have been obtained by suppression of evidence but it was not proved, held, decree could not be set aside: (1979) 2 Cal.L.J. 219.

Scope—Certificate of sale obtained by fraud—Whether can be challenged in collateral proceedings by way of defence: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 508.

Two decrees on same cause of action—Suit to set aside one on ground of mistake not maintainable—S. 44, Evidence Act not applicable—Later decree prevails: A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 217.

S. 44 does not enable an individual creditor to bring a suit for his benefit alone to set aside a transaction contained in a decree on the ground of its being a fraudulent transfer or preference: I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 526: (1940) 42 Bom.L.R. 486: A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 289.

Where the existence of certain evidence was stoutly denied and was afterwards discovered, it is ground for setting aside decree: (1927) 29 Bom.L.R. 1046: A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 510.

Companies Act (1956), Ss. 433, 434, 466—Inability to pay debts—Disputed debts—Company Court if can consider legality of a debt—Procedure to be adopted in the event of genuine dispute regarding a debt in winding-up proceedings—Decretal debt stands on the same footing as any ordinary debt: (1967) 1 Comp.L.J. 172 (Cal.).

Modifies principle, of res judicata in S. 11, C.P.Code—That principle will not apply if any of the three grounds mentioned in this section exists: A.I.R. 1967 Ker. 97.

Applicability—Identity of parties—Suit in which one person is authorised to represent others—Such others are parties to the litigation—Decision is binding on all whom such person represented in a suit in subsequent suit, unless former decision can be shown as vitiated under S. 44: A.I.R. 1969 Ker. 26.

A fraud can be impeached collaterally as a defence to an action. Therefore, where a mortgagee refused to accept mortgage money on the ground that he had already purchased the equity of redemption in execution of a previous decree, and in a suit for redemption there was a concurrent finding that the said decree and sale were fraudulent. Held, that as the mortgagee had set up the previous decree as a bar to the suit for redemption, it could be impeached collaterally and it was not incumbent upon the mortgagor to have that decree set aside before seeking the redemption: 1957 B.L.J.R. 127.

Judgment—Validity of adoption—Evidence of: A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 298. Applicability and scope of section. See I.L.R. 34 All. 150: 13 I.C. 80; 18 Cal.L.J. 264: 21 I.C. 938; 6 I.C. 98; I.L.R. 37 Bom. 563: 20 I.C. 530.

Entry in record-of-rights procured by a fraud—Separate suit to set aside—Necessity for. See (1913-14) 18 Cal.W.N. 27.

Right of stranger to a decree affecting his right to show in a subsequent suit that the decree was invalid on the ground of fraud—Maintainability of subsequent suit without setting aside decree. See (1916-17) 21 Cal.W.N. 594: 40 I.C. 607. See also (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 354.

Fraud—On whom.—A decree obtained by playing fraud on the Court as well as the opposite party, held, is a nullity: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 50 (Guj.) (D.B.).

Decree—Setting aside of, on ground of fraud—Fraud must be external and collateral to adjudication and must be of person who secured judgment: 1962 Ker.L.T. 1019: A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 26.

'Any person'.—The expression, 'any party to a suit or other proceeding' occurring in S. 44, must be given a restricted meaning, and must be limited to a person or persons other than one who asserts the fraud or collusion: 1950 Nag.L.J. 226.

A party cannot plead his own collusion to avoid a decree to which he was himself a party: 6 Nag.L.R. 177: 8 I.C. 1179. See also 1958 Ker.L.T. 1021: A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 206. But see infra. (Jha, C.J.):—S. 44 is wide enough to allow a party to set up even his own fraud to defeat the effect of a judicial order: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 66. Under S. 44, a party or its successor-in-interest is permitted to avoid the effect of a decree obtained by fraud or collusion by the other party as a basis for the plea of res judicata under S. 40; however, since S. 44 does not override S. 43, a collusive decree can still operate as estoppel if requisite ingredients thereof are made out. [A.I.R. 1927 All. 494;

A.I.R. 1971 All. 439, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1984 All. 216: 1984 All.W.C. 230 (D.B.).

Negligence—Whether amounts to fraud or collusion.—S. 44 is the only provision of law under which a judgment or an order or a decree which is sought to be proved with a view to establish the plea of res judicata can be avoided. Under that section, a decree can be avoided on the ground that it was obtained by fraud or collusion. The section makes no mention of negligence. Consequently, no decree can be avoided on the ground of negligence, even if negligence be of a very serious character. The protection of minors against negligent actions of their guardians is a special one and the principle cannot be extended to cases of gross negligence by parties litigating on behalf of public trusts. Fraud, like any other fact, can be proved by circumstantial evidence and if the circumstances are such as from which no other inference except that of fraud can be deduced, a plea of fraud cannot be thrown out merely because no direct proof of it was furnished. A party alleging fraud is bound to establish it by cogent evidence and suspicion cannot be accepted as proof. It is not sufficient for him to prove constructive fraud, but he must prove actual positive fraud. Mere want of good faith cannot establish fraud. [A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 98 and A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 93, Ref. to]: A.I.R. 1949 East Punj. 141. Principle of S. 44 cannot be extended to cases of gross negligence—Decree against minor represented by guardian ad litem—Gross negligence of guardian—If can form basis of suit by minor to set aside decree—Proof of fraud and collusion—Necessity. See I.L.R. 24 Pat. 441 (F.B.). See also A.I.R. 1946 Lah 233 (F.B.); 53 Mys. H.C.R. 322 (Ramaswami, J., agreeing with Jha, C.J.).

A decree in a suit where a minor is properly represented cannot be avoided merely because of negligence or gross negligence of the minor's next friend or guardian; it does not by itself amount to fraud or collusion. (Case law extensively discussed): A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 241: 1972 W.L.N. 23: 1972 Raj.L.W. 659 (D.B.).

In cases where an inference of fraud or collusion can be drawn from the negligence or gross negligence of the next friend, it would be permissible for a minor to avoid the judgment or decree passed in the earlier proceeding by invoking S. 44 of the Evidence Act without taking resort to a separate suit for setting aside the decree or judgment. Thus, where what was required to be considered was whether the judgment in the earlier declaratory suit fell within the ambit of S. 44 of the Evidence Act, held, for that purpose it was necessary to examine whether an inference of fraud or collusion could be drawn from the gross negligence on the part of the next friend of the appellant in conducting the earlier declaratory suit. If such an inference could be drawn he would not be bound by the judgment in the earlier declaratory suit but if such an inference could not be drawn he would be bound by the said judgment till it is set aside by the competent Court in an appropriate proceeding: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 1440.

Where the earlier suit for partition between the parties was dismissed, despite objection of partial partition, eventually on merits and the plea that the interest of the then minor plaintiff suing through his mother as next friend was not properly protected was negatived, held, the judgment in the earlier suit would operate as res judicata: (1987-1) 91 Punj.L.R. 424.

S. 44 in terms provides for avoiding a previous decree between the parties on the ground of fraud or collusion; the ground of gross negligence on the part of the minor's next friend or guardian is also such ground. But where the guardian had engaged a senior Counsel to represent the minor and also placed all the relevant material before the Counsel who, however, did not raise a plea available and lost the case, held, there was no gross negligence on the part of the minor's guardian; the earliest judgment could not be avoided: (1979) 2 An.L.T. 70 (D.B.).

Non-service of summons.—Simply the fact that a person was not served with the summonses in the previous suit, would not be sufficient to set aside the decree in that suit. Similarly, the fact alone that the previous suit was unfounded, would not be sufficient to set aside that decree. If it is proved that in the previous suit, summonses were not served and the previous suit was false, the Court would have reason to hold that the decree was fraudulently obtained. If it is proved that the summonses in the previous suit were not served and that the defendant of the subsequent suit (plaintiff of the previous suit) abatted the making of a false return, there would be sufficient ground for the Court to hold that it was through the fraud of the present defendant that summonses in the previous suit could not be served on the plaintiff's of this suit (Defendants of the previous suit) and a show was made to the Court that service had been effected with the result that the Court proceeded ex parte and without giving an opportunity to the plaintiff of this suit to be heard, decided the previous suit: 1959 Raj.L.W. 114.

In a suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud there was a concurrent finding of both the lower Courts that the summons in the previous suit was not served on A. It was clear that the signature on the back of the summons was forged by somebody. There was an additional circumstance that in the written statement, B said that A did receive the summons on 5th March, 1949 and that since that very day, A had been in the know of the previous suit. This was verified by B from his personal knowledge. Held, that if B had personal knowledge about the service of summons, it must have been within his knowledge that the signature on the back of the summons was not that of A but that it had been put down by some other person and B ought not to have suppressed that fact from the Court but it was B's duty to inform the Court that A had not put his signature on the back of the summons. That A suffered an ex parte decree to be passed against A in circumstances of this case goes a long way to show that it was through B's complicity that false return was made and this would certainly mean a fraud of B in having the ex parte decree passed against A: 1959 Raj. L.W. 114.

Merely because in an earlier suit an ex parte decree was obtained by fraud in service of summons is not sufficient to attract S. 44; fraud envisaged in the section has to be an extrinsic collateral act de hors the matters adjudicated upon in the earlier suit; the fraud to be effective under the section must be deliberate, premeditated and positive to successfully keep the Court and the other parts unaware of the true facts; and the decree must be the consequence thereof. A fraud under S. 44 is totally different from the fraud under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure: I.L.R. (1977) Cut. 608 (D.B.).

Collusive decree—Binding nature of.—Where an ex parte decree was obtained by the plaintiff in collusion with all the defendants, held, does not bind the parties; it does not operate as res judicata; S. 44 is not an idle provision: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 111: 45 Cut.L.T. 174: (1977) 2 Cut.W.R. 828.

Consent/compromise decree.—A consent decree by itself is not collusive; it is not inadmissible or irrelevant evidence; such a decree merits consideration on its own as a relevant evidence: A.I.R. 1985 Raj. 95: 1984 Raj.L.R. 385: 1984 Raj.L.W. 421.

Under this section a party to a compromise decree can show that his consent to it was obtained by misrepresentation and fraud without bringing a fresh suit to set it aside: 30 I.C. 639. See also 1 Mad.L.W. 208; (1913-14) 18 Cal.W.N. 601; 93 I.C. 385: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1. Held, that though under S. 44, Evidence Act, the party was entitled to show that the judgment was obtained by fraud, it was not open to him to plead that the compromise on which the judgment was based was vitiated by a mutual mistake as to a material fact: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 59.

Competency of Court.—S. 44 has nothing to do with the competency of the former Court to try the subsequent suit. It is concerned only with the competency of the former Court to try the former suit and with such competency of that Court as a fact. It follows that if the former suit, as framed, was within the jurisdiction of the Court which tried it, the decree passed therein is a decree of a Court competent to pass it, such as it is. If a suit is subsequently brought for a declaration that the decree is void, having been passed by a Court not competent to try the suit in which the decree was passed, all that the plaintiff is entitled to show under S. 44 is that the former suit, as framed and laid and on the pleadings therein, was beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. If he cannot establish such want of jurisdiction with respect to the particular suit, such as it was, nor prove collusion or fraud, the decree will stand, concluding the matters determined by it. Two suits for ejectment of tenants in respect of tenancies said to carry rents of less than Rs. 500—Suits filed in Court of Small Causes under S. 16 of Rent Control Act—Landlord's case as to their being two separate tenancies not challenged—Suits decreed—Tenants subsequently filing suit for declaration of nullity in respect of previous decrees—Held, that decree could not be said to be decree of Court not competent to pass them: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 819: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 506.

Though S. 41 makes a final judgment of a competent Court of matrimonial jurisdiction conclusive as to the legal character it confers or takes away but it must be, as laid down in S. 44, a 'competent' Court having jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter; even a judgment in rem is open to attack on the ground that the Court delivering the judgment in rem had no such competence. Judgments in rem are, therefore, not inviolable. [A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 105: 1975 Cr.L.J. 52: (1975) 1 S.C.C. 120.

OPINIONS OF THIRD PERSONS WHEN RELEVANT

45. Opinions of experts.—When the Court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, or of science, or art, or as to identity of handwriting [1][or finger impressions], the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science or art, [2][or in questions as to identity of handwriting] [1][or finger impressions] are relevant facts.

Such persons are called experts.

1. Inserted by Act 5 of 1899, S. 3.
2. Inserted by Act 18 of 1872, S. 4.

As S. 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure lays down that a decree passed by a Court having no territorial jurisdiction need not always be a nullity; it further provides that if objection as to lack of territorial jurisdiction is not taken at the earliest, it cannot be raised subsequently in appeal or revision; and even if such objection is raised in due time but disallowed, the decree can be set aside only if it has occasioned failure of justice. Therefore, the lack of jurisdiction in ignoring a previous judgement under S. 44 cannot be that of territorial jurisdiction; it must perforce be inherent lack of jurisdiction: A.I.R. 1972 Mys. 338: (1972) 2 Mys.L.J. 123.

The plea that a decree passed by a Court was made without jurisdiction is open to the objector under S. 44 and can be raised at any stage of the proceedings unless there is a bar of res judicata or any rule of equitable estoppel against him: I.L.R. 53 All. 747: A.I.R. 1931 All. 689.

Circumstances which restrict jurisdiction of Court—May be proved: A.I.R. 1967 Ker. 97.

Incompetency of a Court—May be proved: A.I.R. 1967 Ker. 97.

Execution proceedings.—S. 44 in terms applies to execution proceedings; thus, where an order obtained under S. 36(2) of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1958 was obtained with an intent to dispossess a third party in physical possession, held, the order could be assailed in execution by the third party and show that it was made upon mistake or fraud: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 139: 1973 Mah.L.J. 726.

Limitation.—The right as given by S. 44 has not been fettered by any limitation whatsoever and it is manifest that such a right is quite independent of the right to get a judgment or decree, etc., set aside by bringing regular suit for the purpose. A decree or order can be challenged on ground of fraud in a collateral proceedings without any suit for setting aside the decree, irrespective of the time when the judgment was delivered or order or decree was passed: A.I.R. 1970 Pat. 13 (D.B.).

S. 44 is very wide and lays down not merely a rule of law relating to evidence but also a rule of procedure as to how the judgment should be impeached. It not merely declares that the judgment which is conclusive against a party may be impeached by such party on the ground of fraud or collusion. It also lays down that the party seeking to impeach it may impeach it in the very suit or proceeding in which the judgment is proved against him by his opponent. Grammatically, lack of jurisdiction and the taint of fraud or collusion are placed exactly on the same footing in wording of S. 44. There is, therefore, no reason why in the case of fraud or collusion any qualification or limitation should be read into the section and not in the case of want of jurisdiction. The contention that a party may impeach a judgment on the ground of fraud under S. 44 only within a period of three years as provided by Art. 95, Limitation Act, is, therefore, not acceptable: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 66.

Where a plaintiff sued for setting aside a previous decree as having been obtained by fraud and consequentially possession of the suit property but losing the suit as time barred contended that the principle of S. 44 be followed, the decree be ignored as void and possession be granted to him, held, the suit had been so framed that it fell under Art. 95 of the Limitation Act; S. 44 could not be used to circumvent the law of limitation: A.I.R. 1974 Pat. 191.

(a) The question is, whether the death of A was caused by poison.

The opinions of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died, are relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A, at the time of doing a certain act, was by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law.

The opinions of experts upon the question whether the symptoms exhibited by A commonly show unsoundness of mind, and whether such unsoundness of mind usually renders persons incapable of knowing the nature of the acts which they do, or of knowing that what they do is either wrong or contrary to law, are relevant.

(c) The question is, whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A.

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant.

1. Scope of section.—By reason of the provisions contained in Ss. 73 and 45 of the Evidence Act and O. 3, R. 1, C.P.Code, the Court can direct a party to be present in Court to give a signature, handwriting or thumb impression for the purpose of comparison either by itself or for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of an expert by sending the same to him: A.I.R. 1975 Andh. Pra. 88: (1974) 2 An.W.R. 365: (1974) 2 A.P.L.J. 178; 1976 Rev.L.R. 648: 1976 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 447 (P.&H.) (D.B.); (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 1 (Cal.).

The Court can direct any of the parties at the instance of another to give his specimen thumb impression or handwriting, as the case may be; such request cannot be declined merely because it was made by a litigant and could be used as evidence by him. [1976 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 447: 1976 Rev.L.R. 648 (P.&H.) (D.B.), Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 174: (1985) 87 Punj.L.R. 47: 1984 Rev.L.R. 453.

S. 73 read as a whole in the light of S. 45 make it clear that a Court holding an enquiry under the Code of Criminal Procedure into an offence triable by itself or the Sessions Court has the power to direct the accused, in the interest of justice, to give his sample writing for its comparison with his admitted or proved handwriting by an expert chosen or approved, by the Court irrespective of the fact whether his name was suggested by the prosecution or defence; the Court's purpose for adopting such a course is to enable the Court to make comparison between the admitted and questioned documents by the Court as and when the accused is ultimately put up for trial. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.) (D.B.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Kam.L.J. (S.N.) 39.

Protection against testimonial compulsion—Taking of finger impressions of accused by Investigating Officer against his will—Taking specimen writing or signature in Court with consent of accused—Protection under Art. 20(3) not violated: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 19: A.I.R. 1962 Cal. 36. See also 1971 Cr.L.J. 1405 (Raj.), cited under Note 20, infra.

S. 293, Cr.P.Code prevails over S. 45 of the Evidence Act. See 1982 Cr.L.J. 2138: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 566.

It is true that the Courts of law are not to play the role of a handwriting or thumb-mark expert but where signature or thumb-mark does not appear to be similar to the one not in dispute the Courts can direct the party placing reliance on the signature or thumb-mark to prove its genuineness by examining an expert; and in other cases where the signature or thumb-mark does not appear to be forged, it is the duty of the party who wants the Court to give a finding to the contrary to prove his case by leading clear evidence including that of an expert: A.I.R. 1956 Bhopal 6.

Expert evidence—Admission of evidence of expert—Fact that he was competent to give expert evidence must be proved—Law does not permit assumption without evidence on material point of competence.

Medi-colegal jurisprudence—Medical expert performing post mortem examination 13 hours after death, reporting rigor mortis—No information if there was any element of cadaveric rigidity or spasm present—Cadaveric spasm occurs in cases in which death was immediately preceded by state of great nervous tension or excitement caused by terror or struggle—Cadaveric spasm is to be distinguished from rigor mortis and is not rigor mortis—Medical evidence of the expert, held, could not be relied upon—Medico-legal jurisprudence: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 321.

As an opinion evidence, the evidence of a Sub-Inspector that particular words used in a slip were code words for particular figures cannot be received under S. 45, as the Court is not called upon to form an opinion on the point of Foreign Law, science, art or as to identity of handwriting nor can it be received under S. 49 as the Sub-Inspector did not claim to be an expert having special knowledge of the meaning of the words used in recording betting transactions in American futures: 1954 Cr.L.J. 1347: A.I.R. 1954 Madh. Bh. 145.

2. "Science or art"—Meaning of.—The words science or art in S. 45 of the Evidence Act are to be broadly construed, the term 'science' not being limited to the higher sciences and the term 'art' not being limited to the fine arts. In order to determine whether the particular question be one of a scientific nature or not, and consequently whether skilled witnesses may or may not pass their opinions upon it, the following tests may be applied—Is the subject-matter of inquiry such that inexperienced persons are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without the assistance of experts? Does it so far partake of the character of a science or art as to require a course of previous habit or study in order to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature, or is it one which does not require such habit or study? The study of customs and manners of castes, the areas occupied by them and other connected matters come within the meaning of 'science or art' and persons who have made a special and systematic study of them are experts whose opinions expressed in books are admissible under S. 45 of the Evidence Act: 1947 Nag.L.J. 478: I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 781.

The word 'science' which has been defined in the Universal Dictionary of English language as great proficiency, dexterity, skill based on long experience and practice, is sufficiently wide to include the evidence of an expert. Hence, the world 'science' occurring in S. 45 should be held to be comprehensive enough to include the opinion of the expert in foot-print as well: 1959 B.L.J.R. 442: 1959 Cr.L.J. 1355: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 534.

Gambling cannot be considered to be either an art or a science within the meaning of S. 45 so as to entitle a Police Officer to go into the witness-box and speak as an expert that in his view, based on experience in other cases, certain harmless documents such as slips, which he calls betting slips are instruments of gaming. Under S. 49 a Police Officer might give evidence that he had a long experience amongst people who indulged in satta gambling in a particular district, and from that experience supported by instances which he should be prepared to give so as to establish his means of knowledge, he was satisfied that a system or code prevailed among such persons, and he might then express an opinion (which would be relevant under the section) that the slips in question were prepared in accordance with that system or code and had a certain meaning. But he is not entitled merely to express the opinion that unintelligible documents found in the room of a man charged with gambling must be records of gambling transactions. It is for the Court to decide what the documents means: I.L.R. (1937) Bom. 670: (1937) 39 Bom.L.R. 613: A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 385.

Telephony is a science or art and witnesses knowledge of the telephone and of engineering generally places them in a special position and makes them competent to express an opinion upon articles and matters which are largely in use in the department of the telephone and of engineering generally. The evidence of these witnesses is relevant and admissible as opinion of experts and the expert evidence of those witnesses is entitled to very considerable weight if they hold diploma in telephony and engineering and also have a great experience: 184 I.C. 36: A.I.R. 1939 Sind 245. See also I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 781.

3. Expert evidence—General.—Who are experts. See I.L.R. 32 Cal. 759; A.I.R. 1930 All. 587. An expert, if he sticks dogmatically to his opinion, is liable to be disbelieved. An expert is entitled to more credit if, when cogent reasons are put forth before him in his cross-examination, he revises his own opinion. After all, an expert has come to give his own opinion and not to state facts. An expert should always be prepared to revise his opinion if he finds any cogent reason suggested to him, and his evidence need not be disbelieved on this ground: A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 264.

An expert is one who has acquired special knowledge and skill in any science. His opinion based on observations or experiments is relevant in cases where questions relating to his science arise: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 178: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 131.

The term 'expert' in law has a special significance; the Court has in each case to decide whether the 'expert' witness is, taking into account his skill, study and experience, really an expert; what is admissible under S. 45 is the opinion of an expert in the field wherein he or she has acquired special knowledge; outside his specialised field, his evidence ceases to be expert evidence and falls outside the purview of S. 45: 1987 M.P.L.J. 214.

Once the expert's opinion is accepted, held, it becomes finding of the Court: (1992) 3 S.C.C. 204: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 129.

The evidence of an expert must be based on his own observations, and what he finds. Hearsay evidence cannot be admitted: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 1193: 1975 S.C.C. (Cr.) 530: 1974 Cr.L.J. 908.

The expert opinion is only an opinion evidence on either side and does not aid the Court in interpretation: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 120.

How differs from ordinary evidence. See 3 Nag.L.R. 1: A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 183. When evidence, the basis of the expert's opinion, should be placed before the Court: I.L.R. 56 All. 428: A.I.R. 1934 All. 273.

The evidence of an expert witness has to be tested like that of any other witness for even expert witnesses are liable to make mistakes. At the same time, if a person with special professional qualifications, such as a doctor or an engineer, is called in to make professional examination of a person or a building, and is then asked to give the results of his examination as evidence in Court it is hardly fair to treat him as being on the same footing as those persons who may be said to make a profession of giving evidence nor is it necessary to suppose that he must necessarily be suffering from undue bias merely because he has professional qualifications: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 505.

The experts' evidence is like any other evidence; ordinarily not conclusive, its weight has to be judged alongwith other evidence; it cannot be taken as substantive evidence; it merely corroborates other evidence: A.I.R. 1989 All. 133 (D.B.); 1980 All.W.C. 535: 1980 All.Cr.R. 358: 1980 All.L.J. 230; 1979 All.W.C. 12.

Expert opinion is called for if the Court requires it; but it does not mean that the procedure of examining the expert must be resorted to in every case, after all, an expert opinion is not a conclusive one: (1989-1) 103 Mad.L.W. 552 (D.B.).

Expert evidence can never be conclusive because after all it is an opinion evidence. The evidence of experts cannot be rejected simply because they are not decisive in their conclusions: A.I.R. 1966 Goa 17 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1960 Mys. 220.

Expert evidence is nearly always a weak type of evidence much more so in the case of an expert who has not sufficient knowledge on the subject: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 129.

The opinion of an expert engaged by a party suffers from the defect that it is given by a remunerated witness. He knows beforehand why he has been called and what the party calling him wishes to be proved. It is not improbable that he has an unconscious bias in favour of the party. These circumstances to great extent detract from the weight to be attached to such witness opinion: 1959 Cr.L.J. 893: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 328.

Value of expert's opinion when one expert is contradicted by another: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 788 (2): A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 885.

Where two reports of the contents of an export consignment were contradictory, one based on scientific analysis and the other disclosing no basis, held, the report on scientific basis is to be preferred: 1985 Tax.L.R. 2584 (Mad.).

S. 45 does not say that an expert's opinion is conclusive; rather, it is well-recognised that an expert's evidence is only an opinion; it is upto the parties to let in evidence challenging correctness of the expert's opinion and upto the Court to form its own conclusion on evidence. When direct evidence is forth-coming, the Court is not precluded from acting on it in preference to the expert's report. The value of the evidence of an expert would vary according to circumstances and his reasoning in support; the value of an expert's opinion should be adjudged in the same way as the evidence of any other witness. The expert's reasons are always open to scrutiny and it is always open to the opposite party to place materials before the Court to shake the foundation on which the expert opinion is formed either in the form of his cross-examination or counter-evidence of another expert. The Court should not reject the request for sending the document for the opinion of another expert. [1961 Ker.L.T. 960, Rel. on]: 1978 Ker.L.T. 872.

Evidence of an expert, like any other witness, has to be appreciated in accordance with law and accepted only if found trustworthy. An opinion evidence of an expert after its acceptance by the Court becomes the decision of the Court and ceases to be an opinion evidence of the expert. Under the circumstances, evidence of an expert also has to be interpreted like any other evidence. In so doing, the effort should be made to explain the same and correlate with the evidence of eye-witnesses. It is only when the two become irreconcilable that the question of accepting one or the other arises and not otherwise: 1994 Cr.L.J. 494: 1994 M.P.L.J. 57 (D.B.).

If the oral evidence leads to a positive conclusion one way or the other, the opinions of experts have to yield or have to be accepted or rejected in accordance with the finding arrived at on an appraisal of direct oral evidence; it is only where there is no direct evidence that expert evidence becomes relevant, but if the direct evidence of the witnesses is clear and there is nothing improper or incredible about their evidence and the same is believed by the trial Court which had the opportunity of seeing the witnesses and watching the demeanour, and there is no other evidence on the basis of which the direct evidence of those witnesses could be discredited as false, the opinion of the experts cannot outweigh such direct evidence: A.I.R. 1982 All. 323.

When direct evidence is led and accepted it is hardly necessary to consider expert opinion, though direct evidence can be appreciated in the light of expert opinion: A.I.R. 1952 Kutch 4. The guilt or innocence of the accused has to be determined by the Tribunal appointed by law and not according to the test of anyone else: I.L.R. (1953) Mys. 171: A.I.R. 1953 Mys. 80.

Expert evidence not based on well-defined inexorable laws of nature cannot be taken as decisive—Especially when there is direct evidence opposed to it: 96 I.C. 641: A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 313. See also 29 O.C. 1: A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 413.

Expert evidence and direct evidence—Value: A.I.R. 1965 Madh. Pra. 107.

The expert's opinion does not take away the common man's judgment—They have the right to think and judge things from day to day experience: I.L.R. (1954) 6 Assam 428: A.I.R. 1956 Assam 15.

When trial Court permits the evidence of an expert to be brought on the record on a technical matter, it does not abdicate its function to judge to itself whether the opinion of an expert is correct or not on a matter at issue. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 49, Rel on; A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 555 and A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 485, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1980 All. 294.

Expert evidence is good even if not decisive; the Court is not bound by such evidence but must consider it alongwith other evidence and circumstances on record; the Court may not place any reliance on expert opinion if it is unsupported by reasons: 1987 M.P.L.J. 214.

It would be better if in the reports, reasons for the opinion expressed are given. This should be a simple matter as the expert must keep some note of the points where he finds tallying at the time when he makes his examination of the documents for the purpose of expressing his opinion. The setting out of the reasons at length will help to clarify his ideas and it will furnish a valuable guide to the parties and to the Court in testing the value to be attached to that opinion. It would also be fairer in the persons against whom the opinion is to be used that the reasons for that opinion are definitely expressed: 1953 B.L.J.R. 486: A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 131.

Opinion of experts—Opinions must be supported by reasons and it is the reasons and not ipse dixit which is of importance in assessing the merit of the opinion—Doctor's opinion in the form of reply to certain written queries made by Sub-Inspector—Doctor not examined as a witness—Nature of queries uncertain—Held, in the circumstances that the doctor's opinion without reasons, was not to be accepted: (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 941: 1967 Mah.L.J. 25: 1968 Cr.L.J. 453: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 127.

It is not necessary for an expert to give reasons at great length in support of his opinion. It is sufficient if the expert gives its reasons briefly: 1956 All.W.R. (H.C.) 724: 1956 All.L.J. 910: (1957) 2 L.L.J. 177: 1957 Cr.L.J. 108.

But depositions of expert witnesses as to the result to their opinions and as to the effect of them does not come within the domain of expert evidence at all: A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 26: 64 M.L.J. 193 (P.C.). Value to be attached to such evidence. See I.L.R. 11 Bom. 89; I.L.R. 29 Cal. 587; I.L.R. 15 Cal. 589; (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 719: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 561.

Expert should put before Court all the materials which induce him to come to the conclusion, so that Court, although not an expert, may form its own judgment on those materials: (1969) 10 Guj.L.R. 253: A.I.R. 1969 Guj. 48.

The expert witness is expected to place before the Court all materials including the data which induced him to come to the conclusion; he should also enlighten the Court on technical aspects of the case so that it may form its own judgment with due regard to the expert's opinion. [A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1307, Rel. on]: (1992) 3 S.C.C. 204: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 129 (D.B.). See also 1989 Raj.Cr.C. 125.

Where the so-called 'expert witnesses' give no data in support of their opinions their evidence should be rejected: A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 364. See also 131 I.C. 771: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 189 (P.C.); A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 488.

A Court cannot blindly accept a report of the expert. It is the duty of an expert to furnish the Judges the necessary criteria for testing the accuracy of his conclusions so as to enable the Judge to form his own independent judgment by application of the criteria to the facts proved in evidence: (1979) 5 All.L.R. 170: 1979 All.W.C. 209: 1979 All.Ren.Cas. 214: 1979 All.L.J. 38. See also 1979 All.Ren. Cas. 145.

A valuer must give basis for his opinion: (1976) 1 Karn.L.J. 1.

It is not for an expert to tell the Court what would be the chances of a man falling out of the window from which the assured was said to have fallen out: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 633.

Where reliable and trustworthy evidence is available, much weight is not to be given to expert opinion: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 46.

The general rule is that though the Court should not lightly interfere with the opinion evidence of experts (including those belonging to academic bodies), it may interfere only where the expert view is such that no reasonable person would normally take: A.I.R. 1981 All. 287 (D.B.).

Where it finds the experts' conclusions as unsatisfactory, the Court are not bound to accept their report even if it is submitted by a Committee of Experts; while considering such opinions, it should bear in mind that "clearly it is not the province of the expert to act as Judge or jury"; the ultimate decision has to be by the Judge. Expert opinions must be supported by reasons; it is the reasoning and not the blank finding that is important; experts give evidence but do not decide the issue: A.I.R. 1994 Ker. 308 (D.B.).

Value and acceptability of the opinion depends upon facts upon which it rests and upon the validity of process by which the conclusion is reached: (1976) 1 Karn.L.J. 220.

What weight is to be attached to expert's opinion depends on its reasonableness and scientific quality and not on expert's practice length: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 77 (All.).

Though the witness did not possess any technical qualifications inasmuch as he had neither obtained a degree nor a diploma in photography, his experience for over 25 years in photography was sufficient enough to call him as an expert: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 341: I.L.R. (1957) Mys. 177: A.I.R. 1958 Mys. 150: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1489.

Where, the handwriting expert was neither having such qualifications nor experience so as to accept him as a handwriting expert, held, as his deposition exceeded the limits of an expert and supported the party producing him in matters which were not within his province, same was liable to be rejected: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1694: 1977 U.J. (S.C.) 349: (1977) 2 S.C.C. 501: (1977) 3 S.C.R. 400.

Party can examine private expert on his own behalf without appointment by Court—Appreciation of such evidence: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 29.

Generally speaking it is not permissible to call a witness to explain to the Court what a document means unless such witness is an expert. It is for the Court to ascertain what the document means though, no doubt, a witness may suggest methods by which an intelligent meaning can be given to the document: I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 434: (1939) 41 Bom.L.R. 548: A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 339.

Opinion must be of person specially skilled and expressed in Court—Opinion given in a letter is not relevant fact under S. 45: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1206.

Scope. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 73: (1959-60) 64 Cal.W.N. 1067: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 300.

Under S. 45, the opinion of an expert on any point of science is always admissible and the Deputy Director of Health Services and the Chemist are experts and the record of their opinion on the scientific point involved would be admissible when the persons concerned are themselves examined as witnesses: 1958 Cr.L.J. 574 (Cal.).

An expert can give his opinion as to the quality of jute. It is, however, difficult to follow how an expert can give an opinion as to whether it should be classified under one item or another of Schedule II of the Sea Customs Act. It is a matter either for the Court or the customs authorities or both:(1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1206.

Where a person working in the Irrigation Department was specifically entrusted to assist the investigation, held, he is person having special knowledge about the jungle clearance work in the course whereof the offence under S. 6(1)(b) of the Prevention of Corruption Act was committed; he is, strictly speaking, not an 'expert' but in view of his special knowledge, his opinion would be of an expert under S. 45; when his opinion was not reduced into writing by the investigating agency but prepared by himself, it can be looked into as a technical report by the Court; S. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not attracted: (1992) 1 An.W.R. 16: 1993 Cr.L.J. 558.

Though certificate issued by the local Horticultural Officer to the effect that cultivation of paddy by the defendant would affect roots of fruit yielding trees on plaintiff's adjoining land, may not be treated as expert evidence, held, it can be used for arriving at a just decision when no objection was raised of its admissibility in the first appellate Court: (1981) 2 Karn.L.J. 124.

An Agriculture Extension Officer of the Panchayat Samiti who is required to deal with the fertilizer's supply to the cultivators and its use, held, can be termed as an expert within the meaning of S. 45: 1977 Cr.L.R. 164 (Raj.).

Where bars allegedly of gold were recovered and were confiscated under S. 111(d) of the Customs Act, 1962 and a criminal complaint was lodged before the District Magistrate for offences punishable under S. 135(b) of the Customs Act read with S. 85(ii) of the Gold (Control) Act, 1968, and in the trial, a goldsmith testified after rubbing the bars on the touchstone that they were of gold of 24 carats' purity, held, it could not be said that the prosecution had not established that the bars were of gold; it is well known that professional goldsmiths are able to find out whether a piece of metal is gold or not by examining the colour of the rubbing streak on the touchstone; even if such an assessment of its purity may not be exact and not a strictly scientific way of proving that the bars were of gold. [1973 Cr.L.J. 1551 (Ker.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 168: (1983) 1 S.C.C. 370: (1983) 12 E.L.T. 193: 1983 Cr.L.J. 225: (1983) 1 Crimes 629. See also (1971) 2 Mys.L.J. 422. See however (1979) 2 Karn.L.J. 458 (D.B.) Where an Excise Inspector testified that liquid seized was liquor but the prosecution failed to prove that the training or length of service of witness had any direct connection with test of liquor, held, the failure of the prosecution to prove the same was fatal to the prosecution: 1977 Cr.L.J. 528 (P.&H.) 4. Expert evidence—Whether requires corroboration.—The expert's evidence is only a piece of evidence. A Judge of fact will have to consider that evidence along with the other pieces of evidence. Which is the main evidence and which is the corroborative one depends upon the facts of each case. It is the duty of the trial Court to come to a conclusion on a question of fact on a consideration of the entire evidence including that of the expert: (1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andhra) 39: A.I.R. 1954 Andhra 39; 1958 B.L.J.R. 64: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 353.

The value of the expert evidence depends largely on the cogency of the reasons on which it is based. In general, it cannot be the basis of conviction unless it is corroborated by other evidence: 1936 All.L.J. 317: A.I.R. 1936 All. 165.

There is no rule of law saying that expert's opinion cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated by other evidence; whether such corroboration is necessary or not is to be decided on the facts and circumstances of each case. [A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531, Foll.]: (1992) 1 Ker.L.J. 212 (D.B.).

It is going too far to say that the Court must insist upon corroboration of the evidence of a finger-print expert. The Court cannot hold a person guilty merely because an expert comes forward and says that in his opinion the accused must be guilty. The Court must satisfy itself as to the value of the evidence of the expert in the same way as it must satisfy itself of the value of other evidence. The Court has to rely on the expert upon two distinct points, first of all, on the question of similarity between the marks, and secondly, on the point which is one for expert opinion, whether it is possible to find the finger-prints or thumb-impressions of two individuals corresponding in as many points of resemblance as are shown to exist between the impressions found in the case before the Court and those of the accused. When the expert tells the Court that it is impossible to find so many characteristics identical in the finger-prints of two persons as are found in the case, and when that statement entirely agrees with what one has read on the subject in scientific books, the Court need not hesitate in accepting the opinion: I.L.R. 60 Bom. 187: (1936) 38 Bom.L.R. 160: A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 151.

Conviction cannot be based solely on opinion of handwriting expert without any independent corroboration. [1980 Cr.L.J. 396 (S.C.) 1984 Cr.L.J. 1289 (Ori.), Rel. on]: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1401; A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 4 (D.B.); (1990) 2 Ker.L.T. 68 (S.N.); (1992) 1 Ker.L.T. 878.

It may be that normally it is not safe to treat expert evidence as to handwriting as sufficient basis for conviction. It may be, however relied upon along with other various items of external and internal evidence relating to the documents in question: 1957 Cr.L.J. 559: (S. A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 381.

It is well settled that though the opinion of a handwriting expert is relevant on the question of handwriting of a person, it is not conclusive unless corroborated by clear and direct or circumstantial evidence: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 1251; (1989) 1 Karn.L.J. 273 (D.B.).

Nothing in the Act justifies the Court to assume that a handwriting expert's opinion is unworthy of credit unless corroborated; under S. 3, a fact is said to be proved if on materials before it, the Court believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought under the circumstances to accept its existence; artificial standards of proof are not warranted. Thus, corroboration may not invariably be insisted upon before acting upon the handwriting expert's opinion, though the Court may require it in varying degree in appropriate cases; the Court should proceed cautiously, probe reasons for the expert's opinion, consider all other relevant evidence before finally accepting or rejecting the opinion evidence: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531: 1980 Cr.L.J. 396: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 704 (1980) 2 S.C.R. 249: (1980) 1 Karn.L.J. (S.C.) 115.

There is no hard and fast rule laying down that the opinion of a handwriting expert should not be accepted without corroboration. It is only a rule of caution that the Court require corroboration simply because opinion is after all an opinion. But at the same time, if the opinion is well reasoned, the Court can act upon it even in the absence of any corroboration: 1977 All.Cr.R. 401: 1977 All.W.C. 55.

It is well established that it is unsafe to base a judgment purely on expert opinion without substantial corroboration. In other words, a Court is required to satisfy itself whether the opinion of the handwriting expert can be safely acted upon: 1973 Cr.L.J. 76; 1986 All.W.C. 356.

A decision as to the genuineness of a document cannot be founded solely on the expert opinion; the expert opinion must get support from other evidence so that it may be relied on: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 224: (1975-76) 80 Cal.W.N. 278 (D.B.).

A conviction cannot be based on an expert's comparison, if it is not supported by corroborative evidence: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 159. It is a rule of law that it is extremely unsafe to base a conviction upon the opinion of handwriting experts without substantial corroboration: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 422; A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1091: 1977 Cr.L.J. 711.

Where the charge against the accused is one of forging a writing, as a rule it is imprudent to convict him solely on the basis of the expert testimony.

But it is merely a rule of caution and not an absolute rule of law. There is nothing in law to prevent the Court from recording a conviction on expert evidence alone. The reason is that the identification of handwriting is an imperfect science. There the margin of error is great. Experts often give dogmatic opinions unsupported by reasons. The value of the expert evidence, however, varies with the circumstances of each case and the reasons given by him in support of his opinion. Its value is to be judged with the same yardstick with which the evidence of any other witness is appraised. It is to be seen how far it fits in with the surrounding circumstances and the natural probabilities of the case. If in a given case the evidence of the expert is materially corroborated and confirmed by the other evidence, there is nothing in law to debar the Court from recording a conviction of the accused on the basis of such expert testimony: 1969 Cr.L.J. 932: A.I.R. 1969 Punj. 225.

The expert's evidence as to handwriting is opinion evidence and it can rarely, if ever, take the place of substantive evidence. Before acting on such evidence it is usual to see if it is corroborated either by clear direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence. Where the question is whether the will was executed on the date on which it purports to have been executed and there are no suspicious circumstances attached to the will, the mere opinion of the handwriting expert that it was executed much later cannot override the positive evidence of the attesting witnesses especially when he has not applied any chemical tests which according to his own opinion are essential: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 529.

There is nothing in the Evidence Act which requires the evidence of an expert in any particular case, e.g., the evidence of a handwriting expert on disputed signatures, to be corroborated before it can be acted upon as sufficient proof of what the expert has stated. The question as to how much reliance a Court may place on the statements of any witness depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. The Court must satisfy itself as to the value of the evidence of the expert in the same way as it must satisfy itself of the value of other evidence. The Court should be careful not to delegate its authority to a third party, and should itself be satisfied about the genuineness or otherwise of a disputed signature and not to hold it genuine or forged merely because an expert has given his opinion: I.L.R. (1944) Kar. 305: A.I.R. 1945 Sind 4.

Opinion of handwriting expert or fingerprint expert is not conclusive in absence of other corroborating evidence: (1968) 1 Mys.L.J. 457: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 226.

5. Examination and cross-examination of experts.—Witness produced before Court—Party's right to have him examined. See (1957) 2 An.W.R. 242.

It is not satisfactory to examine an expert witness on commission and not in presence of the accused. The evidence of an expert has always to be carefully weighed but when given on commission its value is considerably reduced: 108 I.C. 369: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 533.

The opinion sent by the expert in writing cannot prove itself. Unless the expert stepped into the witness-box, so as to enable the opponent to cross-examine him in reference to that opinion, the opinion expressed by him in a communication to one of the parties cannot be treated as evidence under the Evidence Act: 1956 Cr.L.J. 1069: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 617.

The cross-examination of a witness is 'acting' and not 'pleading' and, hence, there is no objection in specific cases for an expert being allowed under special power-of-attorney to be employed for the cross-examination of an expert in the same line of business on the other side: 1942 Nag.L.J. 449.

It is necessary that the expert should be subjected to cross-examination; he is, like any other witness, fallible; the real value of his evidence is his rightful inferences drawn from what he has himself observed and not his mere surmises. Before his testimony becomes admissible, his competence as an expert must be shown either showing that he was possessed of necessary qualification or that he had otherwise acquired special skill by experience: A.I.R. 1989 All. 133 (D.B.).

Where the expert is not examined and the other party had no opportunity of cross-examining him, the report of the expert cannot be admitted in evidence: 141 I.C. 767: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 159; A.I.R. 1945 All. 142.

But where the lower Court had based its decision on the opinion of the handwriting expert though he had not given sworn testimony in support of the report, held, that the objection to the evidence being received could not be taken for the first time in revision: (1933) 35 Punj.L.R. 109: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 230. See also I.L.R. 11 Pat. 782: A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 352.

When the report of the expert is produced and marked as an exhibit, the accused cannot argue that he did not get an opportunity to know the contents of the report at any time. Thus, where the accused even after his examination under S. 313, Cr.P.Code did not ask for an opportunity to cross-examine the expert, held, non-furnishing of details contained in the report to the accused was not fatal to the prosecution case: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3562 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Expert evidence—Whether necessary—Examination by handwriting expert is not necessary in every case of disputed writing and no adverse inference can be drawn for not obtaining expert's opinion in such case: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 609: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 595: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 450; A.I.R. 1967 Mys. 210: (1967) 1 Mys.L.J. 548: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 501.

Where only evidence relied in defence was identity of the handwriting, held, in the absence of the handwriting expert's testimony, it is rather too much for the Judge to use his own eyes for comparing the admitted and disputed handwritings: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 39: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 1.

Though S. 45 as it is makes the mere opinion of an expert as sufficient, taken to its logical end it might as well render unnecessary the underlying reasons for the opinion; stretching the section so far is not proper for the accused is entitled to know and have the copy of the handwriting expert's report in advance if the prosecution relies upon the same; otherwise, he would not be able to cross-examine the expert properly: (1982) 23 Guj.L.R. 116: (1981) 1 Guj.L.H. 373: 1982 Cr.L.J. 763 (D.B.). The accused, however, is not entitled to claim as of right the photographic enlargements of disputed and admitted writings made by the handwritings expert for giving an opinion in respect thereof: (1971) 12 Guj.L.R. 167.

If a finger-print expert has not been cross-examined as to the grounds, of his opinion and as to the test to which he had put a particular finger-print, the weight to be attached to such witness's evidence cannot be diminished by applying to it, considerations to which the witness's attention was never directed: 21 Cr.L.J. 257: 55 I.C. 273 (P.); (1930-31) 35 Cal.W.N. 863: A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 441. See also 97 I.C. 335: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 575; (1925-26) 30 Cal.W.N. 373: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 531.

There is no rule of law as to whether a conviction can be based on the unsupported testimony of a finger-print expert. It is a matter of caution whether a Court will act on such unsupported evidence or not: 1953 B.L.J.R. 488: A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 131.

Conviction based on the sole testimony of finger-print expert though not safe, yet legal: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 129: I.L.R. 6 Pat. 305.

Where the report of the finger-print expert was used as evidence without examining him as a witness in the Court and the accused too had not applied to summon the accused—which the Court on such application was bound to do—held, the accused's grievance against use of the report as evidence was without any substance: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 905: (1975) 1 S.C.C. 797: 1975 Cr.L.J. 778.

Report of Government analyst is not admissible unless he is examined: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1561: A.I.R. 1968 Madh. Pra. 238 (F.B.).

Article duly submitted for chemical examination — Chemical Examiner not examined — Report of Chemical Examiner still admissible in evidence: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 321: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 38.

The evidence of experts must be given in the ordinary way. Subject to certain exceptions—those exceptions being amongst others the certificates of the Imperial Serologist touching the matter of blood-stains and of the Chemical Examiner, which are made admissible in evidence by themselves—The opinion of an expert must be given orally and a report merely or certificate by him cannot possibly be evidence. Unless he goes into the witness-box and gives oral evidence, there can be no cross-examination of the expert at all. The opinion of the Director of Agriculture is certainly the opinion of an expert, but the evidence, being only documentary, is clearly inadmissible: I.L.R. (1937) Mad. 764: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 407: (1937) 1 M.L.J. 341.

In ordinary circumstances there would be nothing wrong in taking reports of Chemical Examiner and Imperial Serologist on record without examining these persons as witnesses, as permitted by Cr.P.Code. When, however, there is a difference of opinion in the reports so much so that the effect of one report is to nullify the effect of the other, the duty to explain the difference is on the prosecution and the mere production of the report does not under the circumstances, prove anything which can weigh against the accused: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 1.

What is made relevant under S. 45 of the Evidence Act is the opinion of a medical expert or any other expert and not the document in which he has recorded his opinion. The certificate in itself is not an admissible document. Ss. 65 to 73 relate to the mode of proof of the contents of documents and in such case, if no objection has been taken in the first Court, objection cannot be taken in the first appellate Court or in second appeal. But if the infirmity in the evidence relates to its relevancy or to the manner in which evidence is given, then objection can be taken for the first time even in appeal. Hence, an objection to its admission in evidence of the certificates even when not taken in trial Court, can be taken for the first time in appeal when the objection is based on non-compliance with the provisions of the Evidence Act in Part II relating to proof: (1961) 2 Guj.L.R. 304: A.I.R. 1961 Guj. 196.

The certificate of a Doctor cannot by itself be admissible in evidence unless the Doctor is examined as a witness: I.L.R. (1953) Hyd. 191: A.I.R. 1953 Hyd. 209.

Doctor's medical certificate filed—It does not prove itself—Doctor must be called and cross-examined on it: (1953) 1 M.L.J. 591: A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 858.

Case of grievous hurt—Medical certificate is not substantive evidence—Mere statement of witness on oath, that he issued the certificate is not requisite proof—Opinion must be given orally in witness-box and there should be cross-examination on it—Certificate is only corroborative piece—Absence of oral examination—Injury cannot be said to have been proved—There is no question of prejudice or no prejudice: 1953 Cr.L.J. 104: A.I.R. 1953 Kutch 7.

A medical certificate issued by a registered medical practitioner can be accepted by the Court as evidence of sickness or infirmity of the concerned person without examining the Doctor as a witness; however, if the Court entertains some doubt, it may call and examine the Doctor to ascertain the truth or otherwise of the certificate's contents. Thus, where the medical certificate opined that the party concerned, aged about 76 years, was due to his sickness and infirmity unable to attend the Court to depose as a witness but the Court without examining the Doctor concluded that the character of sickness mentioned in the certificate was not such as to expose the party concerned to any risk, held, it was not proper for the Court to brush aside the Doctor's opinion and come to its own conclusion in the absence of expert medical professional knowledge; it was not fair or proper for the Court, in view of the specific provision in O. 26, R. 1 of the C.P.Code, to reject the medical certificate: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 486.

Despite common knowledge that medical practitioners often issue untrue medical certificates on mere asking and nominal charges, held, it would not be right to say that no medical certificate should be relied upon unless the Doctor himself is examined; there can be no general presumption of all medical certificates being false; however, if the other party challenges the veracity of its contents, the certificate has to be proved by the party relying upon it: A.I.R. 1988 Guj. 34: (1987-2) 28 Guj.L.R. 1134: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. 226.

Where the Doctor, who had examined the injured was not examined as a witness, held, his injury report is not admissible in evidence: 1984 Cr.L.J. 217 (Gau.).

Where the medical report was not proved by the Doctor or, if he was not available, by others acquainted with his handwriting, held, the accused's conviction cannot be upheld: 1982 Raj.L.W. 429.

The Court has to consider the other evidence which may show injuries but that is no substitute for the injury or post mortem reports in the absence of the examination of the Doctor; a Doctor alone can prove whether or not the injuries inflicted by the assailant were the result of the victim's death or that the assailant must be presumed to have known that they were likely to cause the victim's death: (1990-1) 38 B.L.J.R. 462 (D.B.).

Where in a case of murder the Doctor who had prepared the post mortem report was not examined as a witness, held, the report, not being a piece of substantive evidence, cannot be used to establish the cause of death: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 193: (1990) 1 Crimes 28 (Pat.); 1975 B.L.J.R. 462: 1975 Cr.L.J. 1405; 1979 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 19 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.); (1986) 3 Crimes 145 (Cal.). Particularly so when the post mortem report was a carbon copy and not the original report: 1989 Cr.L.J. 107 (N.O.C.) (Pat.) (D.B.).

Where the murder was committed by the accused who had no licensed pistol by, in all probability, using country-made pistols and the pistol and bullets extracted from the victim's body were sent to ballistic expert for his opinion who did not examine them for considerable time and was given up by prosecution as a witness, held, non-examination of the ballistic expert is not fatal to the prosecution; as opined in the Text Book of Fire Arms Investigation, the expert could not have found identifying marks on the bullets: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2474: (1976) 2 S.C.C. 263: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1891. See also 1978 B.L.J. 238.

Where garments supplied for export were rejected as found defective as per report of the Inspector of Textile Committee as an expert but the Inspector was not examined to prove the report, held, the report could not be given much weight as the supplier had no opportunity to cross-examine the Inspector: A.I.R. 1981 N.O.C. 151 (Del.).

6. Medical evidence—General.—A medical witness, called in as an expert, is not a witness of fact. His evidence is really of an advisory character, given in the form of an opinion on the facts submitted to him and not to be given by reference to facts collected independently by himself: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 962: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 305; (1992) 3 S.C.C. 204: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 129.

Medical opinion is hardly decisive and often inconclusive because it is primarily an evidence of opinion and not of facts. Such an opinion on non-medical matters need not necessarily be correct: I.L.R. (1963) 1 Ker. 458: (1963) 1 Ker.L.R. 468: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 297: A.I.R. 1964 Ker. 222. See also 1991 C.Cr.L.R. 61 (Cal.).

The evidence of medical men is of an advisory character given on the data placed before them. Their evidence is primarily an evidence of opinion and not of fact: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1393: A.I.R. 1969 Goa 116.

Doctors are experts in their own right and when they examine the person and give opinion it does not normally mean that their opinion is not correct: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1190: I.L.R. (1984) 2 Del. 376.

Medical evidence has never been considered substantive evidence of the charge; it has only been accepted as corroborative of the charge; though Courts have treated expert medical opinion with respect, they are expected not to surrender their will, independence and judgment to an expert; Courts have rejected such expert evidence as valueless where it was based on insufficient data or reasons: 1987 M.P.L.J. 214.

Expert medical evidence is not conclusive proof, but on a difficult and obscure subject, the observation and inference made by experts with special education and training should be given due weight. It is not the opinion of an expert which will be binding on the Court. The Court has to see other aspects of the case. [A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 706, Rel. on]: 1984 M.P.L.J. 292 (D.B.).

There is no irrebutable presumption that a Doctor is always a witness of truth; his evidence is to be appreciated like that of any other witness: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 66: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 396: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1972.

The opinion stated by the medical officer is at best an opinion. It cannot be taken as contradicting the positive evidence of the witnesses to the facts such as that the deceased took his last meal at about 4 p.m. and that he was stabbed at 5 p.m.: 1960 M.L.J. (Cr.) 808: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 120; A.I.R. 1961 Mys. 21.

Medical evidence cannot override direct evidence if direct evidence is satisfactory and reliable: A.I.R. 1984 S.C. 1233: 1984 Cr.L.J. 921: 1984 S.C.C. (Cr.) 484: (1984) 1 Crimes 859.

Where there are alleged eye witnesses of physical violence which is said to have caused a person's death, the value of medical evidence adduced by the prosecution in support of its case is only corroborative. It proves that the injuries could have been caused in the manner alleged and death could have been caused by the injuries, so that the prosecution case being consistent with matters verifiable by the medical science, there is no reason why the eye witnesses should not be believed. The medical evidence does not itself prove the prosecution case. The use which the defence can make of medical evidence is to prove by it that the injuries could not possibly have been caused in the manner alleged or death could not possibly have been caused by the injuries and if it can do so, it discredits the eye witnesses. More it is not required to do but less is of no use to it: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 962: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 305.

Unless the medical evidence in its turn goes so far that it completely rules out all possibilities whatsoever of injuries taking place in the manner alleged by eye witnesses, the testimony of the eye witnesses cannot be thrown out on the ground of alleged inconsistency between it and the medical evidence: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 484: 1983 Cr.L.J. 822: (1983) 1 Crimes 625: (1983) 3 Guj.L.H. 576: 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 505: (1983) 2 S.C.C. 174; 1990 Cr.L.J. 846: 1989 All.L.J. 463 (D.B.).

It is advisable that Medical Officers while mentioning the assailant should note whether he is a known or unknown person, but not his name: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2173 (Mad.) (D.B.).

The duty of an expert witness such, as a Doctor, is, to state facts without mincing words. He should give the benefit of his expert knowledge without any vestige of partiality: 1958 M.P.L.J. 104:1958 Jab.L.J. 19.

In the professional career, the medical practitioner will have frequently to give evidence as a medical jurist in a Court of law to prove the innocence or guilt of his fellow subjects, or to authenticate or disprove a criminal charge of assault, rape or murder brought against an individual. He must remember that as a medical jurist, his responsibility is very great, for very often he will find that his is the only reliable evidence on which depends the liberty or life of a fellow being. He has, therefore, to acquire the habit of making a careful note of all the facts observed by him, and to learn to draw conclusions correctly and logically after considering in detail the pros and cons of the case, instead of forming hasty judgments: 1979 Cr.L.R. (Guj.) 411 (D.B.).

Where a Doctor examined as a witness did not state that he was a medical graduate but did say that he was Incharge Medical Officer of the Hospital and his deposition was not concerned with any complicated question of medical science pertaining to anatomy, physiology or surgery, held, the Doctor's failure to prove his qualifications or speciality would not render his evidence as inadmissible. [A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 321, Not attracted]: 1975 Raj.L.W. 389: I.L.R. (1976) 26 Raj. 34: 1975 W.L.N. 483 (D.B.).

The Doctor who has examined the deceased and conducted the post mortem is the only competent witness to speak about the nature of injuries and the cause of death. Unless there is something inherently defective, the Court cannot substitute its opinion to that of the Doctor: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 2186: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3710. Where though the Doctor conceded that there would be gapping between both types of punctured wounds whether caused by fire arm or sharp pointed weapon, held, when said gapping was not in the post mortem report, no reliance could be placed on the Doctor's opinion: 1986 All.W.C. 932.

Expert medical opinion of a Surgeon who conducted post mortem examination is relevant: 12 I.C. 93: 12 Cr.L.J. 485. See also 1972 W.L.N. 633: I.L.R. (1972) 22 Raj. 793.

Where there is a discrepancy between the post mortem report and the inquest report, held, post mortem report and testimony of Doctor who conducted post mortem, if otherwise reliable, is preferable to panchnama prepared by Police during inquest: (1983) 1 S.C.C. 379.

Post mortem report and report of Chemical Examiner—Evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1961 Ori. 214.

An expert giving evidence in a matter outside the field of his speciality, held, cannot be deemed to have testified as an expert witness; thus, where a Lady Doctor after having found no external injury on the victim's person, opined that it could not be said that the prosecutrix was subjected to forcible sexual intercourse, held, it was not expert evidence but the Lady Doctor's personal opinion unrelated to medical science; absence of injury may or may not indicate absence of physical violence; absence of physical violence does not by itself mean that sexual intercourse was not forcible; force need not be actual physical force; a mere threat of violence may at times prompt submission and at times the victim may not due to her age or physical capacity or otherwise, be in a position to resist or struggle and thereby escape injury; the Lady Doctor's opinion only illustrates the vastness of her ignorance about the true meaning of force: 1987 M.P.L.J. 214.

Doctor's evidence regarding age of injuries cannot be of much reliance if he has failed to mention the age in the report. Besides it is difficult for a Doctor to give the exact age of injuries. Hence, Court cannot fix the time of occurrence on the basis of opinion of the Doctor: 1970 Pat.L.J.R. 376.

Medical jurisprudence not being an exact science, it is indeed difficult for any Doctor to depose with precision as to when a particular injury was caused to and exact time when the accused might have had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix; the Doctor who examines the victim is in the best position to depose about the medico-legal aspects of the offence; the Court need not effect a detailed research about the exact point of injury: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1307: 1977 Cr.L.J. 817: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 41.

The opinion of a Doctor as to the nature of injuries received by and the nature of the incapacity incurred by the plaintiff in a collision between buses is relevant under S. 45 of the Evidence Act. Such opinion, however, must be duly proved, that is, as provided in S. 60 of the Act by the evidence of the person who holds that opinion. Hence, the medical certificates given by the Doctor to the plaintiff cannot, without his examination in Court, be admitted in evidence: (1961) 2 Guj.L.R. 304: A.I.R. 1961 Guj. 196.

Doctor's opinion without examining injury is of no value: 1983 M.P.W.N. 169.

It is very difficult for a Doctor to give opinion about the nature of injury from bare look at photograph: 1988 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 57 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the trial Court convicted all the accused on the basis of evidence including medical report on the record for the offence of gang-rape and the accused, pleading false implication, relied on the medical report to show that it did not give the number of persons committing the gang-rape, held, it is impossible to determine the number of gang-raping persons by medical examination; the evidence of the prosecutrix that all the accused had committed rape on her was not inconsistent with the medical report; conviction upheld: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1080: 1987 Cr.L.J. 971: (1987) 2 S.C.C. 27: (1987) 1 U.J. (S.C.) 492: 1987 B.L.J.R. 491: (1987) 1 Crimes 910.

An intact hymen is not a conclusive defence in a prosecution for rape: 1985 All.L.J. 384: (1984) 3 Crimes 251.

Merely because marks of injuries were not found either on the person of the prosecutrix or the accused, held, it could not be inferred that there was lack of resistance or there was consent on the part of the prosecutrix to the sexual intercourse: (1984) 3 Crimes 267 (P.&H.).

Where the body of the rape victim was found floating in a well after 18 hours and the Doctor, in his chief-examination, stated that laceration on vagina was due to intercourse, held, its veracity is in no way affected by his admission in cross-examination that laceration on the labia mazora was by itself no proof of intercourse because the deceased was a grown-up married lady; there could not have been laceration on the vagina unless it was a violent intercourse: 1992 Cr.L.J. 2236 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where in a rape case, the injuries found on the face of the prosecutrix were opined by the Doctor to be simple and could possibly be self-inflicted and regarding her claim of having sustained injury on her thigh, there was no opinion of the Doctor, held, in the absence of any medical opinion as to the fact of rape which could have corroborated the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, conviction could not be sustained: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2784 (Ori.).

Where body of the deceased was found at a distance of $18^{1}/_{2}$ metres away from the place of incident and the Doctor had opined that death would have been instantaneous, held, the opinion of the Doctor—apart from the fact that it was only an opinion, could not lead to the inference that the deceased would have fallen dead instantaneously on the spot, at the moment he sustained the injury; prosecution's case could not be rejected on that basis: 1992 Cr.L.J. 238 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Where the three Doctors who conducted post mortem could not give the probable time of death because the bodies were highly decomposed, but the High Court fixed the time of death in its judgment, held, the High Court usurped the function of an expert; the High Court was not justified in forming its own opinion when the Doctors failed to give any opinion: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1157: (1982) 2 Bom.C.R. 471: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1243: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 351: 1982 U.J. (S.C.) 475.

Where eye witnesses to the murder by fire-arms, otherwise found truthful and trustworthy, had stated that the deceased has taken food at 10-30 and was shot at 12-30 and the post mortem report showed presence of semi digested food in his stomach and it was contended by the defence that the presence of undigested food in the stomach belied the prosecution case, held, the Doctor opined that digestion starts in 1 or $1^1/_2$ hours but the process of digestion depends upon each individuals digestive power which varies from man to man; it also depends upon the kind and quantity of food taken; besides, medical evidence is only evidence of opinion and hardly decisive; conviction was proper. [(1985) 2 W.L.N. 98 (Raj.), Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2453: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2530: (1993) 1 Crimes 1144: (1993) 2 U.J. (S.C.) 9.

Where the deceased's son, other than the one she was residing with, nursing grievance against her in a property matter, accompanied by other accused came to the farm house and assaulted and killed his mother after she had taken meals, and on post mortem the Doctor noticed that the deceased's stomach contained 150 gms. of semi-digested food, held, merely because illiterate witnesses stated that meals were taken immediately before the occurrence could not by itself be a circumstance to discredit their evidence on such medical evidence if otherwise credible; text-books on medical jurisprudence are clear that stomach contents cannot determine precise time of death: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 672: 1994 Cr.L.J. 626.

Medical evidence regarding an ante-mortem burnt injury: (1992) 1 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 116.

Where the post mortem report definitely stated that the cause of death was 'asphyxia due to throttling' and the Doctor who proved it was not even suggested in cross-examination that death could have been caused by poison nor was the Doctor afforded an opportunity to state whether there would or would not be other visible indications if it was a case of poisoning and the case in the trial Court was argued on the basis of asphyxia due to throttling, held, the High Court was not justified, on its own medical knowledge, in the face of circumstantial evidence that it was also possibly a case of death by poisoning: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1797: 1972 Cr.L.J. 570.

Doctor giving report that death was due to combined effect of strychnine poison and coal gas poison—Symptoms of coal gas poison found in the internal organs of the deceased—Held, the effect of coal gas poison cannot be obliterated and, hence, it cannot be said that the death was caused by the accused administering strychnine to the deceased to cause death: (1973) 3 Sim.L.J. 413 (D.B.).

The best person to give an opinion about the nature and shape of the weapon is the Medical Officer who had conducted the autopsy. Thus, where the Doctor testified that the injuries could have been caused with a pharsa or some other sharp-edged weapon, held, the High Court was clearly in error in substituting its own opinion based on conjectural premises for that of the Medical expert: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 897: 1980 (Supp.) S.C.C. 489: 1981 Cr.L.J. 23.

Where the Doctor-defence witness opined that the accused had received gunshot injuries and the Chief Medical Officer examined as an expert by the Court opined that from the nature of injuries on the accused's body, they could not be gunshot injuries as circumference of the exit injury was shorter from that of the bullet shot by the pistol, held, the High Court was right in discarding the Doctor giving defence evidence: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 391.

Where the victim was putting on a turban when he was hit on his head with a gandasa but the turban reduced the force of the impact leaving a head injury and the Doctor, on the basis of the X-ray report, testified that it was a deep cut in the whole of the outer table, reaching upto the inner table but without mentioning the depth, held, the head fracture within S. 320, clause seventhly was established. [(1978) 80 Punj.L.R. 326, Upheld]: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 2192: 1986 Cr.L.J. 2061: (1986) 4 S.C.C. 401: 1986 U.J. (S.C.) 620: 1986 Cr.L.R. (S.C.) 468.

Where injuries comprise of stab wounds and the problem is to ascertain whether all or any of them could be caused with one or more weapons, held, the opinion of the Medical Officer who had examined the injuries must invariably be obtained; it is the prosecution's, no less of the Court's duty to see that the weapon of the offence, if available, is shown to the medical witness to invite his opinion on the point. Failure to do so may sometimes deflect the course of justice: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 76: 1976 Cr.L.J. 13: (1976) 1 S.C.C. 172; A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2423: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 355: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1883; 1995 Cr.L.J. 3100 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.). But where the nature of injuries can well, in the normal course, be attributed to the use of a bhala (spear), the weapon of offence, held, its non-production before the medical witness for seeking his opinion was of no consequence: (1992-1) 40 B.L.J.R. 77 (D.B.).

Where Doctor opined that both the injuries on the person of the deceased were caused by sharp weapon like knife or dagger but the weapon was not produced in the Court, held, that would not negative the opinion of the Doctor coupled with the evidence of the eye-witnesses: 1989 Cr.L.J. 226 (Gau.).

Where a knife injury 8 inches deep was testified to by a Doctor as having been caused by a knife of same length with a blade 4 inches long and he was neither cross-examined on the point nor was there anything on record to impeach his testimony, held, it could not be contended that the knife could not have caused the injury: 1979 M.L.J. (Cr.) 423.

Where Medical expert deposed that ends of the injury on the injured was elliptical which meant that single edged weapon, i.e., knife, which was alleged to be weapon of offence by prosecution could not cause such an injury but significantly this description did not find a place in wound certificate issued by him and further the ocular evidence of the occurrence witnesses was to the effect that it was with the said knife that the injury was inflicted on injured, held, expert evidence could not be relied upon. [1990 Cr.L.J. 1269 (S.C.); (1990) 1 Ker.L.J. 177 and 1983 Cr.L.J. 822 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1522 (Ker.) (D.B.).

Where the injured immediately removed to the hospital was treated and after death subjected to post-mortem by the Doctor on duty who deposed that the injury was caused by a sharp cutting weapon; though nothing on record showed the Doctor having any reason to be partial or unfair, two Medical Boards were later constituted to opine whether or not the injury could be caused by a sharp weapon; but the Boards due to lapse of time could not give any definite opinion about the nature of the weapon of assault, held, the negative evidence of the Medical Boards could not efface the positive evidence of the Doctor on duty. [1978 W.L.N. (U.C.) 103 (Raj.), Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 705: 1989 Cr.L.J. 845: (1989) 2 Crimes 181.

Under S. 45 the opinion of a medical witness conversant with the disease of insanity, however eminent he may be, must not be read as conclusive of the fact which the Court has to try. Such opinion may be invited in exceptional circumstances where there is no dispute as to facts or their interpretation but it must be considered by the Court as nothing more than relevant. The questing whether in given circumstances a man was sane or insane is for the Court to decide.

An expert can only furnish a Court with data from which insanity can be inferred: I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 711: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 55: 50 Cr.L.J. 181.

'Sound mind'—Medical evidence of Doctor who treated the testatrix in her last illness on the question of her state of mind, is to be preferred to the medical evidence of a Doctor who did not treat her, but was called to counter the evidence of the attending Doctor: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 178.

The opinion of an expert is relevant under S. 45, when a question of science is involved in arriving at a finding as to whether an accused in a criminal case was of unsound mind at the time of the commission of the act or was incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was wrong or contrary to law, the opinion of an expert in mental diseases is relevant and such an expert is generally examined as a witness in cases involving a question of insanity: 47 Cr.L.J. 918: I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 946: 1946 Nag.L.J. 656: A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 321.

Evidence of medical experts—Endorsement of Register under S. 35, Registration Act as to soundness of mind of executant of deed of adoption including opinion of medical expert—Failure to give direct oral evidence under S. 60 though medical expert was alive—Opinion of medical expert cannot be considered: A.I.R. 1970 Raj. 190.

Where medical report regarding soundness of mind was a cryptic report without any data, held, no reliance could be placed on it: (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 144.

Where the Medical Officer at a Mental Hospital merely deposed that the accused was given treatment for schizophrenia for some months and said nothing about the accused's state of health prior to the treatment and the accused himself did not specifically contend that he was of unsound mind on the day of occurrence, held, the Medical Officer's evidence was not that of an expert; and no importance could be given to it: A.I.R. 1971 Goa 3: 1971 Cr.L.J. 36.

No Medical Officer indicates in the certificate, the exact condition of the patient; thus, absence of indication in a medical certificate that its holder was unable to move during the period he was ill and unable to appear in the Court was not fatal to the plea of illness: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 102.

Doctor's opining on previous condition of patient—Evidentiary value is less as against positive evidence: I.L.R. (1964) 2 Ker. 257: A.I.R. 1965 Ker. 189.

Even where a Doctor has not examined the patient and his evidence as an expert is based on probabilities, still he as an expert is entitled to answer all hypothetical questions put to him, the only safeguard being that the hypotheses are correctly put to the expert: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 424: (1956) 1 L.L.J. 740: (1956-57) 10 F.J.R. 117. Injury to workmen—Compensation—Loss of earning capacity—Assessment of—Value of medical evidence. See A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 660.

Use of medical evidence to determine loss of earning capacity: 1969 Lab.I.C. 971: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 378.

Though a medical certificate assessing diminution of physical capacity is an important factor in assessment of loss of earning capacity, held, in absence of medical evidence by Doctors examining claimant, same cannot be acted upon: 1983 Lab.I.C. 685: 1983 Acc.C.J. 615: (1983) 2 L.L.J. 86 (Cal.). See also 1983 Lab.I.C. 1285 (Cal.).

When the medical evidence does not at all rule out the eye witness version, there is no reason to disbelieve the version given by the eye witness. [A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 484, Rel. on]: 1990 Cr.L.J. 839: 1989 All.L.J. 454 (D.B.). See also (1985) 1 Crimes 655 (Del.); 1983 Jab.L.J. 186; 1983 M.P.W.N. 250; 1983 M.P.W.N. 154; (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 17; (1980) 1 M.P.W.N. 292.

Where evidence of a witness was consistent with the surrounding circumstances and the probability of the case strikes the Court as true, it can be a good foundation for conviction, more so, if assurance is available from medical evidence. [1976 Cr.L.J. 6 (S.C.), Foll.]: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2954 (All.) (D.B.).

Where though the prosecution case was that the accused fired at complainant party without provocation as a result of which one of them died, the defence version was that complainant party attacked first and each side opened fire and the medical evidence was insufficient to hold with certainty that prosecution version was true and defence version was false, held, it would be unsafe to convict accused for murder: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1579: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1000: 1981 U.J. (S.C.) 127.

Where though there was no inconsistency between the direct and the medical evidence, there was difference of opinion between the two Doctors, held, in such a case where there is a conflict between the opinion of two experts, the Court should normally accept the evidence of the expert whose evidence is corroborated by direct evidence of the case which according to the Court is reliable: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 2274: 1977 Cr,L.J. 1941: (1977) 4 S.C.C. 452: 1977 U.J. Where annulment of marriage was sought by the husband on the ground that the wife was pregnant by another person at the time of marriage and the wife delivered a full term mature boy and the Lady Doctor deposing as expert witness opined that conception had occurred a little less than two months prior to the marriage, held, though the Lady Doctor had not specialised in gynaecology, yet her knowledge of midwifery as obstetrician having been proved to be of high order, her testimony could not be rejected by the High Court. [1968 Cur.L.J. 365 (P.&H.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 879.

Evidence of a Medical expert could not be brushed aside as unacceptable merely because the Doctor admittedly did not know the difference between narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances; Medical Officers are not expected to know the differences in legal parlance: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1966.

Expert evidence—Death caused by bullet wounds—Exit wound not noticeable—Medical Officer not directing X-ray examination—Conduct of Medical Officer and Investigating Officer criticised: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 520: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 175.

Where a piece of evidence against the accused in a case of murder was the dying declaration of the victim spoken to by the Asstt. Sub-Inspector and the Vaidyaraj running the dispensary more than two hours after the injuries inflicted, and the Doctor who conducted the post mortem examination was of opinion and stated that the deceased could not have survived for more than an hour after the infliction of the injuries and he would not have been in a position to speak out after the first few minutes, held, that the Doctor's evidence was only an estimate which might have gone wrong; it could not, therefore, be held that the statements of the eye witnesses as to the dying declaration are not true: 1952 Raj.L.W. 318: I.L.R. (1952) Raj. 222.

Medical evidence—Injury report is an admissible piece of evidence in proof or disproof of the theory of accident: 35 Cut.L.T. 362: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1517: A.I.R. 1969 Ori. 289.

Where an alleged period of gestation of 345 days was sought to be proved by the evidence of a Doctor who merely stated that the period may be even 400 days among human beings without reference to any authority and without the examination of the lady in question and he did not find out any causes for such an abnormal period of gestation in the case of the lady in question, his evidence is of no value and the male child in question cannot be accepted to have been proved to have been in the mother's womb within such period to be entitled to a share as on severance in status of the joint Hindu family on that date: (1952) 2 M.L.J. 515: I.L.R. Passages from books—Use of to discredit medical witness.—Where the opinions of authors were neither shown to have been given in regard to circumstances exactly similar to those in the particular case before Court nor were they put to the medical witness it is not a satisfactory way of disposing of the evidence of the witness to discredit it on the ground that the Doctor was a comparatively young man and his statements did not accord with the opinions expressed in the books. [A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 28, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 589: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 478.

Undoubtedly, a Court is entitled to take judicial notice of matters with which men of ordinary intelligence are acquainted and to act upon his general knowledge of local affairs. The Court can certainly refer to what is stated in the articles in journals and books by authors though living acquainted with such affairs as mentioned by them in their articles and books: A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 172: 1978 Pat.L.J.R. 96: 1978 B.L.J.R. 32: 1978 B.L.J. 1: 1978 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 86 (F.B.). S. 57 would become nugatory if it is held otherwise, but treatise on Medical Jurisprudence cannot be looked into for weighing evidence of a Doctor when passages sought to be relied upon were not put to him in the witness box. [A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 172 (F.B.), Foll.]: (1989-2) 37 B.L.J.R. 18: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 186 (D.B.).

Medical evidence—Text books—Quickening of child in womb—When perceptible to mother—Statements in 'Obstetrics and Gynaecology' by Bugald Baird and 'Manual of Obstetrics' by Eden and Holland, preferred to those in Modi's Medical Jurisprudence: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 364.

Merely because as per Modi's jurisprudence, common house and blow flies are attracted to dead bodies and lay eggs, especially on open wounds and natural orifices, which hatch into maggots or larvae from 8 to 24 hours during hot weather is no ground to discredit the evidence of the medical expert and eye witnesses as to the time of death unless it is shown that the author had given his opinion on exactly similar circumstances; besides there is vast divergence of opinion between various writers on the subject: 1977 Raj.L.W. 241 (D.B.).

Ss. 45 and 46 read in combination show that where an expert opinion is relevant, facts supporting or opposing the opinion, held, are also relevant; however, passages from text books inconsistent with the Doctor's deposition as expert cannot be used to discredit his testimony unless they had been shown to him in cross-examination. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 589, Rel. on]: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 73 (D.B.).

Medical evidence as to age of girl—Doctor's opinion based on probability—Definite assertion of father about her birth-date stands proved beyond doubt: 1964 Raj.L.W. 606: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 483: I.L.R. (1965) 15 Raj. 6: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 90.

A Doctor's opinion on the point of a person's age is entitled to greater weight than that of any other person: 10 O.W.N. 1274: A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 32. Though it is not conclusive: 1983 M.P.W.N. 210. The ossification test is no doubt a surer test for determining age. But the opinion of a Doctor as to the age of the girl arrived at without conducting any ossification tests and based on other factors should not be brushed aside merely because he did not conduct such a test, taking into consideration the conditions obtaining in India where such tests are not conducted: 19 Cut.L.T. 14: A.I.R. 1954 Ori. 33.

Though a Doctor is in a better position to form an opinion about the age of a person than a layman, his statement is no more than an opinion and could not amount to legal proof of the age of the person concerned: I.L.R. (1939) All. 871: 1939 All.L.J. 980: A.I.R. 1939 All. 708. See also A.I.R. 1957 Him. Pra. 42. But see infra. The opinion of a Doctor in regard to the age of a person is a relevant piece of evidence under S. 45 and it is quite a different question as to what weight a particular case ought to be attached to such an opinion: A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 11.

It is notorious and one can take judicial notice that the margin of error in age ascertained by radiological examination is two years on either side: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1297: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1777: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 538; (1984) 3 Crimes 163 (P.&H.).

Where a qualified Doctor certifies the age of an insured predominantly on the age stated by the insured and his appearance, held, that much credence cannot be given to the certificate; even estimation of age based on ossification test, there is ample authority, has an error margin of one to three years: A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 69: 1981 M.P.L.J. 192 (D.B.).

Medical evidence as to age—Penal Code (1860) Ss. 361, 363—Age of minor—Kidnapping a girl—Evidence of age—Radiologist's evidence about fusion of bones is not conclusive—Documentary evidence found unsatisfactory—Oral evidence found contradictory—Age cannot be held to be below eighteen—Accused charged with S. 363 is entitled to an acquittal—[Evidence Act (1872), S. 45—Medical evidence as to age]: 1968 Cur.L.J. 311. See also A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 78.

Medical evidence—Proof of age—Ossification test: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 917: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 102.

Though an ossification test may be a surer basis for age than a medical expert's opinion under S. 45, but that opinion cannot be preferred to the positive evidence of the entry in the Register of Births and Deaths: 1993 Cr.L.J. 549 (Madh. Pra.). However, where such an entry's truthfulness is in doubt, the medical evidence has to be given preference: (1983) 1 Crimes 687 (All.).

Where on the basis of the X-ray plate examination, the Doctor opined that the age of the prosecutrix was 15 years, held, the evidence was acceptable: 1989 Cr.L.J. 2435 (All.).

Medical evidence as to age—Age of minor—Medical evidence—Certificate given on examination of height, weight, breast, teeth, etc.—Evidence is worthless: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 49: A.I.R. 1962 Manipur 5.

Ss. 45, 61, 64, 60—Question regarding age of girl—Report of doctor who examined her—Report not before Court but reference to it made in affidavit of another person—Held, such affidavit was not admissible in proof of contents of the document: I.L.R. (1964) 2 All. 423: (1964) 5 S.C.R. 86: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1625.

On the question as to the age of the girl alleged to be taken from custody of the father, a Magistrate is not right in preferring the opinion of the Radiologist to the positive evidence furnished by the Municipal birth register, the School admission register and the evidence of the girl's father, particularly when medico-legal opinion is that owing to the variations in climatic, dietetic, hereditary and other factors affecting the people of the different States of India it cannot be reasonably expected to formulate a uniform standard for the determination of the age by the extent of ossification and the union of epiphysis in bones: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 516: I.L.R. (1957) Ker. 591: A.I.R. 1958 Ker. 121.

Where age of a person kidnapped is in question, held, opinion of Doctor based on superficial examination and observation and not on any scientific data cannot take place of legal proof. [(1940) 41 Cr.L.J. 142 (All.) and (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1836, Foll.]: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 110 (Ori.).

Charge of—Kidnapping or abducting a female—Age of girl—Proof—Entry in School certificate not reliable with implicit faith as against medical evidence—Test of epiphyees on basis of fusion being scientific test would be acceptable—If there be conflicting evidence as to age, benefit of uncertainty as to age of the girl should be given to accused: A.I.R. 1970 Punj. 450: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1383: (1970) 72 Punj.L.R. 332.

Where in a trial for the offence of kidnapping a girl, the documentary evidence, including the School leaving certificate, showed her to be more than 18 years of age while medical evidence showed her to be more than 17 years but less than 18 years, held, benefit of doubt could be given to the accused as medical evidence is not conclusive proof regarding age of a person: 1994 Cr.L.J. 467 (Ori.).

Where parents of a victim of rape stated that the girl was 13 years of age and there was opinion of Doctor on basis of ossification test that the girl was of 15-16 years, held, it could be safely held that the girl was below 16 years when rape was committed on her: 1984 Raj.L.W. 357.

To convict accused of offence under S. 366, Penal Code there should be conclusive proof that the kidnapped woman is below 18 years—When prosecutrix and accused were arrested on suspicion and produced before Magistrate, prosecutrix stating that her age was 20-21 years—She also expressing before witnesses her unwillingness to return to her parents—Oral and documentary evidence as to her minority not reliable—Opinion of medical expert giving her age as 17 years also not reliable as his opinion was formed on a physical examination of the woman and not after radiological examination—Held, the age of the woman was not shown beyond doubt to be below 18 years and, hence, accused should be acquitted: 1964 Cur.L.J. 204 (Punj.).

A person seeking bail under S. 18 of the Juvenile Justice Act, 1986 must be apparently juvenile and, thus, where the medical evidence gave the age of the accused as 18 years, held, the accused could not be said to be apparently a juvenile, therefore, not entitled to bail. [1982 Cr.L.J. 1777 (S.C.), Disting.]: 1990 Cr.L.J. 2524: 1990 All.Cr.R. 542.

8. Blood group test.—For determining a child's paternity, held, expert opinions regarding blood grouping tests are not totally irrelevant; they are admissible in evidence: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 219 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Proceedings under S. 488, Cr.P.Code—Question of paternity—Evidence of blood groups test. See 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.). 822.

9. Conflict between medical/scientific opinion and oral evidence.—Where there is a conflict between the medical evidence and the oral testimony of witnesses, the evidence can be assessed only in two ways. A Court can either believe the prosecution witnesses unreservedly and explain away the conflict by holding that the witnesses have merely exaggerated the incident or rely upon the medical evidence and approach the oral testimony with caution testing it in the light of the medical evidence. The first method can be applied only in those cases where the oral evidence is above reproach and creates confidence and there is no appreciable reason for the false implication of any accused. Where the evidence is not of that character and the medical evidence is not open to any doubt or suspicion, the only safe and judicial method of assessing evidence is the second method: A.I.R. 1955 All. 189: 1955 Cr.L.J. 473.

Where the expert evidence, including medical evidence, is at variance with ocular evidence, held, the conflict can be resolved after proper scrutiny; if after close and careful analysis, the oral evidence is found to be convincing, it has to be preferred; exaggerated picture of the occurrence and minor discrepancies, if any, have to be ignored; otherwise, the safest course is to rely on medical evidence. The Court, however, has to keep in mind that expert evidence is corroborative; one of the methods of appraisal of oral evidence is to test it on touchstone of medical evidence to find out whether the injuries could have been caused in the manner alleged by the prosecution; beyond that, it does not carry much weight: (1988) 36 B.L.J.R. 337 (D.B.); 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 186 (Pat.). See also 1983 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 66 (Gau.); (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 62; (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 66.

The evidence of a medical expert is merely an opinion lending corroboration to the direct evidence; a glaring inconsistency between direct evidence and the medical evidence would undoubtedly be a manifest defect in the prosecution case. Where two medical expert witnesses both equally competent, contradict each other, the opinion of that expert should be accepted which supports the direct evidence: 1992 Cr.L.J. 474 (Mad.) (D.B.).

True, medical evidence, primarily being evidence of opinion and not of fact, is hardly conclusive or decisive; and equally true, when medical evidence is in conflict with the eye-witnesses' statements, it discredits the eye-witnesses, and all the more where eye-witnesses cannot be unreservedly believed; it is extremely unsafe to act upon the testimony of interested eye-witnesses if contradicted by the medical evidence though the case may be different where the eye-witnesses are totally disinterested and their evidence is cogent and convincing: 1982 Cr.L.J. 1087: 1982 Kash.L.J. 194. See also 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 76 (Ker.); A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 2154: (1988) 3 Crimes 195: (1988) 4 S.C.C. 302: 1989 Cr.L.J. 288 (Medical opinion pointing to alternative possibilities).

It is trite that where the eye-witnesses account is found credible and trustworthy, medical opinion pointing to alternative possibilities is not accepted as conclusive. If the evidence of the witness is, however, totally inconsistent with the medical evidence, this is a vital defect and unless reasonably explained, is sufficient to discredit the evidence of the witness: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2812 (Ori.) (D.B.).

The positive evidence in any case is that of the eye-witnesses who had seen and narrated the entire occurrence. The evidence of a medical man or an expert is merely an opinion which lends corroboration to the direct evidence in the case. Where there is a glaring inconsistency between direct evidence and the medical evidence in respect of the entire prosecution story, that is undoubtedly a manifest defect in the prosecution case: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 2274: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1941: (1977) 4 S.C.C. 452: 1977 U.J. (S.C.) 753.

It is trite that if the eye-witnesses' account is found credible and trustworthy, medical opinion to the contrary is not conclusive. Witnesses, as Bantham said, are the eyes and ears of justice; their account requires careful independent evaluation as to its credibility; it should not be adversely prejudged on the sole touchstone of the medical evidence; the Court must judge its inherent consistency and probability, that is, consistency with the other witnesses' account and undisputed facts; their 'credit' and performance in the witness-box, and their power of observation, etc. It is then that the probative value of such evidence becomes eligible to be weighed in the scales for cumulative evaluation: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 2154: 1989 Cr.L.J. 288: (1988) 3 Crimes 195: (1988) 4 S.C.C. 302.

True, in case of conflict between the medical evidence and ocular statements, the ocular statements are to be preferred but where the medical evidence completely improbabilised the ocular statement, it is the medical evidence which will take precedence; thus, where medical evidence showed only one injury on the deceased responsible for the death, held, the oral evidence that both the accused had dealt blows on the deceased's head could not inspire confidence: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 39 (Ori.) (D.B.).

Where oral and medical evidence is in conflict, the oral evidence cannot be brushed aside. Doctors are not witnesses of truth; their evidence is to be appreciated like any other evidence; and it is only a corroborative evidence. Thus, where the victim's evidence was reliable and trustworthy about the weapons used, held, the Doctor's opinion about the existence of two alternative possibilities could not override the victim's evidence: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 90: (1990-2) 38 B.L.J.R. (N.O.C.) 28.

Conflict between medical evidence and oral evidence—Oral evidence neither above reproach nor creating confidence but medical evidence not open to suspicion—Only safe method of assessing evidence is to rely upon medical evidence and to test veracity or oral evidence in light of it: (1968) 34 Cut.L.T. 187.

Where medical evidence was totally inconsistent with the belying eye-witnesses' evidence, held, accused was entitled to acquittal: 1985 Cr.L.J. 1450: I.L.R. (1985) Him. Pra. 30. See also (1979) 1 M.P.W.N. 129.

Where there is a conflict between ocular evidence and medical or scientific opinion, held, it is always possible to rely on ocular evidence rather than on medical opinion; but, scientific test being exact and unambiguous, in a trap case, held, it is the result of the anthracene powder test, which should prevail over ocular evidence; the presence or absence of the powder on and inside the pocket and on the hands of the accused conclusively established the guilt or innocence of the accused: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 238.

Where direct evidence of lay witnesses tallies with medical evidence, especially in the light of alternate possibilities elicited during his cross-examination, held, some inconsistency about the distance from which gun shots were fired between their respective versions would be of no significance. [A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2119, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 191: 1978 Cr.L.J. 141: (1978) 1 S.C.C. 178.

Where dying declaration was contrary to medical evidence, held, no reliance was to be placed on such declaration: (1984) 1 Crimes 661 (P.&H.). See also S. 32, Note 24, supra.

Where a Doctor, not a ballistic expert, stated that the fire-arm was shot at when the victim was only 1 or 2 feet away but the eye-witnesses, otherwise corroborated by medical and other oral evidence stated the distance to be 8 or 10 feet, held, the distance testified to by the Doctor could not be accepted in preference to those of the eye-witnesses: 1991 All.Cr.C. 639: 1991 Cr.L.J. 3076 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2119: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1463.

Where the evidence of ballistic expert as well as that of the Medical jurist categorically established that the injuries attributed to the accused were fired from the gun and not from the rifle, held, the fact that the sole eye-witness made contradictory statements as to whether those injuries were caused by a gun or by a rifle, was not material as the said witness neither had expertised knowledge nor had ever used any rifle or gun: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1466 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Where there was evidence of autopsy surgeon that deceased received single lathi blow, but witnesses had stated that two persons assaulted the deceased, held, there being conflict between expert witness and direct evidence, conviction on such evidence was unsustainable: 1984 Cr.L.J. 360 (Cal.).

Where the Doctor opined that there were three injuries but the eye-witnesses testified that only two blows were given, held, in the absence of any data, the Doctor's statement is simply his opinion and cannot prevail over the evidence of eye-witnesses: 1976 Raj.L.W. 643 (D.B.).

Where the complainant's case was that he was assaulted by the accused only with the sharp edge of the axe when only two out of his five injuries were incised wounds and the other three, as per medical evidence, were caused by hard and blunt objects, held, the Court could not safely convict the accused on the complainant's sole testimony contradicted by medical evidence and uncorroborated by other reliable evidence: 1979 Bom.C.R. 482.

Where the eye-witnesses' version that the deceased sustained injuries due to two heavy lathi blows on his head and as a result he bled profusely, was contradicted by the medical evidence as no external injuries were found on the head of the deceased, held, in view of the peculiar facts of this case, there was no other way than to prefer the medical evidence and reject the ocular version: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1848: (1990) 1 Cut.L.T. 1 (D.B.).

Where, the eye-witnesses had deposed that as many as 7-8 assailants surrounded the deceased and hit him with lathis and caused injuries by knives but the medical evidence did not show even a single contusion having been sustained by the deceased except penetrating wounds caused by knives, held, as the medical evidence, i.e., absence of contusions on the body of the deceased, completely ruled out the version given by the eye-witnesses, no reliance could be placed on the evidence of eye-witnesses: 1990 Cr.L.J. 846: 1989 All.L.J. 463: 1989 All.Cr.C. 264 (D.B.).

Where the witnesses had stated that the accused gave a pharsa blow without being asked as to whether it was given from blunt or sharp side, held, the opinion of the Doctor that the injury was caused by a blunt object, could not be said to be contradictory of the evidence of witnesses as pharsa can be used from both the sides: 1994 Cr.L.J. 494: 1994 M.P.L.J. 57 (D.B.); 1990 M.P.L.J. 228: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 125 (D.B.).

Where the accused hacking the deceased with daos chased away the three eye-witnesses whom, when they returned to the scene, the injured gave names of the accused and the injured died within an hour or so; the F.I.R. lodged without undue delay also contained the accused's names; and the Doctor opined from the nature of injuries that the deceased might not have been able to talk immediately after the occurrence, held, but since the deceased as per the post-mortem report was a 'stout built male' and only one out of the ten injuries was fatal, the Doctor's evidence could not be accepted as conclusive; the dying declaration acted upon: 1991 Cr.L.J. 199 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where prosecutrix version about the offence of rape was in conflict with the medical evidence. See (1984) 3 Crimes 392 (P.&H.).

10. Report of Chemical examiner/Forensic science laboratory.—In almost all criminal cases, the blood-stained earth found from the place of occurrence is invariably sent to the Chemical Examiner and his report alongwith the earth is produced in the Court; where this procedure was departed from for reasons best known to the prosecution, an inference may be drawn that the defence version may be true: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2263: 1976 Cr.L.J. 1736: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 394.

Though a Senior Scientific Assistant (Chemistry), Central Forensic Science Laboratory does not fall in categories of the officers enumerated in S. 293 of the Cr.P.Code yet he is an expert in science being Senior Scientist in Chemistry and thus, his opinion would be relevant piece of evidence in view of S. 45 of the Evidence Act: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1623 (Del.) (D.B.).

Expert evidence—Use of report of Chemical Examiner—Admissibility in evidence. See 1982 Cr.L.J. 2138: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 566.

Where in a prosecution for rape, the report of the Chemical Examiner contra-indicated the story of any sexual-intercourse having taken place with the prosecutrix, held, the unexhibited report of the Chemical Examiner did not, in fact, require to be formally proved by any witness; it was a document which proved itself under S. 293, Cr.P.Code and the defence could be legitimately allowed to make use of it: 1993 Cr.L.J. 120 (Madh. Pra.). But where examination of the prosecutrix, a married woman was done after more than three days of the occurrence, held, Chemical Analyser's report was of little value: 1982 M.P.W.N. 108.

Report of Chemical Examiner—Evidentiary value—Offence under Prohibition Act: 1967 Ker.L.T. 165.

Where seized sample was kept by the Police Officer in his custody for about three days and he did not note it down anywhere in the records that they were with him and thereafter they were sent to Chemical Analyser, held, the certificate of the Chemical Analyser that the seized sample contained heroin could be discarded as there was possibility of tampering with the sample: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1020 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where although the report of the Chemical Examiner and the Serologist were exhibited, in the record there was no forwarding letter of the Officer who sent these articles to the Chemical Examiner, held, unless the forwarding letter was on record, it was not possible to connect the accused with the articles which were examined by the Chemical Examiner and the Serologist: (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 1211 (D.B.).

Whether a paper containing incriminating material against the accused has been torn out from another copy is an information connected with the forensic science; an expert can examine and say whether the paper came from a particular copy or not; no doubt, the paper's colour, thickness, finish or surface, water mark, wove or laid style, cutting, size, ruling, fluorescence have to be looked into; but it is not necessary that before the identity of the two papers is established, all the aforesaid things must be similar; in a given case only some of the things may enable the expert to give opinion about the identity of the two papers: 1981 Cr.L.J. 1244: 1981 Raj.L.W. 370 (D.B.).

Where the report of the forensic science laboratory showed that the two items recovered from the accused's house contained human blood, held, the expert report and the items belonging to the accused were sufficient to connect the accused with the crime: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2077 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

11. Nautical assessors.—The function of nautical assessors is to advise the Court upon nautical manners and their advice is expert evidence, admissible in Admiralty Courts, on all issues of fact about seamanship. The decision of the case, however, rests entirely with the Court and even in purely nautical matters the Court is not bound to follow the advice of assessors, but on questions of nautical science and skill great attention must obviously be paid to the opinion of the assessors since they are the only source of information on these points and some reason should be given for disregarding them. The assessors in an appeal Court are not substituted for those previously consulted; they are additional to them; and if one adviser or two advisers are to be preferred, it is because in the judgment of the Court the advice given is such as, in itself, is more acceptable. There can be no question of any appeal from one set of assessors to another: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 597.

12. Handwriting.—The science of handwriting, unlike the science of finger-prints, is not an exact science; even experts tend to commit errors in their opinions on the genuineness of the signatures and handwriting; at times, even in genuine writings the pen hesitates or stops, specially when the writer is under great physical or mental strain; it may sometimes be difficult for an expert to examine even the genuineness of different writings, each with its own individuality, but nevertheless by the same author. It requires intelligent comparison to differentiate a genuine signature from the forged; great care and caution should be exercised, especially when the Court is not assisted by evidence of an expert; and even while calling experts, it is now admitted by all authorities, if a competent one is not available, it is better not to adduce any expert evidence at all: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 102 (D.B.).

Comparison of finger-prints and thumb-impressions are highly specialised subjects and high degree of efficiency and qualification is required in giving an opinion about the identity of signatures and thumb-impressions. Only a well trained expert is competent to give his opinion in such matters. In case the trial Court was in doubt about the identity of signatures, the legal and proper course for it is to requisition the services of a handwriting expert suo motu at Government expense or call upon the parties to have the identity of signatures established: 1981 All.W.C. 33 (Rev.).

No doubt, there is danger inherent in evidence relating to identity of an accused person from similarities in writings only, but it cannot be said that the evidence as to the identity of an accused person from close resemblance between his admitted handwriting and the disputed handwriting, is even less reliable than evidence as to the identity based upon personal impressions of previously known individuals alleged to have been seen in all kinds of lights in dacoity cases, which Courts in this country do accept and act upon. Of course, there is need for care and caution in judging and utilising the testimony of handwriting experts.

There is no doubt, that the worth of an opinion by an expert can be tested by the reasons given in support of that opinion and not by the bare conclusions of the expert. Nevertheless, the opinion can be stated by the expert both by means of a report and by means of the statement in the witness-box which must be there in addition. Moreover, as the unsoundness of the experts' opinion about some writing can be demonstrated by means of his cross-examination, the brevity of his reports is not sufficient to destroy the value of his evidence.

It is not the apparent qualifications of a handwriting expert which ought to determine the value of the evidence given by him, but the soundness of the reasons advanced by him in support of the particular opinion expressed by him. These reasons are always open to scrutiny by a Court of law, and their soundness can be tested by examining the disputed and the admitted writings in the light of the reasons given. The object of expert evidence is to assist the Court in forming its own opinions. Even if an expert's opinion was not reliable in any particular case, a Court is not absolved from the duty of forming its own opinion about the disputed handwriting. There are certain well-known criteria, such as the examination and comparison of individual characteristics and idiosyncrasies which have to be employed by experts as well as by Courts in arriving at their conclusion.

The Court is bound to form its own opinions with the aid of all the permissible methods, and to arrive at a conclusion where a conclusion can safely be arrived at. Such a conclusion can safely be arrived at where the conclusions of a Court, after comparing the admitted and disputed writings coincide with the opinions of the expert and are further corroborated by other pieces of evidence.

If the opinion of the handwriting expert is found by a Court to be honest and reliable after subjecting it to the recognised test of soundness, it can even be considered better evidence than the evidence of indifferent witnesses whose motives are often mixed and whose powers of observation and recollection are very faulty. The observations of the expert are far more careful and guided by scientific knowledge and skill which, where they exist, must be duly appreciated.

An expert who gives dishonest opinions is quite certain to be exposed by ruthless cross-examination and to be soon found out by astute Courts which do not and should not readily accept expert opinions without rigorously testing what an expert has to say. One of the ways in which the honesty of an expert can be tested is to consider the number of instances in which he has given opinions contrary to the opinions which those who consult may be presumed to desire: 1967 Cr.L.J. 134: A.I.R. 1964 All. 64.

An expert witness is not an accomplice; when it is said on occasions on very high authority that conviction based solely on handwriting expert's opinion is hazardous, it does not mean that experts in general are not reliable; it only indicates that all human judgment being fallible, an expert may go wrong due to some defect of observation or error of premises or honest mistake of conclusion; the more developed and perfect a science, the lessor chance of an incorrect opinion and the vice versa. The science of identification of finger-prints has attained near perfection but not the science of identification of handwriting; but that does not justify viewing the handwriting expert's opinion with initial suspicion; it has to be tested on the touchstone of his reasoning; his duty is to furnish necessary scientific criteria for the Judge to formulate his own independent judgment: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531: 1980 Cr.L.J. 396: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 704: (1980) 2 S.C.R. 249.

A handwriting expert is a competent witness and his opinion evidence is recognised as relevant; his evidence is not equated to the evidence of an accomplice. It is not fair to approach his opinion evidence with suspicion; the Court should weigh the reasons to assess whether they are sound. But the Court cannot afford to overlook the fact that the science of identification of handwriting is imperfect as compared to the science of identification of finger-prints; Courts are, therefore, wary in placing implicit reliance on such opinion evidence and have looked for corroboration though there is no such rule of prudence to be applied regardless of the circumstances and quality of the expert evidence. There is no hard and fast rule in this behalf but the Court has to decide in each case on its own merits as to what weight should be attached to the expert's opinion. Thus, where, the opinion evidence of handwriting expert was examined by the trial Court in great detail and it came to the conclusion that it was hazardous to rely on his evidence as he had betrayed bias against the accused and in favour of the prosecution as he also belonged to the Police Department and there were doubts as to the genuineness of the specimen writings; after reviewing the matter, the Supreme Court considering that the quality of evidence of the expert was not so high as to commend acceptance, held, it could not be accepted without corroboration: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 2100: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3454: (1992) 3 S.C.C. 700: (1992) 3 Crimes 5. See also A.I.R. 1983 All. 54.

The evidence of a handwriting expert, unlike that of a finger-print expert, is generally of a frail character and its fallibilities have been quite often noticed. The Courts should, therefore, be wary to give too much weight to the evidence of handwriting expert: A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 1346: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1143: (1973) 4 S.C.C. 46.

Though the opinion of a handwriting expert given in evidence is no less fallible than any other expert opinion adduced in evidence with the result that such evidence has to be received with great caution, but this opinion evidence, which is relevant, may be worthy of acceptance if there is internal or external evidence relating to the document in question supporting the view expressed by the expert. If after comparison of the disputed and the admitted writings by the Court itself, when the Presiding Officer is familiar with that language, it is considered safe to accept the opinion of the expert than the conclusion so arrived at cannot be assailed on the mere ground that comparison of handwriting is generally considered as hazardous and inconclusive and that the opinion of the handwriting expert has to be received with considerable caution: A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 2200: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1187: (1973) 2 S.C.C. 86.

The Act, as in English Law, recognises two direct methods of proving a questioned handwriting: (1) by admission of its writer, or (2) by evidence of the person who saw it written. Besides, these best methods of proof, there are three other modes of proof by opinion: (1) by evidence of a handwriting expert, or (2) by evidence of a witness acquainted with the handwriting of the writer, and (3) by the opinion of the Court by comparison of the admitted and questioned documents. These three cognate modes of proof involve the method of comparison. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.) (D.B.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 39.

The report of a handwriting expert is admissible in evidence under O. 26, R. 10 of the C.P.Code; being a mere piece of evidence, it is not conclusive; it is liable to the Court's scrutiny before it can be relied upon: A.I.R. 1987 Ori. 7: (1986) 62 Cut.L.T. 613: (1986) 2 Ori.L.R. 137 (D.B.).

Opinion of a handwriting expert cannot be said to be involving any scientific investigation and, therefore, the words 'scientific investigation' used in O. 26, R. 10-A of the C.P.Code, would not, in the right sense of the expression, apply to opinion evidence made relevant under S. 45, Evidence Act: (1986) 2 An.L.T. 461.

The opinion of handwriting expert is not conclusive evidence. It is, in the nature of opinion evidence. The evidence of the handwriting expert has to be taken with some amount of caution for normally they appear to serve the party at whose instance they have been examined. Therefore, a conclusion cannot be based entirely on the evidence of a handwriting expert. There must be independent evidence or there must be cogent circumstantial evidence: A.I.R. 1978 All. 515; A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 55: 1978 Cal.H.N. 172; 1980 Raj.L.W. 96: 1980 W.L.N. 83 (D.B.).

The opinion of a handwriting expert cannot in law be accepted as conclusive proof. At best it can only be taken as an inconclusive aid in conjunction with other evidence: A.I.R. 1949 Kutch 3: 50 Cr.L.J. 964.

Evidence given by experts of handwriting can never be conclusive, because it is, after all, opinion evidence: (1963) 3 S.C.R. 722: 1963 B.L.J.R. 226: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1728.

It is not open to the Court to accept blindly the statement of the handwriting expert. The correct principle of law is that the testimony of the handwriting expert should be taken as a guide and with its assistance the Court should apply its own observation to the disputed writing and reach the conclusion whether the signature which is denied, is or is not the signing of the person: I.L.R. (1952) Nag. 376: 1952 Nag.L.J. 545: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 289; A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 328: 1959 Cr.L.J. 893.

The law is settled that opinion evidence of handwriting expert is not conclusive; the Court is competent to compare the disputed and admitted writings, even without examining an expert, to satisfy itself from its own observations for arriving at its own conclusions; but it is always better as a matter of prudence and caution, to have expert opinion to facilitate its scrutiny by the Court's eye. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1325; A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 589; A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 28; A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1728, Foll.]. The expert's opinion is to some extent helpful, where the findings against the accused were not solely based on the expert's evidence: 1991 Cr.L.J. 1563 (Mad.). See also 1973 Mah.L.J. 855: I.L.R. (1974) Bom. 337 (D.B.).

An opinion of an handwriting expert is not to be given preference simply because he is better qualified than the other expert. In such cases the opinion has to be valued on the basis of the reasons given by the experts than on their qualifications: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 127.

It is an accepted principle of law that the science of handwriting is not accurate; there is a likelihood of errors creeping in the handwriting expert's evidence; his evidence should, therefore, be received with caution; its evidentiary value is to be determined by the trial Judge: (1993) 3 An.L.T. 446.

It is open to the Court to hold that the evidence of the handwriting expert is not reliable or does not carry conviction but the Court cannot misread his statement: 1959 M.P.L.J. 869. A comparison of handwriting is to be used with great care and caution and especially in a criminal case when a large quantity of apparently different handwriting is under comparison: I.L.R. 39 Cal. 606: (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 812; A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 575 (thumb-impression); I.L.R. 29 Cal. 1; A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 413. See also I.L.R. 45 Cal. 60: (1916-17) 21 Cal.W.N. 1076: 42 I.C. 484.

The opinion of handwriting expert is not conclusive. Still it cannot be brushed aside as useless. The opinion of an expert is entitled to some consideration and weight when it is corroborated by other evidence: 1956 Cr.L.J. 253: I.L.R. (1955) Mys. 585: A.I.R. 1956 Mys. 9.

It may be that normally it is not safe to treat expert evidence as to handwriting as sufficient basis for conviction. It may be, however, relied upon alongwith other various items of external and internal evidence relating to the documents in question: 1957 Cr.L.J. 559: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 381; A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 328.

The comparison of the signature is nothing but opinion evidence and the dispute as to the genuineness of the document could not have been decided solely on the opinion evidence: A.I.R. 1979 Cal. 256: (1977-78) 82 Cal.W.N. 1119.

Though expert evidence to prove or disprove the genuineness of a handwriting or signature is relevant under S. 45, other evidence supporting or detracting from expert evidence is also relevant under S. 46. Expert evidence, like other opinion evidence under S. 47, is based on opinion; the science of identifying handwritings is imperfect, not exact and an opinion thereunder may not be conclusive; it may not be safe for the Court to base its finding solely on opinion evidence though it is only a rule of caution; the Court may act upon it if the opinion evidence finds support from internal or external evidence, direct or circumstantial. But the Court has to satisfy itself in each case: 1983 Ker.L.T. 281 (D.B.).

Only a handwriting expert or some other person having the opportunity of seeing and being familiar with the writing can be said to be competent to give evidence about its authenticity: (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 438: (1990-2) 31 Guj.L.R. 1296.

It is well settled that evidence of handwriting experts under S. 45 is not conclusive and cannot be used as substantive evidence; the Court must always look for corroboration from other evidence; the Court has to take into account various factors that surround the transaction in dispute; it should judge the case on the basis of both external and internal evidence; evidence of the expert per se is not binding on the Court: (1971) 2 Mys.L.J. 407 (D.B.).

Handwriting expert—Evidence is not conclusive—Overwhelming evidence in proof of handwriting—Opinion of expert to the contrary held was of no value: I.L.R. (1954) 1 All. 76: A.I.R. 1953 All. 318.

Ss. 45, 47 and 73 provide for three methods of arriving at decision whether the disputed writings or signatures are of the same person: (1) comparison of disputed and admitted writings on the opinion of expert witness or (2) of the persons acquainted with the handwriting or (3) comparison by the Court itself: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 117: 1970 Cr.L.J. 254.

The writing may be proved to be in the handwriting of a particular individual by the evidence of a person familiar with the handwriting of that individual or by the testimony of an expert competent to the comparison of handwritings on a scientific basis. A third method is comparison by the Court with the writing made in the presence of the Court or admitted or proved to by the writing of the person. Both under Ss. 45 and 47 the evidence is an opinion, in the former by a scientific comparison and in the latter on the basis of familiarity resulting from frequent observations and experience. In either case the Court must satisfy itself by such means as are open that the opinion may be acted upon. Where an expert's opinion is given, the Court must see for itself and with the assistance of the expert come to its own conclusion whether it can safely be held that the two writings are by the same person. This is not to say that the Court must play the role of an expert but to say that the Court may accept the fact proved only when it has satisfied itself on its observation that it is safe to accept the opinion whether of the expert or other witness: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326: (1967) 2 S.C.A. 135: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 925.

One such means open to the Court is to apply its own observation to the admitted or proved writings and to compare them with the disputed one, not to become an handwriting expert but to verify the premises of the expert in the one case and to appraise the value of the opinion in the other case. This comparison depends on an analysis of the characteristics in the admitted or proved writings and the findings of the same characteristics in large measure in the disputed writing. In this way the opinion of the deponent whether expert or other is subject to scrutiny and although relevant to start with becomes probative: 12 Law. Rep. 92 (Mys.).

When there is a dispute over signatures or writings, held, it is for the Court to determine whether the decision may be made with or without expert assistance: 1976 Rev.L.R. 648 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

To make the evidence of a handwriting expert admissible, it is not necessary that the handwriting should be actually compared in Court. It is enough if the documents admittedly in the accused's handwriting are shown to him in open Court and he expresses his opinions thereon: 16 Cr.L.J. 703: 30 I.C. 751 (M.); (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 812: I.L.R. 39 Cal. 606. See also 2 All.L.J. 444; I.L.R. 39 Cal. 245; 2 Weir 759. (Sub-Registrar not expert: 2 Weir 760).

No doubt, a comparison of the signatures without the help of an expert may not afford a conclusive test in the case of expert forgers. But, where the disputed signature appears to belong to a class different from the group of admitted signatures, it is certainly one of those cases where expert evidence would be of great use: I.L.R. (1957) Andh. Pra. 399.

In the case of a disputed handwriting or signature a Court is not incompetent to use its own eyes for the purpose of deciding whether certain handwritings or signatures placed before it are similar or not. A Court should not be deprived of the function for which it exists, namely, of deciding disputed facts placed before it. The opinion of experts is only a piece of evidence, but the opinion of the judge is the decision in the case. A judge has to be satisfied that he is entitled to take such assistance upon evidence as is available in the circumstances of the case: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 328. Where an acknowledgment by judgment-debtors saving limitation is attacked as a forgery, the fact that the handwriting expert himself does not claim infallibility for his opinion that the admitted signature is different from the questioned one is immaterial. That consideration would be of great importance in a prosecution for forgery, in which the onus would be on the prosecution to satisfy the Court positively that the handwriting is not the handwriting of the person concerned. In the civil suit, however, it is the contrary proposition which has to be proved, namely, that the handwriting is the handwriting of the judgment-debtors and the onus is on the decree-holders. Where the evidence on behalf of the decree-holders is not sufficient to prove that the handwriting expert's opinion is incorrect, the decree-holder must fail as he has not discharged the burden on him: 225 I.C. 528: A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 139.

Although it is permissible for a Court to compare the handwriting, it is generally recognised to be a hazardous test and should not be resorted to except in clearest cases without the aid of experts: A.I.R. 1955 Madh. Bh. 103 (F.B.); 1983 All.W.C. 398: 1983 All.L.R. 467.

There is no legal bar to the Judge using his own eyes to compare the disputed writing with the admitted writing, even without the aid of the evidence of any handwriting expert: 1983 B.L.J.R. 649: 1983 Pat.L.J.R. 541.

The Supreme Court in an appeal also is entitled to call for the writings for making a comparison thereof: (1967) 2 S.C.A. 135: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 925: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326; A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 215: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 393 (D.B.).

Ss. 45, 73—Genuineness of document in question—Court itself can compare unaided by expert evidence, handwritings in disputed document and admitted document and hold disputed document to be genuine—Comparison should, however, be before and without assistance of lawyers appearing in the cases: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 332.

Comparison of signatures by Court itself—Permissibility—Court not to base its conclusion solely on such comparison: A.I.R. 1957 All. 119. A comparison of handwriting is at all times, as a mode of proof, hazardous and inconclusive and especially when it is made by one not conversant with the subject and without such guidance as might be derived from the arguments of Counsel and the evidence of experts. A comparison of writings has consequently been deemed a mode of ascertaining the truth which ought to be used with very great caution: I.L.R. 49 Cal. 235: (1921-22) 26 Cal.W.N. 113: 65 I.C. 774: A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 12.

Comparison of disputed signature with the admitted signature without the aid of expert evidence is hazardous: 1963 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 253.

Before accepting the evidence of an expert or other witness familiar with the handwriting and signature of a person, held, the Court has to use its own observation in comparing admitted or proved and disputed writings not as a handwriting expert but to verify the expert's premises in one case and appraise the value of opinion evidence in the other case. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326; A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 485; A.I.R. 1946 All. 67 and A.I.R. 1947 All. 411, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1971 Assam 168: 1971 Assam L.R. 267.

Even where there is opinion of handwriting expert, the Court must itself compare the two handwritings and with the assistance of the expert must come to its own conclusion whether the two handwritings are of same person. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326, Applied]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 77 (All.).

Comparison of handwritings by an handwriting expert, unlike the comparison of finger-prints, held, is at best only a tentative method of judging their authorship; the safer course is to judge the comparison in the light of surrounding circumstances: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 113 (Gau.).

When the experts differ, ultimately the Court has to form its own opinion on the basis of the entire evidence brought on record. The Court also would be competent to compare the signatures and the writings under S. 73: (1983) 2 Karn.L.J. 135.

There may be cases where both sides call experts and the voices of science are heard. There may be cases where neither side calls an expert, being ill able to afford him. In all such cases, it becomes the plain duty of the Court to compare the writings and come to its own conclusion where there are expert opinions, they will aid the Court. Where there is none, the Court will have to seek guidance from some authoritative textbook and the Court's own experience and knowledge. But discharge it must, its plain duty, with or without expert, with or without other evidence: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531: 1980 Cr.L.J. 396: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 704: (1980) 2 S.C.R. 249.

It cannot be laid down as a general rule that on the defendant choosing to deny his signatures, the plaintiff must examine a handwriting expert; nor is the Court bound to accept the evidence of a handwriting expert as true; the Court has to apply its own mind to the evidence of expert and either to believe or disbelieve it. [A.I.R. 1957 All. 119, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 12: 1973 Raj.L.W. 182: 1972 W.L.N. 658.

Where an expert witness was not definite in his opinion about the authorship of the disputed signatures and the request made for obtaining the opinion of another expert possessing 'greater and better authority' was declined, held, it is not necessary for the Court to wait until a definite opinion is received from one expert or other; the Court could decide about the authenticity of the signature on the basis of oral evidence in accordance with law empowering the Judge to compare the two signatures himself. Justice is older than experts; it does not rely solely upon expert opinion; even if experts are unable to give a definite opinion, justice must come to its own conclusion to give a definite finding: A.I.R. 1984 Cal. 316.

Where specimen signatures sent to Government expert who reported that the signatures on the original document do not admit of comparison with specimen signatures, held, it will be needless and futile exercise to keep on sending that signature to one expert and another: 1983 All.W.C. 1002: 1983 All.Cr.C. 533.

Both under O. 26 of the C.P.Code or under S. 45 of the Evidence Act, a second reference to a handwriting expert without setting aside the first report is not prohibited; it lies in the Court's discretion to be used with due circumspection to allow the examination of the second expert if circumstances so justify: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 49: 1981 Ker.L.T. 360: I.L.R. (1981) 2 Ker. 32; (1990-2) 106 Mad.L.W. 420.

Where a handwriting expert, appointed at the instance of a party, gave his report which was adverse to the party and during arguments the party applied for appointment of a second expert, held, the request could not be granted straightaway; if it is found on objections already filed by the party that the first expert's opinion is erroneous, it would be open to the party to examine another expert as its witness: (1990-2) 106 Mad.L.W. 420.

It is not right to say that when there is difference between the two handwriting experts, the Court ought to have sent the matter to some other independent handwriting expert having no concern with either party, instead of himself acting as an expert and coming to a conclusion. Where an expert's opinion is given, the Court must come to its own conclusion, whether it can safely be held that the two writings are by the same person. This is not to say that trial Court must play the role of an expert but to say that the Court may accept the fact proved only when it has satisfied itself on its observation that it is safe to accept the opinion whether of the expert or other witness: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 215: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 393 (D.B.).

It would be going too far to say that an expert who has generally a certain amount of unconscious bias in favour of the party examining him is more reliable than the witnesses of fact. The expert evidence moreover is open to considerable danger when it relates to the state of a writing or regarding bare initials: A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 101.

Though experts generally depose in favour of the party producing them but where their opinions themselves differ on disputed signatures, held, evidence of one expert may not be discarded if the Court after comparing the disputed and the genuine signatures also comes to the same conclusion; his opinion thereby stands accepted with re-inforced reasoning; the Court, however, cannot be said in such a case to be acting as an expert. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1991 P.&H. 254: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 112: (1991) 2 Rev.L.R. 254.

Where accused persons were alleged to have conspired in order to eliminate deceased and in its support prosecution relied upon certain letters allegedly written by accused and as opined by Government examiner they were in accused's handwriting whereas expert opinion cited on behalf of the accused regarding impugned documents was contrary to that of Government examiner, held, there is natural tendency on the part of the expert to support the view of the person who had called him. As evidence of Government examiner was more reasonable, dependable and convincing, it could be relied upon: 1995 Cr.L.J. 810 (Him. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where a handwriting expert was privately consulted by a party before he was produced in Court and he was produced as his opinion was favourable to that party, much importance cannot be attached to his evidence: 39 P.L.R. (J.&K.) 54; A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 328.

When the defendant in a civil suit applies to the Court for obtaining the opinion of a named handwriting expert to prove the genuineness of certain disputed documents to support his case, the Court cannot compel him to choose or accept a handwriting expert of the choice of the plaintiff for this purpose. The handwriting expert is after all a witness of a particular party that party cannot be compelled to choose its witnesses according to the dictate of the opposite party: (1968) 2 M.L.J. 48: I.L.R. (1968) 1 Mad. 805.

Where each of the parties had called an expert of questioned documents who operating on private basis appear as witnesses with understanding to support their respective paymasters and would not, but for such understanding, be led into witness-box, and their experts gave conflicting opinion, held, no great reliance could be placed on their evidence; all the attending circumstances have to be kept in mind before the testimony of either of them is accepted: A.I.R. 1974 P.&H. 302.

Evidence of handwriting expert—Appreciation of—No direct proof—Expert's opinion is of no use in the absence of direct evidence: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 812 (Cal.).

Mere assertion, without mentioning the data or basis is not evidence, even if it comes from an expert; expert opinion is admissible only when accompanied by the data and basis and the reasoning tending to that inference: A.I.R. 1953 Vindh. Pra. 21.

Necessity for giving reasons in support of handwriting expert's report. See 1992 Cr.L.R. 435 (Raj.).

Where the reasons in support of the opinion of the handwriting expert were introduced for the first time in Court at the stage of evidence but it was not the case of the accused that they were not afforded opportunity for cross-examination in that regard, held, no prejudice could be said to have been caused to them; if they were prejudiced in any manner due to non-supply of the reasons, they could have asked for respite from the Court to more effectively prepare themselves for the purpose of cross-examination: 1992 Cr.L.J. 243 (Ori.).

Where the statement of a person does not show that he is an 'expert' in the art of handwriting, his evidence can be ruled out as being inadmissible: (1929) 31 Punj.L.R. 109: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 336.

Where the evidence does not, in any special manner, refer to the expert knowledge with regard to the handwriting, the sworn testimony of the other witnesses should be given preference to the opinion of the expert when those witnesses swear on oath that the signatures were written in their presence by the signatories: I.L.R. (1953) Hyd. 140: A.I.R. 1953 Hyd. 181.

Where the expert who had examined the documents supported his opinion with detailed reasons and the defence had not been able to establish that he lacked either the qualifications or the skill that are expected of such an expert, held, his evidence could certainly be relied on: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 84 (D.B.).

The opinion of a well trained educated person formally trained in the science of handwriting at the Institute of Forensic Science and Technology at Calcutta for 2 years and practically trained in the United Kingdom, being a Fellow Member of the Royal Microscopical Society of London supported by good reasons, held, should be preferred to that of another expert, a mere Matriculate, having received no training at any recognised institution and offering unconvincing reasons in support of his opinion: (1986) 34 B.L.J.R. 725.

The proof of the signature of a person to a document is not necessarily a proof of its contents; normally, the contents of a document should be proved by calling the person who is the author of the document or by the presence of other internal circumstantial evidence. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 306 (Del.).

It is well-known that handwriting experts need plenty of comparative material before they can reach a conclusion.

It is common knowledge that signature have to be magnified to an equal extent, superimposed, and lines drawn to find out the angles, to measure the lengths of the various strokes, to find out their taperings and so on: 1958 M.P.L.J. 833: 1958 Jab.L.J. 674: 1958 M.P.C. 689: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 84.

In obtaining a specimen handwriting, the same type of paper, the same colour of ink and the same kind of medium as were used in the disputed handwriting should be used as far as possible: A.I.R. 1960 Raj. 77: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 152: 1960 Raj.L.W. 152.

There are experts who pretend to determine the age of a writing by merely examining it with a hand magnifier or a microscope; it always exhibits their ignorance or dishonest presumption. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 529, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 90: (1993) 3 An.L.T. 446.

Chemical tests to determine age of a writing, as a rule, are a mere excuse to make a guess; they furnish no reliable data to arrive at a definite opinion; thus, a mere opinion of the handwriting expert cannot override the positive evidence of the attesting witnesses in the suspicious circumstances. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 529, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 90: (1993) 3 An.L.T. 446.

Where though the defendant had admitted the execution of the document in question, he asserted that attestation of said document was done subsequent to execution and thus, moved an application to take the opinion of the handwriting expert for the purpose of ascertaining the age of the ink used by the attestor and the scribe, held, the Court below was right in allowing said application: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 90: (1993) 3 An.L.T. 446.

Where, expert did not compare signatures in the open Court before the parties, had not taken or developed the photographs in the Court, had not sent the report to the Court in a sealed cover and had sent the photographs, not alongwith the report, but had tendered them in the Court, held, that the lower Court had rightly rejected the expert's opinion. [A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 2200, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 224: (1975-76) 80 Cal.W.N. 278 (D.B.).

The practice of sending original documents in the custody of Court to handwriting experts is a highly objectionable and a very bad procedure. Under no circumstances should a Court permit or allow the documents to go out of its custody, as such a civil practice is attendant with various risks. The proper procedure in such cases would be only to permit the handwriting expert to inspect the document in the Court premises itself in the presence of some responsible officer of the Court and also if necessary permit the expert to have photographic copies of documents in the presence of the responsible officer of the Court. Any lapse in taking the necessary safeguards in this direction may result in miscarriage of justice, besides creating complications: (1968) 2 M.L.J. 48: I.L.R. (1968) 1 Mad. 805, approved in (1994-2) 114 Mad.L.W. 287 (D.B.); (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. 222 (S.N.).

It is unsafe to hand over questioned documents during the trial to experts, whether private or Government; the purpose obviously is to ensure the documents' safety and to prevent their being tampered with: A.I.R. 1976 Mad. 66: (1976) 1 M.L.J. 11: (1976) 89 Mad.L.W. 77.

The request of a party for sending original account books for ascertaining the age of ink used at certain pages of the account books to the Director, Government Finger-print and Handwriting Bureau or the State Forensic Science Laboratory, held, cannot always be declined on the ground that they should not go out of the Court's custody which involves grave risk of losing them; (1968) 2 M.L.J. 48 is not attracted as it is confined to private experts, not Government experts: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 71.

The usual practice in Orissa is to send documents to the expert for his opinion; it is only when it is necessary to examine him in Court that one of the parties may summon him which involves heavy expenses; it cannot be laid down as a rule that in no circumstances can the documents be sent to him and he must always be summoned to examine the documents in the Court. [(1968) 2 M.L.J. 48, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1975 Ori. 125: 41 Cut.L.T. 255: (1975) 1 Cut.W.R. 110.

General features cannot constitute sufficient material for establishing identity of handwriting. What is requisite is the peculiar writing habits or idiosyncrasies and the presence or absence of the same in the two sets of writings is a feature which is of decisive importance. A single dissimilarity can outweigh a large number of similarities. 1973 Mah.L.J. 855: I.L.R. (1974) Bom. 337 (D.B.).

It is common knowledge that handwritings of persons are never uniform, especially when they are old: 1958 M.P.L.J. 198: 1958 Jab.L.J. 289: 1958 M.P.C. 317: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 246.

A fine or stub pen, haste or deliberation, good or bad health, sitting or standing, drunk or sober may radically change the appearance and quality of writing. At the most, expert opinion on handwriting can raise a suspicion as to the genuineness of a document but it is of no moment unless confirmed by other evidence: I.L.R. (1953) Hyd. 140: A.I.R. 1953 Hyd. 181.

After a severe attack of malaria or some virulent disease the patient may recover within a week, and there may be tremor in his hand as compared to the signature which he may have made a week or 10 days prior to the illness. Such facts also should be taken into consideration by the handwriting experts before expressing their final opinion: I.L.R. (1953) Hyd. 140: A.I.R. 1953 Hyd. 181.

Where the borrower was undergoing treatment when he signed the promissory notes in question and was in a serious condition, held, marginal dissimilarity in signatures was inevitable: A.I.R. 1987 Mad. 17: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 633: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 442 (D.B.).

It is an established principle that a handwriting expert's opinion based on glaring similarities is not of much value; in any serious attempt, the forgers do achieve some similarities, even glaring similarities; an expert should rather find out dis-similarities on points normal in the writings of a man: (1983) 2 Kam.L.J. 135.

In examining a disputed document, the true test is not the extent of the similarities observed when compared with genuine documents, as forged documents usually are good imitations of genuine documents, but the nature and extent of the dissimilarities noticed. It is these differences which expose the true character of the document in question: I.L.R. (1960) Mys. 1206: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 441: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 53.

It is not safe to hold the document to be forged or genuine solely on the evidence of an expert. [A.I.R. 1973 S.C. 1346, Foll.]. While comparing disputed and admitted signatures, it is always proper to see that admitted signatures are of the same period as the disputed signatures: 1980 Rev.L.R. 346 (P.&H.).

It has been held in a number of cases that a handwriting expert's opinion in forgery cases is very weak evidence and the Court should seek other evidence in corroboration. But where the prosecution's handwriting experts had no special qualification to be claimed to be so and the books of account alleged to be forged or falsified were not before the Court, held, it is highly unsafe to sustain a conviction founded on such evidence: 1976 Cr.L.J. 145 (Goa).

It is not safe to rely upon the similarity of the signatures or on a layman's opinion as to whether they are similar or not: A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 88. The rejection even in toto of an expert's opinion would not exonerate the Court from the duty of coming to an independent finding on the question of an authorship of handwriting; the Court has to examine the opinion and come to its own decision. The most important things are to examine the general characteristics, formation of letters, fixed pen habits and mannerisms, and discern the identity of the writer. The identity or resemblance in handwriting has to be found out on the value of the effect of various considerations arising from individual characteristics and idiosyncrasies which have been embodied in technical language of experts: 38 Cr.L.J. 818: A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 99 (S.B.).

It is true that a clever forger will try to give the forged signature as much resemblance as possible of a genuine signature. But the personal characteristics of the writings or signatures of a particular individual are often an unfailing guide in determining the question of genuineness of the writing, and it is often a difficult work for a stranger or a forger to reproduce faithfully all such characteristics in the writings forged by him: (1959-60) 64 Cal.W.N. 1067: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 300.

A mere statement, therefore, by a witness that it is in the handwriting of the accused is no evidence if he is not able to say how long ago they were written: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 159. In arriving at a conclusion of the authorship of the forged document, the expert should show marked peculiarities in the handwriting of the accused, which are re-produced in the forged document and when the writing has no such peculiarities and comparison is of no consequence and cannot be relied on. Also the fact that the disputed samples are put separately from the started ones for the examination lessens its usefulness: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 159.

Accused charged with forgery—Conviction can be based solely on expert testimony, though as a measure of precaution the evidence should be corroborated by other evidence: 1969 Cr.L.J. 932: A.I.R. 1969 Punj. 225.

Ss. 47, 45—Handwriting proof of—Forgery—Opinion of handwriting expert—Not sufficient by itself to prove genuineness of handwriting—Substantial corroboration—Necessary—Penal Code (1860), S. 463: (1962) 1 An.L.T. 57: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 546.

Where the suit for recovery of money was based on a document which was denied by the defendant as a forgery but it was testified to by a witness acquainted with writing of the defendant as having been written and signed by the defendant, held, for identifying a particular writing, there is provision for examining an expert under S. 45 and any other person acquainted with the handwriting under S. 47: A.I.R. 1983 Pat. 321: 1983 B.B.C.J. 494: 1983 Pat.L.J.R. 541 (D.B.).

Where two rent receipts produced to prove the plaintiff's claim were challenged by the defendant as forgeries and were sent, together with the defendant's admitted signatures for opinion to an expert outside the State without disclosing, as agreed to by the parties, the name of the expert, and the expert opined the disputed signatures to have been forged, and the plaintiff impeaching the report to be a nullity contended that it could not be admitted in evidence under O. 26, R. 10 of the C.P.Code, held, examination and comparison of handwritings by an expert is a scientific investigation which together with the handwriting expert's opinion is governed by O. 26, R. 10 of the C.P.Code; it shall be read as evidence in the suit and form part of the record: A.I.R. 1987 Ori. 7: (1986) 62 Cut.L.T. 613: (1986) 2 Ori.L.R. 137 (D.B.).

Where there was no substantive evidence against the accused of forgery except that of the handwriting expert, held, no conviction could be based on such expert evidence: 1981 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 134.

Where conviction in a corruption case rested on the uncorroborated testimony of a handwriting expert who had characterised even writings of such witnesses who had admitted on oath to be theirs as forged, clearly a most extraordinary situation, held, the conviction could not be upheld: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1011.

Where the Courts trying a summary suit, took upon itself the impermissible exercise of itself comparing the disputed and undisputed signatures, held, the result of such comparison is a mere personal belief or opinion of the Judge; the issue of forgery cannot be determined without its trial: (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 438.

The conviction for forgery merely on the evidence of a handwriting expert, unsupported by any independent evidence, is unsafe. Held, that the opinion of the witness which was not based on any scientific examination of the documents but merely on a comparison of shape and design of the various writings, could hardly be considered reliable and sufficient: 1957 All.W.R. (H.C.) 558: 1957 Cr.L.J. 276; A.I.R. 1954 Pepsu 81: 1954 Cr.L.J. 739.

In a case of forgery the only chief evidence being an expert's examination of the forged documents as compared with the other documents alleged to be in the handwriting of the accused, the other documents must be strictly proved to be in his handwriting: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 159: 22 M.L.J. 270.

Where the parties examined handwriting experts in a suit based on promissory note impeached by the defendant as a forgery and the lower appellate Court accepted the evidence of the plaintiff's expert on the assumption that the defendant would have surely tried to disguise his specimen signatures to make it very difficult for an expert to give an opinion or that his handwriting when he signed the pronote might have been more steady than four years after when he gave the specimen signatures, held, these mere conjectures were not sufficient when it is apparent from the record that the defendant possessed no skill in writing: A.I.R. 1981 All. 62.

It is well settled that the science of handwriting is not perfect; evidence of a handwriting expert is, thus, received with great caution; where expert admitted that there were variations in the admitted and disputed signatures and opined that the hand of the writer was not set, held, his evidence could not be of much assistance to the Court: A.I.R. 1987 P.&H. 93: (1986) 90 Punj.L.R. 478: 1986 Rev.L.R. 504: I.L.R.(1987) 2 P.&H. 96.

The opinion of a handwriting expert should not be rejected because it is based solely on a photograph of the impugned document as the photograph must be taken to represent the condition of the original correctly. The fact that the expert was handicapped to some extent by the absence of the original and that he could not study the pen pressure with any degree of accuracy, is not sufficient to reject the photograph and his testimony. Pen pressure is only one of the several items to be considered in deciding the genuineness or otherwise of a document: I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 104: A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 226.

Where opinion of handwriting expert in respect of signature on the impugned voucher was not free from doubt, held, his opinion could not be relied upon to hold that the disputed signatures on the voucher were in the handwriting of the accused alone. [1977 Cr.L.J. 711, Rel. on]: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3987: 1992 All.L.J. 1187.

The opinion of a handwriting expert cannot prevail over direct evidence, if found reliable, of the attesting witnesses of the will: 1981 Jab.L.J. 203: 1981 M.P.L.J. 448: 1981 Hindu L.R. 763.

Though a handwriting expert's opinion is admissible under S. 45 to prove execution of a will, there must be other evidence to corroborate it: (1990) 2 Ker.L.J. 539.

Proof of the signature of the testator in a will is a vital matter which requires to be proved. It is true that the evidence insisted by law is that of the attestors. But that is not to say that other kinds of evidence is shut out by law. If there is anything suspicious in the signature, evidence of an attestor who attests the signature can certainly be corroborated or contradicted by expert opinion. Thus, it cannot be said that evidence of an expert on signature or handwriting in a will is not relevant. [A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 228: (1988) 2 Ker.L.J. 512: (1988) 2 Ker.L.T. 736: (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 724, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 259: (1991) 1 Ker.L.J. 154: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 606 (D.B.).

Where ink used for making two signatures of the testator in two pages of will were different and there was marked variance in the writing of the two signatures which were visible even to the naked eye but the expert failed to notice said peculiar features, held, expert opinion was unreliable: A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 289.

Where the plaintiff's expert witness positively asserted that the signature on the will was that of the testator but the defendant's expert witness merely cast doubts on the signature's authenticity, held, it could not be ruled with confidence that the signature was not of the testator; the will bore the testator's signature: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1989) 14 All.L.R. 814.

Where the handwriting expert could not give any opinion on the authorship of the questioned signature but the persons acquainted with the accued's handwriting deposed that the signatures were that of the accused, held, it was not safe to convict the accused in such circumstances. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 93; A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1728; 1973 Cr.L.J. 1187 (S.C.) and 1973 Cr.L.J. 1143 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1989 Cr.L.J (N.O.C.) 146 (Gau.).

A request made in passing during arguments before the Court that the document should be referred to an expert, held, cannot be treated with the same regard as a proper application setting out the facts and grounds upon which the prayer is made: A.I.R. 1973 Him. Pra. 62: 1972 Sim.L.J. 297.

Where the plaintiff had denied his signatures not only on the disputed sale deed as an attesting witness but also on the plaint and the wakalatnama and the defendant's application to send them for expert opinion of the handwriting, was dismissed by the trial Court on the ground that the Court could itself decide about the disputed signatures, held, in revision, though the Court can itself compare the disputed and admitted signatures to arrive at its own finding, but the defendants could not be denied benefits of the handwriting expert's opinion to prove their case unless their attempt is very much belated or otherwise springs from ulterior motive: A.I.R. 1991 Mad. 399: (1991) 1 M.L.J. 383: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 269.

The Court also deprecated the practice of making belated and repeated applications for examination of documents by handwriting experts, in order to protract and delay the trial: (1968) 2 M.L.J. 48: I.L.R. (1968) 1 Mad. 805.

The Court's refusal to send documents to the Government Handwriting Expert but allowing the party to get them examined by the expert of his own choice, held, is liable to be interfered in revision; the Court below directed to send documents to the Government expert at the party's expense: A.I.R. 1983 N.O.C. 210 (Pat.).

Where an application for sending the documents in question to a handwriting expert was made about 11 years after the filing of appeal in the High Court, held, in absence of any explanation for not filing such an application in the trial Court or in the appellate Court within reasonable time, application was to be rejected: (1994-2) 114 Mad.L.W. 287 (D.B.).

Where the charge of adultery was founded upon the wife having aborted her allegedly illicit pregnancy in the civil hospital, her signature on the admission form, and the handwriting expert's opinion on its authenticity and none of the witnesses testified that the wife had signed the form and the expert examined by the wife also contradicted the testimony of the husband's expert who had also admitted that he had taken photographs of the signatures without the Court's permission and without verifying the disputed and admitted signatures from the Court, held, evidence of the husband's handwriting expert deserved no credence and must indeed be adversely commented upon: A.I.R. 1984 P.&H. 9: 1983 Hindu L.R. 513.

Where the genuineness of two letters purported to have been written by the wife to her paramour was in doubt and the husband adduced no direct or circumstantial evidence to prove their authorship and they appeared to the Court on comparison not to tally with the admitted signatures, held, the Court need not in appeal send them for expert opinion; the Court is not bound to accept the expert opinion which may, in turn, require further scrutiny by the Court: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 484.

Proof writing—Opinion of handwriting expert—Evidentiary value: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1197: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326.

Where the disputed signature is shown to be exactly alike to the admitted one, the disputed signature is suspicious, for a man cannot write his signature twice exactly alike: 1959 Jab.L.J. 673: 1960 M.P.C. 154: 1960 M.P.L.J. 746.

It is a dangerous method to find in favour of a will or against it by a mere comparison of the signatures of the testator with the other signatures of his and especially so when the dissimilarity relied upon is not that of a general character but merely of particular letters. Where the variation is due to the fact that the signature of the deceased is found to be shaky but not uncharacteristic, this is a point in favour of the will being genuine. The superficial dissimilarities in particular letters would be due to the pens used, the space available, the position in which the signature was made, etc. The proper way to decide is to base the finding on the evidence of attestors and the scribe if they are available and if not on other cogent direct and circumstantial evidence which throws light upon the execution of the will. Therefore, when the opinion of the Judge is based upon the difference in particular letters and nothing more and in the case of a will in Canarese when he himself is not a Canarese knowing gentleman and little acquainted with Canarese signatures, the opinion is of little value: A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 566.

Report of calligraphic expert called on application of plaintiff—Court can call for opinion of another expert on application of defendant without finding that first report is unacceptable—Handwriting expert cannot be treated as Commissioner deputed by Court—Hence, principle applying to report of Commissioner for local inspection cannot be applied to report of handwriting expert—No rule of law or practice requires Court to adjudicate the merit of the testimony of a witness before allowing a witness for opposite party to speak on the same fact: 1961 Ker.L.T. 960: I.L.R. (1961) 2 Ker. 716.

Though opinion of handwriting expert is relevant in view of S. 45, on question of handwriting of person, it is not conclusive—Handwriting of a person can be proved by other means also—Held, complainant's evidence about handwriting of accused was sufficient to establish offence against accused and it was not necessary to examine handwriting expert in support of complainant's evidence: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 442: (1967) 1 S.C.R. 249: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 778.

Handwriting expert's opinion—Use of—Suit for eviction—Application for stay of suit under S. 8 of Kerala Prevention of Eviction Act (XII of 1966)—Expert's opinion should be considered for ascertaining whether prima facie case of tenancy is made out: 1969 Ker.L.T. 664.

Handwriting expert—Evidentiary value of his—opinion—Expert unable to give definite opinion about disputed handwriting in document, being in the pen of accused—Fact insufficient to justify rejection of positive evidence of witnesses who were familiar with handwriting of accused and who were therefore, competent to prove document to be in writing of accused: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 36: A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 262.

Participation in conspiracy—Proof—Photograph of disputed writing—Admissibility in evidence—Expert testimony: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1124: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 938.

Where the specimen writings and specimen signatures of the accused charged under Ss. 120, 420, 468 of the Indian Penal Code and S. 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act were taken by a Magistrate who neither knew the accused personally nor got them identified, held, the specimen writings and signatures could not be said to be of the accused; their comparison with the disputed writings by the handwriting expert could not connect the accused with the crime: 1982 Raj.L.W. 203: 1983 Cr.L.J. 858.

13. Section 45 vis-a-vis section 47.—Ss. 45 and 47 of Evidence Act prescribe the method in which signature can be proved. Under S. 45 the opinion of the handwriting experts is relevant while under S. 47 the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person who is alleged to have signed the document is admissible. This is, therefore, the manner in which the alleged signature of a person could and should have been proved; but even assuming that the signature of the person could be legally held to be proved on circumstantial evidence, the principle which governs the appreciation of such circumstantial evidence in cases of this kind cannot be ignored. It is only if the Court is satisfied that the circumstantial evidence irresistibly leads to the inference that the person must have signed the document in question that the Court can legitimately reach a conclusion: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 93.

It is not correct to say that when a handwriting expert is not examined, the Court is not justified in relying upon the evidence as to handwriting coming from a person who was not only competent but who appeared to be correct in saying that the handwriting was in the handwriting of a particular person: 1960 Cr.L.J. 579: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 318.

The opinion of a handwriting expert is no doubt admissible under S. 45. There certainly may be, and perhaps are, cases where the handwriting expert's opinion may be of assistance to the Court in coming to a conclusion as to the genuineness of disputed handwriting. But the art of forming opinion by comparison of handwriting is essentially empirical in character, and error is seldom inseparable from such opinion. Where, however, there is direct and trustworthy evidence of persons who had actually seen the signing of the document by the testatrix, it is not necessary to refer to or rely on the expert opinion: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 178.

Where a document is written by the accused in the presence of a witness who also knew his handwriting even though there is no handwriting expert's opinion regarding the writing in the document, it is admissible in evidence: 1975 Cr.L.J. 354 (Gau.) (D.B.).

The opinion of experts and other persons acquainted with the handwriting of the persons concerned are relevant under S. 45 and S. 47, respectively; it is opinion evidence based in the former case by a scientific comparison and in the latter case by familiarity resulting from frequent observation and experience. However, the opinion of handwriting experts is not conclusive; it is fallible or liable to error like in case of any other witness but cannot be brushed aside as useless: A.I.R. 1989 Gau. 42 (1987) 2 Gau.L.R. 299.

14. When handwriting expert is not acquainted with language of writing—Effect.—The fact that an expert is not acquainted with the characters of the language and can neither read nor write them will not make him incompetent as an expert in handwriting: 1936 All.L.J. 317: A.I.R. 1936 All. 165. But see contra A.I.R. 1983 All. 54: Where the handwriting expert was not acquainted with the language of the disputed signatures and of the handwriting on a document with which he compared the signatures, held, no reliance could be placed on his evidence.

Value of expert opinion as to the signature in language which expert cannot read or write. See A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 559.

When the expert's opinion is corroborated by the direct evidence of witnesses, the fact that the expert was not acquainted with the language in which the admitted as well as the disputed signatures were, would not make him incompetent as an expert; his evidence can be relied on: A.I.R. 1977 Ori. 139: (1977) 1 Cut.W.R. 206: I.L.R. (1977) Cut. 679.

15. Tape-recorded voice.—Nothing in the Evidence Act even remotely suggests that the Court has power to call upon a prosecution witness to get his sample voice recorded for comparison with his disputed tape recorded voice; neither S. 73 nor S. 45 provides for recording of voice for comparison by Court or the expert witness. Even S. 146 which deals with the scope of questions which can be put in cross-examination does not provide for giving any such direction by a Court to the witnesses: (1981) 19 Del.L.T. 390: 1981 Cr.L.J. 927. But see (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 41, cited in S. 73, Note 12, infra.

16. Finger-print expert.—Although the evidence of a handwriting expert is frequently found to be faulty, the evidence of a thumb-impression expert is more reliable, because with regard to finger-prints it has never been found that two finger-prints are identical in all respects. The Court, however, cannot delegate its authority to the expert but has to satisfy itself as to the value of the evidence of the expert in the same way as it must satisfy itself as to the value of any other evidence: (1930-31) 35 Cal.W.N. 863, Expl. and Appr.]: 33 Cal.L.J. 397: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 66.

A Court is not bound to accept the evidence of an expert, such as a finger-print expert, even though there are no special reasons for not accepting it. The expert, however, must be given an opportunity of explaining to the Court the reasons for his opinion, as it is only after hearing the expert's reasons and elucidation that the Court would be in a position to express a sound opinion whether or not the expert's opinion is satisfactory: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 551: (1941) 1 M.L.J. 475.

When a conviction rests entirely upon the evidence of a finger-print expert, it is the duty of the trial Court to direct its mind to such evidence with a view to satisfying itself that the thumb-impression in question is in fact the thumb-impression of the person charged, taking such assistance as it can from the evidence of the finger-print expert. A trial Court is not absolved from the duty of forming its own conclusions in respect of a questioned finger-print merely because a finger-print expert says that the questioned print is the print of an accused person's finger or thumb: A.I.R. 1947 Sind 177.

The science of comparison of finger-prints has developed to a stage of exactitude. It is quite possible to compare the impressions taken from finger-prints of individuals with the disputed impressions, provided they are sufficiently clear and enlarged photographs are available. The identification of finger impressions with the aid of a good magnifying glass is not difficult particularly when the photographs of latent and patent impressions are pasted side by side: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 341: I.L.R. (1957) Mys. 177: A.I.R. 1958 Mys. 150: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1489.

Simply because there is the opinion of the finger-print expert, the Court is not bound to accept it and base the conviction of the accused on it. It is a very weighty piece of evidence but nevertheless the Court is to consider its weight and is free either to accept or reject it giving sufficient reasons. The Court cannot delegate its own function to find a person guilty or not guilty to the expert. It cannot convict simply because the expert says that the man is guilty. The Court, in a case of this sort, has to rely on the expert upon two distinct points, first of all, on the question of similarity between the marks, which is a question of fact on which the Court can, and should, with the assistance of the expert satisfy itself and secondly, on the point which is one for expert opinion whether it is possible to find the finger-prints or thumb-impressions of two individuals corresponding in as many points of resemblance as are shown to exist between the impressions found in the case before the Court and those of the accused. The Court should examine the expert as to how much experience he had in the way of comparison of finger-prints and as to how much literature on the subject he had studied. The Court cannot refuse to convict a person on the evidence of a finger-print expert, merely on the ground that it is unsafe to base a conviction upon such evidence. If the finger-prints are clear enough the Court must verify the evidence of the expert by examining them with a magnifying glass, if necessary, and applying its own mind to the similarities and dissimilarities afforded by the finger-prints, before coming to a conclusion one way or the other. The science has developed to a stage of exactitude. But the main thing to be scrutinised is whether the expert's examination is thorough, complete and scientific: A.I.R. 1957 Ori. 172: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 200.

It is the duty of the finger-print expert, who has been examined to explain how he came to the conclusion. It is the duty of the Court to scrutinise the evidence or make a comparison of the impressions personally. The ipse dixit of the expert should not be accepted and acted upon: 1960 Cr.L.J. 315: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 164.

If in a case of denial of the execution of a document, the direct evidence of the witnesses is of a very unsatisfactory nature, the Court can rightly rely on the opinion of a finger-print expert: 42 P.L.R. (J.&K.) 343.

There is no rule of law making it unsafe to convict on uncorroborated testimony of a finger print expert; the true rule seems to be one of caution. The Court cannot delegate its authority to the expert; it must satisfy itself as to the value to be given to the expert evidence. The reasons given by the expert are ultimately to be weighed by the Court which should satisfy itself about the correctness of the expert's conclusion by comparison of the prints. If enlarged photo prints are kept side by side and their markings compared, it becomes much easier to follow the reasonings of the finger print expert about points of similarities or dissimilarities and to judge the conclusion. Thus, where the finger print expert had failed to take enlarged photographs of all the disputed prints but had taken photo enlargements of only 12 disputed prints, and had also admitted that most of the disputed finger prints were quite legible but he had not marked two fixed points nor drawn a line between the two points on the photograph, nor had he counted the number of ridges between, and had only marked out six points of similarities in each of the enlargements of the disputed finger prints and based his opinion mainly on ridge characteristics which agree in nature and relative position; he did not opine that any of these prints had unusual peculiarities nor had he stated that at least four points of similarities were in sequence; he had further contradicted his report in the cross-examination in respect of several items; had also differed in opinion on the points of similarities between disputed and specimen prints; held, the prosecution had failed to prove beyond doubt that the thumb-impression on the muster-rolls were forged: 1978 Cr.L.J. 1220: 1978 M.P.L.J. 197 (D.B.).

It is unsafe to draw adverse inference against the accused on the basis of finger-print expert when other corroborative evidence was absent and doubtful: (1988) 3 Crimes 114 (Gau.) (D.B.).

A majority of finger-prints found at crime scenes or crime articles are partially smudged, and it is for the experienced and skilled finger-print expert to say whether a mark is usable as finger-print evidence. Similarly, it is for a competent technician to examine and give his opinion whether the identity can be established, and if so whether that can be done on eight or even less identical characteristics in an appropriate case: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1183: 1978 Cr.L.J. 1107: (1978) 3 S.C.C. 279.

Where the defendant is illiterate and the genuineness of a paper said to have been executed by him is disputed and the decision of the question depends upon the genuineness of the finger-print, the parties should be allowed if they want to examine experts: 141 I.C. 767: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 159.

Opinion of expert on finger-prints—Evidentiary value—Finger-prints found to be smudged—Court can discard the opinion: (1962) 4 Ori.J.D. 4.

Where circumstantial evidence was even otherwise incapable of leading only to the guilt of the accused in a murder case, the report of the Police Inspector that the gandasa had the accused's finger-prints on it, held carried no weight as he had neither given any reasons in support of his opinion nor shown having acquired any special skill, knowledge and experience in the science of identifying finger-prints: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 69: 1976 Cr.L.J. 10: (1976) 1 S.C.C. 542: 1975 U.J. (S.C.) 875.

17. Thumb-impression.—Evidence of a thumb-impression expert has an important bearing and is bound to be of great value in determining the issue regarding the validity of a document which purports to bear thumb-impression of an executant when those thumb-impressions are denied. It is a matter of common knowledge that science of finger-print is more exact than that relating to handwriting. In cases of comparison of finger-prints, the points of similarity and difference are easily discernible and the Courts must apply their mind properly to the evidence of experts in such cases. The Judge commits a gross error of law in not even considering the evidence of such expert: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 908.

The science of identifying thumb impression is an exact science and does not admit of any mistake or doubt: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1708. Thus, where the finger-prints of the accused were found by the finger-print expert to be identical with the finger-prints that were found on the stolen articles, held, there is no infirmity in the conviction of the accused by the lower Courts: 1985 M.L.J. (Cr.) 384. See also 1992 Cr.L.R. 435 (Raj.).

The comparison of the ridge characteristics, if they are large in number, are sufficient for identification of thumb-impression: 1975 Cr.L.J. 1277: 1975 Raj.L.W. 27. No definite rule for fixing number of points of similarity for identity of thumb-impressions can be laid down: 1978 M.P.L.J. 197: 1978 Cr.L.J. 1220 (D.B.).

Science of identification by thumb impression has advanced by a great leap; the Supreme Court regards it as an exact science and does not admit of any mistake or doubt; once at least 12 identical characteristics between the questioned and standard finger impressions were required to conclude that both belonged to the same finger but later on 6 such identical characteristics were considered sufficient to arrive at such conclusion. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1708; A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1183, Foll.]: (1994) 1 Ker.L.J. 871 (D.B.).

The question of identity of thumb-mark is a question of fact and the evidence of the expert is only a guide to the discretion of the Court: 9 Mys.L.J. 44. If a Court wishes to admit in evidence a report of a thumb-impression expert, then the Court should insist on the production of the expert, as a witness in the case. Else, the report does not by itself become evidence: 1935 All.W.R. 76: A.I.R. 1935 All. 142. Taking thumb-impression of accused in Court for purpose of comparison is legal: I.L.R. 50 Mad. 462: 53 M.L.J. 597. But see case law given under S. 73, Note 13, infra.

It is for the experienced and skilled expert to say whether a particular thumb-impression is usable for comparison; but it is undoubtedly for the Court to decide whether the extent of smudgeness is such that the expert could not have used. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1708; A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1183, Foll.]: (1994) 1 Ker.L.J. 871 (D.B.).

Whoever is the witness for giving a report on comparison of the thumb-impressions, has to prove that the photographs of the genuine and contested thumb-impressions were prepared in his presence and knowledge and that he proved them; if any other person was involved, these persons together must have proved the enlargements to be related to the original thumb-impression without this conclusive report which runs into a few lines could not be connected to the original thumb-impression and the trial Court was right in observing that such report remain doubtful: 1983 All.W.C. 43 (Rev.).

The evidence of an expert, held, on facts, brought out clearly helped the Court to appreciate the inescapable significance of what is there on the record in the form of thumb-impressions on the wills and the proved thumb-impressions in the record maintained at the District Registration Office: A.I.R. 1971 All. 304.

Where no expert was examined as to whether the party had made his thumb-impression on the summons, held, the Court's conclusion after observing the mode of writings, ink used and intensity of ink could not be faulted: 1982 All.W.C. (Rev.) 113.

18. Palm impressions.—Palm impressions are akin to finger impressions and expert evidence relating thereto should on the whole be admitted rather than excluded: I.L.R. 52 Bom. 233: (1928) 30 Bom.L.R. 321: A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 158.

19. Foot-print expert.—Experts in foot-prints are not recognised by the Evidence Act, but a Magistrate is undoubtedly entitled to take into consideration the evidence of a person who has seen a foot-print and taken the foot-print of the accused and found that they are very similar. Such evidence is not, however, sufficient to bring home the offence to the accused in the absence of further knowledge regarding the differences between one foot and another: (1942) 55 Mad.L.W. 231 (1): A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 452 (2).

S. 45 does not include foot-prints within its ambit as it does the finger impressions. Notwithstanding this omission, the evidence of foot-prints expert has been admitted with the qualification that there should be other evidence to bring home the charge to the accused. The rule on the point is that the opinion of the foot-print expert would not by itself suffice to base conviction on and the rule has been applied to testimony of other experts including experts on finger-prints: 1955 Cr.L.J. 437: A.I.R. 1955 Assam 51.

The opinion of a foot-print expert is not admissible as evidence. If the Court is to make any use at all of foot-print impressions, it must be satisfied from a comparison of the various foot-prints that they are those of the persons whose the expert says they are. The value of evidence with regard to foot-prints is obviously very much less trustworthy than evidence with regard to finger-prints. In examining a finger-print, one not merely compares the general configuration of the finger and all the lines on it, but one is able to study such minute details as the bifurcations and junctions of the ridges and the relative positions on those ridges of the sweat pores. With regard to foot-prints, one can only compare the general shape of foot-prints found with the shape of impressions taken from the feet of the person suspected. Even in this limited comparison, one has not the same certainty as one would have in comparing finger-prints because foot impressions vary considerably according to the circumstances under which they are made. Foot-prints made when a person is walking slowly or fast or running slowly or fast or jumping, all create differences which are material. Moreover, a foot-print taken after a person has walked a considerable distance is larger than a foot-print taken when a person has been at rest: 1949 Mad.W.N. 634: (1949) 2 M.L.J. 544.

The science of foot-prints is not exact. Where no ridges were found at all, it is impossible to identify a person with any degree of certainty by the bare outline of his foot-print: I.L.R. (1951) 1 Cal. 539.

The science of identification of foot-prints is no doubt a rudimentary science and much reliance cannot be placed on the result of such identification. The track evidence, however, can be relied upon as a circumstance which, alongwith other circumstances, would point to the identity of the culprit though by itself it would not be enough to carry conviction in the mind of the Court: 1956 Cr.L.J. 805: A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 415.

It is quite clear that the science, if it could be so called, of foot-prints has not yet progressed very far. But there is no doubt whatever that evidence of similarity of the impressions of the foot, shod or unshod, given by a foot-print expert is admitted by the Courts. Such evidence comes under the head of circumstantial evidence. It is not the opinion of the expert that is of any importance but the facts that the expert has noticed. A person who has made a study of the prints made by the human foot is better qualified to notice points of similarity or dissimilarity than one who has made no much study. He is able to lay these points before the Court, and from his evidence the Court draws its own conclusion: I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 262: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 951.

If the finger-prints are clear enough to sustain an argument, there is no reason why an argument, by way of deduction should not be as sure a foundation for a conclusion and it may be a better one than any based on direct evidence. There is nothing in the so-called science of finger-print or the qualifications of an expert in it which need deter a Court from applying its own eyes and its own mind to the evidence and verifying the results submitted to it by the witness: I.L.R. 46 Mad. 715: A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 173; 9 P.R. (Cr.) 1914: 27 I.C. 203.

The opinion of a foot-print expert should not be taken as conclusive. The Judge must form his own opinion with regard to the identity of the foot-print. The expert's opinion is valuable but it must be supported by statements of facts, the accuracy or otherwise of which can be verified by the Judge: 1940 Mad.W.N. 761: (1939) 52 Mad.L.W. 198: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 88. See also A.I.R. 1942 Sind 11.

Identification from foot-prints when they show ridge characteristics is as accurate as the science of finger-prints; but identification from foot-prints with special characteristics apart from ridge, etc., is another class which is usually but erroneously understood as identification from foot-prints though it is only one of the three classes. Identification from foot-prints is a science and the expert's opinion is a relevant fact under S. 45. Thus, where the points of similarity between the foot-prints of the accused and those in blood found near the place of murder were 9 in respect of the right and 10 in respect of the left foot while the points of dissimilarity were only three which could be explained to be due to different densities of printing ink and blood, held, there is a high degree of probability that the foot-prints in blood were those of the accused, a strong incriminating circumstance against him: 1972 M.P.L.J. 1029: 1972 Jab.L.J. 1008: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1668 (D.B.). See also 1989 Raj.Cr.C. 125.

In a murder case before relying on the opinion of the expert as to foot-prints found near the corpse of the deceased as conclusive evidence against the accused, the Judge should form his opinion with regard to the identity of the foot-prints found near the corpse with the foot-prints of the accused: A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 119: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1073 (F.B.).

In a criminal trial if the Court is to attach importance to evidence of foot-marks alleged to be those of the shoes of the accused, it is not enough to show that the foot-marks tally with the accused's shoes. The evidence must go further and show that the marks have some peculiarity which is found in the shoes of the accused and which would not be found in most other shoes; unless this is shown, the evidence is inadequate. Further, unless the circumstances in which the foot-marks were discovered are known are disclosed, evidence of the marks must be held to be unreliable: I.L.R. (1944) Bom. 25: (1943) 45 Bom.L.R. 884: A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 458.

Evidence of foot-print expert—Evidentiary value—Unsafe to convict accused solely on his opinion—Science of identification of foot-print impression is not exact science: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 467: 1970 Cr.L.J. 403; (1991) 1 Cal.H.N. 331: 1991 C.Cr.L.R. 121.

20. Identification of hair.—Science of identification of hair has not reached the stage of certainty and in other words it is not at all a positive science. All that the observer is enabled by this science to do is to diagnose the origin of a hair of at least the group of animals from which a hair has been derived. Corroboration of the statement of the prosecutrix is necessary apart from such evidence, in a trial on a charge of rape: 1959 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 23.

The prosecution can be granted permission to obtain head hair sample of the accused for the purpose of comparison during investigation: (1993) 52 Del.L.T. 586.

An order requiring the accused to give specimen of hair for the purpose of identification is not violative of Art. 20(3) or Art. 21 of the Constitution: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1405 (Raj.).

21. Dog tracking evidence—Admissibility.—(Obiter). The tracker dog's evidence cannot be likened to the type of evidence accepted from scientific experts describing chemical reactions, blood tests and the actions of bacilli, because the behaviour of chemicals, blood corpuscles and bacilli contains no element of conscious volition or deliberate choice. Dogs are intelligent animals with many thought processes similar to the thought processes of human beings and wherever there are thought processes there is always the risk of error, deception and even self-deception. In the present state of scientific knowledge evidence of dog tracking, even if admissible, is not ordinarily of much weight.

(Their Lordships, however, did not express any concluded opinion or lay down any general rule with regard to tracker dog evidence or its significance or its admissibility as against the accused): 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 862: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 283: 1970 Cr.L.J. 373: (1970) 1 S.C.R. 551.

In present state of scientific knowledge evidence of dog tracking, even if admissible, is not ordinarily of much weight. A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 283, Rel. on]: (1988) 3 Crimes 114 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Judicial notice must be taken of the fact that the training skills and the special qualities that are found in the Police Dogs are now universally being recognised as being of such a high calibre that in cases such as detection of explosives, drugs, etc., they are found superior and more effective than the most sophisticated instruments. In this background, one needs to take cognizance of the fact that for the purpose of tracking down a criminal, that special faculties, qualities and skills of the dog are aspects of which serious note must be taken. Where the Police rely on such evidence, the Courts would be more than fully justified in accepting it provided that it passes the test of complete scrutiny: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3883 (Bom.) (D.B.).

It is scientifically accepted that dogs are extremely intelligent and some of their sensibilities are very highly developed and extremely reliable; some breeds and strains of dogs are specially utilised for hunting and tracking because of their abnormally high talents. If such a dog is shown to the Court to be specially trained for detection, the evidence of dog tracking will be not only admissible but of a very high calibre. Such evidence as any other evidence must pass the test of scrutiny and reliability as per the following guidelines: (a) there must be reliable and complete record of the exact manner in which the tracking was done; the panchnama evidence therefor will have to be clear and complete and properly proved and supported by the evidence of the handler; (b) there should be no discrepancies between the version in the panchnama and the handler's deposition in the Court; (c) the handler's evidence will have to independently pass the test of cross-examination and (d) the handler must place before the Court materials like the type of training imparted to the dog, its past performance, achievements, reliability, etc., supported, if possible and available, by documents: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2808: 1993 Mah.L.J. 1118.

Evidence relating to movements of tracker dogs cannot be rejected as inadmissible and in appropriate cases it is open to the Court to consider it. Its reliability, of course, depends upon the acceptability of the testimony of persons who manned the dog and those who witnessed the movements and conduct of the animal. [1993 Cr.L.J. 2808 (Bom.), Rel. on]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 676 (Ker.) (D.B.).

The genuiness of the evidence of dog tracking need not necessarily be tested in the restricted terms of the availability or non-availability of a drawn panchanama supported by the testimony of the dog handler. With regard to the dog tracking evidence the testimony of the dog handler should inspire confidence of the Court so as to be accepted as a genuine and valid evidence given by the prosecution. The Courts should be satisfied and free to accept any test of scrutiny of such evidence so as to enable them to reach to the conclusion that such evidence is reliable and far from any doubt as corroborative evidence of the various other circumstances placed or made available by the prosecution in support of their case. [1970 Cr.L.J. 373 (S.C.), Disting]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 943 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Track evidence can be relied upon as a circumstance, which would point to the identity of the culprit, though by itself it would not be enough to carry conviction in the mind of the Court. Thus, where the evidence in regard to foot prints was believed by the trial Court as a corroborative circumstance to establish the identity of the accused as a culprit, held, the High Court would not dissent from the appreciation of the evidence made by the trial Court: 1970 Raj.L.W. 1.

Where the chappals and knife found at the scene of occurrence was wrapped by the Investigating Officer in a paper to preserve the original scent and within 24 hours, the accused were apprehended and for the purpose of identification they were mixed up with dummies and thereafter services of the Dog-squad were requisitioned and the Police dog after getting smell from those articles, picked out the accused, held, the dog tracking evidence clearly linked those articles with the accused persons: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3883 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Where there were discrepancies in the evidence of prosecution witnesses as to whether the Police-dog scented the chappals, bahi (part of a cot) or chaukhat of the window, held, the pointing out of the accused by the dog became meaningless: 1988 Cr.L.J. 39 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

22. Ballistic expert.—It is not necessary to examine a ballistic expert in each and every case, particularly when the direct evidence is of an unimpeachable character and the nature of the injury disclosed by the post-mortem report is clearly consistent with the direct evidence: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 340: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 323; 1995 Cr.L.J. 2019 (Ori.) (D.B.).

It cannot be laid down as an invariable proposition of law that in every case where a firearm is alleged to have been used by an accused person, the prosecution must, in addition to the direct evidence, lead the evidence of a ballistic expert. [A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 415, Disting. and Expl.; A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 340, Rel. on]: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1656 (Raj.) (D.B.).

A comparison microscope is the most important and most widely used scientific instrument in comparing the crime cartridge with the test cartridge. Though there has been considerable difference of opinion amongst investigators regarding the use of photographs in a Court for the purpose of illustrating the matching of the markings, and while it may be that microscope photographs, when taken with the due care and in the best of conditions, may enable the evidence to be placed on the record in a visible form, it cannot be denied that a Court would not be justified in rejecting the opinion of an expert who has examined the markings under the comparison microscope and categorically stated that he had compared the land and groove markings on the bullets under a comparison microscope, simply because he did not think it necessary to take the photographs. [(1971) 3 S.C.C. 208, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1204: (1978) 3 S.C.C. 86: 1978 Cr.L.J. 1137.

As to the probative value of the conclusions reached by medical and ballistic experts it must be remembered that though they may ensure high degree of probability, it is after all opinion evidence and unless the Court is satisfied after considering the data and be convinced of the correctness of the expert's opinion, it cannot be acted upon.

The evidence of ballistic expert even based on the conclusions reached by him on experiments made by him may not be conclusive in nature. It is nevertheless an important piece of evidence and as opinion evidence must be acted upon if the Court is satisfied about it: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 178: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 131.

In cases where injuries are caused by fire-arms, the opinion of the ballistic expert is of a considerable importance where both the fire-arm and the crime cartridge are recovered during the investigation to connect an accused with the crime. Failure to produce the expert opinion before the trial Court in such cases affects the creditworthiness of the prosecution case to a great extent: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 1601.

Till the guns recovered at the instance of the accused are sent for ballastic examination and a report is obtained that they are in working order, mere recovery of guns cannot connect the accused with the crime. [1984 W.L.N. (U.C.) 15 (Raj.), Foll.]: 1994 Cr.L.J. 2952 (Raj.) (D.B.).

Fire-arms injuries resulting in death—Injuries caused by pellets—Question as to range of shot and spread of pellets—Opinion of ballistic expert important, particularly when gun firing the fatal shot has not been recovered: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 178: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 131.

Expert opinion—Ballistic expert—Opinion as to distance at which weapon was discharged: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 623.

A greater degree of probability can be ensured with regard to rifle shot injuries than the shot gun injuries, for the shot gun injuries cannot impart by reason of its smooth barrel those additional characteristics which a rifle can impart. The features peculiar to shot gun injuries are determined by the fact that the charge is composed of several small missiles. At close range they make a single wound of a large size by travelling in a compact mass. As the range increases individual pellets continue at their own speed and direction. The penetrating power of each pellet decreases with the distance. Eventually the penetration may be limited to the clothing and skin of the victim. Hence, range and velocity are the important factors when looking to the varying degree of penetration of the missiles: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 178: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 131.

Medical evidence—Appreciation of—Gunshot injury—Evidence of medical witness—Duty of Court. See A.I.R. 1958 All. 255. When the victims wore several clothes, no scorching of wounds is possible even if firing was from very close range. (Taylor on Medical Jurisprudence relied on): 1953 All.L.J. 720: A.I.R. 1953 All. 652.

Unless the data collected by the fire arms expert with respect to the fire arms whereby an offence is committed be supplied or the enlarged photos he has taken be produced so that the opinion of the expert may be verified by the Court, the Court ought not to accept the opinion of the expert without satisfying itself of the correctness of the same: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 156: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 421: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 758.

Murder by shooting with pistol—Fire-arms expert—Evidence and opinion of fire-arms expert—Value of: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 180: 1958 Cr.L.J. 300.

Where it had been clearly mentioned by the ballistic expert that he had fired six live cartridges from the rifle recovered before recording his opinion that the empty cartridge recovered from the spot was fired from the said rifle and that opinion was not at all challenged in the trial Court as well as in the statement of the accused under S. 313, Cr.P.Code, held, it could not be argued in the appellate Court that the said opinion of the expert could not be believed and accepted: 1995 Cr.L.J. 3189 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the ballistic expert's opinion that certain cartridges could not have been fired except from the fire arms recovered from the accused was based on his having found individual characteristic of the firing pin, firing pin scrape and breach face mark; corroborating the testimony of eye-witnesses, the expert's opinion, held, was reliable: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 349: (1976) 3 S.C.C. 478: 1977 Cr.L.J. 214.

Fire-arm injuries—Respective fields of Doctor and ballistic expert stated—Opinion of Doctor who has no elementary knowledge of ballistic and fire-arms, not likely to be helpful in distinguishing and interpreting fire-arms injuries: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 178: 1968 M.L.J. (Cr.) 131.

Where the prosecution's case that the accused had fired their guns was amply corroborated by the report of the ballistic expert that all the cartridges recovered from the deceased's house had been fired from the guns of the accused, held, conviction was justified when there were other evidence also pointing towards the guilt of the accused: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 137: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3904.

Where the Doctor conducting post-mortem deposed that the injuries on the deceased must have been caused by fire arms and pellets were removed from the deceased's head, one of them six inch deep, and other two head injuries were also caused by close range fire and eye-witnesses had also testified that country-made pistols were used in murder, held, merely because the ballistic expert had opined that some of the weapons recovered could not have been used in the offence is not a serious infirmity; conviction upheld: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1029: 1994 Cr.L.J. 1374.

Where the ballistic expert initially opined that the two gun-shot injuries could emanate from a single shot but then vacillated, stating that the possibility of the injuries having been caused by two different shots could not be ruled out in such nebulous state of the expert's evidence, the High Court went wholly wrong in doubting the direct evidence of the eye-witnesses unless it suffered from glaring infirmities: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1242: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1269: 1990 All.L.J. 281.

Where though the ballistic expert opined that the empty cartridge was fired from the gun which was alleged to be recovered at the accused's instance, he gave no reasons for his opinion and further the gun before being sent to the ballistic expert, was kept in Police custody for a long period for two months and 10 days, held, the evidence of the expert was unreliable: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1583 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where the ballistic expert had not seen the injuries but he opined on the basis of dimension of injuries shown in the medical report that probably the injuries were caused by one gun shot only, held, not only that his opinion was not categorical but it would also require superhuman ability to come to such a conclusion from the dimensions of injuries recorded, or even their photograph taken, by the Doctors; no implicit faith could be reposed in such testimony: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 2161: 1975 Cr.L.J. 1865: (1975) 4 S.C.C. 254.

Where in a case for attempt to murder, the ballistic expert fired two shots on the injured's trousers and comparing them with the hole made in his trousers by the pellet recovered from his calf and opined that the earlier hole was caused by the pellet recovered, held, it was highly unsatisfactory and not an expert's opinion; he should have given fact, and not uncheckable opinion; he should have placed before the Court all materials which induced him to come to his conclusion to help the Court form its own judgment: 1991 Cr.L.J. 1235: 1991 All.L.J. 374. See also 1982 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 11.

Where rifle and cartridges were recovered from accused and firing capability of said rifle was examined by an armourer, held, it was not necessary to make a test firing for the purpose of ascertaining firing capability of rifle: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 578.

23. Type script.—The opinion of an expert that one document has been typewritten on the same machine as another document, is not admissible. The Court may ask the witness points in favour of the view whether the two documents have or have not been typewritten on the same machine but must come to its own conclusion and not treat such assistance as an expert opinion a relevant fact in itself: A.I.R. 1935 All. 162. But evidence as to the fact that the typewriters used in the typing of the various exhibits have certain defects which are clear from the typing of these exhibits can be competently given by an expert who has had an opportunity of examining the documents, though the Court is entitled to draw its own conclusion at the source and authorship of the documents from the whole evidence in the case: A.I.R. 1933 All. 498. See also I.L.R. 55 All. 1040: A.I.R. 1933 All. 690.

The opinion of expert that a particular letter was typed on a particular machine does not fall within the ambit of S. 45 and is inadmissible. [1953 Cr.L.J. 129 (S.C.), Foll.]: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 583.

The Law Commission in its 6th Report (Vol. IV) in Chapter 17 captioned "Opinion of Expert" referred to A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 343 and recommended that S. 45 should be amended so as to include 'identity of typewriting': A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1050: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1112: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 309.

Admissibility of expert opinion on type script under S. 45 needs to be examined in detail and decided; there is rapid development with the march of times in the field of Forensic Science; it has, therefore, become imperative for the law to match with the march of modern vistas of scientific knowledge; whether the expert opinion about type script would fall within S. 45 requires to be decided by a larger Bench: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1050: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1112: (1990) 41 Del.L.T. 309.

24. Photographs.—Where the question of legitimacy arises, photographs of the putative father and son to prove resemblance are admissible: 13 I.C. 678: 15 Cal.L.J. 621, on appeal, 47 I.C. 513: I.L.R. 45 Cal. 878. As to admissibility of photographs in evidence, see 113 I.C. 771: A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 189 (P.C.).

25. Technical work.—Technical works cannot be used to refuse an expert witness's opinion unless the passages to be used are put in cross-examination to the witness and it is then for him to explain them if he can. [I.L.R. 23 Cal. 1 (P.C.), Ref.]: (1917-18) 22 Cal.W.N. 745: 46 I.C. 593.

26. Trade mark/Copyright.—Similarity of trade mark is a matter for the Court: I.L.R. 49 All. 92: 99 I.C. 353: A.I.R. 1927 All. 81.

Registration of trade mark—Similarity with existing trade mark—Registrar's opinion that there was no deceptive similarity between two marks—Having expert knowledge in the matter his opinion should not be disturbed lightly—Concurrent finding to the contrary of Courts below is, however, binding in appeal under Art. 136 of Constitution: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 146: (1970) 1 S.C.R. 290.

Where in a complaint for infringement of copyright in books, the accused was acquitted for absence of expert opinion to prove that offending books were reproduction of the book printed and published by de facto complainant, held, as the Court could have on its own motion examined experts for ends of justice, acquittal was unjustified: 1985 Cr.L.J. 202 (Cal.).

27. Foreign law.—Expert opinion on matters of foreign law. See 92 I.C. 112: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 218. Under this section expert evidence is admissible in respect of the Jewish Law: I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 201: A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 90. Expert opinion on foreign law, where it is elaborately laid down in a Code, need not be called for—Court should itself interpret such law: 123 I.C. 600: A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 146. The evidence of translators or interpreters of Hindu Law texts is not admissible: I.L.R. 12 Pat. 359: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 306.

28. Expert opinion regarding value of land.—Expert opinion—Acquisition of land—Determination of market value—Expert opinion when necessary: A.I.R. 1969 Ker. 265.

While an expert's evidence about the extent of depreciation in the land value where its major chunk has been acquired may assist the Court in reaching a conclusion where technical assistance is called for, held, it cannot be laid down as a rule of law that if no such expert is available, the Court is barred from making its own guess on the basis of available materials on record: A.I.R. 1981 Guj. 219: (1981) 22 Guj.L.R. 590 (D.B.).

The architects may be experts for the purpose of designing and building house, but they are not experts for the purpose of giving opinion as to what would be the cost of construction in a particular year without any data about the prices of materials and wages prevalent in that particular year: A.I.R. 1972 Del. 41: I.L.R. (1971) 2 Del. 437.

Where the Commissioner and Administrator of the Municipal Corporation appears as an expert witness having gained knowledge about the value of land and houses situated in different parts of the city, held, that knowledge entitles him to be considered as an expert; his opinion founded on such knowledge is admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1971 Madh. Pra. 32: 1970 M.P.W.R. 349: 1970 M.P.L.J. 465: 1970 Jab.L.J. 466 (D.B.).

29. Report of public analyst.—A public analyst is supposed to be specially skilled in the science of dietetics; as an expert in the science, he is competent to opine and testify about this fact. Thus, the opinion of the public analyst who examines and analyses the sample, as to the fitness or otherwise of the sample for human consumption, would constitute legal evidence: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 394: (1976) 1 S.C.C. 412: 1976 Cr.L.J. 336: (1976) 2 S.C.R. 1.

Food adulteration case—Public analyst, report of—Special rule of evidence: (1969) 1 An.W.R. 541: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 438: 1970 Cr.L.J. 275.

Report of public analyst giving full factual data and no opinion—Conviction can be based upon it—Public analyst need not be examined—But record must show that Rr. 7 and 18 were duly complied with: (1964) 5 Guj.L.R. 578: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 32: A.I.R. 1964 Guj. 136. See also 1980 Jab.L.J. 491.

In a prosecution under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, report of unqualified public analyst is not admissible as report of public analyst, however, it is admissible only as report of an expert under S. 45: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 242 (Ori.).

Adulterated tea—Report of public analyst and certificate of director—Value of and binding nature on Courts: 1969 Cr.L.J. 615: A.I.R. 1969 Ker. 146.

Where an expert had testified that the insect infected maida, when its sample was lifted, could possibly contain only eggs, held, the Court could not discard his opinion on the basis of some passages in a book without putting them to the expert: 1985 Cr.L.J. 285: 1984 F.A.J. 407 (Del.).

30. Miscellaneous.—Where a deaf and dumb person had made a registered Will in favour of his sister's son but on his death, collaterals of the deceased sued his nephew for possession of the property left behind by the deceased and challenged the deceased's competence to make the Will, held, there was no legal bar to a deaf and dumb person making the Will on the basis of questions put to, and answers received from him by the

46. Facts bearing upon opinions of experts.—Facts, not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant.

(a) The question is, whether A was poisoned by a certain poison.

The fact that other persons, who were poisoned by that poison, exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be symptoms of that poison, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea-wall.

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects, but where there were no such sea-walls, began to be obstructed at about the same time, is relevant.

Principal of the School for the Deaf and Dumb and reduced in writing; the Will also carried a certificate by the Principal that it had been explained by signs and gestures to the testator who thumb-marked it in token of its correctness. The expert evidence of the Principal, himself a deaf and dumb, held, is admissible under S. 45: A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 373: 1983 Rev.L.R. 341.

Though the reports of the Local Commissioner and expert appointed by the Court under O. 26, R. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to be read as evidence but where the assessment of the crop value of the standing sugarcane was based on their respective estimates of the crop being 5 and 7, months old, held, their reports in the absence of corroboration, reasons for their views and their cross-examination, had little evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1971 Mad. 198: (1970) 83 Mad.L.W. 783. See also 1986 All.W.C. 9.

The Gazette of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. III published in 1879, is admissible under S. 35 read with S. 81 of the Evidence Act, 1872. The Gazette is admissible being official record evidencing public affairs and the Court may presume their contents as genuine. The statement contained therein can be taken into account to discover the historical material contained therein and the facts stated therein is evidence under S. 45 and the Court may in conjunction with other evidence and circumstances take into consideration in adjudging the dispute in question, namely, whether Kalika Mataji temple was a public trust, though it may not be treated as conclusive evidence: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 167.

In order to exhibit a document under S. 67, held, it must have been proved; thus, where the witness admitted in cross-examination that he did not know who prepared it, the decree based on the document could not be sustained: A.I.R. 1991 N.O.C. 108 (Gau.).

Where in a suit for recovery of handling and transportation charges, the plaintiff relied on the challans to establish delivery at the destination which were claimed by the defendant to be forged but the plaintiff sought permission to adduce expert evidence though belatedly to prove them, held, rejection of the application on the ground of delay was proper: A.I.R. 1992 Gau. 42.

Where an expert undoubtedly qualified to compare or identify printed matters, though he had published no paper on the subject, had given his opinion which did not necessarily mean that the number of the lottery ticket was a forgery and he had been sent only 3 tickets for comparison on the narrow point whether they were printed with the same machine but comparison was made qua one printing machine when there were eight machines in the press, held, though admissible, the expert evidence was not sufficient to clinch the issue of forgery: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1890: 1979 Cr.L.J. 1411: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 460.

Section 46—Notes.

Though expert evidence to prove or disprove the genuineness of a handwriting or signature is relevant under S. 45, other evidence supporting or detracting from expert evidence is also relevant under S. 46: 1983 Ker.L.T. 281 (D.B.).

Ss. 45 and 46 read in combination show that where an expert opinion is relevant, facts supporting or opposing the opinion, held, are also relevant; however, passages from text books inconsistent with the Doctor's deposition as expert cannot be used to discredit his testimony unless they had been shown to him in cross-examination: [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 589, Rel. on]: (1993) 1 An.L.T. (Cr.) 73 (D.B.).

Normally, in order that a certificate from medical expert could be received in evidence, the person, who has issued the certificate must be called and examined as a witness before the Court. The certificate of the Principal of a Medical College giving opinion as to the contents of a liquid seized in a prohibition case under the Bombay Prohibition Act, without more, not being evidence and S. 510 of the

47. Opinion as to handwriting, when relevant.—When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is relevant fact.

Explanation—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

The question is, whether a given letter is in the handwriting of A, a merchant in London.

B is a merchant in Calcutta, who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him. C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file B's correspondence. D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon.

The opinions of B, C, and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A are relevant, though neither B, C, nor D ever saw A write.

A Court can take judicial notice of the fact that theft of copper wire from telegraph lines had become very rampant, especially in Bengal, Bihar, Orissa and Mysore and Parliament found it necessary to amend the Telegraph Wire (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1950, by the Amending Act of 1953: 28 Cut.L.T. 185.

Section 47—Notes.

See also Notes under Ss. 45 and 46. The proof of a document's genuineness is the proof of its authorship; its evidence, like proof of any other fact, may be direct or circumstantial. The direct evidence would be of a person who had seen the document being written or signed; the proof by circumstantial evidence may be by one of the modes provided in Ss. 45 and 47; it may as well be proved by the internal evidence afforded by the document's contents which would be of considerable value if the document purports to be a link in correspondence when some of its other links have been proved; in such a situation, the recipient of the document would be in a reasonably good position to prove it both as acquainted with the author's knowledge of the writer's handwriting and signatures and his knowledge about the subject-matter of the correspondence; the Court may as well be in a position to judge whether the document fits in the correspondence: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857.

The opinion of experts and other persons acquainted with the handwriting of the persons concerned are relevant under S. 45 and S. 47, respectively; it is opinion evidence based in the former case by a scientific comparison and in the latter case by familiarity resulting from frequent observation and experience. However, the opinion of handwriting experts is not conclusive; it is fallible or liable to error like in case of any other witness but cannot be brushed aside as useless: A.I.R. 1989 Gau. 42: (1987) 2 Gau.L.R. 299.

The Act, as in English Law, recognizes two direct methods of proving a questioned handwriting: (1) by admission of its writer or (2) by evidence of the person who saw it written.

Besides, these best methods of proof, there are three other modes of proof by opinion: (1) by evidence of a handwriting expert or (2) by evidence of a witness acquainted with the handwriting of the writer and (3) by the opinion of the Court by comparison of the admitted and questioned documents; these three cognate modes of proof involve the method of comparison. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.) (D.B.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 39.

The evidence of a person acquainted with the handwriting of a person by whom the document is said to be written is admissible even though they are not experts: 18 P.R. 1915 (Cr.): 28 I.C. 722: 16 Cr.L.J. 338: I.L.R. 18 Bom. 66. See also 147 P.L.R. 1912: 15 I.C. 979; I.L.R. 4 Pat. 394; 7 Pat.L.T. 507: A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 787; I.L.R. 22 Cal. 313; (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 812; A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 413.

Opinion evidence is hearsay and becomes relevant only if the condition laid down in S. 47 is first proved. Thus, where there was oral evidence identifying the signature but the witness did not depose that he was familiar with the handwriting of the person whose signatures were to be identified, held, no reliance could be placed on evidence of such witness alone: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 290: (1974) 2 S.C.C. 660.

The main part of S. 47 is intended to apply to those cases where the disputed signatures or writings are not written in presence of any person, but are sought to be proved by those, who although have not seen the person writing the disputed signatures, are otherwise competent to recognise the writing on account of their familiarity and acquaintance with the character of the writing of the person concerned: A.I.R. 1977 Pat. 241: 1977 B.B.C.J. 449; (1989) 1 Karn.L.J. 52 (D.B.).

As to sufficiency of evidence, see A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 204.

Where the question is whether a certain handwriting is that of the accused, due weight should be attached to the evidence of a person who is accustomed to see the handwriting of the accused: 1959 M.L.J. (Cr.) 337: A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 185; A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 318.

Where a witness deposes that a certain document is in the handwriting of that accused, the degree of his acquaintance with the handwriting will affect the value, though not the admissibility of his evidence: 1936 All.L.J. 317: A.I.R. 1936 All. 165.

The importance of direct evidence of witness on the question of the genuineness of documents cannot be over emphasised. Under S. 47 any writing may be proved by the opinion of any person who is acquainted with the handwriting of the man alleged to have written the document. It has long been recognised in England as well as in this country that this kind of opinion was for various reasons better than expert evidence. One of the ways in which the knowledge of a person's handwriting may be acquired is by the witness having seen in the ordinary course of business, documents which on evidence, direct or circumstantial are proved to have been written by such person: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 332.

The technical requirements of proof of handwriting are satisfied if a person alleges that he had seen another writing and that, in his opinion, the writing to be proved is of that other person. S. 47 of the Evidence Act deals only with the admissibility of a variety of opinion evidence and not with its value. In a case covered by this provision, the value of the opinion, unlike that of the expert, depends upon the familiarity which a witness has acquired with the writing of another about which the opinion is expressed, and not upon the reasons which he can advance in support of the opinion. It would be quite legitimate to discard the evidence given, by a witness who is shown to have insufficient familiarity with the handwriting of a person about which he states his opinion. If a witness is not sufficiently familiar with the writings of another person a cross-examiner can easily test the value of the opinion expressed by the witness provided other admitted writings of the alleged writer are available: 1967 Cr.L.J. 134: A.I.R. 1967 All. 64.

The evidence of the content contained in the document is hearsay evidence unless the writer thereof is examined before the Court. An attempt to prove the contents of the document by providing the signature or the handwriting of the author thereof is to set at naught the well-recognised rule that hearsay evidence cannot be admitted. [A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 305, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857, Ref.].

Even if the entire document is held formally proved, that does not amount to a proof of the truth of the contents of the document. The only person competent to give evidence on the truthfulness of the contents of the document is the writer thereof: (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 228: I.L.R. (1966) Bom. 420: 1967 Mah. L.J. 65: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 112.

A document can be proved by internal evidence afforded by the contents of the documents: (1987-1) 35 B.L.J.R. 127 (D.B.).

Ss. 47 and 67 deal only with the admissibility of a variety of opinion evidence on handwriting and the mode of its proof; they do not deal with the value of such evidence. [A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 84; A.I.R. 1934 All. 990, Foll.; A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83; A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 452; A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 71, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1957 All. 119, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1977 Gau. 27.

It is well settled that the proof of a document's genuineness is the proof of its authorship; it has to be proved like any other fact. In India, therefore, the proof of a document's genuineness can be direct or circumstantial. Direct evidence would be of a person who had seen the document being written or signed or by proof of the handwriting or contents or signature by one of the modes under Ss. 5 and 47; it may also be internal evidence, afforded by the document's contents. The language used in S. 67 indicates that the proof of the signatures on a document cannot extend to its contents' genuineness when the document is written in someone else's handwriting. Signatures on a document are proved by examining that person; handwriting on a document, written wholly or partly by a person, is proved by examining that person; where the signatures, have been proved but the contents' genuineness is in dispute, it is all the more necessary that the author or the scribe be examined to afford an opportunity to the person disputing the genuineness of the contents to cross-examine him: (1993-2) 112 Mad.L.W. 587 (D.B.).

Explanation—Even the opinion evidence of a non-expert, becomes good evidence to go by, if the acquaintance of such of witness with the signature of the executor is well proved within the meaning of S. 47, Explanation: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292.

The proof of the signature of a person to a document is not necessarily a proof of its contents; normally, the contents of a document should be proved by calling the person who is the author of the document or by the presence of other internal circumstantial evidence. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 306 (Del.).

Although it is true under the Evidence Act comparison of handwriting is legitimate enough and the view of persons competent to express opinions may be in many cases of considerable value, the opinions of those who have not carefully studied the art of calligraphy is not as a rule of very great utility. The mere fact that there is a resemblance between the signature alleged to be false and a signature admitted to be genuine does not carry great weight. If a signature is denied, the onus of proving it is on the party relying on its genuineness: 64 I.C. 234 (P.).

A person having the custody of family records can obtain familiarity with the handwriting of persons who are dead and gone: 1952 Raj.L.W. 79: A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 102: I.L.R. (1951) Raj. 764.

It is not impossible for a person unable to read and write certain characters to know and to recognise and prove the handwriting of another in those particular characters, if he had the occasion to see the latter write: 4 All.W.R. 676: A.I.R. 1934 All. 990.

A person having seen another signing or writing a document, held, can be said to be acquainted with his handwriting; he is competent to prove the handwriting and signature even if it is in English which the witness cannot read. [A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 84; A.I.R. 1934 All. 990, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1977 Gau. 27.

When a question has to be decided as to the person by whom any document was signed or written, then, according to S. 47, the opinion or any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed is a relevant fact. But the section contemplates only the production of the original document and not a copy of it: 1939 R.D. 105: 1939 All.W.R. (B.R.) 167.

When a witness says that a particular document is in the handwriting of a certain person whom he knows, it is evidence of a fact. The fact that the witness does not also say that he knows and is acquainted with the handwriting of the person concerned does not render that evidence inadmissible. That is legal evidence of the handwriting of that person. The witness need not say in the first instance that he knows the handwriting. It is the duty of the opposite party to explore in cross-examination the sources of his knowledge, if he is not satisfied with the testimony of the witness as it stands. Nor would the fact that the document is not before the Court render such evidence inadmissible: 178 I.C. 324: 1938 Pat.W.N. 403: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 497; 198 I.C. 711: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 449.

A witness need not state in the first instance how he knows the handwriting. It is enough if he states in examination-in-chief that he is acquainted with the handwriting, and it is then for the cross-examining Counsel to bring out the circumstances challenging that statement, and discredit the witness: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 186; A.I.R. 1984 Karn. 112 (D.B.).

It is sufficient for the witness appearing to depose under S. 47 to say in examination-in-chief that he is acquainted with the handwriting; if the other party desires to challenge the statement, it has to cross-examine the witness to show that the witness could not have been acquainted with the handwriting: (1992-2) 110 Mad.L.W. 523: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 406.

Explanation—Opinion as to handwriting expert witness—Admissibility of evidence of—Duty of cross-examiner—Party relying on evidence of witness to prove document—Failure to prove acquaintance of witness with handwriting of executant of document—Evidence of such witness is inadmissible—Cross-examiner not obliged to prove absence of acquaintance with handwriting: 1968 All.L.J. 466: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1089: A.I.R. 1969 All. 423.

Handwriting—Proof—Nature and extent of dissimilarities notice imported: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 441: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 53.

Secondary evidence of existence or contents of lost document—Proof of execution by primary evidence—Examination of person acquainted with handwriting of executant: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 207.

Before accepting the evidence of an expert or other witness familiar with the handwriting and signature of a person, held, the Court has to use its own observation in comparing admitted or proved and disputed writings not as a handwriting expert but to verify the expert's premises in one case and appraise the value of opinion evidence in the other case. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326; A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 485; A.I.R. 1946 All. 67 and A.I.R. 1947 All. 411, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1971 Assam 168: 1971 Assam L.R. 267.

In order to exhibit a document under S. 67, held, it must have been proved; thus, where the witness admitted in cross-examination that he did not know who prepared it, the decree based on the document could not be sustained: A.I.R. 1991 N.O.C. 108 (Gau.).

Where a witness called to identify the handwriting of the defendant did not say straight off that the signatures on the document in dispute were those of the defendant but proceeded to compare them with those entered in his own bahi, held, that although the evidence of persons acquainted with the handwriting of the executant of a document is relevant and admissible the witness did not express any opinion as if by a person acquainted with the handwriting of the executant, but attempted to play the role of an expert, and as such his evidence must be rejected: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 6.

Where the witness proves that the letter was in the handwriting of the sender with whom he had been corresponding, held, it sufficiently proves that the letter was written and the statements contained therein were those of the sender; in the absence of examination of the sender, the correctness of those statements cannot be said to have been proved; the letter's contents but not, their truth stands proved; to that extent, the letter is relevant and admissible: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1949: 1971 U.J. (S.C.) 726.

Where neither the vakalatnama was signed in the presence of the Counsel nor was he acquainted with the signatures, held, vakalatnama could not be said to have been proved: (1981) 2 M.P.W.N. 89.

Much reliance cannot be placed on the evidence of a non-expert witness about the identification of the executant's signature, who had only seen the executant writing only once or twice, more so when there is the question of the identification of the signature which are alleged to have been subscribed before the witness was born: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 9: 1971 Raj.L.W. 103.

Where in a suit for recovery of money, the Court compared the admitted signature with the disputed one on the bond, held, the Court's finding based thereon cannot be discarded on the ground that the Court was not handwriting expert: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 267 (All.).

Where the suit for recovery of money was based on a document which was denied by the defendant as a forgery but it was testified to by a witness acquainted with writing of the defendant as having been written and signed by the defendant, held, for identiting a particular writing, there is provision for examining an expert under S. 45 and any other person acquainted with the handwriting under S. 47: A.I.R. 1983 Pat. 321: 1983 B.B.C.J. 494: 1983 Pat.L.J.R. 541 (D.B.).

Where the creditor had himself seen the debtor writing the disputed signatures on the credit memos as they were signed in his presence, held, he could certainly be said to be a person 'acquainted' with the debtor's handwriting within the meaning of S. 47: A.I.R. 1977 Pat. 241: 1977 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 449.

Where accused was charged for offences of cheating and forgery and the bank manager and accountant of the bank as well as the persons who introduced the accused to the Bank categorically deposed that the accused had put down his signatures in their presence and that the signatures were of accused and none-else, held, it was not necessary for the prosecution to have got compared the signatures of accused from handwriting expert: 1995 Cr.L.J. 969 (P.&H.).

An entry in an account book kept by the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs was sought to be proved by the statement of one of the plaintiffs who stated that the entry was in

48. Opinion as to existence of right or custom, when relevant.—When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right, the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed, are relevant.

he handwriting of a Munim in the employment of the plaintiffs' predecessors-in-interest, and that he was acquainted with the handwriting of the said Munim. In cross-examination it was brought out that the witness was born 19 years after the death of the writer, and that the account book in question, from which the entry was sought to be proved, was found accidentally in a Bukhari about four years before the witness gave this statement. Held, that under the circumstances it could not be said that the witness was acquainted with the handwriting of the writer by the third mode provided by the section, namely, the documents purporting to be written by the Munim being habitually submitted to the witness in the ordinary course of business: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 186.

Where the handwriting expert could not give any opinion on the authorship of the questioned signature but the persons acquainted with the accused's handwriting deposed that the signatures were that of the accused, held, it was not safe to convict the accused in such circumstances. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 93; A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1728; 1973 Cr.L.J. 1187 S.C.) and 1973 Cr.L.J. 1143 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 146 (Gau.).

Witness deposing that he being immediate superior of accused knew handwriting and signature of accused very well and identifying a particular handwriting and signature on disputed document as that of accused—Evidence of witness remaining unchallenged in cross-examination—Held, evidence must receive due weight: (1967) 1 Mys.L.J. 548: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 501: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1536: A.I.R 1967 Mys. 210.

Proof of wills—Onus is on propounder: 1968 Ker.L.J. 123.

Where there is evidence that the attestors signed in the presence of the person who deposed such attestation, held, handwriting of the attestor was proved: (1988) 1 An.L.T. 19 (N.R.C.).

Where the witness in whose presence the rent notes were executed by the tenants had been examined to prove the rent notes, held, non-examination of the tenant or the scribe of the rent deeds was of no effect: A.I.R. 1973 Del. 280 (D.B.).

A document alleged to be in the handwriting of A cannot be proved to have been in the handwriting of A under S. 47 by a person, who has not seen A write nor has received any communication from A, in answer to letters written by him or in ordinary course of business. But although contents of the document are not proved, the fact of its receipt purporting to come from A in reply to a letter written to A would be relevant under Ss. 7 and 11, Evidence Act: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1208: A.I.R. 1955 Sau. 68.

Section 48—Notes.

See A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 463. Ss. 48 and 51 do not undoubtedly make it necessary for the person giving opinion evidence, to have personal knowledge about the facts testified to by him. However, he should possess sufficient experience to indicate that he is 'likely to know' of the existence of the custom sought to be proved by him; but if he has no such experiential qualification, he should show the grounds on which his opinion is based like his having studied some ancient documents or having made personal inquiry from persons contemporaneous to the exercise of the custom or some other basis which would make him a reliable witness to prove the existence of the custom; otherwise, his mere repetition of hearsay would not lend any weight to his testimony; a mere ipse dixit of such witnesses is not admissible or relevant and carry no evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1971 Guj. 188 (D.B.).

Generally speaking, opinion evidence, unless it is the opinion of an expert, is not admissible, but S. 48 provides an exception to this general rule: A.I.R. 1971 Guj. 188 (D.B.).

Ss. 48 and 49 do not deal with the statements of dead persons or persons who cannot be found. Such cases are dealt with by S. 32: I.L.R. 22 Luck. 522: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 307.

General evidence as to the existence of tribal or family custom is admissible under S. 48, but it must be evidence of opinion of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed: A.I.R. 1953 Him. Pra. 66.

Explanation.—The expression "general custom or right" includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

Illustration

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section.

As to proof of right or custom, opinions of persons likely to know of its existence are admissible: I.L.R. 6 Luck. 519: A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 89.

And the weight of their evidence would depend on their position and character and of the persons on whose statements they have formed their opinion: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246. See also A.I.R. 1933 Sind 213.

Mere expression of opinion in regard to a custom is of no value unless, the persons expressing the opinion are persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed. Where nothing is pointed out in the statement of the witnesses which might show that they satisfied this condition, such as for instance of the exercise of the right of pre-emption, it is patent on the face of it that they are not likely to know of the existence of any custom of pre-emption. Their opinion on the existence of custom of pre-emption in such a case is worthless: A.I.R. 1954 Him. Pra. 20.

A living witness may state his opinion on the existence of a family custom and may state as grounds thereof information derived from deceased persons but it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay and no repetition of hearsay: I.L.R. 8 Luck. 445: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246. S. 48 read with S. 60 requires that the person who holds the opinion should be called as a witness. Statements made by deceased persons after the controversy had arisen and therefore inadmissible under S. 32 are not admissible under S. 48 or under S. 32(7). Statements cannot be called instances: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246.

A customary right is not a mere personal right vis-a-vis a particular person; it is the right of the community or recognized by the community as a whole. Normally, a custom has got to be immemorial, its origin not being traceable, or of very long duration, and very remote and distant origin. Though Courts might come across witnesses sufficiently old to remember that in their childhood, such a custom did not prevail; but nevertheless the long, uninterrupted practice recognized by the community as a whole has to be established. A custom may also have its origin in some lost grant; it will not be, strictly speaking, a customary right but a right flowing from the lost grant. In all such cases members of the community must be examined to prove the existence of such a longstanding custom, the community's custom. By and large the custom has got to be recognized by the community as a whole though its beneficiary may be an individual. Thus, where the plaintiff had examined two witnesses and himself to depose that he had been taking water from the pond for the last thirty years and not one word was uttered by anyone about the custom, held, no customary right in favour of the plaintiff was proved: A.I.R. 1991 Bom. 119.

Opinion of elderly members or the executive body of the Samaj regarding custom of adoption of a boy over 15 years of age. See 1976 Mah.L.J. 125.

Where the witnesses, who hailed from same village and were members of the same brotherhood, had given specific instances of their close relatives to prove the custom of divorce out of Court, held, it was not at all necessary to examine the persons whose instances were given, to prove such a custom; as the testimony of the witnesses actually examined was based on personal knowledge, their evidence could not be discarded as mere hearsay: A.I.R. 1985 Del. 14: 1984 Rajdhani L.R. 653: (1985) 1 D.M.C. 35: (1985) 1 Hindu L.R. 369: (1985) 1 Hindu L.R. 442.

Where the evidence of the plaintiff's solitary witness in support of his claim to Mahantship of an institution according to custom, and who claimed to be present when the plaintiff was initiated as a chela of former Mahant, was found to be neither trustworthy nor sufficient to prove such initiation, held, one of the factors of substratum of the custom to claim Mahantship having become absent, his claim was to be rejected: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 2002: 1977 U.J. (S.C.) 555: (1977) 4 S.C.C. 65.

When a witness testifies as to the information having been given by him to another and the latter is not examined, the testimony of the witness is not admissible being hearsay. [A.I.R.

The answers to the questions given in Wilson's Manual are clearly admissible under S. 48, being the opinion, as to the existence of a general custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed. They are also admissible under S. 35 as entries relating to a relevant fact contained in what may be regarded as a public record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty: 68 I.A. 1: I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 154: A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 21 (P.C.). Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law in Punjab—Authority of, see A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 266. See also A.I.R. 1987 P.&H. 138: (1987) 91 Punj.L.R. 247: 1987 Rev.L.R. 35; A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 306 (P.&H.), cited under Ss. 56 and 57, Note 10, infra.

Section 49—Notes.

A custom cannot be created by purchase. It must be such as has obtained the force of law by long usage; it must be ancient, certain and reasonable and must be construed strictly. The evidence of custom must not only be clear and unambiguous, but should also establish that those who were following it were compelled to follow it as it was in accordance with law, and the burden of proof as to its existence rests on the person who set up the custom. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of an usage, S. 49, Evidence Act, makes such evidence admissible if the persons giving their opinion have special means of knowledge regarding the usages and tenets of any body of men or their family. The weight of such evidence would depend upon the position and character of the witness and his evidence must be expression of an independent opinion formed on what he has known or heard. Repetition of hearsay is still hearsay evidence: A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 41: I.L.R. (1955) Cut. 653.

Where all that the Court has to ascertain is the rate of interest chargeable on hundies as is fixed by usage, the evidence of three persons familiar with that usage is sufficient particularly when it stands uncontradicted on the record: I.L.R. 13 Lah. 800: A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 582. See also (1937) 39 Bom.L.R. 613: I.L.R. (1937) Bom. 670: A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 385.

The words 'usages of any body of men' in S. 49 do not cover inferences or conclusions that may be drawn on the basis of past experience: 13 P.R. 1914 (Cr.): 20 I.C. 625. On this section, see also 7 I.A. 63: I.L.R. 5 Cal. 744 (P.C.); I.L.R. 23 Cal. 427; I.L.R. 26 Cal. 148; 49 I.C. 743; A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 385: (1937) 39 Bom.L.R. 613.

Where a deed of gift contains an agreement transferring one ghumaon of land to the donee and also relinquishment of reversionary rights by a reversioner, the deed, although it is inadmissible in evidence, for want of registration so far as the gift is concerned, can be admitted in evidence under S. 49 for the collateral purpose of proving the relinquishment of reversionary rights: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 414.

When the author of a book, a passage from which is relied on as to the usages and tenets of any body of men and family as of a person having special means of knowledge, is still alive, held, his opinion in aforesaid passage is not admissible in evidence because of the provisions of S. 60: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 206: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 153 (D.B.).

Prosecution relying on words used by accused for proof of its case—Section applies as the case is one where the Court has to form an opinion as to the meaning of those words in order to decide whether the prosecution has proved its case: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 87: (1963) 4 Guj.L.R. 733.

A Police Officer can give evidence under S. 49 of the Evidence Act, provided he has

50. Opinion on relationship, when relevant.—When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact:

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869 (4 of 1869), or in prosecutions under sections 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860).

special means of knowledge as to the meaning of words of terms used in a particular district or by a particular class of people. And for the purpose of S. 49 of the Evidence Act, gambler would be a class of people.

The expression "special means of knowledge" does not necessarily mean that the person giving evidence should himself engage in a particular business or that he himself should be a member of a particular class of people. It is sufficient that he has special means of knowledge regarding the meaning of words or terms used in a particular district or by a particular class of people. The very fact that the witness is a Police Sub-Inspector of Prohibition and Gambling qualifies him under S. 49 and in such case it is open to the accused to show in cross-examination that the evidence given by him is of no value or of little value. The fact that he himself had not said in the chief-examination that he has special means of knowledge or how he acquired special means of knowledge does not go against the admissibility of his evidence under the section.

It is true that a Police Officer must in chief-examination give the instances and give details of his experience in cross-examination if he is asked to do so, and the value to be attached to his evidence would depend on answers to such questions and other questions. But it would also be reasonable for the Court to presume that the Police Sub-Inspector in charge of gambling in a particular area has special means of knowledge regarding the words used by the gamblers as reference can be made by it to S. 114 to make certain evidence relevant: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 87: (1963) 4 Guj.L.R. 733.

Code words used by a class of people—Section applies where the meaning of these words is the matter on which the Court has to form an opinion: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 87: (1963) 4 Guj.L.R. 733.

Ss. 49, 13—Family custom of primogeniture—Proof of—Three branches of same family—Custom prevailing in two branches—Members of third branch cannot rely on custom unless proved by cogent evidence: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 150.

Inference drawn by prosecution witnesses—Inadmissible—Prosecution under Ss. 12(a), 4 of Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act—Not admissible evidence of the bet—Conviction of accused set aside: (1963) 4 Guj.L.R. 304: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 666.

Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887), S. 12(a)—Offence under—Question whether words used could be treated as a bet—Words can be explained by resort to S. 49, Evidence Act, by giving opinion evidence—Prosecution has to prove that the person has special means of knowledge before it adduces opinion evidence and in order to make opinion evidence relevant under S. 49—Opinion does not become relevant if special knowledge has not been proved—It is not for the defence to put question to show that witness had no special means of knowledge: I.L.R. (1965) Guj. 901: 1966 Cr.L.J. 830 (1).

1. Scope and applicability.—Difference between English and Indian Law: 91 I.C. 462: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 475.

S. 50 is limited to opinion as expressed by conduct and there is provision in the Act making general reputation receivable in evidence as in English Law: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 475: 91 I.C. 462.

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether A and B were married.

The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family, is relevant.

As the Indian law of evidence is based on the English Common Law, the Courts in India may seek guidance upon the precedents of the Courts in England to construe S. 50 where it is found to be ambiguously worded: A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 213: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 625: I.L.R. (1972) 2 Punj. 424 (F.B.).

S. 50 makes relevant the evidence admissible in English law as 'family conduct' but evidence of general reputation, which is admissible according to English law to prove relationship, is not admissible under this section. The scope of the section, therefore, appears to be more restricted: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 49: 1955 B.L.J.R. 705.

S. 50 is an exception to the general rule that hearsay evidence is inadmissible as also opinion based upon such evidence. The section lays down that when the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person with another, it may rely upon the opinion of a particular witness expressed by conduct. [33 Cut.L.T. 740, Rel. on]: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 152.

Opinion evidence of relationship is not admissible: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 527: 38 Cut.L.T. 577.

Two things are necessary to make the evidence of a witness relevant under S. 50: (i) The witness must have special means of knowledge with regard to existence of disputed relationship either as a member of family or otherwise and (ii) the witness must depose to his own conduct towards person whose relationship is in dispute: 1979 Hindu L.R. 189 (Punj.).

The essential requirements of the section are: (1) there must be a case where the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, (2) in such a case the opinion, expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship is a relevant fact, (3) and the person whose opinion expressed by conduct is relevant must be a person who as a member of the family or otherwise has special means of knowledge on the particular subject of relationship: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 680: (1988) 2 Rev.L.R. 245; A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 141: 38 Cut.L.T. 44.

On an analysis of S. 50, following considerations emerge: (1) the fact in issue is one person's relationship with another on which the Court has (2) to form its opinion and determine existence of the relationship but (3) third persons' bare opinion on the issue is not relevant as its genesis and trustworthiness cannot be easily tested; (4) such opinion is relevant only when it is expressed by conduct of the person like neighbourers or frequently visiting close friends but not casual visitors or invitees, having special means of knowing, whether as a family member or otherwise, about such relationship; and (5) 'conduct' means external behaviour—'opinion' means judgment or conviction; thus, the third person giving his opinion about the relationship must have an independent conviction of his own; his external behaviour must show that he was convinced of the existence of such relationship; there must be interaction between his conviction and his conduct. [(1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 749; Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 1: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1078 (D.B.).

Under S. 50 the opinion of a person is relevant only when the following requirements are fulfilled:—(1) The person whose opinion is sought to be given in evidence must be proved to have special means of knowledge on the subject; (2) (a) The opinion alone is evidence, (b) the opinion as expressed by conduct alone is evidence, or, in other words (i) conduct only can be given in evidence, (ii) from the conduct given in evidence the Court is to see whether it is the result of any opinion held by the person; (3) The opinion which is relevant must be the one as to the existence of the relationship. The negative opinion, or the opinion as to the non-existence of the relationship may not be relevant. Under the section, the opinion of a person is only a relevant piece of evidence. It still remains for the Court to weigh such evidence and come to its own opinion as the 'factum provandum'—as to the relationship in question: I.L.R. (1942) Cal. 299: (1941-42) 46 Cal.W.N. 729: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 76; A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 49: 1955 B.L.J.R. 705. (The opinion may be of a member of the family, or an outsider; it is enough if he has special means of knowledge on the subject).

The essential requirements of the section are: (1) there must be a case where the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another; (2) in such a case, the opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship is a relevant fact; (3) but the person whose opinion expressed by conduct is relevant must be a person who as a member of the family or otherwise has special means of knowledge on the particular subject of relationship, in other words, the person must fulfil the condition laid down in the latter part of the section. If the person fulfils that condition, then what is relevant is his opinion expressed by conduct. Opinion means something more than mere retailing of gossip or of hearsay; it means judgment or belief, that is, a belief or a conviction resulting from what one thinks on a particular question. The 'belief' or conviction may manifest itself in conduct or behaviour which indicates the existence of the belief or opinion. What the section says is that such conduct or outward behaviour as evidence of the opinion held is relevant and may, therefore, be proved.

S. 50 does not make evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) admissible as proof of relationship.

The conduct or outward behaviour must be proved in the manner laid down in S. 60; if the conduct relates to something which can be seen, it must be proved by the person who saw it; if it is something which can be heard of, it must be proved by the person who heard it; and so on. The conduct must be of the person who fulfils the essential conditions of S. 50, and it must be proved in the manner laid down in the provisions relating to proof. That portion of S. 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called to prove his opinion does not necessarily delimit the scope of S. 50 in the sense that opinion expressed by conduct must be proved only by the person whose conduct expresses the opinion. Conduct, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion, is evidence under S. 50 or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion, and as the testimony must relate to external facts which constitute conduct and is given by persons personally acquainted with such facts, the testimony is in each case direct within the meaning of S. 60. This is the true inter-relation between S. 50 and S. 60 of the Evidence Act. But while S. 50 affords an exceptional way of proving a relationship and by no means prevents any person from stating a fact of which he or she has special means of knowledge the section does not imply that the person whose opinion is a relevant fact cannot be called to state his own opinion as expressed by his conduct and that his conduct may be proved by others only when he is dead or cannot be called. S. 50 does not put any such limitation: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914.

The necessary requisites of S. 50 are (1) that the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another; (2) there must be expression of opinion by conduct as to the existence of the relationship; (3) it must relate to a member of the family or a person who otherwise has special means of knowledge on the subject. When these three requisites are present then what is relevant is the opinion as emerging from the conduct. What has to be offered as evidence is the conduct of such persons, whereafter it has to be found out whether the conduct proved, can be accepted as evidence of the opinion of a person who fulfils the requirements given in the section.

The offered item of evidence thus only moves the Court to see if the conduct established any opinion of the person, whose conduct is in evidence. In order to enable the Court to infer 'the opinion' the conduct must be of a tenor which cannot well be supposed to have been made without the inner existence of the opinion: A.I.R. 1968 All. 58.

In order to enable the Court to infer 'the opinion' the conduct must be of a tenor which cannot well be supposed to have been willed without the inner existence of the 'opinion'. When the conduct is of such a tenor, the Court only gets to a relevant piece of evidence, namely, the opinion of a person. It still remains for the Court to weigh such evidence and come to its own opinion as to the 'factum probandum'—as to the relationship in question: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 480.

Question of relationship—Nature of evidence receivable: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 147.

Ss. 50 and 60—S. 50 deals only with the relevancy of facts and the manner in which these relevant facts have to be proved is given in S. 60: (1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 83: 1968 Cur.L.J. 162, overruled on another point in A.I.R. 1973 Punj. 213: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 625 (F.B.).

The proof required for marriage or relationship of husband and wife stands on a different footing from the ordinary standard of proof in respect of other facts. In fact, the rule of exclusion of hearsay evidence has been in a way relaxed in cases where marriage or relationship of one person to another has to be proved. It is not essential that the factum of marriage must be established by eye witnesses or proof of the performance of ceremonies.

S. 50 makes relevant the opinion expressed by conduct, i.e., external facts. It may be proved by the evidence of the person holding the opinion or by other persons acquainted with such facts evidencing conduct. Evidence as to the conduct of other members of the family made admissible under the section may be given either by the person whose conduct is in question or by a stranger who has special means of knowledge. In either case, the witness is to state facts observed by him and the opinion he has formed thereon. The opinion may be of member of the family or an outsider; it is enough if he has special means of knowledge on the subject: 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 579.

To know the relationship of a particular person, an entry in Kutumb register has to be given greater weight than the one in voters' list: 1977 R.D. 362: 1977 All.W.C. 53 (Rev.).

Where in a suit for pre-emption, the vendor's son-in-law deposed that he treated the pre-emptor as his real brother-in-law, that the pre-emptor treated the vendor as his father and that the vendor treated the pre-emptor as his son and that conduct was grounded on the belief or conviction in the truth of such relationship, held, that the evidence satisfied the requirements of S. 50; the relationships stood proved. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914; A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 76, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 362.

2. "Opinion expressed by conduct".—The opinion made relevant under S. 50 is 'opinion, expressed by conduct' which is the expression in outward behaviour of the opinion entertained as to relationship: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 49: 1955 B.L.J.R. 705.

S. 50 does not make evidence of mere general reputation admissible as proof of relationship; it is the conduct or outward behaviour which must be proved in the manner laid down in S. 60: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 171 (D.B.).

S. 50 does not make evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) admissible as proof of relationship, and the conduct must be of the person who fulfils the essential conditions of S. 50: (1982) 2 Karn.L.J. 485.

Only 'opinion expressed by conduct' as to the relationship of one person to another, somewhat akin to 'reputation evidence' is made relevant. But the conduct must be proved in accordance with the law relating to proof. Conduct, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself if his opinion is admissible under S. 50 or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion: A.I.R. 1976 Ker. 34: 1978 Ker.L.T. 823.

When oral evidence is led to establish relationship, that evidence must be of an opinion and such opinion may be given by any person who has any special means of knowledge on the subject either being member of the family or otherwise, but such opinion must be expressed by conduct and such conduct can only be proved under S. 60 by a person who has actually seen or experienced the conduct which means an overt act. The opinion, which means coming to a conscious judgment or conviction, must emanate from the conduct exhibited showing that the person concerned has formed such a judgment or conviction: A.I.R. 1987 Ori. 187.

Ss. 50 and 60—Opinion on relationship expressed by conduct person whose opinion is relevant must be person who has special means of knowledge of relationship—S. 50 does not make evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) admissible as proof of relationship—Devolution of family property is often very valuable evidence of conduct within meaning of S. 50: 1969 B.L.J.R. 932; A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 450.

The language of S. 50 leaves no room for doubt that the opinion expressed by conduct of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has a special means of knowledge as to the relationship of one person to another about which the Court has to form an opinion is relevant irrespective of the fact whether that person is himself called as a witness or not. The offered item of evidence is the conduct but what is made admissible in evidence is the opinion. The portion of S. 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called to prove his opinion does not necessarily delimit the scope of S. 50 in the sense that opinion expressed by conduct must be proved only by the person whose conduct expresses the opinion. Conduct as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion is evidence under S. 50 or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion, and as the testimony must relate to external facts which constitute conduct and is given by persons personally acquainted with such facts, the testimony is in each case direct within the meaning of S. 60. It is, thus, clear that the evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) is not relevant as proof of relationship and evidence of witnesses who do not speak of conduct of their own or of some other person in support of their opinion which is sought to be proved is not admissible: I.L.R. 47 Pat. 636: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 481; A.I.R. 1968 All. 58.

It cannot be said that in no case evidence can be given with regard to the relationship by a person who is not a member of the family. S. 50 has to be read alongwith S. 60. There may be evidence of persons having special means of knowledge with regard to the conduct of a member of the family in relation to the persons whose relationship is in issue before the Court. If a man belongs to a certain village, who comes in frequent contact with the members of the family and has occasion to watch the conduct of one member towards another, he must be taken to be a person with special means of knowledge and if he has watched this, then his evidence must be admissible under S. 60 as evidence of a person who has heard how one member is treated by another member of the family and as such he must be a person of special means of knowledge: A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 82.

Traditional evidence, as media of proof of pedigree, recognises 'conduct' as one of the forms of declarations or statements relating to them by persons deceased and having had special opportunity or interest to know, or to inquire, ascertain and know contemporaneously. While there is no doubt that a mere opinion about relationship based on general repute and not supported by conduct will not be admissible under S. 50 of the Evidence Act, it is not necessary that in every instance where a witness proves relationship he must also prove exhaustively all the instances of family conduct in support of that relationship. The quantum of evidence must necessarily vary with the facts of each case: A.I.R. 1952 Ori. 75.

Where the statement of witness giving the pedigree is found to be inadmissible under S. 32(5) but he deposes to facts which establish such treatment as is contemplated by S. 50, it should be admitted to that extent: 151 I.C. 338: A.I.R. 1934 All. 117.

Conduct, as an external perceptible fact may be proved either by the person himself whose opinion is evidence or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion: A.I.R. 1981 Pat. 103: 1981 B.L.J.R. 255 (D.B.). It is not necessary that in every instance where a witness proves relationship, he must also prove exhaustively all the instances of family conduct in support of that relationship. The quantum of evidence must necessarily vary with the facts of each case.

Held, on facts that the evidence given by the witnesses satisfied the requirements of S. 53, Evidence Act and as such was admissible to prove the parentage of the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 450.

A member of the family can speak in the witness box of what he has been told and what he has learned about his own ancestors, provided what he says is an expression of his own independent opinion (even though it is based on hearsay derived from deceased not living persons) and is not merely repetition of the hearsay opinion of others and provided the opinion is expressed by conduct. His sources of information and the time at which he acquired the knowledge (for example, whether before the dispute, or not) would affect its weight but not its admissibility: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 601.

A person who, although not a member of the family, has special means of knowledge about the relationship of the parties, can speak in the witness-box of what he has been told, and what he has learned about the relationship of the parties provided what he says is an expression of his own independent opinion. The words 'or otherwise' in S. 50 clearly contemplate such a case: A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 49: 1955 B.L.J.R. 705.

Oral evidence of witnesses who have no special means of knowledge, and whose evidence is of the nature of hearsay, about the name of the grandfather of the deceased, is not admissible in evidence under S. 50 because that is not the opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of relationship between the deceased and his grandfather: A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 390.

Opinion of relationship expressed by conduct—Belief or conviction must manifest itself in conduct or outward behaviour which indicates existence of belief or opinion—Opinion as to legitimacy based on hearsay and not any belief or conviction—Not admissible: A.I.R. 1965 Him. Pra. 32.

When the Court has to form an opinion regarding relationship between persons, the opinion expressed by conduct as to existence of relationship, is relevant: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 478: (1992) 2 Ker.L.J. 303.

Where a person's relationship with another is to be proved by conduct of a person having special means of knowledge, it is not necessary that it should be proved by that person himself by his own conduct expressing his own opinion and conviction; he may do so by reference to the conduct and opinion of another person though it would not be opinion evidence under S. 50. [(1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 83, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1973 Punj. 213: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 625 (F.B.).

The opinion of the witness as to the relationship must be expressed by conduct. The person who deposes must also testify that he had special means of knowledge about the relationship either as a member of the family or otherwise. Where the witnesses are co-villagers and they might have otherwise special means of knowledge about the relationship, these facts must be clarified by them in their evidence and also must say as to how they knew of the relationship as being expressed by conduct: I.L.R. (1966) Cut. 193.

When a Court is to judge the relationship of a person to another it is only permitted to take into consideration the belief of a person provided it is expressed by conduct in case the witness has special means of knowledge. S. 50 requires that opinion expressed by conduct alone or in other words, conduct based on opinion is admissible in evidence. Therefore, mere statement of a witness that a person was son of someone born after $1^1/_2$ years of marriage without stating as to where the birth had taken place, held, is not admissible under S. 50: A.I.R. 1982 Sikkim 26 (D.B.).

Documentary pieces of evidence indicating devolution or treatment of family property is evidence of conduct and, thus, relevant under S. 50. [A.I.R. 1963 Pat. 450, Rel. on]: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 402.

3. Person whose evidence is admissible.—S. 50 does not make inadmissible the evidence of any person merely because he does not happen to be related to the party claiming to prove that relationship. All that S. 50 requires is that the person appearing as a witness has special means of knowledge on the subject and that knowledge may arise from being a member of the family or otherwise: 1995 Punj.L.J. 145.

When a witness gives evidence of opinion by conduct contemplated by S. 50, held, it is not required that he must himself be having special means of knowledge about the relationship between the persons; the 'special means of knowledge' are required to be had not by the witness but the person whose opinion by conduct the witness sought to prove: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 24: 1975 Rev.L.R. 567.

A member of a family can depose about what he has learnt about his own ancestors, provided it is an expression of his own independent opinion (even if based on hearsay derived from the dead); it is not merely the repetition of hearsay opinion of others provided the opinion is expressed by conduct; thus, where a member of the family deposed that he had heard the names of his ancestors being mentioned at the fateha, held, the offering of fateha together with mentioning of the ancestors' names, is certainly admissible. [A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 601, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Mad. 228 (D.B.).

A villager may have the special means of knowledge to know the relationship evidenced by conduct between the parties who are co-villagers: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.).

Where none of the witnesses professes himself to be a member of the family, nor claims to have any special memo of knowledge on the subject, held, this section is not attracted: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 680: (1988) 2 Rev.L.R. 245.

Where the witness, aged about 75 years at the time of deposition, was merely a co-villager and neighbour of the party about whose relationship he was speaking and there was no relationship, held, his evidence to form opinion about relationship could not be inferred in absence of some special circumstances under which he could form such opinion: A.I.R. 1994 Ori. 298.

The person whose opinion is expressed by conduct is relevant only if he is a member of the family or otherwise has special means of knowledge about relationship; thus, a rickshaw-puller, living at a distance of 100/150 cubits or a bidi binder living at a distance of 100 cubits, both men of straw, are not competent witnesses under S. 50 where the property involved is located in Calcutta, not in a mofussil town. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

4. Marriage.—Where the evidence is that a man and woman lived and were treated as husband and wife for a number of years, and in the absence of any material pointing to the contrary conclusion, a presumption might have been drawn that they were lawfully married. But the presumption which may be drawn from long cohabitation is rebuttable, and if there are circumstances which weaken or destroy that presumption the Court cannot ignore them. Where the cumulative effect of the other circumstances warrants the conclusion that the man failed to prove the factum of his marriage with the woman his claim to succeed to the woman's estate as heir under the customary law of Punjab must fail: A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 231: 1952 S.C.R. 825.

The doctrine that the proof as to whether there was a marriage between two parties is to include a consideration of the character and conduct of various relatives and an estimate is to be formed as to whether on the whole these relatives prefer the tie of concubinage to that of marriage is a wrong doctrine regarding proof of marriage. The evidence on this subject should not be allowed as it is without competence: 56 I.A. 201: I.L.R. 10 Lah. 725: A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 135: 57 M.L.J. 366 (P.C.).

The word 'solemnize' means in connection with a marriage, 'to celebrate the marriage with proper ceremonies and in due form'. It follows therefore, that unless the marriage is celebrated or performed with proper ceremonies and due form, it cannot be said to be 'solemnized'. If the marriage is not a valid marriage according to the law applicable to the parties, no question of its being void by reason of its taking place during the life of the husband or wife of the person marrying arises. If the marriage is not a valid marriage, it is no marriage in the eye of law. The bare fact of a man and a woman living as husband and wife does not, at any rate, normally give them the status of husband and wife, even though they may hold themselves out before society, as husband and wife and the society treats them as husband and wife. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 514 and 1564, Foll.]: 1977 R.D. 362: 1977 All.W.C. 53 (Rev.).

The law as to presumption in favour of marriage under Ss. 50 and 114 is well crystallised. When a man and a woman lived together as husband and wife for sufficiently long time and were treated as husband and wife by friends, relatives and neighbours, there is always a presumption in favour of their marriage; birth of children to the couple would give rise to a further presumption of their legitimacy; such presumption is not mitigated or weakened merely because there is no positive evidence of their marriage having taken place. However, the existence of some evidence on record that the couple had gone through some form of marriage, strengthens the presumption. Thus, even though the marriage ceremony may not be valid, their marriage can yet be said to be valid by force of habit and repute; the onus of rebutting such a marriage would be on the person who denies the marriage; the presumption of law in favour of marriage and legitimacy cannot be repelled lightly by mere balance of probability but the rebuttal evidence must be strong, satisfactory and conclusive. [A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 231; A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1557; A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 229 and A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 143, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1987 Bom. 27: 1986 Mah.L.J. 186: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 29: 1986 Mah.L.R. 864: (1986) 2 Bom.C.R. 146: I.L.R. (1986) Bom. 1281.

On a question of the legality of the form of marriage, conduct of parties is admissible: I.L.R. 48 Mad. 1: 93 I.C. 705: A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 497.

In case of first marriage, not only the presumption under S. 50 but also the admissions, declarations and other circumstantial evidence let in by the parties can be taken into consideration. However, there is a distinction with regard to the mode of proof of the first marriage and proof of the second marriage; the second marriage has to be proved strictly in accordance with the Hindu rites and customs. [(1976) 1 A.P.L.J. 339; 1977 Cr.L.J. 208, Foll.]:

The presumption of marriage taking into account long cohabitation is a rebuttal one. It is necessary to show that the man and the woman not merely should be living together, but should profess themselves to be husband and wife and should be treated as such by relations and friends. Such conduct and recognition must extend over a long period of time. If there are circumstances which weaken or destroy that presumption, the Court cannot ignore them: (1977) 2 M.L.J. 141.

To raise a presumption of marriage, the circumstances such as whether the man has treated the woman as lawfully wedded wife in company of friends, relatives and other members of the society and whether their friends and relatives had treated them as such, have to be taken into account: (1990) 1 An.L.T. 41 (N.R.C.).

Unlike a matrimonial proceeding where strict proof of marriage is essential, in a proceeding under S. 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure such standard of proof is not necessary as it is summary in nature meant to prevent vagrancy; the Court in such proceeding can conclude that the parties were married relying upon the evidence of persons referred to under S. 50: (1980) 6 Hindu L.R. 332 (Cal.); (1986) 1 Karn.L.J. 41: I.L.R. (1985) Karn. 3969.

Maintenance proceedings—Marriage—Standard of proof—Opinion expressed by conduct of persons having special means of knowledge is sufficient. [A.I.R. 1953 Ori. 10; 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 311 (Ker.), Rel. on; A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1564, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1970 Mys. 305: (1970) 2 Mys.L.J. 15.

Where in maintenance proceeding under S. 125, C.P.Code there was evidence of prosecution witnesses that couple was living as husband and wife, held, it was sufficient proof of marriage, notwithstanding absence of evidence of performance of sampradhan and saptapadi: 1985 Cr.L.J. 979.

Where in a suit for maintenance, the wife produced the priest who deposed about the wedding ceremonies performed and also her cousin, who deposed about his participating in negotiations that preceded the wedding, held, it was clearly proved that the plaintiff was legally wedded wife of the defendant: A.I.R. 1984 Karn. 112 (D.B.).

Where a man and a woman lived together as husband and wife for a pretty long time and they were so recognised not only by close relations, but also by persons of the locality and there was also good evidence that the two married according to social custom, held, in such circumstances, legal and valid marriage between the two, as well as relationship of husband and wife must have to be presumed. [A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 135; A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 231; A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1557 and A.I.R. 1951 Ori. 337, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1989 Ori. 10: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 482: (1988) 1 Ori.L.R. 253.

The evidence of witnesses that a certain man and a woman were regarded as man and wife by the members of the community does not come within the purview of S. 50, not being an opinion expressed by conduct as to existence of such relationship of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, and there is no other statutory provision under which the evidence can be let in to prove marriage: A.I.R. 1933 All. 130: 1932 All.L.J. 208. See also A.I.R. 1927 Sind 126: 31 Sind L.R. 71.

A statement by a witness that a certain man and a woman were regarded as man and wife by members of the locality, does not come within the purview of S. 50. At the utmost this amounts to an expression of opinion, but according to the words of the section only that opinion is relevant which is expressed by conduct: A.I.R. 1949 East Punj. 35: (1948) 50 Punj.L.R. 151.

Where there was overwhelming evidence to prove that the parties had been living as husband and wife for a number of years and they were being taken as such by the world at large and even at the time of recording of the mutation which was sanctioned in the presence of the parties, their relationship was not denied, held, the parties' living as husband and wife for 25 years was evidence of marriage by habit and repute: A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 124.

Where the relationship of husband and wife was a fact in issue and the opinion expressed by conduct was testified to by the brother of the husband as well as by purohits, held, their evidence was admissible under S. 50 because the former was a family member and the latter had otherwise special means of knowledge about the relationship. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914, Foll.]: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 197 (Him. Pra.).

Where a party to the marriage testified that the marriage was performed in the saptapadi form, that the spouses had cohabited together for long and had children from their union who were treated by the community as their children, held, the validity of the marriage stood established by evidence of opinion by conduct: (1991) 1 Hindu L.R. 402 (Madh. Pra.).

Where the marriage was established by eye-witness evidence of performance of marriage ceremonies and other evidence also lent support to it, held, the conduct evidence of the couple treating each other as husband and wife is not required; the standards set out in the section need not be satisfied: A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 49.

Where in a suit for possession, the plaintiff denied that the defendant was legally wedded wife of his deceased brother but the defendant's witnesses had categorically stated that the defendant was married to deceased, owner of suit land, and that they had been seeing the deceased with the defendant living together as husband and wife, held, the defendant was the widow of the deceased owner: (1985-1) 87 Punj.L.R. 640: (1985) 1 Cur.L.J. 311.

Where the widow had testified to having been married to the deceased in saptapadi form which was solemnised in the presence of two other witnesses who were present at, and had been instrumental in settling the marriage, held, the evidence is relevant under S. 50 as opinion expressed by conduct; it cannot be discarded because the widow and the witnesses had not stated that she and they had been treating the widow and the deceased as husband and wife; that kind of evidence is necessary if there be no direct evidence of marriage: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 171 (P.&H.).

Evidence of a person witnessing performance of a marriage need not fulfill the requirements of S. 50; merely because he could not tell the names of persons constituting the marriage party, held, is not sufficient to disbelieve him where the marriage party belonged to a different village: (1980) 2 Hindu L.R. 45 (P.&H.).

Offering neonda (invitation) at the time of marriage of his relation, held, exhibits conduct which falls squarely within the ambit of S. 50: 1980 Rev.L.R. 230: (1980) 82 Punj.L.R. 308.

Plaintiff claiming to be the wife of M brought a suit for possession of certain properties against the defendant who claimed to be in possession as the legitimate son of M by another wife. The plaintiff herself, her husband and his brothers acknowledged and recognised defendant as legitimate son, his mother as lawful wife of M. This was long before the present litigation and at a time when there was no motive or interest on the part of any one to state anything calculated to help the defendant and his mother knowing it to be false. Held, that evidence of this kind was admissible under S. 50, Evidence Act, and the defendant must be held to be the legitimate son of M: A.I.R. 1956 Mys. 17: I.L.R. (1955) Mys. 578 (D.B.).

Where in a prosecution under Ss. 498-A and 304-A of the Indian Penal Code, the accused admitted that the deceased was his wife and his father had categorically deposed that the accused and the wife, married by exchanging garlands and reading out pramana patrika, lived together as husband and wife with one pregnancy terminated and a child born to them died, held, the prosecution has established the factum of the accused and the deceased to be husband and wife; marriage need not be proved by direct evidence of its solemnisation by the proof of requisite rites; the proviso to S. 50 was not attracted: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1666: (1989) 3 An.L.T. 529.

Where first wife of the accused contended that both the accused and second wife converted their religion into Islam and got married according to Muslim rites but the evidence revealed that they had no faith inIslam and they were not following Mohammadanism prior to or subsequent to the marriage, held, the marriage contracted for convenience without conviction in Mohammadanism by two Hindu (male and a female) could not be treated as a valid marriage: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1849: (1988) 2 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 252.

Where witnesses deposing to the second marriage were neither related to nor belonged to the caste of the parties and they deposed about attending the marriage feast and not marriage ceremonies gone through by the couple, held, their evidence fell far short of the requirements of S. 50; factum of the second marriage not established: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 11: (1985) 2 D.M.C. 176 (D.B.).

Where petitioner wife alleged that her husband contracted a second marriage during the subsistence of first marriage and the parties belonged to Kamma community where saptapadi was a must for a valid Hindu marriage but there was no proof that saptapadi took place, held, no valid second marriage according to Hindu law took place: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1849: (1988) 2 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 252.

When no relative of the parties was produced nor there was any other evidence to prove that the deceased and the defendant were ever recognised as husband and wife, held, the lower Court rightly concluded that the defendant could not be said to be widow of the deceased. [A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 124, Disting.]: (1982) 8 Hindu L.R. 620 (P.&H.).

Where two Roman Catholics entered into a registered agreement to marry each other and might possibly have exchanged rings but in the absence of proof that they had indeed solemnised their marriage in accordance with the requirement under the Indian Christian Marriage Act, held, mere long co-habitation as such and birth of their off-spring would not render either the marriage as valid or the off-spring as legitimate: (1988-1) 101 Mad.L.W. 76.

Where there was no direct evidence about the performance of second marriage but there was consistent evidence of witnesses to show that the lady in question was living with him, held, although parties had failed to prove the second marriage, it was clearly established that they were living together: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 105 (Bom.).

5. Adoption.—Evidence of notoriety of an adoption must be the evidence of a number of people who owing to their circumstances are in a position to say what the attitude of the alleged adoptive parent was towards the claimant. A mere statement as to an opinion does not come within the scope of S. 50, the only provision of Evidence Act, under which evidence of repute is admissible: A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 518. See also A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 181.

Where the fact of adoption has been acquiesced in by the members of the adopting family for a long period there is a very strong presumption in favour of the validity of the adoption and the burden is very heavy on the person who challenges the adoption. But this principle has no application if there is no clear evidence to the effect that for a long period the parties behaved on the footing that the adoption had been recognised: A.I.R. 1949 Ori. 27.

If unimpeachable oral evidence can be had from which a person can be found to have been treated as adopted son in the family covering over a pretty length of time and, where evidence of giving and taking is not available, there is no reason why the adoption should not be upheld on the identical principle purely on oral evidence: (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 635 (D.B.).

The fact of adoption must be proved like any other fact; but where a long period has lapsed between the adoption and its being questioned, every allowance for absence of evidence to prove adoption must be favourably entertained as direct evidence may not be available. But it is equally well settled, if direct evidence is available despite lapse of time, such relaxation is not permissible. Thus, where all those present at the adoption were not dead and were available to be examined held, the examination of only one witness claiming to have witnessed the adoption ceremony and whose evidence did not satisfy the requirements of Ss. 50 and 60, was not sufficient to prove adoption. [A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1286; A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 201 and A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 1359, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 22 (D.B.).

A person who claims title on the basis of adoption must prove the adoption and it has to be established that the essential ceremony of giving and taking did take place. That burden, however, shifts to the person who challenges the adoption to disprove the adoption when on account of long lapse of years, direct evidence of giving and taking has disappeared: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 171 (D.B.).

In a case where the fact under dispute was whether or not the plaintiff was adopted son of one G, held, deposition of a farm servant that he worked as sankhuna in the adoption ceremony and that the plaintiff called G as his father and G's wife as his mother, was admissible under S. 50: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.).

A witness cannot be disbelieved if he does not keep a note of the Tithi or the date when the adoption took place. Adoption is of no concern to a relation and there is no reason why a relation should be so over-zealous as to note the Tithi or the date of adoption of another relation: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.).

Where in a case in which the fact of adoption was in question, a witness who though related to the defendants and was produced by them was not going to gain anything by the decision of the case one way or the other, held, his testimony could not be rejected as that of an interested witness: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 120: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 809 (D.B.).

Ss. 50 and 32 (5)—Question whether M was adopted son of B—Document executed by W widow of B, stating that B had taken M in adoption during his lifetime is admissible under S. 50—Held, further as M was dead and statement was made before any dispute regarding M's adoption was raised, it was also admissible under S. 32(5): 1969 Raj.L.W. 507.

6. Paternity.—Where the paternity of a boy was in dispute, the School teacher's conduct in admitting him as the son of 'V' and having given him lessons in the School and marked his attendance was no expression of opinion that the boy was the son of 'V'. His testimony was not direct evidence within the meaning of S. 60 of the Evidence Act and, hence, teacher's testimony with regard to his conduct did not constitute evidence of paternity of the child in dispute within the meaning of S. 50: A.I.R. 1968 All. 58.

When there is other evidence available on the record, which proves paternity of a person, there is no necessity to resort to this section: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 901: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 235.

S. 50, falling under Ch. II of the Act, also deals with relevance of facts; thus, opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of relationship between two or more persons by a family member or otherwise having special means of knowledge on the subject is a relevant fact; such opinion evidence affords guarantee for its trustworthiness; thus, a mere statement about a person being son of another unless based on conduct is not admissible: (1991-1) 39 B.L.J.R. 720. See also 1986 All.W.C. 826; 1985 All.L.R. 74: 1985 All.W.C. 625.

The gathering of special means of knowledge is not confined only to the members of the family, but has been given a wide connotation by the expression 'otherwise'. Special means of knowledge must, however, be proved independent of the opinion expressed by conduct. If, however, the opinion of a third person is expressed by different types of conduct as expressing the opinion at different times, special means of knowledge would be established thereby.

Though the third person must himself form an independent opinion as to the existence of the disputed relationship, the Court is not precluded in a fit case to come to its own independent conclusion from the disjointed statements of facts not narrated in logical sequence.

In a case where the dispute related to whether A is the daughter of B, the opinion expressed by C—a third person who attended the marriage of A at which B acted as Kanyakarta—was held inadmissible under S. 50 of the Evidence Act for the reason that the single occasion as above could not be taken to establish the special means of knowledge of relationship in 'C'. It was so even though C's opinion had been expressed by his conduct that he attended A's marriage: 33 Cut.L.T. 740: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 430.

Evidence of a person whose Karna Guru was the deceased for fifty years and who had family relations with the deceased, held, is relevant to prove whether the girl in question was daughter of the deceased: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 154 (Ori.).

The opinion expressed by conduct will not in all circumstances entail requirement of stating that the witness was treating the person whose relationship is in dispute in a particular manner with whom such relationship has to be proved; conduct can be expressed by direct evidence like that of a nurse stating in Court that the named child was born to the named mother and that she herself was present at the time of delivery; so also the mother's evidence that she had given birth to the child: (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 449: (1992) 2 Rev.L.R. 174.

Nature of evidence admissible—Witness merely saying that A is the son of B or that they used to treat each other as father and son—Evidence not admissible under S. 50: (1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 83: 1968 Cur.L.J. 162, overruled on another point in A.I.R. 1973 Punj. 213.

Law presumes in favour of marriage and against concubinage. Long co-habitation raises a rebuttable presumption of wedlock. In a suit instituted by the father and his son a statement in the plaint by the father describing the son without describing as to whether he was an illegitimate son amounts to an acknowledgment that the son was legitimate. The fact that the descendants of common ancestor who were defendants in the suit did not challenge the legitimacy in the suit would be an important circumstance in favour of the legitimacy of the son. Similarly, a statement in a decree in a subsequent title suit by the father and his another son describing the son as illegitimate, which statement was based on a statement contained in the plaint is also admissible (it was, however, held that this did not outweigh the acknowledgment of legitimacy, made in the earlier suit). Acknowledgment and repudiation of legitimacy, both being conduct are admissible in evidence under S. 50: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 316.

Proof of paternity in case of a person claiming as illegitimate son. See I.L.R. 27 Mad. 32.

Where the plaintiff's own real mother stated that he was her son from her first husband, held, no reliance could be placed by him on kutumb register and voters' list where he was shown as son of his mother's second husband: 1983 All.W.C. 87 (Rev.).

'Acts amounting to conduct'—Dispute as to whether 'A' is the daughter of 'B'—Witness, a son-in-law of B, thus having special knowledge of the relationship between A and B, deposing that he had seen A's husband at Sradha ceremony of B—Witness's opinion as to the disputed relationship was held not expressed by conduct—Conviction of the witness that A's husband was the son-in-law of B could not be judged from the presence of the said person at Sradha ceremony of B: 33 Cut.L.T. 740: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 430.

7. Proviso.—The proviso applies only to cases under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, and prosecutions under Ss. 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code; it was inserted because strict proof of marriage was required: A.I.R. 1976 Ker. 34.

Though Ss. 498-A and 304-B were incorporated by amending the Indian Penal Code when the proviso to S. 50 was already on the statute book, the bar embodied in the proviso cannot be extended to criminal trials under Ss. 498-A and 304-B on the ground that though Parliament had intended but it did not correspondingly amend the proviso to S. 50; the presumption is that Legislatures enact law with complete knowledge of all existing laws on the same subject: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1666: (1989) 3 An.L.T. 529.

Scope and effect of—Charge under S. 494, Penal Code—Marriage alleged to have been celebrated according to Hindu rites—Proof of ceremonies—Nature of evidence required: A.I.R. 1970 Tripura 30.

In case of adultery and enticing away a married woman, fact of marriage must be strictly proved: I.L.R. 5 Cal. 566 (F.B.); 13 C.L.R. 125; I.L.R. 5 All. 233; I.L.R. 20 All. 166; (1915) 17 Bom.L.R. 75; 100 I.C. 535: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 140.

Proviso—Offence of bigamy—Strict proof of marriage is necessary—Parties to second marriage—Hindus—Ceremonies such as Saptapadi, not proved—Merely from presence of priest at alleged marriage presumption that all ceremonies must have been performed cannot be drawn: 1965 Kash.L.J. 125: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 640: A.I.R. 1965 J.&K. 105.

Proviso—Opinion of Court as to relationship of parties—Not sufficient to prove marriage—Admission of party not enough: 30 Cut.L.T. 294: (1964) 6 Ori.J.D. 160: 1964 All.W.R. (Supp.) 33: 1964 All.Cr.R. 463.

Contempt proceedings—Proviso to S. 50 is not applicable: A.I.R. 1970 Raj. 83.

8. Miscellaneous.—In a suit for partition, it is open to plaintiffs to give evidence regarding jointness of the parties and to prove that the immovable properties in dispute had been purchased from joint funds. Such evidence fulfils the conditions of S. 50, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 329.

The plaintiff's evidence that her grandmother used to say in the presence of others that the plaintiff being the sole descendent of her family would be the only owner of the suit property after her death, held, goes a long way in establishing her title when there is other evidence supporting her case: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 238.

Where relationship between persons is in dispute, a finding thereon in inter partes proceeding before a Settlement Officer, a public officer acting in discharge of his public duties, is relevant and admissible in subsequent civil suit between those parties: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 154 (Ori.).

Where the deceased had executed a special power-of-attorney in favour of a relation, held, even if that power-of-attorney was subsequently cancelled, it did not wipe out the effect of the admission made by the deceased about his relationship with the special attorney: 1980 Rev.L.R. 230: (1980) 82 Punj.L.R. 308.

51. Grounds of opinion, when relevant.—Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.

CHARACTER, WHEN RELEVANT

52. In civil cases character to prove conduct imputed, irrelevant.—In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned is such as to render probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

Section 51—Notes.

[See also Notes under Ss. 45 and 50].

Considering provisions of Ss. 48 and 51, it is undoubtedly true that while giving opinion evidence, it is not absolutely necessary for the person giving his opinion, that he should have personal knowledge about the facts sought to be proved by him. However, such a witness should possess sufficient experience which would go to suggest that he is 'likely to know' of the existence of the custom sought to be proved by him. In other words, the witness in question should possess experiential qualifications before his evidence gathers any credibility. If he fails in having this experiential qualification, he should show on what grounds his opinion is based. His opinion may be based on the study of some ancient documents; it may also be based on the personal inquiry conducted by him from the persons who are contemporaneous to the exercise of the custom in dispute; or it may be based on any other method which would give him reliable and true evidence about the existence of the custom. But so long as it is not found that the expression of his opinion is based on some such reliable information, his mere repetition of hearsay would not carry any weight. In other words, a mere ipse dixit of these witnesses is not admissible and relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, and would not carry any evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1971 Guj. 188 (D.B.).

The Excise Sub-Inspector is an expert in his own department, and is able to distinguish liquors, but the Court should under S. 51 ascertain the grounds on which his opinion is based so as to test it: 1935 Cr. C. 80; A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 13; 1959 Cr.L.J. 13: 1956 All.W.R. (H.C.) 216: A.I.R. 1959 All. 53. Chemical Examiners' report—Value of: 1933 All.L.J. 1617: A.I.R. 1933 All. 394.

Though the Excise Inspectors may be treated as experts in their own branch and may be able to distinguish liquors, it is the duty of the Court to ascertain from them the reasons on which their opinion is based in order that the Court may come to its own conclusion as to the correctness or otherwise of the opinion given by them: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 88 (1): A.I.R. 1961 Madh. Pra. 5.

Adoption—Ancient adoption—Evidence showing that the boy was treated for a long time as the adopted son at a time when there was no controversy is sufficient to prove the adoption although evidence of actual giving and taking is not forthcoming—Burden lies on the other side to show that the adoption did not take place: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 117.

Proof of contents of letters: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1206.

Section 52—Notes.

S. 52 deals with the relevancy of character evidence in civil cases. The character of a party to a civil suit cannot be relevant to the decision of an issue arising in that suit. But this section has no bearing on a case where the veracity of witness is in question. This is governed by S. 146, under which a witness can be cross-examined to shake his credit by injuring his character. Character evidence may not be relevant to decide an issue in a case, but cross-examining Counsel is given liberty under this section for the purpose of shaking the credit of a witness to put questions to him affecting his character. Ss. 52 and 155 deal with different matters. S. 52 prohibits character evidence in regard to the subject-matter of the suit whereas S. 155 prescribes the manner of impeaching

53. In criminal cases previous good character relevant.—In criminal proceedings the fact that the person accused is of a good character, is relevant.

the credit of a witness. S. 155 cannot, therefore, be construed as an exception to S. 52. Further Ss. 155 and 146 are not in conflict with each other. Ss. 138, 140, 145, 148 and 154, provide for impeaching the credit of a witness by cross-examination: (1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andhra) 39: A.I.R. 1954 Andhra 39.

Courts are primarily concerned with the questions of fact or law in controversy before them; they have to confine themselves to the materials properly brought on the record, uninfluenced by the parties, antecedents, activities, conduct, general reputation, controversies, unconnected with the suit transactions; to ensure a fair and impartial adjudication of matters in suit and to safeguard against the possibility of extraneous material influencing the judicial mind, particularly, the Courts should subject all materials on record to closer scrutiny or otherwise sift it appropriately: (1984) 25 Del.L.T. 1.

Where the civil Court discarded a witness's evidence not on the sole ground that he had previously been convicted by a criminal Court but also on other grounds, including circumstantial evidence, held, the Court committed no error in discarding his evidence: A.I.R. 1978 All. 215: (1978) 4 All.L.R. 181.

Earlier conviction of a defendant or his witness in a criminal case, held, is not very relevant in civil cases under S. 52: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 292 (D.B.).

Unchastity of woman—Allegation of unchastity made against second wife in written statement of husband in maintenance suit filed by former—Question not considered and suit dismissed as not maintainable—Title suit filed by daughter—Question whether second wife was unchaste—Allegations in written statement in maintenance suit held not admissible in evidence in title suit: (1970) 2 An.W.R. 94.

Where the contention that certain pro-notes had been obtained from the insolvent while he was under the influence of drink, has been found to be baseless, held, mere general bad character of the insolvent would be quite irrelevant in a civil case to prove want of consideration: A.I.R. 1958 All. 54.

Section 53—Notes.

Evidence of character—Conduct—State of mind. See A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 51, cited under S. 8, supra. See A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 647 as to value of past good character.

Evidence of character, conduct and state of mind is admissible under Ss. 8, 14 and 53: 1980 M.P.L.J. 300 (D.B.).

Fact that accused is of a good character is relevant in weighing probabilities in doubtful case but it can be dispensed with in cases where prosecution case has not been proved: 1967 Cr.L.J. 52: A.I.R. 1967 Goa 4 (F.B.).

Ss. 53, 55—The evidence of general reputation and general disposition is relevant in a criminal proceeding. Under the Indian Evidence Act, unlike in England, evidence can be given both of general character and general disposition. Disposition mean the inherent qualities of a person, reputation means the general credit of the person amongst the public. There is a real distinction between reputation and disposition. A man may be reputed to be a good man, but in reality he may have a bad disposition. The value of evidence as regards disposition of a person depends not only upon the witnesses' perspicacity but also on their opportunities to observe a person as well as the person's cleverness to hide his real traits. But a disposition of a man may be made up of many traits some good and some bad, and only evidence in regard to a particular trait with which the witness is familiar would be of some use. But in any case, character evidence is a very weak evidence; it cannot outweigh the positive evidence in regard to the guilt of a person. It may be useful in doubtful cases to tilt the balance in favour of the accused or it may also afford a background for appreciating his reactions in a given situation. It must give place to acceptable positive evidence: (1964) 2 S.C.R. 378: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 608: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 682.

Where the accused's letters and his diaries as well as his subsequent conduct showed that he was a man with abnormal psychology, a sex pervert and an alcoholic addict, held, same was relevant in his prosecution for murder of his wife: 1980 M.P.L.J. 300 (D.B.).

[1][54. Previous bad character not relevant, except in reply.—In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Explanation 1.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

Explanation 2.—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.]

---

1. Substituted by Act 3 of 1891, S. 6, for the original section.

Section 54—Notes.

General evidence of bad character cannot in the first instance be given against accused unless evidence has been given that he has a good character in which case it becomes admissible: 7 W.R. 7 (Cr.); 6 W.R. 92 (Cr.); 2 L.L.J. 653.

In our system of law an accused starts with a presumption of innocence; his bad character is not relevant unless he gives evidence of good character in which case by rebuttal, the evidence of bad character may be adduced. Thus, where the trial Court in a dacoity and murder case took note of the fact that the accused persons were habitual 'law breakers', held, the trial Court's approach was incorrect: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1936: 1977 Cr.L.J. 1566: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 268. See also (1977) 4 Cr.L.T. 10: 1977 Ch.L.R. 20 (P.&H.).

Ss. 54, 11, 7, 8, 9, 14 and 15—Prima facie S. 54 cannot be given overriding effect. The section itself is not so worded as to be directly contradictory to the Ss. 7, 8, 9, 11, 14 and 15. What is made inadmissible is the evidence of bad character. True that the use of such evidence of prior transactions which is given by the prosecution must be confined within its proper and legitimate limits only. The Court cannot, merely because there was evidence of similar actions on the part of the accused some time previous, infer that the offence under inquiry must also necessarily have been committed by the accused, and to that extent one may with advantage restrict the operation of S. 11. If that were not done, under the provisions of the widely worded S. 11, the Court would be invited to hold the accused guilty or not by direct evidence regarding the crime charged but by means of evidence in respect of previous incidents. Very high degree of probability is required. Facts which are of merely probative force cannot be offered in evidence under the section.

If the evidence is relevant under S. 14 or S. 15 merely because it might show previous misconduct of the accused it is not inadmissible because of S. 54. In other words, S. 54 would not control the other sections.

It is doubtful if under the Indian Evidence Act, and evidence if relevant and satisfied the condition laid down in the various sections of the Court could possibly exclude it only on the ground that it may deepen suspicion against the accused: (1967) 69 Bom.L.R. 808: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1584: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 400.

In cases of crime where it is thought desirable by the prosecution to bring evidence of previous conduct of similar character to the suggested crime, before the jury, the intention of S. 54 is not infringed and evidence pointing to directly similar conduct is admissible; S. 54 refers to specific evidence of bad character not confined to acts similar to the crime, which was being investigated which may influence the jury on the question of motive which is dealt with in the same conviction. Such a motive must be the same kind of motive that in all probability actuated the mind of the accused or may have actuated his mind in committing the crime for which he is being tried: A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 469.

Evidence suggestive of the accused's bad character is not admissible: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 693: 1959 Cr.L.J. 1313. But the section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of the person is itself a fact in issue: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 430. See also A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 157.

Such evidence is not generally admissible to prove commission of offence: (1896-97) 1 Cal.W.N. 146; 5 O.W.N. 760: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 215. But see also I.L.R. 27 Cal. 139; I.L.R. 38 Cal. 408.

Where the bad character of the accused is not in issue, the constant reference to the accused as a goonda in the charge to the jury s bound to adversely affect the accused in so far as the crime against him is concerned: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 559: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1358; A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 693. But if the evidence of bad character is introduced in order to establish a relevant fact, which cannot be proved aliunde, the evidence of bad character is admissible. Evidence of previous conviction is admissible not as proof of bad character but as evidence to prove habit and association: I.L.R. 9 Luck. 22: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 355.

Where an answer to a question put to a witness is relevant to ascertain the motive for murder and not for determining whether the accused was of bad character, the question is admissible: (1978-79) 83 Cal.W.N. 248: (1979) 1 Cal.L.J. 119: 1979 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 129 (D.B.).

The fact that an accused is of bad character or is reputed to be a thief or a habitual thief is no evidence against him for a charge under S. 401, I.P. Code: 13 P.R. 1914 (Cr.): 26 I.C. 625. See also 60 I.C. 331: 5 P.L.R. 706.

Evidence of bad character of accused is admissible to prove the motive for crime: I.L.R. 5 Pat. 63: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 232; A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 430. See also A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 199: 1957 Cr.L.J. 325.

S. 54 of the Evidence Act cannot control S. 3(2) of the Official Secrets Act, 1923, and, therefore, the acts or omissions referred to in S. 3(2) of the Official Secrets Act, 1923 are relevant and do not run counter to S. 54 of the Evidence Act, 1872: 1989 Cr.L.J. 691 (Bom.) (D.B.).

Statement by a prosecution witness in a prosecution for riot, that he had brought a case under S. 107, Cr.P.Code, against some of the accused who had been bound over, is admissible not for proving the bad character of the accused, but as part of the res gestae, the events which had transpired before and which led up to the riot with which the accused were charged: 17 I.C. 565: I.L.R. 40 Cal. 367: 13 Cr.L.J. 821. As to evidence of conduct as affecting character, see 25 Sind L.R. 55: A.I.R. 1927 Sind 22.

In a proceeding under S. 110, Cr.P.Code the bad character of the person against whom the proceeding is started is itself a fact in issue. That being so, S. 54, Evidence Act, has no application. On the other hand, sub-S. (4) of S. 117, Cr.P.Code makes evidence of general repute admissible in evidence. Therefore, the objection that such evidence is not admissible under S. 54 cannot be entertained: 1961 B.L.J.R. 528.

In a proceeding under S. 110, Cr. P.Code, a list of crimes which a Police Officer has suspected the accused to have committed, is inadmissible to establish the reputation of the accused: 13 I.C. 102: 13 Cr.L.J. 9; 62 I.C. 543: (1920) 22 Bom.L.R. 1274.

The past history of a gang of dacoits would be significant only if an offence under S. 400, Penal Code, has been made out: (1911-12) 16 Cal.W.N. 69: 13 Cr.L.J. 39.

A statement elicited from a prosecution witness in a Sessions trial by way of cross-examination as to the opinion of another witness about the bad character of the accused, does not amount to evidence of bad character, when the statement was not elicited for the purpose of proving what sort of the character accused bore, but with the collateral object of showing that the other witness was resiling from the evidence which he gave before the committing Magistrate, and the admission of that statement does not, therefore, contravene the provisions of S. 54: I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 337. See also 1939 Pat.W.N. 627: A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 14.

In criminal proceedings, evidence of general bad character of an accused cannot be given unless general bad character of the accused is a fact in issue or unless evidence has been given of his good character. In cases under Ss. 400 and 401, Penal Code, general bad character of accused is not a fact in issue. The fact in issue in a case under S. 401 is a particular trial of bad character, namely, association for the purpose of habitually committing offences of robbery or theft. Evidence can be given of that particular trait of bad character but not of general bad character. In such a case evidence cannot be given that the accused is a murderer or immoral person or a cheat: 1960 Cr.L.J. 1204: A.I.R. 1960 Guj. 5: (1960) 1 Guj. L.R. 27.

Scope—General tendency of accused cannot be proved: 1968 Cr.L.J. 1584: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 400.

Bad character of accused—Relevancy in criminal proceedings: 1969 Cr.L.J. 129: A.I.R. 1969 All. 61.

Where the accused murdered the District Magistrate by throwing bomb and soon thereafter when he was apprehended by the public he confessed that he did so at the instance of

55. Character as affecting damages.—In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant.

Explanation—In sections 52, 53, 54 and 55, the word "character" includes both reputation and disposition; but [1][except as provided in section 54,] evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

ON PROOF

CHAPTER III

FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED

56. Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved.—No fact of which the Court will take judicial notice need be proved.

57. Facts of which Court must take judicial notice.—The Court shall take judicial notice of the following facts:—

his Guru as the District Magistrate had done great harm to his Guru and had also demolished his Ashram, held, when both the parties, i.e., the accused and the prosecution had led evidence in respect of character and antecedent of the accused, no prejudiced could be said to have been caused to the accused to attract S. 54. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 199; 1968 Cr.L.J. 1584, Rel. on]: (1987-1) 35 B.L.J.R. 127 (D.B.).

Use of previous conviction.—The wording of S. 54 is no doubt wide but the object clearly is to lay down that evidence of bad character including a previous conviction is as a rule irrelevant to help to establish an accused person's guilt but that is not to lay down that it may not be taken into account in passing sentence. [I.L.R. 39 Bom. 326, Foll.]: I.L.R. 52 Mad. 358: 56 M.L.J. 595.

Previous conviction, when can be proved: 1960 Cr.L.J. 1302: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 490.

S. 54 does not relate to the manner of proof of previous convictions, and relates only to the proof of previous convictions in certain cases: I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 38: A.I.R. 1941 Sind 173.

Where a previous conviction is relevant with reference to the question of the applicability of S. 562, Cr.P.Code, and also on the question of punishment, it may be taken into consideration in giving punishment after the accused is found guilty: I.L.R. 39 Bom. 326: 26 I.C. 995. On this point, see also I.L.R. 5 Cal. 768: U.B.R. (1908) 2nd Gr. Evidence 1: 8 Cr.L.J. 411; U.B.R. Proper object of proof of previous conviction is to determine amount of punishment if the accused be found guilty of offence charged: 11 B.H.C.R. 90. See also I.L.R. 32 Mad. 526; A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 215.

Bad character—Relevancy—Previous conviction—Relevancy and effect of: (1970) 2 M.L.J. 668.

Evidence of dishonest intention of accused—Previous judgment convicting accused for same offence is relevant and admissible to prove such intention: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 787: A.I.R. 1961 Manipur 43.

1. Scope.—The list of facts enumerated in S. 57 of which judicial notice is permissible is not exhaustive or exclusive, and the tendency of modern practice is to enlarge the field of judicial notice. The rule of exclusion, which not a rule of universal application, should not be applied in construing statutes, when the application of this rule is calculated or likely to lead to injustice: I.L.R. (1960) 1 Punj. 303: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 272.

The list of facts mentioned in S. 57 of which the Court can take judicial notice is not exhaustive; the object of the section is to empower the Court to take judicial notice of certain facts rather than to exhaust the category of facts to be taken judicial notice of. Recognition of facts without formal proof is a matter of expediency; no one has ever questioned the need and wisdom of accepting the existence of facts unquestionably within public knowledge. The date of poll, the passing away of a man of eminence and events that rocked the nation need no proof and are judicially noticed; proof by judicial notice is of equal force: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1108: (1977) 2 S.C.C. 611: 1977 Cr.L.J. 947: (1977) 2 S.C.R. 991: 1977 U.J. (S.C.) 271.

Judges are entitled to take judicial notice of any notorious fact without requiring actual positive evidence: 24 M.L.J. 211: 18 I.C. 257.

Refusal to take judicial notice must be by the trial Court: I.L.R. (1960) 1 Punj. 303: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 272.

2. Sub-S. (1) of S. 57.—Court can take notice of historical facts taken into consideration in enacting a statute: (1984) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 113: (1984) 1 An.L.T. 286 (D.B.).

It is legitimate to look at the state of law prevailing leading to a legislation so as to see what was the mischief at which the Act was directed. The Supreme Court has on many occasions taken judicial notice of such matters as the reports of Parliamentary Committees, and of such other facts as must be assumed to

(7) The accession to office, names, titles, functions and signatures of the persons filling for the time being any public office in any State, if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in [1][any Official Gazette];

(8) The existence, title and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognized by [2][the Government of India];

(9) The divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts and holidays notified in the Official Gazette;

(10) The territories under the dominion of [2][the Government of India],

(11) The commencement, continuance and termination of hostilities between [2][the Government of India] and any other State or body of persons;

(12) The names of the members and officers of the Court and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and also of all officers acting in execution of its process, and of all advocates, attorneys, proctors, vakils, pleaders and other persons authorized by a law to appear or act before it;

(13) The rule of the road [3][on land or at sea].

In all these cases, and also on all matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact it may refuse to do so, unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so.

have been within the contemplation of the Legislature when the Acts in question were passed: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 387: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 31: (1980) 2 S.C.R. 77.

Judicial notice ought to be taken of such matters as the reports of Parliamentary Commissions and of such other facts as must be assumed to have been within the contemplation of the Legislature when the Acts in question are passed: (1955) 2 All E.R. 833.

Under S. 57(1), the Court shall take judicial notice of all laws in force in India; even if the definition of 'Indian Law' in the General Clauses Act is accepted as the 'law' in force in India, a notification cannot be said to be such a law; no judicial notice can be taken of a notification issued by any authority in the exercise of its executive functions; under the last paragraph of S. 57, the Court has a discretion to refuse to take judicial notice of a notification made in the delegated power of the legislation unless the notification is produced the production of the Gazette printed under the authority of the Government would be sufficient proof of the notification under S. 78 1984 M.L.J. (Cr.) 85.

A comparison of S. 57 and S. 78 goes to show that acts, orders or notifications of the Central or any State Government require proof in the manner prescribed by S. 78, unless they amount to law in force and can be taken judicial notice of under S. 57: A.I.R. 1977 Madh Pra. 68: 1977 Jab.L.J. 124: 1977 M.P.L.J. 176 1977 Cr.L.J. 597 (F.B.).

The bye-laws framed by the Municipal Committee in exercise of the powers conferred on it by S. 188(c) of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 constitute 'law' within the meaning of S. 57; the Court must take judicial notice thereof: A.I.R. 1972 P.&H. 199: (1972) 7 Punj.L.R. 67.

Bye-laws framed by a Market Committee under S. 19 of the Madras Commercial Crop Markets Act are framed in the exercise of delegated power of legislation and have the force of law and as such Courts can take judicial notice of them under S. 57 of the Evidence Act: 1961 Ker.L.J. 639: (1961) Ker.L.R. 62: 1961 Ker.L.T. 510: (1962) Cr.L.J. 546.

Judicial notice of a statutory notification issued by the State Government can be taken even without making the Government a party to the proceeding: A.I.R. 1972 P.&H. 46: 1971 Ren.C.R. 935.

Judicial notice of the notification issued under S. 4 of the W.B. Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 and published in the Gazette, can be taken even if only copies of it were placed before the Court. [(1970-71) 75 Cal.W.N. 880, Reversed]: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1713: (1987) 3 S.C.C. 465: (1987) 2 U.J. (S.C.) 310.

The notification, if any, issued under the provisions of the Madras Village Panchayat Act, would be saved under S. 18 of the Madras General Clauses Act, read with S. 121 of the States Reorganisation Act. A Court is not entitled under S. 57 to take judicial notice of any notification issued by the Government. The proof of the notification has to be offered either by production of the Gazette or a certified copy of the notification coupled with a proof of publication of the same, in the Gazette: 1967 M.L.J.(Cr.) 199: 1967 Ker.L.T. 161.

Production of a Gazette is sufficient proof of Court notification: A.I.R. 1928 All. 355.

A legislative notification is a law in force within the meaning of S. 57(1). Thus, the Court can take judicial notice of a legislative notification bringing into force the proviso to S. 34 of the C.P.Code, without further proof of the same: A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 302.

Notifications issued under S. 11-B and S. 123(2) of the Customs Act, 1962, are laws within the meaning of S. 57 of the Evidence Act and the Court is bound to take judicial notice of said notifications. [(1951) 52 Cr.L.J. 1361 (S.C.); A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 790; A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 460; A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1713 and A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1802, Rel. on]: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1217 (Ker.) (D.B.). See also (1971) 2 Mys.L.J. 422: 1972 Cr.L.J. 406.

A notification issued by the Central Government under S. 7(1) of the Telegraph Wires (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1950, empowering certain officers to make complaints in respect of offences under the Act, being legislative in nature, amounts to law and, therefore, judicial notice must be taken of the said notification under S. 57(1). [A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 296, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1977 Madh. Pra. 68: 1977 Jab.L.J. 124: 1977 M.P.L.J. 176: 1977 Cr.L.J. 597 (F.B.).

S. 4 of the T.N. Forest Act, 1882, requires that whenever it is proposed to constitute any land a reserved forest, the Government shall publish a notification in the Official Gazette and in the Official Gazette of the District; S. 6 says that when a notification has been issued under S. 4, the Forest Settlement Officer shall publish in the Official Gazette of the district a proclamation specifying as nearly as possible, the situation and the limits of the land proposed to be included within the reserved forest; if such notifications were not filed during the trial, they could not be filed in appeal: 1984 M.L.J. (Cr.) 85.

Kerala Forest Act, 1961 (IV of 1962), Ss. 19, 27—Offence under S. 27—Proof of notification under S. 19 necessary—No judicial notice can be taken—Notification is a public document—Proof—Nature of: 1966 Ker.L.J. 76.

S. 57 does not take in notifications of the kind required to be issued under S. 19 of the Kerala Forest Act, 1961 or under the corresponding provisions of the predecessor Acts, which are issued in exercise of executive functions of the Government; no judicial notice of a notification under S. 19 of the Kerala Forest Act can be taken. [1966 Ker.L.T. 1022; 1971 M.L.J. (Cr.) 302; 1970 Ker.L.T. 991 (F.B.); 1970 Ker.L.T. 691 and 1970 Ker.L.T. (S.N.) 17, Rel. on]: 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 295.

Presumption with regard to a notification in respect of reserve forest can arise if original notification or a certified copy thereof is produced: 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 295.

A copy of notification issued under S. 20 of the Indian Forest Act was attached to the chalan. But no steps were taken to prove the said notification in the manner required by law.

Held, that judicial notice of a Government notification cannot be taken by the Court under S. 57 of the Evidence Act, but the production of the Gazette printed under the authority of the Government will be sufficient proof of the notification under S. 78 of the Evidence Act: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 263.

Court taking into consideration—State Government Gazette for holding the relevant notification under S. 24(2)(b) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, had received previous publication: (1965) 1 Cr.L.J. 580: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 176.

The expression 'all laws in force in the territory of India' has not been defined in the Evidence Act or in the General Clauses Act, 1897. It is, however, pertinent to note that Art. 372 of the Constitution speaks of the continuance of 'all the laws in force in the territory of India'. There is no material difference between an 'existing law' as defined in Art. 366 (10) and 'a law in force'; that the words 'law in force' as used in Art. 372 are wide enough to include not merely a legislative enactment but also any regulation or order which has the force of law, that an order must be a legislative and not an executive order before it can come within the definition of law. Art. 366(10) of the Constitution makes no mention of a notification. But there can be no doubt that if a notification is a part of any Act, Ordinance or Order, it would be within the definition of law or existing law. If an order contemplated by Art. 366(10) must be one in the nature of a legislative provision, and if the order is not made by the Legislature itself, it follows that it must then necessarily be one made in the exercise of the power delegated in that behalf. Judicial notice can, therefore, be taken of a notification issued by the Government or any competent authority in the exercise of delegated power of legislation, as such a notification is a part of the law itself. Judicial notice cannot, however, be taken of a notification issued by any authority in the exercise of its executive functions. Under the last paragraph of S. 57, Evidence Act, a Court has a discretion to refuse to take judicial notice of a notification made in the exercise of delegated power of legislation, unless the notification is produced: 1956 Cr.L.J. 621: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 138 (F.B.).

Where the notifications related to orders of the Ruler of Gwalior State and they were published in various issues of the Government Gazette, held, that no proof of these notifications were necessary: 1959 Jab.L.J. 139: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 269: 1959 M.P.L.J. 505.

Proclamation of emergency—Court can take judicial notice of and disallow complaints of violations of Art. 19: (1964) 15 S.T.C. 505: A.I.R. 1965 All. 86.

Provisions of law—Courts have a duty to take notice of: I.L.R. (1960) 1 Punj. 303: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 272.

Notification by the Government declaring Mallah to be socially and educationally backward class—Ordinarily, the decision of the State Government would prevail subject, of course, to the right of a party to satisfy the High Court that it was based on irrational or irrelevant grounds: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 337 (F.B.).

Contention that Railway Amendment Act (XXXVIII of 1961) came into effect on 1st January, 1962 and, hence, applies to case not raised in lower Court though taken in revision petition—Judicial notice can be taken of law in force on any particular relevant date and such law alone is to be applied irrespective of whether any party referred to it or not—Amendment Act applied not because it is quoted by any party but because the main Act, by such Amending Act, was the law in force on relevant date binding on all parties and requiring no consent of any of them: A.I.R. 1968 Andh. Pra. 327.

3. Sub-S. (4) of S. 57.—The Court has to take judicial notice of the proceedings of both the Houses of Parliament and is expected to treat the proceedings of the two Houses of Parliament as proved on the production of the copies of the journals or the reports containing proceedings of the two Houses of Parliament which are published by them. Thus, as the Lok Sabha Debates and the Rajya Sabha Debates are the journals or the reports of the two Houses of Parliament which are printed and published by them, the publication in said journals is adequate publication of the resolutions of both Houses of the Parliament approving Proclamation of Emergency; it is not necessarily required to be published in Official Gazette: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 440: 1988 (Supp.) S.C.C. 401.

4. Sub-S. (6) of S. 57.—(See also S. 85, infra). The purpose of Ss. 57 and 85 is to cut down recording of evidence; for such matters, like the due execution of a power-of-attorney in the present day of international commerce, there is no reason to limit the words 'Notary Public' in S. 85 or S. 57 to Notaries appointed in India; they include the Notary Public of foreign countries also. [A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 761, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1976 Del. 263: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 71: 1976 Rajdhani L.R. 356: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 69: I.L.R. (1976) 1 Del. 559; (1992) 47 Del.L.T. 659.

A presumption of correctness arises in respect of a power-of-attorney attested in a foreign country, under Ss. 57 and 85, regarding the genuineness of the seal of the said Notary; no proof is required from that country as to whether the person attesting was in fact a duly appointed Notary or not: A.I.R. 1989 Del.

Signature of persons filling public office. See I.L.R. (1953) Patiala 267: A.I.R. 1954 Pepsu 84.

Honorary Magistrate's signature is taken judicial notice of only when made in his official capacity: 5 I.C. 537. Courts take judicial notice of attestation and signature of Sub-Registrar: 105 I.C. 422: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 154. As to signature of Justice of the Peace, see 1 Beng.L.R. 15 (Cr.).

The Court can take judicial notice of the signature of a Gazetted Officer of the Government and, therefore, the genuineness of his signature is not a matter which unless the Court deems it necessary, need be proved. The applicability of the sub-section is not contingent on the exhibition of a copy of Fort St. George Gazette containing a notification of his appointment as such officer: 44 M.L.J. 557: A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 600.

In 10 C.L.R. 469, the Court refused to take judicial notice of the seal of a Kazi or Sudr Amin whose appointment said to have been made about in 1820, was not proved. Though Courts take judicial notice of judgments, it does not follow that all statements of facts contained in judgments must be taken judicial notice of: 19 Sind L.R. 576: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 161.

Where a Food Inspector, required to be appointed by a Gazette notification, has claimed to have been so appointed in the complaint, held, the Court is bound to take judicial notice thereof; if the Court entertained some doubt, it had to refer to the Gazette itself if easily available or to require the complainant to produce the same; it is only on the Inspector's failure to produce it that the Court may refuse to take judicial notice: A.I.R. 1971 Ker. 193: 1971 Ker.L.J. 177: 1971 Ker.L.T. 19 (F.B.).

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, S. 20(1)—Notifications authorising Food Inspectors to institute complaints published in Official Gazette—Court is bound to take judicial notice under sub-S. (7): I.L.R. (1967) 2 Ker. 340: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1719.

A judicial notice of the sanction, under S. 29, Arms Act, can be taken under the provisions of S. 57(7) of the Evidence Act. Where the letter 'D.M.' with a signature which is not decipherable are found at the bottom of the endorsement, judicial notice can be taken of this signature under S. 57(7) of the Evidence Act. The words 'Prosecution sanctioned' can also be held to be proved. In view of the provisions of the Evidence Act which relate to the proof of public documents, no formal proof of this endorsement is necessary and it can be held to be proved as an original public document. The Police charge-sheet being a public document could be proved by its presentation in original and no other proof is needed. As the endorsement of the District Magistrate is on this very document, judicial notice of it can be taken under the provisions of Ss. 56 and 57(7) of the Evidence Act. There is thus, a valid sanction on the record of the case and it cannot be said that the proceedings are vitiated for want of sanction: 1960 Cr.L.J. 19: A.I.R. 1960 All. 40. As to judicial notice of power of-attorney given under seal of notary public, see I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 295: (1939) 41 Bom.L.R. 530: I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 347.

It is not necessary for the prosecution to prove the signature of the sanctioning authority on a sanctioning order as under the combined effect of Ss. 56 and 57(7) of the Evidence Act, the Court can take judicial notice of the signature and can justifiably make a presumption that the signature under the order of the sanction is the genuine signature of the authority concerned: (1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 318.

Trial Court after finding that accused contravened provisions of S. 18(a)(ii) and 18(c) of the Drugs Act—Acquittal on ground that the sections were not shown to have been brought in force in the State—Failure of prosecutor to produce notifications—Effect—Order of acquittal: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 443: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 477.

Appointment of Drugs Inspector—Judicial notice of—Copy of relevant notification need not be put as exhibit. See 1960 Cr.L.J. 845: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 243.

Signature of District Magistrate on sanctioning order—Proof of: A.I.R. 1958 All. 39: 1958 Cr.L.J. 9.

Prosecution under S. 39 read with Ss. 38 and 44 of Travancore-Cochin Medical Practitioners Act (IX of 1953)—Court is not bound, even on strength of S. 57(7) of the Evidence Act, to take judicial notice of Gazette notification contemplated by S. 1(3) bringing into force various sections of Act—Prosecution must not only produce but also put in as exhibit such notification to enable Court to record finding that prosecution has proved charge—In absence of such production and proof, conviction cannot be sustained: 1969 Ker.L.T. 629: 1969 Ker.L.R. 986.

6. Sub-S. (9) of S. 57.—Where though the order of detention under Gujarat Prevention of Anti-Social Activities Act, 1985 was passed on 13-6-1987, the grounds thereof were sent to the State Government only on 16-6-1987, held, though the Court may take judicial notice of the fact that 13th was a closed Saturday and 14th was Sunday, but the authorities could have prepared the papers on 15th and dispatched the same by post or otherwise to the State Government on 15th or 16th; failure to do so resulted in the non-compliance of the statutory mandate under S. 3(3) of the 1985 Act; continued detention was bad and illegal: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1573 (Guj.) (D.B.).

7. Sub-S. (10) of S. 57.—Under S. 57(10), the Court can certainly take judicial notice of the fact whether a particular territory is a part of India or not. If there were any public notification or declaration by which the Government declared a particular territory as a part of the territory of India, the Court would be bound to take notice of it. But the case of a foreign territory seized in course of a combat is different: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 49: 1972 W.L.N. 495 (D.B.).

"Territories as may be acquired"—Question as to whether Pondicherry is territory of India—Question forwarded to Union Government by Supreme Court—Answer received is binding on Court—"Pondicherry is not territory acquired" within the meaning of Art. 1(3)(c)—No appeal lies to Supreme Court—Per Majority (Sarkar and Das Gupta, JJ., Contra)—No writ petition can be entertained: A.I.R. 1962 S.C. 727.

8. Sub-S. (11) of S. 57.—Hostilities—Judicial notice of: 1968 Cr.L.J. 187: A.I.R. 1968 Manipur 23.

9. Matter of public history, literature, etc.—In order to prove ancient facts of a public nature, public histories of repute are receivable in evidence as public documents. The opinion of standard authors may be referred to. The Court, however, can dispense with the evidence of what may be regarded as notorious facts of public history. S. 60 makes provision for treating the opinion of experts as expressed in treatises of persons who are dead as evidence in proper cases. The authors of such learned treatises must be shown to be properly qualified to make statements upon the subject: A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 82: 1981 M.P.L.J. 429: 1981 Jab.L.J. 617 (D.B.).

Before judicial notice could be taken of passages in books relating to an alleged tradition something more than the mere existence of the passages would have to be proved before the passages could be regarded as evidence of the existence of the tradition. It must be shown that the writer had special knowledge of the alleged tradition or the tradition is a repetition of that given in the history: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 529. A Court may take judicial notice of the course of proceedings in the Legislative Assembly but there should be some indication on the record when and in what circumstances, the specified statements were made. The Court should also be careful to avoid the impression of mixing up proof of the making of the statements and of the truth of such statements themselves: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 298.

Under S. 57, the Court may presume that any book referred to by it for information on matters of public or general interest was written and published by the person at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published; on questions of public history, the Court can only dispense with evidence of notorious or undisputed facts. But before any judicial notice is taken of any passages in such books, something more than the mere existence of the passage would have to be proved; it must be shown that the writer had any special knowledge of the tradition or that the tradition was a repetion of what is given in the history. Thus, where there was no evidence on the record to establish as to who was the author and publisher of the book which was not produced by either of the parties before the Court, even during arguments, held, no judicial notice could be taken of the facts contained therein: (1992-1) 10 Punj.L.R. 193 (D.B); (1992-2) 29 Rev.L.R. 6 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

The statement of facts contained in the Official Gazette on private affairs or historical facts in some cases is the best evidence of facts stated therein; though entitled to due consideration, it is not conclusive of the matters requiring judicial adjudication; in an appropriate case where the evidence on record is not sufficient to prove the fact in issue, the statement of such facts in the Official Gazette may be relied upon without further proof as corroborative evidence. Thus, where the question in issue was whether Dhangars (by caste) of Bombay Province were governed by the Banaras School of Hindu Law, held, the facts stated in the Indore State Gazette regarding their social status and habitation may be relevant and may in an appropriate case presumed to be genuine but not conclusive; however, in complete absence of evidence to prove the party's family or ancestors' migration from Mathura area, the Indore State Gazette could not be accepted as sufficient to prove such migration for connecting Holkars of Indore with Dhangars of Bombay Province: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 306 (S.C.).

Facts of which Court may take judicial notice—'History of Hydraulic showing in India' by N. Barraclogh—Court may resort to this treatise by an expert as a document of reference under S. 57, penultimate para. even though it may not be admissible under S. 60, para. 5, first proviso, as not satisfying the tests of being offered for sale and the author being dead, unavailable, etc: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 1108.

It is clear from S. 57 of the Evidence Act that in all cases where the Court is bound to take judicial notice, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference. There is, thus, a duty cast on the Court to refer to the necessary documents for the purpose of taking judicial notice of something of which it is bound to take judicial notice. Therefore, if that were necessary, the Court should have looked into the Gazette or other book or document of reference for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the law here in question had been brought into force. It is only where a document of reference for the purpose of deciding such a question is not readily available that the question of the Court calling upon the party concerned to produce it would arise. Here both sides proceeded before the learned Magistrate on the basis that the provisions in question were in force. They were, in fact, in force; the Court apparently knew they were in force and, therefore, no question arose of the Court calling upon anybody to produce the necessary document, namely, the notification, much less prove it: 1970 Ker.L.J. 1011: 1970 Ker.L.T. 981 (F.B.).

Under S. 57, the Courts can take judicial notice of all matters of common knowledge like Ramayana being sacred to Hindus and Rama, Krishna, Brahma and Gandhi are held in highest esteem by them; they are 'notorious' facts of public history. The Courts can also take judicial notice of religious history, prevalence of a particular religious persuasion or faith or distinctions between the beliefs and ideas of different sects. And on all matters of history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort to reference books and documents: 1976 Cr.L.J. 98: 1975 All.L.J. 601 (F.B.).

The Court can take judicial notice of the facts that (a) Islam is an accepted religion of a large number of persons in India and outside. (b) Koran is the basic religious text or scripture of Islam. (c) The followers of Islam believe that Koran is of divine origin being revelations made by God to Mohammad, the Prophet of Islam. (d) The Koran is considered to be a holy book by the followers of Islam. Thus, where a writ of mandamus for seeking declaration that each copy of the Koran whether in original Arabic or in its translation in any other language be forfeited to the Government as it incited violence and insulted the religion or religious beliefs of other communities in India, held, the Courts could not sit in judgment over the Koran or the contents thereof in any legal proceedings: 1988 Cr.L.J. 739 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Undoubtedly a Court is entitled to take judicial notice of matters with which men of ordinary intelligence are acquainted and to act upon his general knowledge of local affairs. The Court can certainly refer to what is stated in the articles in journals and books by authors though living acquainted with such affairs as mentioned by them in their articles and books: A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 172: 1978 Pat.L.J.R. 96: 1978 B.L.J.R. 32: 1978 B.L.J. 1: 1978 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 86 (F.B.).

S. 57 would become nugatory if it is held otherwise, but treatise on Medical Jurisprudence cannot be looked into for weighing evidence of a Doctor when passages sought to be relied upon were not put to him in the witness box. [A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 172 (F.B.), Foll.]: (1989-2) 37 B.L.J.R. 18: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 186 (D.B.).

The question whether a particular village was granted to a particular person by a former ruler is not a matter of public history. It cannot really be contended that statements as to title of a certain person to a certain property, if found in some book written by somebody a century or two ago, would be relevant and admissible evidence to prove that title. Statements in Nensi's Khyat with respect to the grant of a particular jagir to a particular person is not a matter of public history, and therefore, Courts cannot take judicial notice of it: 1955 Raj.L.W. 338: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 45.

Russel's Castes and Tribes and the Report of Census are admissible in evidence under S. 57 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 133: I.L.R. (1952) Nag. 597.

The statements contained in 'Castes and Tribes of Southern India' by Thurston cannot be considered to be a conclusive authority in regard to the second hand information collected by him and not unoften found to be at variance with actual experience. There have also been marked changes in the customs and distinctive characteristics of all communities in South India since Thurston compiled his monumental works: (1955) 1 M.L.J. 355: A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 144.

10. Illustrative cases.—The list given is far from complete; and Anglo-Indian Courts take judicial notice of the ordinary course of nature, the meaning of English words, and all other matters which they are directed by any other Act to notice, such as in Bengal, lists of landholders who have not made road cess returns (Beng. Act IX of 1880, S. 19); in Madras, by-laws framed by the Commissioner of Police (Mad. Act III of 1886, S. 4); in Bombay, notifications in the Gazette, (Bom. Act X of 1886, S. 4); in Oudh, the list of talukdars and grantees published by the Chief Commissioner (Act I of 1868, S. 10) Whitely Stokes' Vol. II. p, 837). See also A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 463 (Sifton's Settlement Reports).

A Court can take judicial notice of facts transpiring in Court: 121 I.C. 337.

The Court is empowered to take judicial notice of facts and events which occur before it and are within its personal knowledge; such facts need not be proved; it is well settled that judicial notice is taken of the common affairs of life which are of general knowledge; matters formally known to the majority of mankind or to those familiar with a particular matter may properly be taken judicial notice of. Judicial notice is continuously extended to keep pace with advent of Art, Science and General Knowledge. Thus, where in a proceeding for demolition of a dilapidated building there was no mention in the Police report of incessant rains for 3 days and of forecast of further heavy rains, and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate residing in the same town passed demolition order stating that the structure may collapse at any moment because of continuous rains which is going on in the town for the last 3 days and there is forecast of heavy rains for coming 3 days from Meteorological Department, held, the Magistrate having personal knowledge could take judicial notice of rains while passing the impugned order: 1992 Cr.L.J. 379 (Bom.).

Notable event—Drought in Eastern Orissa for 3 to 4 years is notable event: A.I.R. 1969 Ori. 266.

Courts are bound to take judicial notice of prorogation and presume the regularity of these actions which must be interpreted as far as possible so that the thing done may be valid rather than invalid: (1969) 2 S.C.A. 299: (1969) 1 Jm. N.P. 60: A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 903.

Court can take judicial notice of fact that by 19th December, 1961 territories of Goa, Daman and Diu were completely liberated from colonial rule: 1969 Lab.I.C. 942: A.I.R. 1969 Goa 76.

The Court would be entitled to take judicial notice of the explosive ferment of mounting hatred on both sides of the Radcliffe line more especially in the month of August, 1947: (1960) 62 Punj.L.R. 241: A.I.R. 1960 Punj. 523.

It is a notorious fact of which the Courts are justified in taking judicial notice that in cases in which communal feelings have been exploited and communal frenzy has been worked up, violence has invariably resulted sooner or later whether such violence was advocated or not: 1957 Cr.L.J. 1361: A.I.R. 1957 All. 782.

It is true that a Court can take judicial notice of what are known as 'notorious facts', but the question whether the conditions in U.P. in February, 1950, so far as communal disturbances were concerned, were fully settled is a matter of opinion and somewhat controversial. The Court cannot smuggle into the evidence its own opinion of controversial situations disguised as notorious facts: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 724: A.I.R. 1963 All. 260.

Revision of wages and pay scales or dearness allowance—In such revision, Court can take judicial notice of commodity prices, general level of wages, appointment of Wage Boards to fix wages and revisions, if any, already taken place in some industries: (1967) 1 S.C.W.R. 730: (1967) 2 S.C.R. 463: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1175.

The practice of charging interest on the amount overdrawn is so common with the banks that the Court is justified in taking judicial notice of that practice: A.I.R. 1953 All. 637: I.L.R. (1954) 1 All. 268.

Judicial notice of Arrack. See (1955) 1 M.L.J. 54.

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that 'the present political movement' is in fact a movement prejudicial to the public safety or peace: I.L.R. 60 Cal. 351: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 186.

Where in respect of a land measuring about 5000 sq. ft. situated in a busy suburb of Pune, the plaintiff claimed mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 25 p.m. but there was no evidence to show that the land would have fetched such an amount, held, judicial notice could be taken of the fact that land so spacious could not but fetch an income of at least Rs. 25 p.m.: (1990) 2 Mah.L.J. 1056.

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that many blind persons have made a name for themselves and have acquired great academic distinctions: A.I.R. 1993 Pat. 22: 1992 B.B.C.J. 225: (1992) 2 B.L.J. 122: (1992) 1 Pat.L.J.R. 636 (D.B.).

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that congestion of road traffic naturally creates a very tense situation likely, at any moment, to result in causing accidents and damage to life and property; to avoid such accidents it is necessary to maintain proper and adequate road communication to ensure smooth traffic. Thus, if the Government decided to take immediate possession of properties under the urgency provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 for widening roads, held, it could not be said to have acted arbitrarily and without applying its mind: A.I.R. 1992 Karn. 241: (1991) 2 Karn.L.J. 143.

Though the Law Commission had in 1967 advised against the risk of abolishing death penalty as an experimental measure nevertheless even if there is no empirical study showing that the situation prevailing in 1967 was still continuing, held, the Court could take judicial notice of the fact that the law and order situation in the country had since not only not improved but it had deteriorated over the years and was fast worsening; the present was, therefore, the most inopportune time to reconsider the law on the subject: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 395: 1992 Cr.L.J. 514: (1992) 1 S.C.C. 96.

An accredited Ambassador or a Consul has always been and must be held to have sufficient authority to represent his Government; this is a matter of judicial notice: A.I.R. 1983 N.O.C. 75 (Cal.).

In writ proceedings challenging the right of pre-emption based on consanguinity contained in S. 15 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1913, held, the Court can take judicial notice of the fact of green, white and industrial revolutions in Haryana, which have led to setting up of industries throughout the State; they have also resulted in the State population being in a state of constant flux and movement whereby traditional integrity of the village and family as also the tribal loyalties have disappeared and weakened the family ties: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 859: 1986 Punj.L.J. 191: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 329: (1986) 2 S.C.C. 249: 1986 U.J. (S.C.) 642.

The Court can take judicial notice of the different ages of retirement prevailing in the several services in India; in almost all the public sector Corporations, Central Services and State Services 58 years age is considered to be a reasonable age of retirement. So, the determination of 58 years as the age of superannuation, by itself, cannot be considered to be arbitrary: A.I.R. 1987 S.C. 1527.

In a case filed by the retired employees for increase of pension amount, held, judicial notice can be taken of the fact that the rupee has lost its value to a considerable extent: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1407.

As explanation to S. 6(2) of the Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act, 1950 continues to be same without responding to the sea-change in the price structure, i.e., the value of rupee has been eroded to less than 1/10th of its original value, held, suggestions made by the Rajasthan Law Commission in the year 1993 on the lines of the Model Rent Control Legislation proposed by the Government of India, Ministry of Urban Development, in July, 1992, can be taken into consideration: 1994 D.N.J. 415 (Raj.).

The judicial notice can be taken of the fact that rent has escalated every where: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 184. See also A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 1444: (1986) 3 S.C.C. 385: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 325; (1991)2 Cal.L.J. 397: (1991) 2 Cal.H.N. 198.

Where a notification was issued for acquisition of a residential building in a congested area of the city for expansion of a College, held, the Court could take judicial notice of the fact that it is impossible to have alternative accommodation at a reasonable rent by a tenant who had been residing in such a building for a number of years; the tenants could not be asked to vacate without providing them alternative accommodation: A.I.R. 1985 Cal. 159: (1984) 2 Cal.L.J. 53: (1985) 1 Cal.H.N. 179.

The question as to whether in a given circumstance alternative accommodation is available or not is not a matter of which any judicial notice can be taken but is one which has to be proved by evidence. Thus, where the tenant brought no material on record to indicate that he made any attempt to seek an alternative accommodation and was unable to get it, held, the Court could not take judicial notice of the fact that no alternative accommodation was available to him: A.I.R. 1991 S.C. 266: 1990 All.L.J. 881.

It is well established that the Court is entitled to take judicial notice of facts which are of general knowledge. Some such facts are: (1) land values differ very materially in different towns in which Municipalities are established; (2) that different types of mills and factories require different types of buildings and that their relative value do not vary according to their floor areas and that; (3) buildings of mills and factories have different age and the value of a building decreases with its age: (1967) 69

Where acquisition of certain land for defence purposes, requisition order for which was passed in October 1966, was challenged, held, the Court could take judicial notice of the fact that the war with Pakistan started in June 1965 and, thus, it could not be said that there was no need of the land for defence purposes in October 1966. [A.I.R. 1969 Assam 7, Reversed]: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1957: (1981) 4 S.C.C. 283.

The Supreme Court took judicial notice of the fact that the vast majority of the petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution are filed solely for the purpose of obtaining interim orders and thereafter prolong the proceedings by one device or the other; the practice of granting interim order which practically give the principal relief sought in the petition just on making out a prima facie case, was deprecated: A.I.R. 1985 S.C. 330: (1985) 1 S.C.C. 260: (1985) 5 Guj.L.H. 25: (1985) 19 E.L.T. 22: (1985) 2 S.C.R. 190.

Judicial notice can well be taken of the fact as to how overburdened the writ jurisdiction of High Courts has become in the last two decades; therefore, it is hardly a sound discretion for the High Court to entertain a mere money claim in its extraordinary writ jurisdiction when the same can be adequately dealt with in other forums: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 304: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 708: 1976 Punj.L.J. 454: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Punj. 537 (F.B.).

If the Courts have recognised the custom in a particular matter for a long time, that is considered to be the law and it is not necessary to prove it. The Courts can take judicial notice of such a custom. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 1041 and (1922) I.L.R. 49 Cal. 120 (P.C.), Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 P.&H. 282: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 237.

Custom—Existence—If can be taken judicial notice of. See 1982 All.L.J. 543.

Nothing need be proved of which the Courts can take judicial notice. When a custom has been judicially recognised by the Court then it passes into the law of the land as proof of it becomes unnecessary: (1989-2) 104 Mad.L.W. 477 (D.B.).

Power of Court to take judicial notice of custom: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 1041.

What received judicial recognition of the Supreme Court in A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 266, A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 1118, A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 806 is the custom recorded in para 23(2) of the Rattigan's Digest dealing with the rights of unmarried daughters to succeed to the self-acquired property of their father in preference to his collaterals and not his mother who is not a collateral. Though para 23(1) refers to para 22, no decision had been cited wherein the Courts may have recognised the custom of the mother of the last male holder being preferred to his daughters; even by implication the Courts have not recognised any such custom: A.I.R. 1987 P.&H. 138: 1987 Rev.L.R. 35: (1987) 91 Punj.L.R. 247: I.L.R. (1987) 2 P.&H. 322.

The general custom under which the deceased's sister's sons are entitled to succeed to his agricultural lands in preference to his collaterals, held, is so widely recognised all over the Punjab that Courts are entitled to take judicial notice of the same without independent proof in each and every case. [1970 Cur.L.J. 85 (Punj.) and A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 1041 Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 306 (P.&H.).

Provided that the Court may, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

stand on a higher footing than evidentiary admissions; the former fully bind the party and constitute a waiver of proof; evidentiary admissions are, however, not conclusive ones: A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 471: (1974) 1 S.C.C. 242; 1978 Raj.L.W. 260; (1987) 1 Cal.L.J. 188: (1987)1 Cal.H.N. 220: (1986-87) 91 Cal.W.N. 971.

The plaintiff need not prove the averments in the plaint which have been admitted by the defendants in written statement: (1994) 2 An.L.T. 539 (D.B.).

Under S. 58, no fact need be proved in any proceedings which parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing. Hence, where a Counsel of a party admits a fact, it need not be proved against that party: 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 180: 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 274.

Admission by legal adviser—Party appearing as witness—Opportunity of explaining admission should be given—Natural justice—Rule of: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 901.

Where Counsel for the opposite party did not object to exhibition of a document while he was cross-examining the plaintiff's witness, held, it amounted to neither an admission of the document nor its contents; the Counsel could show that the document was not genuine so as to prove the defence: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 40: (1973) 75 Bom.L.R. 318: I.L.R. (1973) Bom. 1197.

Though it is true that an admission does not operate as an estoppel against the party making it, nevertheless it remains as an admission and, under S. 58, admissions are quite relevant to prove the facts admitted: 1948 R.D. 441(2): 1948 All.W.R. (Rev.) 252.

Law is well settled that an admission is not conclusive unless it amounts to estoppel. An admission is, however, a very strong piece of evidence. The maker thereof is, however, entitled to prove the admission to be wrong, unless displaced by satisfactory explanation an admission is also determinative of the facts admitted: (1973) 39 Cut.L.T. 774 (D.B.).

A document which is not a public document or not admitted cannot be exhibited and looked into unless it is proved by oral evidence or otherwise: A.I.R. 1986 All. 126: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 566.

Section applies to criminal trial as well as criminal cases: 27 Cr.L.J. 57: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 245. See I.L.R. 5 Bom. 143; U.B.R. 1907, Evid. 1; 6 M.I.A. 510 (proof of will); 6 B.L.R. App. 49 (proof of documents not disputed); I.L.R. 1 Rang. 405: A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 155.

Scope—Admission—What is—Kinds of admission—Judicial and extra-judicial admissions—Distinction: A.I.R. 1957 All. 1.

It is only when a witness denied his prior contradictory statement that it is required to be proved by its recorder; the earlier statement need not be proved unless the witness denies it and is required to be confronted with the contradictory portions of his earlier statement: (1972) 1 An.W.R. 33.

S. 68 relates to those documents which require to be proved at the trial of a suit. If by any rule of law or of pleadings, such proof is not required, S. 68 cannot operate to insist on formal proof by calling an attesting witness. S. 58 has to be read as overriding S. 68 and as obviating the necessity for calling an attesting witness, unless the execution of the will or the attestation is in dispute. Thus, in view of O. 8, R. 5, C.P.Code, in the absence of any such plea in the written statement, it will be the height of technicality and waste of judicial time to insist on examination of an attesting witness, before a document could be used as evidence. [1980 Ker.L.T. 493 held not good law]: A.I.R. 1990 Ker. 226: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 235: (1990) 1 Ker.L.J. 114 (D.B.).

Where the plaintiff himself produced the will and admitted its execution but impeached only validity of bequeathment of certain properties, held, it is S. 58, and not S. 68, which is attracted: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 284: (1994) 1 An.L.T. 217 (D.B.). But see (1990) 1 An.L.T. 17: (1990) 2 Hindu L.R. 536.

Where attestation of a registered will was not proved but a document mentioning the will and submitted to the Income-tax Department was admitted by the opposite party, held, the admission of the execution of document did not extend to the execution of the will; the will remained unproved and inadmissible: A.I.R. 1992 Andh. Pra. 270: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 655: (1992) 2 An.L.T. 495 (D.B.).

Where the plaintiff sued for a declaration that the sale deed executed by his virtually insane father in 1940 was void, and the plaintiff then being in his mother's womb and on attaining majority, he realized that the defendants were illegally trying to dispossess him which was contended by the defendants to be an admission in pleadings of the plaintiff attaining majority in 1961 as conclusive, held, the averment of the plaintiff was obviously to some extent misleading; it was neither unambiguous nor clear nor true; it was not a kind of admission which could be taken as conclusive in a Court of law: A.I.R. 1985 Pat. 158: 1985 Pat.L.J.R. 199: 1985 B.L.J. 261.

S. 58 cannot be used to bind the party who has made an admission of the genuineness of a document, when such admission is accompanied by a legal plea that the contract and the other facts mentioned in that document could not be relied upon by the opposite party owing to the provisions of the statutory law relating to registration: A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 12.

Court can base its decision on admission of parties—Trial Courts finding on admission of wife and other evidence that child was conceived by petitioner before marriage. It is not right for High Courts to remit issue for recording finding on question whether the child was conceived after marriage: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 364.

An admission in a pleading is 'binding' in the case in which it is made; it certainly is not binding in the sense of dispensing with proof in a subsequent case. But, that does not mean that it has lost all evidential value. It still remains a piece of evidence which can be used on any subsequent occasion. [A.I.R. 1969 Bom. 153, Foll.; A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 144, Expl.]: (1984) 1 Ren.C.R. 52: (1984) 1 Ren.L.R. 428: I.L.R. (1984) 1 Del. 214.

Admission in pleadings to be binding must be taken as a whole—Admissions in witness box: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 364.

While a Court of law is entitled to accept a part of the evidence of a witness and to reject another part, a pleading cannot be so dissected, but must be taken either as a whole or left alone altogether. In other words, if a written statement contains an admission of certain facts which are favourable to the plaintiff but contains a denial of other facts favourable to him or an assertion of other facts which are unfavourable, the plaintiff must, if he wants to avail himself of the admission, take not only the first set of facts as truly stated, but also other second set of facts: (1954-55) 59 Cal.W.N. 223: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 465.

Admission in written statement—Cannot be disjuncted from other portions of the pleading: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 294.

A plaintiff cannot be allowed to dissect a written statement; if the plaintiff wants to avail of those parts of the written statement or the additional written statement which are favourable to him and to discard the other parts not favourable to him, such dissection of written statement being not permissible, the plaintiff's suit cannot be allowed to succeed in view of the variance between the written statement and the evidence of the defendant: A.I.R. 1985 Cal. 233 (D.B.).

Splitting up the pleadings in the written statement is impermissible. [A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 364, Foll.]: 1980 Hindu L.R. 654 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

Admissions made in a suit have special value in view of the provisions of S. 58 of the Evidence Act. But admissions made in other proceedings though relevant, would not be conclusive and it can be shown that the admission made is incorrect or based on a misunderstanding: I.L.R. (1962) Bom. 139: (1960) 62 Bom.L.R. 336: A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 136.

Fact admitted in pleadings—No need to read evidence to prove them: A.I.R. 1969 Bom. 255.

Admission in pleading conclusive between parties—Differs from evidentiary admission: 1969 Cur.L.J. 979 (Punj.).

Construction of pleadings—Should not be construed strictly: A.I.R. 1968 Del. 68.

Documents marked on admission—Effect—Proof of contents of document—When necessary: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 191.

Absence of specific denial—When there is no case by defendant in his written statement that date of birth mentioned by plaintiff in his plaint was wrong, he cannot be allowed to dispute correctness of plaintiff's birth date: 1966 Ker.L.J. 1076.

Where the defendant admits execution of thumbmark on the khata bahi of the plaintiff indicating the liability to pay a certain amount with interest, but, denies in his written statement and deposition on oath, that the mark was obtained by exercise of undue influence, and that he was minor when it was executed. It is not possible to spell admission of liability on the part of the defendant from the bare execution of the document. The admission is qualified and is not sufficient to fasten liability on the defendant under S. 58: 1964 Raj.L.W. 573: I.L.R. (1965) 15 Raj. 31: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 47.

Essential facts constituting cause of action—Proof of—Burden on plaintiff unless it is admitted: A.I.R. 1963 Cal. 500.

An admission in pleading as to the execution of a document dispenses with the necessity of proof of execution even though such document is one required by law to be in a certain form or proved in a certain way. But such an admission does not dispense with the proof of the right of the plaintiff to sue on such mortgage when he is only a transferee of the mortgage right and when there is a denial of the transfer in plaintiff's favour: I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 420: A.I.R. 1944 Sind 61.

Ordinarily, an admission may dispense with a formal proof of the thing admitted; but if the thing sly after complying with certain legal requirements in certain forms and such requirements have not been complied with, an admission, however, clear and unconditional, cannot be pressed to cure such illegality. Thus, where the mortgage was to be created by a registered instrument under the relevant laws of Sikkim but had not been so created, held, a suit for redemption of such mortgage cannot lie and must fail and even admission of the defendants as to the factum of mortgage in their written statement and otherwise could not cure the illegality and sustain the suit for redemption: A.I.R. 1980 Sikkim 1: (1978) 1 Sikkim L.J. 23 (D.B.).

(Partition admitted—Unregistered deed—If admissible). Admission made in course of examination—No necessity to prove. See 8 Bur.L.T. 18. Mortgage unregistered—Effect of an admission. See 6 Bur.L.T. 131: 20 I.C. 666.

Admission of mortgage in written statement—Proof of loss of original or contents of certified copy—Not necessary: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 898. Admission of mortgage in pleadings—Attestation by one witness—No proof required. See 4 Bur.L.T. 182: 11 I.C. 850. See also 20 Nag.L.J. 21: 169 I.C. 323; 13 Nag.L.R. 121; I.L.R. 42 Bom. 352: (1918) 20 Bom.L.R. 354; I.L.R. 42 Mad. 41: 35 M.L.J. 555.

. Suit to recover mortgage-money—Executants of mortgage-bond and their minor sons parties to suit—Executants admitting mortgage—Proof of execution—Effect of not filing original mortgage deed: A.I.R. 1959 Ori. 126.

The object of S. 58 is only to use the admission of execution of a document as an alternative to its formal proof; such admission is not a lever to circumvent other provisions of law like inadmissibility of an unstamped or insufficiently stamped document under S. 35 of the Stamp Act: A.I.R. 1977 J.&K. 61: 1977 Kash.L.J. 79 (D.B.).

Unstamped document—Execution admitted in pleadings—No relief can be granted on basis of admission as it would amount to acting upon unstamped document: A.I.R. 1968 Mad. 294; A.I.R. 1957 Raj. 47.

In spite of waiver of proof by an admission under S. 58, a note or other instrument insufficiently stamped cannot be acted upon or decree given upon it, unless apart from the note, there is an independent cause of action for the loan: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 117: 64 M.L.J. 79.

Suit on promissory note—Defendant admitting execution and pleading discharge—Promissory note subsequently discovered to be insufficiently stamped—Objection to suit—Sustainability: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 693: 63 M.L.J. 303.

When an agreement sued upon is admitted by the defendant, proof of it is dispensed with. A Court cannot dismiss a suit based on an admitted document on the ground that the document was not sufficiently stamped: 4 Bur.L.T. 171: 11 I.C. 810. See also (1947) 2 M.L.J. 116: A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 422.

When the fact of an execution of a document is admitted, it need not be proved and this would be so even when the document in question is not admissible on account of any provisions of the Stamp Act. Where in a suit to recover amounts lent on unstamped handletters, the defendant admits the execution of the documents but only pleads substitution of liability by the execution of another promissory note and partial discharge towards it, there is no necessity for the plaintiff to adduce proof of his claim by seeking to get the handletters admitted in evidence. The plaintiff will be entitled to a decree on the failure of the defendant to substantiate the plea set up by him in defence: A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 422: (1947) 2 M.L.J. 116.

Plaintiff admitting copy of document filed by defendant though original was in his possession—Production of original or proof of same is not necessary even though it is inadmissible for want of sufficient stamp: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 784.

The custodian appointed under S. 4 of Regulation (II of 1962) in respect of the branches of B.N.U. in Goa brought suits against the defendants on the basis of bills of exchange and promissory notes executed in favour of the branches of the Bank. The negotiable instruments could not be produced by the plaintiff in Court as they had been removed by the officials of B.N.U. elsewhere at the time of occupation of Goa by the Indian forces. The plaintiff had given in the plaint particulars of those documents and the execution of these instruments had been admitted by the defendants.

Held, (i) that as the execution of the negotiable instruments had been admitted by the defendants, their non-production in Court was of no consequence. They have to be deemed as good as lost and so the Court could adjudge the rights of the parties arising out of these negotiable instruments on the footing that they had been executed and accepted, and the sureties furnished respecting them, in the manner set out in the respective plaints; (ii) that the defendants who were parties to the instruments were immune from another suit at the hands of the endorsees of those instruments from B.N.U. the holder thereof, in view of the combined operation of Arts. 2, 34, 53, 70 and 77 of the uniform law on bills of exchange and promissory notes: A.I.R. 1970 Goa 11.

Fact alleged in plaint and not denied in written statement may be established as admission. See 4 Bur.L.T. 26: 9 I.C. 470.

The doctrine of implied admission can only be invoked when a party on whom the burden lies, fails to allege facts in support of it or when the facts specifically alleged by a party in support of its plea are not denied by the other party. Further, the doctrine of implied admission is invoked only against a party who was under obligation to allege certain facts. Moreover the rule of implied admission cannot be invoked where there is express evidence to the contrary. The failure on the part of a party to discharge the burden which lies upon it, give rise to an assumption against the party on whom the burden lies and not to an assumption in his favour. It would be strange if a party who fails to discharge the onus that lies upon it under law be given the right to take advantage of its own weakness and be allowed to erect an admission against the other party on the basis of its own default: A.I.R. 1957 All. 575.

Pleader consenting to admit inadmissible evidence in criminal case—Conviction on such evidence—Propriety: I.L.R. 39 Mad. 449: 28 M.L.J. 329.

Accused's pleader admitting possession of cocaine—Court acting on the same is irregular: I.L.R. 52 Bom. 686: A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 241.

Where the trial Court wrongly construed the written statement as admitting the plaintiff's plea of having entered the agreement of sale, held, the case remanded for proving the agreement by adducing evidence: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 32 (Pat.).

Where in a title suit the defendant, in his written statement, admitted that his father was married to plaintiff's mother in accordance with 'Henga' form of marriage, held, even though he did not come to the witness box in support of his said averment, he could not be allowed to say that there was no marriage between the above mentioned parties according to 'Henga' custom of marriage: A.I.R. 1981 Gau. 42 (D.B.).

Even where the allegation of adultery made by the husband in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage under the Indian Divorce Act, 1869, with a named adulterer was admitted by the wife, held, decree of dissolution of marriage could not be passed when that adulterer had not been made a party and the petitioner had not been excused from so doing on any of the grounds stated in S. 11 of the 1869 Act: A.I.R. 1988 Gau. 50: (1988) 1 D.M.C. 405: (1988) 1 Gau.L.R. 261: (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 93 (S.B.).

Where in a motor accident claim case, the owner of the vehicle contended that no reliance could be placed on the Insurance policy as it had not been formally proved, but he himself had relied on that policy to enforce the liability of the insurer to satisfy the full claim, held, the owner himself having invoked insurer's liability under that policy, the policy must be deemed to have been admitted by the owner: 1987 M.P.L.J. 633.

CHAPTER IV

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

59. Proof of facts by oral evidence.—All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence.

Where tenant in his affidavit did not deny the execution of rent deed which clearly showed the petitioner to be landlord owner and rather he admitted the execution of same as well as the terms contained therein but subsequently, took the plea that the said rent deed was obtained by fraud being perpetuated on him and his signatures thereon had been obtained by false mis-representation, held, the trial Court was justified in relying on the said deed. [A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1518, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1994 Del. 209.

Where the tenant admitted the receipt of notice to quit but challenged its validity on the ground that the landlord had only filed a copy prepared not from the original but from another copy of the notice, held, it was for the tenant to file the original notice received by him to substantiate his plea: A.I.R. 1978 All. 144.

Where plea of ownership of the shop in the plaint was not denied in the written statement and it was construed as an admission but since the proviso to S. 58 as also the proviso added to O. 8, R. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure vests discretion in the Court to nevertheless call for proof of the fact otherwise than by such admission, the Court may in appropriate cases use the discretion: A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 533.

Where the landlord, the trespasser and the sub-tenant's pleas were at variance, held, it is a fit case where the Court may require the proof of the fact otherwise than by admission: (1990-1) 31 Guj.L.R. 209: (1990) 1 Bom.C.R. 334 (D.B.).

Section 59—Notes.

Proof by oral evidence; (a) of adjustment of accounts. See Beng.L.R. (Supp. Vol.) (F.B.) 3; (b) of payment of money: I.L.R. 1 All. 442. Value of documentary evidence. When there is conflict of oral evidence, see 4 M.I.A. 403: 2 Beng.L.R. (P.C.) 4 (8). See also 1 M.I.A. 43.

Oral evidence of a solitary witness can be relied upon, if not discredited by other witnesses: 1972 B.L.J.R. 97: 1971 Pat.L.J.R. 587.

S. 59 permits proof of all facts, except contents of documents, by oral evidence; S. 118 lays down that all persons are competent to testify unless the Court considers them to be unable to understand the questions that may be put to them or answer those questions because of tender years, extreme old age, disease of body or mind or any other similar cause; S. 133 makes even an accomplice a competent witness though under S. 114(b) the Court 'may' presume an accomplice to be unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars. A prosecutrix is not an accomplice but a victim of the sex-offence; the Act nowhere provides that her evidence cannot be accepted unless corroborated. However, the Court must be alive to and conscious of the fact that evidence of the prosecutrix is that of a person interested in the trial's result; if she is an adult and possesses full understanding and her evidence is found truthful and trustworthy, the conviction can be based solely on the same; no rule of law or practice requires that it must necessarily be corroborated: (1990) 2 Bom.C.R. 630 (S.C.).

Per Mahapatro, J.—When the moot point is about the service under S. 7, Administration of Evacuee Property Act, proof of its contents alongwith proof of its issue and service has to be established. About the contents of the notice, there cannot be any oral evidence (vide S. 59 of the Evidence Act) they can only be proved either by primary or secondary evidence (vide S. 61); if the notice itself could not be produced before the Court and so primary evidence was absent, under S. 63(5), secondary evidence of that, if at all, might have been given by oral accounts of the contents of the notice by some persons who had himself seen it. Since the notice was a public document within the meaning of S. 74, the only kind of secondary evidence that could be given under S. 65(e) was by a certified copy of that document and no other kind of secondary evidence was admissible: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 338.

Oral evidence cannot be rejected on the ground that no documentary evidence was produced: 1971 Mys.L.J. (Sh. N) 66.

A tenant's oral evidence of having paid the rent in time supported by the money order receipts and letter of the Superintendent of Post Offices, held, is sufficient to prove timely payment: A.I.R. 1982 All. 44: 1981 All.W.C. 612: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 70.

Where in the absence of clear documentary evidence of the husband's second marriage, the husband examined only himself to deny it when he could have examined other witnesses from the village as it could not be believed that the entire village was inimical towards him, held, the oral evidence on record adduced on behalf of the wife should be considered not disjointedly and combined result of the oral testimony of all witnesses be considered and accepted; the second marriage stood established: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 432: (1987) 2 Karn.L.J. (Sh. N.) 294: I.L.R. (1987) Karn. 15 (D.B.).

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, S. 7—Charge under—Proof—Evidence of Food Inspector—Admissibility—Quantity of stuff carried—Not material: (1961-62) 66 Cal.W.N. 102.

Appreciation of evidence—Proof of fact—Does not rest on any prescribed quantum of evidence—Credibility of oral testimony is primarily the satisfaction of trial Court which has first-hand knowledge of witnesses: (1966) 1 An.W.R. 65.

Application by defendant for stay of suit under S. 34, Arbitration Act—Plaintiff denying existence, genuineness and validity of arbitration agreement—Trial Court is bound to record oral evidence or order that particular fact be proved by affidavit: A.I.R. 1968 Madh. Pra. 33.

Where due execution of the will was proved by its scribe and the attesting witnesses, held, its propounder had satisfactorily proved the will by its executant. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Gau. 94 (D.B.).

A title deed, being a solemn document, cannot be easily ignored; no inference can be drawn against its contents unless the person asserting the transaction to be benami is able to show that the ownership in reality vested in another person: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 131 (D.B.).

Conflict between oral evidence of eye witnesses and the medical evidence—Duty of Court: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 321.

Merely because the witnesses resiled from their previous statements on certain particulars, their evidence cannot be brushed aside as wholly unreliable; either party may rely upon it and the Court can come to its own conclusion; the maxim 'falsus in uno falsus in omnibus' is not a sound rule to apply in this country; it is the Court's duty where a witness has given unreliable evidence on certain particulars, to scrutinize the rest of his evidence with care and caution; if the remaining evidence is trustworthy and the substratum of the prosecution case remains intact, the Court should uphold the prosecution to the extent it is safe and trustworthy. [1970 S.C.D. 123, Foll.]: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 159 (D.B.).

Where the lower appellate Court did not consider the oral testimony of witnesses, held, it vitiated the lower appellate judgment which ceased to be binding on the High Court; Courts have to consider both oral and documentary evidence: A.I.R. 1984 Pat. 274: 1984 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 295: 1984 B.L.J. 572.

Where a child aged 5/6 years alone was said to have been the accused administering endrine poison to the infant but her testimony being inconsistent with her statement to the Police was rejected as unreliable, held, the accused could not be convicted for murder in the absence of direct evidence: 1979 Bom.C.R. 721 (D.B.).

Where after the accused had been charged in the Court for committing offences under Ss. 120-B, 417, 511, 462, 468 and 471 read with S. 34 of the Indian Penal Code, the complainant filed an affidavit in the Court that he had falsely implicated the accused at an official's instance whereupon the trial Court discarded entire prosecution evidence as unbelievable and thereby condemned all witnesses even before they were examined and the affidavit was formally proved and tested by cross-examination, held, even if the affidavit was filed bona fide, it could not be considered at that stage; the prosecution is entitled to test the truthfulness of the complainant's affidavit evidence; it is only after the prosecution evidence had been recorded that the Court could assess the affidavit's impact thereon; it is the totality of all features that ultimately mould the Court's final conclusion: (1985) 1 Bom.C.R. 609.

60. Oral evidence must be direct.—Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say—if it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it;

if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner;

if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds:

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such treatises if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided also that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

1. Scope.—See 12 Beng.L.R. (App.) 18; A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 363; A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 498; (1957) 1 An.W.R. 15: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 595 (object and principle of section). The evidence given by persons who say that they recognised after some time a particular person as the son of so and so cannot be excluded. That evidence really relates to their own perception when they saw that particular person after his appearance and the recollection of their past perception of the said person before his disappearance: (1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 9: A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 498 (S.B.).

It is a cardinal rule in the law of evidence that the best available evidence should be brought before the Court. Ss. 60, 64 and 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 are based on this rule: 1995 Cr.L.J. 76 (Ori.).

S. 60 lays down the basic rule of law of evidence that the proof of any fact in Court must be by direct evidence which is always the best evidence; evidence is direct when the witness deposes as to a fact perceived by him with his own senses; thus, the section excludes evidence of reputation, opinions and beliefs of others to prove the existence of any fact in relation to them unless the reputation, opinions or beliefs are themselves relevant; the latter fall in the category of what is commonly called hearsay evidence. [(1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 83, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 213: I.L.R. (1972) 2 Punj. 424: (1972) 74 Punj.L.R. 625 (F.B.).

It is inherent that oral evidence in order to be admissible should in all cases whatsoever, be direct: 1981 All.W.C. 13 (Rev.).

S. 48 read with S. 60 requires that the person who holds the opinion should be called as a witness. Statements made by deceased persons after the controversy had arisen and therefore inadmissible under S. 32 are not admissible under S. 48 or under S. 32(7). The value of the evidence, admissible under Ss. 32, 49 and 60 depends on the character of the witnesses who depose to what they heard from deceased persons and also on the characters of the deceased and whether they were expressing their own opinion or merely repeating hearsay: A.I.R. 1933 Sind 213. Statements cannot be called instances: I.L.R. 8 Luck. 455: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 246. See also (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 1103.

Prior statement—Mode of proof.—Ss. 60 and 67 deal respectively with the proof of oral and written statements. These two sections do not lay down that such statements can be proved only by calling the deponents: 1941 R.D. 503: 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 460.

Modes of giving evidence—Two alternative modes allowed by Act—Before second mode is adopted first has to be fulfilled—Depositions in prior judicial proceeding—Admission in present suit—Before admission conditions mentioned in S. 33 have to be fulfilled—Consent of parties is not enough: (1962) 3 Guj.L.R. 418: A.I.R. 1962 Guj. 68.

The state of mind of a person may be proved directly by the person himself giving evidence of his own mental feelings or indirectly by other witnesses speaking to the outward expression of the condition of the person at the time (res geste) by circumstantial evidence of facts which lead to an inference as to the person's state of mind. Where a witness merely asserts that the accused, charged with murder, entertained a suspicion that the deceased had murdered his father, without even mentioning the grounds of his knowledge as to the state of the mind of the accused, his evidence merely amounts to what he thought was in the mind of the accused and does not satisfy the requirement of S. 60: I.L.R. (1962) Andh. Pra. 313: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 70.

It follows from what S. 60 says that the witness proving the information must state in Court what the information was and a mere formal proof of the memo. of information by proving the signatures of the Police Officer who recorded it, will not be sufficient: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 715: 1964 Raj.L.W. 171.

Where neither the informant deposed to by the Police Officer as having given him information about some accused would carry prohibited liquor in a truck from Baroda to Ahmedabad and would be followed by other accused in a taxi nor the owner of the truck deposed to by another witness claiming to have been made the truck's nominal owner was examined as witnesses in the Court, held, the evidence was inadmissible for being hearsay: A.I.R. 1983 S.C. 906: 1983 Cr.L.J. 1276: (1983) 1 Crimes 1070: 1983 U.J. (S.C.) 722.

2. Direct and circumstantial evidence.—Legal evidence may be direct or indirect. Direct evidence is what is defined in S. 60 vis-a-vis oral evidence. As against direct evidence postulated by Ss. 60, 62 and 63, there is also another type of evidence known as circumstantial evidence. Therefore, when one speaks of direct evidence it is to distinguish it from circumstantial evidence. But both direct evidence and circumstantial evidence would be legal evidence: (1979) 2 L.L.N. 480: (1980) 56 F.J.R. 261: 1979 Lab.I.C. 1041 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the fact in issue is the particular time when an appointee filled up a particular post, held, that person's evidence thereon would be direct evidence within the meaning of S. 60; on that evidence being challenged, he would have to produce other evidence like the order of his appointment, if in writing; if he does not do that, it would be for the Court to determine on appreciation of evidence whether he should be believed; but his oral evidence is undeniably relevant and admissible: A.I.R. 1971 Ker. 193: 1971 Ker.L.T. 19: 1971 Ker.L.J. 177: 1971 M.L.J. (Cr.) 89 (F.B.).

Circumstantial evidence is evidence which without going directly to prove the existence of a fact gives rise to a logical inference that such a fact does exist. The conviction can safely be based on circumstantial evidence provided the several circumstances relied upon by the prosecution are established beyond doubt that the incriminating facts are such as to be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation on any reasonable hypothesis other than that of the accused's guilt. The circumstantial evidence, however, in case where a conviction is based thereon, should be scrutinised properly and then alone a conviction can be based on circumstantial evidence when the facts proved are incapable of explanation except the guilt of the accused. In certain cases the circumstantial evidence may be much more stronger than what is called a direct evidence: 1967 Cr.L.J. 484: 1967 Kash.L.J. 162: A.I.R. 1967 J.&K. 22.

Appreciation of evidence—Criminal trial—Circumstantial evidence—Where evidence is of circumstantial nature circumstances from which conclusion of guilt is to be drawn should in first instance be fully established and all facts so established should be inconsistent with any other hypothesis but guilt of accused: 1967 All.W.R. (H.C.) 352. See also A.I.R. 1967 Del. 14: 1967 Cr.L.J. 628; 28 Cut.L.T. 305.

Circumstantial evidence—Appreciation of—When can be made basis of conviction—Benefit of doubt: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 553: (1963) 2 S.C.R. 405: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 235: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 200.

Circumstantial evidence not excluded: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 498.

Murder trial. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 5: 1967 Cr.L.J. 357: A.I.R. 1967 Goa 21.

Abandonment of possession is a question of fact and it can be inferred or proved from circumstances or circumstantial evidence: A.I.R. 1967 Punj. 252.

3. Inadmissibility of hearsay evidence.— Rule against receiving hearsay evidence is designed to save people from indirect indictment on the basis of testimonial assertion which is per se not direct in character: (1991) 4 Karn.L.J. 398: (1991) 1 Crimes 688 (D.B.).

Hearsay evidence is treated as untrustworthy because the original declarant of the statement is not put on oath, nor subjected to cross-examination; the truth of the original statement is diminished in course of repetition; admissibility of hearsay evidence would open up opportunities for fraud, and would encourage substitution of weaker for stronger proof of a fact in issue or a relevant fact: (1971) 37 Cut.L.T. 477: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 960 (D.B.); 1982 M.P.W.N. 388.

The concept of what is commonly known as hearsay evidence is entirely different. When witness A says that B told him about the happening of event X (though B is not before the Court), A's assertion about the event X being not based on his own observation, he is not qualified to speak of it; hearsay evidence is inadmissible to prove a fact but it does not necessarily preclude evidence as to a statement having been made upon which certain action was taken or certain results followed: (1979) 2 L.L.N. 480: (1980) 56 F.J.R. 261: 1979 Lab.I.C. 1041 (Del.) (D.B.). See also 1982 M.P.W.N. 446.

Phipson in his Law of Evidence points out infirmities of hearsay evidence: (1) the source of hearsay may be irresponsible, neither stating on oath nor subject to cross-examination; (2) depreciation of truth by repetition; (3) opportunities of fraud it may open up; (4) tendency to protract legal inquires; and (5) encouraging weaker instead of stronger proofs. Phipson, however, did not consider such evidence as truly irrelevant. Statutory changes in England have made first hand hearsay admissible; even in India great evidentiary value is attached to dying declarations and retracted confessions. [1975 Lab.I.C. 986: 1975 Cur.L.J. 1 (P.&H.), Overruled]: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 381: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 842 (F.B.).

What a person finds as a result of investigation is absolutely shut out by S. 60 as hearsay evidence. It is the duty of the Court to disallow hearsay evidence even if it is not objected to by either side. Judges should stop witnesses from giving hearsay evidence: (1965) 6 Guj.L.R. 776: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 448.

Hearsay evidence—Admissibility in evidence. Per Majority.—It is true that the statement of the wife as to what her husband told her would be merely hearsay and would not be admissible in evidence as a statement of the husband but where the evidence of the wife shows that she herself was displeased with the party concerned and it was really to emphasize the displeasure of her family and its head that the husband's name was brought in the party concerned cannot derive any advantage from the technical objection to the reception of the husband's statement as being second-hand: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 72.

Hearsay evidence, what is—Distinction between fact and truth—Statement made to a witness by person not called as witness hearsay when object is to establish contents of statement—It is not hearsay when the fact of its having been made sought to be established mentioning an eye-witness in F.I.R.—Statement of person recording F.I.R. admissible to prove that informant mentioned as eye-witness. Held, on the facts of the case, that the evidence (of the person recording the F.I.R.) was inadmissible to prove that the particular witness named in F.I.R. was in fact present at the time of occurrence but it was admissible to prove that the informant had mentioned his name to the person recording the F.I.R.: 1961 M.P.C. 82: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 270: A.I.R. 1961 Madh. Pra. 45.

History sheet maintained in the Police Station is not admissible in evidence at all as proof of a man's character because it may be based on information that the Police receives from time to time. It would, therefore, be hit by the provisions against hearsay evidence: 1959 Cr.L.J. 694: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 342.

Hearsay evidence—Evidence of the person though not present at time of execution of distress warrant that the property of accused was found locked, is merely hearsay evidence and is inadmissible: 1969 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 241.

Statement of dead person having special means of knowledge—Even if such statement as based on hearsay is admissible, provided it is 'ante litem motam': 1965 All.W.R. (H.C). 75.

Opinion evidence is hearsay and becomes relevant only if the condition laid down in S. 47 is first proved. Thus, where there was oral evidence identifying the signature but the witness did not depose that he was familiar with the handwriting of the person whose signatures were to be identified, held, no reliance could be placed on evidence of such witness alone: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 290: (1974) 2 S.C.C. 660.

Where in an industrial dispute pertaining to the charge of fraud by a bank cashier established in a domestic enquiry wherein the complainant was not examined, and the Tribunal set aside the enquiry as based on 'hearsay' evidence, held, the Tribunal committed an error of law; the law is well-settled that the strict rules of evidence do not apply to domestic enquiries: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 673: (1982) 1 S.C.C. 143.

Though there is no bar against the reception of hearsay evidence by domestic tribunals, the extent of its receipt and use must depend on the facts and circumstances of each case and the principles of natural justice. [1975 Lab.I.C. 986: 1975 Cur.L.J. 1 (P.&H.), Overruled]: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 381: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 842 (F.B.).

Any person can give evidence about what he heard; but it would be inadmissible for proving the truth of that statement as hearsay; even before a domestic tribunal, it must be made in the presence of the persons against whom an enquiry is held; if made behind his back, it ought not to be treated as substantive evidence; this is one of the basic principles which cannot be ignored on the mere ground that domestic tribunals are not bound by the technical rules contained in the Evidence Act: 1973 Lab.I.C. 771 (Del.) (D.B.).

The rule against hearsay is patently unclear; a piece of evidence may be hearsay in one part and not in the other; thus, where the witness deposed that the Police Officer had told him that vehicles and drivers of the Janata Party were detained in the Police Station under the Home Minister's instructions, held, the evidence in respect of the Home Minister's instructions alone is inadmissible as hearsay: A.I.R. 1978 N.O.C. 173 (Gau.).

Admissibility of evidence actually heard by witness. See 1984 Cr.L.J. 209 (Bom.).

Where the testimony of a witness is entirely hearsay and on some matters, hearsay of hearsay, it cannot be admitted in evidence: 1958 M.P.L.J. 833: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 84.

Hearsay—Plaintiff deposing that his deceased mother gave names in respect of family pedigree—No corroboration by independent evidence—Statement is inadmissible—Not covered by S. 32(5): (1968) 2 M.L.J. 487: (1968) 81 Mad.L.W. 421.

A catalogue or a price list is a statement put out by the sellers regarding the price at which they are prepared to sell the goods or articles mentioned in it. It contains an invitation to make an offer, to purchase at the price stated which the seller is prepared to accept. It cannot be regarded as hearsay evidence. Any person who receives a catalogue can prove it and thereby prove the statement made by the sellers regarding the price at which he would be prepared to sell. Such a catalogue is, therefore, admissible in evidence without the seller issuing it being called in as a witness: I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 922: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 282.

Statement by person as to what another reported to him how far evidence, see 97 I.C. 785: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1003.

The failure of an advocate to object to the admission of evidence cannot so alter the character of testimony as to convert into corroborative evidence that which the law regards as merely fit for rejection as hearsay: I.L.R. (1963) 2 Punj. 263: (1963) 65 Punj.L.R. 1029: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 449.

Election Tribunals under the U.P. Municipalities Act are 'Courts' and the Act is applicable—Hearsay evidence, therefore, not admissible—Two out of fifty petitioners speaking to the fact that they were all misled by a mistake in the spelling of the name of a candidate—Statement of two on behalf of others is hearsay evidence not admissible: 1967 All.L.J. 5.

Where the truth of what A told B is in issue, what B says A told him is hearsay and inadmissible in the absence of evidence of A. The outlook would, however, be otherwise where the object of such evidence is not to establish the truth of A's statement but only the fact that A did make a statement: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 38: (1969-70) 74 Cal.W.N. 168.

A newspaper report as to proceedings of a Legislature is only hearsay evidence. Such report is not one of the documents referred to in S. 78(2) by which such proceedings may be proved: A.I.R. 1953 Him. Pra. 41.

Newspaper report—Presumption of genuineness—Proof of facts reported: (1961) 63 Punj.L.R. 794: A.I.R. 1961 Punj. 215: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 710. See also (1988) 2 Cal.L.J. 184.

Where the affidavits of those who had actually heard the Chief Minister's press statement were not filed but the reports carried thereabout in the press alone were filed in the Court, held, the press reports are no substantive evidence; they are not admissible: A.I.R. 1972 Goa 1.

Where on a charge of plying a car for hire without permit the constables only deposed to what a passenger told them (and that passenger was not examined), held, such evidence was excluded by S. 60: 1933 Mad.W.N. 1424. When hearsay relevant evidence, see (1904) 6 Bom.L.R. 34; I.L.R. 5 Rang. 18; A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 15: 52 M.L.J. 376 (P.C.); 24 Mad.L.W. 227: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1003; (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 1103 (evidence of family tradition).

Hearsay evidence—There is no rule against hearsay in giving first information—Cr.P. Code, 1898, S. 154: I.L.R. (1967) 1 Ker. 640.

Where A in his deposition refers to a talk he had with B, the accused, saying that he had scuffle or fight with deceased C, A who heard it so said can speak about it and that would be direct oral evidence in respect of that fact, and if A then spoke to D and D so says in Court, would become hearsay type of evidence as it would not fall under S. 60 of the Evidence Act with regard to the fact sought to be established in the case. Such evidence can become admissible under S. 157 of the Evidence Act, inasmuch as it is sought to corroborate the testimony of A. But that can arise only if A's evidence of such fact is to be corroborate. If, therefore, A does not refer to any such talk he had with B, the accused, in his evidence before Court, there cannot arise any question of corroboration and S. 157 of the Evidence Act cannot come into play for admitting evidence of D: 1968 Cr.L.J. 54: A.I.R. 1968 Guj. 11.

Where the witness saw the accused's wife running out of the house crying bachao-bachao and that the accused had killed the children and was going to kill her and he was also told by the wife of the accused's younger brother that the accused was killing the children, and another witness also heard the accused's wife that the accused had killed the children and would beat her with scissors, held, the evidence of both the witnesses is admissible; they are not hearsay but relevant facts. [1978 Cr.L.J. 26 (S.C.), Rel. on]: 1988 Cr.L.J. 627 (D.B.) (Del.).

4. Evidence of fact which could be seen.—No material can be relied upon to establish a contested fact which are not spoken to by persons who are competent to speak about them and are subjected to cross-examination by the party against whom they are sought to be used. If a letter or other document is produced to establish some fact which is relevant to the case, the writer must be produced or his affidavit in respect thereof be filed and opportunity afforded to the opposite party who challenges this fact. This is both in accord with the principles of natural justice as also according to the O. 3, C.P.Code and the Evidence Act, both of which incorporate these general principles: A.I.R. 1993 Del. 330.

5. Consent—Effect of.—The correctness of the contents of the letters cannot and does not stand proved as soon as it is admitted that the letter had passed between the parties: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1206.

6. Opinion evidence.—The portion of S. 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called to prove his opinion does not necessarily mean that it must be proved only by the person whose conduct expressed the opinion; it can be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion is evidence under S. 50 or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 141: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 44.

Opinion evidence—Not to be given by witness other than expert—Witness stating 'Signature seems to have been ceased' by accused—Witness not an expert—Evidence cannot be allowed: (1965) 6 Guj.L.R. 776: (1965) 2 Cr.L.J. 448.

As to persons, who can give opinion evidence, see I.L.R. 25 Mad. at page 209; I.L.R. 23 All. 37 (P.C). As to evidence of admission, see I.L.R. 5 Mad. 239; 4 L.B.R. 121; 2 Weir 762.

The object of identification of the dead body by the Doctor is to relate the post-mortem report to the dead body and to rule out all chances of confusion; therefore, the prosecution must establish by positive legal and admissible evidence that the post-mortem report relates to the dead body of the deceased; the doctor's evidence of such identification is obviously hearsay he having no personal acquaintance with the deceased: (1971) 37 Cut.L.T. 477: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 960 (D.B.); (1986) 3 Crimes 145 (Cal.).

Where a Doctor who examined the injuries was not examined and injury reports were taken in evidence under S. 294, Cr.P.Code, held, the injury reports could not be used by the prosecution for proving injuries on the injured: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1431 (Pat.).

A medical certificate tendered by a party without the medical man giving the certificate swearing an affidavit, is the worst form of hearsay evidence, because it is merely what the Doctor had told him in writing. The certificate is wholly inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 173. See also 1957 M.P.L.J. 633 (Report of Health Officer).

7. Opinion evidence as to relationship.— [See also S. 50]. When oral evidence is led to establish relationship, that evidence must be of an opinion and such opinion may be given by any person who has any special means of knowledge on the subject either being member of the family or otherwise, but such opinion must be expressed by conduct and such conduct can only be proved under S. 60 by a person who has actually seen or experienced the conduct which means an overt act. The opinion, which means coming to a conscious judgment or conviction, must emanate from the conduct exhibited showing that the person concerned has formed such a judgment or conviction: A.I.R. 1987 Ori. 187.

Opinion evidence as to relationship—S. 60 does not delimit the scope of S. 50—Opinion as expressed by conduct may be proved by any other acquainted with the facts constituting the conduct: A.I.R. 1968 All. 58.

Opinion on relationship expressed by conduct—Evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) is not admissible as proof of relationship: 1969 B.L.J.R. 932.

It is the conduct or outward behaviour which must be proved in the manner laid down in S. 60: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 171 (D.B.).

Proof of relationship by evidence of conduct—S. 50: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 480.

Requisites of S. 50—Opinion evidence of relationship—School teachers admitting boy into school, giving lessons and marking attendance—Conduct not such as could express opinion on the boy's paternity—Evidence not direct: A.I.R. 1968 All. 58.

Determination of relationship—Opinion expressed by conduct is admissible: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 481.

Evidence as to relationship—Quality of oral evidence has to be considered, besides any documentary evidence on point: 1969 B.L.J.R. 932.

Conduct of member of family—Person watching the conduct of members to be treated as person with special means of knowledge—Such person's evidence is admissible under S. 60: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 82.

Where the plaintiff and her witness both testified orally that the deceased during his life time and the plaintiff used to treat each other as father and daughter, held, it is not hearsay evidence because neither of them stated to be present when the deceased so conducted himself, it cannot be rejected on that count; it is indeed admissible evidence under S. 50: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 24: 1975 Rev.L.R. 567.

The plaintiff's evidence that her grandmother used to say in the presence of others that the plaintiff being the sole descendent of her family would be the only owner of the suit property after her death, held, goes a long way in establishing her title when there is other evidence supporting her case. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 914, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 238.

Rule of exclusion of hearsay evidence—It is relaxed in cases where marriage or relationship of one person to another has to be proved. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 50: 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 579.

Where in the absence of clear documentary evidence of the husband's second marriage, the husband examined only himself to deny it when he could have examined other witnesses from the village as it could not be believed that the entire village was inimical towards him, held, the oral evidence on record adduced on behalf of the wife should be considered not disjointedly and combined result of the oral testimony of all witnesses be considered and accepted; the second marriage stood established: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 432: I.L.R. (1987) Karn. 15: (1987) 2 Karn.L.J. (Sh. N.) 294 (D.B.).

The oral testimony of three witnesses to the effect that the husband was living with another woman who gave birth to a child during her cohabitation with the man, held, such evidence is admissible and establishes that the husband during the subsistence of his earlier marriage was living in adultery: (1986) 1 Hindu L.R. 379 (Madh. Pra.).

The fact of adoption must be proved like any other fact; but where a long period has lapsed between the adoption and its being questioned, every allowance for absence of evidence to prove adoption must be favourably entertained as direct evidence may not be available. But it is equally well settled, if direct evidence is available despite lapse of time, such relaxation is not permissible. Thus, where all those present at the adoption were not dead and were available to be examined held, the examination of only one witness claiming to have witnessed the adoption ceremony and whose evidence did not satisfy the requirements of Ss. 50 and 60, was not sufficient to prove adoption: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 22 (D.B.). See also (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 317 [A deed of adoption, even if registered, cannot be pressed into service to prove the factum of adoption, which, if challenged, must be established by oral testimony of persons who were present at the ceremony deposing to the effect that all the formalities including the act of physical giving and taking of the boy in lawful manner had taken place].

A person who claims title on the basis of adoption must prove the adoption and it has to be established that the essential ceremony of giving and taking did take place. That burden, however, shifts to the person who challenges the adoption to disprove the adoption when on account of long lapse of years, direct evidence of giving and taking has disappeared: A.I.R. 1985 Ori. 171 (D.B.).

Ancient adoption—Boy taken in adoption soon after birth—His evidence as to ceremony of giving and taking is hearsay: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1286.

Evidence of birth—Nature of evidence: I.L.R. (1961) Bom. 963: A.I.R. 1963 Bom. 25.

8. Evidence in case of fraud.—The party alleging fraud is bound to establish it by cogent evidence and suspicion cannot be accepted as proof. Unless, therefore, the proved circumstances are incompatible with the hypothesis of the person charged with fraud having acted in good faith, they cannot be accepted as affording sufficient proof of fraud: I.L.R. (1959) Cut. 526.

9. Proviso first.—In order to prove ancient facts of a public nature, public histories of repute are receivable in evidence as public documents. The opinion of standard authors may be referred to. The Court, however, can dispense with the evidence of what may be regarded as notorious facts of public history. S. 60 makes provision for treating the opinion of experts as expressed in treatises of persons who are dead as evidence in proper cases. The authors of such learned treatises must be shown to be properly qualified to make statements upon the subject: A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 82: 1981 M.P.L.J. 429: 1981 Jab.L.J. 617 (D.B.).

When the author of a book, a passage from which is relied on as to the usages and tenets of any body of men and family as of a person having special means of knowledge, is still alive, held, his opinion in aforesaid passage is not admissible in evidence because of the provisions of S. 60: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 206: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 153 (D.B.).

Facts of which Court may take judicial notice—'History of Hydraulic showing in India' by N. Barraclough—Court may resort to this treatise by an expert as a document of reference under S. 57, penultimate para. even though it may not be admissible under S. 60, para. 5, first proviso, as not satisfying the tests of being offered for sale and the author being dead, unavailable, etc.: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 1108.

Reliance to text-books without expert evidence. See (1917-18) 22 Cal.W.N. 745; I.L.R. 38 Mad. 466.

Proof of will—Proviso does not apply to original of will: (1967) 2 An.W.R. 83.

10. Miscellaneous.—A copy of an affidavit is not admissible in evidence where even the original affidavit is not produced and no case is made out for the admission of secondary evidence of the affidavit. [A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 593, Rel. on]: 1966 Cr.L.J. 1132: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 52.

Where a person, closely related to the victim as well as the convict, had filed an affidavit in the trial Court exonerating the convict of the offence of homicide not amounting to murder but was not examined as a defence witness, held, the Courts below had rightly ignored the affidavit; the law requires that a living person's evidence in judicial proceedings must be tendered by examining him as a witness in the Court and not by way of affidavit unless the law permits or the Court expressly allows it; non-consideration of the affidavits by the Courts occasioned no miscarriage of justice. [1978 W.L.N. (U.C.) 103: 1978 Cr.L.R. 328 (Raj.), Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 705: 1989 Cr.L.J. 845: (1989) 2 Crimes 181.

In appreciating oral evidence in each case it is to be seen whether the witness is truthful and whether there is anything to doubt his veracity in any particular matter in his deposition; if he is found to be untruthful on material facts the matter ends; if he is partly truthful, the Court may take the precaution of seeking some corroboration, adequate and reasonable to meet the demands of the situation; but it is not entitled to reject his evidence merely because he is a government servant, who, in the course of his duties or otherwise, might have come into contact with Investigating Officers and might have been requested to assist them. [(1985) 1 Scale 697, Foll.]: (1985) 60 Cut.L.T. 309.

Where in the absence of direct oral evidence, one witness orally deposed on the basis of information obtained from others that the vehicle at the time of the accident was being driven by a particular person, held, that particular person could not be said to have been proved as driving the vehicle when the accident occurred: A.I.R. 1983 All. 87 (D.B.). See 1981 B.L.J. 588.

Where the witness was independent and nothing special was suggested to him, held, his evidence is rightly believed by the Court below: (1991) 2 Rev.L.R. 45.

Evidence of statements made by a child to other people, or of conduct amounting to a statement, is not admissible in a criminal trial, when such child is not examined as a witness by reason of incompetency to depose: I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 180: A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 214.

Where the evidence of the witness examined for a party stands on no higher footing than mere hearsay evidence, it is not open to any Judge to exercise a dispensing power and to admit evidence not admissible by the statute, because to him it appears that the irregular evidence would throw light upon the issue: I.L.R. (1954) Cut. 265: A.I.R. 1954 Ori. 198.

There is a distinction between factum and truth of a statement. Statement made by a person who is not examined as a witness is hearsay and inadmissible when the object of the evidence is to establish the truth of what is contained in the statement. It is not hearsay and is admisible when it is proposed to establish by evidence not the truth of the statement but the fact that it was made: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 751. Where the informant of the first information report died a natural death before he could be examined as a witness, the evidence of the witness who recorded the report if inadmissible to prove that certain person was in fact present at the time of the occurrence but his statement is admissible to prove that the informant had mentioned his (eye-witness's) name to him: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 309: 1961 M.P.C. 82: A.I.R. 1961 Madh. Pra. 45.

Where the statement of a prosecution witness, examined earlier, to another prosecution witness, who is examined later, is sought to be made use of by the prosecution without the earlier prosecution witness having been asked about it in his examination, the earlier prosecution witness to whom the statement is ascribed must be given an opportunity to explain it. The witness should at least be recalled for the purpose. In the absence of such opportunity, the statement of the earlier prosecution witness is inadmissible in evidence: 1957 Nag.L.J. 1: A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 738.

A panchanama can never be treated as substantive evidence of the facts recorded therein. These facts have to be proved independently of the panchanama by the testimony on oath of the panch who had seen these facts and who was a party to the panchanama. The panchanama is useful only to corroborate or contradict the panch witness or to refresh his memory: 6 Sau.L.R. 517: A.I.R. 1955 Sau. 32.

Statements recorded in an inquest report by a headconstable as per direction and in the presence of the Sub-Inspector in a totally different case where no body would have thought of fabricating evidence in connection with the present case, can be deposed to by the Sub-Inspector in a case where these entries are relevant: 1969 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 168.

A statement of the Investigating Officer in the Inquest Report of what he observed and found on the spot is direct primary evidence; it is, in the eye of law, the best evidence; unless proved to be suspect, unreliable, perfunctory or dishonest, it may safely be relied upon; besides, not being a statement of a witness recorded in investigations, it is not hit by S. 162 of the Cr.P.Code. [A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 425; A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 667 and A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 135, Dist.; A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 1421, Expl.]: A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1558: (1978) 2 S.C.C. 518.

Report of the Probation Officer as to previous conviction of accused received behind the back of the accused cannot be used against the accused, when Probation Officer has not been examined, and his report has not been formally proved: 1957 Ker.L.T. 633: 1957 M.L.J. (Cr.) 655: 1958 Cr.L.J. 175.

'Statement of persons as to cause of his death or as to any circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death'—Conviction based on identification: 1967 Ker.L.T. 466.

Question whether woman is prostitute and running a brothel in her house—Proof—Nature of evidence: (1963) 2 An.W.R. 336: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 400: 1963 M.L.J. (Cr.) 529.

Where, none of the informants from whom, the prosecution witnesses had learnt about the bride burning was examined by the prosecution, held, the evidence of the prosecution witnesses is not admissible: (1992-2) 40 B.L.J.R. 779 (D.B.).

Where a prosecution witness in a bride burning case disclosed the complicity of a convict to whom the witness was inimical, for the first time only four days after the occurrence with no explanation therefor, held, his testimony as an eye witness cannot be relied upon: (1992-2) 40 B.L.J.R. 779 (D.B.).

Where except the oral testimony of Food Inspector there was no documentary evidence such as postal receipt, acknowledgment, receipt of sending memorandum and specimen of seal not produced, held, conviction could not be sustained: 1979 W.L.N. (U.C.) 389 (Raj.).

Trust property mortgaged with Life Insurance Corporation and loan raised for repairs of the property—Evidence of inspector who inspected the condition of the property—His evidence is primary evidence within S. 60 in so far as it refers to a fact which could be seen, and he says that he saw it but it is hearsay evidence in so far as he says that the object of the loan was to meet the expenses for repairs and additional constructions: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292.

A body corporate, being incapable of making an oath or affirmation, is incompetent to depose as a witness despite its being a juridical person; it is not invested with any of the sense organs to see, hear or perceive a thing: 1991 Cr.L.J. 828: (1991) 1 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 198: (1989-90) 94 Cal.W.N. 723: (1990) 1 Cal.L.J. 153 (D.B.).

Policy matters of company leading to retrenchment can be proved through the manager—Resolution of Board of Directors need not be produced: (1969) 2 S.C.R. 976: (1969) 3 Um.N.P. 144: A.I.R. 1970 S.C. 1334.

In many cases the Directors of the companies may feel inclined to make incorrect statements in the balance-sheet for ulterior purposes. While that is no reason to suspect every statement made in a balance-sheet, the balance-sheet does not by itself prove any fact mentioned therein and the law requires that such an important fact as the utilisation of a portion of the reserve as working capital has to be proved by evidence given on affidavit or otherwise and after giving an opportunity to the opposite party to contest the correctness of such evidence by cross-examination: A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 1006: (1960) 2 S.C.R. 906.

Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account of company—Evidentiary value—Admissibility in proceedings before Industrial Tribunal—Burden of proof as to correctness of statement therein: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 1029: A.I.R. 1962 Cal. 375.

Certificates, Reports of Experts—Value of—Admission in evidence: A.I.R. 1967 Andh. Pra. 338.

If the co-sharers pay their share of the land revenue to the lambardar, and sit silent, under the belief, that no untoward happening in respect of the village share would take place, their inaction cannot be blamed. Therefore, where a co-sharer, over and above his share of land revenue, advanced some extra amount to the lambardar, and the latter did not pay to the Government in consequence of which the whole village share was auctioned and purchased by the lambardar himself through his nephew for an amount little more than the money advanced. Held, that the circumstances definitely led to one conclusion that it was a deliberate device of the lambardar to get the property wrongfully and the fraud was proved. A suit to set aside such a revenue sale was not barred by S. 149 of the C.P.L. and

CHAPTER V

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

61. Proof of contents of documents.—The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.

Revenue Act, but it fell within the ambit of the same: 1958 M.P.C. 494: 1958 M.P.L.J. 648: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 11.

Kabuliat—Evidentiary value—Kabuliat can be used as corroborative evidence of oral lease for less than a year: 1962 All.L.J. 773: 1962 All.W.R. (H.C.) 646: A.I.R. 1962 All. 604.

Where a Special Officer appointed by the Court in proceedings under S. 144(2), Cr.P. Code, did not record the witnesses' statements in deposition form, held, such statements could not be taken as substantive evidence being hit by rule of hearsay: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 39 (Cal.).

Map prepared for suit purposes—Admissibility and value of: A.I.R. 1958 Ker. 358.

To measure up the work of the contract and to take such part of the work of the contract as shall be unexecuted out of his hands, and to give it to another contractor to complete in which case any expenses which may be incurred in excess of the sum which would have been paid to the original contractor if the whole work had been executed by him (of the amount of which excess the certificate in writing of the Executive Engineer shall be final and conclusive) shall be borne and paid by the original contractor and may be deducted from any money due to him by Government under the contract or otherwise or from his security deposit or the proceeds of sale thereof, or a sufficient part thereof. Per Majority.—Held that there was an agreement for the execution of work between the Executive Engineer and the Patna Flooring Company. Any work which was given in exercise of the powers under Cl. (2)(c) had also to comply with the provisions of Art. 299 of the Constitution. A contract entered into with the Government in contravention of S. 175(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, or Art. 299 of the Constitution was wide and unenforceable. The decision in Chatturbhuj's case (A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 236) could not be extended to cover a case where the Government had in fact not ratified the contract. The Legislature had not chosen to use the word 'agreement' but had used the word 'contract' in S. 7(d). Therefore, a mere agreement entered into in contravention of Art. 299 of the Constitution and in fact ratified could not be called a 'contract' within S. 7(d) of the Representation of the People Act. The fact that the plaint in the suit by the respondent against the Government for money the respondent was trying to make out that there was a direct contract entered into between the P.W.D. and the respondent and the fact that the plaint did not allege any subsequent non-acceptance or refusal to ratify by the Government would not estop the respondent from proving in this case that on the materials on record it was clear that the Government had not ratified the contract with the respondent. The written statement filed by the Government in the money suit could not be used to destroy the inference which clearly arose from other documents in this case. Per Hidayatuallah and Shah, JJ. contra—There was a contract directly between the respondent and the State of Bihar relating to the execution of work, and the contract was made in the course of the respondent's trade or business. The admissions made by the respondent in his notice and the plaint in suit were sought to be explained by him on the plea that he had signed the plaint and the verification without reading the plaint of the suit as the plaint was required to be filed in great hurry. A similar explanation was also given in respect of the contents of the notice. This Explanation which was invented with a view to get out of the inconvenient admissions could not be accepted: (1966) 1 S.C.A. 532: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 580.

Where in a prosecution for murder alleged to have been committed in a passenger bus, though the observation report prepared by the Investigating Officer revealed that the floor of the bus in question appeared to have been washed, but he had not spoken so in his evidence, held, said observation report should be proved like any other document as per the provisions of S. 60: 1995 Cr.L.J. 3100 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Proof of contents of documents. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 47: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 112.

Section 61—Notes.

See A.I.R. 1953 Pat. 310: 54 Cr.L.J. 1660. A combined reading of Ss. 61 and 62 show that the contents of a document must primarily be proved by production of the document itself for inspection of the Court; the truth of its contents, however, has to be proved by the author of the document. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

Documents relied upon must be placed on the Court's record; they have to be legally proved; they do not prove themselves; an authority acting thereupon without their being proved by witnesses, held, commits a grave procedural infirmity: A.I.R. 1989 Pat. 66: 1988 B.L.J.R. 698: 1988 B.L.J. 1069: 1989 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 787.

It is only when a witness states that the contents of a document were written in his presence by a person then it can be said that said witness had proved writing of that person: 1982 Cr.L.R. 39 (Mah.).

Proof of execution of a document is no proof of the truth of its contents; the truth of the facts stated in the document, if denied, has to be proved by admissible evidence; under S. 61, the contents of documents are to be proved either by primary or secondary evidence and under S. 62 "primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court". Even on such proof the Court is not bound to accept the contents, unless it is satisfied about their truth. [A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 2085, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1983 Ker. 81 (D.B.).

Where execution of the deed of rectification in respect of an earlier sale deed was proved but it was not exhibited on the ground that its contents were not proved, held, the document stood proved as soon as its execution was proved; the proof of contents was wholly irrelevant; proof of contents may be necessary in a given case but its proof and evidentiary value are two distinct and different factors: (1994) 1 Bom.C.R. 211 (D.B.).

Where documents filed by a party are on the Court's record but not proved, held, they can be looked into without further proof at the instance of the other party: A.I.R. 1984 Del. 20.

The law is clear that documents admitted without being proved and without objection by the party affected cannot be discarded; the entire contents of such documents would become admissible; mode of proof, a matter of mere procedure, can be waived, and may not be allowed to be objected to later on; but statutorily inadmissible evidence cannot be rendered admissible by consent: (1978) 46 Cut.L.T. 287.

Once a document is marked on admission, contents thereof are also treated to be admitted but not its truth. Truth of correctness is to be ascertained from the evidence: A.I.R. 1993 Ori. 103.

It is elementary that documents, inducted in a suit as proof, have to be proved under the Act so that their contents can be taken as evidence; the Court is not obliged to look into the contents of documents merely marked by consent unless they are formally proved; the Act permits judicial notice of only certain documents and of no other document: (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. 297. See also (1986) 1 M.L.J. 207.

The principles of law laid down in (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. 297 are not wholly erroneous but require modification in the light of the earlier Division Bench judgments in (1974) 2 M.L.J. 535 and (1974) 2 M.L.J. 260, the correct position being that "permitting a document to be marked by consent only means that the party consenting is willing to waive his right to have the document in question proved"; the single Judge in (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. 297, however, took the erroneous view that formal proof is still required even if the document was marked by consent; marking by consent, however, certainly does not mean that every statement made therein is correct: A.I.R. 1986 Mad. 341: 1986 T.L.N.J. 1: (1986) 1 M.L.J. 283: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 561 (D.B.).

When the documents had been marked without objection, it is not open to the parties to object to their admissibility. Once the documents are properly admitted the contents of those documents are also admitted in evidence though those contents may not be conclusive evidence: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 869.

Where the certified copies under S. 57 of the Registration Act, of the sale-deeds were tendered and exhibited in evidence without objection, held, it amounted to the admission of the requisite circumstances and conditions for secondary evidence; no objection could be taken for the first time in appeal: A.I.R. 1990 Raj. 90.

Where the Counsel for the opposite party did not object to exhibition of a document while he was cross-examining the plaintiff's witness, held, it amounted to neither an admission of the document nor its contents; the Counsel could show that the document was not genuine so as to prove the defence: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 40: (1973) 75 Bom.L.R. 318: I.L.R. (1973) Bom. 1197.

C.P.Code (1908), S. 75 and O. 26, R. 1—Contents of document—Proof—Evidence of attesting witness—Non-production on the ground that he was leper—Not proper—Leper held could be examined on commission: A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 29.

Recitals as to legal necessity in documents—Recitals are not by themselves proof of facts asserted—If the deeds are challenged at or near the time of execution, when independent evidence is available, the recitals are no proof of facts asserted: (1966) 8 Ori.J.D. 94.

Proof of contents of documents. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 47: A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 112.

The fact that the man producing a document used the same to settle disputes between the villagers, and that before him the document was in the possession of his father, does not make the document a true copy of the original (chitta): 49 Cal.L.J. 546: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 459.

Proof of document—Document produced from proper custody and drawn upon stamped paper purchased in name of alleged executor—Held, document was properly proved: (1967) 69 Punj.L.R. 578.

Balance-sheets relating to accounts do not prove themselves and the facts mentioned therein have to be proved by evidence given on affidavit or otherwise and after giving an opportunity to the opposite party to contest the correctness of such evidence by cross-examination: I.L.R. (1963) 2 Punj. 28.

Where impugned document showed that there was an account between the parties and in view of the account certain amount had become due, held, such a document could not be considered to be a promissory note even though there was an amount ascertained which was payable to the person named and there was promise to pay; it would not fall within S. 4 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881; it would only amount to an agreement or acknowledgment of the amount due found on account stated; it would be admissible even if not stamped: A.I.R. 1995 Raj. 189.

Proceedings before Special Deputy Commissioner/Special Tehsildar appointed under Mysore (Personal & Miscellaneous) Inams Abolition Act, 1955 are not judicial proceedings and provisions of Evidence Act do not apply to the vouchers produced by the Inamdars before those authorities in support of their claim as to income from the Inams for determination of compensation: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1363: 1971 U.J. (S.C.) 564.

Factum of mortgage or passing of consideration is not 'contents of a document' within the meaning of S. 61.

Proving of the factum of a mortgage is not the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage nor is proving the consideration for a mortgage the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage: 1958 Raj.L.W. 457: I.L.R. (1958) 8 Raj. 459.

In a suit based on mortgage bond, the plaintiff filed day book and ledger but did not prove them though they were marked, nor were they put to the defendants in their cross-examination, held, mere marking of an exhibit does not dispense with its proof; thus, the said documents could not be used against the defendants: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1865: 1971 U.J. (S.C.) 644.

Since offences under S. 277 and under the later part of S. 506 of the Indian Penal Code are not compoundable, a compromise recorded to compound such offences in a criminal case is void ab initio under S. 23 of the Indian Contract Act; the compromise is inadmissible as well as incapable of being acted upon by the Court: A.I.R. 1979 All. 71.

Where the certificate issued by the Director of the Central Food Laboratory in a prosecution under the Food Adulteration Act, 1954 was not exhibited, held, it could not be used to enter conviction: 1989 Cr.L.J. 53 (Andh. Pra.).

If truth of the facts stated in a document is in issue, mere proof of its execution would not furnish evidence of their truth which would have to be proved by admissible evidence, i.e., by the evidence of those persons who can vouchsafe for the truth of the facts in issue. But once the receipt of the cable and letter of the Managing Director was admitted by the other party and in the correspondence between them it made no overt or covert reference to the arbitration agreement and did not even reply to the letter and cable to controvert the averments made therein, held, it unmistakably established the truth of the averments in the cable and letter: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 2085: (1981) 1 S.C.C. 80: (1981) 1 S.C.R. 899.

An entry in the Municipal Death Register containing several corrections, erasures and overwritings exhibited without objection only means that its formal proof was not insisted upon; but it does not mean that the opposite side cannot question its genuineness or credibility or contents; it only means that the other party cannot contend that the document has not been admitted in evidence, but it can certainly impeach the document and its contents in all other possible manners: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 125: (1977) 2 Cut.W.R. 779: (1977) 44 Cut.L.T. 597.

Where the claim of being in exclusive possession of a property was based on entries in the revenue records but none of the witnesses had accepted the responsibility of testifying to the correctness of the account books of the joint family and no other important documents were produced in support of the account books, held, the account books were liable to be rejected: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1269: (1989) 2 S.C.C. 630: (1989-2) 30 Guj.L.R. 1051.

In a motor accident claim case, the Tribunal cannot disbelieve a witness on the ground that being at a distance of about 225 feet from the place of accident, inferred by the Tribunal from the spot Inspector report prepared by the Magistrate which was neither produced nor proved before the Tribunal, and was, therefore, no evidence, held, the Tribunal acted erroneously; besides, evidence in criminal case cannot be used to discard the testimony of a witness recorded before the Tribunal itself: A.I.R. 1984 Madh. Pra. 173 (D.B.).

Where a sale agreement in its recitals conveys title to the vendee with absolute rights of alienation but without consideration, held, the document amounted to a sale deed even if it provided for execution of a regular sale deed; being unstamped and unregistered, it is not admissible. [A.I.R. 1961 Andh. Pra. 424, Foll.]: (1984) 2 An.W.R. 105: (1984) 1 An.L.T. 158.

Where a deed could not be construed either as recording a prior partition or a family settlement but was found to be a deed of partition, held, it required to be registered; being unregistered, it was inadmissible. [A.I.R. 1961 Ori. 41 and A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 807, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 173 (D.B.).

Where a witness, an S.D.O., in support of his evidence, relied upon a complaint handed over to him by one 'A' but 'A', after seeing the same in the Court stated that it did not bear his signature and also deposed that there were two other persons with same name as his, held, as neither the contents of said complaint were proved nor maker thereof had been examined, it was inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 3: 1985 (Supp.) S.C.C. 611.

Where persons were detained under the T.N. Prevention of Dangerous Activities of Boot-leggers, Drug Offenders, Forest Offenders, Goondas, Immoral Traffic Offenders and Slum Grabbers Act, 1982 on the basis of an occurrence which took place on 25-11-1991 at 3 P.M. but they alleged that they had in fact been arrested much earlier on that day and telegrams about their arrest had been sent to various authorities, and they impeached their detention solely on the ground that the detaining authority did not consider the telegrams, held, a telegram by itself is not an authentic document; it is like an unsigned/anonymous communication; unless it is confirmed by a subsequent signed application, representation or affidavit, its contents have no authenticity and is irrelevant for assessing the value of other authentic documents on the record; the detaining authority could not take the telegrams into consideration in the absence of any subsequent communication confirming the same: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2633: 1993 Cr.L.J. 3677: (1993) 2 Crimes 1189.

Where two boys arrested and interrogated by Army authorities found to be innocent were released after two days but did not reach home were sought to be produced in the Court by habeas corpus petitions moved by their mothers and the Army authorities by affidavit in opposition of the Brigade Major and other documents, not challenged by the petitioners, supported their plea of release which was assailed by the petitioners as fabricated documents of counterfeit release after the boys had been done to death by the Army, but the single Judge on the findings that the boys were in fact released, as claimed, dismissed the petitions—Held, on appeal, the findings of the single Judge were based on documentary evidence and non-return of the boys to their homes did not negative their release; strict provisions of S. 61 could not be applied to the facts and circumstances of the case; appeal dismissed: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1912 (Gau.) (D.B.).

Where the medical evidence reckoned the age of the prosecutrix approximately between 16 to 18 years of age and the Doctor in cross-examination admitted that it could be 19 years, her School leaving certificate was produced but it was not proved and the birth entry admittedly made in the Gram Panchayat was neither produced nor proved, and there was also difference in the date of her birth given by her parents, held, it could not be said that the prosecution has established the age of the prosecutrix as less than 18 years: 1979 Bom.C.R. 664.

Mutation in landlord's rent-roll—Proof of. See A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 521.

Where what was introduced in evidence by the plaintiff, albeit with no objection from the opposite side, was an exercise book, without page numbers, containing some slips of papers and none of the entries therein was proved by any witness, held, they do not constitute evidence under S. 34; non-objection by the opposite party does not take away the Court's right to question or scrutinise its evidentiary value; not having been proved as required under S. 61 by primary or secondary evidence, the documents must be brushed aside as mere scraps of paper not kept in the regular course of business. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1058, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1995 Gau. 23.

62. Primary evidence.—Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation 1.—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document;

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2.—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but, where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustration

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Section 62—Notes.

The original, even in case of a public document, is its best evidence and always admissible; S. 62 and S. 64 which characterise the originals as primary evidence and admissible as such make no distinction between public and private documents: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

A combined reading of Ss. 61 and 62 show that the contents of a document must primarily be proved by production of the document itself for inspection of the Court; the truth of its contents, however, has to be proved by the author of the document. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

Proof of execution of a document is no proof of the truth of its contents; the truth of the facts stated in the document, if denied, has to be proved by admissible evidence; under S. 61, the contents of documents are to be proved either by primary or secondary evidence and under S. 62 "primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court". Even on such proof the Court is not bound to accept the contents, unless it is satisfied about their truth. [A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 2085, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1983 Ker. 81 (D.B.).

Documents are required to be proved by primary evidence; it is only under certain circumstances when the original is not available that the secondary evidence may be admitted: 1982 Raj.L.W. 284 (D.B.).

Where the question for consideration was as to whether the command certificate or the oral evidence that a witness was on patrol duty is the primary evidence, held, the statement of that witness that he was on duty was the primary evidence and the command certificate was merely a piece of corroborating evidence: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 167.

One specimen of a newspaper is not a copy of another specimen of the same newspaper of the same date. There is no relation between them of copy and original. They are all counterpart originals each being primary evidence of the contents of the rest: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 371 Award prepared in quadruplicate—Each signed by arbitrators—Each is original award A.I.R. 1959 Ori. 113. To bring document under Expl. II to S. 62, the whole document, together with the signature thereto, if any, must be made by one uniform process. Where a letter together with several copies are prepared by one process, namely, typing on a typewriter and one of them alone is afterwards signed separately, but the rest were only initialled, it cannot be said that the signature on the one and the initials on the rest have been made by one uniform process. The copies, therefore cannot be held to be primary evidence of the letter: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 807: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 381. An agreement to pay rent for house property does not require to be attested and can therefore, be proved under S. 62 by the production of the document itself from proper custody. It is only when a document is required by law to be attested that it shall not be used as evidence in view of S. 68 until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution: 194 R.D. 117 (2).

Carbon copy of a document is primary o original document: 1982 Jab.L.J. 738. See als (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 536, cited under S. 6 Note 10, infra.

A carbon copy of a search list with certai ink writings on it, is not admissible unde

S. 62. When a mere glance at the document would show that even apart from the ink writings the whole of it could not have been made by one uniform process, it would not satisfy the requirements of S. 62 and other sections of Evidence Act: 1958 Cr.L.J. 1178: A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 517.

Carbon copies of permits, written in hand, were being issued on behalf of the Central Government by Government officers, as a general practice, to licensees for transport of tobacco and were being accepted and used by them. They were evidence of duty having been paid on the tobacco covered by them. The counterfoils (corresponding to each foil) were being written and maintained. The carbon copy of the permit in question which was in fact utilised for committing an offence, was good and the impressions were very clear, especially as regards the signatures.

Held, (i) that the corbon copy of the permit was admissible as primary evidence of what it contained for comparison of handwriting and the pencil copy need not be called to be filed as original. It was not secondary evidence, (ii) even if it were secondary evidence, it would be admissible in evidence, under S. 63(c) where the original pencil counterfoil was lost or the party offering evidence of its contents could not, for any other reason not arising out of his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time: 1962 An.L.T. 57: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 546.

Where a will typed in duplicate by use of carbon paper and both of them were executed by the testator and attested by the witnesses simultaneously, held, each was the original and constituted primary evidence. [A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 807 and A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 517, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1983 All. 90: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 685.

Where a power of attorney was executed by Deputy General Manager of the plaintiff-Bank in favour of Senior Branch Manager and it was authenticated by Public notary and photostat copy of power of attorney was marked as exhibit while the original was produced in the Court, held, photostat copy of power of attorney was admissible in evidence to prove that said Branch Manager was duly and validly authorised to sign the plaint on behalf of the plaintiff-Bank: A.I.R. 1994 All. 381.

Where the original agreement in a suit for specific performance, produced by the plaintiff, was proved by its scribe and attesting witnesses, and a copy of the agreement contained in the scribe's register was also produced by him at the plaintiff's instance; the scribe, not a petition writer, maintained no regular register of petitions scribed by him nor did he depose that he had prepared the copy from, or had compared with, the original; the copy, not being certified, is not admissible; besides, the primary evidence having been let in, its secondary evidence is inadmissible; the copy even if prepared by the plaintiff's witness at the plaintiff's instance is not worthy of any credence: 1982 Raj.L.W. 284 (D.B.).

Existence of document admitted—By such admission secondary evidence furnished by certified copy assumes the character of primary evidence: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 362.

A tape embodying the recording of a statement, held, is primary and direct evidence admissible as to what was said and picked up by the tape-recorder: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1162: 1970 U.J. (S.C.) 604: (1971) 1 S.C.R. 339.

Where the original of a deed of dissolution said to be in the custody of a party was not produced by that party which objected to its admissibility for want of stamps, held, the other party was competent to prove the same by its copy; though the party could not prove the copy as secondary evidence, it could certainly prove it as primary evidence: 1982 Rev.L.R. 3: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 18.

Where a deed of dissolution of partnership was drawn in several parts but each part was signed by all the partners though only one of the parts bore the requisite stamp and every partner was handed over one part for retaining it as evidence of dissolution, held, each of the copies is primary evidence under S. 62, Explanation 1; unstamped copy admitted on payment of the requisite stamp duty and penalty: A.I.R. 1976 Mad. 147: (1976) 89 Mad.L.W. 30: (1976) 1 M.L.J. 135.

Where petitioner applied for grant of probate/letter of administration under the provisions of Ss. 276/278 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 and did not file the original will with the petition but instead he filed a certified copy from Sub-Registrar's office, held, certified copy from the Sub-Registrar's office had to be treated on an equal footing with the original because of the provisions of S. 62: A.I.R. 1992 Del. 134: (1992) 46 Del.L.T. 263.

A document which is not a promissory note but a receipt of consideration with an agreement to pay the amount within the stipulated time, held, permission to lead secondary evidence cannot be refused merely on the ground of the inadmissibility of the primary evidence on account of provisions of S. 35 of the Stamp Act, 1899 because a document which is not a bill of exchange or promissory note, even if insufficiently stamped can be admitted in evidence on payment of penal stamp duty as per the provisions of S. 35 of the Stamp Act: A.I.R. 1994 Raj. 1.

The copy of a document retained by the Sub-Registrar on registration of the document is that of the original document which alone is the original; even though the copy retained by the Sub-Registrar also bears the executant's signatures obtained by the Sub-Registrar, it nevertheless remains a copy; thus, certified copies issued by the Sub-Registrar after comparing it with the copy of the document retained by him, does not become primary evidence; it remains secondary evidence even if admitted in evidence: 1982 M.P.L.J. (N.O.C.) 42.

Where cyclostyled Rules, being Government orders, approved by the Ministry of Defence, were circulated to various departments by a cyclostyled copy of the covering letter, bearing cyclostyled signatures of the Director General, held, it cannot be said to be a primary evidence of public documents; it may amount to secondary evidence under S. 63(2) as a copy made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves ensure their accuracy but before such secondary evidence is admitted in evidence, the contents of the original, the primary evidence, must be proved: A.I.R. 1987 All. 83: 1986 All.W.C. 692: (1986) 12 All.L.R. 343.

Where the High Court in writ proceedings admitted the photostat copies of certified copies of the survey land registers into evidence and as no question of its genuineness was raised, the High Court left it undecided, held, the genuineness of documents, even if not raised, is an aspect which goes to the root of the matter; accordingly, the matter was directed to be decided after examining the original record and recording the finding as to genuineness of the documents: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 591.

Photographs ought not to be admitted in evidence without production of their negatives and examining the photographer; otherwise, their evidentiary value is almost nil; they cannot be used even to contradict the eye-witnesses account and evidence of the Investigating Officer: (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 372 (D.B.).; 1979 Bom.C.R. 110.

It is only when the person who takes a photograph and develops it into a negative himself comes into the box and deposes to both these facts, that a negative becomes admissible in evidence. As far as the enlarged print is concerned, the position is still worse, for no print or enlargement can be admitted in evidence without its negative being produced and proved in the manner already indicated above: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 264: 1977 Mah.L.J. 68 (D.B.).

Plaintiff, reversioner already served, on widow and intending purchaser, printed notice warning them from entering into any such transaction—Suit challenging sale-deeds—Plaintiff tendering printed notice with plaint—Notice admitted after evidence of press owner—Plaintiff not relying on printed notice as evidence of any original sent to press—Held, as only the printed copies of same leaflet were sent to parties, the plaintiff was tendering primary evidence of contents of printed leaflets—Leaflet would be primary evidence of contents of any other leaflet and it could not be said that the notice was not duly proved: I.L.R. (1966) Guj. 900: (1967) 7 Guj.L.R. 993.

Claim for exemption in respect of sales to registered dealers—Exemption cannot be granted without production of declaration forms—Loss of declaration forms—Secondary evidence to substantiate transaction is not permissible—Taxing authority cannot grant exemption on such secondary evidence—Counterfoil of declaration forms have no reference to counterparts dealt with in S. 62 of Evidence Act: (1962) 13 S.T.C. 138 (Cal.).

Cross complaint by accused to Police—Uncertified copy produced through defence witness—Accused not himself giving evidence in Court—Admissibility—Duty of Court: (1963) 1 Cr.L.J. 355 (Guj.).

Prosecution for offences under Ss. 467 and 471, I.P.Code—Prosecution relying on evidence of handwriting expert about enlarged photographs of disputed signature—Accused making request at trial stage itself for enlarged photographs—If to be allowed. See (1982) 23 Guj.L.R. 116: 1982 Cr.L.J. 763: (1981) 1 Guj.L.H. 373.

Where the prosecutrix was examined by a Lady Doctor who issued the medical certificate but as being on long leave, she was not available for giving evidence and the Court, finding that her presence could not be procured without undue delay, allowed the prosecution to prove the certificate through another Doctor, her associate for about two years, who deposed that the certificate's carbon copy was prepared by the Lady Doctor by one process and bore her signature, held, the carbon copy was primary evidence under Explanation 2 to S. 62, and clearly admissible: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 702: 1989 Cr.L.J. 841: 1989 All.W.C. 392: (1989) 1 S.C.C. 432: (1989) 1 Crimes 384.

63. Secondary evidence.—Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained;

(2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves ensure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;

(3) copies made from or compared with the original;

(4) counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them;

(5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) A copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine-copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

1. Scope and applicability.—S. 68 mentions five kinds of secondary evidence: Cls. (1), (2) and (3) refer to copies of documents; Cl. (4) to counterparts of documents and Cl. (5) to oral accounts of the documents' contents; though correctness of certified copies referred to in Cl. (1) is presumed under S. 79, the correctness of the copies referred to in other clauses must be proved by proper evidence. A certified copy of a registered sale deed may be admitted as secondary evidence in the absence of its original but if it is not a certified but an ordinary copy, held, that would be no secondary evidence in the absence of the proof of the contents of the original deed; the appellate Court has not only the right but also the duty to exclude it from consideration: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 396.

Documents are required to be proved by primary evidence; it is only under certain circumstances when the original is not available that the secondary evidence may be admitted: 1982 Raj.L.W. 284 (D.B.).

The question whether secondary evidence was in any case rightly admitted depends largely on the discretion of the Judge of first instance and his conclusion should not be overruled by the Court of appeal except in a very clear case of miscarriage: I.L.R. 55 Bom. 103: A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 105. See also 1945 All.W.N. (Rev.) 124: 1945 R.D. 264.

It lies within the jurisdiction of the trial Court to permit or disallow any party to lead secondary evidence; even if the trial Court commits any errors of law, the High Court cannot interfere in exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction under Art. 227 of the Constitution of India: A.I.R. 1983 Raj. 167: 1983 W.L.N. 49: 1983 Raj.L.W. 334.

S. 65 of the Evidence Act deals merely with the foundation that has to be laid for the reception of secondary evidence. One of the circumstances under which the section allows the secondary evidence to be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document is when the original has been destroyed or lost. But to admit the secondary evidence, however, it is not sufficient to show merely that the original document is lost. The secondary evidence itself must be of the nature described in S. 63. A 'true copy' of a document will not be admissible under S. 63 unless it is shown that it had been made from or compared with the original. Further there must be a sufficient proof of the search for the original to render secondary evidence admissible. It must be established that the party has exhausted all resources and means in search of the document which were available to him. Though this is a question of discretion left to the trial Court and an appellate Court would not ordinarily interfere with the exercise of such discretion, the appellate Court would certainly interfere if it finds that the trial Court has accepted the loss of the document as a fact without taking into consideration the prerequisite conditions that are required by the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 532.

'Copy' means the document prepared from the original which is an accurate or true copy of the original; mere notes jotted down from the original is not a copy or a copy compared with the original for it can never be an accurate, true and full reproduction of the original: (1992) 2 Karn.L.J. 635.

S. 63 is exhaustive of the meaning of 'secondary evidence'. An 'abstract translation' which does not purport to be a 'copy' or even a full and complete translation of the document, but is merely a summary of its terms, is inadmissible: (1937) 39 Punj.L.R. 602: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 370.

The expression 'means and includes' in S. 63 makes it quite clear that the five clauses of S. 63 referring to secondary evidence are exhaustive. Obvisouly drafts of award from which award is faired out do not come under any of the Cls. (1), (2), (4) and (5) of the section. They do not also come under Cl. (3) of the section. The drafts are not the copies from the original. Nonetheless they could be admissible as secondary evidence, if there be evidence to show that they were compared with the original, that is to say the drafts can be called secondary evidence only when they are shown to be accurate copies of the original awards. A piece of written paper cannot be admitted as secondary evidence of the contents of a document simply by calling it a draft. The drafts can be admitted in evidence only if it is shown by the evidence on the record that they were compared with the original and the contents are the same. Such evidence held wanting in this particular case. In view of the fact that we have our own codified Evidence Act, the admissibility or otherwise of any evidence has to be determined with reference to the provisions of that Act and not with reference to any law of England. The English precedents cannot be relied upon: 1969 B.L.J.R. 1096: 1969 Pat.L.J.R. 82: A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 218.

Where the notice to the defendant was sought to be proved in Court by its draft prepared by the plaintiff's lawyer and was objected to by the defendant for not being a compared copy of the original, held, the objection could not be sustained; the scope of S. 63 is not restricted to its five clauses; it applies even to those cases which do not strictly fall within any of the enumerated clauses [A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 334 and A.I.R. 1969 Pat. 218, Dissented]; the term 'secondary evidence' in the section also includes a fair copy prepared from the draft of a notice; the Court must, however, be satisfied that the document sought to be introduced as secondary evidence is a faithful and accurate reproduction or draft of the final document: A.I.R. 1986 All. 303: 1985 All.W.C. 852.

Where a copy or contents by oral account of a document is admitted on secondary evidence, held, the execution of the original need not be proved; but if the original itself is sought to be tendered, it must be duly proved; the rule for public documents cannot be any different. [A.I.R. 1951 All. 816, Dissent. from; A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 318, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

Presumption under S. 90—When open: A.I.R. 1968 All. 363.

Under S. 63, secondary evidence of the endorsement on railway receipt can be furnished by some person who had himself made it or seen being made: (1958) 2 An.W.R. 393: A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 192.

Where the sale deed relied upon by the plaintiff was in the defendant's custody which the defendant failed to produce on the ground that it was not with him and the plaintiff sought to prove it by secondary evidence, held, the plaintiff's request was based on S. 65(a), and (c) or either; the secondary evidence to prove it could be of 'any' kind under S. 65 and of the kind specified in S. 63; the deed could, thus, be proved by the copy of the sale deed annexed with the plaint; neither S. 63 nor S. 65(f) would stand in the way. [A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 253, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 73: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 61.

In case of a document which is not a promissory note but a receipt of consideration with an agreement to pay the amount within the stipulated time, held, permission to lead secondary evidence cannot be refused merely on the ground of the inadmissibility of the primary evidence on account of provisions of S. 35 of the Stamp Act, 1899 because a document which is not a bill of exchange or promissory note, even if insufficiently stamped, can be admitted in evidence on payment of penal stamp duty as per the provisions of S. 35 of the Stamp Act: A.I.R. 1994 Raj. 1.

Copy of objected document bearing signature of agent of candidate—Proof: A.I.R. 1959 All. 264.

Where the original enquiry proceedings were not produced before the Industrial Tribunal which declined to admit its secondary evidence as no convincing evidence was produced about the search to find the original having been unsuccessful, held, the Tribunal had correctly rejected the secondary evidence as inadmissible as requirements of S. 63 and S. 65(3) had not been fulfilled. [A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 532, Foll.]: (1990) 2 C.L.R. 191 (Karn.).

The standard of proof required in the reconstruction of a lost Will by parol evidence does not differ from that in other cases. The standard of proof in such a case is the ordinary standard of proof in civil cases, namely, a reasonable balance of probabilities. Of course, as in the case of pedigree, the Courts must be cautious in admitting such evidence: (1953) 1 All E.R. 764.

Where a will had been adjudged to be true and genuine in the earlier proceedings for the grant of a succession certificate, held, that would operate as res judicata in subsequent proceedings; it is not necessary to prove the will in subsequent proceedings: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 480: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 386.

Where official witnesses had produced, and deposed on the basis of, the original official documents which were also kept on the Court's record; if the depositions were impeached, the Court could always refer to the records and ascertain the truth or otherwise of the depositions; held, there was, thus, no necessity to call for certified copies of the official records: 1987 Rev.L.R. 324.

Loss of hundi—Proof of—See S. 45-A, Negotiable Instruments Act—(1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 51.

2. Objection to mode of proof.—The party by its own conduct may waive the objection about the production of secondary evidence by not raising the relevant contention at the time when the secondary evidence of the original is sought to be tendered before the trial Court. Thus, where no objection was taken to the production of secondary evidence in trial Court, held, waiver of objection may be inferred: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 69: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 831(D.B.).

Objection as to mode of proof—When should be raised: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 110.

Certified copies of documents—Objection to admissibility must be taken at the earliest point of time when the documents are tendered in evidence in the trial Court—Objections are not permissible to be raised at a subsequent stage or in appeal: 33 Cut.L.T. 710: A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 129; 1981 Raj.L.W. 217.

When secondary evidence, namely, a certified copy of a registered document, is allowed to be marked for one party without objection at the trial, held, no objection thereafter either in the same Court or appeal can be raised by the other party that the requisite conditions for adducing secondary evidence had then not been made out; besides, though ordinarily copies of copies are not to be treated as secondary evidence unless they have been again compared with the originals, this principle is not extended to the copies prepared from the duplicate copy of the registered document retained by the Sub-Registrar and granted by him as certified copies: A.I.R. 1991 Andh. Pra. 31: (1990) 3 An.L.T. 305: (1990) 2 An.W.R. 411 (F.B.).

Where at the time when a certified copy of deed of cancellation was received in evidence no objection was raised, but later on, an application was filed objecting to the reception of secondary evidence of the document, held, the application could not be entertained: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 1214.

Where the claimant in a motor accident claim case did not impeach the genuineness of the printed copy of the insurance policy, the original whereof was not filed by the truck owner, held, the claimant cannot afterwards object to the admissibility of the printed copy of the policy in evidence: A.I.R. 1994 Him. Pra. 21 (D.B.).

3. Certified copies—Clause (1).—Certified copy of document can be admitted without any formal proof: 1970 All.W.R. (H.C.) 69.

The Court before which an original document is produced and marked in the case is entitled to issue a certified copy of the same and such certified copy, having regard to the provisions contained in S. 63 of the Evidence Act, is admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1993 Karn. 29: (1992) 2 Karn.L.J. 536 (D.B.).

Certified copy of judgment cannot be discarded on the ground that as the records were destroyed in fire, the original file was not available: 1985 All.W.C. 57 (Rev.).

For admissibility of certified copy of a decree, see (1985) 33 B.L.J.R. 701: 1985 Pat.L.J.R. 1124.

Though a certified copy is as good as the original, mere registration of the original is no proof of its execution; there must be some proof of the execution and genuineness of the document which means that signature of the executant must be proved to be in his handwriting: A.I.R. 1979 Gau. 68.

Where the production of a certified copy of a document is otherwise justified by the law, the fact that the witness called in to prove the due execution of the original by the executant had not as a matter of fact seen the original, does not affect the legal proof of the document produced which is admissible under S. 63(1): 1943 All.L.W. 116.

Under the law, original deed has to be produced by the party, who wants to rely on the same. If its loss has been established that party can be permitted to lead secondary evidence of its contents. The secondary evidence of a registered deed is its certified copy. The production of the secondary evidence of a registered deed however does not absolve the person concerned from proving its due execution. The mortgage deed is a document required by law to be attested and, therefore, by virtue of the provisions of S. 68 of the Evidence Act, one of the attesting witnesses, has to be called for the purpose of proving its execution, where the same is specifically denied by the party.

In the instant case, even if the respondent were allowed to lead secondary evidence, he should have produced certified copies of the mortgage deeds. But instead of doing that, the respondent produced a witness whose evidence was recorded without any objection by the petitioner. What could at best be said therefrom was that the secondary evidence of the mortgage deeds had been produced and the petitioner was precluded from objecting to certified copies of the mortgage deeds coming on the record later on. But it could not be said that it relieved the respondent from proving the execution of the mortgage deeds: 1965 Cur.L.J. 523 (Punj.).

Existence of document admitted—By such admission secondary evidence furnished by certified copy assumes the character of primary evidence: (1912-13) 17 Cal.W.N. 362.

Where in a land acquisition reference for enhancement of compensation, the Court below took the view that the copies of those sale deeds (exemplars) of which the vendors or vendees had not been examined as witness in Court were inadmissible in evidence, held, in view of S. 51-A of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, as inserted by the Land Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1984, certified copies of the sale deeds filed by the parties were admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1994 All. 66.

A statement recorded by the Police Officer in the course of investigation being not a public document, its certified copy cannot go in as secondary evidence: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 69: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 831 (D.B.).

The copy of a document retained by the Sub-Registrar on registration of the document is that of the original document which alone is the original; even though the copy retained by the Sub-Registrar also bears the executant's signatures obtained by the Sub-Registrar, it nevertheless remains a copy; thus, certified copies issued by a Sub-Registrar after comparing it with the copy of the document retained by him, does not become primary evidence; it remains secondary evidence even if admitted in evidence: 1982 M.P.L.J. (N.O.C.) 42. See also (1989) 1 An.L.T. 217.

Where the certified copy of the sale deed evidencing amicable partition and supplied by the Sub-Registrar's office bearing the seal and signature of the Sub-Registrar was exhibited, held, the copy is admissible for proving the contents of the original, particularly when there is conflict of oral testimony: A.I.R. 1994 Gau. 64.

The certificate issued by the Registrar is to some extent an evidence of the execution of the document and the admission of signature before the Registrar by the executant can form an evidence of the execution of the document. The execution of the Will can also be proved by approved circumstantial evidence: A.I.R. 1970 Punj. 182.

It is well settled that the propounder of a will is required to prove not only its due execution and genuineness but also eliminate the suspicious circumstances, if any, surrounding the will; a will executed in suspicious circumstances, thus, cannot be allowed to be proved by secondary evidence, that is, by its certified copy: 1988 Rajdhani L.R. 387: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 47 (Del.).

Ss. 63, 65, Cls. (c), (e) and (f), 74, 76—Secondary evidence—Deed of assignment of land—Original deed lost—Certified copy—Admissibility—Registration Act, 1908, Ss. 17(1)(b), 57, 60: (1960-61) 65 Cal.W.N. 881.

Certified copy of deed—When admissible: A.I.R. 1969 Mys. 103.

Copy—Meaning—Arbitration Act, 1940, S. 14(2)—'Signed copy of award'—Meaning—When a document is an accurate or true and full reproduction of the original it would be a copy—Signing means writing one's name on some document or paper—So long as there is signature of arbitrator or umpire on copy of award filed in Court and it shows that the person signing authenticated accuracy or correctness of copy, the document would be signed copy of award and it would be immaterial whether arbitrator or umpire puts down words 'certified to be true copy' above his signature: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 526.

4. Copies made from original by mechanical process—Clause (2).—Ss. 63 and 65(e) and (f) read together permit certified copies and copies made from the original by mechanical process to be tendered as secondary evidence; photocopies thereof prepared by a mechanical process in itself ensure the original's accuracy. Thus, where photostat copies of judicial record of a foreign Court are certified by a public officer having custody of that record as contemplated by S. 76, held, it will not be per se inadmissible; but if it is not further certified by a representative of the Indian Government in the foreign country, it will not be admissible: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646: (1991) 2 Crimes 855: (1991) 3 S.C.C. 451.

Where the photostat copies taken in the office of the Tahsildar with the permission of the Tahsildar was produced and the Tahsildar appearing as witness accepted that it contained his signatures, held, in such circumstances, photostat copy could be accepted in evidence: A.I.R. 1976 Ori. 236.

Whenever a xerox copy is sought to be adduced, the Court is duty bound to be much more cautious than in case of copy made by other mechanical processes, i.e., photo copy or carbon copy: (1990) 2 An.L.T. 171.

A xerox copy obtained from a certified copy, held, is not admissible as secondary evidence when not compared with the original: (1992) 1 Cal.H.N. 60: (1991-92) 96 Cal.W.N. 529.

Photostat copy is not admissible when original was not produced and there was no evidence of any person who deposed having seen the original document that the photostat copy was made from the original: (1982-83) 87 Cal.W.N. 211.

Where the High Court in writ proceedings admitted the photostat copies of certified copies of the survey land registers into evidence and as no question of its genuineness was raised, the High Court left it undecided, held, the genuineness of documents, even if not raised, is an aspect which goes to the root of the matter; accordingly, the matter was directed to be decided after examining the original record and recording the finding as to genuineness of the documents: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 591.

Where cyclostyled Rules, being Government orders, approved by the Ministry of Defence, were circulated to various departments by a cyclostyled copy of the covering letter, bearing cyclostyled signatures of the Director General, held, it cannot be said to be a primary evidence of public documents; it may amount to secondary evidence under S. 63(2) as a copy made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves ensure its accuracy but before such secondary evidence is admitted in evidence, the contents of the original, the primary evidence, must be proved: A.I.R. 1987 All. 83: 1986 All.W.C. 692: (1986) 12 All.L.R. 343.

A carbon copy of a signature may be a piece of secondary evidence within the meaning of S. 63(2) of the Evidence Act, being a copy made by a mechanical process which ensure its correctness. But in order that it may be given in evidence, it is essential that the procedure laid down in the Act should be strictly complied with. Copies made on carbon paper ordinarily used in this country cannot generally be relied upon for purposes of comparison, because the impression made upon such carbon paper is generally irregular and blotched: 89 Cal.L.J. 204: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 456.

Copy (not carbon) of document is not secondary evidence of document and is not admissible as such: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 115.

Unsigned copies of the letters allegedly written by the accused, not shown to have been made from the original by mechanical process, held, cannot be admitted as secondary evidence: (1976) 1 Karn.L.J. 178.

5. Admissibility of tape-recorded statement.—If a statement is relevant an accurate tape-record of the statement is also relevant and admissible. The time and place and accuracy of the recording must be proved by a competent witness and the voices must be properly identified. One of the features of magnetic tape-recording is the ability to erase and re-use the recording medium. Because of this facility of erasure and re-use, the evidence must be received with caution. The Court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the record has not been tampered with: (1967) 3 S.C.R. 720: (1967) 2 S.C.W.R. 934: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 147.

The conditions for admissibility of a tape-recorded statement are as follows: (1) The speaker's voice must be duly identified by the person who tape recorded or by others who recognise his voice; if the voice is denied by the purported speaker, very strict proof is required to determine whether or not it was really his voice; (2) the accuracy of the tape recorded statement has to be proved by the maker of the record by satisfactory evidence, direct or circumstantial; (3) every possibility of tampering with or erasure must be ruled out; (4) the statement must be relevant according to the rules of evidence; (5) the recorded cassette must be carefully sealed and kept in safe or official custody; (6) the speaker's voice should be clearly audible, and not lost or distorted by other sounds or disturbances: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 3: 1985 (Supp.) S.C.C. 611.

A tape-recorded conversation can be used only as corroborative evidence if deposed to by any party to the conversation; if there is no evidence of such conversation, held, the tape-recorded conversation is indeed no proper and admissible evidence; even otherwise, the tape-recorded conversation, on facts, was of no assistance to the party relying upon it: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1043: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 258: 1982 U.J. (S.C.) 394; 1988 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 434.

Before a Court may accept evidence of a tape-record, it must first carefully consider and decide about its genuineness; usually, tape-recording is done without the knowledge and consent of the person concerned; very often he is trapped unknowingly; it is born of trickery or trapping or cunningness. Ventriloquism is not very uncommon; the Court must carefully guard itself against all possible tampering and look for independent corroboration and intrinsic evidence: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 99.

Evidence—Admissibility—Tape-recording—Not inadmissible merely on ground of possibility of their being tampered with: (1964) 4 S.C.R. 733: (1965) 1 S.C.A. 259: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 72.

A tape-recorded conversation is, no doubt, comparable to a photograph; it is admissible under S. 8 provided the recorded conversation is relevant, the voice has been identified and the accuracy of conversation is proved by eliminating possibility of erasing the recorded tape. But where in a divorce proceeding under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 for the wife's mental disorder, the husband produced a tape-recorded conversation wherein the wife had admitted about her ailment, but there was not even a remote reference to this recorded conversation in the petition and the husband had nowhere explained either in the petition or in his statement, the circumstances and the manner in which this conversation had been recorded and none except himself had proved that the recorded female voice was that of the wife nor was her voice compared by recording it in the Court nor the husband could tell the durations of or different intervening intervals between the recording of the conversation, held, the tape could not be used as evidence; the wife's statement therein could neither be used as her admission of her mental ailment nor for shaking her veracity during her cross-examination in terms of S. 145. [A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 147, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1985 P.&H. 128: (1985) 1 Hindu L.R. 378: 1985 Marriage L.J. 42.

Where (1) the voices on the tape at a number of places were not very clear and were intermingled with tremendous noises; (2) a good part of the statement on the tape had been denied and no other witness had identified the voice; (3) there were erasures here and there in the tape; (4) the possibility of tampering with the tape, a fatal defect, could not be ruled out; (5) the transcript was prepared without excluding the possibility of the tape being tampered; (6) the purported speakers had denied the identity of their voices; and (7) the statements had been recorded in a most haphazard and unsystematic manner and without following any logical or scientific method, held, the tape-recorded statements were wholly inadmissible; at any rate, they had no probative value; it is extremely unsafe to rely on such tape-recorded statements: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 3: 1985 (Supp.) S.C.C. 611.

Where the time, place and accuracy of a tape-recorded telephonic conversation, was not proved by a competent witness, held, the trial Court had rightly concluded that the tape-recording was not proved according to law: A.I.R. 1983 Cal. 343: (1981-82) 86 Cal.W.N. 759: (1982) 2 Cal.L.J. 74: (1982) 2 Ren.C.R. 164 (D.B.).

Where there was no dispute about the identity of the speakers, their voices were clearly audible, accuracy of the statements was also proved and the possibility of tampering the tapes was also ruled out as they were carefully sealed and placed in the custody of the judicial officer, held, the tape recorded statement was admissible. [A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 3, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1993 Mad. 59.

Where a recorded cassette was produced in evidence, without explaining as to how did it came to be recorded, why was it preserved, and how did the party come to know about it, held, it is not safe to rely on the version contained in the cassette: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1733.

6. Photographic copies.—The accuracy of photographic copies particularly of external objects, as shown in the photograph, is to be established on oath, to the satisfaction of the Court, either by the photographer or someone who can speak to their accuracy: A.I.R. 1968 Goa 132.

Before a photograph can be admitted in evidence, it is necessary that the person who took the photograph should be examined and such a person should produce the negative and no positive print or enlargement can be admitted in evidence without the negative being produced in the first instance: 1979 Bom.C.R. 110: (1980) 2 Mah.L.R. 242.

Whether a photograph is a correct reproduction of the original depends on many factors such as the correctness of the lens, the state of the weather, the skill of the operator, the colour of the impression, the purity of the chemical's accuracy of forming the angle at which the original was inclined to the sensitive plate, the possible fraud of the operator, etc. Whether a photograph is a correct reproduction (cheque in this case) is also before the Court, the magnified photographic copies of it can be safely received in evidence even without examining the photographer who has taken it as the accuracy of the copies can be readily tested by comparison with the original if necessary. Held, further, that as shown in Illus. (a) to S. 63, the negatives, and the photographic prints were secondary evidence of the cheque which was the original and the primary evidence: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 399.

7. Copies made from or compared with original—Clause (3).—S. 63(3) prescribes two alternative modes of admitting true copies of documents: (1) it may be a copy made from the original; (2) it must be a copy compared with the original; if either of the two requirements are satisfied, it would be a proper and valid secondary evidence; law does not require that the copies must be proved to have been made from as well as compared with the original: A.I.R. 1989 Pat. 96.

Copies made from the original even though not compared with the original, as also copies which are compared with the original are deemed to be secondary evidence. Copy of a document will not ordinarily be admissible in evidence, but if such a copy be compared with the original and evidence is adduced to prove the same such a copy will be admissible in evidence. If it is proved further that copies had been made from the original without any proof that they had been compared with the original,' they will be accepted as secondary evidence. The evidentiary value of particular papers or documents proved in either of the two ways would depend upon the circumstances and on the facts proved: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 533.

An uncertified copy of a deposition can be used as secondary evidence only if it can be regarded as a copy made from or compared with the original. Where the man who is alleged to have made the copy is dead and so also the man who compared it with the original, and their signatures only have been proved by a clerk who was acquainted with their handwriting, it cannot be accepted as evidence as it is not sufficiently proved that it was made from or compared with the original: (1940-41) 45 Cal.W.N. 654: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 506. See also A.I.R. 1950 All. 696, noted under S. 67, infra.

It is not necessary to prove a copy, that the scribe of the copy should be produced. What is required to be proved is that the document produced is a true copy of the original. Any one who has heard the original and the copy read out to him may swear that the contents of the two were identical. This would be a statement which would be admissible in evidence and would prove the document produced was a true copy of the original: 1951 All.L.J. 746: A.I.R. 1952 All. 48.

Where a Notary certified the document as a true photocopy of the original and one of the attesting witnesses was also examined, held, it was not necessary to examine the Notary as witness; it is taken that he had compared the photocopy with the original; his attestation is taken as conclusive: A.I.R. 1992 P.&H. 145: 1991 Punj.L.J. 785: (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 54.

A copy must be proved to be correct copy by the evidence of some one who can swear to its being a true copy. Where copies of accounts are transcribed from copies of the original document, but they are not compared with the original, they cannot be treated to be secondary evidence of the original: (1958) 28 Comp. Cas. 132 (Punj.). Proof of copy being correct copy is not proof of the original (i.e.,) of its execution, genuineness, etc.: 23 W.R. 208.

A handwritten copy of the original issued as true copy under the signature of the concerned officer, held, is not admissible as secondary evidence as it was no where stated thereon that it was a copy made from the original by mechanical process or was compared with such a copy: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 69: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 831 (D.B.).

Where in respect to a hand written copy of the Adoption Yadi, no evidence was adduced which would show as to who made that copy, in whose handwriting it is, from what it was made, or whether it was compared with the original, held, such a copy was inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 264: 1977 Mah.L.J. 68 (D.B.).

Where the original agreement in a suit for specific performance, produced by the plaintiff, was proved by its scribe and attesting witnesses, and a copy of the agreement contained in the scribe's register was also produced by him at the plaintiff's instance; the scribe, not a petition writer, maintained no regular register of petitions scribed by him nor did he depose that he had prepared the copy from, or had compared with, the original, the copy, not being certified, is not admissible; besides, the primary evidence having been let in, its secondary evidence is inadmissible; the copy even if prepared by the plaintiff's witness at the plaintiff's instance is not worthy of any credence: 1982 Raj.L.W. 284.

Prosecution under S. 409, Penal Code—Accounts audited by auditor—Prosecution desiring to file loose sheets of accounts to be used by auditor at the time of his examination in Court—Held, documents would be admissible under S. 63(3) or S. 159 or S. 160, Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1965) Cut. 426: 1966 Cr.L.J. 1042: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 189.

Secondary evidence—Absence of evidence of comparison with original—Objection on—When to be taken—Copies admitted in appeal without objection—Objection in second appeal—Incompetent: 17 Pat.L.T. 709: A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 600. See also (1940-41) 45 Cal.W.N. 654: A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 506.

A record printed in the High Court is not a copy made from or compared with the original but only copy of copy and in the absence of evidence that the printed copy had been compared with the original it could not be treated as secondary evidence of the original under S. 63(3). The record cannot, therefore, be treated as secondary evidence except by consent: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 22.

A printed copy of the deposition of a party in English, which deposition came up to the Madras High Court in 1900 on appeal, is admissible in evidence, as it is the practice of the Madras High Court since 1900 after Government Press took up the printing of the High Court papers, that before giving the final order for striking off, it would be compared with the original: 115 I.C. 147: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 187.

Copy of original letter addressed by Government to Commissioner prepared privately by party at the time of inspection of relevant file is not secondary evidence of original letter: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 7.

8. Newspaper report.—(See also S. 81). A news item without any further proof of what had actually happened through witnesses is of no value. It is at best a second-hand secondary evidence. It is well known that reporters collect information and pass it on to the editor who edits the news item and then publishes it. In this process the truth might get perverted or garbled. Such news items cannot be said to prove themselves although they may be taken into account with other evidence if the other evidence is forcible. A fact has first to be alleged and proved and then newspaper reports can be taken in support of it but not independently: A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 1201.

A report of a speech made in the newspaper is not admissible in evidence to prove the speeches. The party must produce the persons who had made the speeches or the persons in whose presence such speeches were made or the reporter of the newspaper in whose presence the speeches were made and who had sent the report to be published in the paper: I.L.R. (1959) 9 Raj. 524: A.I.R. 1959 Raj. 280.

Newspaper report—Value of—It cannot be treated as substantive evidence—It is no evidence of facts stated therein unless the correspondent who made the report is examined: I.L.R. (1960) Mys. 1307: A.I.R. 1961 Mys. 106.

Secondary evidence of a document which has not been proved to have been written by accused or even existed, cannot be admitted. A copy of a newspaper, publishing a defamatory letter, cannot be used as secondary evidence to prove a letter which has not been found or even proved to have existed: 10 I.C. 832: 8 All.L.J. 302.

Where neither the maker of the report on which the publication was based was examined nor any evidence to prove contents of the reports was adduced nor the original script of the advertisement was produced or its receipt was established at the trial, held, the facts contained in the published reports were inadmissible; besides, newspapers, at the best secondary evidence of their contents, are not admissible in evidence without proper proof of the truth of their contents: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1733.

Where defence sought to rely upon a news item published in newspaper that the murder in question was committed by some unknown person but neither the name of the correspondent who sent the news item nor the information on the basis of which the news item was published was brought on the record, held, in the absence of any such item, no reliance could be placed on such news item: 1994 Cr.L.J. 3695 (P.&H.) (D.B.).

9. Copy of a copy.—See A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 375; 20 Mad.L.W. 719: A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 257. Copy of a copy is not evidence: I.L.R. 7 All. 738. But it may be admitted in evidence by consent of parties: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1255.

A copy of a copy, in the absence of proof of comparison with the original, is not good secondary evidence of the original, in the absence of consent: A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 40: (1938) 2 M.L.J. 883.

A genuine copy of the original, can be looked into as secondary evidence under Ss. 63 and 65 but not a copy of a copy: A.I.R. 1969 Tripura 26.

When a copy is prepared from another copy, it does not come within the meaning of secondary evidence in S. 63, Evidence Act unless it is compared with the original. The solenama, not being a public document, S. 76 has no application to it and so no inference is possible from the description of the certifying officer as one authorised under S. 76 as to his having compared the copy with the original: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 59.

A copy of a copy is admissible in evidence if it has been compared with the original or a copy of the original taken out by means of a mechanical process: A.I.R. 1950 Assam 17.

Where the document is a copy of copy and the person who made that copy is not produced, the document is inadmissible in evidence: 1957 Raj.L.W. 31: A.I.R. 1957 Raj. 89.

Where the record of the Sub-Registrar Office was destroyed during riots and the plaintiff, unable to produce a certified copy of the sale deed registered there, produced a copy prepared from a certified copy presented in an earlier suit, held, the copy is admissible in evidence; S. 65 safeguards the interest of persons unable to produce either the original document or its secondary evidence as per

S. 63; under S. 65(a), (c) and (d) any secondary evidence is admissible irrespective of the provisions of S. 63 or S. 65(f). [A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 253, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 73: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 61.

10. Counterparts of documents—Clause (4).—As per Aiyah's Law Lexicon, a 'counterpart' means a 'duplicate'; when a deed is drawn in two or more identical forms, the part signed by the grantor is the original, others are counterparts; the Lexicon further defines a copy as a document which is 'an accurate and full reproduction' of the original; thus, a duplicate satisfies all the requirements of a copy: A.I.R. 1976 Mad. 147: (1976) 89 Mad.L.W. 30: (1976) 1 M.L.J. 135.

In the case of agreements executed in duplicate it is only when each of the instruments is duly signed by the party to be bound by it, and delivered to the other, that the documents are termed counterparts, and it is only then that each is evidence against the party executing it and those in privity with the executing party and each is secondary evidence of the other: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 133.

Counterfoils of original receipts are admissible only on proof of loss of originals: (1937) 39 Punj.L.R. 602: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 370.

Where the lease to begin with was for open land on which the tenant set up and ran a flour mill without using the land for any other purpose and rent receipts clearly showed the lease to be annual, held, the counter foil of rent receipts produced by the landlord showing it to be a monthly tenancy, the same being admissions by the landlord in his own favour, were inadmissible: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 127: (1982) 1 S.C.C. 27: 1982 U.J. (S.C.) 23: (1982) 1 S.C.R. 1197.

Carbon copies of the gate passes, prepared at one and the same time and which also contained the signatures of the party, held, are counterparts of the original documents and in the nature of primary evidence and not secondary evidence; they can be adduced without complying with the provisions of S. 66: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 536. See also 1982 Jab.L.J. 738.

11. Oral accounts of contents of documents—Clause (5).—See 22 All.L.J. 864: A.I.R. 1924 All. 792. The statements of the witnesses who have not themselves read the document are not secondary evidence of the contents of the document within the meaning of S. 63 of the Evidence Act. Oral evidence of the contents of the document must be given by some person who has seen those contents, that is to say, who has read the documents: A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 21; A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 91: I.L.R. (1951) Raj. 166; A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 133.

The word 'seen' means 'intelligently seen or read' by the person giving oral account of the contents of the document: 1971 Rev.L.R. 357.

S. 63(5) implies that the person who orally proves the contents of a document, who had seen the document, proves only the contents; proof of the contents is no proof of their truth. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

A person unable to read a document cannot give secondary evidence of its contents, even though the contents of the document might have been read over to him: A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 29.

Evidence that witness saw the document and heard it read out if admissible. See 54 I.A. 61: I.L.R. 5 Rang. 18: 52 M.L.J. 376 (P.C.).

Under the section, the evidence of the contents of a document must be given by a person who had seen those contents, i.e., who had read the document. The evidence of a person not knowing the language of the document is inadmissible: 12 R.D. 500: 112 I.C. 310.

Suit for redemption—Denial of mortgage and possession of the document by defendant—Two witnesses deposing that they had seen and read the document and then giving evidence of the contents—Held, that the suit was rightly decreed: 1953 Raj.L.W. 230.

Survey and Settlement Report which was based on a jamabandi, the original of which was not produced and which itself was not exhibited in evidence, cannot be treated as secondary evidence of the contents of the jamabandi statement under Cl. (5), S. 63 or under any other section. [A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 284, Reversed]: 59 M.L.J. 731: A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 45 (P.C.). See also (1992) 2 Karn.L.J. 635.

12. Illustrative cases.—Where the original document as well as their photostat copies were lost for which a Police report was also lodged but the trial Court disallowed the secondary evidence, held, the trial Court fell in error; the report of loss of both the original and photostat having been made, in the special circumstances of the case, proof by secondary evidence ought to be allowed: (1987-1) 91 Punj.L.R. 428. See also I.L.R. (1987) Karn. 3580 [Endorsement regarding loss of money lender's licence, whether secondary evidence to prove existence of valid licence].

Contents of original will be proved by attesting witnesses—Original destroyed with record in previous suit—It is good secondary evidence: I.L.R. (1954) Nag. 558: A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 357.

64. Proof of documents by primary evidence.—Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

Where the original of a deed of dissolution said to be in the custody of a party was not produced by that party which objected to its admissibility for want of stamps, held, the other party was competent to prove the same by its copy; though the party could not prove the copy as secondary evidence, it could certainly prove it as primary evidence: 1982 Rev.L.R. 3: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 18.

Value to be attached to unsigned record of meeting of the departmental promotion committee. See 1985 Lab.I.C. 975 (Madh. Pra.).

An order granting maintenance under S. 125 of the Cr.P.Code cannot prove marriage nor does it operate as res judicata in a civil suit between the same parties; but, undoubtedly, it is a piece of evidence supporting the claim of marriage made therein: 1984 Hindu L.R. 761 (Del.).

An extract in electoral rolls cannot prove that a person is lawfully wedded husband of a lady: 1979 Bom.C.R. 110.

What could go into evidence as secondary evidence is the relevant entry from the Birth Register maintained in the Church or, at least, its true copy and not a certificate purportedly prepared on the basis of that entry: A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 120: (1988-89) 93 Cal.W.N. 102: (1989) 1 Hindu L.R. 228 (D.B.).

Where the lease deed said to have been executed and in the custody of the attorneys was not proved to be so and there was no proof of the existence of its original, held, it could not be proved by secondary evidence: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 66: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 589: 1972 Mah.L.J. 896 (D.B.).

Where a certified copy of a judgment of the Supreme Court of New York, authenticated by the Indian Consulate there, could not be produced for insufficiency of time and its fax copy was instead produced in the Court, held, the fax copy was admissible. [(1991) 3 S.C.C. 451, Rel. on]: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 565 (D.B.).

Copy of the medical claim bill—Admissibility of. See (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 990.

Rent notes—Proof of—Original rent notes not forthcoming—Secondary evidence—Calling in register of petition-writer who had written them—Entries in such register—Even if admissible as secondary evidence, execution of rent notes by party sought to be bound by them has to be proved—Party entitled to produce and producing secondary evidence of document, not relieved from duty of proving its execution: 1965 Cur.L.J. 523 (Punj.).

Section 64—Notes.

It is a cardinal rule in the law of evidence that the best available evidence should be brought before the Court. Ss. 60, 64 and 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 are based on this rule: 1995 Cr.L.J. 76 (Ori.).

Under S. 64, a document must be proved by primary evidence which means the document itself produced for the Court's inspection; an exception to this rule is found in S. 65(e) which says that if the original is a public document under S. 74, secondary evidence may be given of its existence, condition or contents; however, it is necessary for the party producing the secondary evidence to prove that the document is one of those mentioned under S. 65; whether it is the original document itself or secondary evidence of a certified copy, its execution and attestation shall have to be proved as required under Ss. 67, 68 and 69; the consent of a party for marking the document only relieves the other party of his obligation to prove that the original is a public document within the meaning of S. 74; the consent does not dispense with either the proof of its contents or their truth: (1974) 2 M.L.J. 260: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 777 (D.B.).

The original, even in case of a public document, is its best evidence and always admissible; S. 62 and S. 64 which characterise the originals as primary evidence and admissible as such make no distinction between public and private documents. [A.I.R. 1951 All. 816, Dissent. from; A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 318, Rel. on]: AI.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases enumerated in S. 65. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court. According to S. 67 of the Evidence Act, if a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting: I.L.R. (1963) Andh. Pra. 754. See also (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 21.

The rule in S. 65 of the Evidence Act excluding secondary evidence is not so rigid as to be enforced even if no objection has been taken at the trial by the party against whom the secondary evidence has been offered. When a party has waived proof of circumstances justifying the giving of secondary evidence, and the secondary evidence is allowed, he cannot raise the objection to its admissibility in appeal. The question of a document is a question of procedure and can be waived. But a question of relevancy of document is a question of law and can be raised at the appellate stage as well. Where the objection to be taken is not that the document is in itself inadmissible but that the mode of proof put forward is irregular or insufficient, it is essential that the objection should be taken at the trial before it is marked as exhibit and admitted: (1963) 2 An.L.T. 442: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53: (1963) 2 An.W.R. 307.

The primary evidence of a document is the document produced for inspection of the Court; its secondary evidence means and includes certified copies given under S. 76; under S. 64, documents must be proved by primary evidence, except in cases mentioned in S. 65. Under S. 65(e) only a certified copy of the public document and no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible to prove the original. [A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 57, Rel. on]: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 29.

The general principle is that if the original document exists and is available, it must be produced because it is the best evidence. However, if the original is lost, destroyed, detained by the opponent or third person who does not produce it after notice, or is physically irremovable, secondary evidence is admissible. Thus, where the plaintiff had stated in his examination-in-chief and cross-examination that on a particular day he had lost the original of which the certified copy was produced which was in the bag left behind by him in the bus, held, in view of this evidence of plaintiff, the requirements of S. 65 must be held to have been satisfied; the certified copy was properly admitted in evidence: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 66.

The effect of Ss. 64 and 65 is that where a person, or his representative in interest, against whom a document is sought to be proved has admitted in writing the existence, condition or contents of the original document, such admission is admissible. The question as to the contents of a will is really one of title. Where many years have passed since the testator's death, the safer guide is the conduct, influenced by the will, of the parties dealing with the property immediately or shortly after death: (1977) 1 Kam.L.J. 218 (D.B.). See also (1972) 1 Mys.L.J. 79.

Object and principle. See (1957) 1 An.W.R. 15: A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 595. Where certain documents have been marked as exhibits in a case without objection but the contents thereof have not been put to the person connected with them either in their examination-in-chief or cross-examination, it is not possible to make use of the statements made therein for the purpose of drawing inferences one way or the other: A.I.R. 1957 Manipur 9.

When a document is cited on the side of a party, definite proof of its genuineness has to be given. Merely because the document is written on a very antique paper in Mahajani ink, does not show that the document is old. For the paper may be old and not the writing. Where the erasures on such a document coincide with the date of the document which was mentioned at no less than 4 places, the document is suspicious: 1958 M.P.L.J. 198: 1958 Jab.L.J. 289: 1958 M.P.C. 317: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 246.

Original document filed before Sub-Registrar—Registration refused—Suit under S. 77—Original document filed but part of document subsequently missing from record—Court will admit secondary evidence and after reconstructing document will order registration: 1963 Jab.L.J. 415: A.I.R. 1963 Madh. Pra. 234.

When truth of the contents itself is in issue, the proof of document, viz., proving the genuineness and contents by producing the same is not sufficient to prove the truth of the contents of the documents unless the writer of the document is examined: (1988) 1 An.L.T. 915.

Mere proof of handwriting expert and execution of document would not furnish evidence of truth of facts or contents of documents; truth or otherwise of facts or contents would have to be proved by admissible evidence, i.e., evidence of those persons who can vouchsafe for true facts in issue: 1990 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 120 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the executant of a sale deed was not examined but his signatures thereon were proved, held, in view of (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 228 (D.B.) confirming A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 305, the contents of the deed could not be said to have been proved; (1968) 70 Bom.L.R. 683, taking a contrary view despite noticing the two authorities is, thus, only a personal view of the single Judge and not binding: A.I.R. 1982 Bom. 387: (1982) 1 Bom.C.R. 819: 1982 Mah.L.J. 840.

Where the scribe, not a petition writer, required to maintain regular register of the petitions scribed—had proved due execution of the agreement of sale wherein there was no clause that the possession of the part of land to be delivered thereunder to the vendee would be redeemed to the vendor if the vendee defaulted in executing the sale deed and he also testified that he had also maintained a copy of the deed in his register though nowhere does he say that it was prepared from or compared with the original and the copy contained no such clause as appears in the original, held, primary evidence having been let in, its secondary evidence is inadmissible, particularly when it was not prepared or compared with the original: A.I.R. 1980 Raj. 212: 1980 W.L.N. 411 (D.B.).

It is not invariable rule of law that where neither the vendor nor the vendee are examined, the transaction cannot be proved at all: (1973) 2 Mys.L.J. (S.N.) 253.

When the author of a document is alive, held, its contents may best be proved by him; a mere formal proof of his signature on the document would have little probative value: A.I.R. 1977 N.O.C. 352 (All.).

Where persons conversant with handwriting and signatures on certain person's personal letters tendered and exhibited during trial were not examined to prove the letters' authorship, held, the letters could not be taken as having been written by their purported writers: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 24: 1975 Rev.L.R. 567.

Mere marking of an exhibit does not dispense with the proof of document. Thus, where no witness was examined in proof of a document whose certified copy had been produced and exhibited, held, no reliance could be placed on it. [A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1865, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1980 Gau. 55 (D.B.).

Proving an 'entry' from the original register of a petition writer by examining him, held, does not amount to proving the rent-note by secondary evidence; it is primary evidence: (1993-1) 103 Punj.L.R. 165.

The truth of the contents of the birth certificate cannot be proved by a clerk who only proves the handwriting in the certificate. The person issuing the certificate must be examined. If that is not done and the original register too is not produced and the author of the entry is not proved, the certificate cannot be relied upon: (1975) 2 S.C.C. 564.

Where official witnesses had produced, and deposed on the basis of, the original official documents which were also kept on the Court's record, if the depositions were impeached, the Court could always refer to the records and ascertain the truth or otherwise of the depositions; held, there was, thus, no necessity to call for certified copies of the official records: 1987 Rev.L.R. 324.

Where no explanation was given for non-examination of the Doctor holding post mortem, held, post mortem report was not admissible, particularly when it was a carbon copy and not original report: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 107 (Pat.) (D.B.).

Use of copy of accident mahazar by the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal without examining mahazardars, held, is not illegal as S. 64 is not strictly applicable to such Tribunals: I.L.R. (1973) Karn. 339. See also (1975) 1 Karn.L.J. 170; (1974) 2 Karn.L.J. 484.

Where Police reports of the speeches and proceedings of an election meeting prepared by a Police official in the discharge of his public duties were admitted and exhibited in evidence without objection from the other party, held, having once been properly admitted and exhibited in evidence, the contents of the reports also stand admitted; however, the contents cannot be said to be conclusively proved: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608: (1972) 1 S.C.C. 9: (1972) 2 S.C.R. 646: 1972 U.J. (S.C.) 332.

Where the propounder of an unregistered will raised no objection to the admission of the registered deed of its revocation by the testatrix, held, as laid down by A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608, it does not lie in his mouth to say that the revocation deed was not executed by the testatrix; however, its contents are not conclusive evidence: A.I.R. 1992 Cal. 341 (D.B.).

The principles of law laid down in (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. 297 (cited under S. 61, supra) are not wholly erroneous but require modification in the light of the earlier Division Bench judgments in (1974) 2 M.L.J. 535 and (1974) 2 M.L.J. 260, the correct position being that "permitting a document to be marked by consent only means that the party consenting is willing to waive his right to have the document in question proved"; the single Judge in (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. 297, however, took the erroneous view that formal proof is still required even if the document was marked by consent; marking by consent, however, certainly does not mean that every statement made therein is correct: A.I.R. 1986 Mad. 341: 1986 T.L.N.J. 1: (1986) 1 M.L.J. 283: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 561 (D.B.).

When documents are exhibited without objection from a party, that party cannot object to their admission in evidence; however, it can impeach the document and its contents in all other possible manner. Thus, where an entry in the Municipal Death Register, with several corrections, erasures and overwritings, was allowed to be exhibited without objection, held, that only meant its formal proof; the other party could certainly impeach its genuineness or credibility: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 125: 44 Cut.L.T. 597: (1977) 2 Cut.W.R. 779.

Where a document is admitted in evidence without objection from the other party, held, it is not open to that party to object to the document's admission for the first time during final arguments. [A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 Cal. 297.

Where a document was exhibited without objection, held, its admissibility in evidence could not be challenged subsequently: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 116 (Ori.).

An objection regarding the mode of proof of a document can be raised at the time of its exhibition; once the document is exhibited without any objection, the same cannot be raised for the first time in appeal. [A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83; A.I.R. 1958 Punj. 116 and A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 P.&H. 282: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 237.

Once a document is properly admitted the contents of the documents would stand admitted in evidence and if no objection has been raised with regard to its mode of proof at the stage of tendering in evidence such a document, no such objection could be allowed to be raised at any later stage of the case or in appeal. [(1994) 2 Chand.Cr.C. 300 (Del.); (1994) 4 A.D. (Del.) 50; (1994) 3 A.D. (Del.) 626; (1994) 3 A.D. (Del.) 1495, Overruled; 1975 Cr.L.J. 778 (S.C.), Foll.; 1970 Cr.L.J. 1266 (S.C.), Disting.]: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1623 (Del.) (D.B.).

After the document is admitted in evidence upon formal proof being dispensed with and without any objection, held, no objection can be taken at the appellate stage: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 23: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 86: (1985) 2 Cal.H.N. 357: (1985-86) 90 Cal.W.N. 95 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1973 Cal. 325 (D.B.).

Document admitted and acted upon by two Courts—Plea as to insufficiency of proof cannot be allowed to be taken in second appeal: A.I.R. 1967 All. 481.

Objection to admissibility of document—Time for—Document marked as exhibit under S. 90, Evidence Act—Failure to raise objections as to its admissibility—Effect. See A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 26.

Where objection to the admissibility of a document relates to the mode of its proof, it has to be taken at the earliest stage of hearing so that the party concerned may adduce its stricter formal proof; but if the objection to its admissibility is itself under the law, it may be raised even at the appellate stage. [(1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 607 (P.C.), Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Cal. 190: (1971-72) 76 Cal.W.N. 217 (D.B.).

When no objection was taken at the time secondary evidence was adduced and was exhibited and admitted in evidence in the trial Court, held, the Courts below should not have excluded it from consideration. [A.I.R. 1960 Raj. 92, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 203: 1971 Raj.L.W. 319.

When a particular document is admitted in evidence without objection by the opposite party, the contents of such document though may not be conclusive evidence are also admitted: A.I.R. 1975 Cal. 98 (D.B.).

When the report of Senior Scientific Officer of the Central Forensic Science Laboratory was tendered and admitted in evidence without objection as to its inadmissibility or mode of proof, held, the accused could not be allowed to challenge its admissibility in appeal: 1995 Cr.L.J. 2599 (Del.).

Where in a suit for recovery of price of the goods sold, the plaintiff had specifically alleged that test certificates had been supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant alongwith the supply of the goods and the defendants, in his written statement, admitted their receipt without alleging that the contents thereof were not correct, held, the defendant was not entitled to raise the objection that these test certificates were not correct and insist on proof of the correctness of the contents of those documents: A.I.R. 1971 Cal. 357.

Where the fact to be proved by the complainant Food Inspector was his holding the post at the relevant time and instead of the Gazette notification or a certified copy thereof, he had filed the copy attested by himself to be true, duly exhibited without objection as proof of the notification, held, his appointment stood proved: A.I.R. 1971 Ker. 193: 1971 Ker.L.J. 177: 1971 Ker.L.T. 19 (F.B.).

Where the defendants produced a certified copy of a registered will which was 80 years old and the plaintiffs neither asked the defendants to produce the original will nor they objected to its admissibility, held, in second appeal, no objection regarding admissibility or due execution and attestation of the will could be taken. [A.I.R. 1968 All. 363, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 7 (All.).

It is well known that the science of photography is so advanced that photographs can be easily manipulated and it is difficult to decipher the manipulation in the photographs produced in particular when their negatives were not produced on the record; photographs whose negatives have not been produced are not admissible in evidence, when author thereof had not been examined: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 113 (P.&H.).

Photographs ought not to be admitted in evidence without production of their negatives and examining the photographer; otherwise, their evidentiary value is almost nil; they cannot be used even to contradict the eye-witnesses account and evidence of the Investigating Officer: (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 372 (D.B.).

When an agreement of sale was not pleaded in the written statement nor the existence of its original was proved, held, the Court's permission to prove it by secondary evidence of its photostat copy could not be permitted; the trial Court erred in allowing secondary evidence subject to the party adducing proof of the agreement's execution and its loss was wholly unjustified: (1989-1) 95 Punj.L.R. 418.

Suit on promissory note—Execution denied by defendant—Plaintiff not adducing any evidence—Total lack of legal evidence regarding execution cannot be remedied by any impression formed by Court about demeanour of defendant or about the comparison of admitted signature of defendant with disputed signature on the note: (1960) 1 Ker.L.R. 604: 1960 Ker.L.T. 775.

Non-production of best evidence—Party claiming that houses were impressed with character of joint family property as their purchase alleged from sale-proceeds of land belonging to joint family—Party not producing sale-deed of land nor producing extracts from land records to show existence of land but offering oral evidence—Non production of document suggests for adverse inference and oral evidence cannot be accepted: I.L.R. (1965) 1 All. 483: A.I.R. 1966 All. 570.

Registration Act, 1908, S. 49—Unregistered deed of lease—Evidentiary value—Deed is inadmissible to prove the lease, but admissible for the collateral purpose of proving the nature of the defendant's possession (whether as a tenant or as a licensee or as a trespasser) and the amount of rent: A.I.R. 1966 All. 515.

Ineffective registration of sale-deed—Contract not void—Document can be admitted in evidence for collateral purpose of showing nature and character of rights of parties under deed: 1965 B.L.J.R. 575.

Where it was contended by the claimants that the deceased had relinquished her rights to land in 1952 and documents embodying her statement before the Panchayat, her application for sanction of mutation and the Patwari's report which were found by the Court below as inadmissible for want of proof and on the ground, inter alia, that no title could be acquired by unregistered documents; findings of the Courts below affirmed: A.I.R. 1977 P.&H. 103: (1977) 79 Punj.L.R. 191: 1977 Rev.L.R. 179.

The Evidence Act does not purport to deal with the admissibility of documents in evidence which require to be stamped under the provisions of the Stamp Act. [A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 109 and A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 431, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1070: (1971) 1 S.C.C. 545: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 26.

Secondary evidence—True copy—Admissibility—Absence of proof as to diligent search for lost document—Effect: A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 532.

Secondary evidence—Certified copies of documents—Admissibility: A.I.R. 1967 Ori. 129.

Admission of execution of document during examination of accused under S. 342, Cr.P.Code, 1898—No substitute for primary proof: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1089: A.I.R. 1969 All. 423.

Merely because the signatures of the senders of certain letters have duly proved and there is no evidence or circumstances to show that the senders had put their signatures on blank papers which have been subsequently filled up, it cannot be said that the letters must be held to have been proved. But where in addition to that it is also proved that the recitals in those letters are consistent with the contents of other documents admitted in evidence, the letters must be deemed to have been proved and genuine.

That a letter bears the signatures of the sender may be a strong piece of evidence in favour of the person who contends it is genuine, and in the majority of the cases very slight evidence may be necessary to prove that the letter was signed after it was written. It does not, however, follow from this that the mere proof of signature ipso facto prove the contents of the document. It would equally not be correct to say that execution of a document cannot in any case be proved except by direct evidence. It may be proved by one of the modes provided in Ss. 45 and 47 and also by internal evidence afforded by its contents. The mode of proof by the contents may be of considerable value where the disputed document purports to be a link in a chain of correspondence, some links in which are proved to the satisfaction of the Court: I.L.R. (1968) Cut. 718: 34 Cut.L.T. 993: A.I.R. 1968 Ori. 217.

Where the plaintiff annexed photocopies of the sale and mortgage deeds to the plaint with no mention about their originals having been lost and despite the defendant's insistence for production of their originals and the plaintiff having been granted five opportunities over a year and a half, the originals were not produced and the plaintiff by his vague application bereft of any particulars as to the place or time or the circumstances of the loss of originals, and unsupported by affidavit, sought leave to adduce secondary evidence, held, the trial Court clearly erred in permitting the plaintiff to adduce secondary evidence: (1993) 1 Rev.L.R. 278 (P.&H.).

Where the Doctors testified as to the wife having had recurring attacks of epilepsy at the time of the marriage but the medical records on which their opinion was based was not produced, held, no value could be attached to their testimony; it cannot be taken as 'best evidence' required under S. 64; this rule is probably older than its reasons, one of which is that the Court may acquire knowledge of full contents of documents or record on the basis whereof the Court might come to conclusion different from that of the witnesses: (1985-1) 87 Punj.L.R. 334: 1985 Cur.L.J. 171.

Where purchaser of a property filed four ejectment suits and only in one suit he filed original sale deed and in other suits he filed copies thereof, held, it could not be argued that he should have placed original document in each suit: 1977 Kash.L.J. 57: 1977 Ren.C.J. 636.

Where the certificate issued by the Director of the Central Food Laboratory in a prosecution under the Food Adulteration Act, 1954 was not exhibited, held, it could not be used to enter conviction: 1989 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 53: (1988) 1 An.L.T. 1003.

Where the claim as to infliction of penalty of recovering costs was passed by the Government and not by the Chief Engineer and the original order was not produced before the Court, held, the claim was not proved for lack of evidence: 1982 Lab.I.C. 1271 (P.&H.).

Where some of the executants of a registered deed had admitted its execution but in respect of other executants the Courts below found that the propounder of the documents had not proved its execution by its other purported co-executants, held, it cannot be said that the document was not genuine: A.I.R. 1971 Mad. 280: (1970) 1 M.L.J. 486.

Where the landlord pleaded the monthly rate of rent from the rented property was Rs. 400 and the same was shown as such in the landlord's Income-tax assessment orders, held, in the absence of any materials placed on record by the tenant showing that the landlord had some other property as well, such rate of rent stands established: A.I.R. 1977 Ori. 76: I.L.R. (1977) Cut. 263.

Where the five accused entered into a criminal conspiracy for hushing up the theft or criminal breach of trust resulting in shortage of Government cash by making it up from a sister Department by use of false assurance to return the money and threats of dire consequences, and by destruction of the report about the missing money whereafter the Head Clerk of the sister Department, being in bad health and apprehending that the money would not be returned, gave a petition to the Director setting out the entire facts, held, the petition was inadmissible; no reliance could be placed on it: A.I.R. 1989 S.C. 1205: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1135: (1989) 2 Crimes 124.

A minor girl having disappeared, the relations suspected one of the accused of complicity in kidnapping her and intercepted the letter from him to his wife. As the letter confirmed their suspicion, the letter was handed over to the Police. At the trial of the accused it was read in evidence. Held, however valuable the letter might have been for the purposes of investigation and for tracing the girl and some of the miscreants it was not legally proved and, therefore, the Sessions Judge was not justified in reading it in evidence: 1957 Cr.L.J. 688: 1957 Raj.L.W. 345.

65. Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given.—Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases:—

(a) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it;

(b) when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest;

(c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time;

1. Scope and applicability of section.—S. 65 appears to be complementary to S. 63: (1977) 1 Kam.L.J. 218 (D.B.).

An attempt by a party to a proceeding, to comply with the provisions of Evidence Act, so as to enable him to adduce secondary evidence in a case, cannot possibly amount to compelling a person to give evidence against himself: 1971 All.L.J. 1389: 1971 All.W.R. 815.

A combined reading of Ss. 65 and 66 of the Evidence Act and S. 57(5) of the Registration Act leaves no doubt that once it is established that the original title deeds are lost or destroyed or are being deliberately withheld by the party against whom they are sought to be used, secondary evidence in respect of those title deeds can be tendered and if the secondary evidence happens to be certified copies of registered documents entered in book No. 1, the contents thereof can be read in evidence by virtue of sub-S. (5) of S. 57 of the Registration Act. [A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 305 and (1969) 3 S.C.C. 367, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 Guj. 193: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412.

The terms and conditions and date of a mortgage embodied in a duly registered deed can be proved only by the original or, under certain circumstances, by its secondary evidence under S. 65; it is mandatory under S. 65 that where certified copy can be secured, it would be the only form of admissible evidence; mere difficulty in securing it cannot absolve the party from adducing proper evidence: 1973 R.L.R. 319.

Original documents not proved in any manner—Their copies are not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 179: 1955 Raj.L.W. 434.

It is only when the existence of the original document (will in this case) is proved that the production of secondary evidence thereof can be allowed: (1989-1) 95 Punj.L.R. 55; (1990) 1 Raj.L.W. 133.

In order to enable a party to produce secondary evidence, it is necesssary for the party to prove existence and execution of the original document. Thus, where the trial Court found that the document seemed to be not genuine and, thus, the very existence of the same was itself doubtful, held, it rightly declined the prayer to lead secondary evidence: (1993-2) 104 Punj.L.R. 452.

(d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily moveable;

(e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74;

(f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force in [1][India], to be given in evidence;

(g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c) and (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the documents is admissible.

In case (b), the written admission is admissible.

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible.

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

1. Substituted by Act 3 of 1951, S. 3 and Sch., for "the States".

When a certified copy is allowed to be produced as secondary evidence, the Court should not admit it unless execution of the original is proved or admitted by the other party; a certified copy raises no presumption of its original being genuine: A.I.R. 1987 Ori. 138: (1986) 2 Ori.L.R. 410 (D.B.).

Where there was no satisfactory evidence to prove the execution of the original sale deed as the evidence of the only attesting witness was found to be not acceptable, held, even if the secondary evidence in the shape of certified copy of the original was adduced, execution of the original was not proved. [In view of A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 242, the decision in A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 193 must be treated as overruled]: A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 19.

Secondary evidence should not be allowed unless the circumstances show a sufficient justification under the Evidence Act, for reception of secondary in lieu of primary evidence: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 468.

S. 65 is designed only for the protection of persons who, in spite of their best efforts, are unable, from circumstances beyond their control to place before the Court primary evidence of a document as required by law. It is not intended to be utilised for the benefit of persons who deliberately, or with sinister or ulterior motives, refuse to produce in Court a document which is in their possession, power or control: A.I.R. 1949 All. 677.

Secondary evidence—Foundation must be first laid for its reception: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 606.

Where the original document has not been filed, and no case for proving the original by the secondary evidence of its copy has been made out, the copy must be disregarded: A.I.R. 1952 Bilaspur 13. The law is well settled that if the original document is inadmissible in evidence owing to its being unstamped or unregistered, secondary evidence is inadmissible S. 65 of the Evidence Act presupposes that but for one or more of the barriers to its production stated in the section, the document would have been capable of proving its contents under S. 64 read with S. 62. It would, therefore, be absurd to hold that secondary evidence may be given to establish a fact, proof whereof by primary evidence is forbidden. Under no circumstances can secondary evidence be admitted as a substitute for inadmissible primary evidence: I.L.R. (1951) Raj. 69: A.I.R. 1951 Raj. 66; 1956 Raj.L.W. 558; A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 72. See also A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 23, infra.

Where a party has taken all the necessary steps for the production of an original document but the document is not produced by the person in whose possession it is, he being alleged to be in collusion with the opposite party, the former is entitled to offer secondary evidence as to the contents of the documents in question: 22 Pat.L.T. 200.

S. 65 cannot be invoked where a party being in possession of the document does not produce it, as in a case where the document not having been produced at all the relevant periods, is sought to be ushered in at the stage of the arguments in the High Court, producing it from his own possession: 1958 An.L.T. 440: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 418.

Where the sale deed relied upon by the plaintiff was in the defendant's custody which the defendant failed to produce on the ground that it was not with him and the plaintiff sought to prove it by secondary evidence, held, the plaintiff's request was based on S. 65(a) and (c) or either; the secondary evidence to prove it could be of 'any' kind under S. 65 and of the kind specified in S. 63; the deed could, thus, be proved by the copy of the sale deed annexed with the plaint; neither S. 63 nor S. 65(f) would stand in the way. [A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 253, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 73: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 61.

Under S. 65 secondary evidence is admissible only of the existence or the contents of a document which is lost, but the execution of the document must be proved by primary evidence as required by S. 67. S. 67 merely says that if a document is alleged to be signed by a person, the signature of that person must be proved. It does not say that the signature must be proved by a person who actually saw that person affecting his signature. S. 47 describes the various methods of proving the handwriting of a person and if these two sections are read together, the reasonable inference is that the signature of a person on a document may be proved either by examining the person in whose presence the signature was affixed, or else by examining another person who is acquainted with the handwriting of the executant of the document and is able to prove his signature by his opinion. See A.I.R. 1966 All. 515; A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 207.

Original books of account worm eaten and in tottering condition—Even so, secondary evidence is not admissible under the section: A.I.R. 1962 All. 111.

Where the original document has either been lost or is being deliberately withhled by the person in whose custody it was kept, secondary evidence in the nature of oral evidence as to the contents of original can be admitted in evidence: (1962) 64 Punj.L.R. 203: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 293.

Where trial Court rejected petitioner's application moved under S. 65, Evidence Act for the production of secondary evidence in respect of certain documents whose production was not granted under O. 11 R. 14, C.P.Code observing that the documents mentioned in the application moved under O. 11, R. 14, C.P.Code did not find mention in the application moved under S. 65, Evidence Act, held, it could not be said that the trial Court had acted with material irregularity or illegality in the exercise of its jurisdiction in rejecting the defendant-petitioner's application for permission to produce secondary evidence: A.I.R. 1995 Raj. 138.

Original will in Bengali, executed before 1821 A.D. not traceable—Foundation for introduction of secondary evidence laid—Original or copy filed in Court of Wards Office by widow of testator in about 1836—Office causing translation of will to be made—Translation not of the entire will—Name of translator not appearing on translation—Certified copy of translation signed by officer not knowing language of will, as true and correct translation. Held, that even though the certified copy could be treated as secondary evidence of the original, it could not be relied upon as a reliable translation of the original on which the Court would act. Held, further that as the document attached to the application of the widow to the Court of Wards might not have been the original but a copy, this translation would be the translation of a copy. It could not be placed on any better footing than a copy of a copy and would not be admissible in evidence even as secondary evidence of the original will: A.I.R. 1961 All. 206.

Witness summoned by registered post to produce original sale deed in her possession—Witness refusing summons—Certified copy of sale deed is admissible—C.P.Code (1908), O. 5, R. 20-A: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

Copy of affidavit—Admissibility: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 52.

Secondary evidence is given to prove the existence, condition or contents of a document and nothing more beyond that: 1964 B.L.J.R. 339: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 45.

Where a document on the basis of which a suit is laid has been lost or is not in the possession of the plaintiff, the various clauses of S. 65 of the Evidence Act would come into play. But even where those conditions do not apply, if the condition or the contents of the original have been admitted, in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative-in-interest, secondary evidence could be given about the contents of the document and the admission of the person against whom it is proved can itself be relied upon for holding that the facts so admitted have been proved. The admission has to be accepted or rejected as a whole, but that applies only to the contents of the document itself and not to matters which are not contained in that document though it might relate to or be connected with the document which is said to have been lost.

There is no rule of law that if a plaintiff, who has a document in his possession, does not produce it, the suit has necessarily to be dismissed. The provision regarding the consequence of non-production by the plaintiff of a document in his possession as required under O. 7, R. 14, is provided in O. 7, R. 18: (1969) 1 M.L.J. 237: (1969) 82 Mad.L.W. 151.

A contract-note bore the signature of executant only on the original and not on the carbon copy. Signatures on the original is enough. Whether it would appear on the carbon copy would depend upon the manner in which the original and copies are arranged at the time of taking the signature. If the original note is written out and thereafter removing the carbon the original is given for signature there would be no impression of carbon. From the absence of signature on the carbon copy it cannot necessarily follow that the executant's signature had been taken later on: 1968 M.P.L.J. 438.

Original not produced at any time—The foundation laid for establishment of right to give secondary evidence—Copies of original not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 1457.

In order to enable the plaintiff to tender the certified copy as secondary evidence, it is enough for the plaintiff to prove that the original is not in his possession and so far as he is concerned it is lost: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 494.

If the sale deeds which were the primary evidence of the interest sold and were said to be registered documents, were not available for any reasons, certified copies thereof could be adduced as secondary evidence, but the reception of other evidence must always be of a very weak character in place of registered documents evidencing those transactions: 1959 S.C.A. 173: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 706.

S. 45-F is in addition to provisions contained in Evidence Act and Bankers Books Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 9.

The rule laid down in S. 65 of the Evidence Act that certified copy is the only secondary evidence admissible when the original is a public document, has no application where the original has been lost or destroyed: 1963 M.P.L.J.(Notes) 79.

Registration Act, 1908, S. 57—Will registered—Original in possession of persons interested to deny execution—Certified copy of will is evidence of will—Succession Act, 1925, S. 63: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Punj. 915: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 208.

A statement of a witness abstracted in a judgement is not even secondary evidence of the statement and cannot be made use of in lieu of the original statement itself: I.L.R. 53 Mad. 952: 60 M.L.J. 14.

It is doubtful whether a copy of a list attached to a plaint obtained from some record in the Revenue Court is admissible in evidence: 7 O.W.N. 1079: A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 136.

Reconstruction of records—Records destroyed by fire—It is bounden duty of Court to reconstruct record with all despatch and expedition and no application need be presented in that behalf—Art. 181 is not attracted: 1968 Kash.L.J. 101.

Suit to recover mortgage-money—Original mortgage-deed not filed—Maintainability of suit. See C.P.Code, 1908, O. 7, R. 14: A.I.R. 1959 Ori. 126.

Probate—Grant of—Conclusive evidence against all—Final judgment or order—If probate—Secondary evidence, if admissible. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 41: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 795.

2. Unstamped/understamped document.—Secondary evidence by way of oral evidence with regard to a document either unstamped or insufficiently stamped is not admissible in view of the bar of S. 35 of Stamp Act, 1899 even though no objection could be taken under the Evidence Act with regard to the admissibility of such secondary evidence. [A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 109 and A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 431, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1070: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 26. If it is not so, the law of registration and the law of stamps would be made nugatory and un-enforceable, as clever litigants will always circumvent it by claiming that the document has been lost and proving its contents avoiding successfully the stamp duty as well as the registration charges. The law of secondary evidence was never enacted to make the law of registration and stamps nugatory but it is only an exception to the law of proving facts by primary evidence, and is part of law of Evidence only: I.L.R. (1979) 29 Raj. 457. No secondary evidence of a document can be given, if the original itself is not admissible. Thus, when a rent note was not duly stamped, held, no secondary evidence in respect thereof could be given: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 458. But where at the time the plaintiff was permitted to produce the secondary evidence in respect of the rent note, no objection of it being insufficiently stamped was raised, held, no interference with the trial Court's order was called for: 1978 W.L.N. (U.C.) 415 (Raj.).

A party is not entitled to rely upon secondary evidence to prove his right and title to property which was claimed to have been conveyed to him under an un-stamped sale deed: (1966) 2 An.W.R. 251: (1966) 2 An.L.T. 230.

Secondary evidence—Insufficiently stamped document not produced before Court—Secondary evidence as to contents of such document—Admissibility—Opposite party not objecting to admission of such secondary evidence—Effect: (1967) 2 An.W.R. 444.

Lost document, insufficiently stamped—Inadmissible in evidence, as no duty or penalty can be levied on a lost document. But proof of title by independent evidence is not barred: 4 Mys.L.J. 194. See also the undermentioned decision. An unstamped document was impounded from the plaintiff and on payment of penalty its execution was proved. Subsequently, the document was lost while it was in the custody of the Court. In second appeal the plaintiff applied for the permission to lead secondary evidence. On objection that the document being unstamped was unfit for receipt of secondary evidence. Held that S. 36, Stamp Act would come to the help of the plaintiff and the document after it had been admitted into evidence on payment of penalty could not be called into question at any subsequent stage of the same suit on the ground that it was not duly stamped: 1957 Raj.L.W. 603.

Secondary evidence cannot be given of the contents of a document which, if produced, would be inadmissible. Hence, a copy of a deed of partition executed and registered in British India, and duly stamped according to the law of British India but which also relates to properties in Mysore, cannot be admitted in evidence in the Courts in Mysore, the original not having been stamped duly according to the Mysore Stamp Law. The fact that, through no fault of his own, the party seeking its admission cannot produce it, does not render the copy admissible: 52 Mys.H.C.R. 122.

3. Unregistered deed which is required to be compulsorily registered.—Unregistered deed compulsorily registrable—Delivery in pursuance thereof—Non-production of the deed—Secondary evidence of contents admissible to ascertain the nature of possession—Proviso to S. 49, Registration Act applies: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 297.

Original document unregistered—Secondary evidence: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 927.

Secondary evidence of a compulsorily registrable but unregistered deed is not admissible in evidence: 101 I.C. 839: A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 214.

Once the primary evidence of an unregistered document is receivable for the collateral purpose of proving the nature of the possession and with what intention the possession was held then if the necessary conditions for adducing secondary evidence of such document exist, the secondary evidence of the document for the self-same purpose, namely, that of showing the nature and character of the possession and with what intention the possession was held can be adduced. [A.I.R. 1960 Raj. 1 (S.B.), Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 294: 1973 Raj.L.W. 493: 1973 W.L.N. 207.

4. Clause (a).—For invoking S. 65 for admission of secondary evidence, the conditions prescribed therein have to be proved; when the original is shown or appears to be in possession or power of the person against whom it is sought to be proved or in possession of a person out of the Court's reach or not subject to its process or in possession of a person legally bound to produce but despite notice under S. 66 does not produce it, the secondary evidence could only then be admitted in evidence: (1985) 2 An.W.R. 160. See also (1990) 1 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 17: I.L.R. (1988) Karn. 3347.

S. 65 clearly says that if the original appears to be in possession or power of the person against whom it is sought to be proved, its secondary evidence can be allowed to be given by the other party; it is not in all cases that the original should be shown to be in possession of the party against whom it is sought to be proved; if from the nature of the document itself it appears that it should be in that party's possession, its secondary evidence may well be allowed to be given: 1978 Rev.L.R. 401: (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 45.

In order to avail the machinery under Ss. 65 and 66 it is necessary to establish that a document was executed, and that it is in the possession or power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved and that the said person despite notice under S. 66 failed to produce it: A.I.R. 1971 Mad. 471: (1971) 84 Mad.L.W. 452: (1971) 2 M.L.J. 128.

The condition precedent for the application of S. 89 is that the original document must have been called for and has not been produced after notice to produce it is given, and these conditions unequivocally suggest that the cases in which the statutory presumption under S. 89 can be raised are cases which fall under S. 65(a) and S. 66, Evidence Act. The principle underlying the provisions of S. 89 is sometimes described as the 'necessity' principle. If a party is in possession of a document, or it is shown that the document is in his power, and despite the notice given to him to produce that document he refuses to produce that document, law provides that the conduct of the party justifies an inference being drawn against him, and in that sense the principle of necessity is invoked and Courts are authorised to assume that the document which has not been produced must have been properly attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law. While considering the presumption which arises under S. 89, it may be relevant to remember that once a presumption is drawn under S. 89, it cannot be easily rebutted by the production of the original document at a later stage: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 65: I.L.R. (1955) Bom. 999; A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 38; (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412.

The certified copy of a document is not admissible under S. 90. But the same may be received in evidence under S. 65 when the person in custody of the original document has refused to produce the original: 1973 B.L.J.R. 406.

Effect of section. See I.L.R. 49 All. 78: 24 All.L.J. 964. Any secondary evidence is admissible here: 16 I.A. 625: I.L.R. 16 Cal. 753 (P.C.). 'Produce' means only procure the production or given it in evidence: A.I.R. 1930 All. 550.

Secondary evidence is necessary before any presumption under S. 90 can be made: A.I.R. 1930 All. 550. Oral evidence cannot be given to prove the contents of a letter which was neither produced nor called for: I.L.R. 26 Cal. 53. Secondary evidence in the shape of private copies of bills maintained by a party cannot be admissible in evidence when the party in whose possession the original bills were was never called upon to produce them: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 139.

The copies of the letters from the accused to his co-conspirators which were intercepted and reported are admissible in evidence. It is not necessary that the prosecution should go through the formalities of making a formal application to his associates to produce the original letters: A.I.R. 1933 All. 498.

Where a lease deed is in the possession of the defendants and they failed to produce it though summoned twice to do so, secondary evidence of the same is admissible: 3 L.R. 3 A. 8 (Rev.).

Where in a suit against the Union of India, the copy of the notice under S. 80, C.P.Code, was sought to be produced by the plaintiff but it was objected on behalf of the defendant that a copy was not admissible. Held, S. 65 read with S. 66 of the Evidence Act permits the plaintiff to produce the copy of the notice without summoning the original. It was for the defendant to show by production of the original that the document did not amount to a notice according to S. 80, C.P.Code. Where the defendant failed to produce the original he could not have any grievance when its copy was produced by the plaintiff: I.L.R. (1958) 8 Raj. 855: 1959 Raj.L.W. 301: A.I.R. 1959 Raj. 231. Certified copy of a registered deed is sufficient proof when the original of that deed is in the possession of the opposite party: A.I.R. 1928 All. 394.

Where the original sale deeds are in the possession of the defendants as deposed to by the plaintiff and if the plaintiff's statement that the certified copies of the three sale deeds produced by him related to the suit houses has not been denied by the defendants, it would be a proper case in which notice as required under Cl. (a) of S. 65 may be dispensed with. In that case, the three certified copies would be admissible under Cl. (a) of S. 65: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 555.

Where a mortgage deed is in possession of the mortgagee in a suit for redemption by the mortgagor it is for the mortgagee to produce that document and if he fails to do so, the plaintiff is well within his right to produce secondary evidence, not only about the existence of the mortgage deed, but also about its contents: 1956 Raj.L.W. 241: A.I.R. 1956 Raj. 126. See also (1979) 20 Guj.L.R. 390.

Original Mortgage deed filed in Pakistan Courts before Partition—Mortgagee migrating to India on partition—Suit on mortgage filed in India to enforce it against property in India—Mortgagee is entitled to produce secondary evidence of mortgage deed because original is in custody of person beyond the jurisdiction of the Court: I.L.R. (1964) 1 All. 553: A.I.R. 1964 All. 381.

Contract must show terms to transfer—Agreement to lease suppressed by plaintiff—Admission of oral evidence. See (1956) 2 M.L.J. 515: A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 693. Also when the original is filed in another Court and could not be got without delay: A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 479.

Where the original of a document cannot be admitted in evidence on the ground of privilege under S. 124 no secondary evidence of its contents can be given: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 807: (1937) 2 M.L.J. 381.

Income-tax documents—Suit to recover business dues—Plaintiff claiming defendant to have transacted through intermediaries—Income-tax assessment order against a plaintiff's witness produced to show dealings by defendants through intermediary—Such order being a public document within the meaning of S. 74, its certified copy is admissible under S. 65 (a)—Yet it cannot be used as evidence against the defendant. See Evidence Act, 1872, S.74: 1967 Ker.L.J. 237.

Where a will is in the possession of a person describing himself a notaire in French territory and who states in the witness-box that he is under an obligation not to produce the will in any Court in the Indian Union and so would not produce the will.

Held.—Either the notaire is a person who can legally be compelled by the Court to produce the document or is a person who cannot be legally compelled to do so. If the person is not one who can be legally compelled to produce the original then he is not subject to the process of the Court in the matter of the production of the will and under the second clause of S. 65(a) of the Evidence Act secondary evidence in the form of the authenticated copy becomes admissible. If, on the other hand, he is a person legally bound to produce the original, he refuses to produce it notwithstanding notice, to do so then under the third clause of S. 65(a) secondary evidence becomes admissible: (1958) 71 Mad.L.W. 50(1): (1958) 1 M.L.J. 96: I.L.R. (1958) Mad. 415: A.I.R. 1958 Mad. 393.

Agreement reduced to writing in possession of opposite party—Such party knowing that it would be required to produce it but withholding it—Contents of agreement could be proved by oral evidence: I.L.R. (1962) 2 All. 475: 1963 All.L.J. 443: A.I.R. 1963 All. 313.

No order passed under O. 11, Rules 11, 12 and 13—C.P.Code—Striking out defence cannot be ordered under R. 21—Notice to produce documents given under O. 12, R. 8—Non-compliance with notice—Secondary evidence of documents can be given: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 249.

Plaintiff's suit for declaration that subject-matter of suit is trust property—Plaintiff producing certified copy of trust deed and stating in evidence that he had seen the original deed of trust in possession of defendant—Nature of case showing that defendant must have known that he would be required to produce the document—Held that as there was thus an implied notice under proviso to S. 66(2) to defendant, S. 66(a) was satisfied and hence the production of the certified copy was sufficient proof of the deed itself: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 362.

When case falls under Cl. (a), any secondary evidence (a plain copy of the document) and not necessarily certified copy of document is admissible, though the case may also fall under Cl. (f): 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 209: A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 253.

Secondary evidence—Copy of original letter addressed by Government to Commissioner prepared privately by the party at time of inspection of relevant file is not secondary evidence of the original letter—Document is inadmissible in evidence and no reliance can be placed on it—If party is unable to produce in Court the original letter, it can only be proved by producing certified copy: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 7.

Where the contract was reduced to writing, oral evidence to prove the terms of the contract, is not admissible. But in the case of an oral contract oral evidence to prove its terms is admissible: A.I.R. 1966 All. 595.

Discretion under R. 27 is not to be exercised arbitrarily—Admission of documents—Considerations—R. 27, does not alter rules governing admission of additional evidence—High School certificate and birth extract not produced before trial Court—First appellate Court admitting such documents

Explanation of party that such documents were not in his possession accepted by first appellate Court—Documents not proved—Admission of documents is wrong and is vitiated for want of proof—Duty of Court: 1966 All.W.R. (H.C.) 634.

Copy of award admissible when original in possession of party not subject to process of Court: A.I.R. 1917 Pat. 241: 42 I.C. 617.

Contents of document called for but not produced—Court bound to receive secondary evidence. See 49 I.C. 507.

Where the plaintiff relying upon a registered deed of settlement pleaded that the original had been destroyed by the defendants which was not specifically denied by them and since they were themselves relying upon a will executed by the settlor, held, it was to their interest that the original settlement deed did not see the light of the day; the plaintiff was entitled to rely upon and prove his case by the settlement deed's certified copy: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 493.

Where the plaintiffs had clearly made a reference to the document in question in the plaint but the defendant denied existence of such a document, held, in such a case the question of calling for the document from them did not arise: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 199: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 143.

Where the plaintiff based her claim on the basis of agreement to sell executed by the defendant in her favour, held, as in the normal course of events, such an agreement could not have been in possession of the defendant, and the plaintiff did not show how it came to be in the possession of the defendant and the defendant categorically denied the existence of such agreement, no fault could be found with the trial Court's order declining the plaintiff's application for leading secondary evidence: (1994-2) 107 Punj.L.R. 488.

Where a photocopy of the manuscript of a leaflet defaming an unsuccessful candidate said to have been issued by the successful candidate was sought to be proved as secondary evidence in an election petition but it was not shown under what circumstance the photocopy was prepared and who was then in possession of its original when the photocopy itself was not above suspicion, held, the photocopy could not be allowed to be proved as secondary evidence of the original: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1748: 1975 U.J.(S.C.) 601.

Where the landlord had specifically deposed that the exhibited document was a copy of the notice typed, signed and compared by his Counsel and the original thereof was also so typed, compared and sent to the tenant in his presence, held, the notice under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act clearly stood proved: 1973 All.W.R. 472: 1973 All.L.J. 635.

Where the person in whose possession allegedly the document was, had already died and was thus, not subject to the process of the Court, held, the trial Court was right in granting permission to lead secondary evidence by way of producing a photocopy of the partition deed subject to the proof of loss: (1991-1) 99 Punj.L.R. 15: (1991) 1 Rev.L.R. 354: 1991 Punj.L.J. 143.

Where though one of the defendants called to produce the original document, died and no document was produced, held, its secondary evidence could certainly be admitted: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 199: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 143.

Where the original of a deed of dissolution said to be in the custody of a party was not produced by that party which objected to its admissibility for want of stamps, held, the other party was competent to prove the same by its copy; though the party could not prove the copy as secondary evidence, it could certainly prove it as primary evidence: 1982 Rev.L.R. 3: (1982) 84 Punj.L.R. 18.

When the preliminary fact that the original of the Adoption Yadi is in the possession of the plaintiff was not proved, held, its secondary evidence was not admissible under Cl. (a) of S. 65: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 264: 1977 Mah.L.J. 68 (D.B.).

Where a party to a suit called upon the other party to produce the unregistered will which did not comply on the ground that the will was not in his but in the possession of another party who in his turn denied the very existence of the will, held, loss of the will having been thus proved, the party propounding the will was entitled to prove it by secondary evidence: (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 490: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 145: (1992) 1 Rev.L.R. 300.

5. Notice to produce.—The only purpose of a notice under Ss. 65 and 66 is to give the party an opportunity by producing the original to secure, if he pleases, the best evidence of its contents. Secondary evidence is admissible when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot for any reason not arising from his own default or neglect produce the original document in reasonable time and under S. 66 the Court has absolute power, when it thinks fit, to dispense with a notice under those sections: 63 I.A. 85: (1935-36) 40 Cal.W.N. 226: A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 15: 70 M.L.J. 206 (P.C.).

No notice to the opposite party to produce the document is required, if its secondary evidence is admissible under S. 65 other than under Cl. (a): (1980) 18 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 40.

To permit secondary evidence of documents mentioned in S. 65(a), held, it is incumbent on the party concerned to strictly comply with the requirements of S. 66 and duly require the parties in possession thereof by notice to produce the original documents: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 430: (1986) 1 Cal.H.N. 58 (D.B.).

Reading Ss. 91 and 66 together, it appears that the law imposes an absolute prohibition against tendering of secondary evidence of the contents of the document referred to in S. 65(a) and thereby also prohibits the proof of the terms of the unregistered sale deed by any other mode except by proof of the document itself, when the said document is admitted to be in existence: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 65.

Once notice of production of the document has been served upon a person in whose possession the document has been alleged and there is a refusal to produce the same; the requirement of law as laid down in S. 65(a) is fulfilled: (1990-2) 98 Punj.L.R. 545: 1990 Punj.L.J. 541: (1990) 2 Rev.L.R. 267.

S. 66 requires the giving of a notice to the party to the suit in whose possession or power the document is said to be. Thus, where it was not the case of the defendant, who sought to adduce a certified copy of the original document as secondary evidence, that the original document was in the possession of the plaintiff but his case was that it was with another person who had died, held, the defendant was not required by law under S. 66 to give notice to the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1977 All. 470.

Where a document of title which is in possession of a party is not produced by him after notice to produce the same, the party giving notice is entitled to give secondary evidence of the document: (1930) 32 Bom.L.R. 1435: A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 33; (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 929: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 945. See also 206 I.C. 126: A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 218.

Scope of—Deed of Wakf—Plaintiff mosque claiming possession of property as trustee—Defendant claiming the property as her own and knowledge of execution of wakfnama by her deceased husband denied—Defendant giving in evidence that she might be in possession of the deed though she was not sure of it—Held, that the case fell under S. 62(2) and no notice was required to be given and the certified copy of the deed was admissible in evidence: 16 Law Rep. 271: (1968) 2 Mys.L.J. 410: A.I.R. 1969 Mys. 103.

Where the defendant sought permission to adduce secondary evidence of a will in his favour as the person given the original will for mutation refused to return it, held, without issuing notice to that person under S. 66, the trial Court was not justified in permitting secondary evidence subject to the proof of loss of the original will; the loss of the original will has to be proved under S. 65(a) read with S. 66 before secondary evidence is permitted: (1990-2) 98 Punj.L.R. 228: 1990 Punj.L.J. 428: (1990) 2 Rev.L.R. 49.

See also Notes under S. 66, infra.

6. Clause (b).—The effect of Ss. 64 and 65 is that where a person, or his representative-in-interest, against whom a document is sought to be proved has admitted in writing the existence, condition or contents of the original document, such admission is admissible. The question as to the contents of a will is really one of title; where many years have passed since the testator's death, the safer guide is the conduct, influenced by the will, of the parties dealing with the property immediately or shortly after death: (1977) 1 Karn.L.J. 218 (D.B.).

Original admitted by opposite party in writing. See (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 533, cited under S. 63, supra. Where in a suit for redemption, it is proved that in wajib-ul-arz predecessors in title of the defendants admitted in writing the existence, condition and also the contents of the original S. 65(b) applies: 148 I.C. 1172: A.I.R. 1934 All. 529.

In order to avail of the provision in S. 65 (b) the written admission of the contents of the document sought to be produced has to be the admission of the person against whom it is sought to be produced. A plaintiff who fails to produce the original document on which he has brought the suit and fails to prove the loss of the original cannot be permitted to produce secondary evidence on the basis of an admission of the defendant of the contents of the document: A.I.R. 1949 All. 677. A denial of the execution of a bond though accompained by a statement of discharge of the debt cannot be regarded as an admission within the meaning of S. 65(b) so as to dispense with the production of the document. Pleading ignorance of the execution of the document for all intents and purposes amounts to a denial of the execution of a document. A plea of ignorance of the execution of a document accompanied by even an alternative plea of payment cannot amount to an admission of the execution of the document: 1958 An.L.T. 440: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 418.

The statement contained in the debtor's application to the Debt Conciliation Board cannot be regarded as an admission within S. 65(b). It is a statement under S. 6, Debt Conciliation Act, the statement is not to be deemed a statement of the amount admittedly due but of the amount claimed. The debtor is in no sense promising to pay this amount; on the contrary he is applying to a Debt Conciliation Board with a view to having his liability cut down and it cannot be inferred that there is any promise to pay anything or any admission of liability for anything: A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 95: 1941 Nag.L.J. 134. Acknowledgment of debt in partition deed. See 1972 Mys.L.J. (S.N.) 286.

When in a suit based on an award, the terms whereof were set out in detail in the plaint and they were not denied in the written statement, but the defendant alleged his repudiation of the award and further alleged the award was neither stamped nor registered and the same was superseded by a further agreement. Held, if the award itself was inadmissible for want of stamp and registration, its secondary evidence is also not admissible. But since the terms of the award were not denied in the written statement, it must be held they were admitted (O.8, R.5, C.P.Code). The award need not be produced in evidence, and the question of admissibility did not arise in the appeal for decision. The terms of the award, in the said circumstances, were enforceable: A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 23.

Where admissibility of the sale deed's certified copy was not challenged by the plaintiffs as they were basing their claim on the same deed but gave the wrong date of its registration for ulterior motives, no objection is raised to the document being filed with application for placing it on record nor at the time when it was exhibited nor in the grounds of appeal, the executants having colluded with the plaintiffs could not be examined as witnesses, and execution of the deed has been admitted on oath by two of the parties to the suit, held, the secondary evidence by way of the certified copy was sufficient to prove the sale by, as well as the contents of, the sale deed: 1993 Mah.L.J. 523 (D.B.).

The defendant pleaded that the original was not lost but had been suppressed because it contained an endorsement of payment. Held, that as the pleading of the defendant amounted to an admission of execution of a document, the plaintiff could maintain the suit on its copy without proving the loss of the original: 11 All.L.J. 734: 20 I.C. 955; 11 All.L.J. 731: 21 I.C. 81.

Where in a case of a deported foreigner's surreptitious re-entry, his earlier deportation was proved by documentary evidence and the Counsel for the accused admitted the genuineness of the Police Officer's letters containing details of the earlier deportation, held, the contents of the letter stood admitted and proved. [1981 Cr.L.J. 379 (All.), Rel. on]: 1982 All.L.J. 703. See also (1989-1) 30 Guj.L.R. 122.

Where the defendants' predecessor-in-interest had admitted execution of the will, held, the defendants are bound by the will; the plaintiff having proved loss of the will is entitled to prove its contents by secondary evidence: (1993-1) 103 Punj.L.R. 206.

Where a copy or contents by oral account of a document is admitted on secondary evidence, held, the execution of the original need not be proved; but if the original itself is sought to be tendered, it must be duly proved; the rule for public documents cannot be any different. [A.I.R. 1951 All. 816, Dissent. from; A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 318, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

Admissibility of admission contained in an application presented in a proceeding under S. 145 Cr.P.Code, certified copy whereof was produced. See (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 255.

7. Clause (c).—S. 65(c) consists of three parts, namely (i) where the original has been destroyed; (ii) where the original is lost; (iii) where the original cannot be produced within reasonable time for a reason not arising out of the party's own default or neglect; the three parts are in the alternative as is indicated by the use of the word 'or' in between 'destroyed' or 'lost' and between 'lost' and the 'third eventuality': (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 378:

S. 65(c) consists of two clauses; the first is an independent clause dealing with the situation where the original, having been destroyed or lost, cannot be produced; the words 'not arising from his own default or neglect' do not qualify the first clause but it applies to the second clause where the party offering evidence is unable to produce the original within reasonable time or for any other reason. Thus, if the Court finds that the document has been lost or destroyed, it has to allow the party concerned to lead secondary evidence; and if it finds that the document cannot be produced in reasonable time for any other reason, then it has to take into consideration the conduct of that party: 1976 Rev.L.R. 81: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 239.

Law does not require that the loss of the original document should be proved in absolute terms before its proof by secondary evidence is permitted; secondary evidence permissible for having been lost or destroyed or not available within reasonable time for a reason not attributable to the party's own neglect or fault; while permitting proof by secondary evidence, the Court does not pronounce on the evidentiary value of the secondary evidence: (1993-1) 103 Punj.L.R. 171: 1993 Punj.L.J. 201.

A party seeking permission to produce secondary evidence regarding a document, is not required to prove the loss of document in absolute terms. Thus, where it was clear from the statement of the plaintiff and the petition writer in whose register the entry of the document had been made that plaintiff was not in a position to produce the document because the person in whose possession the document could be found, were either dead or had denied the execution of the document, held, the plaintiff was entitled to prove the entry in the register of the petition writer by way of secondary evidence: (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 190.

If it is found that a document has been lost, secondary evidence may be given and whether proof is sufficient in a case is a question of fact: L.R. 4 A. 201 (Rev.).

The law requires proof of the existence of certain circumstances before secondary evidence by production of a certified copy of a document would be permissible, and when there is no attempt whatever to establish the necessary circumstances, secondary evidence cannot be admitted. In order to enable a party to offer secondary evidence of the contents of a document under the proviso to Cl. (c) of S. 65, it must be established that the document had actually been lost or destroyed, or shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the non-production of the document does not arise from his neglect or defaults: I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 420: A.I.R. 1944 Sind 61. For producing secondary evidence enquiry is necessary that the original document is lost: (1980) 2 M.P.W.N. 19.

Loss of a document can be proved by several modes including its having become untraceable. Thus, where the plaintiff never had custody of documents more than thirty years old and stated on oath that they were not at all traceable, held, the loss of documents was established; proving them by certified copies granted by the Sub-Registrar could be allowed as well by raising the presumption under S. 90: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 611: 1991 Punj.L.J. 473.

The general principle is that if the original document exists and is available, it is the best evidence and must be produced; but if the original is lost, destroyed, detained and not produced by the opponent or third person despite notice or is physically irremovable, its secondary evidence is admissible. Thus, where the plaintiff had testified that he had lost the original (of which the certified copy was produced) which was in his bag and was left behind by him in the bus, held, the requirements of S. 65 stood satisfied; the certified copy was properly admitted: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 66.

Under Cl. (c) of S. 65 secondary evidence may be given when the party offering evidence cannot produce the original for reason not arising from his own default or neglect, in reasonable time. Thus, when the original document had been filed in a Court in Calcutta, held, it can be assumed that the same could not have been produced before the trial Court in Gauhati within a reasonable time: A.I.R. 1988 Gau. 1: (1988) 1 Gau.L.R. 76.

The satisfaction of the trial Court, regarding the loss of the original document, is paramount and it is not essential that a formal application seeking permission to produce secondary evidence must necessarily be filed. Thus, where the trial Court allowed the defendant to produce secondary evidence of the will because in another previous suit the loss of the original will had already been established in the presence of the present plaintiff and in that case too leading of secondary evidence had been allowed, held, the trial Court's order could not be interfered with: 1984 Hindu L.R. 506 (P.&H.).

The statutory presumption under S. 90 is not applicable to the certified copies of the documents being 30 years old. The certified copy of the registered Kabuliyat may, however, be received as secondary evidence of the original documents under S. 65(c) when it was transpired from evidence that the original was lost and not traceable and that non-production of the original was not due to any default or neglect on the part of the party producing the certified copy: A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 68: (1986-87) 91 Cal.W.N. 958 (D.B.).

Where without making an averment that the original document was lost or destroyed or otherwise not available, only its photocopy was filed with the plaint and original was not produced even when issues were framed, and after several opportunities leave was sought to prove the document by secondary evidence without mentioning as to how the original document was lost and no affidavit in support was filed, held, in view of the plea being vague, the trial Court was justified in declining the request: (1988) 2 Rev.L.R. 69. See also (1990) 2 An.L.T. 171: (1990) 1 An.W.R. (N.R.C.) 13.

Loss of document— Evidence of person deposing to loss of document in his custody is sufficient to allow secondary evidence: (1979) 2 Ren.L.R. 231; 1979 Rajdhani L.R. 545 (Del.).

Loss of the original will is a material fact which has to be incorporated, under O. 6, R. 2 of the C.P.Code, in the written statement; it was all the more incumbent on the defendant if he desired to prove the will by secondary evidence to make out the case therefor in terms of S. 65(c); held, the trial Court rightly disallowed the defendant to prove the will by secondary evidence: 1993 Punj.L.J. 203.

To record a finding that the document is lost, to enable a party to produce a certified copy thereof, it must be established that a thorough search had been made in places where it was likely to be found and of persons likely to have possession of the same: A.I.R. 1966 Cal. 13; 1989 W.L.N. (U.C.) 437 (Raj.)

In order to admit secondary evidence in proof of a registered private deed of trust, it is important to bear in mind the nature of the document, the evidence about the search, the evidence about the enquiries made and the evidence about the loss of the original: A.I.R. 1975 Cal. 381.

In order to be allowed to produce secondary evidence of a document, the party must establish that it had made a thorough search of places and persons where or with whom the original document was likely to be found; where there was paucity of such evidence, held, the party could not be allowed to tender secondary evidence of the document. [A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 568; A.I.R. 1966 Cal. 13, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 430: (1986) 1 Cal.H.N. 58 (D.B.).

A party seeking to produce and prove documents relevant to the points in issue is entitled to prove the existence and loss of their originals; on such proof, it is entitled to prove them by secondary evidence; even if the party entitled to do so was remiss at the initial stages and had also not relied upon the documents, held, it should not be deprived of the opportunity to prove them; the other party may well be compensated by costs. [(1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 173; (1989-1) 95 Punj.L.R. 55, Disting.]: (1993-1) 103 Punj.L.R. 630: (1993) 1 Rev.L.R. 315.

Every deed being the best evidence of its contents, its non-production will necessarily raise a suspicion in the mind of the Court and great care and circumspection would be needed in order to decide whether there has been really a bona fide loss. S. 65 permits the leading of a secondary evidence only where the original has been destroyed or lost. There must be a sufficient proof of the search for the original to render secondary evidence admissible. It must be established that the party has exhausted all the sources and means in the search of the document, which were available to him. Where the trial Court has come to the conclusion that the loss of the document has been established without taking into consideration the prerequisite conditions that are required by the Evidence Act, the appellate Court would certainly interfere with the discretion wrongly exercised by the lower Court: 1958 An.L.T. 440: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 418, followed in (1959) 2 An.W.R. 357: A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 568.

Where before 1950, the rule or practice in Manipur was that the Sub-Registrar sent the document of transfer registered by him directly to the Revenue Officer, concerned, for the purpose of mutation, and the sale deed in respect of which secondary evidence was sought to be given was similarly sent to the Revenue Officer, and a mutation case was started on the basis of that sale deed and the plaintiff who wanted to give secondary evidence not being in possession of the original sale deed, therefore, moved the trial Court, for obtaining the record of the mutation case connected with that sale but the record could not be traced; in these circumstances and when the plaintiff could not be expected to be in possession of the sale deed, there can be no doubt that it was established satisfactorily that the document was not forthcoming from the custody of the Revenue Court in which it was filed. It could be, therefore, safely presumed that it was lost and that secondary evidence be rightly admitted by the Courts: A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 16.

S. 65(c) is inapplicable to the case of previous convictions and secondary evidence could be admissible to prove previous convictions in cases where the records of the previous trials and convictions have been destroyed and are not available. But a mere conviction slip is not such secondary evidence: I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 308: A.I.R. 1941 Sind 173: 43 Cr.L.J. 12. On this clause see also I.L.R. 5 Pat. 777 referring to I.L.R. 6 Mad. 80; I.L.R. 27 Cal. 639 (P.C.); 24 Mad.L.W. 227; 105 I.C. 502; 8 Pat.L.T. 510: A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 61 (Original of public document destroyed—Secondary evidence admissible); A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 161 (Original telegram destroyed). See also 1937 R.D. 119; 14 I.A. 71; 8 W.R. (1864) 301 (Decree destroyed during mutiny); 22 W.R. 303; I.L.R. 5 Cal. 886; I.L.R. 7 Cal. 98; 6 C.L.R. 199 (Document destroyed by fire); 1937 R.D. 119; I.L.R. 11 Pat. 569: 138 I.C. 419: A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 157 (Record room burnt during mutiny).

Agreement to relinquish unregistered but enforceable under the doctrine of part performance—Secondary evidence of its contents may be given if it is lost: A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 181.

Loss of original of document produced merely as evidence should be proved: 122 I.C. 751.

Where the existence and loss of the originals has been satisfactorily established, secondary evidence of their contents becomes admissible under S. 65(c), Indian Evidence Act. Under the same section any secondary evidence of the contents of the originals would be admissible: A.I.R. 1957 All. 388: 1957 Cr.L.J. 695.

That clause of S. 65 which provides that in case of (e) or (f) a certified copy of the document but no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible seems to apply to a case in which a public document is still in existence on the public records and that provision appears to have been intended to protect the originals of public records from the danger to which they would be subject to constant production of such documents in Courts in evidence, and the said clause does not interfere with the general rule of evidence given in Cl. (c), i.e., in cases where the original is destroyed or lost. Where the original depositions have been destroyed and are not available in the Court of the Magistrate, the party is entitled to produce the uncertified copies that have been issued to him: A.I.R. 1955 Mys. 139: I.L.R. (1955) Mys. 616.

Where the solicitor stated on oath from a witness-box that he was entrusted by his client, the plaintiff with two original Hundis, to raise action thereon, that a copy each of the two hundis was prepared under his supervision and compared by him with the originals, that the original hundis were lodged in the iron safe of his office but were missing after there were differences with his solicitor partner and that search was made for the missing documents in the iron safe and also elsewhere where they were most likely to be found.

Held, (i) that copies of hundis and their contents could be received as secondary evidence under S. 63(3) and 65(c); (ii) that it was however open to the Court to reject such evidence at a later stage of the trial if the evidence revealed that the two original hundis could not be said to have been lost or that the copies received in evidence had neither been made from nor compared with the originals; (iii) that S. 45-A of Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 would not in terms apply to such a case. Not availing of S. 45-A would not necessarily mean that the Hundis were not lost. Surely a recalcitrant drawer refusing to give a duplicate bill may be compelled to do so by a suit. But that does not mean that in all cases there must be a prior suit to lay the foundation of a subsequent suit grounded on a lost bill; (iv) that the word 'lost' in S. 65(c) does not necessarily mean lost for ever. It only means that the thing lost could not be found out, when it is needed: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 51.

Presumption under S. 90—When open. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 90: A.I.R. 1968 All. 363.

Where the reference to arbitration is admittedly in writing, it is for the party proving its contents, to produce the document itself in Court or to show that it has been lost, before claiming to give secondary evidence of those contents: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 1090: 1963 Raj.L.W. 632.

Where the plaintiffs mortgagees have not proved the loss of the original mortgage deed, they are not entitled to tender its certified copy, as the basis of their suit as secondary evidence under S. 65(c) of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 300. See also (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 93.

Cls. (c), (e) and (f)—Original order authorising an officer to do certain acts not traceable—Any kind of secondary evidence of such authorisation is admissible under Cl. (c)—Cl. (e) could only apply where the original is a public document in existence: 1964 All.W.R. (H.C.) 413: 1964 All.L.J. 788.

Where in a suit for recovery of possession of mortgaged land, the plaintiff mortgagee did not state in his plaint that he had lost the mortgage-deed but when appearing as a witness stated that he had filed the original mortgage-deed in some Court but he did not remember the date or the year when he filed and the Court or case in which he filed it, the plaintiff could not be said to have made out any case for producing secondary evidence under S. 65, and under S. 91 the certified copy of the mortgage-deed could not be looked into nor could oral evidence be considered in proof of the terms of the mortgage-deed: 1969 Cur.L.J. 271 (Punj.).

Where a suit is brought on certified copies of documents and the loss of the document is not proved the suit must be dismissed as no secondary evidence is admissible in the circumstances: 23 I.C. 886.

Mortgage deed executed in England comprising properties situate in India—Loss of deed before registration—Secondary evidence may be given: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 134: I.L.R. 7 Pat. 99. Document lost—Copy of, bearing endorsement by deceased predecessor of party that it was a copy of original—Admissibility: 56 M.L.J. 730 (P.C.).

Where the tenant's plea was that he had sent the rent by money order but the landlord had refused to accept it and the tenant was allowed but took no steps to summon the record of money order and refusal from the Rent Controller's record, held, since the liability to obtain the original was attributable to the tenant's neglect or default, he could not be allowed to adduce secondary evidence: A.I.R. 1981 Cal. 334.

Where the plaintiff filed an application seeking permission to adduce secondary evidence in respect of the sale deed and the original power of attorney in his favour since same were lost by the Patwari Halqa to whom same were given for purposes of mutation, held, the trial Court was not justified in rejecting the said application without calling upon the plaintiff to adduce the evidence in support of alleged loss of documents: (1992) 2 Rev.L.R. 319 (P.&H.).

Where the original enquiry proceeding book was not produced before the Industrial Tribunal which declined to admit its secondary evidence as no convincing evidence was produced about the search to find the original was made but to no effect, held, the Tribunal had correctly rejected the secondary evidence as inadmissible as requirements of S. 63 and S. 65(c) had not been fulfilled. [A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 532, Foll.]: (1990) 2 C.L.R. 191 (Karn.).

Telegraph Rules, 1951, Rr. 164 and 166—Secondary evidence—Prosecution applying for permission to file copies of telegrams—Copies of telegrams are admissible in evidence after lapse of three months as presumption arises under the Telegraph Rules that originals are destroyed after three months—Magistrate refusing to permit as it would protract the proceedings—Held, the order of the Magistrate was bad: 1959 Raj.L.W. 537.

Where the defendants in a suit for specific performance had denied the receipt of telegrams purportedly sent to them by the plaintiff and the transmission of the telegrams by their certified copies and destruction of the original transcript was proved by official witnesses from the Telegraph Department, held, in the absence of the defendants' plea or proof of their not residing at the address given in the certified copies and the cause title of the suit, the Court could draw the presumption that the telegraphic messages as contained in the certified copies were received by them: A.I.R. 1988 Karn. 221: I.L.R. (1987) 1 Karn. 3568 (D.B.).

Where the Court's below found that there was sufficient evidence on record to establish that the sale deed having been lost, the plaintiff was unable to produce it and was entitled to prove the deed by secondary evidence, held, being a finding of fact, it could not be assailed in second appeal on the basis of insufficiency of evidence. [A.I.R. 1959 Andh. Pra. 568, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1973 All. 99: 1972 All.L.J. 807.

Where the plaintiff in possession of the registered gift deed merely stated that he has lost the deed or it has become untraceable and alleges the same in the plaint and the application for leave to prove the deed by secondary evidence, held, it is sufficient to allow his application; merely because he had lodged no Police report or is unable to prove the theft is no ground to reject his request; loss can never be proved absolutely; evidence of the person in possession of the original that same was lost is sufficient: A.I.R. 1983 Him. Pra. 13: I.L.R. (1982) Him. Pra. 499. However, where it was not proved that the original gift deed, which was not thirty years old, had been lost or destroyed and no evidence was given to prove execution and attestation of a valid gift, held, secondary evidence in respect thereof could not be admitted: (1979) 2 M.P.W.N. 86.

Where the plaintiff alleged that the original document filed by him with the plaint had been replaced by a forged document in the Court record and sought leave to lead secondary evidence, held, tampering of documents which are on Court file deserves a serious notice by the Court; unless the trial Court had recorded a finding that the original document had been lost and replaced by a forged document, the trial Court could not permit production of secondary evidence: 1978 Raj.L.W. 411.

Where the original agreement was lost from the Court's custody as made out from its record, held, the opportunity afforded to the plaintiff, without formally proving the original's loss, to adduce secondary evidence was fully covered by S. 65(c): A.I.R. 1989 Pat. 96.

Where the document sent to the Sub-Registrar by the Court for ascertaining the value of the property was lost there, held, as the loss of document was not attributable to the plaintiff's default or negligence, its xerox copy available with him could be admitted as secondary evidence: (1992) 3 An.L.T. 575.

As to evidence of search before document can be considered to be lost, see I.L.R. 19 Cal. 438; 49 I.C. 1006. Document—Lost in Court—Secondary evidence admissible: 144 I.C. 812: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 782.

Where the plaintiffs did not allege in the plaint that the original agreement to sell had been lost or destroyed or was not otherwise available and it was only after several opportunities to produce the evidence had been obtained by them that they sought permission to produce secondary evidence without stating as to when and under what circumstances the original agreement was lost, held, their prayer was rightly rejected: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 173: (1988) 2 Rev.L.R. 69.

Where the original dying declaration, testified by the Magistrate to have been given to the Head Constable who testified to have prepared a copy thereof and returned to the Magistrate, had been lost, held, the prosecution was entitled to give secondary evidence thereof which would consist the Magistrate's as also of the Head Constable's testimony that the copy prepared from the original was a true copy: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1567: 1979 Cr.L.J. 1081. But where the original dying declaration had been lost with no copy thereof having been made and nothing indicated that non-production of the dying declaration was deliberate or with an oblique purpose, held, no adverse inference could be drawn against the prosecution; mere plea that the dying declaration might have contained something different and favourable to the defence would not prove prejudice: 1984 All.W.C. (Supp.) 256.

Where the plaintiff annexed photocopies of the sale and mortgage deeds to the plaint with no mention about their originals having been lost and despite the defendant's insistence for production of their originals and the plaintiff having been granted five opportunities over a year and a half, the originals were not produced and the plaintiff by his vague application bereft of any particulars as to the place or time or the circumstances of the loss of originals, and unsupported by affidavit, sought leave to adduce secondary evidence, held, the trial Court clearly erred in permitting the plaintiff to adduce secondary evidence: (1993) 1 Rev.L.R. 278 (P.&H.).

Where due publicity to the substance of a notification under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act is required to be given in the concerned locality in the manner specified in the section and the original records thereof have been lost, held, it is open to the party relying on it to prove the contents by secondary evidence under S. 65 which includes copies made from or compared with the original or the oral account thereof by a person who had seen it: A.I.R. 1974 Cal. 210.

Where there was no proof that the sada hukumnama had been lost by theft as alleged by the plaintiff, held, the secondary oral evidence of its contents given by the witnesses is rendered inadmissible; however, the evidence of the witnesses can certainly be used to prove that the settlement of suit land by the mahanth with the plaintiff was made in his presence provided that is based not on the contents of the hukumnama but on their personal knowledge: A.I.R. 1972 Pat. 186.

Where the Office Kanungo, as affirmed by the Tehsildar, stated that the original record was not traceable and, thus the plaintiff was unable to produce the original will within a reasonable time but not due to his own default or neglect, held, the permission to lead secondary evidence may be granted; grant of permission, however, will have no bearing on the evidentiary value of the evidence: (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 378: (1992) 1 Rev.L.R. 223: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 204: 1992 Punj.L.J. 74.

Where what was exhibited was only a typed copy, bearing neither any signatures nor any official stamp and though within a rectangle thereon the words L.T.M. of the aggrieved party are written but there is no thumb-mark at all and there is nothing on record to indicate as to the whereabouts of certificate issued by the Civil Surgeon, Ahmedabad of which the exhibited document purports to be a copy, held, in the absence of any material to show that the original certificate was indeed issued and was not traceable, its exhibited copy was not admissible: (1987-2) 7 Guj.L.H. 239: (1987-2) 28 Guj.L.R. 1137.

The original copy of a registered document does not fall in the category of documents referred to in S. 65(e) and (f); its secondary evidence cannot be permitted unless the existence and loss of the original is pleaded and accounted for to the Court's satisfaction: 1980 Hindu L.R. 273 (P.&H.) (F.B.).

Where the original landlord had admitted in cross-examination that the rent note/licence deed was in his possession but later on he stated without oath that he had lost it, held, the loss of document was not proved, especially when the circumstances of the loss were not explained; its photocopy could not be allowed to be tendered as secondary evidence: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 521.

Where the record of the Sub-Registrar Office was destroyed during riots and the plaintiff, unable to produce a certified copy of the sale deed registered there, produced a copy prepared from a certified copy presented in an earlier suit, held, the copy is admissible in evidence; S. 65 safeguards the interest of persons unable to produce either the original document or its secondary evidence as per S. 63; under S. 65(a), (c) and (d) any secondary evidence is admissible irrespective of the provisions of S. 63 or S. 65(f). [A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 253, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 73: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 61.

8. Clause (e).—See A.I.R. 1953 Pat. 310. The combined effect of Ss. 35, 65(e), 76, 77 and 79 is to enable the proof of public documents by the certified copies of the extracts therefrom: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

A person seeking to prove a public document is relieved of the obligation to produce its original; he may prove it by producing its certified copy; it merely proves what the document contains but nothing more. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

The primary evidence of a document is the document produced for the inspection of the Court; its secondary evidence means and includes certified copies given under S. 76; under S. 64, documents must be proved by primary evidence except in cases mentioned in S. 65. Under S. 65(e) only a certified copy of the public document and no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible to prove the original. [A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 57, Rel. on]: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 29.

The Registrar's office certainly keeps a public record of the exchange deeds registered in that office. The certified copy of the exchange deed, therefore, is a secondary evidence of the public record kept in the Registrar's office. It is, therefore, admissible in evidence both under S. 65(e) or (f): (1991-1) 99 Punj.L.R. 129.

A will, even after registration, does not become a public document; it remains a private document; its certified copy from the office of Registrar is admissible only for proving the contents of the original, but is not sufficient to dispense with the production and proof of the original document. Thus, a certified copy of the will cannot be produced to prove the document without proving loss of the original document: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 235: 1976 Rev.L.R. 93: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 21.

The plaint and written statement form part of record of the acts of the Judge who is a Judicial Officer and to the extent of its proving the factum of filing a particular suit against a particular person the said document constitutes a public document within the meaning of S. 74; they are admissible by producing the certified copies to the extent of showing the existence and the condition of such documents within the meaning of S. 65: (1987) 2 An.L.T. 597.

The certified copy of the plaint is a 'public document' and is, therefore, also admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the contents thereof. [(1873) 10 Beng.L.R. (Appen.) 13, Foll.]: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82.

The certified copy of the sale deed in respect of disputed land is a 'public document' and is, therefore, admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82. Birth and death registers are public records within the meaning of S. 65 and, therefore, entries therein can be proved by filing certified copies thereof: 1979 Punj.L.J. 297: (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 497: 1979 Rev.L.R. 378.

Where the Amin as a Local Commissioner was directed to ascertain whether there was any boundary mark on the suit land but he reported that the suit land was recorded in the plaintiff's name, held, the report, not being within the Commission's terms, was inadmissible and could not be taken into consideration; the revenue record being a public record could be admitted in evidence by a certified copy thereof, not by way of the Amin's report: A.I.R. 1981 Sikkim 59: 1979 Sikkim L.J. 24 (D.B.).

Where cyclostyled Rules, being Government orders, approved by the Ministry of Defence were circulated to various Departments by a cyclostyled copy of the covering letter, bearing cyclostyled signatures of the Director General, held, it cannot be said to be a primary evidence of public documents; it may amount to secondary evidence under S. 63(2) as a copy made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves ensure its accuracy but before such secondary evidence is admitted in evidence, the contents of the original, the primary evidence, must be proved: A.I.R. 1987 All. 83: 1986 All.W.C. 692: (1986) 12 All.L.R. 343: 1987 All.C.J. 35.

A profit and loss statement and a statement showing the details of net income filed by an assessee in support of his return of income furnished under S. 22 of the Income-tax Act, are public documents with reference to S. 74 of the Evidence Act of which certified copies would be admissible under S. 65(e) of the Evidence Act. There is nothing in S. 54 of the Income-tax Act which prohibits a party from putting in evidence a certified copy of an income-tax return if that return is a public document: I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 450: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 768: (1940) 2 M.L.J. 257 (F.B.).

Certified copies of income-tax returns relating to a firm and statement filed in support of them, being public documents in the custody of a public officer, may be presumed to be what they purport to be. It is unnecessary to prove the signatures of the particular partners on the originals: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 200: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 499. But see (1939) 1 M.L.J. 791; I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 329: 50 Mad.L.W. 815: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 161; I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 394: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 187: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1169.

An Income-tax return as well as a statement filed in support of it is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act. Certified copies thereof would, therefore, be admissible under S. 65(e) of that Act and though a Court is prohibited from requiring a public servant to produce the documents mentioned in S. 54 of the Income-tax Act or to give evidence in support of them, it does not follow that the Court may not admit in evidence a document which falls within S. 54(1) of the Income-tax Act.

All that S. 54, Income-tax Act, means is that the income-tax authorities are to regard communications made to them for the purposes of the Income-tax Act as being confidential, the object being to enable people to feel that they can freely state the facts relating to their income, facts which may often involve confidential matters relating to their business, without fear of the matters being disclosed. If a document can be given in evidence, without requiring a public servant to produce it, there is nothing in the section to prevent that from being done.

Certified copies of a public document do not and need not contain any endorsement as to the person who obtained them. If such certified copies are filed they must be admitted in evidence under the Evidence Act, "to prove the existence, condition or contents of such documents without reference to the person who procure them": (1957) 2 An.W.R. 499: 1958 An.L.T. 135: (1958) 33 I.T.R. 116: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 200.

An income-tax return is not a document or a public record of a private document within the meaning of S. 74 and so S. 65 does not apply: I.L.R. 56 Bom. 324: (1932) 34 Bom.L.R. 236: A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 291.

Under S. 65(a) secondary evidence of the contents of an income-tax return would not be admissible and the Income-tax Officer is subject to every process of the Court: A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 546: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 791. See also I.L.R. 56 Bom. 324.

Assessment order can be produced by an assessee or his representative-in-interest in evidence, and in such a case, the prohibition provided in S. 54 of Income-tax Act, 1922 does not apply. [A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 11, Affirmed]: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 671: 1971 U.J. (S.C.) 159.

In view of S. 42 of the Bihar Agricultural Income-tax Act, party cannot insist upon the agricultural income-tax authorities giving the particulars of any statement of return or other documents relating to an assessment. All that the section lays down is that certain documents and certain facts would be confidential. Even supposing that an assessment order is included in the documents referred to in sub-S. (1) of S. 42 of the said Act, there is nothing in the section to prevent a person , who has already obtained a certified copy from putting it in evidence in any Court. The assessment orders are public documents within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act, as forming the acts, or records of the act of public officers. Under S. 65 of the Evidence Act therefore, certified copies of the assessment orders could certainly be put in evidence: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 515.

Decree—'Public document'—Proof by certified copy—Presumption as to genuineness. Held, that the decree of the Calcutta High Court of 1942 was a public document, capable of being proved by a certified copy under S. 65(e) and a presumption as regards the genuineness of this certified copy did arise by virtue of the combined operations of Ss. 76, 77 and 79 and that S. 86 did not stand in the way. A public document within the meaning of S. 74 can be properly and adequately proved by the production of a certified copy thereof by virtue of Cl. (e) of S. 65. The principle of the rule is that even though the original of a public document is in existence and available, secondary evidence thereof in the shape of a certified copy of it would be admissible. The decree in question could, therefore, be proved by the production of a certified copy thereof and no other proof of it was at all called for.

The Calcutta High Court being a Court in India, the additional certificate as regards any judicial record thereof which might conceivably have been necessary under the pre-existing law to enable a presumption of genuineness to be raised about it in any Court in the United State of Rajasthan was no longer necessary and S. 86 as amended in 1951 could not stand in the way of a presumption being raised as to the genuineness of the decree in question: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 94.

Mutation in landlord's rent-roll—Proof of. See A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 521. Registered private receipt is not a public document: A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83: (1943) 2 M.L.J. 51 (P.C.).

An order of a District Magistrate under R. 56 of the Defence of India Rules is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act, and hence the only manner in which such a document may be legally proved in by production of the original or by a certified copy of the original: I.L.R. 24 Pat. 143: A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 210.

Kerala Forest Act, 1961 (IV of 1962), Ss. 19, 27—Offence under S. 27—Proof of notification under S. 19 necessary—No judicial notice can be taken—Notification is a public document—Proof—Nature of: 1966 Ker.L.J. 76.

A compromise filed in recent suit may be proved by producing a certified copy as the compromise so filed is a part of public record: L.R. 1 All. 132 (Rev.). See also U.B.R. (1909) 4th Qr. Evi. 19 (Supplementary survey records); 1 P.R. 1914 (Cr.); 15 Cr.L.J. 344; 5 P.R. 1903 (Cr.). Certified copies of registered deeds: 103 I.C. 752: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 817.

Memorandum of Association of a Company—Is a public document: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 390.

Secondary evidence of returns filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies is admissible as such returns constitute the public records of private documents within S. 74 (2): I.L.R. 45 Cal. 169: (1916-17) 21 Cal.W.N. 1161.

Order granting letters of administration with copy of will annexed, if public document—Certified copy, if admissible. See (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 1063: 30 I.C. 690. Certified copy of probate in Australia—Secondary evidence. See 11 I.C. 261.

9. Clause (f).—Certified copy from office of Sub-Registrar of registered sale deed is as good as original sale-deed to prove consideration: (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. (Del.) 17.

A registered document is not a currency note which, if lost, the right to the property therein is also lost; under S. 65(c), secondary evidence of the contents of a document is admissible if the original is lost; under S. 65(f), secondary evidence is also admissible of the public records kept in a state of private document which is also a public record falling under S. 74; under S. 57 of the Registration Act, the Sub-Registrar is authorised to grant certified copies of the documents entered in its Book of registered documents; thus, a lost original sale deed can be proved by the certified copy granted by the Sub-Registrar: A.I.R. 1989 Ori. 27: (1988) 65 Cut.L.T. 586.

Registered deed of mortgage—Certified copy—Admissible as secondary evidence: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 249: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 40.

A certified copy of a robokari is admissible in evidence: (1917-18) 22 Cal.W.N. 742: 46 I.C. 689.

Certified copies of registered deeds: 103 I.C. 752: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 817.

Where no attempt was made to establish any ground entitling a party to lead secondary evidence of what is not an original entry but an original document which must be in the custody of either the executant or some other person if proved to have been made over to the latter by the executant; such a document is not admissible in evidence by simply producing its certified copy from the registration office without taking steps for production of the original or laying foundation for leading secondary evidence. [(1966) 32 Cut.L.T. 343, Expl.]: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 1211 (D.B.).

Where in a suit for declaration of title and injunction, the plaintiff produced a certified copy of the will from the Court in which the original will had earlier been produced, held, when the certified copy was admitted in evidence and no objection was raised, non-production of the original will could not subsequently be urged as a ground to invalidate the will: A.I.R. 1994 Karn. 20.

'Adangal' which is one of the Revenue Accounts maintained by the Karnam, who is a public officer, is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act and the contents of that document can be proved by production of a certified copy of the same: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 13.

A notification which is issued by the Central Government or the State Government or by a Department of the Government is a public document and a certified copy of it may be produced in order to prove the existence, conditions or contents of that document under S. 65 of the Evidence Act. Under S. 78, such a copy has to be certified by the Head of the Department which issued the notification. It can also be taken into evidence if the Official Gazette in which the notification purported to have been printed by order of the Government has been produced for inspection of the Court: 1960 B.L.J.R. 12: 1960 Cr.L.J. 634: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 213.

S. 57(5) of the Indian Registration Act provides that a certified copy of a document obtained from a Registrar's Office shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document. That means that the mere production of a certified copy without any further oral evidence to support it would be enough to show what the original document contained. But the law is that a certified copy of what has been copied in the books of registration is admissible to prove the contents of the original document only when a case is made out for the introduction of secondary evidence, that is by proof of the loss of the original or where original is withheld by a party in whose possession it is or is presumed to be. In the case of registration copies what is applicable is not S. 90 of the Indian Evidence Act but sub-S. (5) of S. 57 of the Indian Registration Act: (1953) 2 M.L.J. 717: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 486.

Certified copy of registered document—If admissible in evidence—Proof of original: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 1211.

A certified copy of a registered copy is admissible to prove the contents of the original document only when conditions for the introduction of the secondary evidence are fulfilled: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931.

Where the applicant had produced certified copies of the registered document, she could be allowed to lead secondary evidence: (1991) 1 Rev.L.R. 195 (P.&H.).

Where a party admits the genuineness of the certified copy of a mortgage obtained from the Registering Officer, the combined effect of S. 57(5), Registration Act and S. 65, Evidence Act, is that the certified copy becomes admissible in evidence as secondary evidence under S. 65 of the Evidence Act and by reason of S. 57(5) of the Registration Act the said copy becomes admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document itself. The certified copy is also admissible under S. 65(e) and (f) of the Evidence Act as the definition of a public document under S. 74 of the Evidence Act takes in public records kept in any state of private documents and the copy is the secondary evidence of the public record of the mortgage deed kept in the Registrar's Office: (1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andhra) 75.

Ss. 65 and 90—The presumption under S. 90 of the Indian Evidence Act may be drawn only with regard to the document actually produced before the Court and when the parties produced before the Court only a copy, the presumption cannot be applied that the original was duly executed by the person by whom it purported to have been executed. Under S. 60(2) of the Indian Registration Act when the parties to a document admitted their execution before the Sub-Registrar, the execution of the original document is proved. In the instant case, held that the conditions required by S. 65 of the Indian Evidence Act, are satisfied, and the secondary evidence, i.e., the registration copy, can be admitted: (1967) 1 An.W.R. 176.

A Court may sometimes use for a subsidiary purpose a certified copy of a document though it might not have been duly proved. Where a case is of oath against oath and in such a case there was in existence some previously executed document, the Court would not be wrong in referring to a copy and drawing a conclusion which points to the correctness of the statement and version of one party as against the other: 1951 R.D. 20.

A deed of adoption is not a document which must be registered to be an effective document in law. Where such a document is duly registered but an entry is made in the wrong book, which mistake is obvious, the registration is not invalid and upon the loss of the original a certified copy of such an entry in the wrong book is admissible in evidence when the certified copy is otherwise ex facie regular bearing the certificate of the registering authority as being a true copy: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 494.

To prove that A was adopted by B a certified copy of a will by B's widow was put in evidence as it recited the fact of adoption. Held that it is necessary for a party to prove the original, that a copy of the will is not sufficient evidence of the fact of adoption recited in it and that the certified copy is secondary evidence under S. 65, of the existence, conditions and the contents of the deed but not of its execution which has to be proved under S. 68 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1952 Madh. Bh. 146.

Proceedings under S. 145, Cr.P.Code, by party No. 1 against party No. 2—Party No. 1 producing certified copy of application filed by party No. 2 in other proceeding containing admission of party No. 2 that party No. 1 was in possession at relevant time—Certified copy, if admissible. See 1979 Chand L.R. (Cr.) 142 (Punj.).

The memorandum of association and the rules and regulations of a society could be proved by filing the certified copies of these documents: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 13 (Del.).

Where certified copy containing endorsement of Registrar was produced in respect of a lost registered will and one of the attesting witnesses proved his own signature and those of the executant and other witnesses, held, will stood proved: A.I.R. 1977 N.O.C. 147: 1977 All.W.C. 189: I.L.R. (1977) All. 207.

It is well settled that the propounder of a will is required to prove not only its due execution and genuineness but also eliminate the suspicious circumstances, if any, surrounding the will; a will executed in suspicious circumstances, thus, cannot be allowed to be proved by secondary evidence, that is, by its certified copy: 1988 Rajdhani L.R. 387: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 47 (Del.).

Where certified copies issued by the Nagar Mahapalika Copying Department nowhere contained the name of a person and there were also some other papers on the Court record which the Court found to be not certified copies issued under S. 330 of the Municipalities Act but by a person named therein and without bearing a copying stamp folio or seal of the Municipal Board, held, the papers could not be said to be certified copies under S. 65; they are inadmissible under S. 65(f) read with the proviso: A.I.R. 1980 All. 361.

The cumulative effect of Ss. 57(5), 58(1) and 60 of the Indian Registration Act is that where secondary evidence is permissible, a certified copy of a registered document, a will in this case, granted by the Registering Authority shall constitute valid and legal evidence to prove the will. [A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 54, Rel. on]: 1992 M.P.L.J. 320.

Ss. 63 and 65(e) and (f) read together permit certified copies and copies made from the original by mechanical process to be tendered as secondary evidence; photocopies thereof prepared by a mechanical process in itself ensure the original's accuracy. Thus, where photostat copies of judicial record of a foreign Court certified by a public officer having custody of that record as contemplated by S. 76, held, it will not be per se inadmissible; but if it is not further certified by a representative of the Indian Government in the foreign country it will not be admissible: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646 (S.C.).

10. Clause (g).—See I.L.R. 6 Mad. 8; I.L.R. 5 Cal. 568. Cl. (g) of S. 65 has nothing to do with documents which are not available to the Court. The very fact that Cl. (g) provides secondary evidence of the result because the documents cannot conveniently be examined in Court shows that the documents are there for the Court to examine if it so likes to do. But where no attempt was made to produce the original documents from which the original of Ex. D-2 was prepared, S. 65(g) cannot be used for the admission of Ex. D-2. Further S. 32(5) and (6) requires the production of original statements, and do not contemplate the production of some result deducted by somebody on examination of the statements admissible thereunder: I.L.R. (1955) Raj. 191: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 45.

Land Acquisition proceeding—Computation of market value of acquired land on basis of sales during past five years—Sale deeds not numerous—Evidence of person who has prepared sales statement not admissible as secondary evidence of sale deeds: I.L.R. (1963) Madh. Pra. 887: 1964 Jab.L.J. 288: A.I.R. 1964 Madh. Pra. 196.

11. Illustrative cases.—Entries in Patwari's list made after inquiry and inspection of receipts are only secondary evidence and they are inadmissible unless the conditions laid down in this section are satisfied: 12 R.D. 398: 111 I.C. 843. As to value of lathandi papers as secondary evidence of certificate of sale, see 21 W.R. 333.

A mutation register is neither a primary nor secondary evidence of the terms or conditions of a contract of sale; as such it is not admissible, apart from proving the factum of sale, to prove any of the terms or conditions of the contract including the sale consideration. [1979 Rev.L.R. 107: (1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 27: 1979 Punj.L.J. 82, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 109: 1985 Punj.L.J. 583: I.L.R. (1986) 1 P.&H. 90 (F.B.); 1989 Punj.L.J. 15.

As A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143 (F.B.) has rendered the certified copies of mutations as inadmissible in evidence for ascertaining the terms and conditions of the sale transactions without producing the certified copies of the sale deeds, held, application for allowing the additional evidence in order to produce the sale deeds, subject-matter of mutations, during pendency of appeal, was to be allowed, in view of aforesaid change of law by the Full Bench judgment: (1989) 1 Rev.L.R. 361.

S. 34 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act lays down the procedure for making entries in the mutation register and the orders to be passed by the Revenue Officer; it does not—and no other provision in the Act does—even remotely deal with the relevance or admissibility of any evidence; by no stretch of imagination can it be said that S. 34 of the said Act constitutes a special provision to override Ss. 65 and 91: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 109: I.L.R. U.P. Muslim Wakfs Act, (XVI of 1960), S. 55—Mutawalli of wakf property appointing his son as mutawalli before his death—No provision in wakf deed as to appointment of mutawalli—Copy of document appointing son as mutawalli not proved according to law—Secondary evidence and true copy of original also not proved—Appointment of son as mutawalli could not be said to be valid: 1981 All.L.J. 614.

The mere fact that a document which is required by law to be attested was admitted in evidence without objection by the defendant does not absolve the plaintiff from establishing that it had been duly executed and attested: (1937-38) 42 Cal.W.N. 1055: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 702.

In deciding the intention of the parties as to the time of passing of title, the document under which the properties were intended to be sold, if unambiguous, remains the sole criterion. If the terms are indecisive and ambiguous, then only the Courts will take into consideration other extraneous circumstances: A.I.R. 1992 Ori. 170.

Secondary evidence of a document should not be rejected on appeal merely on the ground that the loss of the original has not been satisfactorily proved: 15 I.C. 625.

Secondary evidence admitted without objection not to be excluded on appeal: 29 M.L.J. 307: (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 929 (P.C.). See also 14 I.C. 539; (1930) 32 Punj.L.R. 696: A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 722; I.L.R. 14 Lah. 473: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 601.

Where the plaintiff has suppressed the documents in his possession, he could not be permitted to establish their contents by secondary evidence: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 451: 64 M.L.J. 676. See also A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 116: 169 I.C. 834.

In a motor accident claim case, copy of the insurance policy which was tendered in evidence by the statement of the Counsel at the stage of closing the case, held, is not admissible in evidence as conditions of S. 65 were not met with: (1987-1) 91 Punj.L.R. 618.

Where the original account books, not in current use, were available but not produced in the Court to prove the entries made therein but only copies of the entries were produced, held, secondary evidence was not admissible: A.I.R. 1972 All. 494.

Where purchaser of the property filed four ejectment suits and only in one suit he filed original sale deed and in other suits he filed copies thereof, held, it could not be argued that he should have placed original document in each suit: 1977 Kash.L.J. 57: 1977 Ren.C.J. 636.

Where secondary evidence of Baptism Register, to prove age, was held, to be not admissible. See (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 34 (S.N.).

Where what purported to be a draft notice was filed by the plaintiff 15 months after filing the suit as secondary evidence of the notice sent by his Counsel to the other party without any explanation whatsoever, held, the trial Court rightly declined to admit it: A.I.R. 1972 Ker. 76: 1972 Ker.L.T. 328.

Where the draft of notice sent by the party's Counsel to the other party was not proved by its writer who was alive and could be examined but another clerk of the Counsel who merely stated that the notice sent was based on this draft and though he deposed that it was written by his fellow clerk but did not say that he was familiar with the handwriting of the fellow clerk, held, the draft could not be said to be a true copy of the notice sent to the other party: A.I.R. 1972 Ker. 76: 1972 Ker.L.T. 328.

Where in a land acquisition case, the multiple for determining the market value of the acquired land was worked out on an index of sale which was inadmissible under S. 65, held, it cannot be taken into consideration by the Court in a reference under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act; the reference proceedings being undoubtedly judicial in nature, the Court can base its decision only on admissible evidence. [A.I.R. 1969 Guj. 270; A.I.R. 1964 Madh. Pra. 196, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 Madh. Pra. 57: 1974 M.P.L.J. 824: 1975 Jab.L.J. 595 (D.B.).

Where a certified copy of a judgment of the Supreme Court of New York, authenticated by the Indian Consulate there, could not be produced for insufficiency of time and its fax copy was instead produced in the Court, held, the fax copy was admissible. [(1991) 3 S.C.C. 451, Rel. on]: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 565 (D.B.).

12. Objection as to admissibility of document—When may be taken.—The discretion exercised by the trial Court in admitting secondary evidence on the ground that the original is lost should not ordinarily be interfered with in appeal. It is true that in a case where the admissibility of the document is not challenged, the erroneous omission in the trial Court to object to the admission of the evidence would not make that evidence relevant; but this principle applies only where the evidence or document is per se irrelevant or inadmissible and no objection was taken to its admissibility. Where evidence is admitted in the trial Court without any objection to its reception and the evidence is admissible and relevant, then no objection will be allowed to be taken to its reception at any stage of the litigation on the ground of improper proof. But if the evidence is irrelevant or inadmissible, omission to take objection to its reception does not make it admissible and objection may be raised in appeal for the first time: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 962: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 193.

It is well settled that once secondary evidence by way of certified copies of registered documents is admitted without objection and exhibited, held, it is not open to the opposite party to contend that proper procedure for their admission was not followed or no proper foundation for their admission was laid. [A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83; A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53; A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 113, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 200: 37 Cut.L.T. 848. See also (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 390.

It is undoubtedly true that if a certified copy has been admitted into evidence without any objection having been raised by the other party that no case is made out for the introduction of the secondary evidence, the appellate Court would not permit its admissibility to be questioned before it on that ground. [A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 234 and 1969 Raj.L.W. 107, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931; (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 318: (1990) 1 D.M.C. 61: (1990) 1 Ker.L.J. 412.

Where the certified copies under S. 57 of the Registration Act, of the sales deeds were tendered and exhibited in evidence without objection, held, it amounted to the admission of the requisite circumstances and conditions for secondary evidence; no objection could be taken for the first time in appeal: A.I.R. 1990 Raj. 90.

Where at the time when a certified copy of deed of cancellation was received in evidence no objection was raised, but later on, an application was filed objecting to the reception of secondary evidence of the document, held, the application could not be entertained: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 1214.

An objection as to the admissibility of a document, e.g., on the score of the document being a copy, should be taken when the witness who is produced to prove to its contents deposes about it. If such objection is not raised at an early stage of the case, it cannot be entertained later on in appeal: A.I.R. 1955 Him. Pra. 37.

An objection to the reception of secondary evidence under S. 65 of the Evidence Act on the ground of want of notice mentioned in S. 66 of the Act if not raised in the trial Court, cannot be permitted to be raised in the appellate Court: 1951 Nag.L.J. 523: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 47; A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 277.

Where the defendant has waived proof of circumstances which justified the plaintiff in leading secondary evidence, it is not open to him in second appeal to raise a contention that the secondary evidence of the contents of the document was inadmissible: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 196.

The objection that the trial Court should have first recorded a finding that the original deed did exist and was in possession of the defendant and only then permitted the plaintiff to produce secondary evidence as to the contents of the document, cannot be raised for the first time in second appeal: A.I.R. 1952 Him. Pra. 52.

It is not open to the Board to reject in second appeal secondary evidence of a deed which had been admitted in the lower Court without any objection and which had also been utilised by the Court in arriving at a decision: 1947 A.W.R. (Rev.) 128.

Where no objection was taken to the admissibility of a certified copy of a registered will granted by the Registering Authority as secondary evidence of the will till the stage of the second appeal and even there the existence of the will or its being a copy of the will was not disputed and the objecting party was also claiming under the same will, held, hypertechnical objections to the mode of proof of not being technically followed in the trial Court could not be allowed in the second appeal. [A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 54, Rel. on]: 1992 M.P.L.J. 320.

Where the defendants produced a certified copy of a registered will which was 80 years old and the plaintiffs neither asked the defendants to produce the original will nor they objected to its admissibility, held, in second appeal, no objection regarding admissibility or due execution and attestation of the will could be taken. [A.I.R. 1968 All. 363, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 7 (All.).

Secondary evidence admitted in High Court with consent of parties—Existence of original admitted by opposite party in one of his letters—Objection to admissibility not raised in memo. of appeal to Supreme Court—Objection cannot be raised for the first time in arguments before Supreme Court: 1954 S.C.R. 842: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 139.

Objection about the admissibility or the mode of proof of a document should be raised at the trial. That kind of grievance at a later stage during the appeal brings inconvenience to the parties and frustrates the ends of justice on technical rule. Objections should not, therefore, be raised for the first time in appeal: 1964 B.L.J.R. 339: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 45.

The rule in S. 65 of the Evidence Act excluding secondary evidence is not so rigid as to be enforced even if no objection was taken at the trial by the party against whom the secondary evidence was offered. When a party has waived proof of circumstances justifying the giving of secondary evidence, he cannot raise the objection in appeal. A document can be treated as duly admitted where its admission without being proved is not objected to by the party affected. Where the objection to be taken is not that the document is in itself inadmissible, but that the mode of proof put forward is irregular or insufficient it is essential that the objection should be taken at the trial before it is marked as exhibit and admitted. A party cannot lie by until the case comes in appeal. The question of proof of a document is a question of procedure and can be waived. On the other hand, questions of relevancy of documents are questions of law and can be raised at the appellate stage as well.

On the facts of the instant case, held, the documents should not have been rejected on the mere ground that they are certified copies and not the originals when, as a matter of fact, no such objection was ever taken in the trial Court or even in the Memorandum of Appeal: (1963) 2 An.W.R. 307: (1963) 2 An.L.T. 442: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53.

Secondary evidence of a document can always be given if the failure to produce the original document is supported by proper reasons. Where the defendant has waived proof of circumstances which justified the plaintiff in leading secondary evidence, it is not open to him in second appeal to raise a contention that the secondary evidence of the contents of the document was inadmissible: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 196.

If secondary evidence is admitted without objection at the proper time, the parties are precluded from later on contending that the document has not been proved by its primary evidence; but if there is no secondary evidence as contemplated by S. 65, then the document cannot be said to have been proved; thus, if it was only an unverified copy, neither certified to be true by an official nor purported to have been compared with the original by anyone, held, it was no secondary evidence and thoroughly useless; the other party was not precluded from showing that it was not admissible as secondary evidence. [A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83; A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 193, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 263: 1973 W.L.N. 240: 1973 Raj.L.W. 473.

Where documents by way of secondary evidence were admitted and exhibited without objection, held, the Court cannot decline to consider them without any reason. [A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 203: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 202.

Where in a motor accident claim case, the owner of vehicle who himself gave the particulars of the insurance policy and did not raise any objection when a copy of the insurance policy was tendered and admitted in evidence, and who also failed to produce the original policy himself or making any effort in refuting the correctness of the copy, held, he could not raise the objection that the same could not be read in evidence in deciding the question regarding compensation: A.I.R. 1994 Him. Pra. 21.

Where a copy of the insurance policy was produced as secondary evidence without making out the case under S. 65 and was exhibited without its contents having been admitted by the other party or proved according to law, held, it was open to the appellate Court to exclude the copy from consideration. [A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 628; A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 277, held does not lay down good law in view of A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 606; A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 719, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1989 P.&H. 300: (1989-1) 95 Punj.L.R. 240 (D.B.).

66. Rules as to notice to produce.—Secondary evidence of the contents of the documents referred to in section 65, clause (a), shall not be given unless the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party in whose possession or power the document is, [1][or to his attorney or pleader,] such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law; and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case:

Provided that such notice shall not be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases, or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it—

(1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice;

(2) when, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it;

(3) when it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained possession of the original by fraud or force;

(4) when the adverse party or his agent has the original in Court;

(5) when the adverse party or his agent has admitted the loss of the document;

(6) when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.

1. Inserted by Act 18 of 1872, S. 6.

Section 66—Notes.

To permit secondary evidence of documents mentioned in S. 65(a), held, it is incumbent on the party concerned to strictly comply with the requirements of S. 66 and duly require the parties in possession thereof by notice to produce the original documents. [A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 456, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 430: (1986) 1 Cal.H.N. 58 (D.B.).

In order to avail the machinery under Ss. 65 and 66 it is necessary to establish that a document was executed, and that it is in the possession or power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved and that the said person despite notice under S. 66 failed to produce it: A.I.R. 1971 Mad. 471: (1971) 84 Mad.L.W. 452: (1971) 2 M.L.J. 128.

Once notice of production of the document has been served upon a person in whose possession the document has been alleged and there is a refusal to produce the same, the requirement of law as laid down in S. 65(a) is fulfilled: (1990-2) 98 Punj.L.R. 545: 1990 Punj.L.J. 541: (1990) 2 Rev.L.R. 267.

A combined reading of Ss. 65 and 66 of the Evidence Act and S. 57(5) of the Registration Act leaves no doubt that once it is established that the original title deeds are lost or destroyed or are being deliberately withheld by the party against whom they are sought to be used, secondary evidence in respect of those title deeds can be tendered and if the secondary evidence happens to be certified copies of registered documents entered in book No. 1, the contents thereof can be read in evidence by virtue of sub-S. (5) of S. 57 of the Registration Act. [A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 555, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 Guj. 193: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412.

For invoking S. 65 for admission of secondary evidence, the conditions prescribed therein have to be proved; when the original is shown or appears to be in possession or power of the person against whom it is sought to be proved or in possession of a person out of the Court's reach or not subject to its process, or in the possession of a person legally bound to produce but despite notice under S. 66 does not produce it, the secondary evidence could only then be admitted in evidence: (1985) 2 An.W.R. 160.

S. 66 requires the giving of a notice to the party to the suit in whose possession or power the document is said to be. Thus, where it was not the case of the defendant, who sought to adduce a certified copy of the original document as secondary evidence, that the original document was in the possession of the plaintiff but his case was that it was with another person who had died, held, the defendant was not required by law under S. 66 to give notice to the plaintiff. [A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 50; A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1977 All. 470.

Reading Ss. 91 and 66 together, it appears that the law imposes an absolute prohibition against tendering of secondary evidence of the contents of the document referred to in S. 65(a) and thereby also prohibits the proof of the terms of the unregistered sale-deed by any other mode except by proof of the document itself, when the said document is admitted to be in existence: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 65.

Secondary evidence of deeds of sale of houses adjacent to the suit house can be given in order to prove title only when the person in possession of those documents fails to produce them inspite of notice given to him. Where no such notice is given, secondary evidence in the form of copies of the original document should not be admitted: 11 L.L.J. 401. See also 123 I.C. 197 (Omission to give notice is a fatal objection to the admission of secondary evidence).

A registered general power-of-attorney is a public document under S. 74(2); its certified copy is per se admissible; it is not necessary to prove its existence by secondary evidence; no notice envisaged under S. 66 is, thus, necessary to be given to the party in whose possession or power the original power-of-attorney is: (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 353.

Where a party has not been asked to produce the original of a document, it is not open to the other party to produce certified copies of the original and they would not be admissible: 1949 R.D. 22. As it is only when an original deed is either destroyed or cannot be found or the person in posesssion thereof does not file it after due notice that any other evidence of its contents could be given, where no notice to produce has been given to the party in possession of the document, it would be wrong to admit secondary evidence of it: 1950 Raj.L.W. 199: A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 47.

When what is sought to be proved by a party by production of the registers of the Sub-Registrar's Office is not any original entry or one prepared by the Sub-Registrar himself, but copies of documents, the original of which are in the custody of persons in whose favour they are executed, the documents cannot be admitted in evidence by simply producing the registers of the Registration Office without calling for the original documents: (1954-55) 59 Cal.W.N. 757: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 398.

Where a pardanashin woman is living with her brother, service of summons on him instead of the woman herself would constitute such notice as is required by S. 66 and if that brother is expressly named in the summons as the person upon whom it might be served it is only a technical irregularity: 27 All.L.J. 1091: A.I.R. 1929 All. 680.

Plaintiff's suit for declaration that subject-matter of suit is trust property—Plaintiff producing certified copy of trust deed and stating in evidence that he had seen the original deed of trust in possession of defendant—Nature of case showing that defendant must have known that he would be required to produce the document—Held, that as there was thus an implied notice under proviso to S. 66(2) to defendant, S. 65(a) was satisfied and hence the production of the certified copy was sufficient proof of the deed itself: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 362.

Defendant asking plaintiff to produce account books maintained by father of plaintiff, for particular year—Defendant must first establish affirmatively that plaintiff's father maintained accounts in that year—In the absence of such proof no adverse inference can be drawn against plaintiff for their non-production: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

Where a party to a suit called upon the other party to produce the unregistered will which did not comply on the ground that the will was not in his but in the possession of another party who in his turn denied the very existence of the will, held, loss of the will having been thus proved, the party propounding the will was entitled to prove it by secondary evidence: (1992-1) 101 Punj.L.R. 490: (1992) 2 Hindu L.R. 145: (1992) 1 Rev.L.R. 300.

Where the defendant filed an application seeking permission to adduce secondary evidence of a will in his favour as the original will had been given to a person at the time of sanctioning the mutation and he had refused to give it back, held, without issuing notice to that person as required by S. 66, the trial Court was not justified in ordering that the evidence will be allowed subject to proof of the loss of original will; before this direction could be given the defendant must prove the loss of the original will as contemplated under S. 65(a) read with S. 66: (1990-2) 98 Punj.L.R. 228: 1990 Punj.L.J. 428: (1990) 2 Rev.L.R. 49.

Carbon copies of the gate passes, prepared at one and the same time and which also contained the signatures of the party, held, are counterparts of the original documents and in the nature of primary evidence and not secondary evidence; they can be adduced without complying with the provisions of S. 66: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 536.

Where though one of the defendants called to produce original document died and no document was produced, held, secondary evidence could certainly be produced: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 199: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 143.

A vehicle's owner, admittedly in possession of original insurance policy, held, cannot contend that the copy of the said policy should not be marked in evidence when the steps required to be taken by S. 66 were not taken: (1990) 2 Ker.L.J. 635: I.L.R. (1991) 1 Ker. 220.

Proviso.—No doubt notice to produce should have been given before giving secondary evidence of its contents, but such notice is not essential to render secondary evidence admissible in certain cases, e.g., where the Court in its discretion thinks it fit to dispense with it: 163 I.C. 408(2): A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 277.

Where a document sought to be summoned is itself a notice sent by one party to the other and a copy of the notice is produced by the sender, under S. 66, it is not obligatory to summon production of the original notice. The non-summoning of the original notice would not make a copy of it inadmissible: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 314.

Where in suit for recovery of the price of the goods sold, the plaintiff produced only the carbon copies of the bills, which were objected to by the defendants as not admissible, held, as the original bills had been delivered to the defendants, same being in their custody could not be produced by the plaintiff and the defendant being in possession of the original vouchers were in the knowledge that they would be required to produce the same which they failed to do so and thus, no notice was required to be given in view of Cl. 2 of proviso to S. 66; plaintiffs were within their right to prove the supply of goods on credit by producing the carbon copies of the credit bills: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 476.

Where in a suit for redemption of mortgage, the defendant denied the alleged mortgage and there were circumstances to show that the transaction of mortgage was evidenced by a document, held, from the nature of the case, the defendants must have known that they would be required to produce the original mortgage deed which presumably was in their possession. In these circumstances, it would be idle and an useless formality for the plaintiffs to have given notice to the defendants for production of the original mortgage deed: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 303: 1971 Raj.L.W. 319; A.I.R. 1994 N.O.C. 182 (Raj.).

Where the plaintiff-consignor had lodged a claim with the Railways for non-delivery of the goods, held, in a suit for recovery of the price, a copy of the said claim would be admissible under S. 66, proviso (2) without service of notice to produce the original claim on the Railways as the original claim was in possession of the Railways: A.I.R. 1983 Cal. 337.

It is doubtful if a pro forma defendant who is not interested in suit property or in the decision of the case is not an 'adverse part' within the meaning of proviso, Cl. (2): 118 I.C. 663: A.I.R. 1929 All. 680.

Certified copy of mortgage deed may, for proper reasons, be admitted without notice to produce the original: I.L.R. 6 Pat. 102: 97 I.C. 348: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 512. See I.L.R. 9 Cal. 939; I.L.R. 2 Mad. 295.

Where the landlord denied execution of the lease agreement, held, no notice was required to be issued to him for producing lease agreement: (1981) 20 Del.L.T. 383.

Where a party alleges that no facts are adduced by the opposite party nor any facts proved which would justify the Court in admitting as secondary evidence a copy of an original document and it is found that the original document is in possession or control of the party taking the objection and he fails to produce it, proviso, Cl. (2), S. 66 applies and notice to the party to produce the original is not necessary as by the nature of the case the party must be held to be knowing that he would be required to produce it: 161 I.C. 406: A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 129.

Where the plaintiffs had clearly made a reference to the document in question in the plaint but the defendant denied existence of such a document, held, in such a case the question of calling for the document from them did not arise: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 199: (1974) 40 Cut.L.T. 143.

67. Proof of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced.—If a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting.

Once the plaintiff excuses himself from the production of the original documents on the plea that they are not traced or are lost, the question of giving notice for production does not arise. [A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 555, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 Guj. 193: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412.

1. Scope and applicability.—Handwriting may be proved by circumstantial evidence under S. 67 which prescribes no particular kind of proof: 12 Beng.L.R. App. 18; I.L.R. (1953) Hyd. 140: A.I.R. 1953 Hyd. 181; A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 86: 1956 Cr.L.J. 233 (The pieces of circumstantial evidence that go to prove its execution are: (1) the internal evidence contained in the document; and (2) oral evidence of witnesses to prove other circumstances). The execution or authorship of a document is a question of fact which may be proved like any other fact. I.L.R. 55 All. 1040: A.I.R. 1933 All. 690.

S. 67 of the Evidence Act does not lay down any particular kind of proof for proving that a particular writing or signature is in the hand of a particular person. The fact that a particular person has written a particular writing can be proved by the direct evidence of those persons who have seen him making the writing on the particular document irrespective of whether or not they can read what was written. A document can be executed not only by affixing one's signatures, but also by making a mark on it. When a document bearing a thumb mark of a person is proved it is not necessary that the person proving the affixation of the thumb mark should be able to identify the thumb mark. All that is required is that he should be able to identify the document on which he states that the thumb mark was affixed.

An illiterate person not being able to identify a document on which he has seen someone writing cannot ordinarily prove a writing or signature made by another person. But a person knowing the language in which a document is written can identify the document with certainty and when he has seen another person making a writing on it he can prove that writing without knowing the language in which the writing by that person was made: 1962 Raj.L.W. 687: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 84: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 84.

The modes of proving a signature are as follows: (i) by calling a person who signed or wrote a document; (ii) by calling a person in whose presence the document was signed or written; (iii) by calling a handwriting expert; (iv) by calling a person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom the document is supposed to be signed or written; (v) by comparing in Court the disputed signature or writing with some admitted signature or writing; (vi) by proof of an admission by the person who is alleged to have signed or written the document that he signed or wrote it; (vii) by the statement of a deceased professional scribe, made in the ordinary course of business, that the signature on the document is that of a particular person; (viii) a signature is proved to have been made if it is shown to have been made at the request of a person by some other person, e.g., by the scribe who signed on behalf of the executant; (ix) by other circumstantial evidence: A.I.R. 1957 Manipur 9; 1983 M.P.L.J. 355 relying on A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 69.

The signature and handwriting of one alleged to have signed or written a document is to be proved as laid down in S. 67 of the Evidence Act. There is no law requiring the scribe of the executant of a document to prove it: 1950 R.D. 147.

Under S. 67, the execution of a document must be proved by evidence that the signature purporting to be that of the executant is in his writing. But when a party admits the execution of a document it is not necessary to prove its execution in the manner prescribed by the Evidence Act: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 217.

A document does not prove itself, nor is an unproved signature proof of its having been written by the person whose signature it purports to bear: I.L.R. 37 Cal. 467: (1909-10) 14 Cal.W.N. 1114.

See 22 W.R. 390; 21 W.R. 429; I.L.R. 11 Bom. 690; 12 Beng.L.R. App. 18. See also A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 207, cited under S. 65, supra. The definition of 'sign' in the General Clauses Act, S. 3(52) has no application to term 'sign' as used in S. 67, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1934 All. 390. Thumb marks are not exempt from the provisions of S. 67: 40 Mad.L.W. 277: A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 558.

S. 67 does not require that the proof of a signature or handwriting must only be by a literate person; it can be proved by direct evidence of those in whose presence the document was written or signed, whether or not the latter is illiterate or literate. A document executed by an illiterate person by affixing his thumb-mark can be, and is generally, proved by a witness who saw the executant putting his thumb-mark; and the witness need not say that he identified that thumb-mark because of its peculiar feature or his special knowledge for identifying fingerprints. [A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 84; 1965 All.L.J. 149, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443; A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 207 and A.I.R. 1928 All. 303, Dist.]: (1975) 1 Cut.W.R. 404.

The execution of a document cannot be said to be invalid merely because a person who knows how to sign his name executes a document by putting his thumb-impression: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 173 (D.B.).

Ss. 47 and 67 deal only with the admissibility of a variety of opinion evidence on handwriting and the mode of its proof; they do not deal with the value of such evidence: A.I.R. 1977 Gau. 27.

Question whether particular letter was written by A—Conclusions based on mere comparison of handwriting must, at best, be indecisive; and yield to positive evidence: 1954 S.C.R. 919: I.L.R. 33 Pat. 313: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 316; A.I.R. 1957 Manipur 9.

The language of S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act read with Ss. 67 and 68 of the Evidence Act make it obligatory that the purported handwriting and signatures of the executant on the document must be proved to have been written or made by the executant and if the document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used in evidence unless at least one attesting witness is examined and proves execution of the document if he is alive, capable of giving evidence and is subject to the Court's process; however, if no attesting witness can be found, all that is required is to examine a witness who is able to prove the handwriting and signatures of the purported attesting witness. [A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 770: 125 I.C. 231; A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 641 and A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 662: 43 M.L.J. 216, Foll.]: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 311 (D.B.). See also A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.).

It is well settled that the proof of a document's genuineness is the proof of its authorship to be proved like any other fact; such proof in India can be direct or circumstantial. Direct evidence may be of a person who had seen the document being written or signed or proof by one of the modes under Ss. 5 and 47; it may also be internal evidence, afforded by the document's contents. The language of S. 67 indicates that proof of signatures on a document cannot extend to its contents' genuineness when the document is written in the handwriting of someone else; signatures are proved by examining that person; handwriting, written wholly or partly by a person, is proved by examining that person; where signatures are proved but the contents' genuineness is in dispute, it is all the more necessary that its author or scribe is examined to enable the other party to cross-examine him: (1993-2) 112 Mad.L.W. 587 (D.B.).

The original of a public document is also required to be proved; otherwise there would be no check whatever, by scrutiny or examination, of its authenticity either by the Court or its officers; neither S. 67 nor S. 68 make any exception in favour of public documents: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

Mode of proof of document which is required by law to be attested within meaning of S. 3, T.P. Act, 1882, is different from mode of proof of other kind of documents that are not so required to be attested: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811.

2. By whom to be proved.—A witness can be a quite competent witness to prove one's handwriting if he has been in correspondence with that person although the witness who proves the handwriting may not have actually witnessed the writing: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 404.

In order to prove the writing of a person, it is not necessary that the person must know the language in which the document has been written. If he has deposed that execution has been made in his presence and he had seen the executant putting his signature in his presence, the document stands proved. On the same reason, if a person is an illiterate and has seen somebody putting his signature on a document in his presence, he must be said to have proved that document: 1966 All.L.J. 149: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 841.

Proof of document by examination of writer. See (1914-15) 19 Cal.W.N. 1148: 22 I.C. 654.

Author of letters relied on though alive not examined—Contents of those letters cannot be looked into: 1967 Ker.L.J. 399: 1967 Ker.L.T. 1122: 1967 M.L.J. (Cr.) 311.

The Registrar's endorsement that the document was signed by the executant after fully understanding it, held, cannot be a conclusive proof of its execution if circumstances of its execution are suspicious, i.e., when the executant was an illiterate widow and was ignorant, inexperience and had to depend on others. [A.I.R. 1918 Oudh 120, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1985 All. 160: 1985 All.C.J. 345.

Where attesting witnesses of a document written at the instance of its executor depose that the document had been read over to the executant who had thumb-marked it in their presence and the witnesses too had put their signatures thereon, held, the execution stands proved; it is necessary for them to identify the thumb-mark: (1986) 1 Bom.C.R. 50

Where the alleged executant of a deed (who was a marksman) denied execution and all the attesting witnesses are dead or for some other reason not available, proof of the handwriting of the attesting witness and of his identity is sufficient proof of execution. So where one attesting witness was dead and the other turned hostile, proof or admission of his handwriting is sufficient: A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 770: 125 I.C. 231. See also I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 661: A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 84; I.L.R. 57 Mad. 662: A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 365: 99 M.L.J. 712.

The truth of the contents of the birth certificate cannot be proved by a clerk who only proves the handwriting in the certificate. The person issuing the certificate must be examined. If that is not done and the original register too is not produced and the author of the entry is not proved, the certificate cannot be relied upon: (1975) 2 S.C.C. 564.

Where Secretary of the Trust sought the Trustees' instructions by a memo regarding unauthorised sub-letting of the Trust's property by its tenant and took it first to one Trustee who directed by endorsement on the memo that action by way of notice to the tenant be taken and signed below it and then he took it to other Trustees and all of them put their signatures below the endorsement, held, evidence of the Secretary, obviously acquainted with the facts, was sufficient to prove the memo as well as contents of the endorsement; it also proved the Secretary's authority to give to the tenant the notice to quit: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 417: (1976) 78 Bom.L.R. 195.

3. Proof of contents of document.—See A.I.R. 1968 Ori. 217. The mere production of the original document for the Court's inspection is not prima facie proof of the content's truth; if it was otherwise, the requirement to prove the handwriting and signature upon the document would have been almost superfluous. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

To prove contents of a document, held, the deposition of a witness acquainted with the handwriting and signature and who also asserted to be present when the document was signed, is acceptable: (1989) 1 Karn.L.J. 52 (D.B.).

Where the correctness of the contents of a document produced in Court is in issue, that should be proved by calling the executor of the document as a witness. It is not enough to merely prove the signature or the handwriting of the person who is the only person who can depose to the correctness of the contents of the document. This cannot be proved by a witness who, though acquainted with the signature or handwriting of the person who signed or wrote that document, has no personal knowledge whatever about its contents: (1954) 56 Bom.L.R. 147: A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 305.

Where the executant of a sale deed was not examined but his signatures thereon were proved, held, in view of (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 228 (D.B.) confirming A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 305, the contents of the deed could not be said to have been proved; (1968) 70 Bom.L.R. 68, taking a contrary view despite noticing the two authorities is, thus, only a personal view of the single Judge and not binding: A.I.R. 1982 Bom. 387: (1982) 1 Bom.C.R. 819: 1982 Mah.L.J. 840.

In the case of secondary evidence of contents of an original, in order to show that it is an exact copy of the original, it is necessary to prove that either it was prepared by a uniform process or it was compared with the original by some witness, who can give evidence to that effect. In such a case proof of signature of executant in the copy would not amount to proof of contents of the original: A.I.R. 1950 All. 696.

Proof of contents of document—Person with knowledge must be examined—Land acquisition—Higher rate claimed—Onus of proof on claimant: A.I.R. 1969 Guj. 270.

Where execution and attestation of a document (Nikahnama) is proved by proving the signatures or thumb-impressions of the executant and the attesting witnesses, it is not necessary to also prove the handwriting of the person writing it; such proof is sufficient to make its contents admissible; if that were not so, type written documents would have been rendered entirely inadmissible: A.I.R. 1982 All. 149: 1982 All.W.C. 126: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 149.

The facts and circumstances tc be established to prove execution of a document depend on the nature of pleas; where the only plea is that the document is not signed by the executant and is a forgery, the party pleading execution need not adduce evidence to show that the executant knew of its contents; ordinarily, no one signs a document without knowing its contents; if the plea taken is to the contrary, in certain circumstances, it may be necessary for the party relying upon the document to place material before the Court to satisfy it that the executant had knowledge of its contents: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2548.

4. Execution of document—Proof of.—See A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 126. 'Execution' denotes a conscious act of subscribing to a document; to prove execution, it must be shown that the person executing it consciously put his mark or signature on it after having known and understood its contents; the best witness to prove execution is perhaps the scribe but where the scribe cannot be produced either because he is dead or his attendance cannot be easily procured, it is no doubt open to the party relying on the document to produce other evidence which must unimpeachably show or furnish reasons to believe that the executant had consciously subscribed to the document; mere proof that the person's signature appear on the document cannot by itself amount to its execution: 1976 Kash.L.J. 306.

The execution of a document cannot be deemed proved as it is required by the Evidence Act merely because it is proved in the sense of the definition 'proved'. That definition of the word 'proved' must be read along with S. 67. S. 67 makes proof of execution of a document something more difficult than proof of matter other than the execution of a document: A.I.R. 1928 All. 303. See also 1941 All.W.R. (Rev.) 461: 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 402; A.I.R. 1942 Pesh. 83.

A document relied upon in evidence requires (i) proof of its execution; (ii) proof of its contents; and (iii) assessment of its evidentiary value as a whole. Consent to exhibit the document merely proves its execution which cannot invest it with any probative or evidentiary value if otherwise it has none. The proof of a document is independent of its evidentiary value; consent to exhibit merely dispenses with the requirement of its proof; but if the document is intrinsically inadmissible, no amount of consent can make it admissible. A ledger book becomes relevant only under S. 34; if it is not so relevant, it becomes wholly irrelevant; no amount of consent can convert its irrelevance into relevance. [A.I.R. 1914 Nag. 44; A.I.R. 1952 Assam 92, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1981 Bom. 446.

In order to prove the execution of a document it must be shown that the person executing it consciously subscribed to it in the sense that he put his mark or signature on it after having known and understood its contents. Mere proof that the person's signature appears on the document cannot, by itself, amount to execution of the document: A.I.R.

1957 Manipur 9. It is also settled that if an illiterate person affixes his thumb-mark to a document, the onus to prove that the document was properly explained to the person affixing his thumb-marks so as to make him understand its true import is on the person relying on the document: A.I.R. 1992 Madh. Pra. 22.

From the mere exhibition of the document, it does not follow that the Court is precluded from examining on evidence whether the document was executed by its purported executant; exhibition of the document is only its formal proof; on execution being challenged, the Court of fact is clearly entitled to weigh the evidence to ascertain whether the document was really executed by its purported executant: A.I.R. 1989 All. 130.

Where a document is purported to have been executed by a paradanashin or illiterate woman, the parties relying upon it and seeking to bind the lady with the contents thereof, must not only formally prove the document but must in addition prove that the contents were read over and explained to the lady-executant: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 132: 38 Cut.L.T. 13.

The correct view to take in regard to an execution of a document which is denied and the signature thereto only is admitted, is if there is nothing else and no other circumstances are pleaded, it is the person who alleges that the document was executed who has to prove that it was so executed in the sense that the executant intended to make and bring into existence the document which it purports to be: 1983 Hindu L.R. 364 (D.B.).

In order to exhibit a document under S. 67, held, it must have been proved; thus, where the witness admitted in cross-examination that he did not know who prepared it, the decree based on the document could not be sustained: A.I.R. 1991 N.O.C. 108 (Gau.).

Where there was no satisfactory evidence to prove the execution of the original sale deed as the evidence of the only attesting witness was found to be not acceptable, held, even if the secondary evidence in the shape of certified copy of the original was adduced, execution of the original was not proved. [In view of A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 242, the decision in A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 193 must be treated as overruled]: A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 19.

Where the pronote and receipt which were written in Hindi were signed by the defendant in Hindi at several places and the witnesses also testified that same were signed in their presence after receipt of loan in cash, held, execution of said documents was clearly proved vide S. 67: A.I.R. 1986 All. 185: (1986) 12 All.L.R. 52.

Will.—Where the propounder of the will led no evidence on both the counts, much less satisfactory evidence of its due and valid execution by the executant nor for removing suspicious circumstances surrounding the will, held, the finding of the trial Court that the will was validly executed could not be upheld. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443; A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 133, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1989 Guj. 75: (1989) 29 Guj.L.R. 1412.

Execution of will—Proof—Presumption in favour of due execution of will; if signatures of testator and attestors are proved and attestors are not available—Registration of will does not ipso facto constitute proof of valid execution—Non mutation in revenue records does not invalidate a will: (1966) 2 An.W.R. 134.

Where evidence of both the attesting witnesses was clear that the testator had signed the will in their presence and they themselves had also signed it as attesting witnesses, and the expert evidence also corroborated them, held, the defendant having cast no doubt about execution of the will, the same stands proved: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1989) 14 All.L.R. 814. See also S. 68, infra.

5. Mere admission of signature/thumb-impression—Whether amounts to admission of execution.—Mere admission of the signature on a blank paper does not amount to admission of execution; a blank paper with signature cannot create liability on the person signing it; execution implies an intelligent and conscious appreciation of contents and facts connected with the document; there was, properly speaking, no execution of the document: (1976) 42 Cut.L.T. 1180.

With regard to a document whose execution is denied but only signature is admitted and there is nothing else and no other circumstances are pleaded, held, placing of the burden to prove execution will depend upon the circumstances of that case; but if only the signature is admitted and the execution is denied and other facts and circumstances are pleaded and shown to be existing, it is the person who alleges execution who will have to prove that it was executed and that the executant intended to make and bring into existence the document which it purports to be: 1983 Mah.L.J. 221 (D.B.).

The execution of a document implies intelligent and conscious appreciation of its contents and the facts connected therewith; thus, where the defendant admitted only that he had put his signature on a blank paper possibly utilised by the plaintiff for fabricating the document to show that the amount was due from the defendant, held, it did not amount to admission of the document's execution; onus of proving that the document was duly executed by the defendant must, therefore, lie on the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 333: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 265: (1975) 1 M.L.J. 5 (D.B.).

The plaintiff brought a suit on the basis of a promissory note purported to have been executed by the defendant but the defendant denied both the execution as well as the passing of consideration and alleged that he entrusted to the plaintiff a blank sheet of paper bearing his thumb impression and signature for the purpose of being filled up as a kychit but the plaintiff had taken advantage of it for being filled up as a promissory note executed by him—Held, that the onus, in a case of this type, rests on the plaintiff to prove both the fact of execution and the advance of consideration. The admission by the defendant, as to his having affixed his thumb impression as well as signature on a blank paper without stamp cannot amount to an admission as to the execution of the promissory note, nor can it enable the plaintiff to go on from there to ask for an inference that consideration has also passed. S. 114 is a permissive and not a mandatory section and the Court may, having regard to the circumstances of a particular case, refuse to raise a presumption in that case under that section although in other cases such a presumption may be properly raised. Since the plaintiff failed to discharge the burden of proving execution and consideration the suit must fail: 1957 Ker.L.T. 321: A.I.R. 1957 Ker. 63.

6. Certificate of registration—Whether in itself proof of due execution.—[See also S. 68, Note 11, infra]. When execution of a document is being challenged, the certificate of registration alone will not be sufficient proof of the due execution of the document; Registration does not dispense with the necessity of proof of execution when the same is denied; proof of execution of a sale deed, when it is denied, will have to be furnished as in the case of any other document under S. 67: A.I.R. 1972 Assam 15: 1971 Assam L.R. 140 (D.B.).

Mere registration of a document is not by itself sufficient proof of its execution. Hence, unless there is formal proof of its execution its admission in evidence is improper and illegal: (1954-55) 59 Cal.W.N. 757: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 398.

Though a certified copy is as good as the original, mere registration of the original is no proof of its execution; there must be some proof of the execution and genuineness of the document which means that signature of the executant must be proved to be in his handwriting: A.I.R. 1979 Gau. 68.

It is true that registration, by itself, in all cases, is not proof of execution, but if no other evidence is available, the certificate of registration is prima facie evidence of its execution and the certificate of the registering officer under S. 60 of the Registration Act is relevant for proving execution: A.I.R. 1973 Mad. 421: (1972) 2 M.L.J. 508: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 122 (D.B.). It can be relied upon to prove the execution in proper cases: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 183: (1984) 2 Gau.L.R. 210.

It is settled law that the Sub-Registrar's certificate under S. 60 of the Registration Act is substantive evidence; S. 67 does not require independent proof of the signatures of the executant; proof of presentation of the document or its admission by itself is sufficient: 1986 Raj.L.W. 611. It is for the party challenging execution and registration to prove that some delibrate fraud was played on the Sub-Registrar and the registration was not legal and proper: (1990) 2 Ker.L.J. 115.

Execution and authorship of document—Proof of—Registration Act, 1908, S. 60(2)—Certificate of Registration—Genuineness must be presumed under S. 79 of Evidence Act—Suit for eviction by vendee of suit house—Plaintiff held succeeded in proving the sale: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 954: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 234.

7. Comparison by the Court.—[See also S. 73, infra]. Apart from the fact whether or not the single Judge was familiar with the Modi script in which signatures compared by him were made, and though it was permissible for the Judge under S. 73 to compare the signatures, held, such comparison of handwritings as a mode of proof is very hazardous and inconclusive, especially when comparison is made by one not conversant with the subject and without guidance from the experts' evidence: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 242: 1973 Mah.L.J. 511 (D.B.).

Where the prosecution did not discharge its basic burden of proving the signature and handwriting on documents to be that of the accused, held, such lacuna could not be cured by the Court comparing the accused's signature on the wakalatnama with the disputed signature and hold that it was that of the accused; conviction set aside as there was still no proof of the handwriting being that of the accused: 1991 Cr.L.J. 3146: 1991 Mah.L.J. 1040.

Where in a suit for recovery of money, the Court compared the admitted signature with the disputed one on the bond, held, the Court's finding based thereon cannot be discarded on the ground that the Court was not handwriting expert: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 267 (All.).

8. Objection regarding mode of proof.—The objection regarding the mode of proof of a document has to be taken at the time when it is being exhibited and not at a later stage: (1993) 1 M.L.J. 472; A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 477: 1973 Rev.L.R. 220 (D.B.).

Where documents were exhibited without objection, held, their contents thereby also stand admitted. [A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 608, Rel. on]: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 500 (D.B.).

It is now well settled that objection about mode of proof can be waived by a party and unless such objection is raised by the party at the earliest opportunity in trial Court, such objection will be deemed to have been waived and cannot be permitted to be raised for the first time in appeal: (1985) 26 Guj.L.R. 1315.

Mode of proof—Objection in second appeal: 31 Cut.L.T. 889: A.I.R. 1965 Ori. 113.

Where a document is in itself inadmissible, if no objection is taken at the time it is tendered, marked as an exhibit, and admitted to the record, omission to object so will not convert it into a document admissible at law in all subsequent stages. Where, however, a document is not in itself inadmissible, but gets admitted to the record without any objection, it stays in as good evidence incapable of being dislodged by a subsequent objection on the mode of proof only: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 751.

Account books—Entries in—Proof of—Mode of—Objection as to, not taken in trial Court—Cannot be raised in appeal: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 27.

9. Miscellaneous.—On production of a relevant document during trial, if objection to its admissibility or otherwise is raised, the Court must decide it before admitting the document in evidence and proceeding further with the trial; where the trial Court admitted a document subject to the plaintiff's objections without mentioning even the nature of objections which it never decided, and the document being an unregistered deed of partition, held, the trial Court ought not to have considered it as evidence of partition: (1988) 2 Karn.L.J. 155 (D.B.).

Where the plaintiff's title to the suit property was based on a registered sale-deed and the defendants did not contend in the written statement that the deed was forged nor any such suggestion was put to the plaintiff in the witness-box, held, it was idle to speculate on surmises and conjectures that the deed was a forgery: A.I.R. 1974 Madh. Pra. 16: 1973 M.P.L.J. 617: 1973 Jab.L.J. 754.

Where a marriage card was issued by a living person who was not examined as a witness to prove it, held, it had no credential value; its mere marking even by consent does not amount to its proof. [(1968) 2 M.L.J. 411: (1968) 81 Mad.L.W. 200, Foll.]: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 175 (D.B.). Admissibility of money-order coupons. See (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 323.

Where a document was not proved to be in the handwriting of and signed by a person who had purportedly written and signed it; one of the attesting witnesses although proved to be alive, capable of giving evidence and subject to the Court's process, was also not examined even when the document was required by law to be attested; held, the document fell in the category which 'shall not be used as evidence' within the meaning of S. 68: (1986) 6 Guj.L.H. 168.

The identity of the machine on which two letters have been typewritten would not by itself show that the writer of the two is one and the same person. Such a conclusion may be drawn from additional evidence, e.g., internal evidence afforded by the document, or external circumstances, or the continuity of the correspondence passing between the sender and the addressee: A.I.R. 1933 All. 690. See also I.L.R. 37 Cal. 467.

68. Proof of execution of document required by law to be attested.—If a document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution, if there be an attesting witness alive, and subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence:

[1][Provided that it shall not be necessary to call an attesting witness in proof of the execution of any document, not being a will, which has been registered in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, 1908 (16 of 1908), unless its execution by the person by whom it purports to have been executed is specifically denied.]

1. Applicability and scope.—In the N.W.F. Province, a conveyance of property does not require to be attested and, therefore, S. 68 has no application. Hence, admission of the execution of the document by the executant is sufficient to prove execution under S. 67: A.I.R. 1942 Pesh. 83. See also 1942 Nag.L.J. 214: A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 84.

S. 68 has no application to the Punjab and there is no law which requires sale deed in the province to be attested: I.L.R. 10 Lah. 447: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 148.

S. 68 applies only to those documents which are required by law to be attested. The Transfer of Property Act was not in force in Bikaner till 4th March, 1948 when the mortgage was registered. It is one thing to take into consideration the broad principles of law and it is a very different thing to apply the technical provisions of a certain Act. The provision relating to the attestation of documents is certainly a technical one and so long as the Transfer of Property Act was not adapted, it could not be said that there was any law in the former State of Bikaner where by the mortgage deed was required to be attested. Under the circumstances S. 68, Evidence Act, could not bar the admissibility of the mortgage deed simply because one attesting witness was not called for the purpose of proving its execution: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 39: I.L.R. (1955) Raj. 278.

Mortgage executed before T.P. Act—Proof of execution—Certified copy obtained from Registrar's Office. See (1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andhra) 75.

A document which is not a mortgage owing to non-compliance with S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act regarding attestation is not a document which is required by law to be attested within the meaning of S. 68 of the Evidence Act and is admissible to prove the personal covenant to pay therein which is not required by law to be attested: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 163: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 140: 60 M.L.J. 56; 146 I.C. 694: A.I.R. 1933 Sind 257.

As a deed of reconveyance by law requires no registration under the Registration Act nor attestation, held, S. 68 is not attracted even if it had been registered as well as attested; that is only a mere surplusage; non-production of an attesting witness to prove execution cannot be fatal; the Court could not discard the evidence of execution as not being in accordance with law and, therefore, insufficient. [A.I.R. 1980 All. 395, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1983 All. 1: 1982 All.W.C. 717: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 700.

A release deed is not a document required by law to be attested; it is, therefore, not necessary for one of its attesting witnesses to be examined as a witness: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 153 (D.B.).

The provision does not apply to documents which are merely to be proved for any admission contained in them and the suit is not based or founded on those documents. [A.I.R. 1939 All. 269 and A.I.R. 1947 All. 161, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 266; A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 255 and A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 160, Dissent. from]: (1975) 1 Cut.W.R. 257: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 597.

Where the execution of the settlement deed was not in dispute, S. 68 has no application: (1994) 2 M.L.J. 193.

If the execution itself is admitted by a party, the question of further proving the execution of the document by an attesting witness will not arise: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 23: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 86: (1985) 2 Cal.H.N. 357: (1985-86) 90 Cal.W.N. 95 (D.B.); (1982) 2 Guj.L.H. 933: (1982-2) 23 Guj.L.R. 464.

The necessity of examining an attesting witness would arise only when a document which is required by law to be attested is sought to be used in evidence and the execution thereof is questioned: A.I.R. 1972 Guj. 74.

Attestation—Proof of—Calling of attesting witness—Necessity: I.L.R. (1960) Cut. 214.

Attestation—Evidence of one attesting witness falling short of proof of due attestation of document—On body of document two persons appearing to be attesting witnesses—Held, one could not presume from such signature that document was attested by other signatory also: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811.

Ordinarily, an attestor is not presumed to have knowledge of the contents of the document; mere attestation is no evidence of the attestor's consent. However, it is open to the parties to prove that the attestation took place under circumstances which implied the attestor's consent to the transaction set out in the document. [A.I.R. 1916 P.C. 110; A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 20 and A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 82, Foll.]: (1988) 1 Ker.L.T. 310: I.L.R. (1988) 2 Ker. 63: (1988) 2 Ker.L.J. 926 (D.B.).

S. 71 is attracted only if the attesting witnesses were called but failed to prove execution of the will either by denying their own signatures or signature of the testator or having no recollection of the document's execution; it does not apply where the attesting witness fails to testify to all the ingredients of due execution of the will; his evidence cannot be supplemented by the evidence of other non-attesting witnesses: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 170: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 631: 39 Cut.L.T. 672.

S. 71 provides an exception to the rule enunciated in S. 68. But to make this provision applicable, it is evident that the attesting witness will have to appear in Court as a witness. Until he appears as a witness there is no question of his denying the execution of the document, or not recollecting the execution of the document. If the witness sits at home and is not examined because there is an apprehension that he may not support the execution of the mortgage deed, in that event there is a failure to produce the evidence which is required under S. 68. Consequently, S. 71 cannot come into play: A.I.R. 1980 All. 395: 1980 All.W.C. 358: (1980) 6 All.L.R. 445.

Where an agreement sought to be specifically enforced was attested by two witnesses and registered, it was the duty of its propounder to adduce their evidence in Court; if it was found to be insufficient to prove execution, the propounder could resort to S. 71 to prove it; non-examination of the attesting witnesses and the scribe, when they were available, presumption may be raised that if examined they would have gone against the propounder: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 292 (D.B.).

Section applies only to document duly attested and not to one which has not been proved to be so: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811.

Section is mandatory: (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 215: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 102. Scope of section. See 104 I.C. 622: A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 403; 45 C.L.J. 577.

S. 68 has to be read as mandatory and is certainly not permissive or enabling. It lays down the necessary requirements which the Court has to observe in order that a document can be held to be proved: It cannot be said that the only mandatory provision of the section is that one attesting witness has to be called and that once that is done, any lacuna in the evidence can be filled up by calling witness other than the attesting witnesses. Such a construction is untenable. The whole principle underlying S. 68 is that execution of the will must be proved by at least one attesting witness that it is only an attesting witness who is entitled to prove the execution of a document, such as, a will. It is a concession that the Legislature has made, and if that concession does not result in complying with the mandatory requirements of S. 68, then the only proper method is to call the other attesting witness so that both the attesting witnesses are before the Court and the due execution of the will (or other document) is proved by the two attesting witnesses, which requirements are necessary before a will can become a valid document:(1949) 51 Bom.L.R. 246: A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 266.

If S. 68 was intended to express that a document required by law to be attested should not be used as evidence for any purpose until one attesting witness at least had been called, then the words 'for any purpose' would have found a place in the section. Those words are not in the section and, therefore, it has to be concluded that this was not the intention of the framers of the Act. There is no reason why an admission in one document should require a different kind of proof from an admission in another document. The mere fact that one of the documents requires to be executed with attestation and that attestation must be proved for the purpose of giving legal effect to the document does not appear to have any bearing on the question as to what proof should be given of the document where it is tendered merely to prove an admission in writing. S. 68 does not apply to the case of a document which is merely to be proved for the purpose of an admission: I.L.R. (1939) All. 366: A.I.R. 1939 All. 269. See also (1989) 1 An.L.T. 404: (1989) 1 A.P.L.J. 436.

Proof of document required by law to be attested—Examination of scribe, without examining any of the attesting witnesses—Not sufficient—Admission of execution of document by deceased person is only binding on him—Execution has to be proved again against legal representatives—Person who can be treated as attesting witness stated.

Held: The rule enacted in S. 68 is stringent and mandatory that even in a case where the document is lost and secondary evidence is allowed to be led, the formality of an attesting witness being called has to be observed. Failure to call any of the attesting witnesses where it is not established, that all of them are dead, or were incapable of giving evidence is a fatal defect and a document cannot be held to have been proved.

Unless the person who witnesses the signing of the document by the executant thereof signs or puts his signature with the intention of attesting the document, he cannot be called an attesting witness.

In the instant case from the evidence of P.W. 1 it cannot be said that he put his signature on Exhibit A-1 with the intention of attesting it.

Admission by an executant of execution of a document is sufficient proof of execution as against him alone. Persons claiming through him can take objection to the execution and the execution will have to be proved as against them: (1970) 2 An.W.R. 88

Proof of execution of document required by law to be attested—Failure to secure attendance of surviving attesting witness in spite of exhausting all processes of Court—Bar imposed by S. 68 not attracted—Document could be proved under S. 69: 1969 Pat.L.J.R. 152: 1970 B.L.J.R. 476.

Where a document is attested by marginal witnesses at least one of them should be produced on the analogy of S. 68 even though it may not be clear whether the document was required by law to be attested or not when a document is in question, and has been attested by marginal witnesses, the mere statement of the scribe will not be sufficient to prove it: 1948 R.D. 306; 1950 R.D. 170.

Where there is a denial of execution of a registered lease, and a marginal witness, though he did not know the language in which the executant had signed it, proves due execution, it will be sufficient proof of execution: 1948 R.D. 53.

Proof of execution of attested document—Attesting witness cannot be presumed to know its contents: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 636.

Mere proof of thumb-marking a document by an illiterate person is no proof of due execution; it must further be shown that the executant had been told the contents and purport of the document before he thumb-marked it; due execution must always mean that there was concurrence between the mind of the executant and the document's contents before it was thumb-marked or signed by the executant: (1977) 44 Cut.L.T. 26: (1977) 1 Cut.W.R. 234.

To make a mortgage deed or a gift deed admissible in evidence as a deed of mortgage or gift, as the case may be, it is enough to comply with the provisions of S. 68 or S. 69. However, if the question raised is whether the document did create a mortgage or gift or not, it must be proved that the requirement of law as contained in Ss. 59 and 123, Transfer of Property Act, have been complied with. [A.I.R. 1932 All. 527 (F.B.), Foll.]: A.I.R. 1972 Gau. 44.

Where the execution of a registered mortgage deed is not denied by the mortgagor, it is not necessary to call the attesting witnesses of the deed to prove it: I.L.R. 12 Luck. 681: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 149. See also (1981) 1 M.P.W.N. 93. To prove a deed of gift, the production of a witness, who identified the donor and attesting witnesses and who was personally known to the Sub-Registrar, and an entry in favour of the donee in the village records are sufficient: 60 I.C. 234. The proper way of proving an entry in the Register of Motor Vehicles would be either that the Register itself should be produced by a proper official or a duly authenticated copy of the material part of the register placed before the Court. A mere statement by the Commissioner of Police made in answer to a letter written by the Corporation, without his being called or the register produced, cannot be accepted in proof of the ownership of a car: (1931-32) 36 Cal.W.N. 1147: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 678.

An illiterate witness cannot prove a signature because he cannot identify the handwriting or signature which is essential for the proof of the signature: 1948 R.D. 461.

Attestation by mark—Illiterate witness—Effect of. See 12 All.L.J. 1114: 26 I.C. 84. The fact that one of the attesting witnesses has turned hostile, is not a sufficient ground to excuse the party producing the document from his duty of calling the said witness. It is always open to him to cross-examine that witness with the permission of the Court: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 89: 1940 O.W.N. 1077.

S. 68 only applies when execution of a document has got to be proved. Where execution has not got to be proved, it is not necessary to call any attesting witness, unless it is expressly contended that the attesting witness has not witnessed the execution of the document in question: (1946) 48 Bom.L.R. 83: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 304. The word 'execution' in S. 68 includes attestation as required by law. Where the document is registered and its attestation not denied, it is not necessary to call an attesting witness: 1945 All.L.J. 537: A.I.R. 1946 All. 178. 'Execution' of mortgage deed—Meaning of. See (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1025: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 688.

Indisputably 'execution' and 'attestation' are two different acts, one following the other in that order; attestation of a document obviously is meant to ensure that the executant was a free agent neither under pressure nor subject to fraud; the reason behind the legislative imperative, set out in S. 68, to call at least one attesting witness for proof of an attestable document appears to be that he is a witness best suited to tell the Court about the circumstances under which the document was executed inasmuch as he was a witness appointed or agreed upon by the parties to speak to the circumstances of its execution before any controversy had arisen between them; what is more vital for the Court to determine is whether the document requiring attestation had been executed in an upright manner; the attesting witnesses can help the Court best in formulating its opinion about due execution of the document: A.I.R. 1972 Gau. 44.

'Execution' not only means signing by the executant, but means and includes all the series of acts which would give validity of the document concerned. In case of a deed of gift, mere admission by the executant, that it has been signed by him, cannot dispense with the proof of attestation: (1976) 1 Cut.W.R. 59.

The word 'execution' used in S. 68 includes attestation as required by law and in the case of documents required by law to be attested, not only the signature has to be proved but it has also to be proved that the document was duly attested. It is not necessary to produce both the attesting witnesses. But it is certainly essential to produce some evidence to show that there was such a second attesting witness also: 1948 R.D. 211(2): 1948 All.W.R. (Rev.) 132.

S. 68 relates to those documents which require to be proved at the trial of a suit. If by any rule of law or pleadings, such proof is not required, S. 68 is not attracted; S. 58 overrides S. 68 and obviates the necessity for calling an attesting witness unless the execution of the will or its attestation is in dispute; thus, in view of O. 8, R. 5, of the C.P.Code in the absence of any such plea in the written statement, it will be the height of technicality and waste of judicial time to insist on examination of an attesting witness before the document could be used as evidence. [1980 Ker.L.T. 493 held not good law]: A.I.R. 1990 Ker. 226: (1990) 1 Ker.L.J. 114: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 235 (D.B.).

It does not necessarily follow that because an attesting witness is unable to point to the signature on a document of the person whose signature he purports to have attested, that he has failed to prove the signature within the meaning of Ss. 67 and 68. If he has seen the other person sign or affix his mark in his presence or to have received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, it would be enough to satisfy the definition of 'attested' under the Transfer of Property Act. S. 67 only shows what has to be proved and S. 68 what kind of evidence is essential for this purpose and when this is forthcoming there is no reason why the word 'proved' in S. 3 should not be construed according to the definition: 1943 O.W.N. 425: A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 40.

The section does not apply to account books which do not require attestation: I.L.R. 51 All. 864: A.I.R. 1930 All. 38.

Where a document was not proved to be in the handwriting of, and signed by, a person who had purportedly written and signed it; one of the attesting witnesses although proved to be alive, capable of giving evidence and subject to the Court's process, was also not examined even when the document was required by law to be attested; held, the document fell in the category which 'shall not be used as evidence': (1986) 6 Guj.L.H. 168.

Under S. 67, a document purported to be written wholly or partly and signed by a person is required to be proved as so written and signed; S. 68 further lays down that a document required by law to be attested shall not be used as evidence until at least one of its attesting witnesses is examined, if alive, capable of giving evidence and subject to the Court's process, as a witness; but proviso to the section except in case of wills further lays down that the requirement of examining such witness is not necessary unless the executant specifically denies its execution: A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.).

The language of S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act read with Ss. 67 and 68 of the Evidence Act make it obligatory that the purported handwriting and signatures of the executant on the document must be proved to have been written or made by the executant and if the document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until at least one attesting witness is examined and proves execution of the document if he is alive, capable of giving evidence and is subject to the Court's process; however, if no attesting witness can be found, all that is required is to examine a witness who is able to prove the handwriting and signatures of the purported attesting witness. [A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 770: 125 I.C. 231; A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 641 and A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 662: 43 M.L.J. 216, Foll.]: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 311 (D.B.).

Notwithstanding S. 68, the Court in a proper case can raise a presumption under S. 90; Ss. 68 and 90 do not militate against each other; the Court's power to raise presumptions under S. 90 is not controlled or curtailed by S. 68; whether or not the presumption should be made would depend upon the facts and circumstances of the case: A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 202: (1989) 2 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 18 (D.B.).

Where a document, 30 years old, was acted upon throughout and, presumably, with the plaintiffs' knowledge, held, testimony of a witness that the signatures thereon were not those of the deceased was not sufficient to throw overboard the ancient document and subsequent events emanating from it; it is a fit case for raising the presumption under S. 90, notwithstanding S. 68: A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 202: (1989) 2 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 18 (D.B.).

Where the insurer declined to pay the amount assured to the insured's nominee on the ground that the deceased's age of 48 years at the time of issuing the policy on the basis of his declaration, medical certificate and horoscope and admitted by the insurer was false and deliberate concealment of his real age of 60 years as indicated in the partnership deed and application for firm's registration to the Income-tax Department, held, the two documents did not require attestation by law; they are liable to be proved as per S. 67; S. 68 is not attracted: A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 69: 1981 M.P.L.J. 192 (D.B.).

The original of a public document is also required to be proved; otherwise there would be no check whatever, by scrutiny or examination, of its authenticity either by the Court or its officers; neither S. 67 nor S. 68 make any exception in favour of public documents: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

S. 57(5) of the Indian Registration Act, 1908 simply provides that all copies given under this section shall be signed and sealed by the Registering Officer and shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document; this does not, however, do away with the provisions of S. 68: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 303: 1971 Raj.L.W. 319.

Where an attesting witness died after giving his evidence in previous proceedings between the same parties or their predecessors and his evidence so recorded was transferred to the subsequent proceedings and the surviving attesting witness was not examined, held, the requirements of S. 68 stood satisfied: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 130 (F.B.).

Ss. 68 and 69 only require that one of the attesting witnesses should be called to prove execution of the document; once it is so proved, even if the attesting witness so examined does not prove either the signature of, or attestation by, the other witness, the document becomes admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1981 N.O.C. 29 (All.) (D.B.); (1991) 45 Del.L.T. 352 (D.B.) [Non-production of second attesting witness is not fatal].

2. Applicability of section to bonds.—A bond is not required by law to be attested and as such S. 68 would not be applicable to it. The fact that it is attested would not affect the question: 1948 O.W.N. 85: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 258. The definition of bond in S. 2(5) of the Stamp Act is not exhaustive, nor is it proper to infer from the definition in an Act which deals with stamp matters only that it means that such a document is required by law to be attested. Therefore, it is S. 72 which applies to the case of a bond and not S. 68, and examination of the attesting witnesses to prove execution is not necessary: 1940 Nag.L.J. 70: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 240.

The word 'bond' defined in the Indian Limitation Act and the Indian Stamp Act is inconclusive, not exhaustive; the bars contained in the two Acts would not apply to bonds; they are not required by law to be attested; held, it is to be proved not under S. 68 but under S. 72: A.I.R. 1982 Gau. 100 (D.B.).

In a suit on a bond, the plaintiff did not produce any of the attesting witnesses. He explained that the witnesses were the near relations or were under the influence of the defendant. The Court after taking into consideration the evidence on record and the explanation given thought it fit to rely on the evidence of the plaintiff.

Held, that the production of attesting witnesses was only necessary in cases where the document was required by law to be attested and that in the circumstances no question of law was involved in the objection of the defendant based on the failure of the plaintiff to examine the attesting witnesses: I.L.R. (1957) 7 Raj. 922: 1957 Raj.L.W. 485: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 310.

3. Due attestation.—An attesting witness must subscribe his signature with the intention that it should be complete attestation of the document and if the animo attestandi is not present, there cannot be a valid attestation: A.I.R. 1976 Mad. 4: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 518: (1975) 2 M.L.J. 155.

S. 68—'Valid attestation'—Nature of proof required. [A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 316, Rel. on]: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 472.

A person can be taken to have attested the factum of execution of a document required by law to be attested not only when he saw the execution but also when he signed it as an attesting witness; it cannot be presumed from mere signatures of two persons at the foot of the endorsement of registration that they had done so as attesting witnesses. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 346, Rel. on]: (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. 190.

It is well established that if one attesting witness alone is examined and only proves that the executant had appended or personally acknowledged his signature on the document before the witness, it is not sufficient; it has still to be proved that the executant had appended or acknowledged his signature before the other witness as well; however, if one witness alone proves that the testator had appended or acknowledged his signature before both the witnesses, other attesting witnesses need not be examined: (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. 368 (D.B.).

In view of S. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, the essential conditions of a valid attestation are that two or more witnesses must have seen the executant sign the instrument, or have received from him a personal acknowledgment of his signature, and each of them has signed the instrument in the presence of the executant. Where the document appeared to have been executed and attested at the same sitting and there was nothing to show that the document was executed and attested at different times, held, merely because the attesting witness did not say in his deposition that he had signed in the presence of the executant, it could not be said that the requirements of S. 68 were not satisfied: A.I.R. 1983 Ori. 24: (1982) 54 Cut.L.T. 560.

If a document has been scribed, executed and attested with the same ink, a presumption of due attestation is permissible in law according to the well-known maxim 'omina praesumunturrite etsolemniter case act donee probetur in contrarium': I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 649: A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 155.

Attesting witness deposing that he had attested the mortgage bond executed by A in favour of B and that other attestators also witnessed its execution—It is sufficient evidence of valid attestation: (1954) 1 M.L.J. 622: 1954 S.C.R. 919: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 316.

The law will assume that when the witness swears that the deed was attested he means "attested according to the forms required by law". If the other side wants to challenge that statement, it is their duty, quite apart from raising it in their pleadings, to cross-examine the witness along those lines. When that is not done the plaintiff relying on the deed is entitled to assume that the mode of attestation is not being attacked and, therefore, it is enough for their witness merely to formally prove attestation: I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 321: A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 83.

Where in a suit on a mortgage, the plaintiff mortgagee states in evidence that the mortgage document was executed by the defendant and the defendant who generally denied the mortgage in his written statement does not cross-examine the plaintiff regarding the details of the execution or about attestation, it would be presumed that there was due execution and attestation of the document according to law. Attestation can be presumed when there is no specific attack on due execution: A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 343: I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 873.

Though the witness required to prove attestation may not have categorically stated that he and the other attesting witnesses put their signature (after having seen the execution of the document) in the presence of the executants, nevertheless, the fact that they actually did so can be easily gathered from the circumstances disclosed in the evidence. Thus, where it is proved that the execution and registration of the document all took place at about the same time in the house of the executants, that the witnesses not only saw the executants put their signatures on the document, but also saw the document being explained to the lady executant by her husband as also by the registering officer, that they also saw the executants admit receipt of the consideration, which was paid in their presence and that all this happened at the same time, it can be legitimately inferred that the witnesses also put their signatures in the presence of the executants after having seen them signing the instrument: A.I.R. 1958 Assam 56.

The proper procedure to follow under S. 68 is that the witness should not only be asked whether he had attested a particular document but the document itself should be shown to him and he should be questioned whether it bears his signature. It should be further put to him whether the executant had also signed the document in his presence or that he had admitted his signature on the documents before him. If the witness says that the executant had signed the document in his presence he should also be asked to identify the signature thereon. It is necessary to bring out from the witness that he has attested the document in the sense referred to in S. 3, Transfer of Property Act: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 39: I.L.R. (1955) Raj. 278.

Merely because an attesting witness to an agreement to sell was a resident of a place 6 miles from that of executing parties, held, is no ground to reject his testimony: A.I.R. 1982 All. 186.

Where none of the attesting witnesses was examined in order to prove the execution of the deed and even identifying witnesses and the scribe had also not been examined, but, the Joint Registrar who registered the document was examined to prove the execution, held, as the Joint Registrar had stated that even before the document was presented to him for registration, it had already contained the thumb mark and signature of the attestators to it, his endorsement with regard to execution would not show animo attestandi; his examination, therefore, did not satisfy the provisions of S. 68: A.I.R. 1971 Andh. Pra. 319.

4. Attestator—Who may be.—Executant of document or party to transaction not an 'attesting' witness: (1909-10) 14 Cal.W.N. 1046: 7 I.C. 735.

Scribe as attesting witness.—A writer who signs his name in token of being the scribe of a mortgage deed does not attest the deed merely by subsequently seeing the mortgagor affix his signature: 6 Nag.L.R. 152: 8 I.C. 1119. The signature of a scribe may itself in certain circumstances be regarded as an attestation which stands duly proved by his evidence. The decision in I.L.R. 41 Mad. 535, stands unaffected by the decision of the Judicial Committee in A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 89.

It is a question in each case which turns upon its own circumstances whether a scribe can or cannot be regarded as an attesting witness. A scribe may be an attesting witness as well as the writer. But the fact that he signed as an attesting witness must be duly proved: (1950) 2 M.L.J. 262.

A writer of a deed who has not signed it as witness but has, as a matter of fact, been a witness of execution is a competent attesting witness: 146 I.C. 694: A.I.R. 1933 Sind 257.

The proof contemplated in S. 68 can be furnished by the scribe of the document who could speak to the execution of it and it is not essential that it should be proved only by at least one of the attesting witnesses. It is true, in cases where the scribe signed the memo. before the document was actually executed, it would mean he did not witness the execution and it would not satisfy the requirements of that section if such a person is examined as an attesting witness. Thus, it depends greatly upon the facts of each case, whether a scribe is also an attesting witness or not. Where the writer of the document signed the same as a scribe after the attesting witness had fixed their signatures and also deposed that he saw not only the executant affixing his signature but the attestation as well, it would be sufficient proof of execution of the document: 1956 An.W.R. 632: A.I.R. 1956 Andhra 195.

It will be a question of fact in each case to be determined as to under what circumstances and in what manner the scribe acted and attested the will or not. The mere fact that the will was scribed by a person did not mean that he could not prove the will as an attesting witness. [A.I.R. 1956 Andhra 195, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 230.

The scribe of a document may perform a dual role; he may be an attesting witness as well as the scribe, but he will not be so unless he intends to sign the document as an attesting witness. When a person puts his signatures on the document both as scribe and as attesting witness, the inference is that he functioned both as scribe and as attesting witness: A.I.R. 1983 Ori. 24: (1982) 54 Cut.L.T. 560.

Registering Officer—A Registering Officer signing a document in performance of his official duty does not thereby become an attesting witness of the will; to be taken as an attesting witness, he must have put his signatures to authenticate the executant's signature with the animus of the attesting witnesses in the presence of the executant; there must be necessary evidence in this regard on the record to prove his animo attestandi; mere non-perfunctory registration of the document by him is no such proof: 1988 Rajdhani L.R. 387: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 47 (Del.).

When the Sub-Registrar did nothing except to sign the registration endorsement on the document, which he is duty bound to do under the Registration Act which requires him to ascertain whether the person presenting the document for registration had executed the same and on getting an affirmative reply makes endorsement to that effect and signs the registration endorsement on the documents, held, by no stretch of imagination could it be said that the Sub-Registrar was doing so as an attestor; it is well established that it is animo attestandi which makes a signatory to the will an attesting witness: (1991) 2 M.L.J. 478.

Where the testator at the registration of his will put his thumb-impression in the presence of the Sub-Registrar who also signed the endorsement, held, the Sub-Registrar also becomes an attesting witness; the contents of his endorsement also become admissible and true; there remains no necessity to prove the execution of the will by other evidence: (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 525.

A Sub-Registrar who has signed a document in the presence of the executant after receiving from him an acknowledgment of execution is an attesting witness: 1940 Nag.L.J. 437: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 382.

Beneficiary—Attestor to a document may be beneficially interested—Document valid—Person not party to document can prove its execution: (1966) 2 An.W.R. 1: (1966) 2 An.L.T. 105.

Burden lies on a person having fiduciary relationship with the executant of a deed conferring benefit on him to show that the executant had independent advice and did not execute the deed under his undue influence: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 372.

Identifier—Identifier as attesting witness: (1958) 1 Cal.L.J. 123.

It is true that legally the witness only identifies the executant and need not be fastened with the knowledge of the contents of the document. But where the witness is related to the executant, and also knows that the executant had no interest in the property and still goes to identify him, it can legitimately be inferred that the witness had full knowledge of the contents of the deed: I.L.R. (1964) 16 Assam 237: A.I.R. 1967 Assam 9.

The change in the meaning of the word 'attested' effected by S. 2 of Act XXVIII of 1926 as amended by Act X of 1927 is retrospective in operation and the person who identifies the executant of a document before Sub-Registrar can be an attesting witness: 30 Nag.L.R. 62: A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 1.

A person identifying executant before registration authorities is deemed to be an attesting witness: 1979 All.W.C. (Rev.) 23. But see: The imperative requirement of S. 68 cannot be fulfilled by examination of the identifying witness because he makes the signature with the animus only to identify the executant: (1980) 2 An.W.R. 350.

Miscellaneous—Where a sale deed standing in the name of the plaintiff's brother had been attested by the plaintiff himself who also contended that the property was nevertheless purchased for the benefit of both the brothers, held, the attestation could only be for the purpose of binding the plaintiff to the purchase of property in the name of his brother; the plaintiff's contention rejected: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 549.

5. Proof of document not required to be attested.—[See also Notes under S. 72, infra]. Documents not required by law to be attested—Proof of execution—Parties, however, obtaining attestation—Attesting witness need not be examined to prove execution: 1966 All.W.R. (H.C.) 57: A.I.R. 1966 All. 515.

Mode of proof of document which is required by law to be attested within meaning of S. 3, T.P. Act, 1882, is different from mode of proof of other kind of documents that are not so required to be attested: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811.

To the deeds not by law required to be attested, S. 68 does not apply. They are governed by S. 67 which does not lay down any particular mode of proving a particular writing or signature to be in the hand of a particular person. They may be proved in any one or more of the following modes: (i) by calling the person who signed or wrote; (ii) by calling the person in whose presence it was signed or written; (iii) by calling handwriting expert; (iv) by calling a person acquainted with the handwriting of the person having purportedly signed or written it whom the document is supposed to be signed or written; (v) by comparing in Court the disputed signature or handwriting with some admitted signatures or writing; (vi) by proof of an admission of the person who is alleged to have signed or written the document that he signed or wrote it; (vii) by the statement of a deceased professional scribe, made in the ordinary course of business, that the signature on the document is that of the particular person; (viii) by other circumstantial evidence. [1981 M.P.L.J. 192: 1981 Jab.L.J. 388, Rel. on]: 1983 M.P.L.J. 355.

6. Proof of mortgage deed.—Under S. 68, what is necessary is that an attesting witness, if available, should be called in evidence. It is wrong to think that a mortgage deed can be proved only by an attesting witness. If the latter is unable to prove it, there is no bar to its being proved by other evidence: I.L.R. 16 Luck. 615: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 284: 1941 O.W.N. 1298; A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 201; A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 122.

A mortgage deed stands proved in accordance with the provisions of S. 68 when scribe of the deed had admittedly been produced as a witness: 1995 Punj.L.J. 267.

A mere production of the mortgage deed is not enough to fasten any liability on parties who are not the executants of the document. Even if the document has been produced alongwith the plaint, the plaintiff would not be relieved of the burden of proving the document as required by law, to entitle him to a decree on the basis of the document. A document could be proved only by calling an attesting witness, and this could be dispensed with only where the execution is admitted or has not been denied. The rule enacted in S. 68 is so stringed and mandatory that even in a case where the document is lost and secondary evidence is allowed to be led, the formality of an attesting witness being called has to be observed. Failure to call as witness any of the attesting witnesses where it is not established that all of them are dead or were incapable of giving evidence, is a fatal defect and a document cannot be held to have been proved: 1958 An.L.T. 440: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 418.

The object of attestation in S. 59 of Transfer of Property Act and S. 68 of the Evidence Act is to protect the executant from being required to execute a document by the other party thereto by force, fraud or undue influence. Therefore, what is intended to benefit the executant cannot be construed to act to the detriment of his interest. Thus, a mortgagee who has admitted the execution of mortgage deed in lower Courts cannot be allowed to contest the suit on the ground that the mortgagor failed to prove the requirements of S. 59 of T.P. Act in not adducing evidence as to attestation of mortgage deed: (1969) 35 Cut.L.T. 821.

Preliminary decree passed and final decree barred—Subsequent suit brought by assignee of decree debt based on same mortgage bond—Plea that mortgage bond was not admissible in evidence as none of attestors had been examined could not be allowed to be raised either by original mortgagor or by his legal representatives: (1963) 2 An.L.T. 404: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 297.

Suit for redemption of usufructuary mortgage—Execution of mortgage not denied by mortgagee—But deed not attested—Mortgage held invalid—Decree, however, could be granted on basis of mortgagor's title: I.L.R. (1961) 13 Assam 23: A.I.R. 1961 Assam 48.

No evidence to show document as attested by any other witness—Held, document was not duly attested within meaning of S. 3 and hence, it could not be enforced as mortgage bond for falling short of requirements of S. 59: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811.

Person denying execution of mortgage deed by him—Subject value exceeding rupees one hundred—Deposition by one of attestators to mortgage deed that neither both attestors signed it in presence of mortgagor nor mortgagor in turn signed in their presence—Other attestor not examined—

Mortgage deed is inadmissible in evidence—Transfer of Property Act, 1882, Ss. 3, 59: (1969) 11 Ori.J.D. 1.

Mortgage, proof of—Only one attesting witness called, sufficient proof: I.L.R. 39 All. 241: 15 All.L.J. 164.

Where an attesting witness is called but his evidence has not been accepted, the contention that the provisions of S. 68 had been complied with and that no further evidence of due execution and attestation of the mortgage was necessary, cannot be accepted: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 669: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117: (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762 (P.C.).

Where the trial Court had admitted the mortgage deed into evidence without its formal proof in accordance with law but rejected it at a later stage, held, as the mistake was on the part of the Court, the party adducing said document could be given an opportunity to prove the said document in accordance with law; thus, it could not be said to be a case of mere filling in the lacuna in the evidence: (1989-1) 95 Punj.L.R. 229.

Where what was denied was the genuineness or the validity or the truth of the alleged mortgage and not the execution of the mortgage deed, held, even if none of the attestators had been examined, it could not be said that the mortgage deed had not been duly proved: (1975) 2 Karn.L.J. 37 (S.N.) 71.

Where though the execution of the mortgage deed was admitted, it was alleged that it was the outcome of coercion and undue influence, held, execution having been admitted, examination of the attesting witnesses for the purpose of proof of the execution of the document was not necessary: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 132: (1984-85) 89 Cal.W.N. 700 (D.B.).

Where though the mortgagors had denied execution of mortgage deed, one of the attestators spoke about the execution, held, in such a case S. 71 can be called in aid and as the mortgagors had signed in presence of the witnesses before the Registrar, the trial Court was right in upholding the execution and attestation of document: (1991) 1 An.L.T. 140.

7. Proof of gift deed.—Due execution, attestation and registration are the very foundations of the validity of a gift deed; the plaintiff has to prove them in the manner contemplated by S. 68 read with S. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act; where only one of the two attesting witnesses was examined to prove the gift deed, it could not be said to have been proved; its mere registration does not do away with its proof contemplated by S. 68: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Karn. 370: (1979) 1 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 85.

Where the gift deed was not specifically denied, held, it was not necessary to prove the deed in accordance with S. 68; it could be used as evidence. [A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 343; A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 155, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1981 All. 50; (1982) 23 Guj.L.R. 464.

Where a gift deed is challenged not for want of legal attestation but on the grounds of misrepresentation, undue influence and fraud, held, it amounts to admission of execution; attestation, thus, need not be proved: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 472.

Where execution of the gift deed was denied but its propounder examined only the identifying witness without examining any of the attesting witnesses, held, the deed was not proved as required under S. 68; merely because the summons were issued to one attesting witness but no steps were taken to procure his presence by resort to coercive measures under O. 16, R. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not sufficient to escape the rigour of S. 68: (1980) 2 An.W.R. 350.

Where there was no specific denial of execution of the gift deed as the plea raised was that the plaintiff was not aware of execution of any such deed, held, the trial Court was not justified in holding that the deed, not having been proved as required under S. 68, must fail: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 73 (Ker.).

Where the scribe of the gift deed had deposed that the executant had signed before him and the attesting witnesses attested the gift deed in his presence and one of the attesting witness also deposed to the same, held, the mere fact that the other attesting witness had not been produced, would be of no effect: [A.I.R. 1969 S.C. 1147, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 25.

Where one of the attesting witnesses of a gift deed proved the signatures of the donor as well as both the attesting witnesses but not that each of the attesting witnesses had seen the other attesting the deed in his presence, held, though procedural requirements of S. 68 were satisfied, yet the party relying upon the document is not absolved, if execution is denied, to prove that each of the attesting witnesses had seen the executant sign or affix his mark or has received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of the signature or mark: A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 88: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 799 (D.B.). See also (1979) 1M.P.W.N. 115.

Requirements of valid attestation—Executant of gift deed affixing his thumb-mark after endorsement by registering officer while registering deed under S. 58 (Registration Act, 1908)—Thumb-mark satisfies requirements of execution of document: (1968) 1 An.W.R. 359.

8. Proof of sale deed.—There is nothing in S. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act, which requires a sale deed to be attested. Thus, a sale deed though attested, does not depend upon attestation for its validity; it would, therefore, be unnecessary to prove it by calling an attesting witness: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 6.

There is no legal requirement that witnesses attesting an agreement of sale should be from the vendor's village: (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 321.

Where a sale agreement in its recitals conveys title to the vendee with absolute rights of alienation but without consideration, held, the document amounted to a sale deed even if it provided for execution of a regular sale deed; being unstamped and unregistered, it is not admissible. [A.I.R. 1961 Andh. Pra. 424, Foll.]: (1984) 2 An.W.R. 105: (1984) 1 An.L.T. 158.

9. Proof of will—General principles.—The party propounding a will or otherwise making a claim under a will is no doubt seeking to prove a document and, in deciding how it is to be proved, reference must inevitably be made to the statutory provisions which govern the proof of documents. Under S. 67, if a document is alleged to be signed by any person, the signature of the said person must be proved to be in his handwriting, and for proving such a handwriting under Ss. 45 and 47 of the Act, the opinions of experts and of persons acquainted with the handwriting of the person concerned are made relevant. S. 68 deals with the proof of the execution of the document required by law to be attested; and it provides that such a document shall not be used as evidence until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution. Ss. 59 and 63 of the Indian Succession Act are also relevant. The question as to whether the will set up by the propounder is proved to be the last will of the testator has to be decided in the light of these provisions. It would prima facie be true to say that the will has to be proved like any other document except as to the special requirements of attestation prescribed by S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act. The rest to be applied would be the usual test of the satisfaction of the prudent mind in such matters. The propounder would be called upon to show by satisfactory evidence that the will was signed by the testator, that the testator at the relevant time was in a sound disposing state of mind, that he understood the nature and effect of the dispositions and put his signature to the document of his own free will: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443; (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 643; (1991) 3 Karn.L.J. 188.

S. 68 makes an important concession to those who wish to prove and establish a will in a Court of law. Although S. 63 of the Succession Act requires that a will has to be attested by two witnesses, S. 68 of the Evidence Act permits the execution of the will to be proved by only one attesting witness to be called. But it is important to note that at least one attesting witness should be in a position to prove the execution of the will. If that attesting witness can prove the execution of the will, the law dispenses with the evidence of the other attesting witness. But if that attesting witness cannot prove the execution of the will, then his evidence has to be supplemented by the other attesting witness being called to prove the execution. But the execution of the will, as required by S. 63, Succession Act, does not merely mean the signing of it by the executant (testator or testatrix) or putting his or her thumbmark on the document; it means all the formalities required and laid down by S. 63 Succession Act; if the one attesting witness who is called does not, therefore, prove the attestation of the will by the other attesting witness, his evidence would fall short of the requirements of S. 68, Evidence Act: (1949) 51 Bom.L.R. 245: A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 266.

Reading S. 63 of the Succession Act with S. 68 of the Evidence Act, it is clear that what a person propounding a will has to prove is that the will was duly and validly executed and that has to be done by not simply proving that the signature on the will was that of the testator but that the attestations were also made properly as required by Cl. (c) of S. 63 of the Succession Act. Under S. 63(c) of the Succession Act, it is necessary to prove that one or more witnesses had properly attested the will

The Evidence Act only lays down the mode of proving; it does not define what is required to be proved under S. 63(c) of the Succession Act. When a person comes to Court to establish the authenticity and the valid execution of a will, the mere formal execution and its valid execution cannot be separated. To prove the valid execution of a will, there must be proof of both the attestations. There cannot be a valid execution without proper attestation under S. 63, Succession Act, and if such proper attestation is not proved, there is no proof of execution under S. 68, Evidence Act. S. 68, Evidence Act, does not say that a document required to be attested by two witnesses shall be proved by the evidence of one of them. All that the section provides is that such a document shall not be accepted in evidence unless the evidence of 'at least' one of the attesting witnesses is called. The words "at least" are of the utmost importance and pre-suppose that more evidence may be required; it can only be by reference to the circumstances of each case that the quantum of evidence necessary to discharge the onus of proof can be measured. If one attesting witness only proves that the testator had acknowledged his signature to him, that does not dispense with proof of acknowledgment by the testator before the other attesting witness. All that S. 68, Evidence Act, means is that if two attesting witnesses had signed in each other's presence, it is not necessary to examine both of them to prove that they have received the acknowledgment from the testator: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 709: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 12.

The onus is upon the party propounding a will and he must satisfy the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last will of a free and capable testator. If circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, it is his duty to remove such suspicion and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document; and it is only then that the onus is shifted on those impeaching the will to prove if there are other affirmative circumstances to detract from its legality. The principles that govern such cases are: (1) a propounder of a will has to prove due and valid execution of the same, and if there are suspicious circumstances surrounding the execution of the will, the propounder must remove the said suspicions from the mind of the Court by cogent and satisfactory evidence; (2) a will has to be proved like any other document except as to the special requirement of attestation prescribed by S. 63 of the Succession Act. It would be idle in the case of proof of wills as in the case of other documents, to expect proof with mathematical certainty. The test to be applied would be the usual test of the satisfaction of the prudent mind in such matters; (3) even though there is an element of solemnity in the decision of the question whether the will propounded is the last will and testament of the deceased testator because of his non-availability to prove the same, the Court in dealing with proof of wills will start on the same inquiry as in the case of proof of other documents ordinarily. When the evidence adduced in support of the will is disinterested, satisfactory and sufficient to prove the sound and disposing state of the testator and of the signature as required by law, Courts would be justified in making a finding in favour of the testator.

Direct or positive evidence regarding the execution of the will has to be considered and then if there are circumstances present to create suspicion, the Court is bound to find out those circumstances and look for evidence for the purpose of deciding whether those suspicions have been removed. The process cannot in any way be reversed. It is not permissible to a Court of probate to consider aliunde the terms of the will, to consider whether they are generous or not, to consider whether the relations who had natural and legitimate claims on the testator's bounty have been cut off and then consider whether the will is forged or not with such pre-conceived ideas and refuse to grant probate of the will: 1968 Ker.L.J. 123; (1991) 1 An.L.T. 5.

The law as to attestation of wills is contained in S. 63(c) of the Succession Act and the mode of proving documents required by law to be attested has been laid down in Ss. 68 to 72 of the Evidence Act. Nothing in these provisions makes it a necesary element in the proof of attestation that the signatures of all the attesting witnesses of a will should be identified, and it is not permissible to add to the statutory requirements of the mode of proving it. What has to be proved is that each of the attesting witnesses saw the testator signing the will or received from the testator a personal acknowledgment of his signature and that each of the witnesses signed the will in the presence of the testator. It is not necessary that the attesting witnesses should be able to identify the signature of each other or even to know each other and as such there can be no basis for the requirement that the witnesses should identify each other's signature: I.L.R. (1965) 1 All. 483: A.I.R. 1966 All. 570.

S. 68 of the Evidence Act does not in any manner change or alter the requirements to be proved by S. 63(c) of the Succession Act. A reading of S. 63(c) of the Succession Act with S. 68 of the Evidence Act, establishes that a person propounding a will has to prove that the will was duly and validly executed and that should be done by not merely establishing that the signature on the will was that of the testator, but also that the attestations were made in the manner contemplated by Cl. (c) of S. 63 of the Succession Act: (1994) 1 M.L.J. 216 (D.B.).

Since a will takes effect after the testator's death, held, it is incumbent on its propounder to satisfy the Court's conscience that it is the last will and testament of the testator and prove it in terms of S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act and S. 68. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 442, Foll.]: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 554 (Andh. Pra.).

The propounder of the will has not only to prove it as provided in S. 68 but he has also to adduce evidence to explain all the suspicious circumstances in order to remove any doubt that is likely to linger in the mind of the Court. Not only the sound state of mind of the testator, but the fact that the document is the last will and testament of the testator, according to her free will uninfluenced by other sources will have to be established: A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 123.

The onus lies on the propounder to prove the will; if no suspicious circumstances surround the will's execution, proof of testamentary capacity and the signature of the testator as required by law would be sufficient to discharge that onus: A.I.R. 1990 Madh. Pra. 334; A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 377 (D.B.); 1968 Ker.L.J. 123; but if there were any suspicious circumstance like the absence of the endorsement on the back of the will in the Sub-Registrar's office that the contents of the will of which the testatrix admitted the execution were brought home to her, the propounder must satisfactorily explain it: A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 196 (D.B.).

A distinguishing feature of a will, unlike other documents, is that the will speaks from the death of its testator; when it is propounded or produced before a Court, its testator, being already dead, cannot speak about its genuineness or contents, etc. The onus, thus lies heavy on its propounder to show, by satisfactory evidence, that the will was signed by the testator, when he was in a sound and disposing state of mind, had understood the nature and effect of the disposition and had put his signature to the will of his own free will. Judging the solemnity attached, the evidence should be of disinterested, satisfactory and sufficient nature: A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 289.

Will—Mode of proof—Onus—Principles—When Court would grant probate: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 529.

Ss. 68 and 114, Illus. (g)—Succession Act, 1925, S. 63—Will—Question about truth and genuineness of will—Propounder taking benefit under will examining only one of attestors to will as required under S. 68 and not examining other witnesses—Held, propounder was under duty to examine all available witnesses and to produce best available evidence in support of execution of will—Non-production of such available evidence resulted in presuming that evidence was unfavourable to him, under S. 114—Succession Act, 1925, S. 63: (1966) 2 An.W.R. 191.

The onus to prove the allegations of fraud, undue influence and coercion used in procuring the will lies on the party who makes those allegations: A.I.R. 1976 Cal. 377 (D.B.).

Execution of the will, to obtain Letters of Administration, requires proof of the testator's sound and disposing mind and proof of its execution and attestation under S. 68; though it is for the caveator who allege fraud or undue influence on the testator, to prove the same, but despite his failure to so prove, the propounder has still to clarify and explain suspicious circumstance arising in the case: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 189: (1989) 1 Ori.L.R. 345: (1989) 67 Cut.L.T. 537 (D.B.).

S. 68 read with S. 63 of the Succession Act requires at least one attesting witness to be examined to prove not only about the testator signing, or affixing his mark to, the will but also about each of the witnesses having signed the will in the testator's presence: A.I.R. 1990 Madh. Pra. 334; A.I.R. 1974 Andh. Pra. 13.

To prove the execution of the will, examination of one of the attesting witnesses is enough; but that witness shall speak that he has seen the testator signing or affixing his mark to the will and has seen the other person attesting the will: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 300 (Andh. Pra.) (D.B.).

It cannot be laid down as a matter of law that because the witnesses did not state in their examination-in-chief that they signed the will in the presence of the testator, it cannot amount to due attestation; it will depend upon the circumstances elicited in their evidence whether the attesting witnesses had signed in the presence of the testator; where a will duly signed by the testator was attested by two witnesses not in the presence of each other but at different times, the proof of both the attestations in the presence of the testator is necessary; there need not be positive evidence from the attesting witnesses that the testator's signature was on the will when they signed it; the production of the will by the testator with his signature upon it and his request to the witness to attest it, is a sufficient acknowledgment by the testator of his signature on the will. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 363, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1985 N.O.C. 160: 1985 Ker.L.T. 14.

The attestor's participation even at the time of registration does not dispense with the proof of execution and attestation of the will in accordance with S. 68: A.I.R. 1974 Andh. Pra. 13.

The provisions of S. 68, Evidence Act, are mandatory and they apply to a will as it is a document required under S. 63(c) of the Succession Act to be attested. Under S. 68 of the Evidence Act what is necessary is that an attesting witness if available should be called in evidence. The expression 'called' in the section is not used in the sense of 'summoned' and it clearly means tendered for the purpose of giving evidence: I.L.R. (1952) Nag. 189: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 88.

It cannot be presumed from the mere signatures of two persons appearing at the foot of the endorsement of registration of a will that they had appended their signatures to the document as attesting witnesses or can be construed to have done so in their capacity as attesting witnesses. S. 68 of the Evidence Act requires an attesting witness to be called as a witness to prove the due execution and attestation of the will. This provision should be complied with in order that those two persons might be treated as attesting witnesses: A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 346.

Will—Attestation—Proof—Scribe and Sub-Registrar as attesting witnesses. See A.I.R. 1957 Raj. 180. The provisions of S. 281 of the Succession Act are merely supplementary and do not dispense with any other proof that may be necessary. Although a petition for probate of a will is verified by one of the attesting witnesses as required by S. 281 of the Succession Act, an affidavit should be filed by an attesting witness proving the execution of the will as required by S. 68 of the Evidence Act: (1951-52) 56 Cal.W.N. 650. Proof of execution of will made by Hindu in 1901, in the Punjab—Endorsement of registration—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 146.

Where there are more than two attesting witnesses it is not necessary to call or produce all the attesting witnesses. If one of the attesting witnesses is examined for purposes of proving its execution, the requirement of law would be complied and the will would be proved in accordance with S. 68 provided his testimony inspires confidence: A.I.R. 1983 N.O.C. 170 (All.).

Undoubtedly, a 'will' is a document required by law to be attested; thus, where an registered will was neither proved to have been attested and executed as required under S. 68, held, it could not be taken into consideration for establishing the claim made thereunder: A.I.R. 1989 J.&K. 51: 1988 Kash.L.J. 585 (D.B.).

Where three persons had signed the will immediately before the thumb-impression of the testatrix on the will though they were not described or labelled as attesting witnesses, held, such labelling is not necessary under statute; merely describing a signator on a testamentary document as an attesting witness is no evidence of its attestation which signifies that the attestor is a witness to the execution; under S. 63(c) of the Indian Succession Act, a person who signs the document in the executant's presence after seeing execution of the document or after receiving personal acknowledgment of execution from the executant is its attesting witness; that is the real test, not his labelling as such: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 63: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 554: 1977 Hindu L.R. 1: (1977) 1 S.C.R. 578.

Where there was no pleading that the attestors were dead or that the plaintiff had knowledge about the execution and attestation of the will and the defendant had specifically disputed the validity of the will, held, in absence of examination of attestator, execution of will by the executor in a sound and disposing state of mind was not proved: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 649 (Mad.).

Proper attestation—Contention that for valid attestation there must be something in will itself to indicate that person concerned signed as witness and omission, lacuna or insufficiency, if any, in document in that behalf cannot be supplemented, or supplied by other evidence, is an extreme proposition: I.L.R. (1966) 1 Cal. 408.

Where the two attesting witnesses deposed that the testatrix took them to the house of the Vakil where the whole process of execution, reading out, verifying its correctness and signing by the testatrix and the attesting witnesses was all done at one stretch and it was not suggested to the witnesses that the testatrix had left immediately after appending her signatures on the will, held, it stood established that the attesting witnesses and the testatrix had signed the will in the presence of each other. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 363; I.L.R. 1967 Raj. 630, Foll.]: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 647. See also (1994) 23 All.L.R. 44.

It is not an imperative condition that both the attesting witnesses should be present at the same time; if they signed the will at different times, the will cannot be said to have become invalid. Thus, where out of the two attesting witnesses only one was examined in the Court and the additional evidence to prove attestation was supplied by both of them subscribing to the verifications filed alongwith the application wherein they had said that they had attested the will, coupled with the further fact that it was a registered will, held, requirements of S. 68 were satisfied: A.I.R. 1994 Ker. 85 (D.B.).

Proof of the signature of the testator in a will is a vital matter which requires to be proved. It is true that the evidence insisted by law is that of the attestators. But that is not to say that other kinds of evidence is shut out by law. If there is anything suspicious in the signature, evidence of an attestor who attests the signature can certainly be corroborated or contradicted by expert opinion. Thus, it cannot be said that evidence of an expert on signature or handwriting in a will is not relevant. [A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 228, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 259: (1991) 1 Ker.L.J. 154: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 606 (D.B.).

It is only when answers to the cardinal questions (Did the testator sign the will? Did he understand the nature and effect of dispositions in the will? Did he sign the will after having understood such nature and effect? Whether the special requirements of attestation prescribed under S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act had been complied with?) are in the affirmative that a will can be said to have been duly executed. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443, Foll.]: (1993-1) 111 Mad.L.W. 580: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 176 (D.B.).

Though under S. 68 only one attesting witness, if alive and subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence, has to be called to prove the execution of the document, it would be incumbent on the propounder or the person claiming under the will to prove that the said document was executed as required under S. 63(c) of the Indian Succession Act, and then only that document can be given effect to as a will. [A.I.R. 1966 All. 570; (1966) 2 An.W.R. 134; A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443; A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 63 and A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 1054 (F.B.), Disting.]: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 145: (1978) 1 Cut.W.R. 56: 45 Cut.L.T. 323.

S. 68 requires that before a document, which requires attestation can be admitted in evidence, one of its attesting witnesses should be examined. It is not necessary that more than one attesting witness must be examined to prove the due execution of the will. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 363, Foll.]: 1971 Cur.L.J. 195 (Punj.).

A will, even if registered, falls under the ambit of the main section; it has been excluded from the purview of the proviso: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 406 (Mad.).

It is not right to say that if a certified copy of the will is produced, requirement of S. 68 of examining at least one attesting witness is not applicable. [A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 443 and A.I.R. 1925 All. 56 and A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 102, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 All. 395.

Registration of a will though not required under law is only a piece of evidence of the execution. It cannot have greater sanctity. Registration cannot take the place of due attestation of the document: A.I.R. 1974 Andh. Pra. 13.

In case execution of will is admitted, there is no need to examine the attestors in compliance with the provisions of S. 68: (1988) 1 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 19.

A will is required to be proved formally only when the execution of document is questioned; if its execution is admitted either expressly or by way of implication, then the production of attesting witnesses to prove the same is not at all necessary. [A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 7 and A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 346, Disting.; A.I.R. 1946 All. 178, Foll.; A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 304 and A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 422, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1978 N.O.C. 100: 1977 R. D. 419 (All.).

Where execution of a will is admitted and its attestors are dead, evidence of a person acquainted with the testator's handwriting is sufficient proof of the will; proviso to S. 68 also does not apply to a will and examining at least one attestor as a witness is mandatory; it is true that on admission of the will under S. 58 no proof is necessary. But if nevertheless parties adduce evidence which is found to be unacceptable, it is no excuse to contend that they could not produce or prove the document as it had been admitted. [(1988) 2 A.P.L.J. 95, Foll.]: (1990) 2 Hindu L.R. 536: (1990) 1 An.L.T. 17.

Where the plaintiff himself produced the will and admitted its execution but impeached only validity of bequeathment of certain properties, held, it is S. 58, and not S. 68, which is attracted: A.I.R. 1994 Andh. Pra. 284: (1994) 1 An.L.T. 217 (D.B.).

S. 68 makes it evident that a document required by law to be attested shall not be used as evidence until at least one of the attesting witnesses is examined and proves its execution; the section is imperative and stringent; from its proviso it is not possible to hold that the section's rigour can be watered down by allowing a will not so proved to be used as evidence for collateral purposes: A.I.R. 1990 Ker. 146: (1989) 2 Ker.L.J. 349: (1989) 2 Ker.L.T. 813.

The requirement of a valid attestation of a will under S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act is that two or more witnesses should have either seen the testator signing the will or received from him a personal acknowledgment of having signed it and thereafter they should have themselves signed it in the presence of the testator with the intention of bearing witness to the execution thereof; the witnesses must have affixed their signatures animo attestandi; signatures affixed to certify that the signatory was a scribe or an identifier or a registering officer would not make him an attesting witness. [A.I.R. 1984 P.&H. 181; A.I.R. 1983 P.&H. 384, Overruled]: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 188: 1991 Punj.L.J. 763 (D.B.).

S. 68 plainly shows that the requirement of examining at least one attesting witness of a will is to be fulfilled 'if there be an attesting witness alive'; if the attesting witnesses are dead, the will can certainly be proved in the manner provided for proof of documents: A.I.R. 1991 Madh. Pra. 11.

Proof of execution of will—All surviving attestors, examined—Non-examination of scribe is of very little consequence. [A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 87, Rel. on]. Succession Act, 1925, S. 63: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 178.

Will duly registered—Does not dispel suspicion: A.I.R. 1969 Assam 118.

Presumption of actual execution and attestation of a will more than thirty years old and produced from proper custody, can be raised under S. 90: (1990) 1 Ker.L.T. 559.

10. Illustrative cases.—Where the only attesting witness examined failed to prove that the thumb-mark on the will was put by the testator in his presence, held, the bar of S. 68 would disentitle the Court to take the will into consideration; the testimony of another witness, not the attesting witness, that the testator alongwith attesting witnesses had put their signature on the will in his presence, there being a vast difference between a signature and a thumb-impression, the will was not proved to be that of the testator: A.I.R. 1990 Madh. Pra. 334; (1981) 2 M.P.W.N. 61.

Where the attestor's unchallenged testimony disclosed that both of the attestors were present at the time the will was executed by the testatrix whom they had seen executing the will and that they both had attested the will, held, the execution of the will by the testatrix and its attestation stood duly proved in accordance with law: A.I.R. 1989 Mad. 99: (1988-1) 101 Mad.L.W. 425.

Where the propounder of the will led no evidence on both the counts, much less satisfactory evidence of its due and valid execution by the executant nor for removing suspicious circumstances surrounding the will, held, the finding of the trial Court that the will was validly executed could not be upheld: A.I.R. 1989 Guj. 75: (1988-2) 29 Guj.L.R. 1412.

Execution of Will—Attesting witness stating that Will was executed by a village lady of her own free will, that she was made to understand its contents and that thereafter she affixed her finger prints upon the same—Two other witnesses having died and the scribe having become resident of Pakistan could not be produced—Will found in possession of legatees but not produced at earliest possible time—Legatees allowed to produce Will on payment of costs—Costs paid and accepted by other party—Concurrent finding of Courts below that Will was executed by that lady—Held, Courts below did not err in holding the Will as proved: 1969 Kash.L.J. 130.

Where the Sub-Registrar deposed as to the whole process of registering the will as having duly been gone through but did not know the executant, one of the attesting witnesses denied attestation and the son of the other attesting witness merely proved his father's signature on the will, held, the will could not be said to have been proved; Ss. 69 and 71 were not attracted: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 78: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 28: 1978 Hindu L.R. 614: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 456 (D.B.).

Where the Sub-Registrar was not produced as an attesting witness nor was there any mention in his endorsement of executant having admitted the correctness of her will and the plaintiffs were not prepared to get the executant's thumb-impression on the will compared with another thumb-impression of the executant, held, due execution of the will is not proved: (1987-2) 92 Punj.L.R. 277.

Where evidence of both the attesting witnesses was clear that the testator had signed the will in their presence and they themselves had also signed it as attesting witnesses, and the expert evidence also corroborated them, held, the defendant having cast no doubt about execution of the will, the same stands proved: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1989) 14 All.L.R. 814.

Where a will was proved by examining two attesting witnesses and the third witness though summoned through the Court and personally requested to appear as a witness but he did not, held, for non-examination of the third witness, no adverse inference could be drawn against the propounder; it was not incumbent upon him to compel the third witness to appear in the Court by resorting to O. 16, R. 10 of the C.P.Code: A.I.R. 1985 Cal. 349: (1984-85) 89 Cal.W.N. 832 (D.B.).

Where one of the attesting witnesses after fully supporting in examination-in-chief the will's execution, but in cross-examination 'became deaf', the other witness after being partly examined was rendered incapable of speaking sensibly, the scribe of the will was dead but his handwriting and signatures were identified by the scribe's grandson, the Sub-Registrar testified that the testator was identified and had produced the will before him for registration and on the Sub-Registrar's reading on and explaining the will in the presence of the witnesses the testator had admitted the same to be correct and thumb-marked it and the handwriting expert found that the executant's thumb-impression on the will tallied with his proved thumb-impression, held, due execution of the will is proved: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 389: (1991) 2 Rev.L.R. 342.

Where one of the attesting witnesses denied execution of the will by the testator but its execution and attestation by the two witnesses by the scribe and the Sub-Registrar, held, the will stood proved as duly executed. [A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 17; A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 243 and A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 89, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 101: (1983) 2 Land L.R. 364 (P.&H.).

Where a will had been proved as true, valid and genuine in an earlier proceeding between the parties which operate as res judicata in the subsequent proceedings between them, held, it is not necessary to prove it again by examining one of its attesting witnesses; S. 68 is not attracted to it. [A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 2198, Rel. on]: (1992-2) 110 Mad.L.W. 454.

The proof of a will must satisfy the requirements of S. 68 as also S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925; where a witness (other than an attesting witness) deposed that the testator had signed the will in his presence and that he had also seen other witnesses attesting it, it could not be inferred that the attesting witnesses had signed the will in the presence of testators; A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 363 is not attracted to the facts of the case: A.I.R. 1981 Mad. 252: (1981) 94 Mad.L.W. 287: (1981) 2 M.L.J. 89: 1981 Hindu L.R. 643.

Where one of the attesting witnesses who was alive and who was also summoned by the first appellate Court was not able to prove the will in question, held, the will could not be said to have been proved: A.I.R. 1980 All. 292: (1980) 6 All.L.R. 345.

Where the execution of the will was proved by its scribe and the attesting witnesses, held, its propounder had satisfactorily proved the will by its executant: A.I.R. 1976 Gau. 94 (D.B.).

Where two wills were executed at the same time, one designedly vague and the other supplementing it, and the thumb-marks appended thereon were unclear and unidentifiable, held, the propounder not having satisfactorily explained the suspicion arising therefrom, they were not the last wills of the testator: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 295: 1973 W.L.N. 65: 1973 Raj.L.W. 819.

Where the will bore purported signatures of the testimony at the margin and not at the end of the document and was not shown to have been attested by any witness and the envelope under which it was deposited with the Sub-Registrar contained some endorsement by use of word (admitted) with two named persons as identifiers, held, it does not amount to due execution of the will; a will has to be executed in strict compliance of S. 63 of the Indian Succession Act: A.I.R. 1977 P.&H. 103: (1977) 79 Punj.L.R. 191: 1977 Rev.L.R. 179.

Though a will can be proved in the manner laid down in S. 63 of the Succession Act, 1925 and S. 68 of the Evidence Act when conditions thereof are prima facie satisfied, where the facts of a particular case reveal a suspicious background, it become obligatory for the Court to scrutinise thoroughly all the surrounding facts and circumstances: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 138 (All.).

Where sons were too willing to appropriate the houses settled in their favour by their father but not ready to reconcile with the division of his fifth house between his three daughters as is evident from the narration in the will, held, they are no suspicious circumstances and create not even a semblance of doubt about the will's validity: (1993-1) 111 Mad.L.W. 580: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 176 (D.B.).

Where the scribe stated that the propounder was not present during the writing and attestation of the will but the other witness deposed about the propounder's presence and his taking part in execution and registration of will, held, the execution of the will was surrounded by suspicious circumstances, especially when the testatrix was not in a sound disposing state of mind due to cerebral stroke. [A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 74, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 193 (Karn.) (D.B.).

Where by and large suspicious circumstances surround the execution of a will, the Court should ensure that all legitimate suspicions are removed before the document is accepted as the testator's last will. The Courts naturally start with suspicion which tend to make the initial burden very heavy; unless it is satisfactorily discharged, Courts would be reluctant to accept the will as duly proved; a caveat alleging fraud, undue influence or coercion, etc. in respect of the will's execution requires proof thereof by the caveator but even in the absence of such pleas, the propounder has the burden of discharging the initial onus to remove legitimate doubts in the matter. Thus, where delay in producing the will was clubbed with factors which threw doubt on its genuineness and the propounder had failed to discharge his burden of proving execution of the will, it was held, to be not genuine: A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 289.

Where one of the attestors testified that the will was executed by both the attestors in the testator's presence in hospital and he had seen the testator signing the will and he was not cross-examined on these points and the other attestor deposed that he had already signed the will at the scribes office, and the Court found the will having been proved as duly executed, held, merely because the testator had totally disinherited his eldest son for having been amply and generously provided for otherwise, it could not be deemed a suspicious circumstance. [A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 363; A.I.R. 1916 Cal. 374; I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cal. 471 and A.I.R. 1975 Ker. 141, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1988 Ker. 315: (1988) 1 Ker.L.T. 184: I.L.R. (1988) 2 Ker. 156 (D.B.).

Where due execution of a will is otherwise proved, held, no adverse inference against its genuineness can be drawn merely because the wife had bequeathed her whole property to her husband to the exclusion of her children; there is nothing unnatural or unusual therein; a mere delay of 3 years in initiating probate proceedings by the husband is equally of no importance: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 209 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where the due execution of the will otherwise stood proved, but it was impeached on the ground of the testator having bequeathed all his properties of his son from the earlier marriage but completely disinherited his second wife and his marriageable daughter from her and it was shown that the deceased was living with his son, separate from his second wife, an earning lady, and his daughter and he had made provision for his daughter's marriage during his life time, held, in the absence of the allegation of undue influence, mere disinheritance of the second wife and daughter was no suspicious circumstance; at any rate it has been explained: (1989) 39 Del.L.T. 37.

Where except for her husband, the testatrix had completely excluded all her close relations and class I heirs in the will, the husband had admittedly played a very important role in the will's execution and attestation, the will itself was disclosed three years after her death, out of the two attesting witnesses only one was examined as a witness though the other was also available, and, furthermore, the will's draft, admittedly in existence before the will was signed, was also not produced, held, the will was not genuine: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 273: (1987) 31 Del.L.T. 388: (1987) 92 Punj.L.R. 75.

Where one of the sons was completely disinherited in the will, otherwise proved to be duly executed, and there was nothing to show that there was any one interested in employing undue influence or fraud to deliberately disinherit the son, held, the will should not be denied merely for ignoring the son; besides, though never enjoying affection of his father, the son was subsequently settled with substantial property: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 644 (Mad.) (D.B.).

Where a brother of the deceased testatrix claimed under her will the genuineness whereof was doubted but another brother, also having 1/3rd share in the properties left behind by the deceased, in his 'no-objection' affidavit, deposed that their sister had left the will which was proved by as many as three attesting witnesses as having been executed by the deceased, held, the genuineness of the will was established; the legatee was entitled to grant of probate: A.I.R. 1987 Del. 360.

Where the propounder admitted that he took his wife (the testatrix) to the Advocate, had the will prepared and he got the entire benefit relating to her one-third share, held, as the propounder himself had taken prominent part and had received substantial benefit under the will, it could be treated as a suspicious circumstance attending the execution of the will: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 4 (S.N.).

Where during pendency of a partition suit against 'A', he died and in view of his will in favour of 'B', other heirs stated that 'B' alone should be substituted in place of 'A', held, no objection could be taken by the plaintiff that 'B' could not have been substituted as sole heir without proving the will under S. 68: 1982 Rajdhani L.R. 281: A.I.R. 1983 N.O.C. 162 (Del.).

Will executed in Jaipur State in 1930—Proof of.—Prior to the enactment of Jaipur Succession Act 1943 (XIX of 1943), which received the assent of His Highness on the 24th of May, 1943, there was no law which required a Will to be attested in the year 1930. The Will, therefore, could be proved in the ordinary way like any other document. Where the scribe of a registered Will deposed that he had scribed the Will under the instructions of the testatrix and the latter had herself affixed her thumb impression after he had read over and explained the Will to her, the Will should be held to be duly proved: 1957 Raj.L.W. 254: A.I.R. 1957 Raj. 261.

Execution of will in 1939 in Dharangadha State—No evidence as to law of due execution in State at the time adduced—Before taking objection to admissibility of will on ground of want of proof of the execution, facts necessary to attract provisions of S. 68 must be proved—Will produced by plaintiff but not exhibited—Defendant making use of will in cross-examination of plaintiff and will marked as exhibit at instance of defendant—Defendant must be taken to have waived requirement of formal proof: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 635.

Questions as to execution and attestation of will—Suspicious circumstances attending execution—Quantum of proof of execution are questions of fact—Test of proof is satisfaction of prudent man: 1967 Raj.L.W. 456.

11. Proof of execution of registered documents.—[See also S. 67, Note 6, supra]. The certificate of the Registrar is prima facie evidence of the execution of the document and may be sufficiently conclusive that the deed in question was duly executed especially when there is no evidence to throw any doubt: Thus, where there was no oral evidence in support of the execution of the document in question and the document was not attested by any witness and the scribe who was examined as a witness could not recall anything on the basis of the certified copy and the executants of the document were also dead. Held, that certificate of the Sub-Registrar certifying the admission by the executants of the execution of document was enough to prove the execution of the deed by them. Ss. 58, 59 and 60 of the Indian Registration Act provided that such facts mentioned in the endorsement may be proved by those endorsements: A.I.R. 1958 Manipur 16.

The certificate endorsed on a registered deed by the registering officer is a relevant piece of evidence; it has been so held, by the Lahore High Court in A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 711 on the authority of 33 Ind. App 60 which says that registration is a solemn act to be performed in the presence of a competent official appointed to act as Registrar whose duty it is to attend the parties during the registration and see that the proper persons are present and are competent to act, and are identified to his satisfaction; and all things done before him in his official capacity and verified by his signature will be presumed to be duly proved and in order. (Case law extensively discussed): A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.).

When the document produced is a certified copy of a registered public document, held, non-production of attesting witness would be of no effect: (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 390.

Mere placing on record a certified copy of registered document would not amount to proving the original by way of secondary evidence: 1983 Rev.L.R. 318.

Attestor of a document cannot be presumed to have knowledge of contents or given his consent, same must be proved by independent evidence: (1984) 2 An.W.R. 397 (D.B.).

12. Proviso.—See 149 I.C. 1109(1): A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 282; (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 51. The amendment of S. 68 by Act XXXI of 1926 is a provision relating to processual law and not to substantive law and, therefore, must be taken to be retrospective in its operation: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 881: 57 M.L.J. 588; 37 Mad.L.W. 677: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 432; 144 I.C. 89: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 612.

The proviso to S. 68 only removes the necessity of calling an attesting witness to prove the execution of the documents therein referred to and does not relieve the party of the necessity of proving a mortgage as prescribed under S. 59, Transfer of Property Act. [A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 422, Diss.]: I.L.R. 11 Rang. 26: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 6.

The words 'Indian Registration Act, 1908,' occurring in proviso to S. 68 could not be interpreted so as to confine the application of the proviso, only to documents registered according to the provisions of that particular Registration Act and not of any previous Registration Act: 178 I.C. 198: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 47.

Proviso to S. 68 only dispenses with calling an attesting witness to prove execution of a document required by law to be attested and has been registered, unless its execution is specifically denied by the other side; the handwriting, even on the registered document must be proved to be in the hand of the document's writer: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 264:: 1977 Mah.L.J. 68 (D.B.).

If a registered document, not being a will, is specially denied, it will be necessary to call an attesting witness to prove the execution of the document. When the attesting witness, is very much alive and is subject to the process of the Court and is also capable of giving evidence: A.I.R. 1980 All. 395: 1980 All.W.C. 358: (1980) 6 All.L.R. 445.

'Specifically denied' used in the proviso means with 'exactness and precision', 'in a definite manner', it means something more than a general denial. [A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 343, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.); I.L.R. (1985) Karn. 1614.

'Specific' means with exactness and precision in a definite manner; clearly something more is required to connote specific denial in juxtaposition to general denial. Specific denial of execution of a gift deed would be an unambiguous and categorical statement that the donor did not execute the deed; not only the denial must be in express terms but it should be unqualified, manifest, explicit, certain and definite; what has to be specifically denied is the execution of the document. Other contentions not necessarily and distinctly referring to the execution of the document by the executant cannot be gathered for the denial contemplated in the proviso. [A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 149; A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 148; A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 46; A.I.R. 1932 All. 320; A.I.R. 1955 Tripura 70; A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 343, Rel. on]: 1984 Ker.L.T. 855.

S. 68 requires examination of an attesting witness if a document other than a will is 'specifically denied'; usage of the adjective 'specific' to the word is not superfluous but deliberate, mere denial is not sufficient nor asking that the other party be put to strict proof; by the use of the word 'specific' the Legislature intended that the defence of the execution of denial should be unambiguous and indisputably convey that the execution is denied: (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. 378: (1984) 2 M.L.J. 152.

The words 'specifically denied' used in the proviso to S. 68, do not mean more than this that the denial in question should relate to the specific document which is sought to be denied and that the denial should leave no room for doubt that the particular document is denied by the person against whom it is sought to be used. The proviso does not lay down that the denial should be contained in the written or oral pleadings: 1943 O.W.N. 105.

The words 'specifically denied' in the proviso to S. 68, means specifically denied by the party against whom the document is sought to be used and not only by the executant thereof. It is not correct to hold that it is only when the executant of a document required to be attested specifically denies the attestation thereof that it becomes necessary to prove that the document was duly attested. Hence, the calling of an attesting witness cannot be dispensed with unless its execution is admitted by the defendant in the suit. The denial is to come from the party who is entitled to dispute or is interested in disputing its execution: I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 621: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 149, followed in (1956) 69 Mad.L.W. 815 and A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 148.

The 'specific denial' referred to in the last sentence of the proviso to S. 68 is not confined only to a denial by the executant but contemplates a specific denial by the party against whom the document is sought to be used. Hence an attesting witness has to be called even if execution is denied by one against whom the document is sought to be used: I.L.R. 19 Luck. 365: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 416; A.I.R. 1955 Tripura 17.

It cannot be said that a denial to be specific denial for purposes of S. 68 must be a denial as regards the proper attestation of the document in question, that is a denial of the validity thereof on the ground that it was not properly attested. The words 'specifically denied' used in the proviso to S. 68 only mean that the denial in question should relate to the specific document which is sought to be denied and that the denial should be unqualified so as to leave no doubt that the execution of the particular document is denied by the person against whom it is sought to be used: 1943 O.W.N. 136: A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 99.

The requirement of 'specific denial' of execution in the proviso applies not only to the executant of the document but also to all other persons interested in denying the execution. [A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 149; A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 148; A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 46; A.I.R. 1932 All. 320; A.I.R. 1955 Tripura 70; A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 343, Rel. on]: 1984 Ker.L.T. 855.

The plea that a party is not aware of the execution of the document does not amount to specific denial of execution: A.I.R. 1992 Ker. 261: (1992) 1 Ker.L.J. 742: (1992) 1 Ker.L.T. 461: I.L.R. (1992) 2 Ker. 187.

Where one of the defendants had filed no written statement and there was no denial of execution by him and the other had denied execution on the purported date, held, the proviso to S. 68 was not attracted: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 292 (D.B.).

Nothing in the proviso to S. 68 suggests that persons not parties to the document cannot deny its execution; what is required is the specific denial of the document's execution having been effected by its purported executant; there is no warrant for eliminating all persons other than parties to the document from resorting to S. 68: A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 163: (1989) 1 Ker.L.T. 63: (1988) 2 Ker.L.J. 805.

Where a defendant in a suit on a mortgage does not admit the execution and completion of the document, and receipt of consideration, and his pleader contended that the execution and due attestation of the mortgage bond was not proved against his client, it must be held that the execution has been specifically denied: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 669: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117: (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762 (P.C.).

Non-compliance—Held, that the execution of the mortgage deed not having been proved and the execution having been denied, it could not be admitted in evidence: (1956) 2 M.L.J. 157: A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 682.

The net effect of S. 68 is that if the execution of a document of gift is specifically denied, then an attesting witness must be called to prove it. If, however, such execution is not specifically denied, then it would not be necessary to call an attesting witness to prove the same. But the document all the same will have to be proved. The effect of the proviso is that the due execution and attestation of the gift deed will have to be proved, although it may be proved by calling a person other than an attesting witness: A.I.R. 1960 Mys. 234.

What is required by proviso to S. 68, Evidence Act is denial of execution either by the person executing it or by anyone who is sought to be bound by the document and it need not necessarily be only by the person executing the document.

Where a redemption is sought against persons who are not parties to the mortgage, i.e., against the sons of the mortgagee and where the mortgage is denied, it is for the plaintiff to prove the mortgage, which must necessarily be, by proof of not only the execution in the sense of signing the document but that it has been duly attested by at least two attesting witnesses as required by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act: (1956) 69 Mad.L.W. 815.

Specific denial of execution—What amounts to—Defendant not only denying execution but requiring plaintiff to prove due execution of gift deed which included attestation—This was specific denial. [A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117, Rel. on]: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 259: 1964 Raj.L.W. 196: A.I.R. 1964 Raj. 39.

Scope—Denial should be by party to litigation—Executant not party to litigation—Attesting witness must be called—No objection taken in trial Court—Party cannot object in appeal: (1963) 65 Punj.L.R. 1133.

Proviso—Scope—Dispute whether document is mortgage-bond or money-bond—Execution not specifically denied—Held, still due attestation must be proved though not by any attesting witness in order to take advantage of transaction as mortgage [Case-law discussed] (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 593.

Where the defendant mortgagor in his written statement alleged that the mortgage had not been executed according to law and that he had not received any consideration, it amounts to denial of legal execution of the document so that the plaintiff mortgagee is not relieved of his burden to prove due execution of the mortgage including its attestation. If the plaintiff fails to prove due execution, the mortgage is not admissible in evidence: 25 Cut.L.T. 291.

The admission of execution contemplated by S. 70, and the failure to make a specific denial of execution contemplated by the proviso to S. 68 of the Evidence Act, relate only to the person who has actually executed or purported to have executed the document; that is to say, the person who is in a position to admit or deny execution, and it is manifestly implicit that such person must be a party to the suit: I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 420: A.I.R. 1944 Sind 61.

Where there is no specific denial of the execution of a registered Kabuliyat, it is unnecessary to prove the document formally according to the proviso to S. 68: I.L.R. 19 Luck. 183: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 218.

Where the defendant not only denies the execution of the suit mortgage deed but also its genuineness, the execution of the mortgage is 'specifically denied' and the proviso to S. 68 becomes applicable and it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to produce at least one of the attesting witnesses: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 89: 1940 O.W.N. 1077.

The word 'execution' as used in the proviso to S. 68 in the case of mortgage bonds includes all the series of acts which would give validity to the instrument qua mortgage, i.e., the word 'execution' not only means signing by the borrower but the attestation of the signature by the witnesses as required by S. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. If, therefore, in a suit on a mortgage bond, the defendant admits the signature but denies the attestation, it must be taken that he denies the execution of the mortgage bond and his denial requires the plaintiff to prove the mortgage bond by examining one of the attesting witnesses, if available: I.L.R. (1937) 1 Cal. 507: (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 306; 1940 O.W.N. 1077: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 89; 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 255; (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1025: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 688.

The execution contemplated in S. 70 is not a mere signing of the document, but a due execution or execution in accordance with what the law requires for a particular document. In the case of document required to be attested, there can be no execution unless there has been a signing by the executant in the presence of the attesting witnesses, and execution is not complete unless the deed is attested by two witnesses. If a question of attestation is put in issue, the plaintiff must prove that the document has been duly attested, and the plaintiff is not relieved of the obligation of calling an attesting witness under S. 68. A statement by the executant that when he signed the deed there were no alterations or erasures and there were no attesting witnesses to the document, etc., is not an admission of execution at all, but a denial of execution: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 43: I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 523.

What has to be specifically denied is the execution of the document. Other contentions not necessarily and distinctly referring to the execution of the document by the alleged executant cannot be covered by the denial contemplated in this proviso. Such contentions may be, for instance, in respect of the consideration for the document or the sham or colourable nature of the transaction evidenced by the document: A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 148.

Where a registered deed of mortgage is attacked on the ground that it represents a sham and nominal transaction entered into for defeating claim of a creditor, there is no specific denial of execution so as to make it incumbent on the plaintiff to call the attesting witnesses to prove the execution of the document. A document may represent a sham transaction notwithstanding that it has been executed by the person who is mentioned in the document as the executant: A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 121; (1944) 1 M.L.J. 28 (F.B.).

Where a stranger to the document denied its execution and impeaches it as concocted and fraudulent, held, it amounted to a specific denial under S. 68; even if the document was executed by the mother as a guardian of her minor children, as well as in her individual capacity, the denial as aforesaid would still be specific though execution on behalf of the minors is not separately denied: A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 163: (1989) 1 Ker.L.T. 63: (1988) 2 Ker.L.J. 805.

Where the execution of a document is admitted or not denied it is not necessary to prove the attestation: 42 I.C. 91. (Under the present amendment want of specific denial dispenses with proof by attestor): 14 R.D. 494; 1936 O.W.N. 1113: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 149; A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 270: 161 I.C. 605; 17 R.D. 70; 1934 All.L.J. 817: A.I.R. 1934 All. 507. See also A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 378.

If any of the defendants to a suit denies that any of the alleged executants executed the deed, the plaintiff must produce one of the marginal witnesses to prove the document: 1932 All.L.J. 207: A.I.R. 1932 All. 320. See also 1936 A.M.L.J. 54.

Executant of a mortgage deed, admission by, whether binds others not admitting: I.L.R. 44 Cal. 345: (1915-16) 20 Cal.W.N. 1044.

Where in a suit on mortgage-bond by the mortgagee, apart from the executants who admit the execution of the bond, the minor sons of one of the executants are parties to the suit who do not admit the mortgage and put the mortgagee to proof of the mortgage and the payment of consideration thereunder, held, in order to pass a mortgage decree against the minors, it is absolutely necessary that the execution and attestation of the mortgage should be proved. For, where a party to an attested document admits its execution, a third party is not bound by such admission: And, further, if in such a case the mortgagee does not purposely file the original mortgage-deed then though the executants admit execution of the mortgage yet the mortgage cannot be said to have been proved against the minor who are not parties to the transaction: A.I.R. 1959 Ori. 126: 25 Cut.L.T. 66.

Appellant (defendant) executed a mortgage deed. In the suit after written statement was filed the defence of the appellant was ordered to be struck out for non-payment of costs saddled during trial. The Courts below held that as the appellant had admitted the execution and attestation of the mortgage deed in his written statement, it was not incumbent on the respondent to prove execution and attestation as required by S. 68 of the Evidence Act.

Held, that when the defence of the appellant had been struck out, no admission made by him in his written statement could be taken into consideration. On account of the order striking out the defence, the written statement was as good as non-existent. The respondent was to prove execution and attestation of the mortgage deed as if the appellant was ex parte and as if he had not filed any written statement at all.

Where a defendant is ex parte, it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove execution and attestation of the deed. But the standard of proof required in such a case cannot certainly be the same, as would be necessary in the case of a specific denial. Even a slight evidence about the execution and attestation might suffice to prove the deed: 1959 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 217.

13. Practice.—Attestation being a mixed question of law and fact, point cannot be raised for the first time in second appeal: 97 I.C. 611: 1926 Mad.W.N. 559.

Where in spite of the best efforts of the plaintiff, the attesting witness could not be served with summons and by the time the appeal was filed, the witness was dead. Held, that, whether under the amendment to S. 68 or S. 69, it was open to the plaintiff to prove the document by other means, his own evidence held in the circumstances sufficient: 144 I.C. 89: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 612.

No doubt only one attesting witness to deed be called, if that attesting witness speaks to attestation by the attesting witness. But if he does not do so, it is necessary to prove that the deed was properly attested by those other attesting witnesses. Where it is impossible to call any attesting witnesses and where all that can be proved is their handwriting, it will be presumed, until the contrary is shown, that the persons who purported to have signed were in fact attesting witnesses: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 122.

Where the executant of a mortgage deed, the writer of a deed and the attesting witnesses have all died, having regard to the new definition of attestation in S. 3, Transfer of Property Act, and to the varied mode of proving a registered document under S. 68, Evidence Act, as amended it is sufficient to satisfy the Court that the execution which was not specifically denied was so probable that a prudent man ought under the circumstances of the case act upon the supposition that it was so executed: A.I.R. 1929 Sind 235. No attempt to prove attestation of mortgage deed—Document cannot be used as evidence: A.I.R. 1929 All. 389.

Execution of mortgage deed not specifically denied—Need not be proved: 30 Bom.L.R. 565; and examination of attesting witness is not necessary: A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 403. See also I.L.R. (1937) All. 723: A.I.R. 1937 All. 646.

It is not the law that a plaintiff in a suit on a mortgage bond should call the attesting witness to the bond who are alive before he can take advantage of S. 71. It is incumbent on the plaintiff to call at least one witness, and if that witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document then the execution may be proved aliunde. Whatever the English law may be Ss. 68 to 71 do not necessarily state it: 19 Pat.L.T. 234: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 301. See also A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117: (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762 (P.C.); 181 I.C. 572: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 555.

Defendant admitting execution of mortgage deed but denying attestation—Duty of plaintiff to prove due attestation: 1936 All.L.J. 297: A.I.R. 1936 All. 169.

Where the party challenging a certified copy of a registered deed of gift, does not specifically deny that it is the copy of the deed, according to the proviso to S. 68 the production of attesting witnesses to prove execution and attestation of the deed is not essential: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 414.

Where execution of a document is not denied, the execution and attestation of the document can be proved by other evidence and it is unnecessary to call any of the attesting witnesses: 190 I.C. 413: A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 184. See also A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 122.

A deed of relinquishment is not a document required by law to be attested; so it can be proved by the unchallenged evidence of the alleged writer thereof: 14 L.R. 466 (Rev.): 11 R.D. 637.

A document executed in England and requiring to be attested under the English law but not requiring to be attested under the Indian law, relating to property in India may be proved only by proving the signature of the executant: I.L.R. 7 Pat. 520: 111 I.C. 57: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 304.

In a case the plaintiff claimed title to certain property under a gift deed. During his cross-examination, the plaintiff stated that the executant had signed and put his left thumb-impression on the deed of gift and then witnesses had signed as witnesses. The defendant argued that the plaintiff was bound to prove attestation of the gift deed. Held, that there was no validity in the argument in view of the facts elicited in the plaintiff's cross-examination and that this objection had not been taken at any stage of the proceedings: 1969 Pat.L.J.R. 4.

69. Proof where no attesting witness found.—If no such attesting witness can be found, or if the document purports to have been executed in the United Kingdom, it must be proved that the attestation of one attesting witness at least is in his handwriting, and that the signature of the person executing the document is in the handwriting of that person.

14. Objection to admissibility of document.—Where objection is not to admissibility of a document but to its mode of proof, when the document is purportedly attested by two witnesses and prima facie executed in the manner required by S. 70 of the Indian Succession Act, the objection has to be taken at the time of its admission in evidence; if no objection was then taken, it cannot be taken subsequently. It is now well established that if a document is admissible and no objection is taken by the opposite party to the mode of its proof at the relevant time, then that party cannot be heard later that the document was not properly proved: 1973 Cur.L.J. 373 (D.B.).

After the document is admitted in evidence upon formal proof being dispensed with and without any objection, held, no objection can be taken at the appellate stage: A.I.R. 1986 Cal. 23: (1986) 2 Hindu L.R. 86: (1985) 2 Cal.H.N. 357: (1985-86) 90 Cal.W.N. 95 (D.B.).

Section 69—Notes.

The Court cannot compare the signature of an attesting witness on a bond with his agreed signature. This procedure of proving the signature of an attesting witness is unwarranted by law: A.I.R. 1949 Kutch 3: 50 Cr.L.J. 964. See also A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 17. Mortgage—Proof of—Death of attesting witness. See I.L.R. 34 All. 615: 10 All.L.J. 217; 11 Nag.L.R. 9: 27 I.C. 866; I.L.R. 35 All. 364: 11 All.L.J. 379.

S. 69 requires proof of (1) the signature of at least one attesting witness and (2) the signature of the executant; it is, however, not necessary that a single witness should prove both the signatures: (1992-2) 110 Mad.L.W. 523: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 406.

Resort can be made to S. 69 not as a general rule, but only when the absence of the attesting witness can be sufficiently accounted for. If the witness denies the signature or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 593. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 68: I.L.R. (1965) 1 All. 483: A.I.R. 1966 All. 570.

Where genuineness of a document is disputed but neither its executant nor attesting witnesses are alive and available, held, it should be proved in the manner prescribed under S. 69; the Court should not raise the presumption under S. 90 but admit the document and direct the parties to adduce evidence to prove it: A.I.R. 1993 Pat. 129: 1993 B.B.C.J. 355: (1993) 2 B.L.J. 289: (1993) 2 Pat.L.J.R. 28 (D.B.).

A will which was a registered document of 30 years old, when tendered in evidence and was produced from a proper custody, should be presumed as a valid and genuine document. Where all the parties to a will, excepting the beneficiary are dead and the signature of the scribe has been identified by his fellow deed writer who was acquainted with his signature, the will could not be said to have not been proved. In such circumstances, the onus shifts to the defendants and where none of them examine themselves, the presumption does not stand rebutted: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Cut. 130: (1979) 48 Cut.L.T. 211.

It must be proved that "no attesting witness can be found". The party must ask the Court to exhaust all processes of the Court as by adopting the procedure in O. 16, R. 10, C.P.Code, for the arrest of the witness and for the attachment of his property: I.L.R. 7 Pat. 312: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 356 (Ruling before Amending Act XXXI of 1926). In order that S. 69 may be applied, mere taking out of the summon or the service of summons upon an attesting witness or the mere taking out of warrant against him is not sufficient. It is only when the witness does not appear even after all the processes under O. 16, R. 10, C.P.Code, which the Court considered to be fit and proper had been exhausted that the foundation will be laid for the application of the section. But if a party moves the Court for processes under O. 16, R. 10 when a witness summoned by him has failed to obey the summons but the Court refuses the process asked for, there is no reason why the section cannot be invoked: (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 377: A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 350.

Where a will was proved by examining two attesting witnesses and the third witness though summoned through the Court and personally requested to appear as a witness but he did not, held, for non-examination of the third witness, no adverse inference could be drawn against the propounder; it was not incumbent upon him to compel the third witness to appear in the Court by resorting to O. 16, R. 10 of the C.P.Code: A.I.R. 1985 Cal. 349: (1984-85) 89 Cal.W.N. 832 (D.B.).

Where none of the attesting witnesses is available for reasons permitted by law to prove execution of a will by its testator, held, the same must be proved by independent witnesses by evidence that attestation of at least one attesting witness is in his handwriting and signature on the will are of its purported testator; it need not necessarily be proved by evidence of same witness: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 406 (Mad.). See also (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 311 (D.B.), cited under S. 67, supra.

To prove a document where its attesting witnesses cannot be found, held, identification of signatures by the witness examined to prove it is not necessary; it is sufficient if he deposes that the document shown to him was executed and attested in his presence: A.I.R. 1993 Pat. 129: 1993 B.B.C.J. 355: (1993) 2 B.L.J. 289: (1993) 2 Pat.L.J.R. 28 (D.B.).

Much reliance cannot be placed on the evidence of a non-expert witness about the identification of the executant's signature, who had only seen the executant writing only once or twice, more so when there is the question of the identification of the signature which are alleged to have been subscribed before the witness was born: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 9: 1971 Raj.L.W. 103.

A document was signed by the petitioner and it was attested by two witnesses. Both these attesting witnesses were dead before the question of the genuineness or otherwise of this document arose. The person in whose favour the document had been made also died. And the petitioner denied the signature on this document. In such circumstances, the signature of the attesting witnesses were proved by two of their relatives who knew their handwriting. Held, that this evidence was by itself sufficient to establish that the document was executed by the petitioner, because there was no other conceivable way in which proof of the document could have been given: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 641.

Where regarding a mortgage deed regularly signed and attested, the signature of all attesting witnesses who were dead were proved, as also of the mortgagor, held, that there was a presumption of its due execution and it lay upon the other side to rebut it: I.L.R. 39 All. 112: 15 All.L.J. 167; 41 I.C. 171.

Admission of execution recorded in registration endorsement is not admissible to prove execution: 20 O.C. 18: 38 I.C. 605. See also 13 Nag.L.R. 197; A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 244.

Mode of proof of document which is required by law to be attested within meaning of S. 3, T.P. Act (1882), is different from mode of proof of other kind of documents that are not so required to be attested: (1967) 33 Cut.L.T. 811: I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 593.

Where the Sub-Registrar deposed as to the whole process of registering the will as having duly been gone through but did not know the executant, one of the attesting witnesses denied attestation and the son of the other attesting witness merely proved his father's signature on the will, held, the will could not be said to have been proved; Ss. 69 and 71 were not attracted: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 28: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 78: 1978 Hindu L.R. 614 (D.B.).

Where there was no pleading that the attestors were dead or that the plaintiff had knowledge about the execution and attestation of the will and the defendant had specifically disputed the validity of the will, held, in absence of examination of attestator, execution of will by the executor in a sound and disposing state of mind was not proved: (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 649 (Mad.).

Proof of the signature of the testator in a will is a vital matter which requires to be proved. It is true that the evidence insisted by law is that of the attestors. But that is not to say that other kinds of evidence is shut out by law. If there is anything suspicious in the signature, evidence of an attestor who attests the signature can certainly be corroborated or contradicted by expert opinion. Thus, it cannot be said that evidence of an expert on signature or handwriting in a will is not relevant. [A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 228, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 259: (1991) 1 Ker.L.J. 154: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 606 (D.B.).

70. Admission of execution by party to attested document.—The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested.

Section 70—Notes.

See I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 523: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 43. Mere admission of the thumb-impression or the signature on a blank sheet of paper does not mean an admission of execution which means that the executant must have signed or put his thumb-impression only after the document is fully read out: I.L.R. (1956) Cut. 42: A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 58. See also S. 67, Note 5, supra.

The admission here spoken of does not include admissions made to the attesting witness before suit and sought to be proved by witnesses in the suit: I.L.R. 27 Cal. 190.

There is no reason to restrict the application of S. 70 to admissions made by a party during the course of the trial of the suit: 1943 O.W.N. 105: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 218; I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 420: A.I.R. 1944 Sind 61. (Admission by person not party to document). The certificate of admission of execution endorsed by the registering officer upon a document registered by him could not be used as an admission of execution within the meaning of S. 70: 13 Nag.L.R. 197; 18 Sind L.R. 282: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 88. See also 20 Oudh Cases 1: A.I.R. 1936 All. 712: 1936 All.L.J. 1262. [See also I.L.R. 38 All. 1: 13 All.L.J. 881; 7 Nag.L.R. 85: 11 I.C. 689; 47 I.C. 9: 46 Mad.L.W. 610: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 43].

The 'admission' contemplated under S. 70 is an admission made for the purpose of or having reference to the suit, made either in the pleadings or during the course of the trial: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 244 (Admission of execution at the registration is not sufficient for the section). The admission referred to in S. 70 must be an admission made by a party in the proceedings in which the document is produced and is intended to be proved. The certificate of admission of execution endorsed by the registering officer upon a gift deed registered by him cannot be used as an admission of execution within the meaning of S. 70. The admission must be an admission about the due execution of the document which would include an admission as to its proper attestation. Nor can the statement made by the executant before the Sub-Registrar at the time of the registration of the deed be regarded as an admission about its due attestation: (1948) 50 Bom.L.R. 260: A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 322.

It has been held in A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 43, that for the purpose of S. 70 admission should have been made either in the pleading or during the course of the trial of the suit in which the question arose for consideration. The admission, even if it had been made before the Sub-Registrar at the time of registration will not fall within S. 70 as it is not an admission made in the course of the suit. Similar view is taken in A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 322: (1991) 2 M.L.J. 478.

The admission of execution contained in some other document such as a power-of-attorney cannot be availed of for the purpose of dispensing with the citation of the attesting witnesses: 46 Mad.L.W. 610: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 43.

Where the executant of a document makes an admission, the exemption under S. 70 is attracted. An admission by an heir of the executant would not serve the requirement of the law and cannot serve the purpose. [A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 82, Disting.]: (1975) 1 Cut.W.R. 8.

Where a mortgagor merely says he does not admit the execution or attestation of the mortgage and puts the mortgagee to proof, the plea is not one of specific denial of the execution or attestation of the document, and proof of one attestation is quite sufficient. It is only in a case where there is not only absence of an admission but a specific denial of the validity of the mortgage that the mortgagee is called upon to prove attestation of two witnesses: I.L.R. (1937) All. 723: A.I.R. 1937 All. 646.

Section applies only to document which is duly attested: I.L.R. 5 Rang. 461: A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 233. Where in a deed of further charge the executant admits the execution of an earlier mortgage deed, the admission is a sufficient proof of execution of the mortgage deed as against the executant and no formal proof of proper attestation is necessary: 1943 O.W.N. 105: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 218.

Non-examination of attestor and scribe of a document cannot by itself lead to the inference that the document was not executed, when the executants admit its execution: (1979) 1 An.W.R. 416.

A will is required to be proved formally only when the execution of document is questioned; if its execution is admitted either expressly or by way of implication, then the production of attesting witnesses to prove the same is not at all necessary. [A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 7 and A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 346, Disting.; A.I.R. 1946 All. 178, Foll.; A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 304 and A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 422, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1978 N.O.C. 100 (All.): 1977 R. D. 419.

A successor-in-interest is bound by his predecessor's admission of execution where it is contained in a document on which the successor founds his title. He must be taken to have accepted it as correct when he acquired rights under that document: 1943 O.W.N. 382: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 416.

Where there is admission of execution in the written statement, but the attesting witness called stated the mortgagor did not sign the deed in his presence, held, that the document must be taken to have been proved. See 84 I.C. 558: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 295. As to effect of admission of execution by pardanashin lady. See I.L.R. 5 Pat. 58: A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 203: 49 M.L.J. 240 (P.C.).

Where in a mortgage suit, the defendant pleaded that she executed the bond under a misrepresentation as to its contents: Held, that under these circumstances, S. 70 applied and that the admission was sufficient proof of execution of the mortgage deed: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 441.

When the admission of signature by the defendant mortgagor on the mortgage-bond is coupled with an express denial that the document was duly and properly attested, it is incumbent on the plaintiff mortgagee to call at least one attesting witness to prove the attestation. Under such circumstances, the mortgagee is not entitled to the benefit of S. 70 of the Evidence Act. The word "execution" as used in the section is in the sense of due execution or execution in the way in which a particular document is required to be executed. The admission as contemplated in this section must be shown to be an admission of due execution by a party to a document which on the face of it is an attested document. Where the mortgagor while admitting having signed the mortgage bond specifically denies due attestation, marking the document as an exhibit without objection, cannot absolve the mortgagee from proving due attestation: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 7: I.L.R. (1953) 1 Cal. 120.

The admission of mere signature on the documents by itself, does not prove the contents thereof. The accused who did not know English signed a statement prepared in English by the Assistant Sales Tax Officer conducting an inspection, search and seizure of account books and was attested by two witnesses. In a prosecution of the accused under S. 25(1)(f) of the Orissa Sales Tax Act, the attesting witnesses were not produced by the prosecution. The statements were sought to be proved on the ground that they were signed by the accused. Held, that in the absence of the attesting witnesses, who were material witnesses, on the point not having been examined, the documents could not be treated as proved: (1961) 3 Ori.J.D. 416: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 83.

Admission—Meaning of—Admission of execution of mortgage bond by mortgagor—Effect. [I.L.R. (1967) Cut. 593, Reversed; A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 143, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 82 (D.B.).

Where the defendant had admitted execution of the receipt whereby he was personally liable to pay the loan amount but he impeached its admissibility on the ground that the words 'warna rupaya doonga' were interpolated therein later on, held, the receipt, its execution having been admitted, is not inadmissible; besides, the defendant had also signed before those words: A.I.R. 1986 All. 94 (D.B.).

Where a gift deed is challenged not for want of legal attestation but on the grounds of misrepresentation, undue influence and fraud, held, it amounts to admission of execution; attestation, thus, need not be proved: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 472.

See also 1978 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 247: (1978) 80 Punj.L.R. 427.

71. Proof when attesting witness denies the execution.—If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence.

Section 71—Notes.

S. 71 provides that if the attesting witness to a document denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence. This is a sort of safeguard introduced by the Legislature to the mandatory provisions of S. 68, where it is not possible to prove the execution of the document, such as a will by calling attesting witness though alive. S. 71 can only be requisitioned when the attesting witnesses who have been called fail to prove the execution of the will by reason of their denying own signatures, or denying the signature of the testator or having no recollection as to the execution of the will or other document. It has no application to a case where there is no question of any attesting witness denying or not recollecting the execution of the document, or where one attesting witness who is called fails to prove the execution of the will and other execution witnesses are available who could prove that execution if they were called: (1949) 51 Bom. L.R. 245: A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 266.

S. 71 does not apply where the attesting witness fails to testify to all the ingredients of due execution of the will; his evidence cannot be supplemented by the evidence of other non-attesting witnesses: A.I.R. 1974 Ori. 170: (1973) 1 Cut.W.R. 631: 39 Cut.L.T. 672.

S. 71 is applicable only where the attesting witness 'denies or does not recollect the execution of the document'. Their Lordships were doubtful whether the description would be applicable to the case of a witness whose evidence was considered unreliable but were willing to assume that the discrepancies were due to deficient re-collection. It was held on the facts that even assuming that it would be legitimate in the above circumstances to look at the proceedings relating to the registration of the mortgage deed for the purpose of proving its due execution and attestation, the plaintiffs had failed to prove the material facts necessary to comply with the provisions of the T.P. Act: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 669: A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 117: (1939) 2 M.L.J. 762 (P.C.).

S. 71 cannot be construed as meaning that the evidence of the executant of a deed required by law to be attested is not admissible unless the attesting witnesses denied or did not recollect the execution of the document. There is nothing in the Evidence Act which preludes a party from adducing as a witness to the execution of the deed any person who happened to be present when the deed was executed and actually saw it signed by the executant and by the attesting witnesses. The section, while permitting the evidence of the executant of the deed in certain circumstances does not have the effect of rendering his evidence or that of other witnesses inadmissible: 1937 All.L.J. 161: A.I.R. 1937 All. 273.

S. 71 has no application to a case where the attesting witnesses are not before the Court. If, therefore, the plaintiff takes out summons on one of the attesting witnesses and the witness does not appear in Court, that is not enough to let in further evidence under that section. The plaintiff must exhaust all the processes of the Court in order to compel the attendance of any one of the attesting witnesses and when the production of such witnesses is not possible, the plaintiff can avail himself of the provisions of S. 69: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1025: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 688.

S. 71 provides an exception to the rule enunciated in S. 68. But to make this provision applicable it is evident that the attesting witness will have to appear in Court as a witness. Until he appears as a witness there is no question of his denying the execution of the document, or not recollecting the execution of the document. If the witness sits at home and is not examined because there is an apprehension that he may not support the execution of the mortgage deed, in that event there is a failure to produce the evidence which is required under S. 68. Consequently, S. 71 cannot come into play: A.I.R. 1980 All. 395: 1980 All.W.C. 358: (1980) 6 All.L.R. 445.

Where the attesting witnesses had turned hostile, held, execution of document could be proved under S. 71: A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 125: (1990) 70 Cut.L.T. 579.

In the event of an attestor being declared hostile, it is permissible for the propounder of the will to cross-examine such an attesting witness and it is also legitimate for such a propounder to rely upon other evidence to show that the will has been properly executed; it would be permissible for the propounder to adduce other evidence apart from the evidence of attestors in proof of the execution and attestation of the will: A.I.R. 1976 Andh. Pra. 370: (1975) 2 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 364: (1976) 1 An.W.R. 281: 1976 Hindu L.R. 387 (D.B.).

72. Proof of document not required by law to be attested.—An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested.

The 'other evidence' referred to in S. 71 cannot refer to the statement of witnesses who had seen the attesting witnesses sign in the presence of the executant. It only means any evidence that may be considered satisfactory by the Court seized of the matter: 1941 A.M.L.J. 75. See also A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 259: (1991) 1 Ker.L.J. 154: (1992) 1 Hindu L.R. 606 (D.B.), cited under S. 68, supra.

The word 'execution' in S. 71 not only means signing by the executant but it means and includes attestation as well. If, therefore, an attesting witness called by the plaintiff turns hostile, the plaintiff is entitled to prove attestation of the instrument by other evidence as laid down in the section. This other evidence includes his own evidence as well, although he is the grantee under the instrument: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1084: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 189.

Where though the mortgagors had denied execution of mortgage deed, one of the attestators spoke about the execution, held, in such a case S. 71 can be called in aid and as the mortgagors had signed in presence of the witnesses before the Registrar, the trial Court was right in upholding the execution and attestation of document: (1991) 1 An.L.T. 140.

A statement of the attesting witnesses to a mortgage deed that they signed the blank paper and not the completed deed is sufficient to attract the operation of this section and entitles the mortgagee to prove execution by evidence other than that of the attesting witnesses: 48 I.C. 724; 5 O.L.J. 667: 48 I.C. 538.

Where an agreement sought to be specifically enforced was attested by two witnesses and registered, it was the duty of its propounder to adduce their evidence in Court; if it was found to be insufficient to prove execution, the propounder could resort to S. 71 to prove it; non-examination of the attesting witnesses and the scribe, when they were available, presumption may be raised that if examined they would have gone against the propounder: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 292 (D.B.).

Where in a mortgage suit, the plaintiff called one of the attesting witnesses then alive and when that witness resiled, he proceeded to prove the document by other evidence, held, that there was compliance with Ss. 68 and 71: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1025: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 688; (1928-29) 33 Cal.W.N. 248: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 188. Mortgage suit—Two out of four witnesses dead—Third turning hostile—Fourth witness summoned but refusing to depose—Admissibility of other evidence to prove attestation: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 441.

Under S. 50 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) witnesses must sign their names and not merely set their marks. See I.L.R. 3 Bom. 382; I.L.R. 11 Cal. 429; I.L.R. 5 Cal. 738. But initials will be sufficient: I.L.R. 15 Mad. 261. See Evidence Act, 1872, S. 68: I.L.R. (1965) 1 All. 483: A.I.R. 1966 All. 570.

Where it was proved by independent witnesses that the attesting witnesses had signed the will in the presence of the attesting witnesses when one of them had denied execution of the will, held, the will stood duly proved: 1981 Hindu L.R. 119 (P.&H.).

Where the Sub-Registrar deposed as to the whole process of registering the will as having duly been gone through but did not know the executant, one of the attesting witnesses denied attestation and the son of the other attesting witness merely proved his father's signature on the will, held, the will could not be said to have been proved; Ss. 69 and 71 were not attracted: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 28: A.I.R. 1978 Mad. 78: 1978 Hindu L.R. 614 (D.B.).

Where the plaintiff had taken steps to examine both the attesting witnesses of the gift deed but could examine only one of the attesting witnesses by resort to coercive measures under O. 16, R. 10 of the C.P.Code, who, however, denied the execution and the trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's plea for more time to find out the whereabout of the other witness who had meanwhile absconded, held, the plaintiff was entitled to prove execution by other evidence under S. 71. [A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 301, Foll.; A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 266, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1990 Ori. 232.

73. Comparison of signature, writing or seal with others admitted or proved.— In order to ascertain whether a signature, writing, or seal is that of the person by whom it purports to have been written or made, any signature, writing or seal admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been written or made by that person may be compared with the one which is to be proved, although that signature, writing or seal has not been produced or proved for any other purpose.

The Court may direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person.

execution of the bond and alleged that the same was forged. The applicant examined himself and scribe of the bond who deposed about execution and attestation of the said bond. The defendant examined himself and denied execution of the bond. The trial Judge held that the bond remained unproved as no attesting witness was examined.

Held, that in the case of a document which was not required to be registered compulsorily, as provided in S. 72 of the Evidence Act, examination of one of the attesting witnesses at least was not necessary and the execution could as well be proved by the plaintiff himself or by a scribe or any other person who happened to be present at the time of execution. A bond not being compulsorily registrable, did not necessarily require examination of an attesting witness to prove it: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 62.

Where the execution of a bond sued upon is denied by the executant (defendant), it is for the plaintiff suing on it to prove the bond, by examining one of the several persons who have attested the execution of the bond. The plaintiff's own evidence is not sufficient, when there is an attesting witness alive who can be called. Mere production of evidence that the signature of the executant and of the attesting witnesses on the bond are really their is not sufficient as that cannot amount to proof of execution of the bond by the defendant-executant. Nor would a comparison of the signature of the defendant on the bond with his alleged signatures in the books of accounts be conclusive or decisive for purposes of finding in favour of the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1950 Kutch 17. See also A.I.R. 1949 Kutch 3: 50 Cr.L.J. 964.

There is no requirement of law that an attesting witness to a document like an agreement of divorce must be examined to prove its execution: A.I.R. 1985 Del. 14: 1984 Rajdhani L.R. 653: (1985) 1 D.M.C. 35: (1985) 1 Hindu L.R. 369: (1985) 1 Hindu L.R. 442.

There is nothing in S. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act, which requires a sale deed to be attested; thus, a sale deed though attested, does not depend upon attestation for its validity; it would, therefore, be unnecessary to prove it by calling an attesting witness: (1975) 88 Mad.L.W. 6.

The word 'bond' defined in the Indian Limitation Act and the Indian Stamp Act is inconclusive, not exhaustive; the bars contained in the two Acts would not apply to bonds; they are not required by law to be attested; held, it is to be proved not under S. 68 but under S. 72: A.I.R. 1982 Gau. 100 (D.B.).

1. Scope.—There are many factors which have to be taken into consideration in effecting a comparison of the two signatures, and although a Court could apply its own eyes and its own mind to determine whether a particular signature is resembling another, it would be going beyond the ordinary limits of the capacity of a Court to constitute itself as a Handwriting Expert and try to compare the signature without all the gadgets and devices which are available to a Handwriting Expert, besides the lack of expert knowledge which a Handwriting Expert possesses. When oral evidence clearly established that a person executed a certain document, it would be completely unnecessary for the Court to embark upon an investigation into the signatures by comparison: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 359.

The Court is competent under law to make the comparison of signatures, but it should exercise this power very sparingly, and with utmost caution, and further, should not make its opinion on the handwriting the sole ground of the decision. If, for example, the parties have adduced expert evidence, or considering the stake in the suit, could be reasonably expected to go through the inconvenience and expense of adducing it, the Court should refuse to make the comparison itself and decide the case on the materials available. On the other hand, if the insistence on an expert would put a disproportionately large burden on the parties then the Court may itself make the comparison. Secondly, the results of such examination can be used only where the evidence is otherwise more or less equally balanced. If within these limits the Court has exercised powers given to it by the law, it cannot be said either that an illegality has been committed: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 187: 1961 Jab.L.J. 1058.

The Act, as in English Law, recognises two direct methods of proving a questioned handwriting; (1) by admission of its writer or (2) by evidence of the person who saw it written. Besides, these best methods of proof, there are three other modes of proof by opinion: (1) by evidence of a handwriting expert or (2) by evidence of a witness acquainted with the handwriting of the writer and (3) by the opinion of the Court by comparison of the admitted and questioned documents; these three cognate modes of proof involve the method of comparison. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.) (D.B.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Kam.L.J. (S.N.) 39: (1979) 15 Del.L.T. 217.

The comparison can be made either by witness acquainted with the hand-writing or by expert witnesses skilled in deciphering hand-writing, or without the intervention of any witnesses at all, by jury themselves, or in the event of there being no jury by the Court: (1990) 1 M.L.J. 428.

Opinion of handwriting expert—Evidentiary value: 1967 Cr.L.J. 1197: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326.

Before invoking S. 73, there must be evidence before the Court that a thumb-impression is that of a party in the litigation: A.I.R. 1976 Ori. 52: (1975) 2 Cut.W.R. 903: I.L.R. (1976) Cut. 28 (D.B.).

Where a signature is denied, the only safe way to prove that the alleged signature is really the signature of the person who denies it, is to produce some signature admittedly made by the same person at about the same time as the disputed signature was allegedly signed: 1940 A.M.L.J. 2. Data for arriving at a conclusion: 66 I.C. 774: A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 12.

A signature made for the occasion post litem motam and merely for use at the trial ought not to be taken as a standard as it is likely to be stimulated. It may, however, be compared with the genuine writing for all that it is worth: (1959-60) 64 Cal.W.N. 1067: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 300.

It is not of much use to compare a signature of a person said to have made in 1950, with that made six years earlier in 1944, as there is likely to be some change in signature. That apart, in the absence of any marked differences between the two signatures, which indicated prima facie that the disputed signature could not, in any circumstances, have been that of the same person whose admitted signature had been produced, a Court would not be justified in rejecting the disputed signatures as not genuine: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 359.

'Purports' means 'alleged': (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 310: 15 I.C. 549. See also 35 M.L.J. 608: 48 I.C. 68.

2. Power of Court with regard to comparison.—If despite opinion of an expert or a person acquainted with the handwriting, the Court can, if it so desires, suo motu use its own skill in comparing handwritings or signatures under S. 73 to which no party can take exception, the Court may also take extraneous assistance from magnifying glass, enlarged photographs or even by calling experts; and since the section enables the Court to compare even finger-prints which is normally not possible with naked eye, the use of extraneous aid is inherent: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85: 1970 Cr.L.J. 254.

If there is no evidence before the Court as regards the genuineness of the signature, the Court cannot, in law, rely on its own examination of the signature to supply the evidence because the Judge cannot treat himself as an expert. There is, however, nothing in principle or authority which bars the Judge of facts from using his own eyes and looking at the admitted signature alongwith the disputed signature in deciding whether the evidence that has been given as regards the genuineness of the document should be believed or not: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 92. As to thumb-impression, see 17 Cr.L.J. 316: 35 I.C. 492; I.L.R. 1 Rang. 759: A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 115 (F.B.).

It is not essential that the handwriting expert must be examined to prove or disprove a handwriting; the Court is competent to itself compare the disputed handwriting with the admitted or proved handwritings; the Court may as well get the writing compared by an expert and examine him if deems fit; but the Court is not bound to do so. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 778, Foll.]: (1990-2) 106 Mad.L.W. 15; A.I.R. 1984 Cal. 316; A.I.R. 1981 All. 361.

It is not essential for the Court to get the opinion of handwriting expert; the Court is itself competent to compare the disputed signature with admitted signature; S. 73 absolutely contains no bar on the Court's power to effect such comparison; such procedure is not illegal: (1993-1) 111 Mad.L.W. 186 (D.B.).

Court is entitled to compare for itself the questioned signature of party with that of the admitted signature: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292.

When the experts differ, ultimately the Court has to form its own opinion on the basis of the entire evidence brought on record. The Court also would be competent to compare the signatures and the writings under S. 73: (1983) 2 Kam.L.J. 135.

Per Mukharji, J.—There is no legal bar to the Judge using his own eyes to compare disputed signature with admitted signatures even without the aid of any evidence of any handwriting expert.

Per Bose, J.—The procedure of determining the question of genuineness of disputed signatures or writings relying on the eye test of the Judge himself and unaided by evidence of experts or arguments of Counsel has been deprecated: (1959-60) 64 Cal.W.N. 1067: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 300.

Although S. 73 specifically empowers the Court to compare the disputed writings with the specimen/admitted writings shown to be genuine, prudence demands that the Court should be extremely slow in venturing an opinion on the basis of mere comparison, more so, when the quality of evidence in respect of specimen/admitted writings is not of high standard: A.I.R. 1992 S.C. 2100: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3454: (1992) 3 S.C.C. 700.

It may be a rule of caution and prudence that where the Court considers that the opinion of a handwriting expert would be of assistance to it in coming to a decision it may call for the evidence of an expert. But there is no rule of law that the Court is precluded from coming to its own conclusions in cases where it is fully familiar with the language and script of the documents which is the subject-matter of scrutiny before it and where it has the assistance in such scrutiny of the counsel of the parties. If on the face of it, the Court is able to come to a conclusion that a particular document contains alterations and interpolations it is not bound to seek the assistance of handwriting experts. It cannot, therefore, be said that simply because a handwriting expert is not called to give evidence, the Court is not empowered to come to a conclusion whether a particular pronote and a receipt have been subjected to alterations or interpolation: 1963 All.L.J. 952: A.I.R. 1965 All. 202.

The science of comparison of handwriting is intricate and complex; findings on resemblance or difference of the writings have to be arrived at with respect to the general character of the writing, the forms of the letters and relative numbers of diversified forms of each of the letters, the use of capitals, abbreviations, stops and paragraphs, the mode of effecting erasures or of insertion, interlineation or correction, the adoption of peculiar expressions, the orthography of words, the grammatical construction of sentences and the style and composition of one or more of documents written in a feigned hand. It is for this reason that even Courts of law with wide experience have been often cautioned against resorting to comparison of handwritings, although S. 73 specifically authorises them to compare the disputed signature or writing with other writings admitted or proved to have been signed or written by that person. The catena of judicial decisions of the highest Court leaves no room for doubt that it is imprudent to base the conclusion of guilt solely on the bare comparison of disputed and admitted writings, especially when made without the aid of evidence of expert opinion or microscopic enlargements or without guidance from some authoritative text book and without any experience and knowledge on the part of the person making the comparison; such inferences would be indecisive, unsatisfactory, dangerous and inadvisable: (1982-1) 23 Guj.L.R. 233: (1982) 2 Guj.L.H. 648 (D.B.).

A Court is competent to compare the disputed writing of a person with others which are admittedly proved to be his writings. It may not be safe for a Court to record a finding about a person's writing in a certain document merely on the basis of comparison, but a Court can itself compare the writings in order to appreciate properly the other evidence produced before it in that regard: (1974) 1 Cut.W.R. 58; 1982 Cr.L.R. 385 (Raj.).

Genuineness of document in question—Court itself can compare unaided by expert evidence handwritings in disputed document and admitted document and hold disputed document to be genuine—Comparison should, however, before and with assistance of lawyers appearing in the case: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 332.

The Court has power to compare the alleged genuine signature with admittedly genuine signature to come to a conclusion from it: 120 I.C. 335: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 27. But see 152 I.C. 1042.

Even where there is opinion of handwriting expert, the Court must itself compare the two handwritings and with the assistance of the expert must come to its own conclusion whether the two handwritings are of same person. [A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 1326, Applied]: A.I.R. 1984 N.O.C. 77 (All.).

By virtue of the provisions of S. 73, the Court has power to compare the disputed signature with the admittedly genuine signature to come to a conclusion. But the rule of prudence is that comparison of signatures by Courts as a mode of ascertaining the truth should be used with great care and caution: A.I.R. 1960 Mys. 220.

The Court should, as a matter of course and caution, hesitate to base his finding on its own comparison when identity of a handwriting forms the main controversy between the parties: (1992) 1 Cal.L.J. 169: (1992) 1 Cal.H.N. 155. See also (1988-89) 93 Cal.W.N. 1115.

S. 73 gives no absolute power to the Court to act as a handwriting expert. Thus, where the handwriting expert had testified that the plaintiff's thumb-impression on the disputed documents was entirely different from his genuine thumb-impression, which was relied upon by the trial Court but the lower appellate Court, without referring to this and other uncontroverted oral evidence discarded the expert evidence, held, the lower appellate Court could not act as handwriting expert; the handwriting expert's opinion has to be considered in the light of other evidence: A.I.R. 1992 All. 346: 1992 All.L.J. 1065.

It is not right to say that when there is difference between the two handwriting experts, the Court ought to have sent the matter to some other independent handwriting expert having no concern with either party, instead of himself acting as an expert and coming to a conclusion. Where an expert's opinion is given, the Court must come to its own conclusion, whether it can safely be held that the two writings are by the same person. This is not to say that trial Court must play the role of an expert but to say that the Court may accept the fact proved only when it has satisfied itself on its observation that it is safe to accept the opinion whether of the expert or other witness: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 215: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 393 (D.B.).

There may be cases where both sides call experts and the voices of science are heard. There may be cases where neither side calls an expert, being ill able to afford him. In all such cases, it becomes the plain duty of the Court to compare the writings and come to its own conclusion where there are expert opinions, they will aid the Court. Where there is none, the Court will have to seek guidance from some authoritative textbook and the Court's own experience and knowledge. But discharge it must its plain duty, with or without expert, with or without other evidence: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531: 1980 Cr.L.J. 396: (1980) 1 S.C.C. 704: (1980) 2 S.C.R. 249. Court's power to compare when only one party produces handwriting expert. See (1984) 26 Del.L.T. 291.

There is nothing wrong in the Court itself comparing signatures to ascertain whether the document is genuine or not. [A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 531, Foll.]: (1989-1) 103 Mad.L.W. 552 (D.B.).

When execution of a document is proved by direct evidence, held, the Court cannot undertake the hazardous task of comparing signatures especially when no expert witness is produced: 1984 Raj.L.W. 321.

It cannot be laid down as a general rule that on the defendant choosing to deny his signatures, the plaintiff must examine a handwriting expert; nor is the Court bound to accept the evidence of a handwriting expert as true; the Court has to apply its own mind to the evidence of the expert and either to believe or disbelieve it. [A.I.R. 1957 All. 119, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 12: 1973 Raj.L.W. 182: 1972 W.L.N. 658.

Where in a suit for recovery of money on a promissory note, the defendant disputed his signature and the Munsiff, on comparing disputed and admitted signatures of the defendant on his written statement gave his own finding which was objected to, held, there is no legal bar to the Judge using his own eyes to compare disputed and admitted writings under S. 73; the Court, however, as a matter of prudence and caution, should hesitate or be slow to base its findings solely on its own comparison: A.I.R. 1989 Gau. 42: (1987) 2 Gau.L.R. 299.

3. Evidentiary value of such comparison.—Value of evidence afforded by comparison of handwriting: 14 I.C. 741: I.L.R. 10 Cal. 1047; I.L.R. 37 Cal. 467. Question of comparison is different from question of admissibility: I.L.R. 53 Cal. 372: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 130.

Where the Court rejects the evidence of the experts on both sides regarding the genuineness or otherwise of the signature of a person on a document, it should not convert itself into a handwriting expert and by merely comparing the disputed signature with the admitted signature of the person without the aid of any other expert advice, take a decision on the correct determination of the genuineness of the signature. Conclusion based on mere comparison of handwriting must, at best be indecisive and yield to the positive evidence in the case: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 76.

A comparison of handwriting as a mode of proof is at all times hazardous and inconclusive, and specially when it is made by any one not conversant with the subject and without such guidance as might be derived from the arguments of Counsel and the evidence of experts.

Where, however, the finding of the Court as to challans being in the handwriting of the accused is not based only upon a comparison of the handwriting but also on the surrounding circumstances and there is also positive evidence of a witness who has proved the handwriting of the accused, the finding is entitled to weight: 1961 B.L.J.R. 411: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 677: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 451.

Opinion formed by Court on comparison of disputed and genuine signatures, in absence of any other positive evidence, held, is indecisive: 1980 M.L.J. (Cr.) 301: 1979 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 211 (Karn.) (D.B.).

In the absence of examination of the handwriting expert who gave his report when the necessary material is there, the Court under S. 73 can also examine the disputed handwriting with the specimen handwriting which is taken by the Court and is admitted by the accused to have been written by him: (1972) 2 Sim.L.J. 335: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1030.

Where there is no evidence on the question of the genuineness of the disputed signature in the shape either of direct or circumstantial evidence or of opinions relevant under S. 45 or S. 47, the Court's own opinion arrived at as a result of comparison of signature authorised by S. 73 of the Evidence Act would not be adequate for resting a finding: (1960) 73 Mad.L.W. 19: (1960) 1 M.L.J. 142.

It is no doubt open to a Court to express its own opinion about the identity or otherwise of a disputed handwriting or thumb impression but it would not be safe to base a conclusion entirely on such a comparison. Where in a suit on the basis of a pronote, the defendant denies the execution of the pronote, the onus of proving that the document had been duly executed by the defendant evidently lies upon the plaintiff and the plaintiff ought to lead satisfactory evidence to prove that the signatures were made by the defendant. It is no part of the duty of the defendant to call an expert to support his contention. It is not desirable that a Judge should take upon himself the task of comparing the signature in order to find out whether the disputed signatures agree with the other admitted signatures and the proper course is to obtain the opinion of an expert. If the Judge after a comparison of the signatures of the defendant comes to the conclusion that the pronote is executed by the defendant solely on the basis of such comparison, the decree passed in plaintiff's favour must be set aside: A.I.R. 1957 All. 119.

In comparing the handwriting upon disputed document with the admitted handwriting, in order to find whether the disputed document is genuine, the true test to be applied in such cases, is to consider the general character of the two writings sought to be compared and not to lose oneself in scrutinising the formation of each individual letter. It is not uncommon to find differences in the writings of one and the same person even after a short interval of time. It all depends upon so many extraneous circumstances, the pen, the ink, the paper, the posture of his hand and the general conditions in which he writes. It is for this reason that the law merely requires a consideration of the general character of the two writings: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 332.

In a case where there is no conflict of evidence, the Court is entitled to form its own opinion after comparing the signatures on the documents produced in Court and the admitted signatures. Such procedure is expressly contemplated by S. 73: I.L.R. 17 Pat. 15: 19 Pat.L.T. 432. But he ought not to attach much weight to such comparison: 1939 A.M.L.J. 34. Where only evidence relied in defence was identity of the handwriting, held, in the absence of the handwriting expert's testimony, it is rather too much for the Judge to use his own eyes for comparing the admitted and disputed handwritings. [A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 39: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 1.

It is elementary law that no one in a criminal trial can admit anything on behalf of an accused person except the accused himself. If signatures are going to be taken as admitted signatures they must be admitted by the accused himself or such signatures must be proved. Where there is nothing from the record to show that the accused admitted the signatures with which the signature to be proved is said to have been compared by the Magistrate, the Magistrate's finding as to the proof of the accused's signature is based absolutely on no legal evidence: (1951-52) 56 Cal.W.N. 738: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 307.

While it is competent on the part of a Judge or a Magistrate to compare the disputed signature with the admitted signatures for himself it is unsafe to rely entirely on such personal comparison: (1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 204: A.I.R. 1961 Cal. 461 (F.B.).

4. Illustrative cases.—Where the genuineness of two letters purported to have been written by the wife to her paramour was in doubt and the husband adduced no direct or circumstantial evidence to prove their authorship and they appealed to the Court on comparison not to tally with the admitted signatures, held, the Court need not in appeal send them for expert opinion; the Court is not bound to accept the expert opinion which may, in turn, require further scrutiny by the Court: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 484.

Apart from the fact whether or not the single Judge was familiar with the Modi script in which signatures compared by him were made, and though it was permissible for the Judge under S. 73 to compare the signatures, held, such comparison of handwritings as a mode of proof is very hazardous and inconclusive, especially when comparison is made by one not conversant with the subject and without guidance from the experts' evidence: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 242 (D.B.).

Where the Court trying a summary suit, took upon itself the impermissible exercise of itself comparing the disputed and undisputed signatures, held, the result of such comparison is a mere personal belief or opinion of the Judge; the issue of forgery cannot be determined without its trial: (1990-2) 10 Guj.L.H. 438.

Where the execution of pro-notes were clearly proved on other evidence, held, the comparison of signatures, even if resorted to, loses all significance. [A.I.R. 1957 All. 119, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1992 Guj. 1.

Where the prosecution did not discharge its basic burden of proving the signature and handwriting on documents to be that of the accused, held, such lacuna could not be cured by the Court comparing the accused's signature on the wakalatnama with the disputed signature and hold that it was that of the accused; conviction set aside as there was still no proof of the handwriting being that of the accused: 1991 Cr.L.J. 3146: 1991 Mah.L.J. 1040.

While considering evidence of the witnesses, the Judge compared the defendant's disputed signature with his admitted signatures, and firmly concluded that the signature in the disputed document was that of the defendant, held, the conclusion being not based entirely on his personal comparison, which was made for the purpose of receiving confirmation to his conclusion on that aspect on other evidence on record, the comparison of signature by the Judge called for no comment; calling a handwriting expert may not always be possible or desirable; comparison of signatures by the Court is not, and should not be, dependent on the examination of the handwriting expert; it could not be said that by comparing the signatures the Judge relegated himself to the position of a witness: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 156: (1978) 1 Cut.W.R. 192: 45 Cut.L.T. 447.

Under S. 73 of the Evidence Act, a Court is competent to compare the disputed writings of a person with other writings which are admitted or proved to be his writings. Such comparison by the Court is with a view to appreciate properly the other evidence available on record on the question of writings. It would, however, be too hazardous for a Court to use his own eyes and merely on the basis of personal comparison decide a very vital issue between the parties centering round the handwriting or signature of a person. Where there was direct ocular evidence indicating that the testatrix signed the Will besides the evidence of the handwriting expert who had opined that the specimen signature and the disputed signature in the Will were of the same person but still the trial Court on personally comparing the disputed handwriting in the Will with the specimen signature of the testatrix and relying entirely on such personal comparison concluded that the impugned Will was not genuine, held, the procedure adopted by trial Court was patently wrong: A.I.R. 1995 Ori. 131 (D.B.).

Where the Postman's endorsement of refusal on the postal envelope containing the landlord's quit notice to the addressee—tenant was denied by him as a witness before the Court and the Court compared his writing and signatures on the envelope with his signatures taken at the bottom of his deposition in the Court, held, the Court was competent to do so: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 397: (1982-83) 87 Cal.W.N. 102: (1982) 2 Cal.H.N. 166.

Where a Court notice was sent to a party and its acknowledgment bearing signatures of the addressee was received back and the signature thereon (postal acknowledgment due card) was compared by the Court with her signatures on three letters on the records and found to tally, held, the Court was justified: A.I.R. 1973 P.&H. 152: 1972 Cur.L.J. 881.

Where the signature disputed to be the petitioner's in a promissory note is compared by the Court with his signature in the vakalat and petition and those taken in Court from the petitioner knowingly and willingly and the petitioner was admittedly the person described in the promissory note as the person who had taken on the liability under it along with his brother and signed on it, and the Court comes to the conclusion that the disputed signature in the promissory note is really his (Petitioner's), the signature must be held to be properly proved: (1956) 2 M.L.J. 399.

5. Direction to give specimen—General.— A sample writing taken by the Court under the second para, held, is, in substance and reality, the same thing as 'admitted writing' under the first para of the section which provides for comparison of the questioned signature, writing, etc., with other admitted or proved signatures of the writer; the two paras are not mutually exclusive but complementary to each other. Though the section does not say as to who is to make the comparison but construed in the light of English law on the subject, the legislative source of S. 73, it is clear that the comparison is to be made by a handwriting expert (S. 45) or by one familiar with the handwriting of the writer (S. 47) or by the Court itself. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.) (D.B.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 39: (1979) 15 Del.L.T. 217.

The occasion for a direction under S. 73 will arise only when the Court feels it necessary in the interest of justice to make comparison with its own eyes, with the help of a magnifying glass for the purpose of coming to a conclusion of fact in the light of other evidence as to the identity of the disputed authorship of the writing: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1557.

For directing a person to write words or figures for the purpose of comparison (i) there must be a cause before the Court; (ii) the person so directed must be a party or witness to the cause; (iii) he must be present in the Court in connection with that cause; and (iv) such comparison must be necessary to determine an issue raised in the cause: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1557.

S. 73 read as a whole alongwith Ss. 45 and 47 clearly empowers the Court to direct, in the interest of justice, any person present in Court to give his sample writing being compared by a handwriting expert; even in adopting this course the ultimate purpose is to enable the Court to compare disputed and admitted writings. Thus, where in a claim for maintenance the husband denied marriage and paternity and the Magistrate directed him to give his sample writing for comparison with a letter allegedly written by the husband and having bearing on the question of the paternity and marriage, held, the Magistrate was well within his competence. [1979 Cr.L.J. 17 (S.C.) and A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 791, Rel. on]: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1000 (Ker.).

By reason of the provisions contained in Ss. 73 and 45 of the Evidence Act and O. 3, R. 1, C.P.Code, the Court can direct a party to be present in Court to give a signature, handwriting or thumb-impression for the purpose of comparison either by itself or for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of an expert by sending the same to him: A.I.R. 1975 Andh. Pra. 88: (1974) 2 An.W.R. 365: (1974) 2 A.P.L.J. 178; 1976 Rev.L.R. 648 (D.B.); (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 1: (1987) 2 Cal.H.N. 32.

There is no element of compulsion under S. 73 on a party or any witness; the only consequence of non-compliance of a direction under S. 73 is that it is open to the Court to draw a presumption under S. 114 about the disputed writings which may go against the person or party. [A.I.R. 1975 Andh. Pra. 88 and (1968) 34 Cut.L.T. (Notes) 319, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1986 Ori. 218: (1985) 60 Cut.L.T. 591.

The Court is entitled to direct the accused to give his specimen handwriting or signature for the purposes enumerated in S. 73; but it can only be a direction within the limits allowed by law; if the direction is disobeyed, a presumption under S. 114 will be the legitimate consequence: 1985 Ker.L.T. 696; (1974) 2 Karn.L.J. (Jr.) 47 (S.N.) 169.

A party cannot be compelled to undergo medical examination: (1972) 1 Mys.L.J. 136.

The ruling in A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 347 was not followed in (1958-59) 63 Cal.W.N. 901 and also in the under-mentioned case. Accused not to be compelled to be witness against himself—Compelled written testimoney obtained prior to trial—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1957 Madh. Pra. 73. This case was dissented from in A.I.R. 1958 All. 119: 1958 Cr.L.J. 134.

A mere direction to write words or give finger impressions does not imply any obligation to comply; the accused had, thus, the right to protest or refuse to comply; and S. 73 does not arm the Court with compulsive power to enforce obedience to its direction; on the accused's declining to comply, the Court is at full liberty to draw an adverse appropriate presumption against him, under S. 114, though not of guilt but in corroboration of other evidence: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1557.

The thumb-impression of an accused, taken forcibly, should not be taken into consideration in determining his guilt.

A thumb-impression or signature given by an accused voluntarily can be used for comparison with the disputed thumb mark or signature and that can be used in evidence. But he cannot be forced to make a statement against himself or to do an act which might be prejudicial to his defence or to give his thumb-impression or signature. S. 73 of the Evidence Act empowers a Court to order an accused to give his thumb-impression, handwriting or signature for comparison. If he refuses to comply with that order, presumption under S. 114 can be drawn but certainly force cannot be used to compel him to give his thumb-impression or his signature or specimen handwriting. Ordering an accused to give his thumb-impression or specimen writing is different altogether from forcing him to do those things. Thus, a thumb-impression taken forcibly from an accused should not be taken into consideration in deciding his guilt: 1968 All.W.R. (H.C.) 590: 1968 All. Cr.R. 375.

Direction to give specimen handwriting—Effect of—Obtaining of specimen handwriting and obtaining of thumb-impression—Difference: 1960 Cr.L.J. 1000: A.I.R. 1960 Raj. 184.

6. Direction to give specimen—Whether unconstitutional or illegal.—The expression 'for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare' does not admit of a narrow interpretation; thus, where the Court requires to compare the disputed finger-prints with specimen finger-prints, it may direct the accused to give his finger-prints and send them on directly to the expert under its own seal for his opinion and examine him as a Court-witness; it would be deemed to be a comparison by the Court itself, and would not amount to testimonial compulsion on the accused to be a witness against himself in violation of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution. [(1961) 2 Cr.L.J. 856 (S.C.), Rel. on; 1973 Cr.L.J. 1499 (Bom.); 1958 Cr.L.J. 367 (Cal.) and 1958 Cr.L.J. 619 (Bom.), Dissent. from]: 1976 Cr.L.J. 244.

An accused person, when he is giving his specimen handwriting or impressions of his fingers, or palm or foot, does not furnish evidence against himself within the meaning of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution. Thus, obtaining of such specimen writings, signatures, etc. from the accused during investigation by the investigating agency does not amount to testimony on compulsion. [A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 1808: 1961 All.L.J. 936, Foll.]: 1991 Cr.L.J. 462 (Ori.); 1975 All.W.C. 477.

The direction under S. 73, Evidence Act, to take specimen writing of a person who is accused of an offence does not amount to a direction compelling him to give evidence against himself, and hence such direction does not offend Art. 20(3) of the Constitution: 1955 Cr.L.J. 790: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 247; A.I.R. 1959 Him. Pra. 29: 1959 Cr.L.J. 1165.

Taking of specimen signatures and handwritings of accused, held, does not amount to compelling him to be a witness against himself : 1979 Raj.L.W. 453; (1978) 2 M.P.W.N. 51.

Magistrate's power to compel accused to give specimen handwriting—Under Ss. 4 and 5 of Identification of Prisoners Act, accused can be compelled to give his measurements—His refusal or resistance entitles authorities to use reasonable force to get measurements—Word 'measurement' as defined in S. 2(a) of that Act does not include 'specimen handwriting' and accused cannot be compelled to give specimen under Ss. 4 and 5—However, a Magistrate has power under S. 73 of the Evidence Act to direct an accused to give finger impressions as well as specimen writing—Refusal will entail in prosecution under S. 186, Penal Code—Giving of thumb mark or specimen handwriting does not offend against Art. 20(3) of the Constitution: 1969 Cr.L.J. 396: A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 22.

Protection against testimonial compulsion—Taking of finger impressions of accused by investigating officer against his will—Taking of specimen writing or signature in Court with consent of accused—Protection under Art. 20(3) not violated: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 19: A.I.R. 1962 Cal. 36.

Order directing accused to furnish his fingerprints or specimen of handwriting—Accused giving writing voluntarily without protest—If testimonial compulsion: I.L.R. (1961) 1 All. 851: 1961 All.L.J. 306: A.I.R. 1961 All. 456 (F.B.).

Taking of specimen writings and signatures of accused—Legality: A.I.R. 1960 Cal. 32. See also (1987) 32 Del.L.T. (S.N.) 40.

7. Direction to give specimen—To be for Court's purposes only.—The second clause of S. 73 permits the Court to direct any person to write words or figures for the purpose of comparison with a view to enable the Court to form its own conclusion for doing complete justice between the parties; the Court can use this power to assist itself and not to assist any party to the proceedings. [A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 207; A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 123, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 95: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 66.

S. 73 cannot be construed as an instrument or a device to be used for the advancement of any part either the prosecution or the accused. It is one of those sections where large powers are given to the Court with the obvious object of enabling the Court to find out the truth and to do complete justice between party and party; any other use of it would be wholly unjustified. In so far as the Magistrate wants to be satisfied as to the genuineness or otherwise of certain writings, it is quite open to him to ask the accused to write out certain words and figures in order that a comparison might be made between them and disputed writings; but it is certainly not open to the Magistrate to hand the document over to the prosecution in order that they might make use of it as a piece of their own evidence nor can he send the document to an Expert who is a prosecution witness. If the Magistrate wants further assistance in the shape of enlargement of the writing, it is perfectly open to the Court to call its own photographer, take the enlargements under its own supervision, study them, and if necessary call its own expert as a Court witness in order that it might be assisted to a proper conclusion: (1956-57) 61 Cal.W.N. 691.

A direction under S. 73 cannot be given for enabling the opposite party to use the handwriting or signature obtained in the Court as evidence against the person who has given the specimen handwriting or signature for it is likely to incriminate him. Such a direction is not permitted by law: 1985 Ker.L.T. 696; (1974) 2 Karn.L.J. (Jr.) 47 (S.N.) 169.

Filing of an application by a party before the Court for a direction under S. 73 does not necessarily mean that the prayer would be allowed; the Court is not just an automation to act; S. 73 of the Evidence Act in this respect is pari materia with S. 540, Cr.P.Code: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1557.

A plain reading of S. 73 shows that the Court can direct a person present in the Court to write any words or figures for the purposes of enabling the Court to compare the words and figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person; obviously, there must be some proceedings in Court wherein such comparison by the Court is necessary. Such power cannot be used to enable the investigating or any other agency to compare such writings. Thus, no direction can be given under S. 73 to an accused to write any words or figures during the investigation to enable the investigating agency to compare such writing with any words or figures alleged to have been written by the accused. A plain reading of S. 5 of the Identification of Prisoners Act also supports this view: 1980 All.Cr.C. 232: 1980 All.W.C. 36.

The words used are 'for the purpose of enabling the Court'. The occasion for such a direction can arise only when the Court feels that it is necessary for its own use. The section cannot be construed as an instrument or a device to be used for the advancement of any party, either the prosecution or the accused. It is one of those sections where large powers are given to the Court with the obvious object of enabling the Court to find out the truth and to do complete justice between party and party and any other use of it would be wholly unjustified. In terms, S. 73 limits the power of the Court to directing a person present in Court to write any words or figure only where the Court itself is of the view that it is necessary for its own purposes to take such writing in order to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person. The power does not extend to permitting one or the other party before the Court to ask the Court to take such writing for the purpose of its evidence or its own case: 1966 M.L.J. (Cr.) 298: 1965 Ker.L.T. 1129: (1965) 2 Ker.L.R. 269; A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 207: (1957) 59 Bom.L.R. 1165. But see infra. In a suit based on a pro-note the defendant denied his signature. The plaintiff applied for an order that defendant should attend and write his signature for comparison. It was objected that such an order could not be made under S. 73 of the Evidence Act in the absence of the defendant. Held, that the Court has power to direct the defendant to be present in Court and then to write out his signature and other words as may be necessary: 1959 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 108.

See also 1981 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 475 (Punj.).

8. Direction during investigation—Validity of.—Court has no power under S. 73 to direct accused to give specimen signature or writing during course of investigation. [A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 22 and (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 84 (Pat.) and 1971 Cr.L.J. 1591 (Andh. Pra.), Dissent. from]: 1979 All.Cr.R. 169: 1979 All.Cr.C 124: 1979 All.W.C. 561. See also 1980 All.Cr.C. 232: 1980 All.W.C. 36, cited under Note 7, supra.

No provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure empowers a Magistrate in every context or generally to assist the Police investigation to secure evidence; the Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920 is completely silent as to the taking of specimen handwriting or signatures of the accused; it confines itself to the securing of measurements including finger-impressions and foot-prints of an accused or convict; the Court cannot issue a direction to the accused to give his specimen signatures and handwriting at the investigation stage. [A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 1808, explained; Operation of S. 73 considered in the light of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution; A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85, Foll.]: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1332.

The petitioner was arrested by Police in connection with certain offences of cheating, forgery etc., and subsequently released on bail. Pending the investigation, the Police filed a memo. to Sub-Divisional Magistrate requesting him to direct the petitioner to give specimen signature and hand-writing for purposes of further investigation. On issue of notice by the Magistrate: Held, that the Magistrate had no power to direct the accused to give his specimen handwriting or signature in the course of investigation by the Police at their instance.

Court can form opinion in respect of handwriting either (a) on the opinion of an expert or (b) on the opinion of a person acquainted with the handwriting or (c) by comparison by the Court itself. Under S. 73, the Court by its own comparison of writing has to form its opinion. This power under S. 73 can be exercised by the Court without being asked for by any party. While exercising such power, the Court for the purpose of comparison, can take the extraneous aid by using magnifying glass, by obtaining enlargement of photographs or by even calling an expert.

Under S. 73, an additional power is conferred on the Court to direct any person present in Court to write words or figures. But to direct a person to write words or figures for the purpose of comparison, there must be (i) a cause before the Court, (ii) the person so directed must be a party to the cause, (iii) he should be present in Court in respect of the said cause and (iv) such comparison must be necessary to determine the issue raised in the said cause. The sine qua non of applying the provisions of the Evidence Act is the enquiry by a Court.

The Magistrates cannot take part in the investigation by the Police or aid the Police in any manner except in cases where such assistance is specifically provided in the Cr.P. Code or under any other statute.

Also the contrast between S. 5 of the Identification of Prisoners Act and S. 73, Evidence Act shows that the Court under S. 73, Evidence Act does not have even power to issue summons to the person to be present in Court unless he is already present in Court as a party concerned in the proceeding before it. The Magistrate can direct a person to give his finger prints in the course of investigation by the Police by virtue of S. 5 of the Identification of Prisoners Act but not under S. 73 of the Evidence Act though the finger prints are included therein for the purpose of comparison: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 117: 1970 Cr.L.J. 254: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85.

S. 73 does not contemplate that the accused can be asked, persuaded or coerced to give his handwriting or thumb-impressions at the instance of the Police so that they may at a later stage be used against him; such an order on such an application by the Police at the stage of investigation would be illegal and liable to be quashed in revision. [1970 Cr.L.J. 254 (Mad.) and 1966 M.L.J. (Cr.) 298 (Ker.), Foll.; (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 84 (Pat.) (F.B.), Dissent. from]: 1974 Punj.L.J. (Cr.) 439: 1975 Cur.L.J. 132: 1975 Cr.L.J. 884.

Neither the Evidence Act nor the Code of Criminal Procedure empowers the Court to direct an accused to give his specimen writing or signature to the Police during investigation; S. 73 comes into play when the Court having taken cognizance of the case requires any person present in the Court to give his writing or signature when the Court itself requires such writing or signature to come to its own conclusion; the Court cannot exercise this power for the benefit of either the prosecution or the defence: (1972-73) 77 Cal.W.N. 865 (D.B.).

S. 73 does not enable the Magistrate to direct an accused to give his specimen writing when the case is still under investigation; the direction can be given for 'enabling the Court to compare' and not for enabling the investigating or other agency 'to compare'; at the investigation stage, there is no present proceeding before the Court wherein it might become necessary for the Court to compare the writings. Further, S. 73 makes no distinction between a civil and a criminal Court. None can seek the Court's assistance for directing some other person to give sample writing under S. 73 on the plea that it would help him to decide whether to institute a suit wherein the question might arise whether certain writings were those of the other person or not; that would also apply to the investigating agency seeking the Court's assistance under S. 73 on the plea that a case might be instituted before the Court where it would be necessary to compare the writings. (S.N.) 82: (1980) 2 S.C.C. 343: 1980 U.J.(S.C.) 386.

Exercise of powers under—Stage for—Warrant for arrest of accused issued under Ss. 60 to 63, Cr.P. Code—Power is not one exercised in course of enquiry or trial—Power under S. 73, Evidence Act could not be exercised: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 117: 1970 Cr.L.J. 254: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85.

While there is no dispute regarding the legal position under S. 73 that a Magistrate has no authority to direct an accused to give his specimen writings, signatures, etc. unless the matter is pending before the Court in any proceedings, yet, there is no procedure in law to write off any evidence which has been validly led in a case; thus, where not only the signatures had been obtained, but the expert's opinion had been obtained and he had also appeared as a witness, held, it was open to the accused to challenge the Magistrate's orders if he was aggrieved; but whatever illegality might have been committed by the Magistrate during the investigation, yet it would not in any way vitiate the trial or do away with the evidence led before the Court: 1991 Cr.L.J. 462 (Ori.).

Where the direction for taking the thumb-impression and specimen of handwriting was made by the Magistrate before any challan was presented against the accused in the Court, the direction cannot be regarded as having been made under S. 73 of the Evidence Act in judicial proceedings before the Magistrate, but one purported to be under S. 5 of the Madhya Bharat Identification of Prisoners Act: 1957 M.P.L.J. 347: A.I.R. 1957 Madh. Pra. 106.

Specimen of handwriting—Magistrate has no power to compel an accused, let on bail, to give specimen of his handwriting to Police: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 94: (1964) 5 Guj.L.R. 298.

Where the accused is not before the Court and is let on bail pending investigation of the case, the Magistrate has no power to ask the accused person to go to the Police and give specimen of his signatures and handwriting. Magistrates and Police Officers can exercise only those powers which are prescribed under various laws and those powers cannot be enlarged. If there is no provision in the law for the exercise of a power that power cannot be exercised by a Police Officer, or by a Magistrate or by a Judge: 1966 M.L.J. (Cr.) 298: 1965 Ker.L.T. 1129: (1965) 2 Ker. L.R. 269.

9. Specimen obtained in Court—Sending of, to expert.—S. 73 does not prohibit sending of writing given by person in Court to handwriting expert for his opinion: (1969) 2 Mys.L.J. 158.

S. 73 read as a whole in the light of S. 45 make it clear that a Court holding an enquiry under the C.P.Code into an offence triable by itself or the Sessions Court has the power to direct the accused, in the interest of justice, to give his sample writing for its comparison with his admitted or proved handwriting by an expert chosen or approved, by the Court irrespective of the fact whether his name was suggested by the prosecution or defence; the Court's purpose for adopting such a course is to enable the Court to make comparison between the admitted and questioned documents by the Court as and when the accused is ultimately put up for trial. [1975 Cr.L.J. 1756 (Del.), Reversed]: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 14: (1978) 2 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 39; 1975 All.W.C. 477. See also 1988 Cr.L.J. 1000 (Ker.); A.I.R. 1975 Andh. Pra. 88: (1974) 2 An.W.R. 365, cited under Note 5, supra.

10. Direction to "any person".—The language of S. 73 is wide enough to empower the Court to give necessary direction to any person present in Court; there does not appear any reason to limit the expression 'any person' to the litigating parties, if the authenticity of a stranger's writing is necessary to be decided in a case, such person would certainly come within the sweep of the section; to interpret it otherwise would be to defeat its object; even if the section is assumed to be ambiguous, the Court must construe it in a way which may advance object of section and interest of justice: A.I.R. 1980 Pat. 253: 1980 B.L.J.R. 398.

The words 'any person' in S. 73 of the Evidence Act are wide enough to cover an accused person also. Taking specimen handwriting would not come under Ss. 5 and 6 of the Identification of Prisoners Act. S. 73 of the Evidence Act is an enabling provision under which the Court may direct any person present in Court to write in his presence: 1966 M.L.J. (Cr.) 298: 1965 Ker.L.T. 1129: (1965) 2 Ker.L.R. 269.

Though the words 'any person' are so wide as to include all persons, the words 'person present in Court' limit only those persons who are before the Court to whom the Court may give a direction, to write any words or figures. Again, those words may not include an on looker or a spectator but refer to persons who are parties to a 'cause' pending before the Court. It may include even the witnesses of the contesting parties in the said cause: 1969 M.L.J. (Cr.) 117: 1970 Cr.L.J. 254: A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85.

The expression 'any person' in S. 73 may include an accused. This section clearly specifies the purpose for which the Court may issue the direction; the Legislature intended to confine the issue of direction to the purpose specified, which is nothing more than to enable the Court to make a comparison of different words or figures; it necessarily implies that the comparison is to be done by the Court itself, with the assistance of an expert or otherwise. [A.I.R. 1961 S.C. 1808, explained; Operation of S. 73 considered in the light of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution; A.I.R. 1970 Mad. 85, Foll.]: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1332.

'Any person' means and includes a person accused of an offence or a person who is, in exercise of a lawful authority, arrested and brought before the Court for any purpose whatsoever: (1971) 2 A.P.L.J. 174: (1971) 2 An.W.R. 94.

The words 'any person' include a person accused of an offence. There are no words limiting the section to persons other than a person accused of an offence and in the absence of any such limiting words it is not open to the Court to read them into the section: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 247: 1955 Cr.L.J. 790.

11. Specimen of hair.—An order requiring the accused to give specimen of hair for the purpose of identification is not violative of Art. 20(3) or Art. 21 of the Constitution: 1971 Cr.L.J. 1405 (Raj.).

The prosecution can be granted permission to obtain head hair sample of the accused for the purpose of comparison during investigation: (1993) 52 Del.L.T. 586: 1994 Cr.L.J. (N.O.C.) 430.

12. Specimen of voice.—Nothing in the Evidence Act even remotely suggests that the Court has power to call upon a prosecution witness to get his sample voice recorded for comparison with his disputed tape recorded voice; neither S. 73 nor S. 45 provides for recording of voice for comparison by Court or the expert witness. Even S. 146 which deals with the scope of questions which can be put in cross-examination does not provide for giving any such direction by a Court to the witnesses: (1981) 19 Del.L.T. 390: 1981 Cr.L.J. 927: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 154. But see (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 41, infra.

The Court can direct a party to the suit to give his voice in tape record for comparison. [(1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 154: 1981 Cr.L.J. 927: (1981) 19 Del.L.T. 390, Dissent.; (1969) 71 Punj.L.R. 519, Foll.]: (1985-2) 88 Punj.L.R. 41. See also (1983) 1 An.L.T. 438: (1983) 1 A.P.L.J. 197.

13. Specimen of thumb-impression.—The Court can direct any of the parties at the instance of another to give his specimen thumb-impression or handwriting, as the case may be; such request cannot be declined merely because it was made by a litigant and could be used as evidence by him: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 174: (1985-1) 87 Punj.L.R. 47: 1984 Rev.L.R. 453: (1984) 2 Ren.L.R. 319.

Taking of thumb-impression of accused in spite of his protests—Use of—Court may however draw presumption against him: 1960 Cr.L.J. 297: A.I.R. 1960 All. 157.

Court ordering accused to make thumb-impression for purpose of comparison—Accused refusing to do—Adverse inference against accused, validity of. See I.L.R. 6 Pat. 623: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 103.

The practice of taking the thumb-impression of the accused in the course of trial and using it against him is inconsistent with the principle of a fair trial and has to be severely condemned. [I.L.R. 1 Pat. 242, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1950 Trav.-Co. 5. But see infra. S. 342, Cr.P.Code does not make S. 73 of Evidence Act inapplicable to criminal trials. The taking of specimen thumb-impression of the accused under the direction of the Court is in strict compliance with S. 73 and S. 45 (iii)(c) of the Evidence Act and also S. 5 of Identification of Prisoners Act XXXIII of 1920. [I.L.R. 1 Pat. 242, Not foll.; I.L.R. 6 Pat. 305; I.L.R. 6 Pat. 623; I.L.R. 50 Mad. 462; I.L.R. 56 Bom. 304; (1925-26) 30 Cal.W.N. 373; I.L.R. 1 Rang. 759 (F.B.), Foll.]: 83 Cal.L.J. 397: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 66, followed in I.L.R. PUBLIC DOCUMENTS

74. Public documents.—The following documents are public documents—

(1) Documents forming the acts or records of the acts—

(i) of the sovereign authority,

(ii) of official bodies and tribunals, and

(iii) of public officers, legislative, judicial and executive, [1][of any part of India or of the Commonwealth,] or of a foreign country;

(2) public records kept [2][in any State] of private documents.

---

1. The original words "whether of British India, or of any other part of Her Majesty's dominions" have successively been amended by the A.O. 1948 and the A.O. 1958 to read as above.

2. Substituted by the A.O. 1950 for "in any Province".

Section 74—Synopsis.

1. Scope.
2. What are public documents.
3. What are not public documents.

---

1. Scope.—A public document has to satisfy the main requirements of S. 74; it must form the acts, or record of the acts of the sovereign authority, official bodies, tribunals, and public officers, legislative, judicial and executive, of any part of India or of the Commonwealth or of a foreign country. Where a document was claimed to be made by a public officer, viz., the Deputy Director of Mines Safety, acting as a statutory authority under the Mines Act, 1952, held, being only a report of a statutory authority functioning under S. 23 or S. 24 of the Mines Act, it was not a public document; there was no data on record to support the claim: (1985) 26 Guj.L.R. 1315: (1986) 6 Guj.L.H. 27 (D.B.).

Under S. 74, documents forming the acts and records of official bodies and public offices are pubic documents; their certified copies are admissible in evidence without calling for or proving their originals but opportunity has to be given to the other party to adduce evidence to controvert presumption arising out of such documents admitted in evidence; otherwise the proceedings would be vitiated: (1982-83) 87 Cal.W.N. 294 (D.B.).

Where no attempt was made to establish any ground entitling a party to lead secondary evidence of what is not an original entry but an original document which must be in the custody of either the executant or some other person if proved to have been made over to the latter by the executant, such a document is not admissible in evidence by simply producing its certified copy from the registration office without taking steps for production of the original or laying foundation for leading secondary evidence. [(1966) 32 Cut.L.T. 343, Expl.]: (1970) 36 Cut.L.T. 1211 (D.B.).

Where an entry was made in revenue record in performance of duty but the Revenue Officer had done so under S. 151 of the C.P.Code when there was no such provision in the W.B. Estates Acquisition Act, held, the entry not having been made in performance of duty was not relevant under S. 35; it did not fall under S. 74 either: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

All public documents have this characteristic that they are kept in some special custody and provable by means of a copy without production of the original. Their accessibility to the public and the right to inspect them are their hall marks. It follows that the right to inspect (which is assumed in S. 76) and take copies of public documents are essential qualities of public documents. Every officer appointed by law to keep records ought to deem himself for that purpose (for the production of documents) a trustee: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 96: 1981 Cr.L.J. 538: (1981) 19 Del.L.T. 104.

See I.L.R. 20 Mad. 189. Schoolmaster, is an Executive Officer of Government under S. 74(1)(iii): I.L.R. 50 Bom. 716: A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 11; 12 Mys.L.J. 133: 39 Mys.H.C.R. 406. A public document is one prepared by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty. The mere fact that it is kept in a public office does not lead to the inference that it is a public document: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 640.

'Public Officer'—Police officer—Record of facts noted by—If 'public document': 1970 M.L.J. (Cr.) 320.

Records of acts of public officers are public documents, but they do not furnish proof of all facts to which they refer: 105 I.C. 353: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 93. See also I.L.R. (1937) Bom. 464: A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 307; 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 807; 1941 All.W.R. (Rev.) 933 (Certified copies of extracts from patwari's records).

A document which is not a public document or not admitted cannot be exhibited and looked into unless it is proved by oral evidence or otherwise proved: A.I.R. 1986 All. 126: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 566: 1985 All.C.J. 507.

Test for determining whether a document is a public document or not—Certified copy—Issue of—Not a test: (1985) 1 M.L.J. 182: (1985) 98 Mad.L.W. 105 (D.B.).

The mere fact that some documents are forthcoming from the custody of a Government Department, and they happened to bear the seal impression of the said Department, held, will not dispense with the necessity of formally proving the same in the Court of law; the documents are certainly not public documents and they are as such needed to be formally proved: A.I.R. 1978 All. 185: 1977 All.W.C. 597: (1977) 3 All.L.R. 707.

S. 74 only deals with public documents; it is S. 76 which actually deals with their certified copies. A copy prepared from the certified copy of the original certified to be true copy by a competent officer when the original was not before him, held, cannot be received in evidence: 1990 Punj.L.J. 291: (1990) 1 Rev.L.R. 515.

A person seeking to prove a public document is relieved of the obligation to produce its original; he may prove it by producing its certified copy; it merely proves what the document contains but nothing more. [A.I.R. 1918 Cal. 988, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1983 Bom. 1: 1983 Mah.L.J. 339.

Public documents—Consideration of evidence by quasi-judicial authority—Opportunity denied for rebutting—Validity. See (1982-83) 87 Cal.W.N. 294 (D.B.).

Though the Register of Baptism does not fall under any of the classes mentioned in S. 74 and it is not a public document, but there is a provision in S. 82 which make applicable in India, the same presumptions which are recognised in England with regard to certain documents. They are declared to be admissible in the same manner as in England. The Register of Baptism will fall under S. 82 and a certified extract therefrom will be admissible in terms of S. 82: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 901: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 235.

A document termed as Shajra Sakni having found to be not a copy of any Shajra Sakni prepared by any revenue official, held, no presumption of truth could be attached to such a document under S. 44 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 177: (1987) 33 Del.L.T. 363.

For determining age of a person, the School admission records cannot be brushed aside merely because such records are not maintained by a public officer; under S. 35, all that is necessary is that the documents should have been maintained regularly by a person whose duty it is to maintain the record; there is no legal requirement that they should be maintained by a public officer only; that is a requirement only for public documents. [A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 1625 and A.I.R. 1963 Ker. 18, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 1057: 1982 Cr.L.J. 994: (1982) 2 S.C.C. 202: 1982 U.J.(S.C.) 426.

Though S. 139 of the Railways Act, 1890 permits proof of entries in records or other documents of Railway administration by production of a copy of such entries, before, however, such copies can be tendered and accepted as a proof of such entries, a certificate by the officer having custody of the records or other documents under his signature and stating that it is a true copy of the original entries and that such original entries are contained in the records or other documents of the Railway administration in his possession, has to be appended to that copy: A.I.R. 1983 Madh. Pra. 59: 1983 Jab.L.J. 197: 1983 M.P.L.J. 165.

Where R.S. Khatian, a record of rights, prepared in 1964 showed title of one person and the one prepared in 1966 in the name of a different person without any proceedings for correction having been taken, held, the second entry being unauthorised had no value in the eyes of law; the normal rule that the later entry should be preferred over the earlier was not attracted: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

The Orissa Government Land Settlement Act, 1962 did not debar 'any other person' to either apply or be settled with land even if it requires that land can be settled on others only in the absence of persons belonging to specified categories. Once the competent authority has settled land, it can be safely presumed that the authority had taken into account all facts and followed all guidelines and requirements of law. In the absence of any thing on record to show that the facts stated in the applications were disputed before the settlement or that the requirements of the Act and the Rules or the guidelines had not been followed, held, there would be no scope for the Board of Revenue to intervene under S. 7-A(3): (1976) 42 Cut.L.T. 251.

The In-door Register, the Out-door Register, the discharge certificate, which are expected to be kept in regular course of business, are more reliable and authentic than a stray piece of paper certifying that some body was under the treatment of a Doctor granting the same for a certain period which can be created at any time: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 1044 (D.B.).

Inspection of papers of Bangalore Improvement Board relating to allotment of sites—Right of—Allotment papers—If public documents. See (1972) 1 Mys.L.J. 101 (D.B.).

Where inter-departmental communications between the Reserve Bank of India and the Controller of Capital Issues in the custody of the C.B.I. were tendered as evidence in the Court, held, are admissible evidence even without being proved by their writers but having very weak probative value, they can be used only for corroboration; but if they are proved by their respective writers they can be taken as independent evidence: A.I.R. 1980 Cal. 83.

Entry in death register—Presumption of correctness attaches: 1965 B.L.J.R. 738: A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 231.

Applicability—Document in custody of accused—Foodgrains Procurement Stock Register—If public document—Order for production—Legality: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 1: 1958 Cr.L.J. 59.

Ownership—Presumption from entries in survey and settlement registers: A.I.R. 1960 Andh. Pra. 222: (1960) 1 An.W.R. 340.

Private documents (as) Kobalas, conveyances, leases, etc., filed in Courts or public offices, how proved: 22 W.R. 355; 14 I.A. 71: I.L.R. 14 Cal. 486.

Certified copies of confessions by accused would be admissible under S. 74 to prove the act of the Magistrate recording the confession. Where there are no irregularities and the statement was taken in accordance with law, then, under S. 80 there would be a further presumption that the circumstances under which it was stated to have been taken were true. The copies would not be sufficient to prove the identity of the accused: I.L.R. 56 All. 302: 1933 All.L.J. 1551: A.I.R. 1934 All. 81 (F.B.).

A confession recorded by a second class Magistrate not specifically empowered during the investigation of a case, is not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 2077: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1317.

As to report by Magistrate called for by High Court on an application for transfer. See 46 Mys.H.C.R. 402.

A certified copy of a registered mortgage deed may be admissible in evidence under S. 65(e), Evidence Act, as secondary evidence but that does not dispense with the proof of actual execution. [(1954) 2 M.L.J. (Andhra) 75, Disting.]: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 249: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 40.

Private and public documents—Record of the Court and Record of the Act of the Court—Distinction—Only the portion recording the act of the Court is a public document—Compromise by private parties filed in Court—Contents of compromise by itself not a public document and cannot be proved by certified copy: 1966 Cr.L.J. 967 (1) (Guj.).

The certificate of marriage issued by the Devanathaswamy Temple's Executive Officer who is a public servant, held, is legal evidence in prosecution for contracting second marriage during the subsistence of the first marriage; its contents stand proved by mere production of its original: (1988) 2 Hindu L.R. 783 (Mad.).

Commissioner's report in an earlier suit is admissible in a subsequent suit: (1993) 2 An.L.T. 471.

Death register is a public document: 1974 B.L.J.R. 16 (Sum.). See also S. 35, Note 5, supra.

The State Bank of Dholpur Act, 1915 being an Act of the sovereign authority of then State of Dholpur, is a public document; statement contained therein is admissible in evidence without requiring any further proof: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 6.

An agreement between the erstwhile Ruler of a State and the Government of India regarding setting up a public trust for management of a religious institution, held, is a public document: A.I.R. 1986 All. 75.

An entry in the Dag Chitha maintained under the Manipur Land Revenue and Land Reforms Act showing the nature of the land is admissible in evidence. The Dag Chitha containing entries made according to Rr. 55 (ii) and 66 of the 1961. Rules in Form VII is a 'public document' under S. 74 of the Evidence Act forming the act of the record of the act of a public officer. S. 2(17), C.P.Code defines a 'public officer' as a person falling in any one of the categories mentioned therein including an officer, whose duty is to make any survey of Government property, etc. S. 35 of the Evidence Act makes an entry in any public or official record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties as a relevant fact. The fact that in a case the survery is said to be still going on and that the record of rights is not finally published may only affect its evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 79.

Extract from register prescribed under S. 215(10) of Madras Estates Lands Act (I of 1908)—Extract should be deemed to be copy of public document and be admitted in evidence: (1969) 82 Mad.L.W. 571.

Preliminary order under S. 144, Cr.P. Code—Police report and reference from Health Officer referred to therein—Copies of—Right of accused to: 12 Mys.L.J. 197: 39 Mys.H.C.R. 172. Settlement maps, however important they may be, and whatever be their evidentiary value, cannot take the place of documents of title: 1947 O.W.N. 509.

Map prepared in previous suit between defendant and another person—Maker not examined. Value of. See I.L.R. (1946) 1 Cal. 149; I.L.R. 35 All. 165 (return of village officer on reference by Political Agent).

A phant which is a statement showing the division of land and filed by a patwari in Court is a public document under S. 74 (1)(iii) as it is a record of the act of a public officer and can be admitted in evidence on production of a certified copy thereof under S. 76 of the Act: 1948 R.D. 472. Statements of witnesses recorded by a public officer are public documents and under S. 77, they may be proved by certified copies issued under S. 76: 1948 R.D. 461. See also A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 377.

A document containing the sanction given by a District Magistrate under S. 29 of the Arms Act falls within the definition of a 'public document' in S. 74, and its certified copy can be produced in proof of its contents, and it can, therefore, be proved, as provided for in S. 77, Evidence Act, by production of a certified copy or the original. Where, therefore, the original sanction itself is presented with the charge-sheet, no formal proof of it is necessary: I.L.R. (1955) Patiala 715: A.I.R. 1956 Pepsu 11, followed in A.I.R. 1956 Pepsu 12: 1956 Cr.L.J. 103.

Offence under S. 27—Proof of notification under S. 19 necessary—No judicial notice can be taken—Notification is a public document—Proof—Nature of: 1966 Ker.L.J. 76.

Memorandum of Association of Company—Is a public document within S. 74(2)—Admission of secondary evidence of its contents: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 390.

The Market Committee constituted under the provisions of S. 4(a) of the Madras Commercial Crops Markets Act is an official body within the definition of S. 74 of the Evidence Act. The minutes book kept by such committee as per the provisions of R. 18 of the Madras Commercial Crops Markets Rules, 1948 which is a record of the proceeding of the meetings of the Market Committee is a public document which could be proved by production of a copy under S. 65(e), Evidence Act: 1961 Ker.L.J. 639: (1961) 2 Ker.L.R. 62: 1961 Ker.L.T. 510: (1962) 2 Cr.L.J. 546.

'Pahanies', prepared by the revenue authorities in the course of their official duties, are public documents: (1974) 1 Karn.L.J. (Jr.) 5 (S.N.) 14.

Village record.—Extracts of village records are public documents and can be taken judicial notice of: 1965 All.W.R. (H.C.) 367: 1965 All.L.J. 677.

Record of Gram Panchayat.—Gram Panchayat being a public body created under the M.P. Gram Panchayats Act, 1962, held, is covered by the words 'Official bodies and Tribunal' appearing in S. 74(1)(ii); thus, certified copies of the proceedings of Gram Panchayat can be treated as public documents: 1984 M.P.L.J. (N.O.C.) 71.

Pariwarik register.—The Pariwarik register prepared under the provisions of the Bihar Panchayat Election Rules, 1959, is a public document: A.I.R. 1972 Pat. 13: 1971 B.L.J.R. 418 (D.B.).

Adangal.—'Adangal' which is one of the Revenue Accounts maintained by the Karnam, who is a public officer, is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 and the contents of that document can be proved by production of a certified copy of the same: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 13.

Settlement record.—Settlement record, with history of district attached to it: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 639. See also A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 260. Canal Jamabandi papers: L.R. 3 A. 386 (Rev.).

Record of rights.—The entries in a later record of rights are presumed to be correct until rebutted by evidence; there is, however, no presumption of correctness in respect of entries in an earlier record of rights. The mere fact that a certain land was recorded as niskar in a record of rights of the year 1893, cannot possibly rebut the presumption or correctness relating to the entry in the current (later) record of rights of the same land as rent-paying land, especially when the former entry was based on a compromise, and entry in the later record has become final and has remained unchallenged: A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 609.

Record of rights—Entries in—Admissible though record not finally published: A.I.R. 1969 Manipur 84.

Post Office record.—Records maintained by the Post Office are public records; the entries in these records, therefore, can be produced in a Court of law as a part of a public record: A.I.R. 1982 All. 44: 1981 All.W.C. 612: 1981 All.C.J. 518: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 70; 1980 All.W.C. 64.

Election record.—The Check Memo which is required to be maintained by the officer-in-charge of the counting table is a document forming record of the acts of a public officer and, therefore, a certified copy thereof given by the Collector in whose custody the document is kept, can be admitted in evidence in proof of the contents of the original document: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1863: 1975 U.J.(S.C.) 626.

A confidential report on the method adopted by the Election Officer as to counting of votes at an election by show of hands submitted by the Additional District Panchayat Officer to the Regional Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards, is a public document and is admissible in evidence: 1955 An.L.T. 398: 1955 An.W.R. 471.

Voters' list.—[See also S. 35, Note 21, supra]. The voters' list prepared under the Representation of the People Act is a public record under S. 35 and a public document under S. 74(1)(iii); it is admissible as such; it is not necessary to prove its genuineness by examining its maker or supplier as a witness: A.I.R. 1983 Ori. 279 (D.B.); 1978 B.L.J.R. 165 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 158: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 57: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 82; (1973) 2 Cut.W.R. 1108; A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 113 (Gau.); A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 166: (1990) 70 Cut.L.T. 510; 1978 Cr.L.J. 752: 1977 Mad.L.W. (Cr.) 217: 1978 M.L.J. (Cr.) 327 [Entries in voters' list of village showing relationship of husband and wife supported by karnam of village, held, are admissible to prove marriage].

An entry in the voter's list cannot be discarded on the ground that the enumerator who prepared the voter's list has not been examined: (1991) 1 Hindu L.R. 247 (Ori.).

An entry in the electoral rolls, it is true, is not conclusive; but unless proved to be incorrect, they do have evidentiary value as corroborative evidence: A.I.R. 1981 Madh. Pra. 69: 1981 M.P.L.J. 192 (D.B.).

Voters' list—Admissibility and evidentiary value. See 1978 B.L.J.R. 165 (Pat.).

The extract from the village electoral roll and family register, proved by a certified copy thereof being public documents, are not required to be proved by evidence aliunde; they were presumptive evidence and the burden lay on the other party to rebut truth of the entries: A.I.R. 1980 All. 174.

Where in a suit for partition of ancestral properties belonging to the grand-father, the plaintiff's status as son of the grandfather was impeached who relied, inter alia, on the Voters' lists which were rejected by the trial Court on the ground that two of its pages do not bear the seal of the Panchayat or Election Office and there were no signatures on the seal of the Police Station, held, the voters' lists prepared under the Representation of the People Act were public record under S. 35 and public document under S.74(1)(iii) of the Evidence Act, they were admissible in evidence as such without examining their author or the authority furnishing copy thereof: A.I.R. 1983 Ori. 279 (D.B.). But see contra cases under Note 3, infra.

Court's record.—Records of acts of public tribunals for example, labour Courts, are public records which the parties to the adjudication are entitled to inspect and of which they will, therefore, be entitled to certified copies under S. 76: A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 180.

Proof of public document—Decree of Court is public document and no formal proof of it is needed: 1969 B.L.J.R. 932.

An order sheet in a case is a public document being the record of an act of a public judicial officer and the presumption is that it is genuine. It would require evidence and not mere suggestion that it has been fabricated to justify its rejection: 1937 Pat.W.N. 119: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 534. See also (1941-42) 46 Cal.W.N. 967.

An order duly numbered, dated and purported to be signed by the A.D.C. for the D.C. and bearing the official seal of that officer: A.I.R. 1959 Manipur 43.

Where the accused remained in abscondence for more than 33 years and meanwhile the eye-witnesses had died and the record of the commitment proceedings was destroyed, but the certified copy of the commitment order showed that an order had been made to record proceedings under S. 512 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, held, the statements made by the witnesses in the commitment proceedings were 'public document' as defined in S. 74, Evidence Act; their certified copies could be granted under S. 76, Evidence Act and produced and used in proof of their contents vide S. 77, Evidence Act; the presumption of genuineness was also available to the certified copies of depositions under S. 80, Evidence Act. Thus, the depositions of the witnesses recorded under S. 512 against the accused during the commitment proceedings in 1936 stood validly proved: (1974) 76 Punj.L.R. 57 (D.B.). But see contra cases under Note 3, infra.

Plaint/Written statement.—The plaint and written statement form part of record of the acts of the Judge who is a Judicial Officer and to the extent of its proving the factum of filing a particular suit against a particular person the said document constitutes a public document within the meaning of S. 74; they are admissible by producing the certified copies to the extent of showing the existence and the condition of such documents within the meaning of S. 65: (1987) 2 An.L.T. 597.

The certified copy of the plaint is a public document and is, therefore, also admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the contents thereof. [(1873) 10 Beng.L.R. (Appendix) 13, Foll.]: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82. But see contra case under Note 3, infra.

Record of municipality.—Sanctioned plan granted by the Municipality, held, is a public document and it can be proved by producing a certified copy thereof: 1981 Mah.L.J. 397.

Municipal proceedings: I.L.R. 19 All. 293. But see 30 I.C. 643: 16 Cr.L.J. 659 (C.).

Assessment registers of a Municipality are public documents prepared in performance of public documents; they can be proved by certified copies: A.I.R. 1982 Cal. 294: (1982) 1 Cal.L.J. 256: (1982) 1 Cal.H.N. 206 (D.B.).

Letter written to the Nazul Department in the Nagar Mahapalika becomes public document and, thus, a photocopy of it is not admissible; it is the certified copy which is admissible: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1988) 14 All.L.R. 814.

Nazul Officer recording statement while preparing record—Nazul Officer acts as public servant—Copy of statement is sufficient to prove it and Nazul Officer need not be summoned to prove: 1963 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 164. But see contra cases under Note 3, infra.

Record of Registrar.—A certified copy of the entry of registration of a deed is admissible in evidence under Ss. 74 and 77 as proof of the entry but not of the contents of the deed: 177 I.C. 517: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 120.

The certified copy of the sale deed in respect of disputed land is a 'public document' and is, therefore, admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82; A.I.R. 1979 Gau. 14.

A Book in the registration office where copies of sale deeds admitted to registration are kept is a public document: A.I.R. 1989 Ori. 27: (1988) 65 Cut.L.T. 586.

The register of money-lenders maintained in the office of Sub-Registrar in accordance with the provisions of the Bihar Money-Lenders Act, 1938, is a public document; thus, a certified true copy of the entry in such register is admissible in evidence to show that a person is a professional money-lender: A.I.R. 1974 Pat. 103 (D.B.).

The Registrar's office certainly keeps a public record of the exchange deeds registered in that office. The certified copy of the exchange deed, therefore, is a secondary evidence of the public record kept in the Registrar's Office. It is, therefore, admissible in evidence both under S. 65(e) or (f): (1991-1) 99 Punj.L.R. 129.

Public record of a wakf deed, which is a private document, kept in the office of the Sub-Registrar is a public document as defined in S. 74(2); its certified copy is admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1991 Gau. 17.

Entry in register of powers-of-attorney maintained by Registering Officer—Admissibility. See (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 907: A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 569.

A registered general power of attorney is a public document within the meaning of S. 74(2); its certified copy can be admitted in evidence to prove contents of the original under S. 77: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 551: 1989 Punj.L.J. 332; (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 353. But see contra cases under Note 3, infra.

Assessment record.—Records in the assessment files constitute public documents within the meaning of S. 74 as forming the acts or records of the acts of a public officer or of an official body. The right to obtain copies of public documents still depends on the applicant's right to inspect them, within the meaning of S. 76 of the Indian Evidence Act. [7 M.L.J. 167 (F.B.), Rel. on]. The words 'right to inspect' should not be interpreted in a restricted or narrow sense. The right to inspect under S. 76 is not to be upheld or rejected, depending upon the purpose for which inspection is sought, though the purpose would have a relevance in determining whether the right set up is illusory or not: 1960 Ker.L.J. 1191: I.L.R. (1960) Ker. 1292: A.I.R. 1961 Ker. 32.

Although an income-tax assessment order is a public document within the meaning of S. 74, the assessee has no right to inspect it, and has, therefore, no right to demand a certified copy of it under S. 76. Accordingly, a copy of that order obtained from the Income-tax Department is not under S. 77, a certified copy which may be produced in proof of the contents of the original order of assessment: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 187: I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 394: (1938-39) 43 Cal.W.N. 1169. But see also A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 768: (1940) 2 M.L.J. 257 (F.B.); 50 Mad.L.W. 815: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 161; A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 546: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 791.

An income-tax assessment order is a public document under S. 74 and a certified copy of it would be admissible under S. 65: 1944 All.L.J. 118: A.I.R. 1944 All. 114.

Assessment order can be produced by an assessee or his representative-in-interest in evidence, and in such a case, the prohibition provided in S. 54 of Income-tax Act, 1922 does not apply. [A.I.R. 1963 Ori. 11, Affirm.]: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 671: 1971 U.J.(S.C.) 159.

An assessee has a right to inspect statements recorded for orders passed by Income-tax Officers, and certified copies granted by the Department will, therefore, be admissible in evidence to prove the contents of those documents. There is nothing in S. 54 of the Income-tax Act which prohibits the giving of such evidence. This section merely directs officials of the Department to treat such documents as confidential and it is open to an assessee to waive that right and to give evidence: 1946 Nag.L.J. 406: I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 433: A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 377.

S. 54, Income-tax Act, does not prohibit the assessee or assessees themselves to require the Income-tax Officer to furnish certified copies of the assessment order, or of any statement made therein in the proceedings held before him. Indeed, the Income-tax Manual clearly lays down that a copy of the assessment order will be supplied free of cost to the assessee, and that subsequent copies may be supplied on payment of charges. The returns are public documents within the meaning of S. 74, Evidence Act, and hence the certified copies of the income-tax return are admissible in evidence under S. 76, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1955 All. 388.

Assessment orders under the Bihar Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1948, are public documents as forming the acts or records of the acts of public officers: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 515. As to Income-tax returns, see A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 768: (1940) 2 M.L.J. 257 (F.B.); I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 394: A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 187; I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 329: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 161; A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 546: (1939) 1 M.L.J. 791; A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 377.

An income-tax return as well as a statement filed in support of it is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act. Certified copies thereof would, therefore, be admissible under S. 65(e) of that Act and though a Court is prohibited from requiring a public servant to produce the documents mentioned in S. 54 of the Income-tax Act or to give evidence in support of them, it does not follow that the Court may not admit in evidence a document which falls within S. 54(1). All that S. 54, Income-tax Act means is that the income-tax authorities are to regard communication made to them for the purposes of the Income-tax Act as being confidential, the object being to enable people to feel that they can freely state the facts relating to their income, facts which may often involve confidential matters relating to their business, without fear of the matters being disclosed. If a document can be given in evidence, without requiring a public servant to produce it, there is nothing in the section to prevent that from being done. Certified copies of a public document do not and need not contain any endorsement as to the person who obtained them. If such certified copies are filed, they must be admitted in evidence under the Evidence Act, 'to prove the existence, conditions or contents of such documents' without reference to the person who procured them: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 499: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 200.

Income-tax documents—Suit to recover business dues—Plaintiff claiming defendant to have transacted through intermediaries—Income-tax assessment order against a plaintiff's witness produced to show dealings by defendant through intermediary—Such order being a public document within the meaning of S. 74, its certified copy is admissible under S. 65(e), yet it cannot be used as evidence against the defendant: 1967 Ker.L.J. 237.

A profit and loss account filed in the Income-tax Office, is a public document. Therefore, a certified copy of it would also be admissible. But where it was not shown that the statement amounted to anything more than an admission in the debtor's favour and was relevant and, besides, the document was filed at a very late stage. Held, that the debtor was not entitled as of right to put in the document at that stage and no prejudice would be caused to him by the refusal on the part of the Court to allow him to produce a certified copy of the statement: A.I.R. 1957 Assam 49. But see contra case under Note 3, infra.

Visa.—The Visa Officer of the Government of India who issues a visa at a place situated in a foreign country is an officer of the Government of India and the visa issued by him is a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act. Under S. 74 even the record of the acts of the officer of a foreign country would be a public document. Further, each one of the entries in the passport would be a public document under S. 74 of the Evidence Act as constituting an act or the record of the acts of public officers. A residential permit issued in favour of a foreigner is a public document being an act or the record of the acts of the Registration Officer: (1963) 4 Guj.L.R. 1073: (1963) 2 Cr.L.J. 265: A.I.R. 1963 Guj. 226.

First information report.—F.I.R. is a public document and the concerned party is entitled to certified copy thereof under Ss. 74(1)(iii) and 76: 1971 Cr.L.J. 875 (Cal.); 1992 Cr.L.J. 2377: (1992) 2 Crimes 252 (Guj.); A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 119: 1981 Hindu L.R. 16; 1980 Cr.L.J. 1022: (1981) 1 Kam.L.J. 235.

Medical/Post-mortem report.—The injury reports, prepared by a Medical Officer, who is a public officer, in discharge of his public duties on requisitions being sent by the Investigating Officer for examination of the injured, are public documents: 1990 Cr.L.J. 1848: (1990) 70 Cut.L.T. 1 (D.B.).

A medico legal case (MLC) report prepared by a Medical Officer, who is a public servant, is a public document: 1995 Cr.L.J. 1742 (Del.) (D.B.).

Where Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal took into consideration the certified copy of the post-mortem report of the deceased without examining the Doctor who prepared it, held, there was nothing wrong in the procedure adopted by the Tribunal: A.I.R. 1991 Raj. 29. But see contra cases under Note 3, infra.

Warrant.—'Public document'—Warrant is a public document—It can be proved only by production of a certified copy: 1968 Cr.L.J. 758: A.I.R. 1968 Guj. 100.

Letters received from the Controller of Military Accounts in reply to warrant of attachment is a public document: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 438. But see contra case under Note 3, infra.

3. What are not public documents.—A letter sent to an Estate Officer intimating the sender's change of address is not a public document; it is a private document to be proved by the sender's evidence: A.I.R. 1977 Del. 73: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 321.

Manager of a District Co-operative Bank being not a 'public-officer' within the meaning of S. 2(17)(h), C.P.Code, held, any letter written by him in the form of a certificate to a customer, is not a public document: A.I.R. 1980 Bom. 380.

A book on the Naga Tribes of Manipur being not an official compilation of the custom or the customary laws of the tribe concerned prepared by a public officer in the discharge of his duties under the Government Rules, held, is not a public record and, therefore, it can not be relied on to decide the question of the right of inheritance amongst the members of Kabui Tribe of Manipur: A.I.R. 1992 Gau. 66: (1992) 1 Gau.L.R. 299 (D.B.).

A Naib Tehsildar's report of spot inspection made to the Tehsildar, held, is only an expression of his own opinion; it is neither a public document under S. 74 nor admissible under S. 35 unless it is proved by proper evidence adduced in the Court: A.I.R. 1990 All. 175.

Returns filed with Registrar of Joint Stock Companies: (1916-17) 21 Cal.W.N. 1161: I.L.R. 45 Cal. 169. Printed proceedings of municipality (by themselves): 30 I.C. 643: 16 Cr.L.J. 659. Letter of an Executive Officer: 1 Punj. Re. 1914 (Cr.): 23 I.C. 696. See also 1939 Mad.W.N. 841: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 273. Notice under S. 107, Cr.P.Code: (1913-14) 18 Cal.W.N. 644. Dakhalnamah: 25 I.C. 529. Teishkhana register: I.L.R. 23 Cal. 366. Document merely with rubber stamp initials of public officer but not signed by him: 3 U.P.L R. A report by a village Nikha Khawan to the Mohavir in a central office informing him of the objection to an entry of marriage in the village register by the former husband of the woman is not a public document within S. 74: 1 Punj. Re. (Cr.) 1914: 23 I.C. 696. So also a statement prepared by patwari: A.I.R. 1930 All. 712. Also parcha slip granted in the course of survey proceedings: 19 Cr.L.J. 886: 47 I.C. 82 (P.).

So also a letter to the Collector by the President of a public meeting forwarding the proceedings of that meeting: 55 Cal.L.J. 558: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 312. As to proof of public documents, see 56 P.L.R. 1903: 5 Punj. Re. 1903 (Cr.).

A receipt granted by one private person to another and registered is not a 'public document'. Consequently a certified copy of such a receipt is not admissible in evidence under S. 65 (e) without any foundation being laid for the admission of secondary evidence: (1943) 2 M.L.J. 51:(1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 607 (P.C.).

A mere record copy of a lease prepared for the private use of Government Officers cannot be admitted as a public document unless it is shown that it was the duty of the Government to maintain such a copy: I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 357: (1942) 44 Bom.L.R. 295: A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 161. As to proof by copy of compromise petition, see 25 W.R. 68. As to proof of judgment, plaint and written statement, see 10 Beng.L.R. Civil Surgeon's report to a Magistrate as to the age of a person is not expert opinion and not a record of his 'act': 1 Luck. Cases 733; A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 155. So also a circular issued by Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs as to future issue of certain kind of stamps is neither 'a record of an act' nor 'an act': 115 I.C. 509 (1): 1929 Mad.W.N. 193.

Departmental enquiry by Magistrate in his executive capacity is not judicial inquiry and statements recorded therein are not evidence taken on oath. Such statements, therefore, are not public documents and S. 163 can be applied to such statements: A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 370: I.L.R. 58 Cal. 96.

Translation of private document maintained by Government Office, for its use—Not a public document: A.I.R. 1961 All. 206.

Inspection Book of Lands & Buildings.—The document mentioned as 'Inspection Book of Lands and Buildings' maintained by the Corporation of Calcutta is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74: (1988-89) 93 Cal.W.N. 1045.

Neither the Executive Officer nor the Inspector of Assessment acting under his authority can be said to be an official body or a tribunal when he is making notes of measurement of lands and buildings. These notes, are made by the Inspector of Assessment for the purpose of assisting the Executive Officer in fixing the annual value of the lands and buildings under S. 131 of the Calcutta Municipal Act but they cannot be said to be records of acts of official bodies or tribunals nor can this document be said to be the record of acts of public officer, legislative, judicial and executive of any part of India, because the Executive Officer acting under S. 136 of the Calcutta Municipal Act is neither a legislative nor a judicial nor an Executive Officer. Therefore, Inspection Book of Lands and Buildings, is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act: (1956-57) 61 Cal.W.N. 175.

Assessment order.—Order of assessment is not a public document in view of S. 54 of the Income-tax Act: I.L.R. 56 Bom. 324: A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 291. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Court's record.—An award which is annexed to a petition cannot be admitted into evidence as a public document: (1959) 61 Bom.L.R. 333: A.I.R. 1959 Bom. 414.

A private document does not become a public document simply because it is filed in the Court. To be a public document, it should be a record of the act of a public officer or Court. There is a distinction between the record of the act of the Court and the record of the Court. A document which forms part of the record of the Court does not necessarily form record of the act of the Court. It may be that upon a private document, which is a record of the act of private parties a second act is done by the public officer or by the Court, namely filing the document or putting a number on the document. Therefore, that part of the document, namely the original part would be a private document forming the record of the act of the private parties and what is subsequently added to that document by the Court would be a public document: 1966 Cr.L.J. 967(1): (1966) 7 Guj.L.R. 23.

Notes of evidence recorded by Court of Small Causes is public documents—Defeated litigant who has initiated proceedings in superior Court is entitled to certified copies thereof—Application by party or his advocate stating reasons for copy is sufficient—In the absence of rules, affidavit is not necessary: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 702.

Discretion under O. 41, R. 27, C.P.Code, is not to be exercised arbitrarily—Admission of documents—Considerations—R. 27 does not alter rules governing admission of additional evidence—High School certificate and birth extract not produced before trial Court—First appellate Court admitting such documents—Explanation of party that such documents were not in his possession accepted by first appellate Court—Documents not proved—Admission of documents is wrong and is vitiated for want of proof—Duty of Court: 1966 All.W.R. (H.C.) 634. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Plaint/Written statement.—A plaint or written statement is not an act or the record of an act of the Court and cannot, therefore, be treated as a public document merely because of the Court's endorsement thereon: 1945 All.W.R. (Rev.) 13: 1945 R.D. 40. Plaint is not a public document: 7 Pat.L.T. 267: A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 180; 93 I.C. 650: A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 339; 1950 R.D. 71; 1943 O.W.N. 522: A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 54. Written statement not a public document: A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 320.

A certified copy of a written statement could only be admitted as a public document under S. 78. To become a public document, it must under S. 74 be held to be a public record of a private document. A written statement is not a public document and, hence, must be proved by direct evidence. A presumption of genuineness cannot be asked to be raised in the case of certified copies of pleadings, where they are not incorporated in any way in the decree of the Court: 1942 O.W.N. 191: A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 303. See also A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 54.

A petition is not the record of a judicial authority. It is neither the act nor the record of the act of a judicial authority. It is really the act of a private party. It is the party who moves the Court by his petition to obtain a certain order, and, therefore, the petition as such would not come within the definition of a public document under S. 74. On the same principle, the affidavit, except formal affidavits of service, would not come within the purview of public document: (1959) 61 Bom.L.R. 333: A.I.R. 1959 Bom. 414. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Voters' list.—Voters' list unless proved to have been prepared on the application of the voter duly signed by him is an hearsay evidence; in the absence of examination of the author of the voters' list, it cannot be treated as a substantive evidence to prove the relationship: (1990) 1 Hindu L.R. 113 (P.&H.).

It is one thing to say that a document is conclusive evidence and another that it is one of the pieces of evidence; thus, the voters' list by itself is not conclusive or final; but being a public document under S. 74(1)(iii), it is admissible in evidence and together with other evidence connecting the list with the person concerned, the two supplement each other and may prove the fact in issue: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 235: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 901. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Record of Registrar.—The original document after registration cannot be kept by the registering authority and has to be returned to the person who had presented it as clearly envisaged by S. 61(2) of the Registration Act. Hence, the original will cannot be considered a public document: 1980 Hindu L.R. 273 (P.&H.) (F.B.).

A will, even after registration, does not become a public document; it remains a private document; its certified copy from the office of Registrar is admissible only for proving the contents of the original, but is not sufficient to dispense with the production and proof of the original document. Thus, a certified copy of the will cannot be produced to prove the document without proving loss of the original document: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 235: 1976 Rev.L.R. 93: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 21.

A private deed of trust which has been registered cannot be said to be a document of which public record is required to be kept, as the original has to be returned to the party concerned, and, therefore, it cannot be admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1975 Cal. 381. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Medical/Post mortem report.—A post mortem or an inquest report is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74, Evidence Act; therefore, an accused is not entitled to inspect or receive its copies during investigation. The opinion of the Medical Officer in the post mortem report is only to aid the Investigating Officer; it is not a record by the Medical Officer of his official 'act' for public use; it is not a substantive evidence; and it has to be proved by its maker. [A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 155, Rel. on]. A bare reading of S. 174 of the Cr.P.Code and Rr. 25, 35, 39 and 47 of the Punjab Police Rules shows that the post mortem report is obtained by the Investigating Officer during investigation to find out the cause of death; the inquiry contemplated under S. 174 of the Code is not to be extended for the purpose of finding out the person who caused the death; the post mortem report is a part of the Police file; though required to be produced before the Magistrate at the time of remand, yet it cannot be made public by the Magistrate; the accused cannot be permitted either to inspect it or receive its copies until the stage of S. 207, Cr.P.Code arrives: 1981 Cr.L.J. 538: (1981) 19 Del.L.T. 104: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 96 (D.B.). But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Statement recorded by Police during investigation.—A statement recorded by the Police Officer in the course of investigation is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74 and the question of granting copy thereof does not arise. [A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 431, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 69: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 831 (D.B.); 1977 Mah.L.J. 715.

Warrant.—A search warrant issued by a Magistrate is not a public record mentioned in clause (2) of S. 74. Under clause (1) of the section only 'documents forming the acts or

75. Private documents.—All other documents are private.

76. Certified copies of public documents.—Every public officer having the custody of a public document, which any person has a right to inspect, shall give that person on demand a copy of it on payment of the legal fees therefor, together with a certificate written at the foot of such copy that it is a true copy of such document or part thereof, as the case may be, and such certificate shall be dated and subscribed by such officer with his name and his official title, and shall be sealed, whenever such officer is authorized by law to make use of a seal; and such copies so certified shall be called certified copies.

Explanation.—Any officer who, by the ordinary course of official duty, is authorized to deliver such copies, shall be deemed to have the custody of such documents within the meaning of this section.

records of the acts' of the authorities and bodies mentioned therein are public documents. The acts which clause (1) of S. 74 contemplates are final, completed acts as distinguished from acts of a preparatory or tentative character. In the case of a search warrant, the final act would clearly be the order of the Magistrate itself directing the issue of a warrant. The search warrant is only an authority to the officer concerned to effect a search of the person mentioned therein. A search warrant not being a public document could not be proved by a certified copy. Its actual production and proof by the Magistrate issuing it could not be dispensed with in the case: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 269. But see contra cases under Note 2, supra.

Section 75—Notes.

A letter sent to an Estate Officer intimating the sender's change of address is not a public document; it is a private document to be proved by the sender's evidence: A.I.R. 1977 Del. 73: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 321.

A document which is not a public document or not admitted cannot be exhibited and looked into unless it is proved by oral evidence or otherwise proved: A.I.R. 1986 All. 126: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 566: 1985 All.C.J. 507.

Section 76—Notes.

The contents of a document can be satisfactorily established by producing a certified copy: I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 333: A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 162. 'Certified copy'—Meaning of. See (1958) 1 An.W.R. 495: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 495.

As seen from the definition of 'certified copy' it is clear that it is one issued on payment of the legal fee certifying it to be a true copy and affixing seal of the authorised officer. As a comparative study of sub-R. (14) of R. 70 of the A.P. High Court Appellate Side Rules requires that a carbon copy shall be certified to be true and shall bear the seal and other particulars mentioned by sub-R. (11) of R. 70, there is, therefore virtually no substantial or real difference between a 'certified copy' and 'carbon copy': A.I.R. 1981 Andh. Pra. 316: (1981) 2 An.W.R. 80: (1981) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 86 (D.B.).

The person purporting to issue certified copy of the public document must mention his official designation: 1985 All.W.C. 470: (1985) 11 All.L.R. 627; his seal and signature: (1988) 3 Karn.L.J. 599.

By long usage, the term 'certified copy' has obtained a special meaning in view of the provision in S. 76 of the Evidence Act, and that term, when used in connection with an appeal and with reference to the order against which the appeal is filed, has always been understood as the copy which the party preferring the appeal obtains under S. 76 of the Evidence Act on payment of the necessary fee: 1958 Ker.L.T. 918: A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 34.

In order that entries in public document are admitted in evidence, they must have been made under some law: (1980) 2 M.P.W.N. 51.

S. 74 only deals with public documents; it is S. 76 which actually deals with their certified copies. A copy prepared from the certified copy of the original certified to be true copy by a competent officer when the original was not before him, held, cannot be received in evidence: 1990 Punj.L.J. 291: (1990) 1 Rev.L.R. 515.

Certified copies of public documents are to be issued irrespective of the fact as to whether they are marked or not: (1991) 4 Karn.L.J. 705: I.L.R. (1992) Karn. 2170.

Ss. 63 and 65(e) and (f) read together permit certified copies and copies made from the original by mechanical process to be tendered as secondary evidence; photocopies thereof prepared by a mechanical process in itself ensure the original's accuracy. Thus, where photostat copies of judicial record of a foreign Court are certified by a public officer having custody of that record as contemplated by S. 76, held, it will not be per se inadmissible; but if it is not further certified by a representative of the Indian Government in the foreign country it will not be admissible: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646 (S.C.).

A copy signed and sealed by the registering officer and given under S. 57 of the Registration Act is no doubt admissible to prove the contents of the original document, but a copy which is not signed and sealed by the registering officer is clearly inadmissible in proof of the contents of the original document: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931.

A statement recorded by the Police Officer in the course of investigation is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74 and the question of granting copy thereof does not arise. [A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 431, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 69: (1984) 4 Guj.L.H. 831 (D.B.); 1977 Mah.L.J. 715.

Where a carbon copy of the trial Court's order issued as directed by the Court at the instance of the Counsel for the party on payment of requisite charges and complying with all other requirements of a certified copy except for the certificate of being a true copy, held, 'duly certified' need not be by express words of certification; the copy on the face of it not being unofficial or informal but an authentic copy issued by the Court under its authority, it could be treated as a duly certified copy; the law under S. 79 has created a legal presumption in favour of its genuineness when it substantially and not strictly complies with the provisions relating to certification of copies; S. 76 prescribes no particular form of authentication; the carbon copy tantamounts to a certified copy of the order: A.I.R. 1986 Ker. 196: 1985 Ker.L.J. 1069.

The combined effect of Ss. 35, 65(e), 76, 77 and 79 is to enable the proof of public documents by the certified copies of the extracts therefrom: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

The primary evidence of a document is the document produced for inspection of the Court; its secondary evidence means and includes certified copies given under S. 76; under S. 64, documents must be proved by primary evidence, except in cases mentioned in S. 65. Under S. 65(e), only a certified copy of the public document and no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible to prove the original. [A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 57, Rel. on]: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 29.

Though necessary Court-fees have to be ordinarily paid on applications for certified copies of a judgment under S. 76 read with relevant provisions of the Court-fees Act, but such a certified copy is required to be furnished to the accused free of cost under S. 371 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, held, clearly, no Court-fees are to be charged therefor: A.I.R. 1971 Assam 55: 1971 Cr.L.J. 591 (F.B.).

The test prescribed by S. 76 of the Evidence Act is whether the person who applies for a copy of a document has a right to inspect it. An assessee has a right to inspect the order passed on appeal by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. Whether any other person has a right to inspect that document is irrelevant. It is the person who has a right to inspect that is given the right to obtain a copy. That is the scheme of S. 76 of the Evidence Act. S. 54 of the Income-tax Act does not bar this right of inspection and obtaining its copy: I.L.R. (1957) Mad. 557: (1956) 2 M.L.J. 604: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 151.

Suit for money claimed as due from defendant—Income-tax return of defendant showing payment of interest by him to plaintiff—Section does not preclude Court from admitting certified copy of return in evidence in support of plaintiff's claim: A.I.R. 1962 Punj. 27.

If a person not really entitled to inspect the document under S. 54(1) of the Income-tax Act has still managed to get a certified copy of it, he cannot be prevented under the provisions of Evidence Act from tendering it in evidence. The Court should decide admissibility of such document in accordance with the Evidence Act: 1961 M.P.L.J. 28: 1960

Jab.L.J. 785: (1963) 47 I.T.R. 44: A.I.R. 1961 Madh. Pra. 21.

If the person seeking to obtain a copy has got no right to inspect that document, he cannot have a copy thereof under S. 76; a copy obtained by such a person is a copy obtained illegally and is, therefore, inadmissible in evidence. On the principle underlying the provisions of S. 54 of the Income-tax Act making documents confidential as between the maker thereof and the Income-tax Department, it is obvious that apart from the maker thereof no one has got a right to inspect the same and that being the position certified copies obtained thereof on behalf of a person other than the maker thereof cannot be treated as certified copies within the meaning of S. 76, Evidence Act, and will not, therefore, be admissible in evidence. [A.I.R. 1944 All. 114 and A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 377, Doubted]: 1958 Pat.L.R. 300: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 172.

Income-tax return—Right of third party to obtain certified copy and produce it in evidence: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 1219.

Copy of copy: A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 59.

First information report is a public document; the Magistrate is bound to grant a copy of it to the accused produced before him: 1980 Cr.L.J. 1022: (1981) 1 Karn.L.J. 235.

While seeking remand of an accused under S. 167 or S. 344 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Police submits no 'remand report' but only a copy of 'entries in the case diary'; the accused's application for a copy of 'remand report' is virtually for the certified copy of the 'entries' furnished to the Court by the Police Officer for obtaining remand; that being a judicial function, those 'entries' cannot but be a public document under S. 74. The accused, having tangible interest in the matter has the right to know the reason for the remand order; the Court being duty bound to jealously guard the citizens' liberty against abuse of power by the Police, the Court has to apply its mind to satisfy itself on the materials placed before it, before it decides to commit the accused to custody or to extend the remand; the accused has the right to move for bail for which he is interested in knowing the grounds for his remand for he might challenge it in revision; the revisional Court has to consider whether the remand order could be sustained on the materials placed before the Court. S. 76, no doubt, does not define or specify the 'person entitled to inspect' the document but it is well settleld that the Legislature intended to recognise the right generally for all persons who can show that they have an interest to protect which necessitates inspection of such documents; the requirements of S. 76 are satisfied and there is no other statutory bar or prohibition against the grant of the certified copy. The prohibition in S. 172(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure against the accused's right to inspect the case diary does not extend to the 'remand report'; S. 173(4), mandatory in character, directs the prosecution to furnish to the accused, free of charge, copies of the documents, statements etc. intended to be used against him in the trial; it does not expressly or even impliedly mean that the accused is prevented from applying for or obtaining certified copies of those documents on his own accord on payment of legal fee. The accused must be presumed to have a right in common law to know the reasons urged in support of his detention; refusal to grant of certified copy of the remand report may amount to denial of natural justice and adequate opportunity to protect his liberty, particularly in the context that no specific statutory inhibition in that behalf has been brought to the Court's notice; the accused is entitled to apply for and obtain the certified copy: 1972 Ker.L.T. 922 (D.B.).

Where the accused remained in abscondence for more than 33 years and meanwhile the eye-witnesses had died and the record of the commitment proceedings was destroyed, but the certified copy of the commitment order showed that an order had been made to record proceedings under S. 512 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, held, the statements made by the witnesses in the commitment proceedings were 'public document' as defined in S. 74; their certified copies could be granted under S. 76: (1974) 76 Punj.L.R. 57 (D.B.).

See I.L.R. 30 Mad. 466: 17 M.L.J. 471. In order to be admissible copies must be duly certified. See 4 I.C. 929: 87 P.L.R. 1909. The Khasra Girdawaris are public documents: 151 I.C. 786 (1): (1933) 35 Punj.L.R. 405: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 698. Where a document purports to be a copy given by a Public Officer having the custody of a public document, but does not bear a certificate as required by S. 76 and is not supported by the evidence of the person who prepared it, it is inadmissible in evidence

77. Proof of documents by production of certified copies.—Such certified copies may be produced in proof of the contents of the public documents or parts of the public documents of which they purport to be copies.

A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 77: 1940 O.W.N. 999: I.L.R. 16 Luck. 230.

Undoubtedly under S. 76, a copy of a talukdari sanad to be certified should be sealed whenever the keeper of the records of the Government of India is authorised by law to make use of a seal. But if there is no evidence to the effect that he is so authorised, the Court cannot make such a presumption when other necessary formalities have been duly carried out. Accordingly, a copy of a sanad which complies with other formalities but is not sealed cannot be treated as uncertified and is admissible in evidence: I.L.R. 13 Luck. 723: A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 69.

Where at the time when a town plan was marked, no objection was taken either as regards its admissibility or the mode of proof, but at the time of arguments it was contended that the said document having not been certified as required by S. 76, was not admissible in evidence, held, such a belated objection could not be taken: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 388.

The Check Memo which is required to be maintained by the officer in charge of the counting table is a document forming record of the acts of a public officer and therefore, a certified copy thereof given by the Collector in whose custody the document is kept, can be admitted in evidence in proof of the contents of the original document: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1863: 1975 U.J.(S.C.) 626.

Test for determining whether a document is a public document or not—Certified copy—Issue of—Not a test: (1985) 1 M.L.J. 182: (1985) 98 Mad.L.W. 105.

Where the facts relating to the pedigree in question was contained in a plaint of a suit filed in 1914 which was part of the public record, held, a certified copy of the plaint would be admissible evidence of its contents: 1979 All.L.J. (N.O.C.) 45.

Suit for fixation of reasonable rent—Entries in assessment notice book and assessment list register—Value of: 1965 M.P.L.J. 238: A.I.R. 1965 Madh. Pra. 237 (F.B.).

Dispute as to date of death of person—Extract from register of deaths under Madras Act (III of 1899), is bound to be accepted as conclusive of the matter when there is no controversy that the extract did not relate to the person, the date of whose death is in question—Death register is covered by language of S. 35: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 679: I.L.R. (1965) 2 Mad. 556: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 205.

Notes of evidence recorded by Court of Small Causes is public document—Defeated litigant who has initiated proceedings in superior Court is entitled to certified copies thereof—Application by party or his advocate stating reasons for copy is sufficient—In the absence of rules, affidavit is not necessary: 1965 M.L.J. (Cr.) 702. See 1966 Cr.L.J. 967 (1) (Guj.).

"Public Officer having Custody of public document"—Royal order of Maharaja of one of Covenanting States—Copy issued under signature of officer in personal staff of Rajpramukh after integration is one issued by a "public officer" within the meaning of the section and as such admissible in evidence as a certified copy of a public document: 1969 Ker.L.R. 326: 1969 Ker.L.T. 110.

Section 77—Notes.

[See also Notes under S. 74, supra].

S. 77 seems to have been enacted to obviate the production of the original public documents for evidentiary purposes; but this section cannot be read in isolation and, therefore, mere production of a certified copy of a public document does not prove the same, as the question of its admissibility involves that the contents must relate to a fact in issue or a fact relevant under the various sections of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1977 Del. 73: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 321.

In view of S. 57(5) of the Indian Registration Act, contents of a registered public document are duly proved the moment certified copy thereof is produced: (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 390.

In proof of the fact of a statement made in a correction of papers case and an application made in execution no better evidence could be produced than the production of certified copies taken from the judicial files. Formal proof of signatures on the application is not necessary still less is any further proof necessary in case of the statements: 1941 R.D. 793. A certified copy of a decree of a Court at Agra can now be admitted into evidence in a Court in Rajasthan according to S. 77: 1953 Raj.L.W. 202: A.I.R. 1953 Raj. 216.

Certified copy of public document—Admissible in evidence without being proved by calling witness—No objection raised to mode of proof either in trial Court or in appellate Court—High Court commits error of law in rejecting such document on ground that it had not been proved: (1964) 2 S.C.R. 673: 1964 S.C.D. 358: (1964) 1 An.L.T. 1: A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1633.

Though the public documents are not required to be proved by calling witness, they should be marked or numbered as exhibits: A.I.R. 1990 Gau. 7.

The combined effect of Ss. 35, 65(e), 76, 77 and 79 is to enable the proof of public documents by the certified copies of the extracts therefrom: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

Where a carbon copy of the trial Court's order issued as directed by the Court at the instance of the Counsel for the party on payment of requisite charges and complying with all other requirements of a certified copy except for the certificate of being a true copy, held, 'duly certified' need not be by express words of certification; the copy on the face of it not being unofficial or informal but an authentic copy issued by the Court under its authority, it could be treated as a duly certified copy; the law under S. 79 has created a legal presumption in favour of its genuineness when it substantially and not strictly complies with the provisions relating to certification of copies; S. 76 prescribes no particular form of authentication; the carbon copy tantamounts to a certified copy of the order: A.I.R. 1986 Ker. 196: 1985 Ker.L.J. 1069.

Decree of Court—No formal proof is needed: 1969 B.L.J.R. 932.

Photostat copies of judicial record of a foreign Court, certified by a public officer having custody of that record as contemplated by S. 76, held, are per se not inadmissible; but if not further certified by a representative of the Indian Government in the foreign country, they will not be admissible: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646 (S.C.).

The certified copy of the plaint is a public document and is, therefore, also admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the contents thereof. [(1873) 10 Beng.L.R. (Appendix) 13, Foll.]: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82. But see Notes 2 and 3, under S. 73, supra.

Where the facts relating to the pedigree in question was contained in a plaint of a suit filed in 1914 which was part of the public record, held, a certified copy of the plaint would be admissible in evidence of its contents: 1979 All.L.J. (N.O.C.) 45.

Certified copy of translation of judgment: 4 I.C. 579.

A printed copy of an order signed by the President of the Indian Union, which does not purport to be printed or published by Order of Government, is no proof of the order of the President. Such an order, when not proved thus under S. 78, Evidence Act, can of course be proved by the production of the original or by production of a certified copy under S. 77 of the Act, or possibly even by an affidavit of a responsible official. But if none of these courses are adopted, the order cannot be held to be proved: I.L.R. 29 Pat. 335: A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 265.

Birth certificate—Certified copy—Certified copy signed by Chief Executive Officer of Municipal Corporation—It is conclusive evidence unless disproved: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 292: (1968-69) 73 Cal.W.N. 877.

Public document—Register of births maintained by municipality is a public document—Certified copy of extract is admissible to prove contents of such public document: A.I.R. 1970 Mys. 305: (1970) 2 Mys.L.J. 15: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1584.

Sanctioned plan granted by the Municipality, held is a public document and it can be proved by producing a certified copy thereof: 1981 Mah.L.J. 397.

Certified true copies of the entries of the Public Hospital register, maintained in regular course of business as required by rules and regulations of medical department, held, are admissible: 1972 Mah.L.J. 710: A.I.R. 1971 Bom 304 (D.B.).

The certified copy of an Electoral Roll which is a public document is admissible in evidence under S. 77. [A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 158, Foll.]: A.I.R 1991 Ori. 166: (1990) 70 Cut.L.T. 510.

A copy signed and sealed by the registering officer and given under S. 57 of the Registration Act is no doubt admissible to prove the contents of the original document, but a copy which is not signed and sealed by the registering officer is clearly inadmissible in proof of the contents of the original document: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931.

The certified copy of the sale deed in respect of disputed land is a 'public document' and is, therefore, also admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original document: 1989 Cr.L.J. 1724: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 82; A.I.R. 1979 Gau. 14.

The register of money-lenders maintained in the office of Sub-Registrar in accordance with the provisions of the Bihar Money-Lenders Act, 1938, is a public document; thus, a certified true copy of the entry in such register is admissible in evidence to show that a person is a professional money-lender: A.I.R. 1974 Pat. 103 (D.B.).

The Registrar's office certainly keeps a public record of the exchange deeds registered in that office. The certified copy of the exchange deed, therefore, is a secondary evidence of the public record kept in the Registrar's Office. It is, therefore, admissible in evidence both under S. 65(e) or (f): (1991-1) 99 Punj.L.R. 129.

A certified copy of a registered copy is admissible to prove the contents of the original document only when conditions for the introduction of the secondary evidence are fulfilled: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 RaJ.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931.

Though the Register of Baptism does not fall under any of the classes mentioned in S. 74 and it is not a public document. But there is a provision in S. 82 which make applicable in India, the same presumptions which are recognised in England with regard to certain documents. They are declared to be admissible in the same manner as in England. The Register of Baptism will fall under S. 82 and a certified extract therefrom will be admissible in terms of S. 82: (1986) 99 Mad.L.W. 901: (1986) 2 M.L.J. 235.

A will, even after registration, does not become a public document; it remains a private document; its certified copy from the office of Registrar is admissible only for proving the contents of the original, but is not sufficient to dispense with the production and proof of the original document. Thus, a certified copy of the will cannot be produced to prove the document without proving loss of the original document: A.I.R. 1976 P.&H. 235: 1976 Rev.L.R. 93: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 21.

It is undoubtedly true that if a certified copy has been admitted into evidence without any objection having been raised by the other party that no case is made out for the introduction of the secondary evidence, the appellate Court would not permit its admissibility to be questioned before it on that ground. [A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 234 and 1969 Raj.L.W. 107, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931.

No objection can be taken to the admissibility of uncertified copies of revenue records in second appeal, when such documents had been received without objection before the first appellate Court: A.I.R. 1971 P.&H. 355.

Letter written to the Nazul Department in the Nagar Mahapalika becomes public document and, thus, a photocopy of it is not admissible; it is the certified copy which is admissible: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1988) 14 All.L.R. 814.

Though S. 139 of the Railways Act, 1890 permits proof of entries in records or other documents of Railway administration by production of a copy of such entries, before, however, such copies can be tendered and accepted as a proof of such entries, a certificate by the officer having custody of the records or other documents under his signature and stating that it is a true copy of the original entries and that such original entries are contained in the records or other documents of the Railway administration in his possession, has to be appended to that copy: A.I.R. 1983 Madh. Pra. 59: 1983 Jab.L.J. 197: 1983 M.P.L.J. 165.

Public record of a wakf deed, which is a private document, kept in the office of the Sub-Registrar is a public document as defined in S. 74(2); its certified copy is admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1991 Gau. 17.

The Check Memo which is required to be maintained by the officer in charge of the counting table is a document forming record of the acts of a public officer and, therefore, a certified copy thereof given by the Collector in whose custody the document is kept, can be admitted in evidence in proof of the contents of the original document: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 1863: 1975 U.J.(S.C.) 626.

A registered general power of attorney is a public document under S. 74(2); its certified

(1) Acts, orders or notifications of [1][the Central Government] in any of its departments, [2][or of the Crown Representative] or of any [3][State Government] or any department of any [3][State Government],—

1. Substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "the Executive Government of British India".

copy is per se admissible; it is not necessary to prove its existence by secondary evidence; no notice envisaged under S. 66 is, thus, necessary to be given to the party in whose possession or power the original power of attorney is: (1994-1) 106 Punj.L.R. 353; (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 551: 1989 Punj.L.J. 332: (1988) 2 Rev.L.R. 488.

Where Motor Accidents claims tribunal took into consideration the certified copy of the post mortem report of the deceased without examining the Doctor who prepared it, held, there was nothing wrong in the procedure adopted by the tribunal: A.I.R. 1991 Raj. 29.

There is no illegality where reliance is placed upon certified copies of the statements of witnesses recorded in criminal cases in separate proceeding in the motor accident claim case relating to the same accident. [(1966) 68 Punj.L.R. (Supp.) 101, Rel. on]: (1983) 85 Punj.L.R. 584.

There is no doubt that being public documents, certified copies of the Commissioner's report and inspection note in the earlier suit are admissible in evidence without further proof under S. 77 as proof of their contents; however, if the Commissioner's report was not confirmed in the earlier suit, it would be of no evidentiary value; and even if it was confirmed in the earlier suit, it might have been open to the parties who contested that report to call for the Commissioner for cross-examination in order to test its correctness, or to show that it was incorrect by some other evidence; it could not be brushed aside out of hand simply because it was a report made in an earlier suit and the party who relied upon it did not produce the Commissioner to prove that report in the present suit. As to the inspection note of the Presiding Officer, the report could be used to judge the reliability of evidence of witnesses in the subsequent case. Even the Commissioner's report could be primarily used for the same purpose; but none of them were substantive evidence on which plaintiff's case could be based: (1981) 7 All.L.R. 293. See also (1993) 2 An.L.T. 471, cited under S. 74, Note 1, supra.

A notification issued under the Travancore Forest Act is a public document and under S. 77, a certified copy may be produced in proof of it. The Chief Conservator of Forests as the Head of the Department is an officer competent to certify to the correctness of the copy in view of Ss. 78 and 79. [1966 Ker.L.T. 102 and 638, Disting.]: 1975 Ker.L.T. 839.

Where the accused remained in abscondence for more than 33 years and meanwhile the eye-witnesses had died and the record of the commitment proceedings was destroyed, but the certified copy of the commitment order showed that an order had been made to record proceedings under S. 512 of the Cr.P.Code, held, the statements made by the witnesses in the commitment proceedings were 'public document' as defined in S. 74; their certified copies could be granted under S. 76 and produced and used in proof of their contents vide S. 77: (1974) 76 Punj.L.R. 57 (D.B.).

The precise object of R. 260 of the Allahabad High Court Rules in prescribing that every certified copy shall indicate the date of application, the date of posting the notice and the date of delivery in words as well as in figures is to exclude all possibilities of tampering with these dates which play a crucial role in computing the period of limitation: A.I.R. 1991 All. 317: 1991 All.W.C. 800 (D.B.).

Warrant is a public document—It can be proved only by production of a certified copy: 1968 Cr.L.J. 758: A.I.R. 1968 Guj. 100.

1. Scope.—Section not exhaustive. See A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 316.

Reference to the District Gazetteer, in order to elucidate the history of a family, is admissible under S. 78: 3 U.P.L.R. (B.R.) 30. See also 170 I.C. 392: 39 P.L.R. 491 (Wajib-ul-arz).

The presumption attached to the correctness of official records cannot be taken away merely by assumptions or suggestions raising doubts: (1981) 51 Cut.L.T. 540.

Where the sanction for the prosecution for an offence under S. 19(f), Arms Act, purported to have been given by the District Magistrate was signed by him but the seal of the District Magistrate was not affixed to the document; Held, that mere production of the document was not sufficient but it was necessary to prove the sanction by examining the sanctioning authority: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 50: 1956 Cr.L.J. 226.

With respect to the existence of certain tauzi numbers, reliance was placed on a report published by Government and this report was filed by the party relying on it but was returned by the Court thinking that it was a matter of which it was entitled to take judicial notice under Ss. 56 and 57. There was a reference to this report in the judgement of the Court, held, that the Court should have regarded the report as a public document under S. 78 and admitted informally in evidence and marked it as an exhibit: A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 334: 170 I.C. 61.

State Amendment—[West Bengal].—After S. 78, insert the following new section:—

"78-A. Copies of public documents, to be as good as original documents in certain cases.—Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act or any other law for the time being in force, where any public documents concerning any areas within West Bengal have been kept in Pakistan, then copies of such public documents shall, on being authenticated in such manner as may be prescribed from time to time by the State Government by notification in the Official Gazette, be deemed to have taken the place of, and to be, the original documents from which such copies were made and all references to the original documents shall be construed as including references to such copies"—Act 20 of 1960, S. 3 (w.e.f. 5-1-1961).

---

2. Sub-section (1).—Presumption as to authorised text of Indian Acts, see A.I.R. 1927 P.. 142: 97 I.C. 316; as to Government order nd notification in Official Gazette, see A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 980: 53 M.L.J. 603.

Notification not published in Government Gazette as required by law cannot be proved under this section: A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 52: 170 I.C. 772. Proof of Acts of the Indian Legislature: 93 I.C. 566: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 65: 49 M.L.J. 363.

A mere production of a notification issued by a proper authority of Government is sufficient to prove it under S. 78: I.L.R. (1953) Madh. Bh. 67: A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 84.

A comparison of S. 57 and S. 78 goes to show that acts, orders or notifications of the Central or any State Government require proof in the manner prescribed by S. 78, unless they amount to law in force and can be taken judicial notice of under S. 57. [A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 296, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1977 Madh. Pra. 68: 1977 Jab.L.J. 124: 1977 M.P.L.J. 176: 1977 Cr.L.J. 597 (F.B.).

A Court is not entitled to take notice of a notification published in a Gazette unless the fact of its publication is proved in the manner prescribed by S. 78, Evidence Act. In a suit against the Union of India owning the South Eastern Railway, the written statement was signed by the Deputy General Manager. Private copies of the Gazette notification authorising the Deputy General Manager to sign were produced in Court but the Court did not accept them and the written statement was thrown out. The original notifications were produced in the High Court in revision. Held, that the view of the trial Court that the private copies could not be accepted was correct; that the High Court could take notice of it on production of the original notification in the Gazette authorising the Deputy Manager to sign and verify written statements and act in all judicial proceedings on behalf of defendant Railway: 1958 Nag.L.J. (Notes) 64.

The specific mode for proving public documents like any Government Act, order or notification laid down in S. 78 is either by a copy certified by Head of the Department or by a publication printed under the authority of such Government; thus, a mere cyclostyled covering letter accompanied by a similar copy of the Rules by itself is no proof. [A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 780, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1987 All. 83: 1986 All.W.C. 692: (1986) 12 All.L.R. 343: 1987 All.C.J. 35.

It clearly follows from Ss. 37, 78, 81 and 114(e) that the issuance of a notification is in the eye of law either notice or imputed knowledge of its contents to the citizens in general. This obviously cannot be so in the case of a mere order. The line which divides a mere order or decision of the Government or authority from formal notification is sharp and the dividing point thereof would be the publication or the formal declaration to the public or otherwise of the same. An order derives its sanction or source when the authority vested with the lawful power to pass the same appends its signature thereto and it is only the factum of proclamation or publication in the gazette or other prescribed modes of publicity which alone would give such an order or decision, the indicia or the necessary stamping of a notification. Till then it would remain merely an order or decision and it may not travel beyond the knowledge of its author and might well remain completely cloistered: A.I.R. 1984 P.&H. 87: (1983) 85 Punj.L.R. 741: 1983 Punj.L.J. 549: 1984 Rev.L.R. 1: I.L.R. (1984) 1 P.&H. 78 (F.B.).

Judicial notice can be taken of a notification issued by the Central Government under S. 7(1) of the Telegraph Wires (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1950, empowering certain officers to make complaints in respect of offences under the Act, when a book published under the authority of the Central Government which contains the said notification as well as the relevant Gazette in which the notification was printed were produced in the Court. [A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 296, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1977 Madh. Pra. 68: 1977 Jab.L.J. 124: 1977 M.P.L.J. 176: 1977 Cr.L.J. 597 (F.B.).

A notification which is issued by the Central Government or the State Government or by a department of the Government is a public document and a certified copy of it may be produced in order to prove the existence, conditions or contents of that document under S. 65 of the Evidence Act. Under S. 78 such a copy has to be certified by the head of the department which issued the notification. It can also be taken into evidence if the official gazette in which the notification purported to have been printed by order of the Government has been produced for inspection of the Court: 1960 B.L.J.R. 12: 1960 Cr.L.J. 634: A.I.R. 1960 Pat. 213.

Kerala Forest Act (IV of 1962)—Offence under S. 27—Proof of notification under S. 19 necessary—No judicial notice can be taken—Notification is public document—Proof—Nature of: 1966 Ker.L.J. 76.

A notification issued under the Travancore Forest Act is a public document and under S. 77, a certified copy may be produced in proof of it. The Chief Conservator of Forests as the Head of the Department is an officer competent to certify to the correctness of the copy in view of Ss. 78 and 79. [1966 Ker.L.T. 102 and 638, Disting.]: 1975 Ker.L.T. 839.

Reserve Forest—Notification as to—Genuineness—Presumption. See 1983 M.L.J. (Cr.) 295 (Ker.).

A cyclostyled copy of a typed notification issued under Orissa Forest Act, 1972 attested as true copy by the Divisional Forest Officer cannot be said to be a document properly authenticated as required by S. 21(3) of that Act; 'Authentication' is not mere attestation of a copy as true copy: 1993 Cr.L.J. 2128 (Ori.).

An extract from a newspaper about a Government notification is inadmissible. A copy of the Government Gazette should be produced: 1930 All.L.J. 1535: A.I.R. 1931 All. 12.

Authentication of the publication of an Act or Ordinance is not an authentication of the publication of rules made under the Act or Ordinance and published in a Gazette of subsequent date: A.I.R. 1953 Raj. 145: I.L.R. (1953) 3 Raj. 128.

Order of Government affixed with Government seal, see A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 316.

3. Sub-section (2).—A report in a newspaper being only hearsay evidence and a newspaper being not one of the documents referred to in S. 78(2) by which an allegation of fact can be proved, a statement of fact contained in a newspaper is inadmissible in evidence in the absence of the maker of the statement appearing in Court and deposing to have perceived the fact reported: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1274: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1783: (1988) 2 Crimes 107.

Reports of the proceedings of a State Legislative Assembly during the passage of impugned statutes are admissible as public documents under S. 78(2) of the Evidence Act. It is true that reports and speeches in Parliament are generally inadmissible. But the legal position may be different if the bona fides of the Parliament can be and is challenged: I.L.R. (1953) Cut. 71: A.I.R. 1953 Ori. 185. See also A.I.R. 1953 Him. Pra. 41.

See also A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 440: 1988 (Supp.) S.C.C. 401, cited under S. 57, Note 3, supra.

Resolutions of Parliament—Mode of proof—The Volumes of the Official 'Parliamentary Debates' which show that certain resolutions were passed by the Parliament are adequate legal proof of the resolutions by the Parliament. The proceedings of Parliament fall under either the second or the fourth of the categories of public documents mentioned in S. 78. The expression 'Journals' in S. 78 is to be given a broad and general meaning and in its application to Parliament it should not necessarily be confined to the Journals published by the two Houses which contain a formal record of the business. The official Parliamentary Debates are also 'Journals' within S. 78: I.L.R. (1942) Kar. (F.C.) 56: (1941-42) 46 Cal.W.N. (F.R.) 9: A.I.R. 1942 F.C. 22.

4. Sub-section (5).—Printed proceedings of a Municipality themselves would not be sufficient legal proof unless they answer the description of a printed book purporting to be published under the authority of the committee as required by S. 78: 30 I.C. 643: 16 Cr.L.J. 659 (C.). See also (1912-13) 17 Cal.W.N. 531: 18 I.C. 651.

PRESUMPTIONS AS TO DOCUMENTS

79. Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies.—The Court shall presume [1][to be genuine] every document purporting to be a certificate, certified

1. Inserted by the A.O. 1948.

---

5. Sub-section (6).—Per Subha Rao, J. (Majority expressing no opinion).—S. 78(6) of the Evidence Act makes it clear that apart from the two certificates—One by the legal keeper of the original document and the other by the Council General—There shall also be proof of the character of the foreign judgment according to the law of the foreign country before it can be admitted. It is a condition precedent. Proof of this condition can be by direct or circumstantial evidence. Proof can also be given by placing before the Court facts giving rise to presumption rebuttable or irrebuttable. S. 86 of the Evidence Act lays down that a Court may presume the genuineness and accuracy of any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of any foreign country, if such a copy is duly certified in the manner and according to the rules in use in the country for certification of copies of judicial records. To give rise to this presumption it is not necessary that the judicial record of the foreign country should have already been admitted in evidence. While S. 78(6) lays down three conditions for admitting a foreign judgment in evidence, the admission of the judgment is not a condition precedent for drawing the requisite presumption under S. 86. The presumption may be drawn before the said judgment is admitted and by virtue of presumption of genuineness of the copy of the judgment arising under S. 86 the third condition under S. 78(6), viz., the character of the document according to the law of the foreign country may be said to have been proved and the judgment may be admitted: (1964) 66 Bom.L.R. 402: (1964) 2 S.C.A. 1: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 538.

All the three conditions mentioned in the sub-section have to be satisfied, before a foreign judgment is admitted in evidence: I.L.R. (1991) 2 Ker. 231.

As to records of a German Court, see 14 Cal.L.J. 375; (1910-11) 15 Cal.W.N. 1053. The proof required by S. 78(6) is for the purpose of the Court being in a position to decide whether a document is a document which falls within the definition of 'public documents' in S. 74, because unless the character of the document is that it is an act of a public officer, legislative, judicial or executive, it would not be a public document. The Court should not insist upon proof of a matter which is self-evident: (1959) 61 Bom.L.R. 333: A.I.R. 1959 Bom. 414.

Copy of birth entry in record of Town Committee of a town situated in Pakistan, is not admissible in evidence, in absence of attestation by High Commissioner for India in Pakistan, to prove date of birth before Court in India—Unproved copy is not admissible even for granting temporary injunction: I.L.R. (1962) 2 Punj. 597: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 104.

O. 13 of the High Court (Punjab) Order, 1947 clearly takes the judgment and decree of the Lahore High Court passed before 15-8-1947, out of the purview of S. 86 and for this very reason the rigors of S. 78(6) shall not apply to the same. Thus, where a certified copy was originally prepared and certified by the supervisor copying agency of the Lahore High Court and was then certified to be a true copy by the examiner copy supply section and later attested by the First Secretary to Deputy High Commission for India in Pakistan at Lahore, held, same were admissible even if they did not fulfil the requirements of Ss. 78(6) and 86. [A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 86, Disting.]: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 118: 1987 Rev.L.R. 449.

Proceedings before Rehabilitation Authorities—Even if strict rules of evidence may be deemed to apply to proceedings, authorities have no jurisdiction to ask for any other mode of proof for proving public document of a foreign country than one prescribed by S.78(6) of Evidence Act, 1872: 1967 Cur.L.J. 836 (Punj.).

Section 79—Notes.

[See also Notes under S. 76, supra].

Under S. 79 a Court is bound to draw the presumption that a certified copy of a document is genuine and also that the officer signed it in the official character which he claimed in the said document. But such a presumption is permissible only if the certified copy is substantially in the form and purported to be copy, or other document, which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact and which purports to be duly certified by any officer [1][of the Central Government or of a State Government, or by any officer [2][in the State of Jammu and Kashmir] who is duly authorized thereto by the Central Government]:

Provided that such document is substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in that behalf.

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified, held, when he signed it, the official character which he claims in such paper.

1. The original words beginning from "in British India" and ending with the words "to be genuine" have been successively amended by the A.O. 1937, A.O. 1948 and A.O. 1950 to read as above.

2. Substituted by Act 3 of 1951, S. 3 and Sch., for "in a Part B State".

executed in the manner provided by law in that behalf. To put it differently if a certified copy was executed substantially in the form and in the manner provided by law, the Court raises a rebuttable presumption in regard to its genuineness. Where, therefore, a Patwari issues a certified copy of Khatauni without complying with the provisions of law governing its issue, the Court is not bound to draw the presumption in regard to its genuineness: 1959 All.L.J. 557: 1959 Cr.L.J. 1223: A.I.R. 1959 S.C. 960.

Before raising the presumption of the certified copy's genuineness, the certified copy must be shown to have been executed substantially in the form and manner provided by law; that would be a check on the officer certifying it to be a true copy to satisfy himself about the original's authenticity and accuracy of the copy he certifies to be true. [A.I.R. 1951 All. 816, Dissent. from; A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 318, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

As regards a certified copy, the statutory presumption of its correctness must be drawn under S. 79 of the evidence Act. It is open to the other party either to prove by summoning the original document that the copy was incorrect or to show that copy was not issued by a competent authority or was issued without complying with the provisions of law governing its issue. It is only then that the Court will not be bound to draw the presumption in regard to its genuineness: 1960 Jab.L.J. 122: 1960 M.P.C. 45: 1960 M.P.L.J. 424.

Certified copy of document can be admitted without any formal proof: 1970 All.W.R. (H.C.) 69.

The combined effect of Ss. 35, 65(e), 76, 77 and 79 is to enable the proof of public documents by the certified copies of the extracts therefrom: A.I.R. 1982 Ker. 232.

A certified copy of the statement of a witness is to be presumed under Ss. 79 and 80 to be correct and genuine unless rebutted by the other party: 1981 R.D. 126(2).

The original of a public document is also required to be proved; otherwise there would be no check whatever, by scrutiny or examination, of its authenticity either by the Court or its officers; neither S. 67 nor S. 68 make any exception in favour of public documents. [A.I.R. 1951 All. 816, Dissent. from; A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 318, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1973 Bom. 14: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 505: 1972 Mah.L.J. 816.

Ceiling case—Certified copy of Kutumbh register—S. 79, in terms, does not apply to such copy: 1979 All.L.J. 963.

Where the defendant resisted a suit for permanent injunction to restrain him from interfering with the plaintiff's possession over agricultural land by claiming to be a sub-tenant substantiated by the Patwari's entries in the revenue records, effected after the lis, held, though S. 117 of the M.P. Land Revenue Code, 1959 raises a presumption of correctness of land records entries unless the contrary was proved, but that presumption is confined only to the land records prepared in the manner prescribed, that after inviting objections and disposing them off before finalising the entries. Entries based on the Patwari's observations at site or information have a weak presumption and are rebuttable; in such cases it has to be proved that the Patwari had signed the copy in his official capacity and issued it in the prescribed manner; it is only then that S. 79 of the Evidence Act would have been attracted and a presumption drawn about its being a genuine and not a spurious document: A.I.R. 1995 Madh. Pra. 134.

A copy of a letter of sanction, headed from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal and signed by an officer for the Chief Secretary, cannot be regarded as a certified copy under S. 76: I.L.R. 50 Cal. 135: A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 298. As to proof of certificate of visitors of lunatic asylum, see I.L.R. 63 Cal. 425.

Execution and authorship of document proof of—Registration Act, 1908, S. 60(2)—Certificate of registration—Genuineness must be presumed under S. 79 of Evidence Act—Suit for eviction by vendee of suit house—Plaintiff held succeeded in proving the sale: I.L.R. (1963) 13 Raj. 954: A.I.R. 1963 Raj. 234.

Entry in death register—Register is a public document—Presumption of correctness attaches—Heavy onus lies on party who wants to displace the presumption—Held, on review of evidence, that the onus was not discharged: 1965 B.L.J.R. 738: A.I.R. 1966 Pat. 231.

Original sale deed said to have been eaten away by white ants—Certified copy of sale deed marked as exhibit in trial Court—No objection raised by the other side. Witness deposing as to the fact of sale—Question, held, could not be agitated as to the mode of proof in appeal: A.I.R. 1970 Pat. 209: 1970 B.L.J.R. 8 (D.B.).

Where a carbon copy of the trial Court's order is issued as directed by the Court at the instance of the Counsel for the party on payment of requisite charges and complying with all other requirements of a certified copy except for the certificate of being a true copy, held, 'duly certified' need not be by express words of certification; the copy on the face of it not being unofficial or informal but an authentic copy issued by the Court under its authority, it could be treated as a duly certified copy; the law under S. 79 has created a legal presumption in favour of its genuineness when it substantially and not strictly complies with the provisions relating to certification of copies; S. 76 prescribes no particular form of authentication; the carbon copy tantamounts to a certified copy of the order: A.I.R. 1986 Ker. 196: 1986 Ker.L.J. 1069.

Official records like an order of the Court are much too sacrosanct to be brought into controversy by adducing evidence pro and con as to what they mean: 1953 Nag.L.J. 367: A.I.R. 1953 Nag. 288: I.L.R. (1953) Nag. 787.

R. 260 of the Allahabad High Court Rules requires, with a view to eliminate the possibility of interpolation, that every certified copy shall indicate the date of application, the date of posting the notice and the date of delivery in words as well as in figures; where certified copies of the judgement and the formal order were issued in utter disregard of this rule as they did not contain the dates in words, held, the lack of supervision and control of the copying section was obvious; the District Judge directed to take necessary steps for ensuring effective supervision: A.I.R. 1991 All. 317: 1991 All.W.C. 800.

Minutes of a meeting recorded by the company—Whether evidence of the proceedings. See (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 531.

First information report is a public document and in view of S. 79, a presumption has to be raised that the Police official who had recorded the first information report had done so in a regular manner in due performance of his duty: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 119: 1981 Hindu L.R. 16.

Where documents had been filed in the Nazul Department of the Nagar Mahapalika, held, they became public documents; they can be proved by their certified copy and not by a photocopy; the photocopy is inadmissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1989 All. 17: (1988) 14 All.L.R. 814.

Where in a land acquisition reference for enhancement of compensation, the Court below took the view that the copies of those sale deeds (exemplars) of which the vendors or vendees had not been examined as witness in Court were inadmissible in evidence, held, in view of S. 51-A of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 as inserted by the Land Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1984, certified copies of the sale deeds filed by the parties were admissible in evidence. A notification issued under the Travancore Forest Act is a public document and under S. 77, a certified copy may be produced in proof of it. The Chief Conservator of Forests as the Head of the Department is an officer competent to certify to the correctness of the copy in view of Ss. 78 and 79. [1966 Ker.L.T. 102 and 638, Disting.]: 1975 Ker.L.T. 839.

Petitioner appeared in interview for the Post of District Munsif-cum-Judicial Magistrate—His result was withheld on the ground that the date of birth given in the S.S.L.C. as 29-2-1954 was not correct as the year 1954 was not a leap year—The petitioner made efforts to verify his correct date of birth and found from the horoscope and Baptism certificate that he was born on 9-12-1954 and, accordingly, filed an application before the concerned Judicial Magistrate under the Registration of Birth and Death Act, 1969 and an order was passed by the Judicial Magistrate that his correct date of birth was 9-12-1954—Held, in view of said certificate, the Public Service Commission was not justified in

80. Presumption as to documents produced as record of evidence.—Whenever any document is produced before any Court purporting to be a record or memorandum of the evidence, or of any part of the evidence, given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any officer authorized by law to take such evidence or to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person, taken in accordance with law, and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, or by any such officer as aforesaid, the Court shall presume—that the document is genuine; that any statement as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true, and that such evidence, statement or confession was duly taken.

1. Scope.—Presumption of genuineness when raised, see I.L.R. 10 All. 174; I.L.R. 15 Mad. 63: 2 Weir 794; (1907-08) 12 Cal.W.N. 845; I.L.R. 18 Cal. 129. As to the nature and extent of presumption under the section, see 93 I.C. 978: A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 605; 94 I.C. 985: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 489.

S. 80 gives legal sanction to the maxim 'Omnia presumuntur rite esse acta' with regard to documents taken in the course of a judicial proceeding. The presumptions to be raised under this section, which deals with the subject of deposition of witnesses and confessions of prisoners and accused persons, are considerably wider than those under S. 79 of the Evidence Act. Where O. 18, R. 5, C.P.Code, has been complied with in recording the evidence of a defence witness, the Court of appeal is bound to accept the evidence of the witness as recorded as correct under S. 80, Evidence Act, until it is proved to be untrue. Where there was never any challenge by the defendants either in the Court of appeal or any affidavit filed disclosing where the inaccuracy lay, the Court of appeal is bound to accept the statement of the witness and it commits a grave error of procedure in taking upon itself the duty to examine the correctness or otherwise of the statement of the witness in the absence of any challenge by the defendants: 1956 B.L.J.R. 197: A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 293.

S. 80 applies to: (i) any document produced before any Court, purporting to be a record or memoranda of evidence or of any part of the evidence given by witness in judicial proceedings, or (ii) to a document produced before any officer authorized by law to take such evidence, or (iii) to a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person, taken in accordance with law and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, or by any such officer as aforesaid. Thus, a statement made under the proviso to Cl. 2 of the Goa, Daman and Diu (Citizenship) Order, 1962 of his intention to retain Portuguese citizenship / nationality, held, is not a document produced in Court as required by (i); it is not evidence within the meaning of S. 3 of the Evidence Act nor is it evidence taken by any officer authorized to take evidence spoken of by (ii); neither is it a statement of a prisoner nor an accused person so as to be covered by (iii) above; S. 80 is not at all attracted: A.I.R. 1972 Goa 25.

Presumption of genuineness of a document does not include the presumption that the document was printed or published by the particular person by whom it purports to have been published: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 457: 22 M.L.J. 73.

S. 80 does not deal with the questions of the admissibility of documents referred to therein but simply dispenses with the necessity of there formal proof by raising the presumption that everything in connection with them had been legally and correctly done: (1928-29) 33 Cal.W.N. 1121: 50 Cal.L.J. 106: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 617 (F.B.).

A document not admitted in evidence is not to be relied on: (1982) 54 Cut.L.T. 399.

The presumption of correctness under S. 80, cannot attach to the record of a Court which was not competent to try the case.

When the Court was not competent to try the case, it was really not functioning as a Court at all and the Court in the subsequent proceeding before which the record is sought to be produced must proceed on the basis, that the Judge presiding over the incompetent Court was recording statements of witnesses not as a Court the functions of which he could not, in law, perform. That, however, does not mean that there is no other means of proving that such statements were made. In every case where a statement is said to have been made on a previous occasion, the Court has to look to the evidence that had been given to see whether that previous statement is proved to have been made: A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 535: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1348.

Conviction based on statement made under S. 171-A of Sea Customs Act—Recording of statement in English—Failure to interpret it to illiterate accused—Conviction improper: 1969 Cr.L.J. 311: A.I.R. 1969 Raj. 48.

Report of ruling appearing in Newspaper not relevant and no presumption can arise: 1969 Cr.L.J. 1120: A.I.R. 1969 Cal. 451.

When the signature on the postal acknowledgment supposed to be that of the defendant was found by the Court to be not of the defendant and the defendant had denied having been served with the summons, held, the presumption arising under the Evidence Act stood rebutted and thereafter it was for the plaintiff to prove by leading evidence that the letter containing summons was in fact tendered to and received by the defendant; such evidence may take any form, either by examining the postman or an expert or otherwise. However, in the absence of any such evidence, it would not be said that the plaintiff had proved that the summons was served on the defendant. [A.I.R. 1968 Bom. 367, Rel. on]: (1983) 2 Bom.C.R. 480.

Where in the record-of-rights, opposite party No. 2 stands recorded, under the law, a presumption of correctness of the entry arises and, therefore, until the contrary is established, it must be assumed on the basis of the statutory presumption that opposite party No. 2 was the purchaser: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 177: (1975) 1 Cut.W.R. 198 (D.B.).

2. Deposition of a witness given in judicial proceeding.—A certified copy of the statement of a witness is to be presumed under Ss. 79 and 80 to be correct and genuine unle rebutted by the other party: 1981 R.D. 126(2

The recital in a judgment of a statemer made by the witness is not the same thing a record of the deposition of the witness. No can such recital be accepted as evidence unde S. 80: 2 Cr.L.J. 500: 56 I.C. 660 (P.).

There is no illegality where reliance placed upon certified copies of the statemen of witnesses recorded in criminal cases i separate proceeding in the motor accider claim case relating to the same accident. [(196 68 Punj.L.R. (Supp.) 101, Rel. on]: (1983) 8 Punj.L.R. 584.

Statements recorded under S. 164, Cr.I Code are admissible in evidence and pr sumption of genuineness under S. 80 of th Evidence Act attaches to such statements: 199 Cr.L.J. 372 (Cal.) (D.B.).

Where there is substantial compliance wit the requirements of S. 164(3) of the Cr.P.Cod reliance can be placed on the provisions Ss. 29 and 80 of the Evidence Act and any no compliance with the provisions of S. 164 of th Cr.P.Code may be regularised by applicatio of S. 533 of that Code. [I.L.R. (1970) Cut. 64 Overruled, Observation of Mohanti, J. in I.L. (1975) Cut. 1557 held not good law; 1977 Cr.L 1018 (Ori.), Approved]: A.I.R. 1978 Ori. 1 1977 Cr.L.J. 2053: I.L.R. The statement of an accused person r corded by a Magistrate in a Native State inadmissible unless the Magistrate himse deposes to it in person: 24 I.C. 169: (1914) Bom.L.R. 261.

The absence of a certificate by the Judge the foot of the deposition of its having bee read over, etc., does not deprive it of th presumption under S. 80: I.L.R. 46 Cal. 895: I.C. 660.

Presumption under S. 80 can be raised the deposition is read over by the witne himself in Court: I.L.R. 46 Cal. 895: (1918-1 23 Cal.W.N. 661; A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 605: I.L.R Lah. 415. (See also C.P.Code, O. 18, R. 5).

A statement not read over to or correct by the witness in accordance with law is n admissible against the person making t same: 13 Cr.L.J. 569: 15 I.C. 985. See also Cr.L.J. 500: 56 I.C. 660; 142 I.C. 653: A.I.R. 19 Cal. 190; 18 Nag.L.R. 192: 68 I.C. 36: A.I.R. 19 Nag. 39. As to depositions before Comm sioner, see 63 P.L.R. 1900 (Cr.).

Deposition of witness taken by special Judge appointed under ordinance which is ultra vires is not one recorded by an officer authorised by law to take evidence; nor can it be said that the deposition was one taken in judicial proceeding within the meaning of S. 80. See A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 159. See also 46 Cr.L.J. 692; I.L.R. (1945) 1 Cal. 326.

The evidentiary value of the statement of a witness in another judicial proceeding as to the age of a person is very little. A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 617. Before a previous admission can be used against a party it must be put to him and an opportunity afforded to him to explain if it is capable of explanation: 12 L.L.J. 161.

Under S. 80 of the Evidence Act, the presumption can be made only as to the genuineness of the statement recorded in a deposition. But no presumption can be made regarding the identity of the deponent. But if the deponent admits that on a particular date in a particular suit his deposition had been recorded and a true copy of such statement is produced in that Court, then no further proof of identity is needed. The Court can turn to the deposition itself to find out whether there is inherent evidence of the identity of the deponent: A.I.R. 1951 Madh. Bh. 92.

Signature of Judge—Depositions of witnesses not signed by Judge—Record of those depositions not denied—Depositions signed by witnesses themselves—Deposition not invalid due to omission of Judge's signature: (1967) 2 An.W.R. 66.

Deposition of witnesses not signed by Judge—Presumption under S. 80 that he signed it cannot be raised: (1967) 2 An.W.R. 66.

Where the accused remained in abscondence for more than 33 years and meanwhile the eye-witnesses had died and the record of the commitment proceedings was destroyed, but the certified copy of the commitment order showed that an order had been made to record proceedings under S. 512 of the Cr.P.Code, held, the statements made by the witnesses in the commitment proceedings were 'public document' as defined in S. 74; the presumption of genuineness was available to the certified copies of depositions under S. 80: (1974) 76 Punj.L.R. 57 (D.B.).

3. Confessional statement.—[See also Ss. 24, 25 and 26, supra]. S. 80 provides that a document purporting to be a confession by a prisoner or accused taken in accordance with law and purporting to be signed by a Judge or Magistrate, or by any officer authorised by law to take evidence, the Court shall presume that it is genuine; that the statement as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, is true and that such statement or confession was duly taken: (1975) 41 Cut.L.T. 961: 1976 Cr.L.J. 325 (D.B.).

S. 80 merely says that the Court will presume that the confession was duly recorded and that the circumstances under which the confession was recorded are such as have been set down in the record made by the Magistrate. It says nothing about there being any presumption regarding the voluntariness of the confession. The fact that the accused pleads not guilty and retracts his confession is a circumstance to indicate that the case of the accused was that his confession was not a voluntary one: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 487: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 625.

Under S. 80, confession by any prisoner or by any accused taken in accordance with law and purporting to be signed by the examining Magistrate shall be presumed to be so made. The officer who recorded the confession may be examined as a witness: 38 I.C. 1005: 2 P.L.R. 80: 18 Cr.L.J. 445.

A Magistrate recording a confession under S. 164 of the Cr.P.Code or holding an identification parade does so as a matter of duty and discretion; he does not act as a Court; and where the identification memo prepared by the Magistrate had been lost and identification was sought to be proved by its copy prepared by the Investigating Officer, held, it could not be so proved; it had to be proved by the Magistrate from the original: 1974 Raj.L.W. 192: 1974 W.L.N. 78.

Though a confession duly recorded by a Magistrate may be presumed to be voluntary and as such admissible, such admissibility is subject to the restrictions imposed by S. 24: I.L.R. 61 Cal. 399: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 636.

Where a Judge is of opinion, having regard to all the evidence, that a confession recorded by a Magistrate had been induced by torture, his duty is not to leave the confession to the jury but to exclude it entirely from the evidence. There is a patent error of law in his procedure in leaving the confession for consideration of the Jury, although he does his best to tell them that it is worthless: 85 Cal.L.J. 93: A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 331.

Where a confession was recorded during investigation by a second class Magistrate not specifically empowered under S. 164 of the Cr.P.Code, held, the confession was not admissible; no oral evidence in respect thereof can be led either. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 253 and A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 358, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 2077: 1972 Cr.L.J. 1317.

If the Magistrate has put to the accused all the necessary questions to satisfy himself that the confession was voluntary and also appended the necessary certificate, held, it was not necessary to examine the Magistrate as a witness, in absence of anything justifying his examination: A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1165: 1981 Cr.L.J. 628: (1981) 2 S.C.C. 224.

Confessions recorded in Indian Native State can be used in British India under the provisions of S. 80, and they may be accepted as admissible for prosecution in British India: I.L.R. (1938) All. 875: A.I.R. 1938 All. 625.

4. Identification memorandum.—[See also S. 9, supra]. An identification memo, is not a record of evidence of a witness within the meaning of S. 80 and, consequently, does not prove itself. A presumption under S. 80 could only arise if the memorandum of identification amounted to 'evidence' within the meaning of S. 3 of the Evidence Act. Statements recorded by a Magistrate in the identification memo, under S. 164, Cr.P.Code, are neither made by witnesses in judicial proceeding nor are they made on oath or affirmation, in order to amount to 'evidence' within S. 3. The use of the expression 'statement' or 'confession' in S. 80 in juxtaposition to a prisoner of an accused person, and the context in which those words occur, point to the conclusion that it was intended that a statement as well as a confession of a prisoner or an accused person duly taken by a Magistrate was to be presumed to be genuine. It is not correct to say that the word 'statement' occurring in S. 80 has reference to a statement made by a witness as distinguished from a 'confession' made by a prisoner or an accused person: 1963 All.L.J. 61: 1963 All.W.R. (H.C.) 42: 1963 All. Cr. R. 31: (1963) 2 Cr. L.J. 1: A.I.R. 1963 All. 308.

Test identification parade—Who can hold—Legal effect of identification memo: 1960 All.L.J. 595: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 340: A.I.R. 1961 All. 153.

Presumption under S. 80 arises only in case of evidence; a memorandum of identification is not evidence under S. 3; the identification memo would be inadmissible in evidence unless proved by the Magistrate. [A.I.R. 1961 All. 153, Dissent. from]: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 184: I.L.R. (1970) 20 Raj. 439: 1971 Cr.L.J. 974.

Memorandum of identification proceedings held by Magistrate acting under S. 164, Cr.P.Code—S. 80 does not apply—Not admissible without proof: (1964) 2 Cr.L.J. 1: I.L.R. (1964) 1 All. 405: A.I.R. 1964 All. 290 (F.B.).

Memorandum of identification proceeding cannot be accepted without proof. [A.I.R. 1963 All. 308 and A.I.R. 1964 All. 290 (F.B.), Foll.]: 1984 Cr.L.J. 527.

5. Dying declaration.—[See also S. 32, supra]. The presumption under S. 80 that the circumstances under which a document appears to be taken are true applies to a dying declaration to which a certificate is appended by the Magistrate who recorded it, that it was read over to him and declared to be correct: I.L.R. 40 Bom. 97: (1915) 17 Bom.L.R. 881. See also 17 Cr.L.J. 23; 9 Punj. Re. 1900 (Cr.); 11 Bom. H.C.R. 247; I.L.R. 56 All. 750: A.I.R. 1934 All. 340.

The presumption mentioned in S. 80 could not arise in a case where the statement of a person as to the cause of his death is recorded by a Magistrate not authorised by law to record it, and it has to be proved. But where it is recorded as authorised by law, it is not necessary that it should be proved by the Magistrate who recorded it, when the statement is not made in the presence of the accused. All that is required is that there must be proof of the identity of the person who made the statement: 1941 Rang.L.R. 258: A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 301.

If a person whose dying declaration is recorded by a Magistrate in hospital dies subsequently, the statement made by him in hospital can only be proved by the Magistrate who has recorded it or some one else who heard that statement. But when that person survives and gives evidence at the trial, his statement is admissible in evidence for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting him. It is not necessary that the recording Magistrate should be called as a 'witness to prove the statement'. A statement recorded by a Magistrate under S. 164, Cr.P.Code, in the course of an investigation is evidence in a judicial proceeding, which under S. 80 of the Evidence Act can be proved without calling the person recording the same: 1941 Pat.W.N. 622.

81. Presumption as to Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents.—The Court shall presume the genuineness of every document purporting to be the London Gazette or [1][any Official Gazette, or the Government Gazette] of any colony, dependency or possession of the British Crown, or to be a newspaper or journal, or to be a copy of a private Act of Parliament [2][of the United Kingdom] printed by the Queen's Printer and of every document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person, if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody.

See A.I.R. 1984 P.&H. 87, cited under S. 78, supra.

The reports of debates in the Legislative Assembly can only be evidence of what was stated by the speakers in that Assembly, and are not evidence of any facts contained in the speeches: 41 Mad.L.W. 665: A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 34 (P.C.).

Reports and Gazetteers are not strictly evidence of the truth of all the statements contained in them although they may be read for what they are worth: (1939-40) 44 Cal.W.N. 873. Presumption as to genuineness does not include presumption that it was printed and published by the person mentioned in it: I.L.R. 36 Mad. 457: 12 I.C. 961. Presumption as to genuineness of the specimen, see 120 I.C. 798: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 371.

Question whether math is 'public' or 'private' within the meaning of S. 6(7)—Gazetteer can be consulted on matters of public history—Statements in such Gazetteer can be relied on as providing historical material, practice followed by math and its head: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 256.

Quarry—Granite hillock within patta land of claimant—Subsisting right to minerals under—Perishability of that right by Nizam's Firman—Relevant Firman not produced—Government circulars—On construction, held that there was no abrogation of aforesaid right and no repeal of S. 63—Claimant entitled to compensation in respect of granite: (1967) 1 Mys.L.J. 159.

Presumption under Ss. 81 and 114(e), Evidence Act apply to publication—S. 5(2) of Madras General Clauses Act complied—Effect of—Gazette held published on date it bore—Assuming publication sometime later—Act not rendered unconstitutional or invalid: I.L.R. (1961) 1 Andh. Pra. 296.

There is no presumption that whatever is published in an Official Gazette is known to citizens or members of public right from the date of publication: (1990) 1 Karn.L.J. (S.N.) 67: I.L.R. (1989) Karn. 920.

The Gazette of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. III published in 1879, is admissible under S. 35 read with S. 81 of the Evidence Act, 1872. The Gazette is admissible being official record evidencing public affairs and the Court may presume their contents as genuine. The statement contained therein can be taken into account to discover the historical material contained therein and the facts stated therein is evidence under S. 45 and the Court may in conjunction with other evidence and circumstances take into consideration in adjudging the dispute in question, namely, whether Kalika Mataji temple was a public trust, though it may not be treated as conclusive evidence: A.I.R. 1995 S.C. 167.

There must be an assumption that whatever is published in the Government owned paper correctly represents the actual state of affairs relating to Governmental business until the same is successfully challenged and the real state of affairs is shown to be different from what is stated in the Government publication: A.I.R. 1986 S.C. 2045: 1986 Cr.L.J. 1922: (1986) 2 S.C.C. 716.

Newspaper reports.—The words 'printed by Queen's Printer' qualify not only the expression 'private act of Parliament' but also the 'news paper and journal'; thus, presumption of genuineness of S. 81 is extended to newspaper and journals if they are printed by Queen's printer: (1988) 2 Cal.L.J. 184.

Though genuineness of a newspaper is presumed under S. 81, it is settled law that a newspaper is no proof of the facts reported therein; a news item is based on borrowed information. Before a fact can be proved in a Court in a legal manner the person who perceived that fact personally must come into the witness-box to depose about it; in the absence of the source and persons to whom those news are attributed, they are merely hearsay and cannot be relied upon: (1985) 87 Punj.L.R. 1.

The presumption of genuineness attached under S. 81, Evidence Act to a newspaper

82. Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature.—When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which, by the law in force for the time being in England or Ireland, cannot be treated as proof of the fact reported therein, as a statement of a fact contained in a newspaper is merely hearsay and therefore inadmissible in evidence in the absence of the maker of the statement appearing in Court and deposing to have perceived the fact reported: (1961) 1 Cr.L.J. 710: (1961) 63 Punj.L.R. 794: A.I.R. 1961 Punj. 215; A.I.R. 1971 Cal. 53: 1971 Cr.L.J. 208; (1988) 2 Cal.L.J. 184; A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 1274: 1988 Cr.L.J. 1783: (1988) 2 Crimes 107.

Newspaper report of speeches—Evidentiary value: A.I.R. 1959 Raj. 280.

Newspaper reports by themselves cannot constitute evidence unless the authors thereof are examined. Newspaper reports without examination of the correspondence or publishers deposing to the truth and reliability thereof cannot be taken into consideration: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 760 (D.B.).

Translated copy of a news item cannot be taken into consideration in absence of filing of the newspaper as a whole: A.I.R. 1994 Gau. 96 (D.B.).

Newspaper reports by themselves are not evidence of the contents thereof. Those reports are only hearsay evidence which have to be proved. Where neither the reporter who heard the speech and sent the report was examined nor even his reports produced, held, the production of the newspaper by the editor and the publisher could not amount to proving the contents of the newspaper reports: A.I.R. 1994 S.C. 1733.

A news item published in newspaper and which is made basis for the complaint, held, cannot be acted upon without taking into consideration the intention of the accused, the circumstances and the context in which the statement was made and without considering as to whether the news item was admissible in evidence: 1992 Cr.L.J. 3788: (1992) 3 Crimes 1120 (Karn.).

Publication of defamatory matter in newspaper—Copy of newspaper—Shifting of onus on production of newspaper report which is presumed to be true—The burden shifts to the accused to disprove it. Other documents.—The statement in the Final Report on the Settlement operations stating on what basis entries were made in the record-of-rights is more authentic and reliable than the statement in the District Gazettes: A.I.R. 1973 Pat. 206: 1973 Pat.L.J.R. 153 (D.B.).

Electoral rolls are public records made in performance of duty specifically enjoined by the Representation of the People Act; it directly comes under S. 35 as well as S. 74(1)(iii); the presumption under S. 81 being available to it, the Court has to (shall) presume its genuineness and regard the entry in the roll proved unless it is disproved: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 158: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 57: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 82: I.L.R. would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature is genuine, and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it, the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland.

83. Presumption as to maps, or plans made by authority of Government.—The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of [1][the Central Government or any State Government] were so made, and are accurate; but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

Maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate. They must be proved by the persons who made them. They are post litem motam and lack the necessary trustworthiness. Where maps are made for the purposes of a suit, there is even apart from fraud, which may exist, a tendency to colour, exaggerate, and favour which can only be counteracted by swearing the maker to the truth of his plan. The rights of property as between two parties cannot be affected by a map drawn for a totally different purposes and a purpose totally irrelevant to the subject of the dispute between them. Trustworthiness and accuracy of such a map must be proved. Otherwise requirements of S. 83 are not satisfied: 1959 Ker.L.J. 372: A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 358.

A plan, the accuracy of which has not been established by evidence in accordance with S. 83, can be admitted in evidence when both parties had relied on it before the local Commissioner and no objection was taken that it had not been proved to be accurate: (1940) 42 Punj.L.R. 247: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 309.

Mere fact that formal proof of site plan had been dispensed with under S. 294(1), Code of Criminal Procedure, would not mean that its accuracy is proved; the prosecution is bound to prove its accuracy: (1984) 3 Crimes 254 (All.).

84. Presumption as to collections of laws and reports of decisions.— The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of any country, and to contain any of the laws of that country, and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country.

85. Presumption as to powers-of-attorney.—The Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power-of-attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by, a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, [1][Indian] Consul or Vice-Consul, or representative [2][] of the [3][Central Government,] was so executed and authenticated.

Section 84—Note.

Judicial precedents—Laws declared by High Court—Binding nature: A.I.R. 1967 All. 414.

Section 85—Notes.

A power-of-attorney bearing authentication of a notary public or other authority mentioned in S. 85 is taken as sufficient evidence of its execution by the person who appears to be the executant on its face; the presumption is rebuttable but unless rebutted it stands; and the document can be admitted in evidence without any furhter proof: 1983 Ker.L.T. 1013.

A presumption of correctness arises in respect of a power-of-attorney attested in a foreign country under Ss. 57 and 85 regarding the genuineness of the seal of the said Notary; no proof is required from that country as to whether the person attesting was in fact a duly appointed Notary or not: A.I.R. 1989 Del. 144: (1989) 37 Del.L.T. 88: (1988) 2 Ren.C.J. 698: (1989) 1 Ren.L.R. 39; (1990) 2 Ker.L.T. 318.

Power-of-attorney, alongwith verifications are to be presumed to be true under S. 85: [A.I.R. 1950 All. 524, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 All. 219 (D.B.).

The purpose of Ss. 57 and 85 is to cut down recording of evidence; for such matters, like the due execution of a power-of-attorney in the present day of international commerce, there is no reason to limit the words 'Notary Public' in S. 85 or S. 57 to Notaries appointed in India; they include the Notary Public of foreign countries also: A.I.R. 1976 Del. 263: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. (Del.) 71: 1976 Rajdhani L.R. 356: (1976) 12 Del.L.T. 69: I.L.R. (1976) 1 Del. 559; (1992) 47 Del.L.T. 659.

There are no grounds for importing the provisions of Notaries Act into the interpretation of S. 85; it applies equally to documents authenticated by Notaries Public of other countries. Thus, documents which purport to be executed before or authenticated by Notaries Public, bearing proper seals, of other countries ought to be presumed to have been duly notorised within the meaning of S. 85: A.I.R. 1980 All. 369.

Section is mandatory. See I.L.R. 33 Cal. 625: (1904-05) 9 Cal.W.N. 980; I.L.R. 16 Cal. 776.

The provisions of S. 85 are mandatory and it is open to the Court to presume that all the necessary requirements for the proper execution of the power of attorney have been duly fulfilled: But S. 85 is not exhaustive for there are different legal modes of executing a power-of-attorney. Under S. 57(6) the Court shall take judicial notice of inter alia all seals of notaries public. Where a power-of-attorney is given under the seal of a notary public, the Court must presume its proper execution before and authentication by the notary public: I.L.R. (1939) Bom 295: A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 347. See also I.L.R. (1980) Raj. 30.

There being a presumption of valid execution and authentication of the power-of-attorney, the person objecting to the power-of-attorney is required to allege and prove that it was not duly executed or authenticated: A.I.R. 1981 Del. 222: 1981 Rajdhani L.R. 434: (1981) 20 Del. L.T. 264. See also 1972 Mys.L.J. (S.N.) 196.

Authentication is not merely attestation but something more; it connotes an attestation made by the Notary after satisfying himself about the competence of the executant to grant the power-of-attorney; the purpose of S. 85 is to eliminate the otherwise cumbersome evidence of proving the execution and contents of the power and competence of its executant to confer it; however, presumption under S. 85 is rebuttable: A.I.R. 1982 Del. 487.

Authentication is not merely attestation, but something more. It means that the person authenticating has assured himself of the identity of the person who has signed the instrument as well as the fact of execution: It is for this reason that a power of attorney bearing the authentication of a notary public is taken as sufficient evidence of the execution of the instrument by the person who appears to be the executant on the face of it. The presumption, no doubt, is rebuttable. But unless rebutted, the presumption stands and the document can be admitted in evidence as a document executed by the person alleged to have executed it without further proof: 1950 All.L.J. 466: A.I.R. 1950 All. 524.

Authentication is more than mere execution before one of the persons designated in S. 85; for the purpose of presumption to operate, the authentication must be clear, specific and more decisive. Thus, where the Magistrate in fact indicated that he was personally unaware of the executant but put his signature on the basis of identification made by an advocate, held, this will not amount to an authentication by the Magistrate; no presumption under S. 85 could be raised: A.I.R. 1979 Bom. 202.

Power-of-Attorney—Presumption—Authentication by Notary Public—Procedure—No particular form of authentication by Notary Public is given under S. 85—Notary Public need not use the word 'authentication' in the attestation made by him on the document—Attestation by Notary Public stating 'subscribed and sworn to before me' is valid authentication: I.L.R. (1967) 2 Punj. 402: A.I.R. 1967 Punj. 345.

S. 85 raises a presumption about the execution of a power-of-attorney provided two conditions are satisfied. Firstly, it must be executed before a Notary Public and secondly, it must be authenticated by a Notary Public. Thus, where neither of the said conditions was satisfied and there was merely an attestation by Notary Public, held, no presumption under S. 85 in favour of that power-of-attorney could be raised: A.I.R. 1984 Del. 363: 1984 Rajdhani L.R. 549: (1986) 30 Del.L.T. 525 (D.B.). See also A.I.R. 1979 N.O.C. 199 (Del.).

S. 85 does not make any distinction between natural or artificial persons; the word 'person' comprehends both: A.I.R. 1982 Del. 487.

S. 85 does not draw any distinction between the two kinds of documents, viz., power-of-attorney executed by an individual and the one executed on behalf of a Company. Authentication of any of these instruments by a Notary Public raises a legal presumption that the same has been duly executed and the person or persons, who had executed it had the authority to do so. Undoubtedly, such a presumption is not conclusive, being rebuttable. The other party is, therefore, legally entitled to disprove such a presumption: A.I.R. 1978 N.O.C. 254 (Del.).

86. Presumption as to certified copies of foreign judicial records.—The Court may presume that any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of [1][2][* * ] any country not forming part of India or] of Her Majesty's Dominions is genuine and accurate, if the document purports to be certified in any manner which is certified by any representative of [3][ *] the [4][Central Government] [5][in or for] [6][such country] to be the manner commonly in use in [7][that country] for the certification of copies of judicial records.

1. Substituted by the A.O. 1950, for "any country not forming part".

2. The words "a Part B State or of" omitted by Act 3 of 1951, S. 3 and Sch.

3. The words "Her Majesty or of" repealed by the A.O. 1950.

4. Substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "Government of India".

5. Substituted by the Indian Evidence (Amendment) Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), S. 8, for "resident in".

6. Substituted by the A.O. 1950, for "such country".

7. Substituted by the A.O. 1950, for "that country".

There is no prescribed or established form of nature and manner of authentication by a Notary Public. The same has to be gathered from the tenor, facts and circumstances of the power-of-attorney and its authentication by a Notary Public. The fact that the power of attorney was executed by a Director of the plaintiff-Bank duly authorised by a resolution of the Board of Directors to execute the same and its execution and attestation by a Notary Public was also done on the same day clearly indicated that the power-of-attorney was executed before the Notary Public: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 214: 1986 Rev.L.R. 19: (1985) 87 Punj.L.R. 708.

Where the power-of-attorney granted to the plaintiff company's permanent delegate in Delhi was executed by its Director General before, and authenticated by, the Judge at Belgrade, held, requirements of S. 85 having been satisfied, the Court has to presume its due execution and authentication; and since it is also attested by the Indian Consulate in Belgrade, its genuineness is beyond doubt: A.I.R. 1984 Del. 20.

Mere registration is not in itself evidence of execution: I.L.R. 17 Cal. 903. But see I.L.R. 14 Cal. 176. As to what is sufficient proof of power of attorney, see I.L.R. 21 Mad. 492; 1936 All.L.J. 684: A.I.R. 1936 All. 475.

Registrar of Assurances being not one of the persons named in S. 85, presumption regarding due execution of the power-of-attorney registered at the office of Sub-Registrar could not be raised: (1990) 42 Del.L.T. 446.

Endorsement by the Notary Public 'document subscribed and sworn before him' raises a presumption of regularity of official acts, that he must have satisfied himself in the discharge of his duties that the person who was executing it was the proper person: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 761: 1971 U.J.(S.C.) 379: (1971) 1 S.C.R. 38: (1970) 2 S.C.C. 386.

Where a certificate appended to the impugned document showed that it was presented by the executant before the Notary Public and its contents were read over and explained to the executant which he admitted to be correct and thereafter it had been attested by the Notary Public, held, the mere fact that the document had not been drafted or typed out by the executant before the Notary Public, did not in any way, militate the presumption as to the execution and authentication of the power-of-attorney: A.I.R. 1995 Him. Pra. 107.

Where Deputy General Manager of the plaintiff-Bank executed a power-of-attorney in favour of Senior Branch Manager which was duly authenticated by a Notary Public, held, the Court was bound to presume that the power-of-attorney was duly executed and authenticated. And as no evidence in rebutting aforesaid presumption was produced before the Court, it could be said that Senior Branch Manager was authorised to sign and verify the plaint on behalf of the plaintiff-Bank: A.I.R. 1994 All. 381.

Where a power-of-attorney was registered in Pakistan and bore an endorsement by Registrar in that country, presumption under S. 69, Hyderabad Evidence Act (corresponding to S. 85 of Indian Evidence Act) cannot arise: (1957) 2 An.W.R. 342.

Section 86—Notes.

Scope of section—See I.L.R. 27 Cal. 639: 27 I.A. 1 (P.C.). Section mandatory. See I.L.R. 5 Lah. 105: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 493. The provisions of S. 86 are imperative and must be complied with, and in the absence of the certificate referred to in the section, a foreign judgment is not admissible in evidence: (1957) 59 Punj. L.R. 282: A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 86.

S. 86 is not exhaustive of the modes of proof of foreign judicial records: (1957) 59

[1][An officer who, with respect to [2][* *] any territory or place not forming part of [3][India or] Her Majesty's Dominions, is a Political Agent therefor, as defined in section 3, [4][clause (43)], of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a representative of the [5][Central Government] [6][in and for the country] comprising that territory or place.]

87. Presumption as to books, maps and charts.—The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.

2. The words "a Part B State of" which were inserted by the A.O. 1950, repealed by Act 3 of 1951, S. 3 and Sch.

3. Inserted by the A.O. 1950.

4. Substituted ibid, for "clause (40)".

5. Substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "Government of India".

6. Substituted by Act 3 of 1951 for "in and for that Part B State or country".

Punj.L.R. 282: A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 86. S. 86 does not exclude other proof. So, a document purporting to be a copy of a deposition in a Court in Cutch was admissible in evidence though not certified by the Political Agent of Cutch in a manner which fully satisfied the requirements of Ss. 76 and 86. Held, that the fact that the certificate as to the document being a 'true copy' was given by a higher officer than the trial Judge was really an additional reason for accepting its authenticity. [I.L.R. 27 Cal. 639, Foll.]: (1928) 30 Bom.L.R. 1519: A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 24.

'Certified copy' of a foreign judgment as embodied in S. 14 of the C.P.Code has to be construed consistent with the requirements of S. 86 of the Evidence Act: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646: (1991) 2 Crimes 855: (1991) 3 S.C.C. 451.

Presumption of certified copies of German Court: I.L.R. 39 Cal. 164: (1910-11) 15 Cal.W.N. 1053: 14 Cal.L.J. 375.

Presumption of certified copies of other foreign States. See I.L.R. 14 Cal. 546; I.L.R. 27 Cal. 639.

Where a certified copy of a judgment of the Supreme Court of New York, authenticated by the Indian Consulate there, could not be produced for insufficiency of time and its fax copy was instead produced in the Court, held, the fax copy was admissible. [(1991) 3 S.C.C. 451: (1991) 2 Crimes 855: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646, Rel. on]: (1993) 2 Ker.L.J. 565 (D.B.).

Ss. 63 and 65(e) and (f) read together permit certified copies and copies made from the original by mechanical process to be tendered as secondary evidence; photocopies thereof prepared by a mechanical process in itself ensure the original's accuracy. Thus, where photostat copies of judicial record of a foreign Court are certified by a public officer having custody of that record as contemplated by S. 76, held, it will not be per se inadmissible; but if it is not further certified by a representative of the Indian Government in the foreign country, it will not be admissible: (1991-2) 108 Mad.L.W. 646: (1991) 2 Crimes 855: (1991) 3 S.C.C. 451.

O. 13 of the High Court (Punjab) Order, 1947 clearly takes the judgment and decree of the Lahore High Court passed before 15-8-1947, out of the purview of S. 86 and for this very reason the rigors of S. 78(6) shall not apply to the same. Thus, where a certified copy was originally prepared and certified by the supervisor copying agency of the Lahore High Court and was then certified to be a true copy by the examiner copy supply section and later attested by the First Secretary to Deputy High Commission for India in Pakistan at Lahore, held, same were admissible even if they did not fulfil the requirements of Ss. 78(6) and 86. [A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 86, Disting.]: (1988-2) 94 Punj.L.R. 118: 1987 Rev.L.R. 449.

Section 87—Notes.

See 21 Cal.L.J. 637. Under S. 87 of the Act the Court can only presume that the History was written or published by the person and at the time and the place by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.

88. Presumption as to telegraphic messages.—The Court may presume that a message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent; but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission.

The presumption is with regard to publication or authorship but not with respect to its accuracy: A.I.R. 1951 Madh. Bh. 146.

A history of a particular sect prepared by an Extra Assistant Settlement Officer during the second settlement, does not form part of the settlement record and has no presumption of truth attached to it, but may be of some value if it was prepared when there was no dispute: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 1: 154 I.C. 375.

Pamphlet on Schizophrenia published by charitable society in England interested in collecting fund for treating Schizophrenia—Authorship of pamphlet not established—Pamphlet cannot be treated as authoritative on Schizophrenia: (1969) 71 Bom.L.R. 569: I.L.R. (1969) Bom. 1024: A.I.R. 1970 Bom. 312.

Section 88—Notes.

It is true that under S. 88 there is a presumption only that the message received by the addressee corresponds with the message delivered for transmission at the office of origin. There is no presumption as to the person who delivered such a massage for transmission. But proof of authorship of the message need not be direct and may be circumstantial. The contents of the message received, in the context of the chain of correspondence, may well furnish proof of the authorship of the messages at the dispatching end: A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857: 1958 M.L.J. (Cr.) 42.

Under S. 88, the presumption is limited to what is expressly provided in the section. The form handed over into the Post Office by the sender (and not the form delivered by the Post Office) is the original of a telegram and either this must be produced by an official from the post office or proof of its destruction be given before a copy can be admitted as secondary evidence: (1966) 1 An. L.T. 21: (1966) 1 An.W.R. 209.

The contents of telegrams are not evidence of the facts stated in them: A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 174: I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 35. Probative value of telegram. See A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 285. Proof of telegraphic message. See (1954) 1 M.L.J. 622: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 316.

The lower Court's finding in the absence of the original that the copy of the telegram was not proved, set aside; there is presumption under S. 88 that a telegraphic message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the addressee corresponds with the message delivered for transmission to the originating office: 1984 Raj.L.W. 349.

Telegram constitutes primary evidence of the fact that the same was delivered to addressee on the date indicated therein; proof of authorship can be established by circumstantial evidence. [A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 857, Rel. on]: 1984 Hindu L.R. 74: (1983) 2 D.M.C. 77 (Del.).

Telegraph massage—No presumption as to person who delivered message for transmission—Proof of authorship of message—Proof need not be direct but may be circumstantial—Contents of message in context of chain of correspondence may furnish proof of authorship: (1966) 8 Ori.J.D. 249: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 150.

A telegram by itself is not an authentic document. It is like an unsigned/anonymous communication. Unless a telegram is confirmed by a subsequent signed application, representation or an affidavit, the contents of the telegrams have no authenticity at all and the same cannot be taken into consideration for assessing the value of the other authentic documents on the record: A.I.R. 1993 S.C. 2633.

Presumption as to telegraph message—Presumption would apply to Radio messages (Per Das, J.): (1966) 8 Ori.J.D. 249: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 150.

The sanction of Local Government to prosecute a person for an offence under S. 134-A, Penal Code, communicated by telegram, must be proved to have emanated from the Government. The Court is forbidden by the express provisions of S. 88 to make any presumption as to the person by whom the telegram was sent: I.L.R. 42 Mad. 885: 37 M.L.J. 81. See also

89. Presumption as to due execution, etc., of documents not produced.— The Court shall presume that every document, called for and not produced after notice to produce, was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law.

4 I.C. 240: 10 Cr.L.J. 520; 21 I.C. 274; I.L.R. 49 Bom. 878: A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 71; 13 Pat.L.T. 802: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 96.

Where though the telegram was purported to have been sent by a person bearing same name as that of the accused, no particulars were mentioned in that telegram of that person, nor was there any evidence that the signature thereon were that of the accused, held, the trial Court was clearly wrong in treating the telegram as constituting a piece of circumstantial evidence indicating the culpability of the accused: A.I.R. 1971 Tripura 8.

Where the defendants in suit for specific performance had denied the receipt of telegrams purportedly sent to them by the plaintiff and the transmission of the telegrams by their certified copies and destruction of the original transcript was proved by official witnesses from the Telegraph Department, held, in the absence of the defendants' plea or proof of their not residing at the address given in the certified copies and the cause title of the suit, the Court could draw the presumption that the telegraphic messages as contained in the certified copies were received by them: A.I.R. 1988 Karn. 221: I.L.R. (1987) 1 Karn. 3568 (D.B.).

Section 89—Notes.

[See also S. 66, supra].

The condition precedent for the application of S. 89 is that the original document must have been called for and has not been produced after notice to produce it is given, and these conditions unequivocally suggest that the cases in which the statutory presumption under S. 89 can be raised are cases which fall under S. 65(a) and S. 66, Evidence Act. The principle underlying the provisions of S. 89 is sometimes described as the 'necessity' principle. If a party is in possession of a document, or it is shown that the document is in his power, and despite the notice given to him to produce that document, he refuses to produce that document, law provides that the conduct of the party justifies an inference being drawn against him, and in that sense the principle of necessity is invoked and Courts are authorised to assume that the document which has not been produced must have been properly attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law. While considering the presumption which arises under S. 89, it may be relevant to remember that once a presumption is drawn under S. 89, it cannot be easily rebutted by the production of the original document at a later stage: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 65: I.L.R. (1955) Bom. 999; A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 38.

As the wordings of S. 89 clearly indicate, its operation is restricted to cases where a notice to produce the document has been given to the opposite party; thus, where the defendants were not given notice to produce the document, held, S. 89 cannot come to the plaintiff's aid: AI.R. 1971 Raj. 303: 1971 Raj.L.W. 319.

Once the plaintiff excuses himself from the production of the original documents on the plea that they are not traced or are lost, the question of giving notice for production does not arise: A.I.R. 1978 Guj. 193: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412.

Plaintiff's allegation that document had been effected and was in defendant's possession found to be correct—Defendant cannot, without producing document, contend that it was not stamped according to law: A.I.R. 1953 Him. Pra. 52. Where a party produces an unstamped copy of an instrument by way of secondary evidence, the Court may, in the absence of contrary evidence, presume that the original was stamped: 1932 Mad.W.N. 432.

Merely summons issued to adversary to appear for giving evidence with the document—Document not produced—Presumption under S. 89 of the Evidence Act cannot be drawn: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 305.

Power-of-attorney registered in Pakistan—Originals not produced—Presumption of their genuineness cannot be drawn. [A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 107, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 57.

Statements in power-of-attorney—Proof—They have to be proved like any other

90. Presumption as to documents thirty years old.—Where any document, purporting or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and, in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested.

Explanation.—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which, and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be; but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable.

This Explanation applies also to section 81.

statements: [A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 880 and (1890) I.L.R. 17 Cal. 903, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 57.

In a suit for redemption, the question was whether the plaintiff was the mortgagor and the defendant the mortgagee. The plaintiff alleged that the mortgage was executed 50 years ago and that the entry as regards mortgage was made in the mortgagee's bahi and called upon the defendant to produce it. The defendant denied that he possessed any such bahi. The plaintiff's evidence showed that the entry was made in ordinary bahi and not on stamped paper though required by law as such. Moreover there was no evidence by plaintiff to show that the defendant was in possession of the bahi and was withholding it though called upon to produce it. Held, that no presumption under S. 89 could be drawn under the circumstances and as the entry was made in the ordinary bahi and not on stamped paper, no question of presumption arose in such case: A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 90.

It is true that the onus to prove the fact that the document in question is in the possession or in the power of the opponent is initially on the party seeking to ask for permission to lead secondary evidence. But in the case of a registered mortgage, in the ordinary course, the deed of mortgage would be with the mortgagee and as soon as it is shown that the execution of the mortgage was admitted by the executant before the Sub-Registrar, the mortgagee or his heirs would be required to lead some evidence to show that the document was not with them nor was it in their power: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 65: (1955) 57 Bom.L.R. 918.

Where in a suit for redemption of mortgage, the defendant denied the alleged mortgage and there were circumstances to show that the transaction of mortgage was evidenced by a document, held, from the nature of the case, the defendants must have known that they would be required to produce the original mortgage deed which presumably was in their possession. In these circumstances, it would be idle and a useless formality for the plaintiffs to have given notice to the defendants for production of the original mortgage deed: A.I.R. 1971 Raj. 303: 1971 Raj.L.W. 319; A.I.R. 1994 N.O.C. 182 (Raj.); (1979-2) 20 Guj.L.R. 390

State Amendment—[Uttar Pradesh].—In its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh in S. 90,—

(1) The existing section shall be renumbered as section 90(1), and

(2) For the words "thirty years" the words "twenty years" shall be substituted, and

(3) Insert the following as a new sub-S. (2):—

"(2) Where any such document as is referred to in sub-section (1) was registered in accordance with the law relating to registration of documents and a duly certified copy thereof is produced, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the person by whom it purports to have been executed or attested".—U.P. Act XXIV of 1954, S. 2 (w.e.f. 30-11-1954).

Section 90-A

State Amendment—[Uttar Pradesh].—In its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh, after S. 90, add the following as new S. 90-A:—

"90-A. (1) Where any registered document or a duly certified copy thereof or any certified copy of a document which is part of the record of a Court of justice, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the original was executed by the person by whom it purports to have been executed.

(2)This presumption shall not be made in respect of any document which is the basis of a suit or of a defence or is relied upon in the plaint or written statement.

The Explanation to sub-section (1) of section 90 will also apply to the section".—U.P. Act XXIV of 1954, S. 2 (w.e.f. 30-11-1954).

1. Applicability and scope.—See (1953) 2 M.L.J. 717: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 486.

If a document purports to be 30 years old, there is no alternative but to raise presumption under S. 90: (1988) 2 Karn.L.J. 33.

This section does away with the strict rules of proof enforceable in the case of private documents by giving rise to a presumption of genuineness with regard to documents more than thirty years old. The rule is founded on necessity and convenience as it is extremely difficult and sometimes impossible to prove the handwriting or signature or execution of ancient documents after a lapse of many years. Although such documents are rendered admissible without proof if produced from proper custody, the credit to be given to them depends on the discretion of the Court and the circumstances of each case. The presumption is permissive and it is a matter of judicial discretion whether the Court would make the presumption or call upon the party to offer other proof: A.I.R. 1984 Ori. 88: (1984) 57 Cut.L.T. 249 (D.B.).

The principle that a document 30 years or more old produced in the Court from proper custody and ex facie free from suspicion may be presumed to be duly executed and attested is founded on necessity and convenience; it is extremely difficult and sometimes impossible after lapse of many years to prove handwriting, signature, execution and attestation of ancient documents; besides, if requirements of S. 90 are fulfilled and execution and attestation of the document is not denied, their formal proof is waived and the Court's time is saved: A.I.R. 1993 Pat. 129: 1993 B.B.C.J. 355: (1993) 2 B.L.J. 289: (1993) 2 Pat.L.J.R. 1 (D.B.).

S. 90 is incorporated in the Statute for the obvious reason that it would be difficult to adduce evidence as time passed by. In due course of time, the witnesses and the attestors may die or become unable to give their evidence. It is in order to get over this difficulty that S. 90 is incorporated. Hence, on the same reason, it may be proper to hold that it would not be possible to adduce evidence of the person concerned in the case of any ancient document to prove the contents and that the circumstances probabilising the contents brought on record would be sufficient to prove the contents and the fact that it was acted upon: (1983) 1 Karn.L.J. 344.

The words 'purporting' and 'proved' must be read in sequence; the section cannot in the same breath insist on proof of the document's age and also rest content with its mere appearance; the presumptions under S. 90 would arise only if the document is proved, or purports, to be 30 years old; merely because the document carries a date on it, is not sufficient to show that it purports to be 30 years old; there must be some evidence, though not a clear proof, to show that the document is 30 years old; at least a prima facie case must be made out of the document being 30 years old: A.I.R. 1977 Andh. Pra. 301: (1977) 1 A.P.L.J. (H.C.) 205: (1977) 2 An.W.R. 157: 1977 Hindu L.R. 651 (D.B.).

In order to attract S. 90, of the Evidence Act, the document must be 30 years old. This period is to be counted from the date of the document. Secondly, the document must come from proper custody. If these two things exist, then the Court has a discretion to presume that the signature is of the person who has purported to sign it and the document is duly executed and attested. This discretion, like any other discretion has to be exercised in accordance with the well-recognised principles of the exercise of judicial discretion. If the document is suspicious then the Court may refuse to draw any presumption and direct the party on whom the burden to prove the document lies, to prove it like any other document. [I.L.R. 47 All. 31 (F.B.); I.L.R. 24 All. 319; A.I.R. 1961 Ori. 180, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 305; (1897) 1 Chancery 194, Disting.]: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 350 (D.B.).

Propositions deducible from S. 90 are: (1) the presumption applies to documents proved to be thirty or more years old; (2) coming from proper custody; (3) the presumption is discretionary and cannot extend to an ex facie suspicious document in which case the Court may require the party to offer other proof forthwith; (4) the presumption applies only to documents bearing the writer's or the witnesses' signature and not to unsigned or anonymous papers; (5) the presumption is confined only to the signatures, execution and attestation, that is, genuineness of the documents and not to the truth of their contents or having been acted upon; and (6) the presumption applies to original documents, and not to their copies, certified or otherwise: A.I.R. 1994 Him. Pra. 144; A.I.R. 1973 Andh. Pra. 149: (1972) 2 An.W.R. 346 (D.B.).

For the application of S. 90, firstly, the document must the thirty years old; secondly, it must be produced from proper custody; and thirdly, this document must be purported to be in the handwriting of any particular person or it must be purported to be executed or attested by certain persons: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 61.

The rule of presumption of the genuineness of ancient documents must be applied with exceeding caution and where circumstances throw suspicion on genuineness of document, no presumption under S. 90 can be drawn: A.I.R. 1952 Trav.-Co. 438.

S. 90 of the Evidence Act does not apply and is of no help in a case where the signature of a particular person is not in question or sought to be established: 17 Cut.L.T. 73: A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 431.

Whether a document is admissible in evidence or not is one thing and whether the presumption under S. 90 could be raised in respect thereof is totally different. A document may yet be admissible in evidence although the presumption may not be raised under S. 90: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 61.

Notwithstanding S. 68, the Court in a proper case can raise a presumption under S. 90; Ss. 68 and 90 do not militate against each other; the Court's power to raise presumptions under S. 90 is not controlled or curtailed by S. 68; whether or not the presumption should be made would depend upon the facts and circumstances of the case: A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 202 (D.B.).

The documents satisfying the conditions laid down in S. 90, can be read in evidence without any formal proof: A.I.R. 1976 All. 213: 1976 All.W.C. 64.

Recitals in an unregistered document 30 years old—Proof—Presumption arises: A.I.R. 1968 Andh. Pra. 276.

Recitals, in the documents more than 30 years old, regarding passing of consideration. See (1990) 1 An.W.R. 190: (1992) 1 An.L.T. 340.

Registered document sixty-five years old—It can be presumed to be genuine under section:(1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 362. See also 1977 Mah.L.J. (Notes) 43 [Lists of partition of property prepared more than fifty years ago cannot be ignored on the ground of non-registration].

Where a document is written 55 years ago by a licensed stamp-vendor and comes out from proper custody it can claim the benefit of S. 90: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 885.

Presumption of genuineness includes presumption of executant's authority: I.L.R. 58 Cal. 686. But see also 1936 All.L.J. 161: A.I.R. 1936 All. 298; A.I.R. 1927 All. 231: I.L.R. 47 All. 55; A.I.R. 1927 All. 765; A.I.R. 1925 All. 1: I.L.R. 47 All. 1 (F.B.).

Presumption of genuineness only dispenses with proof, but the question of evidence is not affected thereby : 95 I.C. 261: A.I.R. 1926 All. 537.

Irrespective of the fact as to whether the witnesses to the document are alive or dead, statutory presumption does arise; if witnesses are available, their evidence may be useful in rebutting the presumption: I.L.R. (1985) Karn. 1440.

A Court is not debarred from raising the presumption under S. 90, Evidence Act, simply because evidence has been called in support of the execution of the deed, which it finds insufficient. A party leading evidence to prove its execution may still rely upon the presumption. There is nothing in law that prevents a Court from presuming a deed to be genuine, even though it is not satisfied with the evidence tendered to prove its execution: A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 87. It is the trial Court that should be asked to presume a document to be genuine under S. 90 of the Evidence Act. Where no such request has been made to the trial Court, it is too late in the day to ask the High Court to presume the document to be genuine: 1950 Raj.L.W. 199: A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 47.

Once the party has made it known that he wants to rely on the presumption under S. 90 and the document and the surrounding circumstances are such that a presumption under S. 90 may justifiably be raised then the mere fact that the party has a witness or two in addition for proving the signature or the writing of the alleged executant will not always be a sufficient reason for not drawing the presumption. [A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 47 and 1953 Raj.L.W. 153, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1972 Raj. 191: 1972 Raj.L.W. 133. But see 1983 M.P.W.N. 43.

Where rent receipts, over twenty years old, in the proper custody of the plaintiff were produced by him in the Court, held, they had to be presumed to be genuine unless they were disproved; merely because the plaintiff was fool enough to seek to prove them in the ordinary mode, it would not detract from their evidentiary value under S. 90. [A.I.R. 1957 All. 1, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 32 (All.). But see 1982 W.L.N. (U.C.) 224 (Raj.).

When a document is cited on the side of a party, definite proof of its genuineness has to be given. Merely because the document is written on a very antique paper in Mahajani ink, it does not show that the document is old. For the paper may be old and not the writing. Where the erasures on such a document coincide with the date of the document which was mentioned at no less than 4 places, the document is suspicious: 1958 M.P.L.J. 198: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 246.

The document's age, its unsuspicious character, its production from proper custody and other circumstances constitute the foundation for the presumption of genuineness under S. 90; on these requirements being satisfied, documents thirty years old prove themselves. However, if the genuineness of such a document is disputed, the Court should consider the evidence, both external and internal, appearing on the document's face to decide whether or not it should presume proper execution of the document. [A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 39; I.L.R. (1904) 26 All. 581 (P.C.), Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Raj. 178: 1974 Raj.L.W. 579.

The question whether the presumption of due execution provided for in S. 90 of the Evidence Act should be raised in a case where the ministerial act of physically signing the document has been left to another person, should really be decided on a consideration of all the facts and circumstances. Thus, where there exists signatures of all executants though under the pens of others and at the behest of each one of the executants and there is also attestation by witnesses, though at the behest of executants, presumption can be raised that every other part of document purported to be in the handwriting of those persons who wrote it and signed it: 1968 Raj.L.W 501: I.L.R. (1968) 18 Raj. 481: A.I.R. 1969 Raj. 11.

Where the document is not executed by the executant himself but by some one authorised by the executant, S. 90 does not authorise the drawing of presumption in regard to the authorisation as well: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 61.

Presumption under S. 90—When open: A.I.R. 1968 All. 363.

The mere fact that a document is registered cannot go to prove that it was duly executed. But that would be a circumstance which will definitely have to be taken into account by the Court in deciding how far the presumption under S. 90 should be raised: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 61.

Ancient documents may be admissible by aid of S. 90, however, its value, as evidence, depends upon corroboration derived from external and internal circumstances. Production of the document on previous occasions is one of the external circumstance corroborating the existence of the document: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 2 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

Where genuineness of a document is disputed but neither its executant nor attesting witnesses are alive and available, held, it should be proved in the manner prescribed under S. 69; the Court should not raise the presumption under S. 90 but admit the document and direct the parties to adduce evidence to prove it: A.I.R. 1993 Pat. 129: 1993 B.B.C.J. 355: (1993) 2 B.L.J. 289: (1993) 2 Pat.L.J.R. 1 (D.B.).

A copy of an order, dated 25 September 1941, of the Rent Controller bearing his signatures which was addressed to the father of the party was produced by that party in the Court, held, the document being 30 years old and coming from proper custody, the presumption may be drawn that the signatures of the Rent Controller on the document are indeed that of the Controller: A.I.R. 1975 Del. 236: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. (Del.) 27: I.L.R. (1975) 2 Del. 765 (F.B.).

Where the manner of the document's writing, the spreading of ink on its back side and the condition of the two thumb-impressions thereon and absence of any explanation in the document as to why its executant or her ancestors had allowed to the purported grantees, when the executant herself was not in affluent circumstances, not only the right of free residence in the house but also the right to realise and appropriate rent from its tenants as well, held, the document obviously was not beyond suspicion; its genuineness could not be presumed: A.I.R. 1975 Raj. 178: 1974 Raj.L.W. 579.

In respect of a compromise petition, proved to be 30 years old, produced from the Record room where it had been kept as a part of the decree and which contained the thumb-impression and the signatures of the parties, the scribe and the attestators, held, presumption under S. 90 can be drawn: A.I.R. 1972 Ori. 148: (1971) 2 Cut.W.R. 814 (D.B.).

To prove that a registered gift deed which was 50 years old was a fraud on registration, held, is on the person who so alleges: A.I.R. 1980 All. 394.

Where a document, 30 years old, was acted upon throughout and, presumably, with the plaintiff's knowledge, held, testimony of a witness that the signatures thereon were not those of the deceased was not sufficient to throw overboard the ancient document and subsequent events emanating from it; it is a fit case for raising the presumption under S. 90, notwithstanding S. 68: A.I.R. 1989 Cal. 202 (D.B.).

2. Presumption in respect of documents bearing only mark or seal.—The presumption of execution of a document extends also to the mark put on the document indicating that the document was signed by the executant by a sort of symbolic writing which is to be taken to be the signature in the absence of proof to the contrary: I.L.R. 58 Cal. 686: A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 596; 148 I.C. 1172: A.I.R. 1934 All. 529.

A seal does not amount to a signature and S. 90, Evidence Act is not applicable to prove unsigned documents which bear the seal of the executant for it does not make any provision for presumption in regard to seals. The mutation entries are admissible as evidence under S. 35 of the Evidence Act, inasmuch as, these entries were made in an official record by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties, and S. 90, Evidence Act, cannot be invoked as a mode of their proof: 1962 Raj.L.W. 478: I.L.R. (1962) 12 Raj. 83.

As to presumption of genuineness of seal affixed to old document, see A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 194: 1936 O.W.N. 768.

3. Anonymous documents.—S. 90 cannot be relied upon for the proof of a document which does not purport to be in any person's handwriting or to be signed by any known person: (1941) 1 M.L.J. 759: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 602.

An anonymous document is not within S. 90. Evidence aliunde cannot be availed of. If the proof so adduced to establish the handwriting of a particular person is inadequate, the presumption cannot be invoked. A person can either seek to establish the handwriting to be in a particular person's hand by adducing proof or invoke a presumption permissible under S. 90 in his favour. If he seeks to prove it and fails, there can be no question of invoking the presumption under S. 90: A.I.R. 1956 Andhra 1: 1955 An.W.R. 783.

S. 90 does not provide for any presumption regarding anonymous documents, the writer of whom is not known. But an objection that the document should not be admitted without proof as to the writer of the document must be raised at the earliest stage and cannot be permitted to be raised for the first time in second appeal: A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 926: (1939) 2 M.L.J. 593.

A bald document which is 30 years old and which is produced from proper custody does not attract the presumption under S. 90 if it is unsigned, unattested and if it does not bear the name even of its scribe. S. 90 does not contemplate such documents and does not empower the Court to raise any presumption in respect of them: A.I.R. 1974 Guj. 74: (1973) 14 Guj.L.R. 523.

According to S. 90 of the Evidence Act, the presumption of genuineness can be raised if the document itself shows in whose handwriting the contents are which are being relied upon. It follows that no presumption can be made in the case of an anonymous document: 1950 Raj.L.W. 199: A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 47.

In order to attract the provisions of S. 90, the document must have been signed, which most of the entries in the account books are not. They could not, therefore, be brought within the purview of this section: (1943) 45 Punj.L.R. 441: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 58. (Obiter).—Only in such documents as bear the signature of the writer or of witnesses to the document that the presumption can arise. Account papers though more than thirty years old which do not bear on their face the signature of the writer are not admissible in evidence on the presumption available under S. 90: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 821: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 205.

Where the deed did not even purport to be signed by the executant and his mark was not proved by the person attesting the same, held, that the Court could refuse to presume that the document, was genuine: 110 I.C. 415: 5 O.W.N. 424.

Where a party tendering a document is unable to say who prepared or signed it or where the document itself does not purport to show who prepared or signed it, the mere fact of the document being more than thirty years old does not make it admissible without proof: 1937 R.D. 88: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 353.

No presumption of genuineness in case of document bearing no signature: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 194: I.L.R. 12 Luck. 400; 166 I.C. 930: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 353; (1939) 41 Punj.L.R. 108: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 285.

Where though the document was more than 30 years old but identity of its executant was not established nor the document came from proper custody and its genuineness was also not corroborated by surrounding circumstances, held, presumption under S. 90 could not be raised: (1987) 1 Hindu L.R. 2 (Madh. Pra.) (D.B.).

4. Discretion of Court to draw presumption.—The Court is not bound to make the presumption merely because of the alleged age of the document: (1929) 31 Bom.L.R. 1279: A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 39; 110 I.C. 415: 5 O.W.N. 424.

The Court 'may presume'. The section does not say that the Court must presume the document to be genuine: 7 Mys.L.J. 57. See also 175 I.C. 594: A.I.R. 1938 All. 345; (1938) 40 P.L.R. (J.&K.) 51; (1938) 40 Bom.L.R. 202: A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 257; 1958 An.L.T. 561.

The language used in S. 90 indicates that the presumption raised is a permissive one. Though it is not obligatory on a Court to raise the presumption, it is a matter of judicial discretion whether the Court will make a presumption or call upon the party to offer other proof: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 821: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 205; (1980) 2 Karn.L.J. 380.

S. 90 does away with the strict rules of proof required for private documents by giving rise to the presumption of their genuineness if they are 30 or more than 30 years old and come from proper custody and are free from suspicion; however, presumption is permissive and may or may not be raised, depending upon facts of each case: A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.).

The rule in S. 90 is not absolute; even when the document is 30 years or more old and comes from proper custody, the Court has the discretion to draw the presumption under the section or require proof of the document's execution; the section itself provides that the Court 'may' draw the presumption and not that it must draw it; as pointed out in A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 388, it would be most dangerous to draw the presumption of a document being genuine merely because it was 30 years old and came from proper custody. Thus, where there had been litigation based on such a document without a finding that it was genuine, held, no presumption under S. 90 could be drawn in a subsequent litigation: A.I.R. 1975 Mad. 88: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 799 (D.B.).

S. 90 gives an option to a Court to presume or not to presume. Of course, the Court is normally to presume due execution of a document purporting to be thirty years old, but it is not obliged to presume, if it has reasons not to presume. Thus, where the Court had given reasons for not raising such presumption, held, no fault could be found with its order: A.I.R. 1976 All. 251.

The question as to whether the presumption under S. 90 arises or not, in the circumstances of the case, must be decided on the evidence adduced. The parties are, therefore, left with the option of leading such evidence as they like for the proof or disproof of the presumption. [1975 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 38, Foll.]. Besides, the presumption is permissive; a party leading evidence to prove a document, cannot rely on such presumption. (See 1983 M.P.W.N. 43). Thus, where the plaintiff himself led evidence to prove the document and signatures on it, held, he could not be heard to say that as the document was 30 years' old and there was presumption about its execution and signatures and every other part thereof, the defendants could not be allowed to lead evidence in rebuttal: 1991 M.P.L.J. 768.

The Court should be very careful about raising any presumption under S. 90 in favour of old deeds of shankalap which never saw the light of day until they were produced during the trial of the suits in which under-proprietary rights are set up on the basis of those deeds: (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 215: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 102; I.L.R. 12 Luck. 400: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 194. See also 166 I.C. 930: 1937 O.W.N. 179; I.L.R. 11 Cal. 539; I.L.R. 18 Lah. 732: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 599; I.L.R. 29 Cal.740; 98 I.C. 1021: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 229; A.I.R. 1929 All. 561; I.L.R. 8 Luck. 11: A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 227. See also A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 245 (Pondah's bahis).

The presumption under S. 90 is a rebuttable one to be made at the discretion of the Court. It is based on the rule of expediency, and unless the surrounding circumstances satisfy the Court that the document tendered has been produced from proper custody it would be unsound to admit the document. The Court must insist on a satisfactory account of the origin of the possession being given by the party relying upon the document. The custody may not be in the strictest sense legal custody, but, whether it originated in right or wrong, the origin must be explained. The soundest policy even upon the rule of expediency necessitates circumspection and scrutiny in the examination of the surrounding circumstances before raising the presumption. The Court must, therefore, examine the surrounding circumstances tending to establish the connection of the party producing the document with the person with whom the document should naturally have been: (1938) 40 Bom.L.R. 202: A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 257.

S. 90 is not mandatory; it gives discretion to the Court to raise the presumption or not to raise the presumption. But the discretion should be used judicially and when the trial Court has used the discretion in a judicial manner, the appellate Court should be slow in interfering with the discretion so used in all cases of exercise of judicial discretion by the trial Court. [A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 482, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 Karn. 314: (1982) 1 Karn.L.J. 394.

When a document is suspicious on the face of it when an important word is erased and rewritten, presumption under S. 90 does not arise: 95 I.C. 261: A.I.R. 1926 All. 537.

The Court is not bound to raise all or any of the presumptions with respect to every document that is said to be more than 30 years old. The Court may refuse to raise a presumption if it has reason to believe the document to be a fabrication, or where a grave suspicion attaches to it. The suspicion may be due to erasures or overwritings in the document itself, or to circumstnaces which tend to raise doubts as to its authenticity; on the other hand, if no suspicious circumstances exist and the document is also found to be acted upon, there is a strong presumption of the genuineness of an old document: A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 87.

Though a Court is not bound to presume that the recital in an ancient document is correct, yet where a khatta over thirty years old signed by several witnesses is sued upon, the Court cannot lightly disregard the recitals in it in the absence of anything to prove that the creditor is putting forward a false claim: A.I.R. 1951 Kutch 4.

Whether a presumption under S. 90 should or should not be raised, is a matter for the discretion of the Court. It is not obligatory on a Court to raise any presumption under that section in favour of a person who desires to prove a fact. Of course, if the plaintiffs ask the Court to make a presumption in their favour in accordance with the provisions of that section, it would be necessary for the Court to deal with that matter. Failure to draw the presumption by the Courts below cannot be attacked in second appeal, when it is clear that the Courts were not asked to draw it. High Court in second appeal refused to draw the presumption in the circumstance of the case: 1953 Raj.L.W. 153.

It is well settled that the presumption is permisive and according to the circumstances of each case the Court may or may not raise it. The High Court has no jurisdiction in Second Appeal to interfere with the discretion of the trial Court to refrain from drawing the presumption drawable under S. 90, when the trial Court assigned some reasons for the same: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 49.

When once it is held by the Court that the document has come from proper custody and the document is an ancient document, the presumption under S. 90 of the Evidence Act may be raised holding that the signature is of the person mentioned in the document: A.I.R. 1982 Karn. 314: (1982) 1 Karn.L.J. 394.

The raising of presumption under S. 90 as to the genuineness of a document is a matter which is eminently within the discretion of the trial Court and where a document bore only the seal and there was no signature and where there were strong reasons to doubt its genuineness the appellate Court held that it was not prepared to draw a presumption about its genuineness which the lower Court had refused to do: I.L.R. 17 Luck. 805: 1942 O.W.N. 225: A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 374; 104 I.C. 219: A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 870; I.L.R. 51 Cal. 135: A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 493; (1929) 31 Bom.L.R. 1279: A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 39.

The discretion exercised by the trial Court under S. 90 ought not to be interfered with by the appellate Court especially when no objection under S. 90 was raised in the trial Court. Even assuming that the appellate Court was entitled to take a different view, an opportunity to adduce further evidence to support the presumption ought to be given to the party producing the document: 1958 An.L.T. 561. Admissibility and presumption as to document 30 years old—Interference with discretion of trial Court. See A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 26. Presumption not drawn by trial Court—Appellate Court refusing to draw inference—Genuineness of documents decided on evidence—Proper: 108 I.C. 412 (M.).

Expression 'may presume' in S. 90—Meaning of—It means that Court may either regard the fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it—It is in the discretion of the Court and when the trial Court has exercised its discretion, the appellate Court ought not to interfere with the discretion unless it was exercised arbitrarily, injudiciously or capriciously—(Words and Phrases—'May presume'): 1967 Mah.L.J. 341: (1967) 69 Bom.L.R. 559: A.I.R. 1967 Bom. 382.

5. Nature and extent of presumption.—As to the extent of presumption regarding old documents. See 6 L.L.J. 97: I.L.R. 4 Lah. 233: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 145; 82 I.C. 487: A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 184; 77 I.C. 472; A.I.R. 1924 All. 869: 22 All.L.J. 857; (1939) 41 Punj.L.R. 108: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 285.

The principle underlying S. 90 is that if a private document thirty years old or more, is produced from proper custody and is, on its face free from suspicion, the Court may presume that it has been signed or written by the person whose signature it bears or in whose handwriting it purports to be and that it has been fully attested and executed, if it purports so to be. In other words, documents thirty years old prove themselves. The age of a document, its unsuspicious character, the production from proper custody and other circumstances are the foundation for the presumption as enunciated in the above section. This rule, it is now well settled, was founded on necessity and convenience. It is extremely difficult and sometimes impossible to prove the handwriting or signature or execution of ancient documents after the lapse of many years. It is, therefore, presumed that all persons acquainted with execution of documents, if any, are dead and proof of those facts are dispensed with. Thus, the presumption relates to the execution of the documents, that is, signature, attestation, etc., in other words its genuineness, but not to the truth of its contents: A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 26.

A presumption under S. 90 covers the question of due execution: 1991 Punj.L.J. 587.

Such a document need not be proved by examing the scribe or the attestors or any person who knew the signature of the scribe and attestors: 1958 An.L.T. 561.

Ordinarily the presumption under S. 90 would include, due attestation by the persons by whom the document purports to be attested. If a document 30 years old shows that certain persons witnessed it in token of its execution by its maker, and it is produced from proper custody, the Court can presume 'due' attestation. It is not, however, necessary that the endorsement of attestation should also state that the attestator saw the executant sign and that he attested in the presence of the executant, so as to raise the presumption of due attestation: A.I.R. 1949 All. 733.

Under S. 90, documents more than thirty years old coming from proper custody prove themeslves, but there is no presumption that the contents of the document are true: (1938) 40 Bom.L.R. 1262: I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 97: A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 59; A.I.R. 1993 Madh. Pra. 5: 1993 M.P.L.J. 333.

The presumption relates to the signature, execution or attestation of a document, that is, to its genuineness. But it does not involve any presumption of correctness of every statement in it which may contain narrative of past events or that the contents of the documents are true or it has been acted upon. That must be proved like any other fact: A.I.R. 1984 Ori. 88: (1984) 57 Cut.L.T. 249 (D.B.).

There can be no presumption regarding the correctness of the contents of the copy. The presumption could only be about the genuineness of the endorsement that the copy was certified by an officer: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 263: 1973 W.L.N. 240: 1973 Raj.L.W. 473.

S. 90 only gives the discretion to Courts to dispense with proof as to the execution of a document. It raises no presumption whatever as regards the accuracy of the plan and cannot be used so as to dispense with formal proof of the contents of the documents as required by law: 111 I.C. 361: A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 78. See also A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 43: I.L.R. (1937) Nag. 68.

S. 90 does not involve any presumption that the contents of a document more than 30 years old coming from proper custody are true. The presumption is only as regards due execution: 17 Mys.L.J. 510: 45 Mys.H.C.R. 57.

All that S. 90 of the Evidence Act lays down is that a Court may presume that documents purporting to be 30 years old have been written or attested by the persons who purport to have written or attested them. But there is no presumption necessarily attaching to them as to the correctness of the entries or recitals therein. Where the writer of such documents is alive but is not called in evidence to prove them, their mere production in Court without more cannot be of much use as evidence: 18 Cut.L.T. 117: A.I.R. 1951 Ori. 262.

In fact S. 90 dispenses with proof of document as required in Ss. 67 and 68 and what is required to be done is deemed to have been done by operation of law. But the proof of signature or handwriting does not establish that whatever is stated in document is also correct. That has to be proved not only by production of document but by proving its contents as well: A.I.R. 1981 All. 3.

S. 90 makes it clear that the presumption which is to be raised relates only to the signature, execution or attestation of a document. It does not involve any presumption that the contents of the document are true or that it had been acted upon. Such allegation has to be proved on adducing proper and relevant evidence: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 821: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 205; I.L.R. (1966) 1 Cal. 395.

Merely because documents more than 30 years old are presumed under S. 90 to be duly executed, there is no presumption about their contents being true. But once its execution is presumed by the party's predecessor-in-title, the signatory to the document, it would amount to an admission of the executant about the truth of its contents. Such document is also admissible under S. 32(3) as it is a statement made against the proprietary interest of a person now dead: A.I.R. 1981 Guj. 142: (1981) 22 Guj.L.R. 389.

Presumption under, is rebuttable—Held, on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, presumption of the execution was not rebutted: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 471: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 271.

Entry in settlement record—Acknowledgment made in deposition in settlement enquiry—Record of settlement enquiry produced from proper custody 30 years old—Presumption. See A.I.R. 1957 Trav.-Co. 246.

The mere proof of the fact that a map is more than 30 years old, by itself is only proof of the fact that the map was prepared by the maker thereof. The fact that a particular person prepared a map or in other words made certain statements by lines, cannot, without or apart from and independent of the proof of the correctness of its contents, have any bearing on the matters in issue in this suit. The fact that the map is a part of the decree does not make any difference, when the decree does not fall within any of the Ss. 40, 41 or 42 of the Act: (1944-45) 49 Cal.W.N. 791: A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 492. Jama Wasil Baki papers seventy years old—Presumption as to, see 45 C.L.J. 129. As to presumption of genuineness of pedigree tables, see 105 I.C. 81: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 20.

Settlement pedigree-tables—Presumption of truth of relationship—Burden to prove that entry in such tables is wrong: (1961) 63 Punj.L.R. 177: A.I.R. 1961 Punj. 251.

Documents (pattas) thirty years old produced from proper custody and bearing proper endorsements under O. 13, R. 4, C.P.Code—Document altogether free from any kind of suspicion—Presumption—Documents stand properly proved without the necessity of any direct proof of execution and are admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1960) 10 Raj. 94.

Registered gift deed executed 30 years before suit—Executant dead—Whether attesting witnesses were alive not known—Registration held sufficient proof of execution of document. The discretion exercised by the trial Court under S. 90 ought not to be interfered with by the appellate Court especially when no objection under S. 90 was raised in the trial Court. Even assuming that the appellate Court was entitled to take a different view, an opportunity to adduce further evidence to support the presumption ought to be given to the party producing the document. [A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 51 and A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 482, Rel. on]: 1958 An.L.T. 561.

The first appellate Court has a right to interfere with the discretion of the trial Court in the matter of drawing any presumption under S. 90 if it is satisfied that the discretion was improperly exercised. In so doing it must come to its own conclusions on all questions of fact. S. 90 is worded in general terms as it was designed to meet situations varying in character, where passage of time might have obliterated the proof of the genuineness of any disputed document. Under this section wide powers were conferred on the Court. Before any presumption under S. 90 can be drawn, one fact must be satisfactorily proved and that is, the document in question has been produced from proper custody. The satisfaction of the Court on this point is a judicial satisfaction and ought to be found on the evidence on record. It is for the party who asks the Court to draw the necessary presumptions under S. 90 to prove by satisfactory evidence that the document was produced from proper custody. The finding of the trial Court on this point is a finding of fact and, as in the case of any other finding of fact, is subject to the scrutiny of the appellate Court. The factum of proper custody is not a matter for presumption but ought to be satisfactorily proved. It may be proved by one of the two ways, i.e., either by adducing evidence aliunde to show that the document was produced from proper custody or by showing that the person who produced it was the depository of the document in question: I.L.R. (1960) Mys. 1206: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 441: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 53.

Interpretation of S. 90—Question of proper custody—S. 139 not helpful: I.L.R. (1960) Mys. 1206: (1962) 1 Cr.L.J. 441: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 53.

Document signed by H for D—Presumption will be only in respect of signature of H and not in respect of execution of document by D: 1963 B.L.J.R. 472: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 241.

Documentary proof of relationship—Document must be relevant under S. 32(5), before raising presumption under S. 90: 1964 B.L.J.R. 152: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 187.

Seventy years old deed presented by heirs of grantees—Presumption would be that the deed bore signature of executor and it was duly executed: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 54.

Where more than 30 years old mortgage deed, though unregistered, was produced from proper custody and its genuineness was not disputed, held, though the deed was inadmissible to enforce its contents, yet it was admissible as admission of joint possession of the property; presumption under S. 90 is attracted to the deed. [1961 M.P.L.J. 762, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1983 Raj. 57.

6. Presumption in case of copies.—[See also Note 13, infra].—Court may presume genuineness of signature authenticating a copy: 56 I.A. 146: I.L.R. 52 Mad. 453; A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 115. The presumption contained in S. 90 cannot apply to a copy that is not itself 30 years old: 1940 Nag.L.J. 437: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 382. See also A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 788; A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 930; A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 458; A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 273.

The view expressed by the Full Bench in I.L.R. 46 Mad. 92 that the presumption under S. 90 with regard to documents 30 years old arises in the case of copies as well as originals, and that if a copy is found to be a true copy a presumption may be made of the genuineness of the original itself is no longer good law. The party relying on such a copy must prove the execution of the original in some way known to law, at least by approved circumstantial evidence: (1950) 1 M.L.J. 720: A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 634, following I.L.R. 52 Mad. 453 (P.C.) and I.L.R. 57 All. 494 (P.C.).

The production of a copy is not sufficient to justify the presumption of due execution of the original under S. 90 and mere production of a certified copy would not ordinarily relieve the person producing it from the necessity of producing evidence as regards the execution of the original. In suitable cases, however, the presumptions arising under S. 90 also apply to copies; if the copy produced under S. 65 and admitted as secondary evidence is produced from proper custody and is over 30 years old, then the signature authenticating the copy may be presumed to be genuine. The copy would, therefore, be admissible as evidence of the terms of the lost original, being secondary evidence of the terms of the original grant. If the copy is not itself over 30 years old, S. 90 cannot be invoked in proof of the original of that document: 50 Mys.H.C.R. 118. No presumption under S. 90 can be raised on the basis of the certified copies when the originals are not forthcoming: (1939) 41 Punj.L.R. 377(2): A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 273. See also A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 433: I.L.R. 16 Luck. 778; A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 89; A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 400.

A copy purporting to be more than 30 years old and produced from proper custody may be presumed to be a copy satisfying the requirements of the Evidence Act as to secondary evidence, when that copy contains a statement that it is a true copy and contains the signature of the author of the original. In such a case the Court is entitled to presume the genuineness of the signature on the copy under S. 90: 1939 Mad.W.N. 841: A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 273.

The language of S. 90 of the Indian Evidence Act requires the production of the particular document in regard to which the Court is invited to make the statutory presumption. If the document produced is a copy admissible as secondary evidence under S. 65 of the Evidence Act and is produced from proper custody and is over 30 years old, then only the signatures authenticating the copy may be presumed to be genuine; but production of a copy which is not a secondary evidence is not sufficient to raise the presumption of the due execution of the original: A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 606; A.I.R. 1961 Andh. Pra. 361. The presumption that attaches under S. 90 to the certified copy of the road cess return, therefore, is that the signature authenticating it is genuine. But there is no presumption that the original of that document was signed by the person who is said to have signed it: 1957 B.L.J.R. 542: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 294.

The mere production of a copy of a document would not be sufficient to justify the presumption of due execution of the original. But if the copy is produced from proper custody and is over thirty years old, then the signatures authenticating the copy may be presumed to be genuine; and it will be admissible as evidence of the terms of the original: 26 Mys.L.J. 121.

The presumption enacted in S. 90 can be raised only with reference to original documents and not to copies thereof. Further if, the document happens to be signed by the agent of the person against whom the presumption is sought to be raised and there is no proof that he was an agent, S. 90 does not authorise the raising of a presumption as to the existence of authority on the part of the agent to represent that person: 1956 S.C.J. 279: I.L.R. 35 Pat. 221: 1956 S.C.R. 1: A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 305.

Where a document of mortgage which is produced is a copy admitted under S. 65, Evidence Act, as secondary evidence and it is produced from proper custody and is over 30 years old, the signatures authenticating the copy may be presumed to be genuine under S. 90. Even so, under S. 90, when a copy is produced, the presumption cannot be made that the signature, handwriting, execution or attestation of the original document were in order. The presumption under S. 90 cannot apply to a copy though it may have been admitted under the provisions of S. 65. It would make no difference to the said position that the copy in question is a certified copy of a registered document. In the case of a certified copy of a registered document, however, the party would be justified in contending that under the provisions of S. 60, sub-S. (2), Registration Act, it would be competent to the Court to hold that the execution of the document had been admitted by the executant before the Sub-Registrar. That is the endorsement which the certified copy produced, bears and the said endorsement must be given its due legal effect having regard to the provisions of S. 60, sub-S. (2). But the inference or presumption authorised by the provisions of S. 60(2), Registration Act, that the facts mentioned in the endorsements made under S. 58 have occurred as therein mentioned need not be connected or confused with the presumption or inference that may arise under S. 90, Evidence Act. This position would not materially assist the party wishing to prove execution of a registered mortgage because the valid execution of the document implies the proof of some other facts. It would not be enough to prove that the mortgagor put his signature to the document of mortgage and admitted that the document had been executed by him before the registering authority. Having regard to the provisions of S. 59, Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiff would further have to prove that the deed of mortgage executed by the mortgagor was attested by at least two witnesses. In other words, before a deed of mortgage can be said to be validly executed, it must be proved that it was executed by the mortgagor and that the execution by the mortgagor was attested by at least two witnesses. And it would be clear that, so far as the proof of this additional fact is concerned, S. 60(2), Registration Act, would be powerless to give any help to the party. S. 60(2) is confined to the endorsements made under S. 58 of the Act and it provides for the raising of a statutory presumption or inference in respect of the said endorsements alone: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 65: I.L.R. (1955) Bom. 999.

In spite of the strict provisions of S. 90, Evidence Act, there may be circumstances under which a copy produced would be available not only to prove the existence of the original document, but of the terms thereof as well. The circumstances, therefore, have to be considered, where on the facts in a particular case, if a copy of a document is found to be admissible as secondary evidence under S. 65, Evidence Act, whether the terms thereof can be taken to have been proved, although they do not under S. 90 itself prove themselves on a presumption raised under that section: (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 821: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 205.

The Court can presume the genuineness even of an unregistered document thirty years old from a copy of such document, if the original is proved to have been duly executed, and further it is also proved that the original is lost: A.I.R. 1929 All. 561.

The words 'any document' and 'is produced' used in S. 90 indicate that reference is to the original document and not to the certified copy of that document. Thus, S. 90 cannot be pressed in service for introducing certified copies in evidence as the statutory presumption arising under S. 90 can be availed of only if the original documents are produced on record: A.I.R. 1978 Guj. 193: (1978) 19 Guj.L.R. 412; 1986 W.L.N. (U.C.) 432 (Raj.).

Presumption of due execution and attestation does not apply to certified copy—It applies to original documents: I.L.R. (1953) Bom. 734: A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 338.

The presumption regarding old documents over thirty years old under S. 90 can not be extended to the certified copy produced to prove the execution of the original sale deed: A.I.R. 1984 Bom. 19.

Presumption under S. 90 applies with regard to the original documents and not their copies; no presumption of genuineness of the original can be drawn on the basis of certified copy of the document: A.I.R. 1983 All. 216.

Under S. 90 of the production of a certified copy of a document which is more than 30 years old can prove the contents of the document but not its execution. The section requires production in Court of the particular document in regard to which it is asked to draw the statutory presumption of execution. [I.L.R. 57 All. 494 (P.C.), Rel. on]: 1949 Nag.L.J. 226: I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 521; I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 1000: A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 38.

The statutory presumption under S. 90 is not applicable to the certified copies of the documents being 30 years old. The certified copy of the registered Kabuliyat may, however, be received as secondary evidence of the original documents under S. 65(c) when it was transpired from evidence that the original was lost and not traceable and that non-production of the original was not due to any default or neglect on the part of the party producing the certified copy: A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 68: (1986-87) 91 Cal.W.N. 958 (D.B.).

Mere production of a certified copy of a document more than thirty years old is not sufficient to raise a presumption under S. 90 of the Evidence Act regarding its genuineness or execution although the certified copy may be used to prove the contents of the document. Where the document is registered then although its mere registration may not by itself constitute sufficient proof of the execution of the document, in view of Ss. 57 and 60 of the Registration Act, the certified copy and the certificate issued by the Registrar, would constitute sufficient evidence to prove the contents of the document and be also to some extent an evidence of the execution of the document. It may be that proof of admission of execution before the Registrar may not satisfy completely the requirements of S. 67 of the Evidence Act which requires that the signature of the executant must be proved to be in his handwriting. But it cannot be argued that admission of signature before the Registrar cannot in any case form an evidence of the execution of the document. If apart from the admission incorporated in the certificate of the Registrar under S. 60(2) of the Registration Act, there is other evidence to corroborate the admission, the execution of the document can be considered as proved: A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 284.

The statutory presumption under S. 90 can be raised only with regard to the actual document produced in Court; it cannot be raised with regard to the original document when that is not produced and when what is produced is only a certified copy: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 116: A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 319.

The presumption under S. 90 relates to the execution of the documents, i.e., signatures, attestation, etc., in other words its genuineness, but not to the truth of its contents. The presumption can be raised only with reference to original documents and cannot be availed of in case of certified copies: I.L.R. (1961) Cut. 249: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 40.

If a certified copy is admissible as secondary evidence under S. 65, Evidence Act and is produced from proper custody and is over 30 years old, the signatures authenticating the copy may be presumed to be genuine but the production of a copy is not sufficient to raise the presumption under S. 90 of due execution of the original and the party relying upon the copy should prove the due execution of the original in some way known to law, at least by approved circumstantial evidence: I.L.R. (1963) Andh. Pra. 1085; A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 400.

If a plaintiff in a suit for possession does nothing more than produce a certified copy of the original sale deed in his favour which was more than 30 years old, he would not succeed in establishing his title to the property. But if he produces evidence of identifying witness of the executants it can be held that the evidence is sufficient to prove the due execution of the sale deed in question: 1939 All.L.J. 1023: A.I.R. 1940 All. 74.

Where in a suit brought in 1961, for redemption of mortgage of 1895, by the purchaser of the rights of mortgagor, the plaintiff relied on certified copy of a statement made in mutation proceedings for the purpose of acknowledgment under S. 18 of the Limitation Act, but did not produce its original nor he examined any witness to prove the fact that the persons shown to have signed the original had in fact signed the same or those persons were the mortgagors/their representatives, held, in such circumstances, certified copy was no proof of the original nor the presumption under S. 90 or S. 114(e) could be raised: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2342: (1971) 2 S.C.R. 104.

Ancient registered document—Admissibility of certified copy for proof of contents—Proof of its execution by registrar's endorsement on the copy: (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 362. But see infra.

The statutory presumption under S. 90 cannot be made in respect of a document merely on production of its copy under S. 65 of the Act. Where the original is a registered document, and the copy produced is a certified copy, bearing the necessary endorsement of the Registering Officer before whom the executant acknowledged the execution and was duly identified, the facts mentioned in the endorsement may be proved by the endorsement, and the copy can be admitted in evidence as proof of the execution of the original: (1945) 47 Bom.L.R. 962: A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 193.

The section, worded in general terms, is meant to meet varying situations when passage of time might have obliterated the original document; it confers wide powers on the Court. However, before the presumption can be raised, it must be established that: (1) the document (certified copy) has come from proper custody, and (2) the original document has been destroyed or lost. Thus, where it was proved from the reply of the District Court that the original special wakalat, more than 30 years' old, had been destroyed as per rules, held, its certified copy coming from proper custody was entitled to the presumption under S. 90: A.I.R. 1982 Andh. Pra. 24: (1981) 2 An.W.R. 290 (D.B.).

The certified copy of a document is not admissible under S. 90. But the same may be received in evidence under S. 65 when the person in custody of the original document has refused to produce the original: 1973 B.L.J.R. 406.

Loss of a document can be proved by several modes including its having become untraceable; thus, where the plaintiff never had custody of documents more than thirty years old and stated on oath that they were not at all traceable, held, the loss of documents was established; proving them by certified copies granted by the Sub-Registrar could be allowed as well by raising the presumption under S. 90: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 611: 1991 Punj.L.J. 473.

7. Presumption in case of will.—The presumption which arises under S. 90, Evidence Act, can also be drawn in case of a will, the genuineness of which is in controversy in the Probate Court, though there is a possibility that the propounder may antedate the will and thereby call in his aid the presumption under the section: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 471: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 271; A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 566.

S. 90 applies to wills also and when the will was duly registered, a presumption of its validity would arise: 1991 Punj.L.J. 587.

A will being more than 30 years old and produced from proper custody may be presumed to have been duly executed by the testator when he was in a sound disposing state of mind. [A.I.R. 1961 Mad. 262; A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 15 and A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 29, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1976 Raj. 40: 1976 Raj.L.W. 14: 1975 W.L.N. 931. But see 1977 All.W.C. 18.

S. 90 according to its plain terms applies to wills as to other documents. If, therefore, a will made more than 30 years ago is produced from the proper custody, the Court may presume that it was duly executed and attested. Where the Court chooses to make the presumption authorised by S. 90, no further proof of the facts is necessary under S. 69: I.L.R. (1943) Cal. 392: (1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 359: A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 241.

If a document evidencing a will comes from proper custody and is more than 30 years old, a presumption arises under S. 90 that it is a genuine document and is validly executed. The presumption also extends to the due execution of the will: A.I.R. 1948 Sind 127.

The presumption under S. 90 is one of due execution and attestation. This involves the idea that the document was executed duly and attested duly; in other words, that the document was validly executed. This involves a further conception that the testator had testamentary capacity to execute the will. Thus, the Court may presume that the will in question was duly executed and attested in accordance with the formalities required by the Indian Succession Act: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 471: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 271.

The presumption under S. 90 is one of due execution and attestation as well as of testamentary capacity of the testator executing a will. This presumption does not extend to the truth of the contents of the will: A.I.R. 1988 Cal. 196 (D.B.).

The presumption about wills not only applies to signatures but also to their due execution and attestation; the presumption also extends to the fact that on the date when the will was executed the testator was in a sound and disposing state of mind and that the will was genuine; the presumption will obviously apply only to a document which bears the signature of the writer or of witnesses and not to an unsigned or anonymous document though the presumption of execution shall extend to a mark put on the document to indicate its execution by a symbolic writing in the absence of proof to the contrary. Any recognised form in which a person affixes or impresses his name or mark either by himself or by another person with the intention to treat it as his signature is sufficient in law to draw the presumption under S. 90. [I.L.R. 47 All. 31 (F.B.); I.L.R. 24 All. 319; A.I.R. 1961 Ori. 180, Foll.]: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 350 (D.B.); (1985) 1 Karn.L.J. 331; (1991) 1 Ker.L.T. 559: (1990) 1 Ker.L.J. 354; I.L.R. (1992) 3 Ker. 543.

As the affixing of the signature of the attesting witnesses in the presence of the testator is the ordinary mode of attesting a document and is the mode by which attestation is defined in S. 3 of the T.P. Act, where under S. 90 of the Evidence Act the presumption of due execution of a will is drawn, it necessarily amounts to a finding that the attesting witnesses signed in the presence of testator: A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 449.

Where a will was more than thirty years old and was produced from proper custody, on a question whether the presumption under S. 90 of the Evidence Act extended to the testamentary capacity of the testator in addition to its actual execution and attestation, held, that a party setting up a will is required to prove that the testator was of sound disposing state of mind when he made his will but in the absence of any evidence as to the state of the testator's mind, proof that he had executed a will rational in character in the presence of witnesses must lead to a presumption that he was of sound mind, and understood what he was about. This presumption can be justified under the express provisions of S. 90 since a will cannot be said to be 'duly' executed by a person who was not competent to execute it; and the presumption can be fortified under the more general provisions of S. 114 of the Act, since it is likely that a man who performs a solemn and rational act in the presence of witnesses in sane and understands what he is about: (1946) 2 M.L.J. 453 (P.C.): I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 917: A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 15 (P.C.); 1959 B.L.J.R. 525.

Although the document produced is a certified copy of a will more than thirty years old, the presumption under S. 90 cannot be raised with respect to the original. Its due execution should be proved at least by approved circumstantial evidence.

Where the certified copy shows that the original contained an endorsement by the Sub-Registrar under S. 60 of the Registration Act, it can be taken as evidence of the fact that the original contained the testator's signature.

The fact that the will which came into effect in the year 1921 had not been disputed at all by any one of the several persons who could have disputed it, is the strongest piece of evidence that everybody interested and likely to have been in a position easily to ascertain the facts, took it for a valid will.

The same circumstances that raise a presumption that the will was duly attested and executed also afford evidence that the testator was in a sound disposing state of mind when he executed it: A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 720.

Where a certified copy of a registered will is produced from Registration Department, the fact that it is more than thirty years old cannot lead to a presumption about the genuineness of the original: All that can be presumed is that the officer granting the copy endorsed it as an authentic copy: 1958 M.P.C. 351: 1958 Jab.L.J. 512: 1958 M.P.L.J. 513: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 261.

The production of a certified copy of a will more than thirty years old from the Registration Office cannot be considered to be sufficient to justify the presumption of due execution of the original will under the provisions of S. 90, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 146: I.L.R. (1957) Punj. 418.

Apart from S. 90, the Court can make a presumption of fact about the valid execution of a will from a certified copy of the will obtained from the Registration office, if such presumption is justified by the proved facts and circumstances of the case: A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 69: I.L.R. 13 Luck. 723.

A will which was a registered document of 30 years old, when tendered in evidence and was produced from a proper custody should be presumed as a valid and genuine document. Where all the parties to a will, excepting the beneficiary are dead and the signature of the scribe had been identified by his fellow deed writer who was acquainted with his signature, the will could not be said to have been not proved. In such circumstances, the onus shifts to the defendants and where none of them examine themselves, the presumption does not stand rebutted: I.L.R. (1979) 2 Cut. 130: (1979) 48 Cut.L.T. 211.

Where ownership was sought to be established by a registered will, more than 30 years old but without the plea that it had been acted upon after the testator's death, that he was in a sound state of mind at the time of its execution, that it was duly attested and that it was his last will and testament nor was it made clear as to how the propounder had gained knowledge of the will, held, no presumption under S. 90 could be raised; it being a registered will was of no importance: A.I.R. 1992 Karn. 282.

Under S. 90, the Court has got a judicial discretion to be exercised in drawing the presumption. But the Court cannot arbitrarily say that it will not draw the presumption merely because the matter is one for the exercise of its discretion. Where it is found that the document in question emanates from an apparently lawful custody and where the document is such that it is likely to have been executed, the Court will draw the presumption. However, in as much as the presumption dispenses with proof of due execution in cases of testament where the onus of proof is heavy on the propounders of the will, the Court must act with extreme caution and the utmost circumspection: (1961) 74 Mad.L.W. 261: A.I.R. 1961 Mad. 262.

A party setting up a will is required to prove that the testator was of sound disposing mind when he made his will but, in the absence of any evidence as to the state of the testator's mind, proof that he had executed a will rational in character in the presence of witnesses must lead to a presumption that he was of sound mind and understood what he was about. The circumstance that the purported signature of the testator in the will does not contain the surname, far from being a suspicious one, invests the document with an impress of truth. Where the will was ex facie duly executed and properly attested and the agnatic relations of the testator agreed to the will and some of the blood relations actually attested it, the execution of the will is not only not improbable but also probable: A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 29.

In a case based upon a will, the propounder or the plaintiff must plead that the document was properly executed and duly attested and was the last will of the testator. He cannot say that the defendants had not denied those facts. The question of presumption under S. 90 would arise only with respect to a case set up by the plaintiff and not with respect to a case which was never pleaded by the plaintiff. Where the plaintiff has not pleaded that the will was duly attested, there will be no question of presuming attestation under S. 90, Evidence Act. Assuming that the presumption under S. 90 could be made and the valid attestation of the will could be upheld though not pleaded by the plaintiff, the presumption will not extend to the will being the last will of the testator. The mere fact that it was a registered document would not contra-indicate its cancellation at a subsequent date of the making of another will at a later date, particularly when the testator lived for more than thirty years after the will: 1967 Mah.L.J. 41: (1967) 69 Bom.L.R. 559: A.I.R. 1967 Bom. 382.

Where a person executes a will and deposits it with the Registrar and the endorsement by the Registrar shows that the will was so deposited by the executant on being identified by two persons, a presumption under S. 90 as to execution arises. The presumption, however, does not cover the question of a disposing mind: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 53: 145 I.C. 241.

Production of copy of will purporting to be 30 years old does not warrant presumption of its execution or attestation—Presumption under S. 90 arises in respect of original document: (1968) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 75: (1968) 2 S.C.R. 292: A.I.R. 1968 S.C. 947.

The burden of proving the fact that the testator at the time of execution of the will was of sound mind lies upon the party setting up the will. However, when the will was executed about 45 years back by which time almost all the attesting witnesses would have been dead, it is necessary to prove that the executor was of sound mind at the time of execution of the will. The fact that the will was rational in character as having been made in favour of a public trust and that by the will the widows of the testator had been nicely provided for upto their life-time and that no near relative had been deprived of the property, will itself raise a presumption that the executor was of sound mind at the time of making the will. Hence, the proof of the handwriting of the attesting witnesses will be sufficient to prove the fact that the executor was of sound mind when he executed the will: 1968 M.P.L.J. 545: A.I.R. 1969 Madh. Pra. 4.

8. "Duly executed and attested".—The words 'duly executed and attested' merely mean execution and attestation according to law. The question whether the document has been explained to the executant and whether she has fully understood the import and effect of it, is hardly a question of execution: I.L.R. 5 Luck. 526: A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 103.

The words 'duly executed' in S. 90 mean execution by a person legally competent to execute the document. [A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 744; A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 15; A.I.R. 1962 Andh. Pra. 29, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1977 Ker. 41: I.L.R. (1976) 2 Ker. 678 (D.B.).

Presumption can be raised in the case of School register 30 years old: 163 I.C. 811: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 104.

When a Registrar makes his endorsement on the back of a document, he is simply carrying out the statutory duties under the Registration Act and makes the signature alia intutio and is not purporting to attest the document. And though the endorsement shows that the Registrar received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of his signature, in the absence of evidence that the Registrar signed in the presence of the executant, no presumption can possibly be made under S. 90, that the signature of the Registrar was affixed in the presence of the executant or that the document was duly attested, even if the document is over 30 years old: I.L.R. 61 Cal. 525: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 772.

9. Proper custody.—Before a custody can be said to be proper, it should afford reasonable assurance of authenticity of the document: A.I.R 1952 Trav.-Co. 438. Whether custody is proper is a question of fact: 126 I.C. 19. As to proper custody, see 94 I.C. 814: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 370; I.L.R. 12 Luck. 400: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 194.

It is for the Court to decide in each case whether the custody from which the document is produced is or is not proper and if it considers the custody to be proper it can raise the presumption. Where the lower Court draws the presumption after considering the circumstances of the case, the High Court will not interfere in second appeal: (1930) 32 Punj.L.R. 626: A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 43. See also (1936) 38 Punj.L.R. 322: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 17; 11 O.W.N. 1435: A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 96; A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 347: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 356; 1938 A.M.L.J. 563; I.L.R. 14 Luck. 393: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 96.

And where the appellate Court is constrained to do so, the party producing the document should be given an opportunity of supporting the presumption: 1933 All.L.J. 907: A.I.R. 1933 All. 443.

Proof of custody—Satisfactory account of the origin of custody and not of the history of its circumstances essential: (1971) 1 A.P.L.J. 350 (D.B.).

Where certain partition deeds which were more than thirty years old had been produced by the defendant who stated on oath that they had been entrusted to him by the vendee of property covered by those deeds for the purpose of certain cases in Court; the custody of such documents cannot be said to be improper and the Court would be entitled to raise a presumption as to their genuineness under S. 90: 1955 Raj.L.W. 434: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 179.

Where a sale has been made nearly 30 years before the suit is brought and all the parties to the transaction have died, it is impossible to expect full and detailed evidence of all circumstances that gave rise to the transaction and presumptions are permissible to fill in the details which have been obliterated by time: 30 Nag.L.R. 192: A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 106.

Where the genuineness of an ancient register maintained at, and by, the Church, coming from proper custody, evidenced payment of streedhanam decades ago at the time of the two sisters' marriage where there could be no motive for making any false or imaginary entries and its genuineness was also not disputed, held, the genuineness of the entries stood proved: A.I.R. 1979 Ker. 34: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Ker. 83: 1979 Ker.L.T. 130 (F.B.).

In case where documents more than 30 years old are being produced only as instances of a particular custom and not as foundation of title, such documents may be admitted in evidence irrespective of the fact whether they come from proper custody or not: (1939) 41 Punj.L.R. 670: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 152.

Where a letter written by the lessee to the lessor was more than thirty years old and came from proper custody, held, presumption under S. 90 may be raised: A.I.R. 1978 Cal. 312 (D.B.).

10. Computation of thirty years.—The period of 30 years, under S. 90, is to be reckoned not from the date upon which the deed is filed in the Court but from the date on which, it having been tendered in evidence, its genuineness or otherwise becomes subject of proof: 63 I.A. 85: A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 15: 70 M.L.J. 206 (P.C.); 169 I.C. 402.

As the rule embodied in S. 90 is based on the impossibility of obtaining living testimony to the signing or the handwriting of a document, it logically follows that time should run from the date which the document bears whether it is a will or any other document. Hence, the period of presumption in case of will also begins from the date of execution and not from the date of the death of the testator which is the date from which the will becomes operative. Similarly, the outer limits of the period of thirty years is the date when the will is sought to be proved and not the date of its filing in Court: A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 471: (1953-54) 58 Cal.W.N. 271. See also (1980) 2 Karn.L.J. 380.

The material date for the admissibility of a document is the date on which it is tendered in evidence and not on the date when it is filed in the Court. (See A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 15): A.I.R. 1972 All. 406; 1979 R.D. 233.

But see (1993) 1 Hindu L.R. 433 (Del.) [Where at the time the suit was filed, the document was not 30 years old, held, no presumption can be drawn regarding its due execution by reference to the provisions of S. 90].

11. Objection to admissibility of document.—Objection to admissibility of document—Time for—Document marked as exhibit under S. 90, Evidence Act—Failure to raise objection as to its admissibility—Effect. See A.I.R. 1958 Ori. 26.

It is well settled that if the mode of proof is not challenged at the time of exhibition of the document, it cannot be allowed to be challenged at a later stage: (1984) 86 Punj.L.R. 272: 1984 Rev.L.R. 179; (1987) 2 W.L.N. 791: 1987 Raj.L.W. 584.

A document once exhibited without objection cannot be objected to later on. Thus, where the lower appellate Court rejected registered documents, 80 and 73 years old, respectively which were exhibited during trial without objection, held, the lower appellate Court erred in holding that presumption of their due execution or genuineness could not be raised under S. 90; S. 90 is a solution to the difficulty in proving documents more than 20 years old [under the provisions as applicable in U.P.] by witnesses which may well be impossible; though presumption under S. 90 is discretionary, the Court could raise the presumption under Ss. 4 and 114; S. 60 of the Registration Act also provides for raising such presumption of execution and correctness of the contents of a duly registered document: A.I.R. 1988 All. 57: (1988) 14 All.L.R. 174.

Where the defendants produced a certified copy of a registered will which was 80 years old and the plaintiffs neither asked the defendants to produce the original will nor they objected to its admissibility, held, in second appeal, no objection regarding admissibility or due execution and attestation of the will could be taken. [A.I.R. 1968 All. 363, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1980 N.O.C. 7 (All.).

12. Evidentiary value of recitals in document.—Repeated assertions of title in ancient documents being recitals are no evidence of what is there recited, though actual possession in conformity therewith would constitute prima facie title: 56 Cal.L.J. 369: A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 222.

Under S. 90, apart from the presumption of due execution, there is no presumption that the document has the legal effect that it purports to have. In the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow, even if the execution of the document by her is admitted or proved, on the question whether she alienated only her life estate in the property or whether she made an absolute alienation; no assistance can be derived from S. 90. Such matters are extraneous to the execution of the documents. However, a presumption can be drawn in certain circumstances in the case of ancient alienations by Hindu widows. No presumption can be drawn as to the existence of legal necessity from the single circumstance that the alienation by the Hindu widow was of the year 1921, in a suit for declaration of title by the next reversioner in the year 1951 when other evidence as to the circumstances of legal necessity has not disappeared: 1960 Nag.L.J. 113: (1960) 62 Bom.L.R. 322: A.I.R. 1961 Bom. 169.

13. U.P. Amendment.—The presumption which was by virtue of S. 90(1) available in respect of the original documents has now been, by virtue of S. 90(2), extended even to certified copies of registered documents. The provision in S. 90 can have no effect on Ss. 61, 62, 63 and 65 of the Evidence Act which occur in Chapter V of the Act and which chapter deals with documentary evidence. Contents of a document can be proved by tendering the document itself, i.e., by tendering primary evidence, and secondary evidence can be given to achieve the same object only in circumstances enumerated in S. 65.

There arises no occasions to raise a presumption under S. 90 till a case for the reception of secondary evidence has been made out. After the amendment, the presumption under S. 90 is to be made in respect of 20 years' old document and the same can also be extended to copies. There is no other effect of the amendment. So far as the right to offer secondary evidence is concerned, it continues to be governed by the same provisions even after the amendment introduced in S. 90 by which it used to be governed prior to this amendment. The only effect of the amendment is that if a party is found entitled to offer secondary evidence in accordance with the provisions contained in Chapter V of the Act, then he shall have no more to lead evidence to prove its execution provided the document is 20 years old.

Where in a suit filed in 1956, for possession of suit property and for damages, the plaintiffs relied on sale deed of 1896 and they failed in proving the loss of original deed, they could not be allowed to lead secondary evidence of the same by tendering in evidence their certified copies to prove the contents of sale deed.

Mere failure to file the original sale deed does not mean that the original sale deed has been lost. Absence of possession of the original can be due to various reasons other than loss of the original. If the transaction evidenced by the sale deed in question was never intended to be a genuine transfer, there would be no occasion for the original sale deed coming into possession of the purchaser in whose name it is executed and in that case absence of possession of the original deed by the purchaser or the purchaser's successor-in-interest may mean that the original has been lost: A.I.R. 1968 All. 363.

On a plain reading of S. 90(2), as amended by U.P. Legislature, it is clear that the presumption which can be raised in respect of the original can also be raised in respect of a certified copy, the only condition being the certified copy should be that of a document more than 20 years old. This sub-section is not controlled by S. 90-A(2): 1971 R.D. 546.

In view of the amended provisions of S. 90 of the Indian Evidence Act by the State of U.P., a certified copy of a registered document is a good piece of evidence. [A.I.R. 1980 All. 385, Foll.]: 1983 R.D. 218.

The original S. 90, renumbered as sub-S. (1) of S. 90, allows a presumption to be raised only to such documents which are produced by a party from proper custody; no such condition is super imposed by the Legislature on documents falling in the category enumerated in S. 90(2), which is for the sake of general convenience meant to avoid the difficulty which is generally felt in getting the original of registered documents filed as evidence. S. 90 is neither controlled by S. 65 or by S. 90(1): (1981) 7 All.L.R. 284.

The presumption under S. 90 is not subject to the exception given in S. 90-A(2) of the Act. The correct interpretation of the two sections, i.e., S. 90 as amended and S. 90-A read together will be that in cases where a registered document or certified copy thereof is more than twenty years old, the same may be presumed without formal proof of execution and attestation even though the said document or certified copy is the basis of suit or of defence, whereas under S. 90-A, if a document is not more than twenty years old but a registered document or a duly certified copy thereof, a presumption about its due execution can also be made provided the document does not form the basis of the suit or defence. S. 90-A also refers to presumption in respect of documents which are parts of the record: 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 188.

There is no conflict between the provisions of S. 90 as amended in U.P. and S. 90-A as added in U.P. though they are designed to operate in different fields, yet they can operate simultaneously over a limited common area also. They do not mutally exclude the applicability of one by the other. A document which is registered and is also more than 20 years old cannot be admitted in evidence under S. 90-A, if it is the basis of the suit or of defence, yet it can still be held proved in view of the provisions of S. 90 and a presumption referred to therein can be raised in respect of such a document: A.I.R. 1981 All. 274.

The presumption under S. 90-A, Evidence Act, may be made only if the original shows on the face of it the name of the person by whom it purports to have been executed. The mere fact that it is 20 or 30 years old does not make it admissible without proof. The presumption under—S. 90-A is with regard to the execution of a document and in that respect S. 90-A is narrower in scope than S. 90, under which a presumption may be made that a document is in the handwriting of a person by whom it purports to have been written. It is not without reason that the legislature while amending S. 90, Evidence Act, confined the scope of S. 90-A to raising a presumption regarding the execution only as it has within its purview not only a registered document but also a certified copy of a document forming part of the record of a Court of justice: A.I.R. 1962 All. 111.

A presumption may be raised, if permissible, under one provision and not under another; thus, if a presumption is not available under S. 90-A(1) but available under S. 90-A(2) or any other provision, the Court may draw it. Similarly, a presumption available under S. 90 may be raised by the Court even after coming to the conclusion that it is not available under S. 90-A: A.I.R. 1980 All. 385 (F.B.).

The presumption under S. 90, so far as it relates to registered documents, applies only to documents which are more than 20 years old and the presumption is not subject to a condition similar to the one contained in sub-S. (2) of S. 90-A. On the other hand, the presumption available under sub-S. (1) of S. 90-A applies to registered documents or copies which are not more than 20 years old and that is subject to the condition laid in sub-S. (2) of this section, that it will not apply to those documents which are the basis of the suit of defence or are relied upon in this plaint or written statement: 1971 All.L.J. 992.

S. 90-A(2), no doubt, provides that the presumption under S. 90-A(1) shall not be made in respect of any document forming the basis of a decree in a suit or of a defence or is relied upon in a plaint or written statement, where, however, a judgment in a suit, is only one of several pieces of evidence, and not the sole basis of the defence set up, the bar under S. 90-A(2) loses force. If the party relying on the presumption alleges fraud in respect of the judgment or decree in question, it is for that party to summon the original and adduce evidence in support of the plea of fraud set up by that party: 1971 R.D. 298 (All.).

Presumptions under Ss. 90 and 90-A are not similar; S. 90(2) permits raising of presumption about signature, handwriting, execution and attestation; while S. 90 permits to raise it only in respect of execution of documents more than 20 years old, S. 90-A places no such restriction and includes even documents from judicial record; neither of the two sections, therefore, encroaches upon a field exclusively occupied by the other; they deal with different fields and different circumstances and permit different types of presumptions to be raised. It is, thus, not possible to hold that S. 90-A(2) will override and nullify S. 90, if the document, though more than 20 years old, is the basis of the suit or defence or is relied upon in the plaint or the written statement. [A.I.R. 1974 All. 389, Overruled; 1969 All.W.R. (H.C.) 188; 1970 All.W.R. (H.C.) 634 and 1971 All.L.J. 992, Approved]: A.I.R. 1980 All. 385 (F.B.).

Release application by landlord contending that family partition took place and that disputed shop came to his share—Certified copy of memorandum of partition obtained from record of earlier suit filed—Memorandum of partition, held, was admissible: 1979 (U.P.) R.C.C. 608.

Presumption under—Gift deed ignored on ground of production of only a copy and not having been proved in accordance with law—Such discarding is patent error: 1979 R.D. 233 (All.).

A deed of adoption does not require attestation and if the document is registered and is produced from proper custody, the provisions of S. 90-A could have applied thereto. However, where the deed of adoption was a document which was referred to and relied upon in the written statement, held, even though the original document had been filed, yet on account of the proviso to S. 90-A(1), the presumption which could have been raised under S. 90-A(1) will not apply in such a case: A.I.R. 1981 All. 274.

Where in a registered lease deed, twenty years or more old, the plaintiff and the defendants were conferred by the ex-zamindars additional rights as sons of their father, held, the plaintiff's suit for partition and separation of his one-fifth share in the suit property could

CHAPTER VI

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

91. Evidence of terms of contracts, grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document.—When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or of such matter, except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Exception 1.—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved.

Exception 2.—Wills [1][admitted to probate in [2][India]] may be proved by the probate.

Explanation 1.—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts, grants or dispositions of property referred to are contained in one document, and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one.

Explanation 2.—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved.

Explanation 3.—The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.

not be said to be the basis of his suit; S. 90-A(2) was not attracted: A.I.R. 1972 All. 406.

When presumption under S. 90-A has been raised by the trial Court and the lower appellate Court in exercise of their discretion, the High Court in second appeal should not interfere unless it is established that the discretion has been exercised arbitrarily without the consideration of material evidence on record: A.I.R. 1986 All. 163.

Chapter VI—Note.

The law does not permit Courts to brush aside completely the testimony of witnesses on the general assumption that witnesses are always easy for the party to procure; it would be unnecessarily uncomplementary to the witness; the Courts have therefore, to be very cautious in making observations about the credit worthiness of witnesses. Examination of witnesses is not a mere formality to fulfil the requirement of the law of procedure; Courts are free to draw their inference from the deposition but not to ignore it; the practice of ignoring relevant oral evidence in the face of documentary evidence is not warranted in law. There are only certain conditions as laid down in Chap. 6 whereby documentary evidence excludes oral evidence; in all other cases relevant oral evidence must be considered alongwith documentary evidence; there may be certain facts which are not reflected by documents. (a) If a contract be contained in several letters, all the letters in which it is contained must be proved.

(b) If a contract is contained in a bill of exchange, the bill of exchange must be proved.

(c) If a bill of exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d) A contracts, in writing, with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms. The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

Oral evidence is offered that no payment was made for the other indigo. The evidence is admissible.

(e) A gives B a receipt for money paid by B.

Oral evidence is offered of the payment.

The evidence is admissible.

1. Scope and applicability.—It is a cardinal rule in the law of evidence that the best available evidence should be brought before the Court. Ss. 60, 64 and 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 are based on this rule: 1995 Cr.L.J. 76 (Ori.).

The moment an oral contract is reduced to writing, it is not open to any of the parties thereto to prove the terms of the contract by referring to any original oral agreement. S. 91 would stand in his way and he would be precluded from proving the terms of the transaction otherwise than by the deed itself: A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu 34; A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 546: 28 Mad.L.W. 234; A.I.R. 1957 Manipur 9.

The moment an oral contract is reduced to writing it is not open to any of the parties thereafter to seek to prove the terms except by producing the document itself or secondary evidence of it. It does not make any difference to the operation of S. 91, Evidence Act, whether the parties subsequently changed their minds with regard to getting the document registered. The terms of the contract remain the same. A distinction cannot be drawn between a deed evidencing a contract and an instrument which of itself operates to transfer title so far as the application of S.91 is concerned. Both are equally hit by the section: A.I.R. 1955 Vindh. Pra. 41.

Where the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing at the same time as it is made, the document only, or if permissible, secondary evidence of its contents can be the only evidence available to prove the document under S. 91; the parties are debarred from adducing oral evidence to prove such contract: 22 Pat.L.T. 666: A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 245; I.L.R. 33 Mad. 413: 11 Cr.L.J. 716; 13 R.D. 685; 3 Pat.L.T. 485: A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 111; A.I.R. 1956 Him. Pra. 22; A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 51; (1988) 2 An.L.T. (N.R.C.) 7.

Where a contract is entered into between parties, the contract deals with the subject-matter as well as the persons between whom it is entered into, and the names of the parties in so far as they relate to terms which create obligations cannot be regarded as so divorced from the terms of the contracts, that evidence may be led to show that some other persons intended to incur obligations under the contract instead of the parties designated therein: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 165.

What is the precise legal connotation of the expression 'terms' used in Ss. 91 and 92? Terms of a contract necessarily postulate a contract in existence containing statements in the nature of terms; the expression 'terms of a contract' would not apply to a statement contained in a written document which is in the nature of a condition precedent to the very formation of that contract; 'terms' must relate to statements, assertions or representations contained in a written contract relating to its subject-matter and to something to be done or not to be done under the contract. [(1908) I.L.R. 31 Mad. 45, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 365: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 509: 1972 Mah.L.J. 756.

Ss. 91 and 92 are clearly attracted when a transaction has been reduced to writing, whether by the parties' consent or by requirement of law; the written instrument then becomes the only permissible evidence of the terms of the contract; so long as the writing exists and is within the party's power, no other evidence is admissible: A.I.R. 1975 Gau. 43 (D.B.).

A perusal of Ss. 91 and 92 makes it clear that it restricts oral evidence against the terms of the sale-deed between the 'parties'. The word 'parties' used in these sections contemplates vendor on one side and the vendee on the other and their representatives. Thus, the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92 are not applicable to a case where there is a dispute between vendees inter se and the Court will be justified in considering the oral evidence regarding the shares of the parties against the terms of the sale deed: 1982 All.L.J. 264.

Both documentary and oral evidence are evidence; there is no provision empowering the Courts to prefer documentary to oral evidence, though on facts of each case and the nature of the documents proved and character of the witnesses, the Courts may exclude specific evidence against documentary evidence; otherwise, the Courts are not prohibited to prefer or act upon oral testimony to documentary evidence for good and sufficient reasons: A.I.R. 1992 Karn. 160: (1992) 1 Karn.L.J. 160.

There is no conflict between Ss. 91 and 145 and S. 49 of the Registration Act; S. 145 is meant for a totally different purpose; its first part permits putting of relevant oral questions in cross-examination without showing the writing to the witness or proving it; but if it is intended to contradict him with any of its part, it may be done so provided it is not inadmissible for want of registration; if it is so admissible, it may be proved; the bar of S. 92 would not be attracted in such a case: A.I.R. 1974 P.&H. 350 (D.B.).

If there was ab initio a stipulation between the parties that the contract would not be enforced or acted upon, oral evidence in support of such a plea may be given; true, under Ss. 91 and 92 when the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing, extrinsic evidence as to what transpired subsequent to the contract is not admissible for ascertaining the terms and no oral agreement or statement is admissible contradicting, varying, adding and substracting from its terms. S. 92 does not preclude a party from showing that the writing is not really a contract but only a fictitious or colourable device which cloaked something else: 1972 Jab.L.J. 632: 1972 M.P.L.J. 852 (D.B.).

When the recitals in documents are absolutely clear and are expressed in unmistakable terms, there is no room for adducing evidence aliunde to contradict the recitals of these documents, and any evidence so adduced is clearly hit by Ss. 91 and 92: 1974 Kash.L.J. 331.

S. 91 does not stand in the way of a party to show that the original agreement continues to govern them notwithstanding any change or variation of any particular term thereof; however, if oral evidence to that effect is excluded, it will have no effect on the Court's ultimate decision: A.I.R. 1975 All. 73: 1974 All.L.J. 845.

S. 91 read with its Explanation 3 clearly lays down that if oral evidence sought to be adduced does not relate to (a) terms of the contract, grant or other disposition of property or (b) matters required by law to be reduced to writing, held, S. 91 constitutes no bar: A.I.R. 1993 Andh. Pra. 130: (1992) 3 An.L.T. 373.

S. 91 precludes any other evidence, apart from terms of the document itself, from being taken in to prove such terms; however, it does not preclude even in case of an unregistered deed of sale, not brought on the record, evidence of oral sale having been effected: A.I.R. 1976 Pat. 18: 1976 B.L.J.R. 378 (D.B.).

Whether a transaction embodied in a document is sham or fictitious and not real may be proved by inferences which may reasonably be drawn from the intrinsic evidence respecting the transaction itself or from extrinsic circumstances surrounding the transaction; such evidence is not barred under Ss. 91 and 92: A.I.R. 1978 All. 123 (D.B.).

The provisions of S. 91 are not applicable to a permission granted by a Municipal Committee: 120 I.C. 221: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 130.

Where officials from the Municipal Corporation, Excise and Sales Tax Departments deposed on the basis of official records the name of a party's father, held, S. 91 was not attracted as the oral evidence was not with reference to the terms of a contract or grant or disposition of property; the evidence was, thus, admissible though in the absence of the extracts of official records, it may be worth nothing: (1990) 40 Del.L.T. 1 (S.C.).

Having regard to the terms of S. 91, what the Court has got to do is to find out the real contract between the parties: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 459. The term 'in proof of such matter' must carry with it the term 'in disproof of it', because if evidence were to be admitted on one side, it would have to be admitted on the other. Therefore, a Court which allows evidence to prove that a payment endorsed on a promissory note had not been made, violates the provisions of S. 91: 1935 All.L.J. 304: A.I.R. 1935 All. 58. See also I.L.R. (1950) All. 1033: A.I.R. 1951 All. 93 (F.B.).

A document which is signed only by one of the parties is not a written agreement, and oral evidence is admissible to show the real intention of the parties. But see A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 389; A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 32 (P.C.).

Even though a contract in writing was signed only by a certain party, oral evidence could be adduced to show that another person was also a party to the arrangement or was bound by it: 43 Mad.L.W. 218: A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 5.

S. 91, even if it covers a deposition, merely excludes oral evidence of its contents but does not make the document itself inadmissible or prevent its being otherwise proved: 74 I.C. 445: A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 119.

Where there is any dispute that the actual contract between the parties was the one recorded in the deed, it will not be thereafter open to the parties to let in oral evidence to prove that its terms were different from what is contained in the deed. S. 92 precludes such a course. When it is admitted that the actual contract between the parties has been reduced to writing, oral evidence cannot be given to show that its terms were different from those found in the deed. S. 91 of the Evidence Act forbids such a course. There is material difference between an attempt to show that the terms of a contract were different from those recorded in a deed and an attempt to show that the contract as mentioned in the deed was not the real contract. It is the former that is hit by S. 91 of the Evidence Act but the latter is not to hit. The contention of the plaintiff is that the actual contract itself was different, and that for certain reasons it was made to appear in the document that it was a rectification deed. S. 91 does not preclude the plaintiff from proving that the real contract was different from what is found in the deed: A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 360.

Where the consideration set out in the document was the Bank's (future) readiness to advance some loans when the loans had already been advanced and were not to be advanced afresh, held, it is settled law that if a document mentions a wrong consideration, oral evidence is admissible to show what the real consideration was; Ss. 91 and 92 restrict oral evidence regarding the contract's terms; its consideration is certainly not a term of the contract. A contract is nothing but a promise to do or forbear to do something; anything which enlarges or limits or conditions the promise is alone hit by the bar. [A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 320 and A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 91, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 93 (D.B.).

S. 34 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act lays down the procedure for making entries in the mutation register and the orders to be passed by the Revenue Officer; it does not—and no other provision in the Act does—even remotely deals with the relevance or admissibility of any evidence; by no stretch of imagination can it be said that S. 34 of the said Act constitutes a special provision to override Ss. 65 and 91. [1979 Punj.L.J. 82, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 109 (F.B.).

A new term sought to be introduced in written compromise, inconsistent with tenor of the draft of the compromise—Evidence of the new term is not admissible under S. 91, when compromise is sought to be enforced as a contract: A.I.R. 1961 Pat. 310.

Intention of parties to a document must be gathered from terms of document and surrounding circumstances—Subsequent conduct cannot be proved to show that intention was different: I.L.R. (1963) 15 Assam 496: A.I.R. 1965 Assam 90; 1976 Punj.L.J. 20.

Document embodying only some terms of contract—Oral evidence of other terms not inconsistent with written terms is admissible: A.I.R. 1930 All. 615. Verbal negotiations leading up to an express contract in writing cannot be set up as an independent contract and are not admissible in evidence: I.L.R. 53 All. 114: A.I.R. 1931 All. 183 (F.B.).

To the extent, the terms of contract are clear and unambiguous, aliunde evidence bearing on the construction of any of the terms of the contract is inadmissible and should not be looked into: I.L.R. (1960) Mys. 151: A.I.R. 1961 Mys. 29.

In order to ascertain as to what really was intended by the transaction was set down in the document or the document was merely meant to be something different which the parties sough to hide by their collateral agreement, held, it is permissible to adduce evidence of the parties' subsequent conduct and other surrounding circumstances; Ss. 91 and 92 are not attracted: A.I.R. 1981 N.O.C. 94: 1981 M.P.L.J. 391; 1972 Mah.L.J. 509: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 246.

In the case of conveyance deeds executed, held, no oral evidence for the purpose of adding to their terms can be admitted under Ss. 91 and 92: 1973 Rev.L.R. 484: 1973 Cur.L.J. 599 (Punj.).

Where the language of a document is plain and unambiguous, held, no party is entitled to lead oral evidence in order to vary its plain meaning for deciding whether it is a will or not: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 637 (Bom.).

S. 91 has no application to matters entered in a special diary under S. 172 of the Cr.P. Code. Oral evidence is admissible to prove statements made to the Police by witnesses who heard them made: 18 Cr.L.J. 1022: 42 I.C. 766.

An arbitration agreement is a contract within the meaning of S. 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, and when the parties to an agreement of reference refer a dispute which arises between them, they cannot lead evidence to vary or add to the terms of the agreement by saying that they made the reference in any other capacity save that appearing from the agreement itself: A.I.R. 1957 All. 406.

Statements in power-of-attorney have to be proved like any other statements: A.I.R. 1970 Manipur 57.

2. Scope and effect of this section and section 92.—In view of the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92, a mortgage-deed cannot be of any declaration that the rights transferred may not merely be of those of the mortgagee but of a full owner: A.I.R. 1955 Ajmer 28.

Ss. 91 and 92 are very clear; under S. 91 when a transaction is reduced to the form of a document, whether by the parties' consent or agreement or by requirement of law, that document alone must be regarded as the sole appropriate evidence of the terms of the contract; so long as the document exists, and is within the party's power, no other evidence of the transaction is admissible; under S. 92, when the parties voluntarily and deliberately set down in writing the terms of a transaction, it is presumed between themselves and their privies that they intended the document to be a full and final statement of their intentions and they are, therefore, precluded under S. 92 from giving any extrinsic evidence to contradict or vary its terms; nothing in S. 92 warrant that its bar extends only to agreements required by law to be registered; however, it does not preclude the parties that the document was not really the contract between them but only a fictitious or colourable device to cloak something else; all contracts must be made animo contrabandi; parole evidence, it is settled law, is admissible to prove absence of such animus. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70; A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 335 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 360, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Gau. 43 (D.B.).

In order to establish what the terms of the disposition of property were, it would not be open to a party to whom the property is transferred, or the party transferring the property to prove the terms of the disposition by any other evidence excepting the document itself. But under S. 92, it is open to a party to a document to contend that either there was a failure or a want of consideration and therefore the document is not binding upon him or the document is invalidated. It is always open to parties to an agreement or a document containing disposition of property to prove that certain recitals which are statements of facts are not correct. If the parties were to do that, then they are not in any way contradicting or varying or adding to or subtracting from the terms of the contract or disposition. But consideration is undoubtedly a term—and very important term—of a contract or a deed of conveyance or of gift. A conveyance may mention the consideration for the transfer of property. A deed of gift may mention that the term of the transfer of property is that there is no consideration. When the party tried to establish that the deed of gift was not a deed of gift but a conveyance of property for consideration, it was contradicting an important term of the deed of gift: I.L.R. (1955) Bom. 309: A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 122. (This decision was reversed in A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448).

S. 92 only excludes oral evidence to vary the terms of the written contract, and has no reference to the question whether the parties had agreed to contract on the terms set forth in the document. So also S. 91 only excludes oral evidence as to the terms of a written contract. Oral evidence is admissible, therefore, to show that a document executed by a person was never intended to operate as an agreement, but brought into existence solely for the purpose of creating evidence about some other matter. Even if there were no provisos to Ss. 91 and 92, there is nothing in either section to exclude oral evidence in such a case to show that there was no agreement between the parties and therefore, no contract: 63 I.A. 126: I.L.R. 59 Mad. 446: A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 70: 70 M.L.J. 232 (P.C.); A.I.R. 1938 All. 132: 1937 All.L.J. 1352. See also A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 320: (1938) 1 M.L.J. 236; I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 1; A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 335 (F.B.); 7 Mys.H.C.R. 189; A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 222; A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 26: I.L.R. 13 Luck. 697. See also 1977 B.L.J.R. 308: 1977 B.B.C.J. 520.

Evidence intended to show that there was no grant, contract or disposition of property does not offend against the provisions of either S. 91 or S. 92. There is no difficulty in spite of Ss. 91 and 92 in leading evidence to show, notwithstanding the recital of payment of consideration in a document, that it was actually not paid: (1955) 57 Bom.L.R. 250: A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 320.

It is open to party to prove that a particular transaction was not consented to by him. S. 92 excludes oral evidence to vary the terms of the written contract, but has no reference to the question whether the parties agreed to contract on the terms set forth in the document: 1954 Nag.L.J. 64: A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 193.

S. 91 is based on what is sometimes described as the 'best evidence rule'. The best evidence about the contents of a document is the document itself and it is production of the document that is required by S. 91 in proof of its contents. In a sense, the rule enunciated by S. 91 can be said to be an exclusive rule inasmuch as it excludes the admission of oral evidence for proving the contents of the document except in cases where secondary evidence is allowed to be led under the relevant provisions of the Evidence Act. It is after the document has been produced to prove its terms under S. 91 that the provisions of S. 92 come into operation for the purpose of excluding evidence of any oral agreement or statement, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from its terms. Ss. 91 and 92 in effect supplement each other. S. 91 would be frustrated without the aid of S. 92, and S. 92 would be inoperative without the aid of S. 91. The two sections, however, differ in some material particulars. S. 91 applies to all documents, whether they purport to dispose of rights or not, whereas S. 92 applies to documents which can be described as depositive. S. 91 applies to documents, which are both bilateral and unilateral, unlike S. 92 the application of which is confined only to bilateral documents. S. 91 lays down the rule of universal application and is not confined to the executant or executants of the documents. S. 92, on the other hand, applies only between the parties to the instrument or their representatives in interest. What S. 91 prohibits is the admission of oral evidence to prove the contents of the document. Whether or not the terms of a document could be varied by proof of an oral agreement is a matter which is not covered by S. 91 at all. That is the subject-matter of S. 92, and so, if S. 92 does not apply, there is no reason to exclude evidence about an oral agreement solely on the ground that if believed the said evidence may vary the terms of the transaction. From the terms of S. 92 itself, it is clear that strangers to the document are outside the scope of S. 92; but S. 99 has presumably been enacted to clarify the same position. It would be unreasonable to hold that S. 99 was intended not only to clarify the position with regard to the strangers to the document, but also to lay down a rule of exclusion of oral evidence by implication in respect of the parties to document or their representatives-in-interest. The true position is that if the terms of any transfer reduced to writing are in dispute between a stranger to a document and a party to it or his representatives-in-interest, the restriction imposed by S. 92 in regard to the exclusion of evidence of oral agreement is inapplicable; and both the stranger to the document and the party to the document or his representative-in-interest are at liberty to lead evidence of oral agreement notwithstanding the fact that such evidence, if believed may contradict, vary, add to or subtract from its terms: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448.

It is well established that when the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing, extrinsic evidence as to what transpired subsequent to the contract is not admissible for ascertaining the terms. In view of provisions of S. 91 of Evidence Act, no extrinsic evidence, oral or documentary can be admitted to prove the terms of a contract, grant or other disposition of property, except the document itself or secondary evidence of its contents when admissible under the relevant provisions of that Act, and the Court must find out the express intention of the parties. The fundamental rule of construction is to ascertain the intention from the words used in the document which is considered to be the written declaration of the mind of the author. If the words are clear in expressing that intention and the language applies to existing facts, extrinsic evidence is not admissible for construing the deed or for ascertaining the real intention of the parties, e.g., surrounding circumstances cannot be considered with a view to holding that a document which is, on the face of it, a sale deed was intended to operate as a mortgage. If, however, the words are such that one may suspect that they do not convey the intention correctly, or in other words there is some doubt as to what the words mean or how they are to be applied to the circumstances of the writer or to the facts existing at the time when the document was executed, extrinsic evidence is admissible, both under proviso (6) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act as well as in English law. In such cases extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of finding out the meaning of the words which have actually been employed, or, what is the same thing, in translating the language of the document by giving definite meaning to the terms or by connecting them with the proper subject-matter; in other words, for the purpose of throwing light on the meaning of the words used with a view to arrive at the true effect of the transaction to which the document relates. The whole object in such cases is to place the Court, as near as may be, in the position of the parties to the document. The subsequent conduct of the parties is, however, not relevant or admissible for the purpose of construing a written document. If the language employed in the document is ambiguous, the question of the admissibility or otherwise of extraneous evidence would be regulated by the provisions of Ss. 93 to 98 of the Evidence Act. In view of S. 92 of the Evidence Act, oral evidence can, in no event, be admitted to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the terms of the document, as far as the parties to that document are concerned: A.I.R. 1969 Bom. 231.

Ss. 91 and 92—Scope and effect of—Suit for declaration of title based on partition deed and for possession on strength of title—Excess area than actually allotted claimed—Exact place of demarcating line not mentioned in document—Neither side measurements given nor boundary mark of any kind referred to—No allegation that property allotted was wrong or for rectification of deed—Acquisition of title to any portion of suit property by prescription not claimed—Held, that partition having been effected by means of a document, and there being no other title pleaded by the plaintiffs, no other evidence for the purpose of ascertaining or varying the terms of the partition, can be admitted under Ss. 91 and 92—Oral evidence as to real demarcating line and possession of plaintiff of that excess land is inadmissible: 1969 Ker.L.R. 462.

Where an endorsement of payment has been made on the back of a bond and it does not specify whether it was towards principal or interest, Ss. 91 and 92 would stand in the way of the admission of any oral evidence to show that the payment was in fact made towards interest: I.L.R. 14 Luck. 456: A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 142.

The mere fact that both the parties to a contract have not signed it would not make it an oral one so as to take it out of the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92. These sections do not require the whole contract to be embodied in the writing, but only the 'terms'. Hence, even when the signatures are absent or the proposal and acceptance are not entered in it, it would still be hit by Ss. 91 and 92, provided the terms are reduced to writing. Of course all the terms must be there. Where all the terms of the contract are there, Ss. 91 and 92 would be attracted even if there are no signatures and no proposal and acceptance or date embodied in the document: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 389. See also 230 I.C. 80: A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 32.

But where a contract of marriage is not signed by either of the contracting parties but it is in the nature of the memorandum prepared by a nikahkhwan belonging to the Shariah Department of Musal, it is open to one of the parties to prove by other oral or documentary evidence that he or she had been married and also the terms: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 705. Where a number of letters and the forma deed of agreement together really constitute the contract between the parties, such letters are admissible in evidence to explain the clauses in the agreement and Ss. 91 and 92 do not stand in the way of such admission: I.L.R. (1946) All. 231: A.I.R. 1946 All. 406.

Ss. 91 and 92 do not apply to a will as it is neither a contract nor a grant nor a disposition of property until the death of the testator makes it operative. S. 92(4) does not prevent the revocation of a registered will by an unregistered document: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 616: (1938) 1 M.L.J. 444.

Where a will is self-contained in all respects, it is not permissible to import into it any condition precedent alleged to be contained in some other collateral agreement in view of the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92. A condition precedent to a legacy, cannot be imported from outside into the will which bequeaths the legacy: I.L.R. 21 Luck. 314: A.I.R. 1946 Oudh 193.

An unprobated will though may be admitted in a proceeding other than a probate proceeding for collateral purposes, but it cannot be admitted into evidence for proving title under the will as an executor or legatee: (1988) 1 Cal.H.N. 234: (1987-88) 92 Cal.W.N. 332.

It is open to A to prove that he executed a sale deed benami in favour of B in order to defeat the claims of a creditor. In such a case, if the contemplated fraud was not carried out and was not effected in whole or in part, there is nothing preventing the plaintiff A from repudiating the transaction as being benami and recovering possession of the property. In such a case, the question really is not one under S. 92 of the Evidence Act regarding proof of a collateral oral agreement under which B is to hold the property for the benefit of A but it is really a case where the transferor seeks to establish by attendant circumstances that he did not intend by his deed to dispose of the beneficial interest in the property to the transferee and that, therefore, he must hold the property for his benefit: (1953) 2 M.L.J. 450: (1953) 66 Mad.L.W. 760: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 84: I.L.R. (1954) Mad. 271.

Deed—Construction—Bar of S. 92 when applicable: A.I.R. 1969 Guj. 169.

Execution of sale deed—Allegation of collateral agreement between the parties that the deed will be nominal and will not be acted upon—Agreement not hit by Ss. 91 and 92 and can be proved—Both direct and circumstantial evidence can be considered in support of the alleged agreement: 1969 M.P.W.R. 994: 1970 M.P.L.J. 50: 1970 Cr.L.J. 1176.

3. Unregistered or unstamped/under stamped document.—There is a difference between inadmissibility of a document for want of proper stamp and its inadmissibility because of non-registration. No doubt, a document which is required to be stamped is not admissible for any purpose. But if on payment of the proper stamp and penalty, the document can be admitted, then the question arises whether because of its non-registration it can be used for purposes other than for enforcing or maintaining any right, title or interest to or in immovable property or whether it can be relied upon to prove the nature of possessions and to defend the possession under the doctrine of part performance. A finding that a mortgage deed could not be admitted in evidence because it was unstamped and unregistered cannot be taken as a bar to the determination of the question whether the mortgage deed is admissible for collateral purposes or to support a plea of part performance: A.I.R. 1956 Madh. Bh. 117.

Unregistered deed compulsorily registrable—Delivery in pursuance thereof—Non-production of the deed—Secondary evidence of contents admissible to ascertain the nature of possession—Proviso to S. 49, Registration Act applies: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 297.

Secondary evidence by way of oral evidence with regard to a document either unstamped or insufficiently stamped is not admissible in view of the bar of S. 35 of Stamp Act, 1899 even though no objection could be taken under the Evidence Act with regard to the admissibility of such secondary evidence. [A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 109 and A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 431, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1070: (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 26.

Admissibility of unstamped instrument—Determination of: A.I.R. 1957 Raj. 47.

S. 52(1)(c) of the Registration Act, after its amendment in 1961 provides that a copy of every document admitted to registration shall be pasted in the book appropriated therefor in the order of their admission; thus, where the sale deed given to the Patwari for attestation of mutation was not returned to the vendee and the trial Court refused to admit its certified copy prepared from its pasted copy kept in the Sub-Registrar's register, held, in revision that the trial Court had acted with material irregularity and illegality: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 224: 1981 Rev.L.R. 303: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 437.

Sale deed and partition deed.—Unregistered sale deed and partition deed can be used as evidence to establish the nature of the possession of the person who claims under the deeds. The fact of possession and partition of property can also be proved by oral evidence: 98 I.C. 940: (1926) 28 Punj.L.R.18. See also 100 I.C. 153: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 842; 92 I.C. 1028: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 402 (partition deed); 95 I.C. 585: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 812 (sale deed); 103 I.C. 281: A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 830; (1925-26) 30 Cal.W.N. 254: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 705.

Where a deed of partition is not admissible in evidence owing to the absence of stamp and registration, oral evidence of partition is also excluded under S. 91: I.L.R. (1955) 1 Cal. 207.

Where an unregistered partition deed is relied upon by the defence in a partition action, though the deed may be inadmissible in evidence being unregistered that does not prevent any other evidence being admissible to prove merely the factum of separation in order to defeat the plaintiff's claim: 1938 Pat.W.N. 799: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 603; (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 1033: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 194; 144 I.C. 312: A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 270; 145 I.C. 833: A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 249; 12 Mys.L.J. 236; I.L.R. 6 Rang. 537: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 196.

Where a deed of partition is unregistered and, therefore, inadmissible in evidence under S. 49, Registration Act, other evidence can be led to prove the fact of partition as distinct from the terms of partition. S. 91, in such a case of disposition of property, bars evidence in proof of the terms of the disposition and no more. The fact of partition itself is not a term of the document. As a matter of fact, the partition precedes the actual distribution of what was formally joint property. It is only after the family has decided to separate and partition the property that they sit down to divide the property by metes and bounds. Whether in a particular case such evidence of the fact of partition would be of any use without the terms of the partition will depend upon the circumstances of each case: A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 157. See also I.L.R. 29 Pat. 980; 6 Sau.L.R. 103: A.I.R. 1954 Sau. 46; A.I.R. 1955 Madh. Bh. 129; I.L.R. (1971) 21 Raj. 823: 1971 Raj.L.W. 500.

Unregistered partition deed—Terms are inadmissible in evidence—Fact of partition can be proved by other evidence: (1964) 1 An.W.R. 384: A.I.R. 1965 Andh. Pra. 274 (F.B.).

No document is necessary to effect a partition amongst joint owners. It is permissible to effect a partition orally and subsequently a document may be made recording the fact of such partition. In such a case, even if the document of partition is hit for non-registration, independent oral evidence may be given of the actual division. Where, however, under an unregistered document itself, the severance in status is effected and that document records the shares allotted to each of the dividing members, the document is inadmissible under S. 49, of the Registration Act as evidence of any transaction affecting the properties for want of registration and no oral evidence can be given to prove the terms of partition in view of S. 91, of the Evidence Act. The change of status from joint members of a coparcenary to a separated member having a defined share in the ancestral property may be effected orally or it may be brought about by a document. If the document does not evidence any partition by metes and bounds, it does not come within the purview of S. 17(1)(b). Hence, in so far as documents are evidence of partition only in the sense that what was once a joint title has become a divided title, though there has been no division in properties in metes and bounds, they are compulsorily registrable under S. 17, and would, therefore, not come within the mischief S. 49: 1965 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 64.

The document purporting to prove separation was unregistered. The combined effect of S. 91 of the Evidence Act and S. 49 of the Registration Act was only to exclude all evidence to prove the terms of an unregistered deed. Those provisions did not bar the evidence to prove separate status. S. 49(c) of the Registration Act prohibited the use of an unregistered document in any legal proceeding in which such a document was sought to be relied upon in support of a claim to enforce or maintain any right, title or interest to or in any immovable property. So long as the document was not used as evidence of any right, title or interest to or in any immovable property, there was nothing to prevent the document from being received as evidence for other purposes. The proviso to S. 49 of the Registration Act itself said that a document though unregistered was admissible to prove a collateral fact. The partition of immovable property belonging to the joint family could not be proved by an unregistered instrument. But the partition, that is, the severance of joint status which was not required to be effected by a registered instrument was a collateral transaction and the unregistered instrument would be admissible to prove the fact of such a severance in status. The document was admissible to prove an intention to become divided in status: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 63.

The provisions of S. 49 of the Registration Act, 1908 do not bar the reception of an unregistered instrument of partition for the purposes of ascertaining the nature of possession of any party to such an instrument. S. 91, Evidence Act does not bar the reception of the unregistered deed to prove the factum of partition: A.I.R. 1977 Punj. 94: (1976) 78 Punj.L.R. 909.

Documentary evidence—Exclusion of oral evidence—Deed of partition—Effect of non-registration—If a deed of partition is not registered, no title will pass under it—Unregistered document will not be admitted in evidence—Oral evidence will be inadmissible to prove partition—(Registration Act, 1908, Ss. 17 and 49): (1966-67) 71 Cal.W.N. 17: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 369.

A partition deed, even if unregistered, can be used in evidence for a collateral purpose; but such purpose has only a limited scope and meaning; using it to show that it created or declared or assigned or limited or extinguished a right to immovable property is no collateral purpose. [A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 807, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1980 All. 180.

Where an unregistered and unstamped partition deed was sought to be proved to establish partition and the bar under S. 35 of the Stamp Act had been removed by payment of the stamp duty and penalty, held, neither the deed nor oral evidence of its contents was admissible to prove partition; the bar under S. 91, however, is not absolute; the deed could not be looked in so far as it declared, assigned, limited or extinguished a right to immovable property but it could be used to prove collateral transactions. Of the three stages of partition, namely (i) effecting a division in stages, (ii) dividing properties by metes and bounds and (iii) each party taking possession of properties allotted to it, the first and the third stages, even if reduced to writing, need no registration because neither the status nor taking of actual possession can be said to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish any right, title or interest to or in immovable property. The deed is admissible to prove these collateral purposes. The oral evidence barred under S. 91 is of the terms and not for finding out the division in status and nature of possession. [(1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 215 (D.B.); (1947) 60 Mad.L.W. 135 (D.B.) and (1961) 74 Mad.L.W. 844 (D.B.), Rel. on; (1965) 1 An.W.R. 384 (F.B.); (1969) 1 An.W.R. 396 (F.B.), Foll.]: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. 156: (1978) 1 M.L.J. 248 (D.B.).

S. 91 read with S. 49 of the Registration Act, held, shuts out all evidence to prove the terms of an unregistered partition deed; the unregistered deed is not admissible to prove as to which property fell to the share of any party thereto; the unregistered partition deed is not admissible to prove exclusive ownership of the disputed site vesting in the plaintiff: A.I.R. 1988 Del. 13 (D.B.).

Though an unregistered partition deed is inadmissible to prove the terms of partition, it can certainly be used for proving the division of status and the factum of partition and the character of possession of a family member: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 215 (D.B.).

Where the 'list of items of suit property divided between members of the family' is inadmissible for want of registration, held, it can nevertheless be used for collateral purposes of proving the co-parceners' intention to become divided in status and their ceasing to be joint from the date that list was prepared; even oral evidence to prove separation in the parties' status and an agreement between them to enjoy the joint family property in separation may also be given; it is not hit by the bar in S. 91: A.I.R. 1993 Madh. Pra. 65.

A document allotting specified properties to individual co-parceners being compulsorily registrable as value of property was over Rs. 100, held, in absence of registration is inadmissible to show when property was partitioned. However, it could be admitted to show the intention of parties to partition the property: (1982) 8 All.L.R. 748.

An unregistered partition deed, though not admissible as evidence of partition, held, is nevertheless admissible for the collateral purpose of proving date on which partition was effected: A.I.R. 1988 Karn. 225 (D.B.).

Where the main relief sought for was declaration of title and the consequential belief was injunction and partition was set up by way of evidence to the main relief, held, as in such a case question of possession became a collateral fact, admissions contained in an unregistered partition deed could be received in evidence to prove possession. [1969 S.C.D. 1158, Rel. on]: 1983 Hindu L.R. 11 (Karn.).

Where all the joint family members got themselves divided and partitioned properties prior to 1960 and were enjoying their respective shares separately; however, they had then decided to keep one property joint for future division which took place in 1960 as agreed upon by them earlier; the suit was filed by two brothers to take possession of their separate shares as settled at the general partition prior to 1960; held, even if the partition deed executed in 1960 is unregistered, yet oral evidence is permissible to prove the factum of the family members having taken over their respective shares in the property in 1960. [A.I.R. 1974 Mad. 239, Foll.; (1941) 54 Mad.L.W. 499; (1944) 57 Mad.L.W. 472 (F.B.), Disting.] A.I.R. 1979 Andh. Pra. 275.

Family arrangement reduced to form of document inadmissible for want of registration. Evidence relating to contents of document is admissible: 26 All.L.J. 952: A.I.R. 1928 All. 641 (F.B.).

Where after partition by metes and bounds, an unregistered document recording the arrangement arrived at as to division of the remaining property, was sought to be adduced in evidence, held, being only a memorandum of family arrangement, it did not require registration and was admissible: A.I.R. 1988 S.C. 881.

Unregistered document effecting severance in joint family status between two brothers—Each abandoning his claim to land in exclusive possession of the other—Admissibility—Document though admissible to prove severance in status not admissible to prove nature of possession subsequent to its execution—Oral evidence to prove actual division not admissible: (1962) 4 Ori.J.D. 226: A.I.R. 1962 Ori. 107.

Unregistered partition koorchit—Oral evidence to prove its terms—Admissibility. See (1947) 1 M.L.J. 90.

Note of co-sharer for owelty—Suit on—Oral evidence of terms of partition—Unregistered partition lists—Admissibility: (1937) 1 M.L.J. 676.

Where property is conveyed by an unregistered sale deed, though the document cannot be relied upon for the purpose of establishing title, it may be referred to for the purpose of understanding the nature of the contract between the parties and to prove delivery of possession. To such a case S. 91 does not apply: 10 Pat.L.T. 449: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 620. See also A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 116.

Reading Ss. 91 and 66 together, it appears that the law imposes an absolute prohibition against tendering of secondary evidence of the contents of the document referred to in S. 65(a) and thereby also prohibits the proof of the terms of the unregistered sale deed by any other mode except by proof of the document itself, when the said document is admitted to be in existence. [A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 50; A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448, Rel. on; A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 53, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 65.

Sale of property less than hundred rupees in value—Proof of transaction effected by actual delivery—Existence of unregistered document is no bar. See A.I.R. 1954 Ori. 31: 20 Cut.L.T. 62.

When there has been an oral sale of property worth less than one hundred rupees by payment of the price and delivery of possession, the fact that some time later an unregistered sale deed is passed on to the vendee does not prevent evidence of the oral sale being adduced: 44 Mad.L.W. 949: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 265. See also 19 Pat.L.T. 489.

Proviso to S. 58(e), Transfer of Property Act—Applicability to Punjab—Sale or mortgage—Distinction—Sale with a condition to reconvey—Determination of real nature—Admissibility of oral evidence—Tests indicating a mortgage—Transaction in suit held a mortgage and not a sale: (1960) 62 Punj.L.R. 1064: A.I.R. 1964 Punj. 81.

Lease deed/Rent note.—Though an unregistered deed of lease cannot be used to prove its terms like the period of its duration and the rate of rent, it can, it is well established, be admitted to prove collateral transaction; thus it can certainly be used to show the nature and character of the lessee's possession; from his possession and other circumstances, his status as a tenant in the premises may well be established; and if the tenancy is not for agricultural or manufacturing purpose, it may well be presumed to be monthly. [A.I.R. 1972 S.C. 1121, Applied; A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 23 and A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 265, Foll.; A.I.R. 1972 Madh. Pra. 100, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1975 Madh. Pra. 230 (F.B.).

Where an unregistered and insufficiently stamped lease deed, compulsorily registerable, is admitted in evidence, held, it may not be effective as a lease deed for its purported duration, yet it can certainly be looked into, even if it is not signed by the parties, for the collateral purpose of showing the permissive nature of possession over the land: A.I.R. 1979 All. 184.

Where lease deed is inadmissible in evidence being unregistered, the tenancy can be proved by other evidence as by the doctrine of part-performance: 105 I.C. 172: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 89; 111 I.C. 358: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 338. But see A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 675.

Agricultural lease for a term exceeding one year—Must be registered—Unregistered lease not admissible in evidence—No other evidence of its terms can be given under S. 91, Evidence Act: I.L.R. 43 Pat. 201: A.I.R. 1964 Pat. 1 (F.B.).

Agricultural lease—Unregistered patta—Possession delivered to lessee and rent accepted—Lease can be proved by possession and acceptance of rent—Suit by lessee against trespasser for ejectment—Terms of lease need not be proved: 29 Cut.L.T. 428: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 16.

Unregistered lease—Oral evidence to prove relationship of parties, not admissible: 148 I.C. 558: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 743.

Lease—Proof—Unregistered kabuliyat can be put in evidence to show that in fact there was a lease and that the lessee was in possession: 1961 Nag.L.J. (Notes) 86.

A lease deed of immovable property for 3 years is required by law to be registered; such an unregistered lease deed, not admissible to prove the lease, is nevertheless admissible for collateral purpose. However, where the contention was whether the superstructure was also leased out, held, it was not a collateral purpose; the deed was hit by S. 91: (1984) 97 Mad.L.W. 212.

Where the document purported to create a lease for 4 years but was not registered, held, it cannot be used for proving the duration of the lease by either party for 4 years; it could, however, be used to establish the status of the tenant as such; as the Courts below had decided the case by excluding the lease deed from consideration, it is remanded for fresh decision on consideration of the lease deed as well: A.I.R. 1974 Mys. 7.

Where the rent note is one that requires registration and has not been registered, it is inadmissible not only to prove the terms of the contract but also to prove the fact that it contained all the terms of the contract. There is no bar, therefore, under S. 91 to the reception of other evidence consisting of an entry in the record of rights to prove the nature of the tenancy: I.L.R. 58 Bom. 419: A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 194. See also 1938 O.A. 785: 1938 O.W.N. 1080; 1939 A.M.L.J. 148.

Where in a suit for recovery of possession of land after removal of superstructure, the tenant claimed protection from eviction under S. 9 of the Madras City Tenants Protection Act, 1955 as he was a tenant in possession prior to the date of the Act's commencement and relied upon an unregistered lease deed signed by the landlord's attorney alone, held, even if it was an inchoate or incomplete document not admissible to prove the terms of the lease, it was certainly admissible for the collateral purpose of proving the nature and character, as also the date of inception, of the tenancy. [A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 73, Rel. on]: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 451.

Where the tenant was proved to be in possession of the land ever since 1942 but there were two unregistered lease deeds, executed in his favour on 14-6-1942 for eight years and 12-2-1956 for ten years, and there was no other legally admissible written lease in his favour, held, all other evidence to prove the terms of the lease is barred under S. 49 of the Registration Act; that, however, does not mean that the tenant cannot adduce other documentary proof of his tenancy and there was enough of it on record including an averment in the plaint that after the redemption of the mortgage, the tenant had in law and fact completely surrendered his tenancy: A.I.R. 1973 Mys. 40: (1973) 1 Mys.L.J. 120.

Unregistered Kirayanama for three years reserving monthly rent—Admissibility in evidence. See T.P. Act, 1882, S. 106: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 26.

Mortgage deed.—Though a mortgage by deposit of title deeds may be created by mere deposit of title deeds and requires no contract in writing, held, but if a written contract of such mortgage is entered into, it must be got registered; no oral evidence of such a mortgage, if unregistered, can be allowed to be adduced or considered: A.I.R. 1971 Andh. Pra. 359: (1970) 2 An.W.R. 161: (1971) 2 A.P.L.J. 115: (1971) 2 An.L.T. 39 (D.B.).

Memo merely recording the fact of deposit of title deeds with the Bank to secure repayment of loan is not required by law to be compulsorily registered. Because in such a case the crucial question is: Did the parties intend to reduce their bargain regarding the deposit of the title deeds to the form of a document? If so, the document requires registration. If on the other hand, its proper construction and the surrounding circumstances lead to the conclusion that the parties did not intend to do so, then, there being no express bargain, the contract to create the mortgage arises by implication of the law from the deposit itself with the requisite intention, and the document being merely evidential does not require registration: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1613.

The mortgagor of occupancy holding is not debarred from proving his title to the holding although the mortgage deed, being not registered, was not receivable in evidence and other evidence to prove the nature of the transaction was not admissible: 1932 All.L.J. 101: A.I.R. 1932 All. 259. But see (1931) 33 Punj.L.R. 227: A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 276.

A mortgage other than the one by deposit of title deeds can be effected only by a registered deed signed by the mortgagor and attested at least by two witnesses; as there was no such deed executed between the parties, held, the lower appellate Court erred in holding that the contract of mortgage between the parties was proved: A.I.R. 1973 Raj. 208: 1972 Raj.L.W. 522: 1972 W.L.N. 784.

Endorsement of payment on mortgage bond not registered—Admissibility of oral evidence to prove payment: 100 I.C. 129: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 237.

Equitable mortgage—Deed executed in relation to—Non-registration—Admissibility in evidence to prove mortgage. See I.L.R. (1952) Bom. 715: A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 315.

Unregistered mortgage—Factum but not terms of mortgage can be proved by entries in jamabandi: A.I.R. 1959 Punj. 609.

Miscellaneous.—Once an exchange deed touching lands of the value of more than Rs. 100 is reduced to writing, even if the Transfer of Property Act is not applicable, it is compulsorily registerable; unless registered, it would be inadmissible in evidence; no oral or other proof including entries in jamabandis and khasra girdawaris is admissible to prove the exchange: 1987 Punj.L.J. 124.

Where in suit for recovery of money on hundis, the plaintiff had no independent cause of action apart from the hundis which were found to be insufficiently stamped and therefore inadmissible, held, the suit was rightly dismissed on that ground; merely because they were marked and admitted in evidence on the formal evidence of a person not a witness to their execution and by non-application of mind would not make them legal evidence; S. 91 was an absolute bar to their being proved by oral evidence. [A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 606, Foll.]: 1991 Punj.L.J. 591: (1991-2) 100 Punj.L.R. 226: (1991) 2 Rev.L.R. 294.

An unregistered patta cannot be admitted in evidence in a suit for possession of land for the purpose of proving the plaintiff's title. Nor can the plaintiff be allowed to prove his title by the production of rent receipts or by the general circumstances of the case. S. 49 of the Registration Act and S. 91, Evidence Act are a bar to such proof: 18 Pat.L.T. 1012. This case was doubted in the undermentioned decision. Where a contract of sale of immovable property has been reduced to writing and is followed by delivery of possession, party is not debarred under Ss. 91 and 92 of the Evidence Act, from proving his possession as a means of conveying the property. The fact there was an unregistered instrument does not stand in the way of proving title by delivery of possession where under the law title could pass in that manner. If the acts of parties disclose a state of affairs consistent with the existence of an agreement or arrangement mutually recognised and acted upon, as if the instrument were binding upon the parties, although the written instrument may be defective as a valid and finally concluded agreement or arrangement, the defects may be supplied by the subsequent actings and conduct of the parties: Ss. 91 and 92 of the Evidence Act would not bar such proof by looking to the other materials on record for the purpose of proving the character of possession: I.L.R. 29 Pat. 628: A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 277.

As a private unregistered award dealing with immovable property of over Rs. 100 is inadmissible in evidence, no secondary evidence of its contents can be given. Though it cannot be said to be a contract or a grant it would fall within the category of any other 'disposition of property' and, hence, under S. 91, no oral evidence can be given in proof of its terms: 1942 All.W.R. (Rev.) 502: 1942 O.A.(Supp.) 528: 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 758.

Unregistered deed of ekramama creating charge—Oral evidence to prove terms—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 73: I.L.R. 30 Pat. 1161.

4. Suit on promissory note.—Where a party sues upon promissory note, he must produce that note or give a satisfactory explanation as to why he is unable to produce it; else, he is not entitled to rely upon a relative and ancillary document such as a receipt which formed part of the same documents upon which both the promissory note and the receipt were inscribed. Courts should refuse to exercise their powers in favour of a litigant who is deliberately concealing important material and relevant information: 151 I.C. 123: A.I.R. 1934 All. 837.

Where a creditor lent a loan, and had taken a receipt, and a promissory note to evidence it, his claim for recovery of loan without producing the promissory note is not maintainable. If, however, the cause of action is antecedent to the making of promissory note, then there is nothing to prevent the creditor from maintaining a suit on the original cause of action founded on the loan: (1967) 2 Mys.L.J. 369: A.I.R. 1968 Mys. 148.

When a contract is wholly contained in a promissory note, i.e., where it forms the substance of the contract with all its terms, S. 91 would preclude proof of the contract otherwise than by the document itself : A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225; A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 146; A.I.R. 1937 All. 439: 1937 All.L.J. 235.

If such promissory note is inadmissible for any reason, the contract cannot be proved by any extraneous oral evidence, nor can money be recovered as money had and received, i.e., as a debt independently of the promissory note: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225. Where in a suit for recovery of money lent under a pronote, the pronote is not produced in evidence, but the payment of money is proved, and it was contended in revision against the dismissal of the suit, that on the finding of the trial Court that the defendant had borrowed the amount, a decree should be passed, even if the non-production of the pronote be for the reason it was insufficiently stamped and so inadmissible in evidence. Held (dismissing the revision), oral evidence offered for the payment of money is admissible; the terms on which the payment was made are covered by the provisions of S. 91 and require the production of document for proof of them. In view of the provisions of S. 91 and the various decisions of the High Court, it is not possible to hold that even in the event of non-production of a promissory note, the Courts can either allow proof of the undertaking to pay or presume to the same effect: 1952 All.L.J. 303: A.I.R. 1952 All. 877. But where the promissory note is executed in satisfaction of a pre-existing liability, the inadmissibility of the promissory note by reason of its being insufficiently stamped does not preclude proof of the pre-existing liability by oral evidence: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225.

Even in cases where the lending of the money and the execution of an instrument are contemporaneous, the lender is entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of the money lent and to adduce evidence, other than the instrument itself, in order to prove the loan: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 361: A.I.R. 1957 Ori. 212.

Where in a suit to recover a sum of money advanced to the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant, a promissory note and a contemporaneous receipt are produced and the promissory note is found inadmissible in evidence for want of proper stamp, on a question whether other evidence was admissible, it was held that the loan could be proved by other evidence including the receipt: I.L.R. (1943) All. 610: 1943 All.L.J. 189: A.I.R. 1943 All. 220 (F.B.).

Although a loan and a promissory note for the loan form part of the same transaction, a suit will lie on the original consideration. If there is a loan, that itself gives a cause of action, and the fact that there is a loan can never be a term of the contract contained in the promissory note; it is, therefore, open to the creditor to prove that there was a loan independently of S. 91. It does not matter whether the loan was made at the same time as the promissory note which is the evidence of it or whether it is not properly stamped and, therefore, inadmissible in evidence: (1938) 40

Bom.L.R. 174: A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 286. But see I.L.R. 53 All. 114: A.I.R. 1931 All. 183 (F.B.); 144 I.C. 130: A.I.R. 1933 All. 280; I.L.R. 57 All. 434: A.I.R. 1935 All. 129: 14 I.C. 433; A.I.R. 1934 All. 271; I.L.R. 9 Luck. 267: A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 5; also 140 I.C. 117: A.I.R. 1933 All. 109; 95 I.C. 704: A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 89; A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 307.

Where a pronote is inadmissible for want of proper stamp duty, the plaintiff may recover his money by proving orally the advance of the loan: A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 37(2): 29 Nag.L.R. 131; I.L.R. 7 Luck. 666: A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 235 (F.B.). See also A.I.R. 1927 All. 236: I.L.R. 49 All. 257; 103 I.C. 634: A.I.R. 1927 All. 503; 1937 All.L.J. 360: 1937 All.W.R. 322. Held by the Full Bench (Stodart, J., dissenting), that the answer to the question whether a person who has lent money on a promissory note, which is inadmissible in evidence owing to defect in the stamping can sue to recover the debt apart from the note, depends on the circumstances under which the instrument was executed. If the note was given in respect of an antecedent debt, or as collateral security or by way of conditional payment or if the note does not embody all the terms of the contract, the true nature of the transaction can be proved. But if the promissory note embodies all the terms of the contract, no suit on the debt will lie as S. 21 of the Evidence Act and S. 35 of the Stamp Act bar the way. The fact that the execution of the promissory note is contemporaneous with the borrowing cannot, however, exclude the possibility of the instrument having been given as collateral security or by way of conditional payment: I.L.R. (1938) 2 Mad. 933: A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 785: (1938) 2 M.L.J. 189 (F.B.).

Where in a suit for recovery of money, it was clearly pleaded that the borrowing and execution of the promissory note were integral parts of the same transaction and the pronote was admittedly insufficiently stamped, held, the promissory note was obviously inadmissible; oral evidence to prove the terms of the pronote was barred under S. 91. [A.I.R. 1973 Andh. Pra. 342, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1985 Andh. Pra. 26: (1985) 1 An.W.R. 284.

Where it is alleged in the plaint and proved by evidence that the pronote, rendered inadmissible for being deficiently stamped, did not incorporate all the terms and conditions of the loan agreement and was executed by way of collateral security or conditional payment, held, the plaintiff may succeed on the original loan; S. 91 or S. 92 would not bar it. But if there is no such plea or proof, the plaintiff cannot maintain the suit by resorting to the theories of implied promise or money had and received or quasi contract or unjust enrichment or any other equitable ground; there is no escape from the effect of Ss. 91 and 92. [A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 785 (F.B.), Approved; A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 188 (F.B.), Overruled]: A.I.R. 1973 Andh. Pra. 342 (F.B.).

Suit on original consideration permissible when debt is provable apart from promissory note: 26 All.L.J. 416: A.I.R. 1928 All. 479.

Pronote inadmissible in evidence—Suit on original cause of action—Maintainability: A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 10.

Where the debt and execution of the pronote are contemporaneous, the debt can be proved only by the note and where it is insufficiently stamped, plaintiff cannot apply by amendment to convert his suit into one on the original consideration: 139 I.C. 361: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 687; 1932 Mad.W.N. 1260: A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 71; I.L.R. 58 Mad. 261: A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 23: 67 M.L.J. 595; A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 606. But see I.L.R. 7 Pat. 845: A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 426; 134 I.C. 254: A.I.R. 1931 All. 560; 95 I.C. 847: A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 357; 67 M.L.J. 912; I.L.R. 12 Rang. 500: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 389 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 584: 141 I.C.767: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 159; I.L.R. 12 Pat. 862: A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 575 (F.B.).

When the promissory note was executed only in acknowledgment of a loan already advanced, the transaction of loan was clearly anterior to, and independent of, execution of the promissory note; the legal position in such circumstances is that the creditor is entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of debt based on the original contract of loan in case the promissory note is found to be defective; merely because the promissory note was executed on the very day on which the loan was advanced does not affect this position. S. 91 will not apply; merely because the promissory note is insufficiently stamped and incapable of being produced in evidence, the creditor who has advanced the loan is not precluded from pursuing his ordinary legal remedy of enforcing repayment by a suit based on the transaction of loan; the Stamp Act is only a fiscal measure to secure revenue and is not intended to arm a litigant with a weapon of technicality to deny his obligation and defeat the just claims of his opponent: 1977 Ker.L.T. 448: I.L.R. (1977)

1 Ker. 701 (D.B.); A.I.R. 1991 Ker. 16: (1990) 2 Ker.L.J. 323.

Where passing of consideration and execution of the promissory note are simultaneous or contemporaneous, held, S. 91 is attracted and the suit is competent only on the pronote and not on the original debt; however, where lending is earlier to the promissory note's execution, S. 91 is not attracted and the suit can be based on the debt if the promissory note is found to be inadmissible: (1993-2) 112 Mad.L.W. 505 (D.B.).

Where the contract of loan was not contemporaneous with the pronote, the contract pleaded indicated pledge of diamond on terms stated and payment of interest which found no place in the pronote which as per plaint was executed by the defendants after their breach of contract and not at the instance of the plaintiff but of some other persons, held, both the original contract as well as the pronote could be proved; the trial Court erred in shutting out the proof of the original contract. [A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1971 Madh. Pra. 245: 1971 M.P.L.J. 672: 1971 M.P.W.R. 478: 1971 Jab.L.J. 601 (D.B.).

Where money was borrowed on the basis of pronote which was first executed and the loan amount was taken later on, held, the advance of money was not an act independent of the pronote but based on it; if the plaintiff suing on the pronote has voluntarily and fraudulently caused material alteration in the pronote and has thereby destroyed evidence of his debt, he cannot claim decree on the original cause of action. [A.I.R. 1937 All. 439; A.I.R. 1958 Andh. Pra. 713; A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 572, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1983 All. 81: 1982 All.W.C. 795.

In cases where a promissory note is given in payment for goods sold and delivered, the presumption, would be that the note is given as conditional payment for the goods sold and delivered. In such cases when the note is inadmissible as being unstamped, the original debt can be availed of by the seller for the purpose of recovering the amount due to him irrespective of it, Per Chief Justice and Pandrang Row, JJ. (Cornish, J., contra).—Where the promissory note is part and parcel of the transaction of loan, and itself contains all the terms, it must, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be taken to be the contract, and no contract aliunde can be proved: I.L.R. 59 Mad. 68: A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 179: 70 M.L.J. 267 (F.B.). See also 1937 All.L.J. 360: 169 I.C. 780: A.I.R. 1937 All. 439.

Document insufficiently stamped—Not admissible for any purpose—Any purpose includes collateral purpose—Nature of consideration for promissory note cannot be made out from definition of promissory note—Suit on original loan when entertainable—Suit on promissory note—Amendment of plaint based on original loan when to be allowed: A.I.R. 1966 Ori. 18.

Stamp Act, 1899, S. 35—Parties entering into transaction and simultaneously executing a pronote—Transaction merges into pronote and pronote becomes basis of transaction—Provisions of S. 91, Evidence Act are clear bar to any other evidence except pronote—If pronote is not properly stamped and is inadmissible in evidence under S. 35 of Stamp Act, the whole suit must fail: 1966 Kash.L.J. 149: A.I.R. 1966 J.&K. 127.

When the loan is contemporaneous with the execution of an inadmissible promissory note, the debt can be proved by oral evidence independently of the promissory note only if the parties intended at the time of the execution of the promissory note that it was collateral to an oral contract by way of giving security for the loan or making conditional payment of the debt, antecedent or contemporaneous: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225. See also 1936 A.M.L.J. 37.

If, in such a case the defendant repudiates the promissory note as being a colourable document and neither party relies on the document, as embodying the substance of the contract, S. 91 does not apply, and the promissory note can be used as corroborative evidence on the point of the actual payment of the money: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225.

Usually in a promissory note all the necessary terms of the contract are not mentioned. When money is taken at the time of the execution of the promissory note, it will be considered that it was given as an additional or a collateral security. A suit on a promissory note can only be dismissed if there is something positive to show that it was taken in full discharge of the debt. In absence of any such material on record, it will be deemed that it was taken as a conditional security and if the promissory note is inadmissible, for want of stamp, the loan can be proved: A.I.R. 1956 Hyd. 32: I.L.R. (1955) Hyd. 725; A.I.R. 1957 Tripura 28.

Where the pleas raised and evidence adduced showed that the promissory note was taken by way of collateral security for the loan and was not intended either to constitute a contract between the parties or to merge in, or extinguish on execution of, the promissory note, held, the plaintiff could succeed on the basis of the original loan; S. 91 was not attracted; A.I.R. 1980 Ori. 10: (1979) 48 Cut.L.T. 79: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Cut. 580 (D.B.).

Where an unstamped pronote was obtained by way of collateral security and did not contain all terms of the loan contract, held, the creditor could maintain the suit for recovery of the original debt; S. 91 creates no bar: A.I.R. 1972 Andh. Pra. 282: (1972) 1 A.P.L.J. 316: (1972) 2 An.W.R. 55.

Suit not based on pronote but on original transaction of loan of Rs. 1000—Plaint allegations that pronote and receipt though insufficiently stamped were misplaced and not available—Original oral contract could be proved by evidence—S. 91 would not be a bar—Question whether or not pronote should be admitted in evidence in view of S. 35, proviso (a) of the Stamp Act did not arise: 1979 All.L.J. 1109.

Document containing definite promise to pay—No words prohibiting transfer—Document is promissory note payable to order—Unstamped note not admissible in evidence: 1961 Jab.L.J. 1247.

Promissory note inadequately stamped—Note not given in absolute discharge of loan—Suit on original loan maintainable—Right to interest on loan when maintainable: I.L.R. (1961) 11 Raj. 614: A.I.R. 1961 Raj. 235.

In any event, the plaintiff would be prevented from claiming interest as per terms of the promissory note and interest at best can be allowed only under S. 73, Contract Act, by way of damages: A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 225. See also 1936 A.M.L.J. 37.

Joint and several liability of executants under a promissory note—Oral agreement splitting up the liability into several and divisible—Liability of each can be proved: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 173: 54 M.L.J. 150.

In a suit upon a promissory note by the endorsee thereof, the Court can properly look into the surrounding circumstances and also evidence aliunde to discover the capacity of endorser, when on the face of the instrument the capacity of the endorser does not appear: I.L.R. (1951) Hyd. 448: A.I.R. 1951 Hyd. 79(2).

A loan is a contract by which, in consideration of the lender lending the money to him, the borrower promises to repay the amount. If these terms are reduced in the form of a document, that is, if the contract is intended to be replaced by the document, then the document is the exclusive evidence of the terms and if for any reason the document is held inadmissible in evidence no other evidence can be offered to prove the terms; but where the terms are merely embodied or recorded in a document and are not intended to lose their independent existence, then the fact that the document cannot be admitted in evidence would not come in the way of their being proved by other evidence. A negotiable instrument is no more than a conditional payment of debt and not a satisfaction of the debt, unless the creditor agrees to accept it in satisfaction of the debt. If the negotiable instrument is not paid at maturity or is for some reason not available to the creditor, then in the absence of evidence that the parties intended otherwise, the creditor can always fall back on the loan: 8 Sau.L.R. 63: A.I.R. 1955 Sau. 74.

Promissory note for debt—Debt barred by limitation on date of note—Absence of specific recital that the promise is to pay such barred debt—Oral evidence to connect promise to pay with prior loan, if admissible: I.L.R. 63 Cal. 759.

Defendant executed a pronote for Rs. 5,000 and repaid Rs. 500. Defendant later sold his house to plaintiff and two others for Rs. 12,000, each contributing Rs. 4,000. On this date Rs. 4,700 were due to plaintiff on the pronote. Defendant pleaded that there was an agreement to wipe out this debt instead of plaintiff paying Rs. 4,000. Evidence of the other two purchasers was given to show that there was also a similar agreement with them. Held, that evidence of the agreement between plaintiff and defendant was admissible: 1959 Nag.L.J. (Notes) 47.

5. Benami transactions.—The combined effect of Ss. 91 and 92 in case of benami transactions is that the ostensible owner has all the rights and privileges of ownership of the property, except against its real owner: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 131 (D.B.).

6. Sale transactions.—Though an agreement for sale or reconveyance is not required by law to be registered but once written and registered, held, any subsequent oral evidence varying the terms of the deed would be inadmissible: A.I.R. 1973 Gau. 132 (D.B.).

Recitals in a sale deed as to the mode and time of paying consideration or legal necessity for sale are not terms of the contract; extraneous evidence to prove their modification or variation is admissible and not barred by S. 92: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1298.

Ss. 91 and 92 completely bar a party to plead or prove that consideration paid for sale was more than what was mentioned in the conveyance or contract. [A.I.R. 1935 All. 529 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 122; A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 147 and A.I.R. 1970 Mys. 270, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1992 Ker. 115: (1991) 2 Ker.L.J. 648: (1991) 2 Ker.L.T. 728.

S. 91 of the Evidence Act would, bar only the proof of the terms of the document. The execution of a written sale deed, however, would not result in making the evidence of actual possession prior to the sale deed inadmissible. A party might have been in possession for a long time and a written sale deed might be executed susbequently. Prior possession of such a party is not under sale deed but is independent of it, and has nothing to do with the terms of the sale deed: 1965 All.L.J. 938.

The want or failure of consideration, a condition precedent for the transfer, held, can be proved, despite recitals to the contrary, by independent evidence; contents of the document of disposition in this respect are not conclusive: A.I.R. 1985 Pat. 94: 1985 B.L.J.R. 736: 1984 Pat.L.J.R. 659: 1985 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 463.

Entries made in the mutation register by a Patwari in the discharge of his public duties or the orders passed thereon by the Revenue Officer is disputably relevant evidence under S. 35 to prove any fact in issue or a relevant fact; but a copy of the mutation is admissible only to prove the factum of sale and not the terms and conditions thereof in view of the bar under S. 91. [(1979) 81 Punj.L.R. 27, Overruled]: A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42: 1985 Punj.L.J. 583: (1986-1) 89 Punj.L.R. 109: I.L.R. (1986) 1 P.&H. 90 (F.B.); 1989 Punj.L.J. 15.

As A.I.R. 1986 P.&H. 143: 1986 Rev.L.R. 42 (F.B.) has rendered the certified copies of mutations as inadmissible in evidence for ascertaining the terms and conditions of the sale transactions without producing the certified copies of the sale deeds, held, application for allowing the additional evidence in order to produce the sale deeds, subject matter of mutations, during pendency of appeal, was to be allowed, in view of aforesaid change of law by the Full Bench judgment: (1989) 1 Rev.L.R. 361.

In a suit for specific performance, the contract of sale must be definite and precise and if it is uncertain it must be held to be void under S. 29 of the Indian Contract Act. Specific performance is an equitable relief and the contract of which specific performance is sought must appear to be correct and precise and if it is uncertain no oral evidence is admissible to add to the terms or contents of the contract of sale: A.I.R. 1971 All. 494.

It is permissible to establish by oral evidence that a written agreement was not intended to operate as an agreement but was brought into existence solely for the purpose of creating evidence of some other matter.

Where, therefore, a suit for possession of a house was filed on the strength of a sale deed and the defendant sought to prove that the sale deed had not been executed as to operate as a sale deed but was executed as a sequel to another transaction of agreement to sell which the defendant had entered into with the plaintiff regarding the sale of his land. Held, that such defence did not run counter either to S. 91, or to S. 92 of the Evidence Act: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 100: 1962 M.P.C. 450: A.I.R. 1963 Madh. Pra. 210.

When a sale deed has been executed and registered in respect of certain immovable properties, in a suit for possession by the vendee, it is not open to the vendor to let in oral evidence to show that the terms of the contract between the parties were different or were at variance with the terms contained in the registered document: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 44.

Suit for possession based on sale deed—Defendant can allege and prove that transaction was one for loan only: 1962 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 199.

A letter which merely states that a certain sale is a fictitious transaction, does not purport or operate to extinguish any right, and is admissible in evidence: I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 510; A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 102; 1945 Nag.L.J. 89.

Where a registered agreement for sale of a property was resisted by the vendor on the ground that it was in fact executed by way of security for the loan advanced to him by the vendee, held, the Court below had rightly permitted him to adduce oral evidence of the real nature of the transaction pleaded by him. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70; I.L.R. (1956) 1 Cal. 59; A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 48; A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 379; A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 351, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1972 Cal. 207: (1971-72) 76 Cal.W.N. 116 (D.B.).

Where the vendor contended that the vendee in connivance with the scribe had misdescribed the property agreed to be sold in the agreement of sale and the Courts below decreed his suit for a different property on the vendor's oral evidence, held, the parties were bound by the written agreement; the vendor had sued on, and not de hors, the document; assuming for argument's sake that the vendor could lead evidence to explain the terms of the agreement to identify the land agreed to be sold, yet a strong presumption attaches to the document and strong evidence is required to show that the vendor had signed it in ignorance: evidence on record, on facts, found insufficient to rebut the evidence: (1986) 34 B.L.J.R. 464.

Where under a sale deed, scribed and executed the same day, the consideration of Rs. 5,150 was to be paid but the vendee contended that he had already paid Rs. 4,950 to the vendor and only Rs. 200 remained payable which he could not pay for want of funds, held, it clearly amounted to varying or contradicting a term of the deed; the two versions in the deed and oral evidence are mutually exclusive and cannot stand together; the oral evidence was inadmissible: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 215.

Where two brothers entered into an agreement for sale of their two ancestral houses for a consideration of Rs. 2,250 and received Rs. 200 by way of earnest money, the vendee was put in possession of the two houses, and the sale deed was agreed to be executed after lifting of attachment of the houses, held, the vendee could not maintain the suit for specific performance in respect of only one of the two houses; it was not at all open to him, in view of Ss. 91 and 92, to contend that the agreement of sale was in fact two separate agreements whereby each house was to be sold for consideration of Rs. 1,125 out of which earnest money of Rs. 100 had been paid to each of the brothers: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 342: 1976 Mah.L.J. 224.

7. Reconveyance deed.—Where in a reconveyance deed, the time limit had been fixed and the trial Court without framing an issue or allowing opportunity to the parties to adduce evidence found the time fixed therein to be the essence of the contract, held, as laid down in A.I.R. 1974 Bom. 136 (D.B.), conditions applicable to ordinary contracts of sale donot apply to deeds of reconveyance; terms of the reconveyance including time have to be strictly construed; if the plaintiff fails to perform his part of the contract within the time fixed, he loses the right to claim reconveyance; no issue or evidence on the point needed to be framed or adduced; as the parties were completely prohibited under S. 91 to adduce any other evidence except the deed of reconveyance itself: A.I.R. 1988 Pat. 229: 1988 B.L.J. 672.

Suit for specific performance of contract of reconveyance—Defendant relying on written agreement denied by plaintiff—Latter relying on oral contract—If debarred from leading oral evidence: A.I.R. 1949 Assam 80.

8. Wakf.—Although a wakf may be created by word of mouth, once the terms of the dedications have been put in writing, the document itself or secondary evidence of the same should be tendered: I.L.R. 8 Pat. 484: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 410.

9. Terms of grant.—Although the terms of a grant can be proved under S. 91 only by the production of the document containing the grant or by the secondary evidence, the fact of the grant can be proved by such evidence which is admissible as a copy of an entry in a public record: I.L.R. 22 Luck. 522: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 307.

10. Lease/Rent deed.—Ss. 91 and 92 do not prohibit the Court from importing into the lease deed reduced to writing the covenants or conditions implied in the tenancies under S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act; a provision of law is neither a statement of a witness nor a document produced for the Court's inspection; Ss. 91 and 92 do not purport to override the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act or any other law; besides, when proviso (5) of S. 92, despite the prohibition contained in the section, expressly permits proof of any usage or custom whereby incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description; but such usage or custom must not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the contract's express terms; it would be absurd to suggest that provisions of law whereby such incidents are annexed to contracts should be kept out: A.I.R. 1980 Pat. 120: 1980 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 123: 1980 B.L.J.R. 255.

There is no provision of law which requires the production of the original lease in order to prove merely the factum of the lease. Under S. 91, the original lease would have to be produced only for the proof of any of its terms: 1944 All.W.R. (Rev.) 76: 1944 R.D. 132.

A unilateral document executed by a lessee stating that he is holding land at a certain monthly rental, nor being a lease, does not come within the purview of S. 107 of the T.P. Act. It amounts merely to a written admission by him that he is liable to pay a certain sum as rent for the land held by him. There is nothing in the law of evidence which prevents this document from being put in evidence as an admission. The intention of S. 107, para. 3 of the T.P. Act was, not to enable a person to avoid the effect of an admission made by him: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 352.

Lease silent as to place of payment of rent—Evidence is admissible to prove subsequent agreement as to the place: 23 Nag.L.R. 26: A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 281.

Lease for manufacturing purpose—Thirty days, notice to quit given—Eviction suit—Lease deed impounded and deficit stamp duty not being paid becoming inadmissible—Tenant in written statement and in evidence admitting payment of monthly rent—S. 91, Evidence Act no bar to use of admission in written statement to determine character of tenancy—Held, such tenancy was monthly tenancy terminable with thirty days' notice: 1968 All.L.J. 721.

The first appellant obtained on lease a theatre belonging to the respondent. When he failed to pay the rent, respondent, had to file a suit for eviction. The matter was compromised. According to the compromise, the appellant had to continue in possession of the theatre, on a lesser rent. The appellant also gave a letter Exhibit A-19 stipulating that he would effect structural alterations of the value of Rs. 10,000 to the theatre. On the next day they entered into a registered lease deed, stipulating the rent, duration of the lease, etc. When the appellant failed to deliver the theatre after the expiry of the term of the lease, the respondent took proceedings under the Rent Control Act, and obtained eviction order against him. The respondent ultimately secured possession of the theatre. The respondent filed suit for recovery of Rs. 10,000 which the appellant agreed to spend on the structural alterations to the theatre, as stipulated in the letter Exhibit A-19 but failed to implement the condition. The respondent also claimed certain amount towards damages. The Court below decreed the suit. On appeal to the High Court, the appellant contended the letter Exhibit A-19 was not admissible in evidence, as the same was unregistered and in variance of the terms of the registered lease deed, and therefore, hit by S. 49(c) of the Registration Act and S. 91 of the Evidence Act.

Held: The condition stipulated in Exhibit A-19 is a personal obligation of the 1st defendant collateral to the lease and this personal obligation does not alter or vary the incidents of the lease. Exhibit A-19 is relied upon by the plaintiff only for a collateral purpose to prove that there was a personal obligation on the part of the 1st defendant to effect structural alterations upto the value of Rs. 10,000 and leave them intact on the expiration of the lease period. This stipulation is the result of the compromise to which reference is made in Exhibit A-19 also. Exhibit A-19 is not being relied upon as evidence of any right, title or interest to the immovable property but has been relied upon as a claim for damages. S. 49(c) of the Registration Act is not applicable to such cases as what is prohibited is the use of an unregistered document in any legal proceeding in which such a document is sought to be relied on in support of a claim to enforce or maintain any right, title or interest to or on immovable property. The claim for damages is personal and, therefore, such a document does not require registration. Reliance is placed on Exhibit A-19 in this case not to prove the terms of compromise but to establish that under the design or scheme of the compromise arrived at between the parties, there was a collateral agreement to the lease under which the 1st defendant gave an undertaking. Therefore, neither S. 91 of the Evidence Act nor S. 49(c) of the Registration Act operates as a bar to the reception of Exhibit A-19 in evidence: (1969) 2 An.W.R. 33: (1968) 2 An.L.T. 240.

Suit in respect of property—Title based upon permanent lease deed and subsequent sale deed—Deeds not produced—Affidavit of lessor and evidence of lessee being vendor of plaintiff to prove title—Title not supported by legal evidence: 1964 All.L.J. 701.

Lease by public auction of agricultural land for 7 years—Defendant's bid accepted—Possession for 4 years—Plaintiff's suit in ejectment alleging subsequent agreement of lease for one year in writing. Held, that as it was an agricultural lease, it could be made orally, and that the document which came into existence subsequently did not supersede the oral lease: A.I.R. 1963 Mad. 451: 64 M.L.J. 676.

Partnership or lease—No sharing of profits but one person required to pay fixed sum periodically to the other and carry on business in his own name on the property of the other—Transaction held to be lease and not partnership—Oral evidence showing transaction to be lease—Held, could not be rejected: (1963-64) 68 Cal.W.N. 786: 1963 Cal.L.J. 75.

S. 91 only excludes other evidence of terms of a document but not of existence of the contract or the relationship of landlord and tenant brought about by possession and payment of rent: 1968 Pat.L.R. 3: 1968 B.L.J.R. 93: I.L.R. 46 Pat. 1315: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 302 (F.B.).

See Tenancy Laws—Bihar Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 5(2): A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 302 (F.B.).

Oral evidence of the terms of a partnership deed is excluded under S. 91; further the two partners under S. 92 are debarred from leading oral evidence contrary to the written terms of the partnership deed. The version of a party, that the premises were let to a partnership firm, contrary to record cannot be accepted as correct; when premises were taken by the tenant who later on admitted another person as a partner and on dissolution of partnership assigned the premises to the other partner, held, was guilty of sub-letting or assignment or parting with possession within the meaning of S. 14(1)(b) of the Delhi Rent Control Act: (1982) 2 Ren.C.J. 607 (Del.).

Where a tenancy for a limited period contemplated under S. 21 of the Delhi Rent Control Act was permitted to be created on recording evidence of the parties and on the basis of a 'proposed lease' then not signed by the tenant and the lease deed in terms thereof was executed a day thereafter, held, on execution for eviction of the tenant on expiry of the limited term of the tenancy, the tenant could not be permitted to plead or prove that he was already a contractual tenant when the permission to create the limited tenancy was allowed: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 277: 1982 Rajdhani L.R. 442: (1982) 22 Del.L.T. 48: (1982) 2 Ren.L.R. 86: (1982) 1 Ren.C.R. 642.

Where a limited tenancy under S. 21 of the Delhi Rent Control Act is created with permission of the Rent Controller, held, it is not open to the tenant to contend after the lapse of the tenancy period that the tenancy under S. 21 was only a camouflage for creating a general tenancy; bar of S. 91 is attracted: A.I.R. 1994 N.O.C. 336: (1993) 50 Del.L.T. 257.

Suit for ejectment—Plaintiff proving authority of Rent Control and Eviction Officer granting permission under S. 3, U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (III of 1947) by documentary and oral evidence—Defendant neither challenged such authority at the time of granting permission nor adduced any evidence to disprove the authority—Presumption would be that Rent Control and Eviction Officer had such authority: 1964 All.W.R. (H.C.) 413.

Where in a suit for ejectment the plaintiff alleged that there was written compromise deed between him and the defendants and the defendants committed breach of it; but the plaintiff failed to produce the compromise deed: Held, that as the plaintiff had not established that the defendants had violated the agreement, the suit was liable to be dismissed. Further, under S. 91, when the terms of a compromise is in writing, proof of the terms of the compromise can only be given by production of the compromise deed or by secondary evidence, if admissible, and not by oral evidence: A.I.R. 1968 All. 275.

11. Mortgage deed.—As to secondary evidence of contents of mortgage document, see I.L.R. 5 Rang. 650: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 32. Factum of mortgage or passing of consideration is not 'contents of a document' within meaning of S. 91. Proving of the factum of a mortgage is not the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage nor is proving the consideration for a mortgage the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage: 1958 Raj.L.W. 457. Where a gift has been effected by an instrument only, the conduct of the parties can be considered for the purpose of showing that the transaction is not what it purports to be: 104 I.C. 229: A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 278.

Where a mortgage deed is alleged to have been executed and registered, oral evidence to prove the transaction is inadmissible: 14 L.R. 148 (Rev.): 17 R.D. 241.

Where the mortgage deed is clear and unambiguous and actually applies to existing facts, parole evidence is inadmissible: 147 I.C. 633: A.I.R. 1934 All. 100(2).

Mortgage by deposit of title deeds—Intention to create security necessary—Proof of—Oral evidence—Admissibility: A.I.R. 1968 Mad. 223 (F.B.).

Mortgage executed in favour of creditor—Debtor if can subsequently ask for taking of accounts regarding amounts covered by mortgage: (1926-27) 31 Cal.W.N. 178: A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 129 (P.C.).

Suit for recovery of possession of mortgaged land—Non-production of original registered mortgage deed accounted for by oral evidence—Case for producing, secondary evidence not made out—Neither certified copy of mortgage deed nor oral evidence could be looked into as proof of terms of mortgage deed: 1969 Cur.L.J. 271 (Punj.).

Where a mortgage was alleged to be in writing but the same was proved by circumstantial evidence, such as recitals in deeds referring to the mortgage extracts from account books and by a transfer of a share of the mortgage, held, that the written mortgage not having been proved, the circumstantial evidence was not rendered inadmissible by S. 91 of this Act, or S. 49 of the Registration Act. Held, also, that there being no prejudice, the plaintiff could abandon the written mortgage and contend that it was unwritten: I.L.R. 52 Bom. 875: A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 484.

Equitable mortgage—Letter recording transaction giving list of deeds deposited—Admissibility without registration—Oral evidence of mortgage—Admissibility. See I.L.R. 26 Pat. 260.

Where the mortgage deed provided compound interest, oral agreement to pay simple interest cannot be proved under Ss. 91 and 92: 27 All.L.J. 866: 119 I.C. 92.

12. Partition deed.—Where a registered partition deed contains a specific reference to three earlier partition deeds and also a recital that one of the parties, having a share in an undivided pangu was being conveyed some other property in lieu thereof, held, it constitutes an admission of the earlier as well as the latest partitions; parties relying on the registered partnership deed are estopped from partitions mentioned in the deed. Both S. 91 and S. 115 embody rules of evidence, the latter projects a positive state of affairs; the Courts of law are to render justice, not to encourage multiplicity of proceedings: (1985) 98 Mad.L.W. 887.

Where a deed of partition drawn and signed by some one is lost in transit when it was sent to the others for signature and was not registered is no 'document' within the meaning of S. 91, Evidence Act and cannot be a bar to the admission of oral evidence to prove the partition: 1952 All.W.R. (H.C.) 7: A.I.R. 1952 All. 782.

Partition affected by registered deed—Oral evidence in proof of partition—If barred—Held, that oral evidence is inadmissible to prove the fact of possession: 1981 All. Ren. Cas. 602: 1981 (U.P.) R.C.C. 570.

Award effecting out-and-out partition—Extrinsic evidence to show that some members remained undivided—Admissibility of: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1064: 55 M.L.J. 132.

Partition—Court refusing to admit proof of unregistered deed—Commission to ascertain details of partition, held, could not be issued: A.I.R. 1970 Cal. 192.

Partition deed—Document containing admission of both parties that they were joint till 1954—Oral admission of partition in 1951—Admissibility—Court should not persuade itself to hold that there was an oral partition between parties in face of admissions in written partition deed: 1969 Mah.L.J. 838: (1970) 72 Bom.L.R. 32: A.I.R. 1970 Bom. 160.

S. 91 of the Evidence Act, is not attracted to a document which is not a deed of partition, but a memorandum wherein is recorded a description of the properties partitioned and the 'modus operandi' adopted to ascertain which of the properties would be possessed by one or the other of the parties. Such a document cannot be admissible under that section as proving the factum of partition. It is, however, admissible as a piece of evidence to prove that partition had already taken place and explain the correct position of the respective parties, as proved by other pieces of relevant evidence: A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 579: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 356.

See also (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 468 [Where the alleged gift deed was in fact found to be a partition arrangement between father and son].

Where the partition deed was not challenged by a specific plea of fraud that its recitals are not correct or allocations of shares therein were not commensurate with their real shares, held, the deed cannot be permitted to be challenged by adducing oral evidence which is barred by Ss. 91 and 92: A.I.R. 1991 Pat. 145.

13. Gift deed.—Under the Mahomedan Law, three things are necessary for creation of a gift: (i) declaration, (ii) acceptance and (iii) delivery of possession. Thus, in the absence of independent oral evidence of delivery of possession, held, the contents of the deed by themselves prove the gift; the oral evidence as to delivery of possession is not hit by S. 91: A.I.R. 1973 Gau. 105 (D.B.).

Gift—Oral evidence—Admissibility—Gift in favour of member of H.U.F.—Proof. See 1981 All.L.J. 1182.

14. Deposition of a witness.—The record by Court of the deposition is the only evidence admissible of the statement alleged to have been made by the witness and if it is not shown to have been read out to the witness, he cannot be convicted of perjury: I.L.R. 42 Mad. 561: 36 M.L.J. 296.

Since the act of deposing is a physical act which can always be proved by any one who has heard the statement being made, the fact of deposing might be proved by any one who has seen and heard the witness: 115 I.C. 147: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 187. But see infra. Where a deposition is not taken in accordance with S. 369, Cr.P.Code, it is inadmissible in evidence and other evidence is shut out by S. 91: 18 Cr.L.J. 966: 42 I.C. 326. See also (1972) 85 Mad.L.W. 150.

15. Confessional statement.—[See also notes under Ss. 24 and 25, supra]. S. 91, Evidence Act, would not be a bar to admission of oral evidence to prove a confessional statement when it is made to the Sub-divisional Magistrate which he was not bound to record under Ss. 164 and 364, Cr.P.Code: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 425: 1955 Cr.L.J. 1377.

A statement made by an accused at a departmental enquiry is not within S. 91, as it is not required by law to be reduced to the form of a document. Such confession can be proved at the time of the prosecution: I.L.R. 36 All. 222: 25 I.C. 321.

The confession of an accused made to a Magistrate holding an enquiry is a matter which must be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of S. 91: I.L.R. 35 All. 260: 14 Cr.L.J. 211.

Offence under S. 161, I.P.Code—Magistrate going to trap accused—Confession to Magistrate not reducing to writing—Admissibility in evidence. See A.I.R. 1953 Pespu 182; Search list—Proof of: 2 Weir 776. See also 21 M.L.J. 281; Previous convictions—Proof of: I.L.R. 28 Cal. 689; Criminal trial—Proof of previous conviction—Oral evidence—Admissibility: 1959 Cr.L.J. 1263: A.I.R. 1959 All . 695; Warrant; it should be produced in a case of assault of process server: L.B.R. (1872-1892) 572.

16. Dying declaration.—[See also S. 32, supra]. Witnesses should not be allowed to prove a dying declaration as if it is a substantial piece of evidence in the case: 67 I.C. 577: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 12.

The only way proving a dying declaration is by the evidence of some witness who heard it made, the witness being at liberty to refresh his memory by referring to the note made by him or read over to him at or about the time the statement is made: A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 12.

17. Recovery memo.—Recovery memo. of personal search signed by witnesses—Not a statement to a Police Officer, under S. 161—Not rendered inadmissible in evidence under S. 162: (1963) 65 Punj.L.R. 745.

18. Exception 1.—See (1988) 2 Raj.L.W. 647: (1989) 2 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 116.

19. Miscellaneous.—Person claiming to be manager of certain property ought to produce document to that effect and in absence of such document, held, an adverse inference could be drawn: 1979 Jab.L.J. 164: 1979 M.P.L.J. 266: (1979) 1 Ren.C.R. 670: (1979) 2 Ren.C.J. 191.

Where the contract of employment was silent as regards the permission to do private practice, held, oral evidence cannot be allowed to be adduced in order to add to or supplement the terms of the contract: 1980 Lab.I.C. 1140 (Goa).

Where documentary evidence was to kabuliats purportedly executed by the plaintiff's son, first for cutting timber and the other for cultivating the lands for periods not more than one year, held, the trial Court erred in holding that the kabuliats were inadmissible for want of registration; being agricultural leases for terms not exceeding one year, they were not required to be registered; they could certainly be used, if proved, for the collateral purpose of establishing the plaintiff's possession of the land arising out of the lease agreements: A.I.R. 1971 Andh. Pra. 395: (1971) 2 An.W.R. 18 (D.B.).

Kabuliyat not executed by lessor—Contract is invalid—Terms of contract cannot be proved by any other evidence. See A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 331.

Recitals in a document constitute admissions; no oral evidence to contradict them is admissible: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 157: (1988) 2 An.L.T. 504.

Where the recital in the contract as to the names of the transferees in reference to existing facts was unmeaning in the context of earlier recitals and the parties' case, held, it is permissible for the Court to allow oral evidence to ascertain whether transfer was made to a single person having two names or two different persons: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 228 (All.).

Where a document contained the terms of contract, inter alia, providing for payment of discount on the pumps, motors and cables sold to private parties and overriding commission for supplies made to the Government agencies, held, there being no ambiguity in the language used, no extrinsic evidence as to its terms was permissible: (1989-1) 30 Guj.L.R. 456: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 495 (D.B.).

Bye-laws of East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd. requiring that terms of contract are to be in writing and in the prescribed form i.e., Bought and Sold Notes.—Difference in Terms of Bought & Sold Notes—Held, for finding out the contract relating to arbitration, the Court cannot go outside the terms of the said Notes and, thus, no evidence, other than that afforded by those notes, could be looked into for the purpose of finding out the terms of the agreement: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2289.

Where certain terms and trade practices emanating from an agreement falling within the mischief of the Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act were clear and decisive and their meanings were unambiguous, held, no oral evidence could be permitted to deduce their meaning or to vary them; Ss. 91 and 92 were clearly attracted: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1285: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 227: (1977) 3 S.C.R. 455.

Where terms and conditions for opening a cash credit account with the Bank were reduced in writing, held, the document so written and executed constituted the repository of the parties' rights and obligations; as no variation thereof was pleaded by the Bank, Ss. 91 and 92 completely prohibit adduction of any evidence except the document itself as proof of its terms: A.I.R. 1976 Del. 115.

While considering whether a particular trade practice set out in an agreement has, or may have, the effect of preventing, distorting or restricting competition so as to constitute 'a restrictive trade practice' which has to be judged in the light of various relevant considerations which involve contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of the agreement, held, Ss. 91 and 92 are not attracted: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 798.

Bill of exchange or hundi does not necessarily embody the whole contract, between parties. If it embodies the whole contract, other evidence to prove the terms cannot be allowed: I.L.R. 51 All. 530: A.I.R. 1929 All. 254.

Where execution of what purported to be a hire purchase agreement was admitted by the defendant but he was consistent throughout the trial that he had not taken the truck on hire-purchase and had given cogent explanation therefor and having a ring of truth, held, the defendant's evidence was not hit by Ss. 91 and 92: A.I.R. 1978 All. 123 (D.B.).

Where a forest contract provided for extension of time to complete the work and by a supplementary contract extension of time was completely barred but the contractor was allowed to execute the supplementary contracts pending decision of his request for its modification as had been allowed to certain other contractors, held, it was open to the contractor to contend that he was not bound by the supplementary contract; neither S. 91 nor S. 92 is attracted because (1) evidence is admissible to prove subsequent conduct of the parties, (2) the evidence sought to be led is not oral but documentary and (3) what is sought to be proved is a condition precedent admissible under proviso (3) to S. 92: A.I.R. 1984 J.&K. 10.

Ejectment suit—Permanent occupancy claimed in defence—Compromise not stamped or registered—Decree merely dismissing suit—Held, that the compromise was not admissible to prove the recognition of occupancy rights: 14 L.R. 513 (Rev.): 17 R.D. 660. See also 1940 Nag.L.J. 85: A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 116.

In order to explain a decree, one can look at the judgment and at the pleadings, where, however, the point of doubt is not determinable from them, the Court may permit oral evidence to be adduced, order to correct the misleading descriptions in the decree: (1933) 35 Punj.L.R. 20: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 181.

Bond silent as to interest—Oral evidence to prove agreement to pay interest is admissible: 100 I.C. 794: A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 195.

Alteration in instrument—Passing of consideration and execution found simultaneous—Effect of: (1957) 2 M.L.J. 196: A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 715.

Prior oral agreement held inadmissible—Written statement regarding indent transactions—Proof of usage at variance with the terms of contract—Admissibility: I.L.R. 54 Cal. 549.

Railway—Risk-note though available not produced at trial—Proof in direct evidence cannot be allowed. See A.I.R. 1956 Hyd. 193.

Goods carried at owners risk note—Consignee alleging that goods were sent at Railway risk note—Consignee to produce certificate obtained under S. 74-A(2) Railways Act—Oral statement to that effect inadmissible: A.I.R. 1967 Pat. 447.

Construction of contracts—Language of contracts susceptible of two interpretations: A.I.R. 1968 Del. 68.

Construction of document—Power of Court to strike out words or phrase—Doctrine of false demonstration—Applicability: A.I.R. 1968 Cal. 532.

Objection as to mode of proof—Lack of best evidence—Objection to oral evidence waived—Objection cannot be raised at stage of arguments: A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 390.

Agreement affecting jurisdiction of Courts—Agreement specifying place where terms of contract were to be carried out, i.e., where cause of action was to be deemed to arise, is not illegal. In absence of plea which might enable to avoid binding effect of agreement, evidence in derogation of agreement is inadmissible under S. 91, Evidence Act, 1872: 1967 All.L.J. 343.

Oral evidence of consent of the nearest reversioner to an alienation made by a Hindu widow is not rendered inadmissible by reason of an endorsement made in writing by him on the sale deed reciting the fact that he knew the contents of the deed. Such an endorsement is not a record of contract entered into between him and the purchaser: A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 390: 1951 Nag.L.J. 202.

Under Mahomedan Law, divorce is not a contract within the meaning of S. 91 except in those cases where the husband and the wife agree to dissolve a marriage for consideration. Accordingly, oral evidence is admissible to prove the factum of divorce if the deed of divorce is not forthcoming although it is unstamped: (1946) 48 Punj.L.R. 532: A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 306.

Defendant party to document—Plaintiff claiming through her father who was either donor or vendor under document—Evidence cannot be led to show that document is what it does not purport to be. [A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 122, Rel. on]: 36 Cut.L.T. 551: A.I.R. 1970 Ori. 203.

Ancient grant—Original Sanad produced—No ambiguity—Conduct of parties cannot be looked into in interpreting the sanad. See A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 586, cited under S. 8, supra. Where a party has to establish that there is a particular contract binding on the Government, and a written document executed in a particular manner as required by law for such a contract, it can only be proved by such a document under S. 91, Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 393.

92. Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement.—When the terms of any such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms:

1. Applicability and scope.—The bar imposed by S. 92 applies only when a party seeks to rely upon the document embodying the terms of the transaction; in that event, the law declares that the nature and intent of the transaction must be gathered from the terms of the document itself and no evidence of any oral agreement or statement can be admitted, as between the parties, for contradicting or modifying its terms. This section is not attracted when the party contends that the transaction recorded in the document was never intended to be acted upon and the document is a sham; such question arises when the party sets up a different transaction altogether and asserts that what is recorded in the document was intended to be of no consequence whatsoever; oral evidence is admissible to show that the document was never intended to operate as an agreement but some other agreement altogether, not recorded in the document, was entered into between the parties. It is open to the party to lead parole evidence in support of the plea. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 20: (1982) 1 S.C.C. 4: 1982 U.J.(S.C.) 1: (1982) 1 S.C.R. 1176: 1982 M.P.L.J. 1: (1982) 95 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 138: (1982) 2 Guj.L.H. 92 (S.C.); (1980) 1 M.P.W.N. 38.

The bar of S. 92 applies only when it is sought to be proved that the terms of the transaction were different and not that the transaction itself was different than what it purported to be. Both Ss. 91 and 92 Evidence Act are based on the best evidence rule. S. 92 is only supplementary to S. 91 and it, in terms, excludes, as between the parties and their representatives, any oral evidence for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of the document except when the case falls under any of the six provisos to the section.

The question of construction of two documents must be approached on the settled principles of construction which are merely incorporated in the relevant sections of the Evidence Act. If there is no inconsistency and if the language of the document is not ambiguous or obscure and the case does not fall in any of the six provisos to S. 92, the document would have solely to be construed on its own terms. This prohibition, however, is only as regards the different terms being sought to be established; there is no prohibition from proving that the transaction is different than what it purports to be. The oral evidence as regards intention would, therefore, always be admissible to prove the real nature of the transaction. In case of inconsistency or repugnancy between various clauses, the document would have to be interpreted as one whole and attempt would have to be made to reconcile various clauses and it is only the last resort, if harmonious reconciliation is not possible that earlier provision would be given effect to so as to override the later provision.

A possessory mortgage and a rent-note, with the rent equivalent to the interest on the mortgage sum, were executed contemporaneously on the same date. In the suit for Proviso (1).—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document, or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto; such as fraud, intimidation, illegality, want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, [1][want or failure] of consideration, or mistake in fact or law.

Proviso (2).—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.

Proviso (3).—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved.

Proviso (4).—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify and such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents.

Proviso (5).—Any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description, may be proved:

Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract.

Proviso (6).—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts.

eviction and arrears of rent, filed by the mortgagee, the mortgagor, contended that there was no relationship of a landlord and tenant between the parties because the two documents constituted a single transaction of mortgage. Held, that it was not a question where the consideration of intention would be ruled out by S. 92. The real question being what is the true nature of the transaction, the same would have to be found out by looking at the contents of the document, the surrounding circumstances and by resorting even to the oral evidence of the parties. Held, further that, looking at the rent note there were two different relationships with two different legal consequences and following the rule of harmonious construction, both the document could be given effect to at the same time. There was no inconsistency between the two documents. In such cases merely because the Court thought that in substance the transaction was a device, it would not be open to the Court to ignore the true legal position and seek to vary the terms of documents deliberately arrived at between the two parties who were a sui juris. When there was no inconsistency there could also be no question that the earlier part of the transaction, viz., the mortgage would prevail over the subsequent part, viz., the lease, because both the parts could be given effect to. In such a case there would be no room for application of any of the provisos to S. 92 and the bar would remain absolute. The documents must be construed on their terms: A.I.R. 1969 Guj. 169: (1969) 10 Guj.L.R. 600.

It is a settled rule of construction that when a term of a written document is not clear and unambiguous, extraneous evidence is admissible to ascertain the meaning of such a term. Thus, where parties entered into oral partnership and a subsequent deed merely recited existence of partnership, held, extraneous evidence regarding capacity of partner at the time of entering into partnership is admissible: 1974 M.P.L.J. 689 (D.B.).

S. 92 pre-supposes a contract in existence; a party thereto pleading absence of the contract, its being sham, is entitled to establish by oral evidence that the parties did not intend to bring the contract into existence: A.I.R. 1977

Illustrations

(a) A policy of insurance is effected on goods "in ships from Calcutta to London". The goods are shipped in a particular ship which is lost. The fact that that particular ship was orally excepted from the policy, cannot be proved.

(b) A agrees absolutely in writing to pay B Rs. 1,000 on the 1st March, 1873. The fact that, at the same time, an oral agreement was made that the money should not be paid till the thirty-first March, cannot be proved.

(c) An estate called "the Rampore tea estate" is sold by a deed which contains a map of the property sold. The fact that land not included in the map had always been regarded as part of the estate and was meant to pass by the deed cannot be proved.

(d) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B, upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B's as to their value. This fact may be proved.

(e) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.

(f) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of payment, and accepts the goods on delivery. B sues A for the price. A may show that the goods were supplied on credit for a term still unexpired.

(g) A sells B a horse and verbally warrants him sound. A gives B a paper in these words "Bought of A a horse for Rs. 500". B may prove the verbal warranty.

(h) A hires lodgings of B, and gives B a card on which is written—"Rooms, Rs. 200 a month". A may prove a verbal agreement that these terms were to include partial board.

A hires lodgings of B for a year, and a regularly stamped agreement, drawn up by an attorney, is made between them. It is silent on the subject of board. A may not prove that board was included in the terms verbally.

(i) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money. In a suit for the amount, A may prove this.

(j) A and B make a contract in writing to take effect upon the happening of a certain contingency. The writing is left with B, who sues A upon it. A may show the circumstances under which it was delivered.

Karn. 173: I.L.R. (1977) 1 Karn. 416: (1977) 1 Karn.L.J. 181.

When the recitals in documents are absolutely clear and are expressed in unmistakable terms, there is no room for adducing evidence aliunde to contradict the recitals of these documents, and any evidence so adduced is clearly hit by Ss. 91 and 92: 1974 Kash.L.J. 331.

Where the language of a document is plain and unambiguous, held, no party is entitled to lead oral evidence in order to vary its plain meaning for deciding whether it is a will or not: (1993) 2 Hindu L.R. 637 (Bom.).

What is the precise legal connotation of the expression 'terms' used in Ss. 91 and 92? Terms of a contract necessarily postulate a contract in existence containing statements in the nature of terms; the expression 'terms of a contract' would not apply to a statement contained in a written document which is in the nature of a condition precedent to the very formation of that contract; 'terms' must relate to statements, assertions or representations contained in a written contract relating to its subject-matter and to something to be done or not to be done under the contract: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 365: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 509: 1972 Mah.L.J. 756.

Ss. 91 and 92 are very clear; under S. 91 when a transaction is reduced to the form of a document, whether by the parties' consent or agreement or by requirement of law, that document alone must be regarded as the sole appropriate evidence of the terms of the contract; so long as the document exists, and is within the party's power, no other evidence of the transaction is admissible; under S. 92, when the parties voluntarily and deliberately set down in writing the terms of a transaction, it is presumed between themselves and their privies that they intended the document to be a full and final statement of their intentions and they are, therefore, precluded under S. 92 from giving any extrinsic evidence to contradict or vary its terms; nothing in S. 92 warrant that its bar extends only to agreements required by law to be registered; however, it does not preclude the parties that the document was not really the contract between them but only a fictitious or colourable device to cloak something else; all contracts must be made animo contrabandi; parole evidence, it is settled law, is admissible to prove absence of such animus. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70; A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 335 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1962 Mad. 360, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Gau. 43: 1974 Assam L.R. 158 (D.B.). But see (1990) 2 Ker.L.T. 327.

For the applicability of S. 92, there should be a concluded contract. The section has no application to negotiations: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 48: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 743.

Ss. 91 and 92 only apply when the document on the face of it contains or appears to contain all the terms of the contract: I.L.R. 56 Bom. 180; A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 151. See also I.L.R. 6 Cal. 328; 76 I.C. 215; A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 236.

The Evidence Act is not altered by the Negotiable Instruments Act; S. 46 of the Negotiable Instruments Act does not exclude the application of S. 92 of the Evidence Act in suits on negotiable instruments; S. 46 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and S. 92 of Evidence Act must be read together: I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 516: A.I.R. 1943 Sind 67.

The Court in considering whether oral evidence can be given or not has to look to the Evidence Act and the equitable considerations which have influenced the English Courts in like cases have no application in this country: (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 1197: A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 39.

S. 92 clearly refers to a contract, grant or other disposition of property entered into by agreement between the parties to the document. It cannot refer to a decree which is imposed upon one of the parties by force majeure: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 149: I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 383 (F.B.); 1950 All.L.J. 261: A.I.R. 1950 All. 437; 91 I.C. 705: A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 643. But see I.L.R. 50 Mad. 897: 53 M.L.J. 533: A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 911. See also I.L.R. 6 Rang. 573: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 316 (oral agreement varying or affecting settlement is not barred).

The section cannot, therefore, bar the setting up of an oral contract to operate as an adjustment of a decree. (Per Young, C.J.): A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 149: I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 383 (F.B.). See also A.I.R. 1943 Pesh. 29.

Evidence to prove an oral adjustment of a decree is not inadmissible under the section: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 195: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 634. See also I.L.R. 58 Mad. 994: 69 M.L.J. 451; A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 303.

Oral evidence to prove a subsequent adjustment under which part of a decree was paid and the rest agreed not to be executed against the judgment debtors is not inadmissible by reason of S. 92: A.I.R. 1929 All. 79. See also A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 437: I.L.R. 56 Cal. 201.

Where a decree based on an award is ambiguous in its terms, the evidence of the arbitrator is admissible for the purpose of interpreting the decree as S. 92 does not govern decrees: 165 I.C. 429: A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 168.

Terms of agreement clear and unambiguous—No oral evidence could be permitted: A.I.R. 1969 Andh. Pra. 88.

Terms of document not ambiguous—Evidence of subsequent conduct of parties as to how they understood them not admissible: 1961 Ker.L.T. 138: 1961 Ker.L.J. 206: A.I.R. 1961 Ker. 293.

Where the party in possession of the original document was unable to produce on the ground that it had not been preserved, held, its proof by oral evidence of its contents, the best evidence in the circumstance, is admissible and may be taken into consideration: (1947-48) 52 Cal.W.N. 785: A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 108.

Though an agreement to give a discharge in future may, if it is oral, be hit by the section there is nothing in the section to preclude evidence being let in, in proof of an oral agreement which is otherwise valid and enforceable and in pursuance of which an amount somewhat less than the amount due under the mortgage is paid in full discharge of the mortgage: A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 852: (1949) 1 M.L.J. 295.

The evidence of discharge under a contract, even though at variance with the terms of the contract, held, is perfectly admissible in law; if the defendant has in his possession the receipts given by the plaintiff which show that the latter received warram rent in full discharge for any particular year, it is certainly admissible in evidence to prove the discharge or payment of rent for that year: (1955) 1 M.L.J. 221.

The section merely prescribes a rule of evidence. It does not fetter the Court's power to arrive at the true meaning and effect of a transaction in the light of all the surrounding circumstances: 107 I.C. 658: A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 91.

Where the wording of the contract is capable of different interpretations, the Court is justified in finding with what intention a particular expression was used as matter of pure construction; S. 92 has no reference to the interpretation of the terms of a contract: I.L.R. 55 Cal. 808: A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 737; (1985) 2 Cal.L.J. 337 [When bill of lading is ambiguous, the Court may look to extrinsic evidence to determine the parties' intention].

Oral evidence of intention is not admissible for the purpose of construing a deed or ascertaining the intention of the parties. The case has to be decided on a consideration of the contents of the document with such extrinsic evidence of surrounding circumstances as might be required to show in what manner the language of the document was related to the existing facts: (1944) 46 Punj.L.R. 101: A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 175.

When the facts are fully set out in a document and are admitted, a party's opinion about the legal effect of those facts is of no consequence in construing it. Evidence of the acts and conduct of parties is inadmissible to show that the document is not what it purports to be, although subsequent conduct is admissible to prove that the deed was acted upon: A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 278: I.L.R. 36 Pat. 471.

It is perhaps a moot point whether oral evidence is admissible to determine the intention of the parties. It is certainly not admissible if the document is unambiguous but if there is doubt then it is permissible: I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 604: A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 434,

The rule that the conduct of the parties in respect to an instrument may be looked to in construing a document, is subject to this reservation that it can be admitted only after every other means to construe a deed have been exhausted: 108 I.C. 418; A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 225.

Oral evidence of intention of parties is inadmissible. But evidence under S. 92(2) regarding the attendant circumstances is admissible: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 807. See also 171 I.C. 702: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 142.

Parole evidence is admissible to show who is the real principal in order to charge him on a contract, but such evidence would not be admissible if the contract is in writing and the evidence would contradict that writing. This follows from the general rule of inadmissibility of parole evidence to contradict a written document. It is also well established law that a person cannot claim to be a principal to a contract, if this would be inconsistent with the terms of the contract itself nor can anybody claim in similar circumstances to make him liable on the contract as a principal. A contract which is signed by A as B's licensee is a contract on the face of it, with A in his personal capacity. To allow parole evidence to be given to show that the contract, which is in writing, is really not with A in his personal capacity but as an agent of B would be to contradict the writing, and would, therefore, be inadmissible: I.L.R. (1951) 1 Cal. 420.

As regards admissibility of oral evidence to prove acts, conduct and intention of parties varying contract, see I.L.R. 22 All. 149 (P.C.) the leading case. See also 42 Mys.H.C.R. 257; I.L.R. 25 Mad. 7; (1903-04) 8 Cal.W.N. 101; I.L.R. 34 Bom. 59; I.L.R. 56 Cal. 201: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 437; A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 142: 171 I.C. 702; I.L.R. 22 All. 149.

Intention of parties—Fraud—Oral evidence to prove—Representation of intention on which the deed is silent: 13 I.C. 389: 13 Cr.L.J. 50. See also A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 434: I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 604.

As to admissibility of oral evidence to prove extension of time in respect of the date of performing contract. See 18 S.L.R. 320. See also I.L.R. 13 Rang. 22: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 316.

Oral evidence of surrounding circumstances: 104 I.C. 736: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 4. Evidence of conduct of parties to prove partition: 92 I.C. 1028: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 402. See also I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 604: A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 434. Relinquishment of interest by mortgagee: I.L.R. 48 All. 705: A.I.R. 1926 All. 693.

In a case of joint purchase in the name of several persons, parole evidence is admissible to prove tenancy in common: A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 72: 56 M.L.J. 643 (P.C.). So also to prove that a lease in the name of one member was in fact on behalf of the entire joint family: 133 I.C. 897.

The section does not prevent a party to a contract from showing by oral evidence that the consideration is different from that described in the contract. What is not allowed by the section is to contradict the terms of the document: I.L.R. 7 Rang. 292: A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 240; 28 S.L.R. 266: A.I.R. 1935 Sind 48; A.I.R. 1933 All.L.J. 1364: A.I.R. 1933 All. 576; (1953) 2 M.L.J. 450: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 84: I.L.R. (1954) Mad. 271. See also 1939 M.L.R. 12 (C); (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 734: 65 Cal.L.J. 255.

S. 92 forbids extraneous evidence to be let in to prove a different intention of the parties than what they reduced into writing in a deed executed between them. For the purpose of this rule, it is immaterial whether the extraneous evidence consisted of oral evidence or evidence as to the acts and conduct of the parties. Hence, where the language of the written instrument evidences an outright and unconditional sale, oral evidence to show that it was only intended to operate as a mortgage or a trust deed is not admissible, as it would amount to contradiction, variation, addition or subtraction from the written grant: I.L.R. (1956) Trav.-Co. 411: A.I.R. 1956 Trav.-Co. 193; (1959) 2 An.W.R. 23.

Oral evidence to vary terms of contract is wholly inadmissible: A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 61.

If evidence is proposed to be led to vary or modify the terms of a document or a writing, there must be a proper plea raised which brings the case within any of the proviso to S. 92: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 165.

In order to ascertain as to what really was intended by the transaction was set down in the document or the document was merely meant to be something different which the parties sought to hide by their collateral agreement, held, it is permissible to adduce evidence of the parties' subsequent conduct and other surrounding circumstances; Ss. 91 and 92 are not attracted: A.I.R. 1981 N.O.C. 94: 1981 M.P.L.J. 391.

S. 92 is hedged in by the six provisos which are exceptions to the general rule contained in the main provision; they envisage different situations wherein oral evidence may be admissible even if it contradicts, varies, adds to or subtracts from the terms of contract, grant etc.; any oral evidence not falling within the ambit of any of the provisos to that extent is inadmissible: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 215.

S. 92 only excludes oral evidence to vary the terms of a written contract; it is not concerned whether the parties had agreed to contract on the terms set out in the contract; there is thus a distinction in law: the evidence to vary the terms of a written agreement is not admissible but evidence to show that the document was never intended to be acted upon but was created solely as evidence of some other matter is admissible. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1972 Goa 25.

All that S. 92 excludes is oral evidence to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from terms of the contract in writing; it does not preclude a party from showing that the writing did not embody the real contract and was merely a fictitious or colourable device to cloak something else: A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 317: (1989) 1 Ker.L.J. 709.

S. 92, no doubt prohibits proof of facts different from the terms of a written contract; but the section is also subject to S. 58 which provides that facts admitted need not be proved; however, consideration mentioned in the deed is not affected by either of the sections: A.I.R. 1983 J.&K. 44: 1982 Srinagar L.J. 546 (D.B.).

Where the plaintiff executed a sale deed which was never intended to be or in fact acted upon and no consideration had passed between the parties thereto either, held, it was open to the purported vendee to give evidence in a subsequent case for enforcement of his agreement with a third party that the earlier transaction, being fictitious and sham, was never acted upon; S. 92 casts no bar on such oral evidence: A.I.R. 1989 Ker. 317: (1989) 1 Ker.L.J. 709.

Without impeaching the validity of a document, held, a party cannot be permitted to lead evidence contrary to the express recitals embodied in the document: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 178: (1989) 1 An.L.T. 91.

S. 92 is not a bar to show that the document which apparently was a sale was not a sale but gift or was the result of the family arrangement: A.I.R. 1971 All. 151.

Where the oral agreement, if permitted to be enforced, is likely to defeat provisions of S. 92 Evidence Act, held, agreement was hit by S. 23 of the Contract Act, 1872 : I.L.R. (1979) 1 Del. 84: 1979 Rajdhani L.R. 7.

If there was ab initio a stipulation between the parties that the contract would not be enforced or acted upon, oral evidence in support of such a plea may be given; true, unde

Ss. 91 and 92 when the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing, extrinsic evidence as to what transpired subsequent to the contract is not admissible for ascertaining the terms and no oral agreement or statement is admissible contradicting, varying, adding and subtracting from its terms. S. 92 does not preclude a party from showing that the writing is not really a contract but only a fictitious or colourable device which cloaked something else: 1972 Jab.L.J. 632: 1972 M.P.L.J. 852 (D.B.).

S. 92 is no bar to the admission of oral evidence to prove that the transaction was intended to be something other than what it purports to be; oral evidence is admissible (i) to show that the signed document was not to operate as it purports to be until a specified condition is fulfilled, and (ii) to prove that the document was never intended to operate as one which it purports to be but was brought about solely with the object of creating evidence of some other matters. Even if proviso (1) to S. 92 was not there, nothing in S. 91 or S. 92 could exclude oral evidence to show that there was no agreement between the parties, and therefore, no valid contract as per the terms embodied therein. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70; I.L.R. (1966) Cut. 236, Rel. on]: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 504.

Whether a transaction embodied in a document is sham or fictitious and not real may be proved by inferences which may reasonably be drawn from the intrinsic evidence respecting the transaction itself or from extrinsic circumstances surrounding the transaction; such evidence is not barred under Ss. 91 and 92: A.I.R. 1978 All. 123 (D.B.).

A contract note is not conclusive of the real relation of the parties to the contract and evidence can be given to prove whether a party contracted as agent or in the capacity of seller or buyer in the transaction: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 179.

Oral evidence can be given by the petitioner, suing in forma pauperis, to prove that he was personally present when the petition was presented by his counsel or that he himself presented the petition, and that a note contrary to that by the Judge is wrong: (1934) 36 Punj.L.R. 100: A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 452(1). As to application of section to criminal cases, see 11 Cr.L.J. 738: 8 I.C. 952.

That a sale deed is only a mortgage: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 459 (Contemporaneous agreement not in writing not admissible): A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 182. That an apparent mortgage deed was really intended to be different: 7 Pat.L.T. 293; A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 501; I.L.R. 5 Rang. 644: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 58.

Oral evidence inadmissible to prove that two documents executed and registered on same day are part and parcel of one transaction: 103 I.C. 399: A.I.R. 1927 All. 696.

Recitals in a document constitute admissions; no oral evidence to contradict them is admissible: A.I.R. 1989 N.O.C. 157: (1988) 2 An.L.T. 504.

In a suit for partition and separate possession of his share by one of the purchasers named in the deed, it is permissible for the defendant to contend that no title was intended to be passed to the plaintiff whose name was added merely to secure the loan advanced by him to the defendant to purchase the house. S. 92 only prohibits letting in of evidence to contradict, vary or subtract from the terms of the instrument; the parties thereto are not, and could not be considered to be, a term of the instrument itself; it is open to the defendant to show who the real party to the document is and in what character and for what purpose it was impleaded as a party to the document: (1974)1 M.L.J. 188.

Extraneous evidence is admissible to clarify the scope of the recitals in the surety bond executed under S. 514, Cr.P.Code. [A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1722, Disting.; A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 478 and A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 569, Rel. on]: 1973 All.W.R. 228: 1973 Cr.L.J. 1208: I.L.R. (1973) 1 All. 393 (D.B.).

Document whether mortgage by conditional sale or sale with condition for transfer—Question is one of determination of real character of the transaction to be ascertained from provisions of document viewed in light of surrounding circumstances: (1966) 1 S.C.A. 431: A.I.R. 1966 S.C. 902.

Where most of the sanads are in a stereotyped form, in any particular case, the intention of the parties could be ascertained by reference to the terms of the settlement embodied in the correspondence: (1934) 36 Bom.L.R. 158: A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 145.

Provisions of, have not ceased to be operative after extension of Indian Evidence Act and Transfer of Property Act to Mysore State—S. 5 not void on ground of repugnancy to above Central Acts—Nor is it impliedly repealed: A.I.R. 1965 Mys. 54.

Terms of contract—Section does not exclude oral evidence to show who are real contracting parties: 1965 B.L.J.R. 193: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 463.

Oral evidence is permissible to show as to who were the actual contracting parties in case of benami transaction: A.I.R. 1985 Cal. 2.

The combined effect of Ss. 91 and 92 in case of benami transactions is that the ostensible owner has all the rights and privileges of ownership of the property, except against its real owner: (1992-1) 109 Mad.L.W. 131 (D.B.).

In the case of conveyance deeds executed, held, no oral evidence for the purpose of adding to their terms can be admitted under Ss. 91 and 92: 1973 Rev.L.R. 484: 1973 Cur.L.J. 599 (Punj.).

Where the consideration set out in the document was the Bank's (future) readiness to advance some loans when the loans had already been advanced and were not to be advanced afresh, held, it is settled law that if a document mentions a wrong consideration, oral evidence is admissible to show what the real consideration was; Ss. 91 and 92 restrict oral evidence regarding the contract's terms; its consideration is certainly not a term of the contract. A contract is nothing but a promise to do or forbear to do something; anything which enlarges or limits or conditions the promise is alone hit by the bar. [A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 320 and A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 91, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1984 Guj. 93: (1983) 3 Guj.L.H. 829 (D.B.).

By written agreement, parties creating between themselves a limited interest in the estate—It cannot be enlarged by oral testimony of beneficiary when it is contrary to terms of document itself: (1965) 67 Punj.L.R. 770: 1965 Cur.L.J. 320.

Where deeds of sale and lease were sought to be unsuccessfully proved to create or witness a loan to which the Bengal Money Lenders' Act was attracted, held, S. 92 would apply; no oral evidence of the parties' real intention could be allowed to be adduced. [(1899) 27 Ind. Apps. 58 (P.C.), Disting.]: A.I.R. 1984 Cal. 399 (D.B.).

S. 40(6) of the Bengal Money Lenders' Act overrides the operation of S. 92; thus, where the borrower shows that S. 40(6) of the Bengal Act is attracted and the document relied upon creates or witnesses a loan, he can lead evidence of an oral agreement or statement whereby the document's terms were contradicted or varied or added to or subtracted from: A.I.R. 1984 Cal. 130: (1983-84) 88 Cal.W.N. 551: (1984) 1 Cal.H.N. 246: (1984) 1 Cal.L.J. 204.

S. 92 merely prohibits admission of oral evidence contrary to the terms of any contract, grant or other disposition of property; names of persons possessing lands on the boundaries of vended land are no part of the grant's stipulations; their names are necessary to be recited only for identification of the vended land. Thus, when the sale of the vended land was sought to be pre-empted on the ground that the purchasers were not adjoining raiyats as claimed in recitals of the sale deed, held, S. 92 did not bar consideration of documents for proving that they in fact were the boundary raiyats; besides, S. 92 prohibited only adduction of oral evidence and not documentary evidence: A.I.R. 1994 Pat. 42: (1993-2) 41 B.L.J.R. 1140.

Receipt of notice under S. 80, C.P.Code, acknowledged by defendant—Onus to prove that it was defective is on him: A.I.R. 1968 All. 321.

It is open to prove that an agreement purporting to provide for maintenance was never intended to be given effect to or acted upon but was in fact brought about with the sole object of securing an acknowledgment of the undivided status of the person by the insertion of a recital to that effect as a preamble to the deed of maintenance: 36 Mad.L.W. 817: 63 M.L.J. 707.

In cases to which S. 12(1) of Kerala Act (I of 1964) will not apply, document has to be interpreted subject to Ss. 91, 92 of the Evidence Act: A.I.R. 1970 Ker. 16: 1969 Ker.L.R. 108: 1969 Ker.L.T. 62: 1969 Ker.L.J. 181 (F.B.).

S. 93 of the Evidence Act forbids the filling in of blanks in a deed with the aid of extrinsic evidence but it does not affect the Court's power to fill in blanks and omissions by the ordinary rules of construction of deeds: 1960 All.L.J. 193: 1960 All.W.R. (H.C.) 164: A.I.R. 1960 All. 420: I.L.R. (1959) 2 All. 561.

Rectification of document—Equitable jurisdiction of Court—Necessary conditions: A.I.R. 1957 Assam 49.

Wrong description of name in deed is a latent ambiguity and parole evidence is admissible: 7 O.W.N. 1195: A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 54.

In case of a clerical mistake, it can be proved by parole evidence under S. 92: A.I.R. 1930 All. 387(1).

Extraneous oral evidence is inadmissible especially when the terms of the bond are clear. The parties must be presumed to know the difference between interest on interest and compound interest and if they deliberately chose to use one expression they cannot be permitted to prove that they meant the other: A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 25.

Acknowledgment is not a document contemplated in S. 92. It is neither a contract, grant nor disposition of property nor analogous to any of them: 26 Nag.L.R. 320: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 298.

Oral promise made at the time of acknowledgment of a contract of loan is admissible: 26 Nag.L.R. 320: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 298.

The law is well settled that to prove an acknowledgment of liability, oral evidence of the intention of the party said to have made the acknowledgment is not admissible for construing the writing given. It is equally settled that in construing such a writing, it is legitimate to look to the surrounding circumstances: (1940-41) 45 Cal.W.N. 208.

Where the parties had orally agreed for sale of the property and both of them wrote to the Housing Co-operative for approval and transfer of membership, held, such an agreement was partly oral and partly in writing; bar of S. 92 was not attracted to it; it was open to the parties to prove the terms of sale orally agreed to by them: A.I.R. 1992 Cal. 47: (1991-92) 96 Cal.W.N. 485.

Where it is alleged in the plaint and proved by evidence that the pronote, rendered inadmissible for being deficiently stamped, did not incorporate all the terms and conditions of the loan agreement and was executed by way of collateral security or conditional payment, held, the plaintiff may succeed on the original loan; S. 91 or S. 92 would not bar it. But if there is no such plea or proof, the plaintiff cannot maintain the suit by resorting to the theories of implied promise or money had and received or quasi contract or unjust enrichment or any other equitable ground; there is no escape from the effect of Ss. 91 and 92. [A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 785 (F.B.), Approved; A.I.R. 1964 Andh. Pra. 188 (F.B.), Overruled]: A.I.R. 1973 Andh. Pra. 342 (F.B.).

Where in an engineering works contract the word 'sock' was erroneously typed instead of the word 'rock', which alone gave meaning to the contract, held, oral evidence to get the error rectified does not amount to adding to or modifying or altering the terms of the contract; a manifest typing error, even without extraneous evidence can be corrected: A.I.R. 1972 Guj. 192 (D.B.).

The bar in S. 92 is not attracted when the party's plea is that the transaction recorded in the document was never intended to be acted upon and the document embodied a sham transaction; it is same as when the party asserts that the real transaction intended was different from the purported transaction; it is settled that oral evidence to prove such plea is admissible but not to contradict or vary the terms of the written agreement. Thus, where owners of a building had borrowed money from the defendant on the security of the building and handed over its possession to the defendant on the condition that he would pay certain amount per month by way of surplus profits, with further right to bring the property to sale for realization of the mortgage money but later on the owners contended that the parties had intended to create a lease rent, held, the cumulative effect of the recitals indicated that the parties had intended to create a mortgage, not a lease, and there being no ambiguity in the terms of the document, the Court could not look into surrounding circumstances and other facts to ascertain the parties' real intention: A.I.R. 1994 Ker. 141: (1994) 1 Ker.L.J. 89.

Where under an agreement of reconveyance, the vendee agreed to resell the property to the vendor till a certain date and the vendor, dissuading the vendee to obtain loan on unconscionable terms to pay the consideration, extended the time of purchase by two months but when the vendee had arranged money and called upon the vendor to execute the sale, the vendor declined on the ground that the time was already over; in the suit for specific performance, the vendor pleaded that the oral agreement to extend the time could not be proved because of the bar of S. 92 while the vendee pleaded waiver giving rise to the plea of estoppel; held, the proof of waiver giving rise to estoppel is not barred by S. 92; it is open to the parties to waive their contractual rights embodied in a document and, if on that representation, the other party does something to its own prejudice, the party waiving its rights is not entitled to strict performance according to the original contract; it is estopped from doing so: 1972 M.P.L.J. 122.

2. Section applicable only to parties to instrument or their representatives.—S. 92 is applicable only to parties to the instrument and their representatives. See I.L.R. 10 All. 421; I.L.R. 25 All. 337; 2 Cal.L.J. 338; I.L.R. 42 Bom. 512; 1930 All.L.J. 724; I.L.R. 4 Luck. 68: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 472; I.L.R. 6 Rang. 376; 1930 All.L.J. 926; A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 168; (1934) 36 Bom.L.R. 158: A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 145; (1933-34) 38 Cal.W.N. 1004: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 821; A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 139: 1939 Rang.L.R. 622. See also 1937 Rang.L.R. 13; 1940 Mad.W.N. 19: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 345.

Under S. 92, the prohibition with reference to the proof of an oral agreement applies only as between the parties to an instrument or representatives in interest and not between one of the parties to an instrument and a third party: A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 852: (1949) 1 M.L.J. 295.

S. 92 is not attracted, as held in A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448, when the dispute is between a party to the document and a stranger: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 412: (1974) 1 M.L.J. 146.

The subject-matter of S. 92 are contracts, grants and other disposition of property, whether embodied in a document by the parties' consent or requirement of law; therefore, the words 'no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted as between the parties to any such instrument' refer both to the words 'contract, grant or other disposition of property' in the beginning of the section and the words 'any matter required by law, etc.' immediately following them. Thus, a party to a document alone is prohibited under S. 92 from adducing oral evidence to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the terms of the agreement in writing: A.I.R. 1972 Goa 25.

Section is not applicable to strangers, i.e., persons not parties to the contract: 104 I.C. 736: A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 4; 1937 Rang.L.R. 13: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 220.

The words 'between the parties to any such instrument' in S. 92 refer to the parties who on the one side and the other came together to make the contract or disposition of property, and do not apply to questions raised between the parties on the one side of a deed regarding their relations to each other under the contract: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 211: 194 I.C. 739.

There is nothing to prevent a person arrayed on the same side to give evidence to vary terms: 54 I.C. 962; 1 Bur.L.J. 160: 77 I.C. 923.

A pre-emptor who was not a party to the sale deed could adduce oral evidence to show the intention of parties: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 472: I.L.R. 4 Luck. 68. See also 1938 All.L.J. 668: A.I.R. 1938 All. 519; A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 434.

In a suit for pre-emption, the vendee can show by cogent evidence that in fact the amount paid as the price of the land is much more than that mentioned in the sale deed: A.I.R. 1969 J.&K. 28.

Though a contemporaneous oral agreement, for re-purchase between the parties to a conveyance, cannot be proved as between the parties, it can be proved if one of the parties is not actually a party to the conveyance: I.L.R. 6 Rang. 376: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 244. See also I.L.R. 5 Rang. 836.

Where both grantor and grantee are dealing with the property of an owner who is a third person who was not in the language of S. 92, either a party to the instrument or a representative-in-interest of a party to the instrument, there is no bar under S. 92 as to the admissibility of evidence in regard to the real nature of the transaction between the original parties: A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 425: (1952) 54 Bom.L.R. 492.

Where the official assignee moves the Insolvency Court under S. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, for a declaration that a deed of gift executed by the insolvent in favour of his wife and sons, appellants, was void, it is open, to the appellants to lead oral evidence to show that the transaction evidenced by the deed of gift was in reality a transfer for consideration. S. 92 of the Evidence Act is wholly inapplicable to the proceedings. The application of the rule contained in S. 92, Evidence Act, is limited to cases as between parties to the instrument or their representative-in-interest. Persons other than those who are parties to the document are not precluded from giving extrinsic evidence to contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the terms of the document. This position is made absolutely clear by the provisions of S. 99 itself. Though it is only variation which is specifically mentioned in S. 99, there can be no doubt that the third party's right to lead evidence which is recognized by S. 99 would include a right to lead evidence not only to vary the terms of the document, but to contradict the said terms or to add to or subtract from them. When the official assignee moves the Insolvency Court under S. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, he cannot be said to be the representative-in-interest of the insolvent in those proceedings. The rule of exclusion enunciated by S. 92 applies to both parties to the document and is based on the doctrine of mutuality. It would be inequitable and unfair to enforce that rule against a party to a document or his representative-in-interest in the case of a dispute between the said party or his representative-in-interest on the one hand and the stranger on the other. In this view, the appellants, who are the representatives-in-interest of the insolvent, can avoid the application of S. 92 and are entitled to lead oral evidence in support of the plea raised by them: A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 448.

A perusal of Ss. 91 and 92 makes it clear that it restricts oral evidence against the terms of the sale deed between the 'parties'. The word 'parties' used in these sections contemplates vendor on one side and the vendee on the other and their representatives. Thus, the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92 are not applicable to a case where there is a dispute between vendees inter se and the Court will be justified in considering the oral evidence regarding the shares of the parties against the terms of the sale deed: 1982 All.L.J. 264: 1982 All.W.C. 156: 1982 All.L.R. 173.

Where in a sale deed, it was mentioned that one of the vendees had contributed half the amount of consideration but his share in the property in the deed was mentioned as $^1/_{21}$, held, the deed could be rectified to show proper shares of the vendees under S. 45, of the Transfer of Property Act; S. 92 was not attracted because the dispute was not between the vendor and the vendees but between the vendees inter se. [A.I.R. 1936 All. 258; A.I.R. 1963 S.C. 1, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1982 All. 273: 1982 All.C.J. 174.

A, a Hindu lady, offered to sell her house to X, another Hindu lady, who was willing to purchase it. They acted through their respective husbands, B and Y. B and Y entered into an agreement under which Y on behalf of X agreed to purchase the house from A for Rs. 2,625 and paid Rs. 350 as advance at once. According to Y, he also paid a further sum of Rs. 1,275 to B. Thereafter, the sale deed was executed by A in favour of X for the balance of Rs. 1,000. A not having herself received Rs. 1,275 filed this suit against X and Y for recovering that amount with interest. On the question whether A was entitled to plead that the price fixed was more than Rs. 1,000: Held, that in the circumstances of this case neither A nor B were estopped under S. 92, Evidence Act from so pleading: (1953) 2 M.L.J. 249: A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 94.

3. Section 92 vis-a-vis section 115.—Both Ss. 92 and 115 are provisions of the same Evidence Act. They have to be read together. Reading the two sections together the effect is to exclude the plea of estoppel when the proof of the oral agreement on which the estoppel is based would be contrary to the provisions of S. 92. S. 115 would apply only when the representation is in writing, but would not help when it is oral in the face of S. 92. It is wrong to suppose that S. 115 is substantive law, while S. 92 alone is procedural law. If the two are read together, both can operate. There is nothing in S. 115 to show that it overrides S. 92. There is no estoppel against a statute. It is clear, therefore, that no estoppel can be pleaded against the statutory bar of S. 92: 1979 Rajdhani L.R. 7: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Del. 84.

Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958) Ss. 16(3), 17(1)—Estoppel—Ss. 92 and 115 Evidence Act must be read together—Alleged oral representation made by party not provable under S. 92—S. 115 cannot be invoked to support oral representation—Oral consent by landlord not enough to validate sub-tenancy under S. 16(3) Rent Act—S. 115 will not help to prove sub-tenancy: 1979 Rajdhani L.R. 7: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Del. 84.

See also A.I.R. 1974 Madh. Pra. 193 (D.B.), cited under Note 17, infra.

4. Lease deed/Rent note.—The proposition of law is well-settled that if the recitals in the lease itself and the terms thereof make out non-agricultural purposes and are free from all ambiguity, the only guide for determination of the nature of the lease would be the lease deed itself. But if the terms are not decisive and free from ambiguity, extraneous evidence will be admissible for the purpose of determining the nature of the lease: I.L.R. (1957) Cut. 509: A.I.R. 1957 Ori. 276.

Where the clear-cut terms of the registered document showed him to be so, held, the defendant could not contend that he was not a lessee; oral agreement to the contrary could not be proved; even documentary evidence to avoid the mischief of S. 92 could only be another registered deed. [A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 153, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 91: 1978 Pat.L.J.R. 232: 1978 B.L.J.R. 259 (D.B.).

Where a lease deed is in favour of X and Y, S. 92 of the Evidence Act, 1872, is clearly a bar to the plea by X that Y is merely a surety. [I.L.R. 10 All. 421, Foll.]. If there is plurality of lessees, the surrender must be by all the lessees in favour of the lessor. Under the lease which is an indivisible joint one, a right to enjoy immovable property has been created in favour of the lessees jointly and surrender by only one of such lessees, cannot prejudice or affect the rights of other lessees: I.L.R. (1964) 1 Mad. 443: (1964) 2 M.L.J. 242: (1963) 76 Mad.L.W. 431.

Lease deed—Recitals in—Parties (lessor or lessee) despite recitals not precluded from showing to the contrary—A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 39.

Where the Court has got the lease deed on the terms of which the tenure of a village has to be determined and there is no ambiguity in its construction, any evidence, which merely consists of isolated piece of subsequent conduct, has little relevance in determining the question: I.L.R. (1956) Mad. 897: (1956) 1 M.L.J. 82: A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 72.

Written lease—Oral evidence to show that one of conditions was not intended to be acted upon is not admissible: 1966 All.W.R. (H.C.) 1.

Where a lease from month to month is registered, contract of lease is not admissible in evidence: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 428. No oral agreement is admissible, to prove variation of the terms of a registered lease including a term as to the payment of rent, notwithstanding the fact that the lessee has paid and the lessor has accepted, rent at a reduced rate for many years: 206 I.C. 401: A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 152.

Where a tenancy for year to year was created by an unregistered deed, held, the deed was inadmissible and is no valid proof of the terms of the tenancy; however, where parties agreed for a subsequent period that the tenancy had become monthly on enhanced monthly rent, the landlord was entitled to plead and prove oral agreement of monthly tenancy in the suit for recovery of the arrears of rent thereunder. [(1966) 32 Cut.L.T. 478; A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 302 (F.B.), Foll.]: A.I.R. 1977 Ori. 76: I.L.R. (1977) Cut. 263.

Where a person occupied a property under a rent note executed by him with the tenant without the landlord's consent, held, in proceedings for eviction on the ground of subletting, they could not contend that the rent note was a sham document unless any proviso of S. 92 provided therefor: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 94.

A rent note containing agreed terms of the lease, held, is a contract for disposition of property; it falls within the purview of S. 92; no evidence is admissible to show that the real tenant was other than the one named therein: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 73: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 104.

Where a rent note described the property let out as a 'plot' and 'premises' almost in equal measure, held, the oral evidence as to the nature and condition of the property at the time it was let, does not tend to contradict or vary the terms of a contract; the bar of S. 92, thus, is not attracted: (1989) 37 Del.L.T. 278.

Where an agreement between the landlord and the tenant providing for payment of increased rent was in variation of their written contract, held, its evidence is barred under S. 92; a variation of rent envisaged by a registered lease deed must necessarily be made by another registered deed. [A.I.R. 1967 Mad. 57 (F.B.), Affirmed] A.I.R. 1974 S.C. 818: (1974) 1 S.C.C. 424: (1974) 2 S.C.R. 629.

Where a tenancy for a limited period contemplated under S. 21 of the Delhi Rent Control Act was permitted to be created on recording evidence of the parties and on the basis of a 'proposed lease' then not signed by the tenant and the lease deed in terms thereof was executed a day thereafter, held, on execution for eviction of the tenant on expiry of the limited term of the tenancy, the tenant could not be permitted to plead or prove that he was already a contractual tenant when the permission to create the limited tenancy was allowed: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 277: 1982 Rajdhani L.R. 442: (1982) 22 Del.L.T. 48: (1982) 2 Ren.L.R 86: (1982) 1 Ren.C.R. 642.

Where rent was paid by an occupant, other than the tenant, held, he cannot thereby himself become a tenant; no oral evidence of rescission of the lease deed is admissible under S. 92; the original tenant continues to be the tenant: (1993-2) 104 Punj.L.R. 370: 1993 Punj.L.J. 395 (D.B.).

In a suit for recovery of rent, held, oral evidence to prove the recision of the registered lease was inadmissible: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 278: 145 I.C. 176.

Oral evidence of the terms of a partnership deed is excluded under S. 91; further the two partners under S. 92 are debarred from leading oral evidence contrary to the written terms of the partnership deed. The version of a party, that the premises were let to a partnership firm, contrary to record cannot be accepted as correct; when premises were taken by the tenant who later on admitted another person as a partner and on dissolution of partnership assigned the premises to the other partner, held, was guilty of sub-letting or assignment or parting with possession within the meaning of S. 14(1)(b) of the Delhi Rent Control Act: (1982) 2 Ren.C.J. 607 (Del.).

Partnership or lease—no sharing of profits but one person required to pay fixed sum periodically to the other and carry on business in his own name on the property of the other—Transaction held to be lease and not partnership—Oral evidence showing transaction to be lease could not be rejected: (1963-64) 68 Cal.W.N. 786.

Where there is a registered kabuliyat providing for the payment of rent any oral agreement between the parties as to the retention of such rent for interest due on loan cannot be allowed in evidence as it varies definite terms of the registered instrument: 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 420: 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 317.

Oral evidence to prove a subsequent agreement relinquishing portion of rent reserved under a kabuliat is inadmissible: I.L.R. 56 Cal. 201: A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 437.

5. Mortgage deed.—Where an oral agreement subsequent to a mortgage does not in any way modify or rescind any provisions in the mortgage deed, but only provides a method of payment by appropriation of the profits towards principal and interest, the party setting up such an agreement is not prohibited by the provisions of S. 92 from proving its terms: I.L.R. 23 Luck. 74: A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 129.

Memo merely recording the fact of deposit of title deeds with the Bank to secure repayment of loan is not required by law to be compulsorily registered. Because in such a case the crucial question is: Did the parties intend to reduce their bargain regarding the deposit of the title deeds to the form of a document? If so, the document requires registration. If on the other hand, its proper construction and the surrounding circumstances lead to the conclusion that the parties did not intend to do so, then, there being no express bargain, the contract to create the mortgage arises by implication of the law from the deposit itself with the requisite intention, and the document being merely evidential does not require registration: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 1613.

Where in a mortgage deed by conditional sale, the mortgagor specifically admitted his liability to pay various amounts, aggregating to Rs. 45,000 to his 3 creditors, held, oral evidence to vary or contradict the terms of the document was inadmissible for being barred under S. 92: A.I.R. 1984 All. 219: 1984 All.C.J. 185 (D.B.).

Where mortgage deed stated that property mortgaged was separate property of executant, held, evidence to show that the property mortgaged was joint family property or was thrown into the common stock cannot be admitted, as it is barred under S. 92: 1977 Mah.L.J. 185 (D.B.).

Prior correspondence to vary terms of mortgage deed inadmissible: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 1024. See also 12 Mys.L.J. 11. But where a letter was sent by mortgagee, acting as agent of mortgagor and containing the scope of the security and the terms, held, it was admissible: 148 I.C. 721: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 51.

Where an usufructuary mortgage is reduced to writing but is unregistered no other evidence of its terms could be given because of S. 92: 1938 Nag.L.J. 123.

Where the mortgagee under a simple mortgage happens also to be a tenant of the mortgagor, and the former sets up an oral agreement between him and his mortgagor, that the rent due by him for the land is to be set off against the interest due to him from the mortgagor, there is no bar to the proof of such an agreement: I.L.R. (1946) All. 357: A.I.R. 1946 All. 283.

It is open to a judgment-debtor to plead a predecretal agreement which does not attack the decree but which states that the decree cannot be executed under certain conditions or it can be executed only in part. Such an agreement is not affected by S. 92, Evidence Act, as it does not amount to a modification, alteration or variation of the decree. Hence, a judgment-debtor in a suit on mortgage can plead in execution of the decree that prior to the passing of the final decree there was an agreement by which certain amounts were received by the plaintiff in full quit, and that as he subsequently claimed the entire sum in the suit, the decree is not executable: A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 339: (1955) 68 Mad.L.W. 233.

An oral agreement to take less than what is due under a registered mortgage bond would be inadmissible. But a discharge by paying less is admissible: 136 I.C. 317: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 141; 30 Mad.L.W. 293: A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 794; (1928) 30 Bom.L.R. 1455: A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 522; A.I.R. 1930 All. 721; I.L.R. 6 Rang. 191: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 144 (F.B.). See also I.L.R. 9 Lah. 597: A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 873; A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 235 (calculation of reduced rate of interest immaterial). See on this point: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 889; 61 M.L.J. 556.

That a mortgage with possession was intended to operate only as a simple mortgage: 165 I.C. 510 (Pesh.). Suit under S. 5, Mysore Agriculturists' Relief Act on usufructuary mortgage for sale of property—Plaintiff can show that alleged usufructuary mortgage was simple mortgage. See A.I.R. 1957 Mys. 86. As to scope of section. See I.L.R. 38 Cal. 822: 38 I.A. 196: 21 M.L.J. 1105 (P.C.).

Document, whether a Canom or a mortgage depends upon interpretation of document: A.I.R. 1970 Ker. 16: 1969 Ker.L.R. 108: 1969 Ker.L.T. 62: 1969 Ker.L.J. 181 (F.B.).

In view of the specific stand taken by the plaintiffs that their father, the mortgagee was never put into possession, it has to be determined on the evidence on record as to whether the plaintiffs were really in possession. The first proviso to S. 92 of the Evidence Act would cover the present case. The mortgagee was entitled to possess under the mortgage and he has not been put into such possession. S. 68(d) of the T.P. Act protects the interest of the usufructuary mortgagee when he does not get possession. The first proviso to S. 92 of the Evidence Act would apply to such a case and the plaintiffs would be entitled to show that they have not been put into possession though under the contract of mortgage, they were so entitled: A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 218: (1970) 1 Cut.W.R. 261.

Where a document is on the face of it, a registered mortgage deed, it is not open to any of the parties to plead or to lead oral or circumstantial evidence to show that the transaction was other than what it appears to be: A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 104.

Mortgage deed—Oral evidence to show that deed was in reality sale deed, not admissible: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 230: 1958 B.L.J.R. 738.

Where there is nothing showing that there had been an inadvertent misdescription of property in a mortgage deed and that the property which was intended to be mortgaged was something over and above what was actually described and specified in the document, the mortgagees are barred by the provisions of Ss. 92 and 94 from showing that the intention of the parties was different from what appears from the terms of the mortgage deed itself: I.L.R. (1938) All. 494: 1938 All.L.J. 477: A.I.R. 1938 All. 364.

An oral agreement to discharge a mortgage debt cannot be proved because of the provision of S. 92 of the Evidence Act: 1960 Nag.L.J.(Notes) 117.

Where a deed of possessory mortgage also provides for a lease back to the mortgagor on a monthly rent corresponding to the monthly interest on the mortgage debt, and a rent-note is executed giving effect to the lease, effect must be given to each deed according to its terms and the Court cannot by reading the two together spell out a transaction totally different in character. They being component parts of the same transaction, it does not mean that the two deeds were inconsistent with each other. Nor are the circumstances that rent was liable to be appropriated towards interest and rent tallied with each other and that interest like rent was payable every month, inconsistent with the transaction being a lease. Thus, in a suit for eviction by the mortgagee based on the rent-note which is executed as a sequel to the mortgage deed, it is not open to the mortgagor to plead that he is not in fact a tenant. It is no doubt true that where both parties give a particular form to a transaction different from its real nature with a view to cause loss to the third party, the Court may in an action in which that third party is concerned tear off the veil and take into account its real nature. But where in the ordinary bargain between competent persons transaction bearing particular legal form is deliberately entered into, it is not the function of the Court to ignore it and read it as something else merely because it suits one of the parties to it at a particular moment: 1964 M.P.L.J. 674: 1963 Jab.L.J. 174: A.I.R. 1963 Madh. Pra. 265.

Registered mortgage deed—Subsequent oral agreement varying terms of mortgage deed—Held that no unregistered agreement varying the terms of the mortgage could be recognised: 1964 Raj.L.W. 439: I.L.R. (1964) 14 Raj. 1096: A.I.R. 1965 Raj. 3.

Where a mortgage with possession provides that redemption would be effected on payment of the 'entire mortgage money' by the mortgagor, evidence of a subsequent oral agreement for delivery of possession on payment of a portion of the mortgage money is inadmissible. But this does not preclude the Courts from coming to a finding on the question of fact whether the mortgagor's possession of the property was unlawful or by consent of parties: I.L.R. 12 Luck. 567: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 1. See also 15 Mys.L.J. 237.

Registered mortgage deed—Contemporaneous written varthamanam providing for payments towards mortgage deed is admissible. The varthamanam is not compulsorily registrable under S. 17(b) of Registration Act: 27 Mad.L.W. 47: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 382.

Contract Act 1872, S. 63—Suit on mortgage—Defence that plaintiff has agreed to receive lesser amount than under mortgage, by oral agreement—Held, S. 63 was not applicable—Oral agreement was inadmissible in evidence, and therefore, plaintiff was not estopped from claiming whole amount under mortgage—Passing of receipt by plaintiff for part payment of amount agreed also did not estop him from claiming whole: (1966) 2 An.L.T. 198.

G executed usufructuary mortgage of his tenancy holding to R. R had applied under S. 112-A of Bihar Tenancy Act for reduction of rent on the holding as if he were the tenant and it had been allowed. The survey entries showed R as the vendee and G as the vendor of the holding. B purchaser of the equity of redemption from G's successors-in-interest sued for redemption which was refused by two Courts. On second appeal, it was held that the plain meaning of the language and the words used in the document showed it was a deed of usufructuary mortgage for Rs. 100. The evidence admitted as regards the subsequent conduct of the parties or of the intention of the parties are inadmissible under S. 92, Evidence Act. The usufructuary mortgage could not on such inadmissible evidence be held as an out and out sale: A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 431.

Where a registered mortgage deed itself provided escalation of the rate of interest by the mortgagee, held, enhancement of the rate of interest pursuant thereto by the mortgagor is assimilated in the original deed itself; no fresh registered deed for such enhancement need be executed: A.I.R. 1984 Andh. Pra. 36: (1983) 2 An.W.R. 456: (1983) 2 An.L.T. 393 (D.B.).

Mortgage deed—Interest agreed to be paid at one per cent, per month. Words 'per cent' omitted inadvertently—Admissibility of oral evidence—Evidence Act, S. 93, is not applicable as there is no latent ambiguity: 7 O.W.N. 14: A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 95.

Oral evidence to prove that mortgagee agree to charge lower rate of interest or receive less than that entered in the deed is inadmissible: 95 I.C. 1019: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 273. See also A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 233: 53 M.L.J. 863; 1942 A.M.L.J. 22; 52 M.L.J. 224: A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 1111.

Where in defence to the suit on a simple mortgage, the mortgagor pleaded that at the time of executing the deed the parties had agreed that the mortgagee's taking possession of the property would be in lieu of interest provided for in the deed, held, the plea was not available to the mortgagee; it was barred under S. 92: (1988-1) 101 Mad.L.W. 517.

Section bars proof of an oral agreement not to charge interest when one mortgage bond in terms provided for payment of interest: 1959 M.P.L.J. 301: A.I.R. 1959 Madh. Pra. 172.

6. Sale transactions.—Ordinarily, the title to immovable property transferred by sale passes on the registration of the sale deed. But the parties may agree that title shall not pass until the consideration is completely paid. In contracts of sale there are recitals of the receipt of the purchase money as well as terms providing for the passing of the property. The strictly contractual part, that is to say, the arrangement as to when the property shall pass, if the contract has been reduced to writing, to be determined solely from the words of the writing and evidence is not admissible for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from its terms as mentioned in S. 92. The question when the property is to pass is a matter of contract. If the terms of the contract as to when the property is to pass are ambiguous, then recourse may be had to external evidence to determine what the intention of the parties was, but if the intention of the parties has been stated in unambiguous terms, then the terms must remain the sole criterion of the intention of the parties, and evidence cannot be introduced for the purpose of showing that the contract means something other than what it expressed in unambiguous terms: I.L.R. 17 Pat. 318: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 505.

An express covenant for title or for freedom from incumbrances cannot be regarded as a mere recital which can be contradicted by oral evidence. Such a covenant is a term of the contract of sale itself and any oral evidence to contradict the same falls within the mischief of S. 92, Evidence Act. Even the statutory covenant for title must be deemed to be embodied in every sale deed in the absence of a contract to the contrary. When, therefore, the sale deed expressly recites that the seller has not created any incumbrance on the property, oral evidence cannot be admitted to show that the sale was in fact subject to an incumbrance: A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 205: (1945) 1 M.L.J. 323.

An agreement as to implied warranty regarding the correctness of the extent of the property sold should be established on the terms of the sale deed and it is not open to the plaintiff to travel outside the deed and to adduce evidence to prove that there was a warranty, de hors the instrument: I.L.R. (1957) Ker. 475: A.I.R. 1957 Ker. 181.

When a document purports to be an absolute sale, oral evidence of conduct of the parties to the transaction is not admissible in evidence for purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties in arriving at a finding as to the true nature of the transaction: I.L.R. (1955) Hyd. 440: A.I.R. 1955 Hyd. 179.

There are three types of cases of sale deeds, namely: firstly, where there is an independent clause to the effect that the title would pass independently of the passing of consideration; secondly, where there is a dependent clause that the passing of title would be solely dependent on the passing of consideration and thirdly, where there is an involved clause, where the terms regarding passing of title, passing of consideration and the vendee being made the owner in respect of the property sold are so intermingled that it is very difficult to make out from the recitals a definite position that in fact the parties intended that title would pass independent of the question of consideration. The question, under which category the clause in a sale deed falls, is a question of construction of the document which is a question of law. Where a sale deed falls in the last category, the Court has to decide on the question as to the passing of the title, by ascertaining the intention of the parties and for that purpose refer to the surrounding circumstances. Where any part of the consideration has not been paid to the vendor, and the property is not delivered to the vendee and the sale deed is in the custody of the vendor himself, it cannot be held that the title to the property has passed to the vendee, as these are telling circumstances to show that it was not the intention of the parties that title would pass irrespective of non-payment of consideration: I.L.R. (1964) Cut. 551: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 239.

Recitals in a sale deed as to the mode and time of paying consideration or legal necessity for sale are not terms of the contract; extraneous evidence to prove their modification or variation is admissible and not barred by S. 92: (1972) 2 Cut.W.R. 1298.

The question whether a document is a mortgage by conditional sale or a sale out and out with a condition of repurchase, prima facie, has to be determined with reference to the terms of the contract embodied in the document. If the recitals in the document are ambiguous from which the intention of the parties is not clearly deducible, then a reference may be made to the surrounding circumstances to find out the true intention of the parties: (1971) 1 Cut.W.R. 689.

It is not open to a party to a registered sale deed to prove an oral agreement by evidence either oral or documentary contemporaneous with the sale deed that in spite of a certain property, belonging to the vendor, being entered in the sale deed, title to it would not pass to the vendee: 118 I.C. 589: A.I.R. 1929 All. 578(2).

The onus is normally on the plaintiffs to prove their title and the plaintiffs can recover only on the strength of their own title and not by the weakness of that of the defendants. But where in a suit for possession, the plaintiff based his title on a registered sale deed executed in his favour and the defendant based his title on subsequent sale deed in his favour alleging that the previous sale deed in favour of the plaintiff was without consideration and that the same was subsequently cancelled by the vendor, it was held that the onus was on the defendant to prove the absence of consideration for the sale in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant having admitted the execution of the sale deed: A.I.R. 1961 Ori. 19.

A Court cannot go behind a deed of sale which embodies the terms and enforce a prior agreement. The negotiations which led to the sale cannot be taken into consideration and the parties are bound by the terms of the deed of sale. It is not open to a party to a document to prove by oral evidence a variation in the amount of consideration for the document, though it is open to him to prove want of consideration or failure or a difference in kind of consideration. [58 M.L.J. 240, Foll.]: 1950 Nag.L.J. 28.

Where a person enters into a contract for sale of an agricultural land to him for building purposes on the representation of the seller that the permission of the authorities for conversion of the land to building sites was expected to receive shortly, the representation cannot be regarded as a term of the contract and, therefore, oral evidence as to the representation cannot be excluded: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 252.

Once a party is proved to have executed a sale deed, held, no oral evidence is admissible to contradict it unless the case falls specifically under any proviso of S. 92: A.I.R. 1971 Madh. Pra. 172: 1971 M.P.L.J. 438: 1971 Jab.L.J. 545 (D.B.); (1981) 2 M.P.W.N. 67.

Ss. 91 and 92 completely bar a party to plead or prove that consideration paid for sale was more than what was mentioned in the conveyance or contract. [A.I.R. 1935 All. 529 (F.B.); A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 122; A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 147 and A.I.R. 1970 Mys. 270, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1992 Ker. 115: (1991) 2 Ker.L.J. 648: (1991) 2 Ker.L.T. 728.

In a suit for specific performance, the contract of sale must be definite and precise and if it is uncertain it must be held to be void under S. 29 of the Indian Contract Act. Specific performance is an equitable relief and the contract of which specific performance is sought must appear to be correct and precise and if it is uncertain no oral evidence is admissible to add to the terms or contents of the contract of sale: A.I.R. 1971 All. 494.

In deciding the intention of the parties as to the time of passing of title, the document under which the properties were intended to be sold, if unambiguous, remains the sole criterion. If the terms are indecisive and ambiguous, then only the Courts will take into consideration other extraneous circumstances: A.I.R. 1992 Ori. 170.

S. 92 does not bar the plea or proof what was ostensibly a sale deed was a non est factum and that the deed was intended by the parties to be only a mortgage deed; it is a common place defence in India: (1980) 2 An.W.R. (N.R.C.) 17.

A subsequent purchaser from a party who was the vendor in a prior sale deed of the very same property will be a representative-in-interest of the said vendor within the meaning of S. 92 of the Evidence Act and he would be precluded from contending that the first sale deed was only a mortgage and not a sale deed: A.I.R. 1960 Manipur 11.

Sale and agreement to reconvey not embodied in one and same—Seller, if precluded from showing that transaction was not an out and out sale but something between mortgage and sale: A.I.R. 1958 Madh. Pra. 295.

That a sale deed is only a mortgage: I.L.R. 34 Bom. 59: (1909) 11 Bom.L.R. 113; I.L.R. 35 Bom. 231; (1912-13) 17 Cal.W.N. 1053; 106 I.C. 18: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 459.

'Mortgage by condition sale' and 'sale with condition of repurchase'—Distinction—Test—Document purporting to be absolute sale with condition of repurchase in express and clear terms—Intention of parties to be determined from documents itself and not from surrounding circumstances—Inadequacy of price or payment of cost of stamp by executant cannot alter its nature: A.I.R. 1962 Pat. 53.

Where a deed was contended to be an outright sale and not a mortgage by conditional sale when it stipulated that property was sold and delivered on the condition that if the principal amount of consideration was not refunded to the vendee within 10 years, it would amount to a sale deed, held, it nowhere imposed on the vendors the obligation to recover the property on payment of the price but merely gave an option; no evidence of the parties' contemporaneous conduct having been adduced, their subsequent conduct in executing documents some fifty years thereafter showing contrary direction would be inadmissible; it was a sale deed. [A.I.R. 1960 S.C. 301, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1973 All. 234.

Where a registered agreement for sale of a property was resisted by the vendor on the ground that it was in fact executed by way of security for the loan advanced to him by the vendee, held, the Court below had rightly permitted him to adduce oral evidence of the real nature of the transaction pleaded by him. [A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 70; I.L.R. (1956) 1 Cal. 59; A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 48; A.I.R. 1967 Cal. 351, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1972 Cal. 207: (1971-72) 76 Cal.W.N. 116 (D.B.).

Where it was contended by the vendor that she had executed the agreement of sale only for the purpose of securing the loan as the vendee required her to do, held, it is not open to her to plead that the terms of the agreement, in view of its real purpose, be ignored; S. 92 is a complete bar to such plea: (1993-2) 112 Mad.L.W. 205 (D.B.).

Agreement of sale of business—Trifling consideration—Second document stipulating for payment of further sum as maintenance till death and thereafter to his wife till her demise at a fixed sum per mensem was admissible—Sale of business at under value can be a consideration for second document—Evidence to prove further consideration than the one stated in sale deed is admissible—Vendee under obligation to pay maintenance to widow till her death: (1961-62) 66 Cal.W.N. 8.

Where a document unambiguously appeared to be a sale deed but it was contended by the plaintiff that it was in fact intended by the parties to be a mortgage, held, S. 92 constitutes no bar to admission of oral evidence to prove that the transaction was intended to be something other than what it purported to be. [(1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 504, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1984 Ori. 62: (1984) 1 Ori.L.R. 135.

Where a valid contract of sale was duly registered and sought to be revoked by an unregistered contemporaneous deed which imposed a blanket ban on the vendee not to dissipate or alienate the land generation after generation, held, the unregistered document is hit by the bar of S. 92. [A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 22, Foll.]: 1989 Punj.L.J. 364 (Him. Pra.).

Sale deed registered—Recital that vendee should, as part consideration for the sale, discharge debts of the vendor—Oral evidence to show that the recital was false and the liability intended to remain with vendor is inadmissible: A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 148; A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 142. See also 1979 All.W.C. (Rev.) 86.

Transfer of Property by sale deed—Vendor alleging that he had never contracted to sell property—Oral evidence permissible to prove antecedent contract: 1961 M.P.L.J. (Notes) 127.

Sale of immovable property—Consideration not paid—Title, if passes—Evidence of intention of parties when sale deed is ambiguous. See A.I.R. 1957 Ori. 243. Passing of property in goods—Evidence of—Rules as to, see (1956) 2 M.L.J. 384: A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 695.

Where a registered sale deed of land was executed and immediately thereafter another agreement between the parties in violation of S. 10 of the Transfer of Property Act and S. 23 of the Contract Act whereby the vendee and his heirs were prohibited to alienate or fitter away the land so purchased, held, once a sale is completed, it clothes the vendee with beneficial ownership; the right to alienate the property is incidental to, and inseparable from, such ownership; an absolute restraint on such right is repugnant to the concept of sale; and subsequent agreement is inadmissible: A.I.R. 1989 Him. Pra. 11: (1988) 2 Sim.L.C. 126.

Whether a vendor can deny the fact of giving possession to the vendee in view of clear terms in that respect in the sale deed. See 1978 Jab.L.J. (Notes) 87.

Sale of land with superstructures under registered document—Vendee under contemporaneous unregistered agreement agreeing to pay compensation in case he failed to build hospital on land sold—Agreement cannot be enforced—Agreement not admissible in evidence. See A.I.R. 1957 Assam 68.

Sale of property in Punjab—Stipulation in sale deed that balance of consideration would be paid 'as soon as possible but at a time when vendee would be in position to make payment'—Construction—Stipulation whether a contingent contract—Evidence of intention of parties: I.L.R. (1964) 1 Punj. 143: A.I.R. 1964 Punj. 123.

Where under a sale deed scribed and executed the same day, the consideration of

Rs. 5,150 was to be paid but the vendee contended that he had already paid Rs. 4,950 to the vendor and only Rs. 200 remained payable which he could not pay for want of funds, held, it clearly amounted to varying or contradicting a term of the deed, the two versions in the deed and oral evidence are mutually exclusive and cannot stand together; the oral evidence was inadmissible: (1993-1) 41 B.L.J.R. 215.

7. Promissory note.—In a suit based on a promissory note, held, the defendant cannot raise any plea or adduce oral evidence which has the effect of varying the terms of the contract; however, it is permissible for him to plead and prove complete discharge of the note: A.I.R. 1973 Mad. 479: (1973) 2 M.L.J. 108: (1973) 86 Mad.L.W. 497.

In a suit on a promissory note executed in respect of the amount due under a prior promissory note plus the amount of costs incurred in a suit on the prior promissory note, the defendant is entitled to adduce evidence to prove that he had paid some amount towards the prior note and to that extent his liability under the renewed note should be proportionately reduced. S. 92 is not a bar to the consideration of this question: (1927) 40 Mad.L.W. 706: 67 M.L.J. 650. Cash loan can be proved to be rent due: I.L.R. 5 Rang. 822.

One of the co-executants of a promissory note cannot be allowed to let in evidence that he signed the note only as a surety: (1933) 35 Bom.L.R. 1197: A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 39; A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 965; 92 I.C. 667: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 156; A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 643; 1939 A.M.L.J. 84, a plea of benami: A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 139 (Plea of agency). See 95 I.C. 512: A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 94.

Oral evidence to prove that a pronote was executed only as security is admissible: 107 I.C. 510. See also I.L.R. 49 All. 464: 25 All.L.J. 305; A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 463; A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 62: 28 Nag.L.R. 325.

The making of a pronote by way of security for a sum of money advanced or given to the maker does not shut out oral evidence as to the purpose for which the money is given: 13 Bur.L.T. 239: 64 I.C. 33.

In a suit on pronote, oral evidence to prove that money had been borrowed by both the defendants and that defendant having 'witness' before his signature, was one of the excutants and not a witness, is admissible: A.I.R. 1930 All. 709.

Oral evidence as to representation of intention to deliver goods not embodied in pronote. See 13 I.C. 386: 4 Bur.L.T. 99.

Evidence to prove that some executants of the promissory note signed in the capacity of surety only is inadmissible under S. 92. Even where the contention is that one of the debtors signed as surety to the knowledge of the promisee, evidence to prove it is not admissible and it cannot affect the right of the promisee: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 82. See also I.L.R. 18 Luck. 81: A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 273.

Demand pronote—Suit on—Collateral agreement to receive usufruct of certain plots in repayment put in defence—Oral evidence in respect of such collateral agreement to prove the discharge of liability was admissible: A.I.R. 1960 All. 746.

8. Gift deed.—Ordinarily in construing a deed of gift what the Courts have least to see is the intention of the donor as evidenced by the deed or the surrounding circumstances at the time of the deed and no amount of dealing by the donee should convert a limited into an absolute grant. But there can be no doubt that subsequent dealings by the donee with the consent or acquiescence of the other members of the tarwad may constitute good evidence as against the tarwad on grounds of estoppel: 1956 Ker.L.T. 803: A.I.R. 1957 Trav.-Co. 77.

Where the plea was that the gift in question had not been acted upon at all, held, in such a case oral evidence could certainly be led and looked into to establish whether the gift had in fact been acted upon or not, which is one of the essential ingredients of a valid gift: A.I.R. 1991 Ori. 151.

Where a gift of the remainder which was invalid under the Mahomedan Law was sought to be validated by evidence as to the consent of the donee of the life estate to such an arrangement, such oral evidence is clearly inadmissible: 108 I.C. 637: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 613.

Where in the deed of gift itself it is stated that the property is transferred to the donee in consideration of her obedience and submission to the donor, then any extraneous evidence to prove that the gift made to her is not only in lieu of obedience and submission but also in lieu of her accepting two liabilities, namely, that of paying off all the debts to the creditors of the donor and of maintaining him till his lifetime, is bound to result, firstly, in adding to the term of consideration and, secondly, in contradicting it. Hence, such extraneous evidence to prove that the deed of gift is not what it purports to be cannot be admitted in evidence as is laid in S. 92, Evidence Act: I.L.R. 34 Pat. 440: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 458.

Gift—Oral evidence—Admissibility—Gift in favour of member of H.U.F.—Proof. See 1981 All.L.J. 1182.

9. Will.—Two wills executed on two dates—Later will raising ambiguity on face of it as to whether it was in substitution for or in addition to earlier will—External evidence can be admitted to ascertain testator's intentions: I.L.R. (1964) 1 Ker. 532: A.I.R. 1965 Ker. 122.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement whereby the defendant agrees to purchase from the plaintiffs their reversionary shares of certain trust funds, each of such funds being a will fund and a settlement fund, the Court cannot properly admit extrinsic evidence to remove a latent ambiguity in the will regarding the title of the plaintiffs to the reversionary shares: (1958) 1 W.L.R. 422.

10. Adoption deed.—Where a party admits the existence of a deed of adoption and of its non-production in the Court, the admission would not render oral evidence inadmissible because it is not by virtue of deed of adoption that a change of status of a person can be effected. Such a deed cannot be likened to a document which by sheer force brings a transaction into existence. It is no more than a piece of evidence and the failure of a party to produce such a document in a suit does not render oral evidence in proof of adoption inadmissible: 1966 B.L.J.R. 781: (1966) 2 S.C.W.R. 184: (1967) 11 Law Rep. 195: 1966 S.C.R. (Supp.) 280: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 109.

11. Proviso (1)—General.—See on this proviso: I.L.R. 59 Cal. 1111: A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 708; 139 I.C. 221; (1932) 34 Bom.L.R. 971; 140 I.C. 104: A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 332; I.L.R. 56 Bom. 180: A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 161; (1930-31) 35 Cal.W.N. 279: A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 25. The statement of law in Amir Ali's Evidence that though evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, yet evidence that there is not an agreement at all is admissible, is too wide and must be qualified by the express provisos (1) to (3), S. 92: I.L.R. 49 All. 680: A.I.R. 1927 All. 422.

Proviso (1) has no application in a case where the instrument represents what the parties intended to put down in writing, though it might not be in accordance with what they intended to do and with the legal effect that they secretly wanted to bring about, but which, for some reason, they did not want to put in writing. Where a person transfers certain property by a deed of gift, it is not open to him to say that when he gave the property he did not do it. The donor is not himself entitled to have the deed set aside on the ground that his intention was that it should operate on his death especially so when there is no evidence that the donor, giving away practically the whole of his property wanted to retain any sort of control after the date of gift: 171 I.C. 702: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 142. See also A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 311.

Where in a printed form of a promissory note after mentioning, the interest payable there is an omission to state that it is—per cent, oral evidence can be let in to show what was the agreement between the parties and it is a case to which proviso (1) applies: 1939 All.L.J. 196: A.I.R. 1939 All. 308.

The wording of the proviso (1) and especially the use of the words 'such as' clearly show that the illustrations are not meant to be exhaustive: 1939 Nag.L.J. 33: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 20.

The section does not exclude oral evidence to prove that the transaction evidenced by a written instrument is fictitious or benami. It is only in case the contract, grant, etc., are admitted or proved and their real nature is not challenged that the section would bar oral evidence to contradict or vary its terms: 1958 Raj.L.W. 231: A.I.R. 1958 Raj. 280.

Provisos (1) to (3)—Applicability—Execution of sale deed—Oral agreement set up in defence that if sale deed was not presented for registration on the same day on which it was written and if consideration was not paid before Sub-Registrar, sale deed should be regarded as cancelled, null and void—Agreement held did not fall under any of the provisos to S. 92 and could not be allowed to be proved: A.I.R. 1962 Mys. 203.

See also A.I.R. 1982 S.C. 20, cited under Note 1, supra.

Admissibility of oral evidence to validate document—Such evidence is admissible to show that document was never intended to operate according to its terms: I.L.R. (1966) Cut. 236.

A usufruct mortgagee not put into possession is protected under S. 68(d) of the Transfer of Property Act; a plea of never being put into possession of the mortgage property is permissible to him under S. 92, proviso (1): A.I.R. 1971 Ori. 218: (1970) 1 Cut.W.R. 261.

Where a plaint makes no claim for rectification regarding the rate of interest contained in the mortgage instrument, the proviso (1) does not empower a plaintiff suing on an unambiguous, unreformed and registered deed, to lead evidence to show that by a mistake a term has been omitted from the deed: I.L.R. 54 Mad. 973: A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 785: 61 M.L.J. 437.

Where under a kabuliyat two halls of land were settled with a tenant at a certain rate, a separate oral agreement that one of the halls would be given rent free is not admissible in evidence although evidence that the kabuliyat was not intended to be acted upon at all would be admissible under proviso (1): I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 48: A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 356.

Under proviso (1), it is open to a Life Insurance Company to prove facts which show that the contract of insurance was illegal. The company is, therefore, entitled to prove facts showing that the insurance was really effected by the assignee of the policy for his own use and benefit and not for the use and benefit of the assured: (1940) 42 Punj.L.R. 801: A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 33.

Certain persons including defendants 1 and 2 entered into a partnership for carrying on the business of cloth. The licence required under the Cloth Control Order was obtained by defendant 1. It was the case of defendant 2 that he was only a benamidar for defendant 1. On the question whether oral evidence could be given in support of this case which would have the effect of varying the terms of the deed of partnership. Held, that proviso (1) of S. 92 was not applicable to the case as the mere fact that the 2nd defendant had no licence in his own name for dealing in cloth did not render the partnership agreement void or unlawful and did not incapacitate him from entering into an agreement of partnership with others who did hold a licence for carrying on business in cloth in their own names. Held, further that proviso (6) was also not applicable as there was no ambiguity in the language of the partnership deed which required to be explained: A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 165.

12. Proviso (1)—Fraud.—The word 'fraud' used in the proviso is wide enough to include a fraud on the registration law: Thus a party can show that an item was fictitiously put in: 1930 All.L.J. 926: A.I.R. 1930 All. 786.

In order to invoke the aid of proviso (1) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act, a mere averment of fraud without any particulars would be of no avail. In order to plead fraud effectively the particulars of fraud must be given by the party, and in the absence of such particulars there cannot be any proper averment of fraud. The fraud which is alleged must be such as enters into the transaction itself and enables the party to avoid the transaction, i.e., fraud within the meaning of S. 17(3) of the Contract Act. No evidence of a contemporaneous agreement or promise or representation inconsistent with the written document could be admitted. S. 92, is a bar to the admissibility of such evidence. The fraud which is contemplated by proviso (1) of S. 92 is at the very inception a fraud which vitiates the transaction itself, and not any subsequent conduct or representation on the part of a party or his representative-in-interest which, however, reprehensible it may be, is not enough to vitiate the transaction. Evidence of such conduct or representation cannot be led under the proviso: (1952) 54 Bom.L.R. 492: A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 425.

Where there was an expressly alleged fraud such as that the promisee induced the surety to sign as executant or that he promised not to sue him except as such, then proviso (1) to S. 92 would come into operation: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 82: 168 I.C. 477.

Where in a suit on mortgage bonds which stipulated for payment of compound interest, the defendant alleged that at the time of the execution of the bonds, he was persuaded to sign them only on the plaintiff's promising not to enforce that stipulation, held, that such evidence would be admissible under the first proviso to show that the signature to the document was obtained by fraud at the inception: I.L.R. 61 Cal. 344: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 564.

Where the partition deed was not challenged by a specific plea of fraud that its recitals are not correct or allocations of shares therein were not commensurate with their real shares, held, the deed cannot be permitted to be challenged by adducing oral evidence which is barred by S. 91 and S. 92: A.I.R. 1991 Pat. 145.

S. 92 does not prevent proof of a fraudulent dealing with a third person's property or proof of notice that the property purporting to be absolutely conveyed in fact belonged to a third person who was not a party to the conveyance: I.L.R. 6 Rang. 741: A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 86.

13. Proviso (1)—Want or failure of consideration.—Proviso (1) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act would not permit a party to a contract to let in oral evidence to show that besides the actual consideration recited in the document evidencing the transaction and forming the basis of the contract, there was some other consideration agreed to between the parties. Proviso (1) only says that any fact be proved which would invalidate the document which, inter alia would show want or failure of consideration, or a difference in kind of the consideration specified in the document; it would not be competent for a party to prove a variation of the consideration recited. The consideration specified in a document is a term of the contract evidenced by it; and a party cannot be allowed under S. 92, to show that the consideration was either less or more than what is specified. The want or failure of consideration referred to in the proviso must be such as to invalidate the document. There should be a total lack of consideration recited in it, before the terms of the document in that regard are contradicted. To say that the consideration recited in the written contract is but a part of a larger consideration which is not specified in it would amount to nothing less than contradicting the very term as to consideration for the contract and it cannot be allowed. When the document is not silent in regard to the consideration and specifically recites the same proviso (2), also cannot be availed of to show that in addition to the consideration recited there was other consideration on which it is silent: I.L.R. (1964) 2 Mad. 841: (1965) 1 M.L.J. 371: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 622: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 147. See also (1990) 2 Ker.L.T. 446: I.L.R. (1990) 2 Ker. 302.

Under the terms of the proviso (1) of S. 92 of Evidence Act, while it will be competent to the party to a contract to adduce evidence to prove want of consideration or failure of consideration or a difference in kind of consideration specified in the document, it will not be competent for him to prove a variation of the consideration recited in the document. Consideration specified in a document will be one of the terms of the contract evidenced by it. Thus, where consideration although specified to be of a particular kind, e.g., cash, it can and will be shown to be for different kind or that it is false and that there was really no consideration. But this is different from a case where a party admits the passing of consideration specified in the document, but attempts to show that the consideration was either less or more than what is specified. This the party is not allowed to do.

According to S. 92 of the Evidence Act, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement can be admitted as between the parties thereto, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the term of consideration. This will indeed be clear if one closely examines the terms of proviso (1) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act. Want or failure of consideration must be such as to invalidate the document. That would mean that there should be total lack of consideration, before the terms of the document in that regard are contradicted. Therefore, to say that the consideration recited in the document is but a part of a larger consideration which is not specified in it, it will amount to nothing less than contradicting the very terms as to consideration for the document: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 622: I.L.R. (1964) 2 Mad. 841: (1965) 1 M.L.J. 371: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 147.

Though a document says there was consideration and states exactly what it was, a party may show that there was none or that it has failed. In the same way there is no reason why the other party should not be allowed to show that the consideration was paid in full, not in cash but in kind: 1939 Nag.L.J. 33: A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 20; (1938) 1 M.L.J. 236.

Under proviso (1) evidence may be adduced to prove want or failure of consideration. This is, however, totally distinct from the amount of consideration. A statement in a document that a consideration has been paid is really a recital in a deed and does not constitute one of the terms of the contract. But the amount of consideration is obviously a term of the sale deed and, therefore, it is not open to a party to prove a variation in the amount of consideration: A.I.R. 1968 Pat. 61.

Plea of want of consideration may be proved in a suit on promissory note: 108 I.C. 158; A.I.R. 1934 All. 496: 148 I.C. 1124; (1980) 2 Karn.L.J. 409.

It is not open to a party to a document to prove by oral evidence, a variation in the amount of consideration of the document though it is open to him to prove want of consideration or failure of consideration or a difference in kind of consideration. A vendor cannot adduce oral evidence to prove that the consideration for the sale was that stated in the sale deed plus an undertaking by the vendee to discharge an existing mortgage on the property: A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 659: 58 M.L.J. 240. See also 189 I.C. 423: A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 379; A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 320: (1938) 1 M.L.J. 236.

There is no bar created in S. 92, against contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from the recital of any fact stated in a document. Therefore, where in the documents executed in connection with the contract for sale of house in dispute in favour of the plaintiff, there was a recital with regard to the payment of earnest money by the plaintiff to the executant, it is open to the defendants, successors-in-interest of the executant, in a suit for specific performance, to show that the payment of earnest money was never made, and in order to explain how and why that amount was not paid, to plead a collateral oral agreement to the effect that the amount was to be paid by the plaintiff not in cash to the executant but to the mortgagee of the property and in fact no such payment was ever made by the plaintiff either to the executant or to the mortgagee. As the statement made in the contract for sale regarding the payment of consideration is a recital of fact, in law the bar as placed under S. 92 of the Evidence Act will not hit the defendants in proving either the collateral agreement as referred to above or the fact, that the consideration (earnest money) was, in fact, not paid to the executant of the contract for sale, or the mortgagee. Similar is the position in law with regard to the factum of payment of the amount under a receipt acknowledging payment of the amount as earnest money by the plaintiff to the executant of the contract as is evident from Illus. (i): 1964 B.L.J.R. 147.

S. 91 or S. 92 of the Evidence Act does not bar evidence to show that a certain receipt was a fictitious document in the sense that no money was paid: A.I.R. 1934 All. 1068: 153 I.C. 611.

Oral Evidence may be admitted that consideration did not pass: I.L.R. 45 All. 679: A.I.R. 1924 All. 70; I.L.R. 44 All. 53: A.I.R. 1922 All. 165. See also 94 I.C. 371: A.I.R. 1926 Sind 202; 92 I.C. 787: A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 301.

The prohibition in S. 92 is only as regards evidence sought to be adduced for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of a contract. So long as the passing of consideration is not a term of the contract, evidence adduced to show that it did pass, even though the contract does not recite it, is not within the scope of the prohibition in S. 92. Where a letter evidences the terms of a contract under which possession of land is supported on the basis of part performance, if the contract does not recite the consideration for the transfer there is no prohibition to proof aliunde of consideration: A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 452: (1946) 1 M.L.J. 346.

S. 92 applies even to those cases where terms of any contract though are not required to be in writing have been so recorded. The expression "required by law to be reduced to the form of a document" are not governed by the words 'any contract', in S. 92. Where a document recited payment of Rs. 7,000, it is not open to the executant thereof having admitted execution to contend that there was a partial failure of consideration. That is prohibited by S. 92. Of course the defendants could prove total failure of consideration, because such total failure invalidates the document in view of S. 25 of the Indian Contract Act. [8 B.L.R. 287 (295), Rel. on]: 1983 Mah.L.J. 462.

In ascertaining the intention of the parties to a document, no evidence other than the deed itself will be admissible to prove the intention except when there is a latent ambiguity. But evidence is admissible for the purpose of contradicting a recital in deed, e.g., as to the payment of consideration: I.L.R. 27 Pat. 122: A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 364.

S. 92 does not preclude a party from showing that a recital as to the nature of the consideration for the contract embodied in the deed is incorrect; consideration for the deed is not a term of the contract: 53 Mys.H.C.R. 1.

S. 92 does not prevent the vendor from adducing evidences to show that the recital in the deed about consideration having been paid is incorrect and, in fact, it was not paid to him: A.I.R. 1989 Pat. 327: 1989 Pat.L.J.R. (H.C.) 772: (1990-1) 38 B.L.J.R. 210.

The want or failure of consideration, a condition precedent for the transfer, held, can be proved, despite recitals to the contrary, by independent evidence; contents of the document of disposition in this respect are not conclusive: A.I.R. 1985 Pat. 94: 1985 B.L.J.R. 736: 1984 Pat.L.J.R. 659.

An obligor is not tied up from pleading any matter which shows that the bond was given upon an illegal consideration, whether consistent or not with the condition of the bond. The validity of a document may be challenged on the ground of the illegality of the transaction: I.L.R. 19 Pat. 424: A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 573.

Sale deed—Recital of payment of full consideration—Evidence to show that consideration has not actually been paid—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 263.

Even if the sale deed recites that consideration had been paid, held, nothing prevents the parties from adducing evidence to establish that the recital is untrue and no consideration had in fact passed; S. 92 is not attracted: A.I.R. 1978 Pat. 97: 1978 Pat.L.J.R. 255 (D.B.).

Where an agreement of sale purportedly fixed Rs. 30,000 as consideration but the Court on oral evidence found that the consideration agreed to between the parties was Rs. 50,000 but the lesser amount was mentioned on the insistence of a co-vendor, held, consideration was not a 'term' of the deed; non-payment or different payment of consideration than the one mentioned in the deed stand on the same footing; S. 92 does not bar oral proof of the same: A.I.R. 1983 J.&K. 44: 1982 Srinagar L.J. 546 (D.B.).

Where the real consideration as asserted by the parties was Rs. 15,000 and not Rs. 4,500 as set out in the document, held, it is merely a recital and not a term of the sale deed; S. 92 is not attracted: (1974) 87 Mad.L.W. 412.

14. Proviso (1)—Mistake in fact or law.—It is not every mistake in a written document which would invalidate it; that would depend on the parties' animus contractandi, their real intention; if the contract is challenged for mistake common to all parties, the remedy is rectification as their minds were one and due to mistake creeping in while it was being reduced to writing, the document failed to embody the contract actually entered into; what the Court has to do is not to rectify the contract but to put it in the form the parties really intended it to be in. But if the mistake is unilateral, held, there would in fact be no contract as the parties' minds had not met: A.I.R. 1972 Mys. 184.

The mistake contemplated by proviso (1) to S. 92 are genuine and accidental mistakes, just as a misdescription of the property: 184 I.C. 585: A.I.R. 1930 Pesh. 41.

The mistake contemplated by proviso (1) to S. 92 is not confined to unilateral mistake. It refers to unilateral as well as a mutual mistake. Under proviso (1) to S. 92, oral evidence can be led to show that due to a mistake common to all the parties, the written document does not correctly express the agreement, which the parties had really entered into. This is permitted in order to enable the Court to give effect to the agreement between the parties and not the mistaken expression of it: I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 930: A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 463.

Under proviso (1) to S. 92, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the expression of the contract is contrary to the concurrent intention of all parties due to a common mistake: I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 948: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 90.

There is nothing in proviso (1) to suggest that the facts which may be proved under that proviso can only be proved in support of a claim to which those facts give rise, and such facts may be pleaded by way of defence only. The validity of every contract depends on the presence of animus contractandi, the intention to contract. When a written contract is challenged on the ground of mistake common to all parties, the remedy is rectification on the ground that the written statement does not give effect to the agreement which the parties actually entered into. All that the Court has to do in such case is to rectify, not the contract, but the document embodying it, and put that document into such a form as to carry out the contract which the parties really entered into. When there is unilateral mistake, the position is different because in that case there is, in fact, no contract. The minds of the parties were not at one; one intended one thing, and the other intended something else, and if any relief can be granted, it must be rescission: I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 149: A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 151.

It is ordinarily true that it is the document alone which is evidence of the terms settled between the parties and no extraneous evidence can be considered to construe the words of the bond or to contradict those words. But where the defendant executed a money bond under a mistake of fact that he was doing so not agreeing to any term to the effect that in the event of failure of an instalment the remaining sum shall become due at once and in 'lump sum' but the words used in the bond were in themselves susceptible to such an interpretation, the case falls under S. 92, proviso (1) and the evidence is, admissible to prove the true state of facts: A.I.R. 1955 Pepsu 122.

Where by mistake of parties, the duration of a lease was wrongly entered in the written instrument, evidence can be let in to prove the real intention of the parties: L.R. 4 A. 302 (Rev.). See also A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 259.

Evidence to prove that a surety bond was executed under a mistake is admissible: A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 262.

Mistaken expression of agreement—Power of Court to rectify sale deed. See A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 328: I.L.R. (1954) Nag. 634: 1954 Nag.L.J. 673.

Under proviso (1), oral evidence is admissible to prove that the khasra numbers of the land sold were wrongly entered in the sale deed particularly when both the vendor and the vendee admit that a mutual mistake of fact had crept into the sale deed: (1940) 42 Punj.L.R. 222: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 236.

Where the property sold under a sale deed was mis-described and a stranger, aware of the mistake, purchased it with the intention to take advantage thereof, held, oral evidence was admissible under proviso (1) to S. 92 to prove what precisely was the property which all the parties thereto concurrently intended to sell under the deed. [A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 10, Rel. on]: A.I.R. 1978 Madh. Pra. 189: 1978 Jab.L.J. 299: 1978 M.P.L.J. 527.

Mistake—Palpable error—Equity, if sanctions admission of evidence to expose error. See A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 259.

15. Proviso (2).—Where the document in question appears on the face of it, to be a document of an informal nature, not giving the complete terms of the compromise, it is open to the party to prove the other terms, left out from that document under proviso (2) to S. 92 which saves collateral agreements: A.I.R. 1959 Tripura 40.

It is well settled that if a document does not contain the parties' entire agreement but embodies only some of the conditions, oral evidence of the conditions agreed to but not included in the document are clearly admissible provided such conditions are not inconsistent with the conditions already contained in the document itself: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 13.

A separate oral agreement on a distinct and collateral matter, although a part of the same transaction would come within proviso (2), if the original instrument is silent on the point which is the subject-matter of the agreement: I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 752: (1936-37) 41 Cal.W.N. 1053: A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 619.

A separate collateral parole contract on a point about which the written principal contract is silent, is viewed with suspicion by Courts of law; it must be proved strictly. Not only the terms of such a contract but the existence of an animus contractandi of all the parties to it must be clearly established. The omission of any reference to the subject-matter of the parole contract by itself is no ground for holding that there was no such collateral contract: I.L.R. (1948) 2 Cal. 11.

Oral evidence is permitted by the second proviso as to 'any matter' on which the document is silent and secondly, any separate oral agreement as to such matter should not be inconsistent with 'the terms' of the document. Hence, if consideration is to be regarded as one of the terms of the transaction, no oral evidence under the second proviso can be permitted of a matter which would be to any extent inconsistent with the said term of the document. If a document actually states or sets out the consideration for the contract or for the transaction, it is not permissible by oral evidence to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from the same. It is of course permissible to prove either that no consideration as set out in the document had been received or that a portion thereof alone had been received or that satisfaction has been received in respect of consideration in a manner otherwise than set out in the document. But those are matters which come more appropriately under the first proviso because that proviso permits proof of any fact which invalidates a document for example, absence of passing of consideration as set out in the document or as amounting to want or failure of consideration which is expressly stated in the proviso: (1970) 1 Mys.L.J. 489: A.I.R. 1970 Mys. 270.

'The degrees of formalities of a document' contemplated in proviso (2) does not mean that every document separately executed and stamped is to be deemed a formal document; it depends on facts and circumstances of each case; it is only when it can be reasonably believed that the document incorporated the agreed terms and conditions in entirety that oral evidence of contrary terms is shut out; thus, where the document contained a mere acknowledgment of a debt, even if stamped, would not shut out the oral evidence as to the condition of payment of interest on the debt: A.I.R. 1978 All. 314.

It is well settled that a formal document is presumed to incorporate the entire agreement between the parties and that is why its oral evidence is prohibited; but if it is an informal document like a hathchitha, the bar of S. 92 is not attracted. [A.I.R. 1917 Cal. 210 and (1882) 9 Cal.L.R. 301, Foll.; A.I.R. 1916 Pat. 406(1) and A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 402, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1975 Pat. 312 (D.B.).

Subsequent oral agreement seeking to lay down the means by which the original contract was to be implemented or the means of satisfaction of the contract which is a mortgage-debt—To that extent it not merely does not contradict, vary, add to or subtract from the original mortgage but really seeks to fulfil the terms of the mortgage, and consequently, it is not hit by provisions of S. 92 but is fully covered by proviso (2) thereof: (1972) 1 Cut.W.R. 355: (1972) 38 Cut.L.T. 450.

Where there is no mention of any kind of interest in a registered mortgage deed, it is open to the parties to agree aliunde that the interest to be charged on accounting is to be compound interest. That would not be a variation of the original mortgage bond but would be an independent agreement and as such provable under the Evidence Act. The mortgage is not prevented by anything in that Act from showing that the interest is compound and he is entitled to plead an oral agreement and to prove that the interest agreed upon between the parties is really compound: I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 858: A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 25.

An oral contract for sale which is inconsistent with a deed of mortgage by conditional sale is inadmissible in evidence under S. 92. Proviso (2) to that section is inapplicable as it refers to a separate oral agreement not inconsistent with the terms of the written agreement. Proviso (3) is equally inapplicable if the alleged oral agreement for sale does not constitute a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under the mortgage by conditional sale: A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 453.

Where a sir land had been mortgaged by the proprietor who afterwards sold the equity of redemption, he cannot be allowed to give oral evidence of a separate agreement to give up exproprietary rights: 14 L.R. 425 (Rev.): 17 R.D. 500. Oral evidence is admissible to prove a collateral agreement regarding lessee's right of pre-emption: 138 I.C. 774: A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 231: 63 M.L.J. 408 (P.C.). See also A.I.R. 1939 All. 248: 1939 All.L.J. 46.

A subsequent oral agreement, under which the mortgagor puts the mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property and authorises him to enjoy the usufruct for a certain terms of years in satisfaction of his dues under the mortgage, instead of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from the terms of the original mortgage merely seeks to lay down the means by which the original contract was to be implemented or the means of satisfaction of the mortgage debt. To that extent it not merely does not contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from the original mortgage but it really seeks to fulfil the terms of the mortgage. To that extent, therefore, it is not hit by the provisions of S. 92 and is fully covered by proviso (2): (1955-56) 60 Cal.W.N. 903: A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 625.

Where a deed of transfer is silent on the point of consideration, then parole evidence may be allowed to be given in order to show by surrounding circumstances that the transfer was for consideration: I.L.R. 34 Pat. 440: A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 458.

Where an agreement for sale of a Hindu joint family property entered into by a member of the family was reduced into writing without any condition whereby the executant undertook to persuade his brothers or his brothers undertaking to join in execution of the sale deed, held, oral evidence to prove such a condition is inadmissible and barred by S. 92, proviso (2): A.I.R. 1979 All. 65.

The parties to a conveyance are not in view of the second proviso, prevented from proving the existence of a separate oral agreement to the effect that the vendee would proceed no further in the prosecution of his claim for certain money debts not specified in the deed of conveyance and the vendor cannot be prevented from attempting to prove that there was such an agreement: I.L.R. 18 Pat. 31: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 411.

A contract between the defendant who was an agent and secretary of a tea estate in charge of it and the plaintiff who was a dealer in tea provided inter alia, for the sale of the entire output of a specified variety of dust produced in the estate for 12 months subject to certain reservations made in favour of the defendant. There was no assurance or stipulation as to any minimum or specified quantity to be supplied. The defendant was also given a discretion to make any portion of the tea produced into leaf grade, and such tea could be supplied by the defendant to others. The defendant could also supply a definite quantity of tea to persons outside the State in which the contract was made. The contract was preceded by a personal conversation, and the written contract purported to be a record of all the terms and conditions agreed upon between the parties as a result of that conversation. The plaintiff in suit for damages for breach of contract and short delivery wanted to adduce oral evidence to the effect that an assurance was given to him that he would be supplied with at least 20,000 pounds of dust every month, though the extent of tea produced which can be turned over into leaf grades was not fixed and was left over entirely to the discretion of the defendant. But no such oral agreement was set up in the plaint; it also appeared that if a minimum quantity of 20,000 pounds were supplied to the plaintiff every month, nothing would be left from out of the total produce for the defendant to turn over any part into leaf grade. Held, (1) that the alleged oral agreement would be consistent with the express liberty given to the defendant under the contract to turn over part of the produce into leaf grades, and would also be destructive of the express terms thereof, and therefore, could not be proved. Held, further that when the written record purported to reduce to writing all the terms of the contract between the parties and did not reserve any part of the earlier contract uncovered by the document, oral evidence would not be admissible. The Court could only look at the writing and the terms of the contract; it could not be ascertained by allowing parole evidence as to what transpired antecedent to the contract or what the parties did subsequent to the contract: 1952 Ker.L.T. 45: A.I.R. 1952 Trav.-Co. 117 (F.B.).

In a suit for specific performance of a contract to resell certain property sold, the letter containing the agreement to resell was objected to as being inadmissible in evidence as it was not registered and that the agreement being part of the terms of the original sale it could not be proved by any other way except by another registered instrument. Held, the transaction, as a whole, was in reality a combination of two agreements—One to be performed by the seller by the execution of the sale deed and the other to be performed by the purchaser by the execution of another sale deed. The two parts of such a transaction may or may not be embodied in one document. The sale may be by a registered instrument but the terms of the contract to be performed by the purchaser may or may not be in writing and may or may not be registered. It is doubtful if to such a composite transaction, consisting of grant or disposition of property and a collateral agreement, S. 92 in terms applies. But assuming it does, proviso (2) to that section clearly enables the proof of the agreement of re-sale as this would be a separate oral agreement as to a matter on which the document is silent and which is not inconsistent with its terms. Further, an agreement of re-sale does not require registration, as it does not create an interest in or over any immovable property: I.L.R. (1950) All. 32.

Where a sale of land is in truth a mortgage, the vendor cannot claim specific performance of an oral agreement to reconvey, for in that case the oral agreement would obviously contradict the terms of the deed and evidence of such agreement cannot be let in. But where there is an outright sale on oral agreement that upon the happening of a certain event it was to be followed by a reconveyance of what has been sold, the oral agreement cannot be held to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from the terms of the sale deed. To add a stipulation which is quite unconnected with the terms of sale is not an addition of the kind struck at by S. 92. Accordingly, oral evidence is admissible to prove such agreement though it may be contemporaneous with the original sale: 75 I.A. 252: I.L.R. (1949) Mad. 487: A.I.R. 1949 P.C. 32: (1949) 1 M.L.J. 97 (P.C.).

Where the document is not silent in regard to the consideration, but recites the particular consideration which induced the party to execute the document, it will not be competent for the party to show that in addition to the consideration recited in the document there was some other inducement therefor, but on which the document is silent. To permit that will plainly be against the specific terms of S. 92 of the Evidence Act: (1964) 77 Mad.L.W. 622: I.L.R. (1964) 2 Mad. 841: (1965) 1 M.L.J. 371: A.I.R. 1965 Mad. 147.

Where the defence plea was that though the sale deeds and the handnote in respect of the truck was executed, there was a separate oral agreement between the parties that the defendant's name would be mutated in place of the plaintiff in the financer's records and Motor Vehicles Registration Office after compliance of the requisite formalities, held, such oral evidence was admissible under proviso (3); the oral agreement, not being inconsistent with the terms of the written agreement, is admissible under proviso (2) as well: A.I.R. 1971 Pat. 156.

Where a member of a Hindu joint family entered into an agreement for sale of a joint family property but without any mention therein as to his status in the family, held, it is permissible to prove by oral evidence whether or not he acted in the transaction as karta of the family: A.I.R. 1979 All. 65.

Purchase of goods on basis of oral representation of quality—Written contract silent on the point—Evidence of oral agreement is admissible: 1958 B.L.J.R. 108: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 378.

Where two brothers entered into an agreement for sale of their two ancestral houses for a consideration of Rs. 2,250 and received Rs. 200 by way of earnest money, the vendee was put in possession of the two houses, and the sale deed was agreed to be executed after lifting of attachment of the houses, held, the vendee could not maintain the suit for specific performance in respect of only one of the two houses; it was not at all open to him, in view of Ss. 91 and 92, to contend that the agreement of sale was in fact two separate agreements whereby each house was to be sold for consideration of Rs. 1,125 out of which earnest money of Rs. 100 had been paid to each of the brothers: A.I.R. 1976 Bom. 342: 1976 Mah.L.J. 224.

Loan transaction—Reduced to writing—No mention of interest made in writing—Oral evidence to prove interest is inadmissible: 1962 Kash.L.J. 33: A.I.R. 1962 J.&K. 41.

An oral agreement between the endorser and the endorsee of a negotiable instrument that the endorsee will recover the amount of the instrument from the drawer only is admissible under proviso (2): 105 I.C. 747: A.I.R. 1928 Sind 50.

Where a promissory note was silent as to where money under it was payable and evidence was sought to be given on that point: Held, that the proviso (2) to S. 92, allowed proof of any separate oral evidence about any matter on which a document was silent and which was not inconsistent with its terms. The creditor was, therefore, entitled to prove that the parties agreed that the promissory note was to be paid at a specified place: Madh.B.L.R. (1954) Civ. 311: A.I.R. 1954 Madh. Bh. 184 (F.B.).

16. Proviso (3).—It was not intended by proviso (3) to permit the terms of a written contract to be varied by a contemporaneous oral agreement; the proper meaning of the proviso is that a contemporaneous oral agreement to the effect that a written contract was to be of no force at all until the happening of a certain event may be proved: I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 516: A.I.R. 1943 Sind 67.

When the parties have entered into a written contract, no oral evidence can be let in under S. 92 of the Act to vary, alter or modify the terms of the contract: (1971) 1 Mys.L.J. 258.

Proviso (3) presupposes that in a case to which it could be applied, the contract, grant or other disposition of property itself remains intact, but that, the condition precedent pleaded must in its very nature be extraneous to the contract, grant or disposition itself and as agreed must come into existence before the obligation attaches thereunder: (1939) 41 Bom.L.R. 1263: A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 54.

The words 'any obligation' mean any obligation whatever under the contract, and not some particular obligation which the contract may contain: A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 328: I.L.R. 59 Cal. 106. See also A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 549: (1931) 33 Punj.L.R. 712.

As to the meaning of the terms 'condition precedent'. See (1931) 33 Bom.L.R. 490: A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 297; I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 523: A.I.R. 1939 Sind 299; (1939) 41 Bom.L.R. 1263: A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 54.

Where a party to a document admits execution of the deed but pleads that the deed was never acted upon because of the non-performance of an agreement by the other party and that the deed was vitiated by fraud, it is open to him to offer evidence of fraud; and oral evidence to prove fraud or the existence of any oral agreement invalidating the deed is admissible under provisos (1) and (3) to S. 92: I.L.R. 24 Pat. 230: A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 311. See also A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 453.

In a suit on a promissory note payable on demand, it is not open to the defendant to plead or prove any contemporaneous oral agreement that no sum is payable until accounts have been taken in a certain partnership and then only so much as is shown to be due to the plaintiff's firm, because such an agreement is clearly an attempt to alter the express terms of the written contract embodied in the pronote is not admissible under S. 92: I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 516: A.I.R. 1943 Sind 67.

Where a promissory note is, by its express terms, payable on demand, that is at once, the obligation under the note attaches immediately. A collateral oral agreement not to make a demand until a specified condition is fulfilled has the intention and effect of suspending the coming into force of that obligation which is the contract contained in that note. Such an oral agreement constitutes a condition precedent to the attaching of the obligation and is within the terms of proviso (3) of S. 22 of the Evidence Act: (1967) 2 M.L.J. (S.C.) 32: 1966 S.C.R. (Supp.) 38: A.I.R. 1967 S.C. 333.

In a suit on a promissory note the defendant admitted the execution but pleaded that the consideration merely represented a part of the consideration for an usufructuary mortgage to be executed later in favour of the plaintiff and that the note was not enforceable under any circumstances: Held, that the plea could not be allowed to be proved by oral evidence, the effect of the plea being to nullify the promissory note itself: 21 Mys.L.J. 385: 49 Mys.H.C.R. 122.

Where the defendant in a suit on a pronote pleads absence of consideration and asserts that the note was executed as between such third person and himself as security for money which might be found due between such third person and himself, held, it is a plea that the proof of the existence of amount due to the third person is a condition precedent to the enforcement of the liability under the note and where the plaintiff admits the existence of such a condition precedent, the burden at once falls upon him to satisfy the Court that the condition precedent has already been satisfied: 1943 All.L.W. 82.

Where money is not advanced unconditionally upon promissory note, but is advanced after the note had been executed and on certain conditions previously agreed upon, the promisor is entitled to prove circumstances in repudiation of his liability: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 470: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 456.

Where the defendant pleads that the note sued on was only a receipt for the earnest-money for a contract of purchase by the plaintiff that the purpose of the receipt of money has been wrongly stated in the promissory note, and that it was not intended to attach any obligation to the instrument as such, he is entitled to adduce oral evidence in support of such plea: S. 92 does not bar oral evidence to prove the same: 20 Pat.L.T. 514: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 495.

It is necessary to distinguish a collateral agreement which alters the legal effect of the instrument from an agreement that the instrument should not be an effective instrument until some condition is fulfilled, or to put it in another form it is necessary to distinguish an agreement in defiance of the contract from an agreement suspending the coming into force of the contract. Where a promissory note is, by its express terms, payable on demand that is at once, the obligation under the note attaches immediately. A collateral oral agreement, not to make demand until certain specified condition is fulfilled has the intention and effect of suspending the coming into force of that obligation, which is the contract contained in the promissory note. Thus, the oral agreement constitutes a condition precedent to the attaching of the obligation and is within the terms of proviso (3): (1938) 40 Bom.L.R. 1075: A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 198: (1938) 2 M.L.J. 469 (P.C.).

The defendant executed an isar chitti in the plaintiff's favour acknowledging receipt of a certain amount and promising to get a registered sale deed executed when the balance is paid. In a suit by the plaintiff for specific performance, the defendant pleaded that there was an oral agreement under which the plaintiff should execute a deed of reconveyance before the execution of the sale deed by him. Held, that the oral agreement was not one to defeat a deed of sale or to vary the terms thereof, but was clearly a condition precedent to the implementing of the terms contained in the isar chitti and was, therefore, admissible under proviso (3) of S. 92: 1948 Nag.L.J. 328: I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 900: A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 15.

In a suit for damages for breach of a contract of lease executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant sought to prove by oral evidence that the lease deed had been executed by him merely by way of security for repayment of loan and that there was agreement that it would not be acted upon: Held, that the defendant could adduce oral evidence to prove an agreement suspending the coming into force of the contract contained in the lease deed or to prove that it was to impose no obligation at all until the happening of a certain event. Hence, the oral evidence to prove the contemporaneous oral agreement that the lease deed was only as a voucher or security for the loan and was not to be acted upon was rightly admitted by the Courts below: 1957 M.P.L.J. 399: 1957 Jab.L.J. 753.

The plaintiff sought to set aside a compromise decree on the ground of fraud. The understanding between parties was to the effect that the compromise filed in the suit according to the terms embodied in the decree itself, would have force or effect only on condition that all other civil and criminal litigations were withdrawn. Withdrawal of other cases was manifestly a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under the contract of the compromise. Held, that the case fell within the language of provisos (1) and (3) to S. 92, Evidence Act, and therefore, extraneous evidence apart from the compromise petition was admissible for the purpose of proving fraud. In most of the cases of fraud, it can be established only by introducing extraneous conditions and circumstances: A.I.R. 1956 Ori. 81: I.L.R. (1955) Cut. 95.

Agreement for sale of property within time specified and to deliver possession at the time of the execution of deed of conveyance—Separate oral agreement to the effect that the contract was subject to the condition that the vendor was able to persuade the lessee in possession to surrender his possession within the time specified for the sale is a condition precedent to the arising of obligations under the contract for sale and has not the effect of varying or contradicting the terms of the contract—Evidence of that agreement which falls within the third proviso to the section, can be given, since its effect is to prove the nature of the contract, viz., that it is a contingent contract: A.I.R. 1954 Trav.-Co. 10.

Where there is a sale deed by A in favour of B, an oral agreement that the sale was to be effective only in case A dies of the illness without paying the expenses incurred by B, can be admissible under S. 92, proviso (3): I.L.R. (1956) Hyd. 328: A.I.R. 1956 Hyd. 114.

Plaintiff who purchased certain properties in Court auction subject to a mortgage in the defendant's favour agreed with third parties to sell some of them with the knowledge and consent of the defendant who agreed in writing to accept piecemeal payments from the plaintiff and to release the lands which plaintiff agreed to sell to the third parties. Plaintiff having sued for specific performance of the agreement, the defendant pleaded an oral agreement that the release deed was only to be given when the entire mortgage debt had been discharged and that he was bound to give it if called upon by the plaintiff after such discharge and not before. Held, that the arrangement set up by the defendant was not a 'condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation' within the meaning of proviso (3) and, hence, the oral arrangement could not be admitted in evidence: A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 124: 71 M.L.J. 599. See also A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 841: 71 M.L.J. 522.

Where a forest contract provided for extension of time to complete the work and by a supplementary contract, extension of time was completely barred but the contractor was allowed to execute the supplementary contracts pending decision of his request for its modification as had been allowed to certain other contractors, held, it was open to the contractor to contend that he was not bound by the supplementary contract; neither S. 91 nor S. 92 is attracted because (1) evidence is admissible to prove subsequent conduct of the parties, (2) the evidence sought to be led is not oral but documentary and (3) what is sought to be proved is a condition precedent admissible under proviso (3) to S. 92: A.I.R. 1984 J.&K. 10.

17. Proviso (4).—An agreement to convey, though reduced to writing, is not required by law to be in writing. The agreement was not registered under the Indian Registration Act. The agreement can, therefore, be validly modified by an oral agreement entered into between the parties: I.L.R. (1959) Mad. 552: (1959) 2 M.L.J. 324.

In the case of a document registered, oral evidence is permissible if the terms contained in the document are ambiguous and are not clear in order to determine the true intention of the parties, and the correct nature of the document: A.I.R. 1993 Karn. 257: (1992) 3 Karn.L.J. 207.

Proviso (4) to S. 92 lays down that though a subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify a contract, grant or disposition of property is admissible except where it is required by law to be in writing or has been registered; thus, where a contract in writing is registered either under compulsion of law or voluntarily, no evidence of a subsequent oral agreement to modify or rescind it, is admissible: A.I.R. 1973 Ori. 22.

S. 115 embodies the rule of estoppel while S. 92, proviso (4) embodies only a rule of procedure; thus, S. 115 must prevail over S. 92, proviso (4): A.I.R. 1974 Madh. Pra. 193: 1974 M.P.L.J. 329: 1974 Jab.L.J. 476 (D.B.).

Contract of debt—Oral agreement can be proved to modify the terms of a written contract of debt: A.I.R. 1953 Madh. Bh. 157. Proviso (4) to S. 92 only permits the proof of subsequent oral agreement to modify a contract; but if such agreement was entered into contemporaneously with the contract, it cannot be proved: I.L.R. (1943) All. 752: 1943 All.L.J. 411: A.I.R. 1943 All. 370.

It is erroneous to hold that proviso (4) to S. 92 comes into operation only when the document is compulsorily registrable and is registered. As soon as the parties get it registered, whether it is compulsorily registrable or not, it comes within the purview of proviso (4) to S. 92: 1948 A.M.L.J. 1.

Proviso (4) makes an exception in cases in which contract, grant or disposition of property has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents. It does not exclude documents which are not compulsorily registrable. If a document has been registered that is sufficient for purposes of proviso (4). So evidence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to modify an agricultural registered lease deed is inadmissible according to law: (1955) 1 M.L.J. 221.

The expression 'oral agreement' as used in proviso (4) is wide enough to include all unwritten agreements whether they are oral or they are implied from acts and conduct of the parties. But evidence of conduct is admissible to show that as between the parties the particular term was never intended to be acted upon or enforced, or to prove an estoppel or waiver: A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 717.

There is no law in India whereby a release of mortgage should be in writing and registered: A contract of release between the mortgagor and the mortgagee may require writing under proviso (4) and may require registration under the Registration Act. But the case is different when the contract to release is between the mortgagee on the one hand and a stranger who purchases the property released after the contract. Such an oral release is valid: 40 Mad.L.W. 942: 68 M.L.J. 91. See also 1937 Rang.L.R. 13: A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 220 (where a second mortgagee was held not entitled to plead the bar under this section of proof of oral agreement between mortgagor and first mortgagee to release some items of his mortgage from the mortgagee).

When there is a registered mortgage deed, held, subsequent oral agreement modifying terms of original mortgage deed is inadmissible under S. 92, proviso (4): 1979 Cur.L.J. (Civ.) 7 (Punj.) (D.B.).

Where the mortgagee of a registered mortgage deed endorsed on its back that he had received the principal but given up the interest accrued and delivered the deed to the mortgagor, held, the endorsement on the back of the deed, unregistered, was inadmissible both for want of registration as well as under S. 92, proviso (4). S. 114 is also of no help; the deed being in possession of the mortgagor merely raises a presumption which may be rebutted; it does not prove that the deed had been fully satisfied. [A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 794; A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 636; A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 170; A.I.R. 1930 All. 721 (F.B.) held not good Law in view of A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 153]: A.I.R. 1977 Mad. 298: (1977) 90 Mad.L.W. 248: (1977) 1 M.L.J. 528. See also (1980) 1 M.P.W.N. 318.

Where after the execution of a mortgage, the mortgagee is put in possession of the mortgaged property so that the rents and profits of the property might be adjusted towards the principal and interest, there is nothing in the provisions of S. 92 to bar the proof of this agreement in a suit on the mortgage. All that is done by the agreement is to provide for a method of payment which does not in any way affect any of the provisions of the mortgage deed. It cannot be said that the proviso (4) to S. 92 has any application to such a case: 1947 O.A. (C.C.) 350: 1947 All.W.R. (C.C.) 350.

Where in the case of a simple mortgage, the parties by a subsequent oral agreement, put the mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged lands for recovery of interest, it is merely an agreement creating a machinery for discharging interest and it is not hit by S. 92: A.I.R. 1958 Mys. 43.

Where a mortgage deed contains a stipulation that the only evidence which the parties could rely upon in support of any payments made in satisfaction of the mortgage debt should be payments endorsed on the mortgage deed itself, it does not preclude the parties from adducing other evidence to prove discharge. S. 92 does not bar such evidence: 192 I.C. 861: A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 246. See also 196 I.C. 645: 23 Pat.L.J. 379: A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 105. But see A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 49: 21 Pat.L.T. 437. [Though it is always open to a mortgagor to prove that on a certain day he paid the sum due under the mortgage, still when in the registered mortgage deed there is an express term that payment should be made in a certain way and unless endorsed on the deed it should not be regarded as payment at all, the mortgagor will not be allowed to prove discharge of the mortgage by subsequent oral agreement which goes to vary the terms of the mortgage.]

Oral agreement between one of several mortgagors and mortgagee for redemption of his share thereunder. Payment can be proved: 112 I.C. 559: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1050. Mortgage suit for sale—Defendant pleading subsequent oral agreement to accept properties in satisfaction of mortgage—Agreement not admissible: A.I.R. 1929 All. 615. But see contra A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 261: 71 M.L.J. 850. A distinct oral agreement between co-mortgagors subsequent to the deed should, in order to be admissible under this proviso, be in writing: 137 I.C. 285: A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 218.

When the document is in terms a possessory mortgage, evidence to show that the mortgage was in reality a simple mortgage according to the intention of the parties is inadmissible under S. 92: 60 I.A. 273: I.L.R. 14 Lah. 466: 65 M.L.J. 150 (P.C.).

Where the subsequent oral agreement relates merely to the mode of payment of mortgage money, evidence with respect to it is admissible. But if it is not merely an agreement as regards the mode of payment but an alteration of the mortgage itself, such as changing the original mortgage which was without possession into a usufructuary mortgage, it is not admissible: 110 I.C. 261 (L.).

Subsequent to a registered mortgage, parties entered into a contract by which the property was to be put in possession of the mortgagee for 5 years and the mortgage debt was to be deemed discharged. Held, that the contract to let and the letting into possession for 5 years operated as a discharge of the obligation and in no way offended the provisions of S. 92: 162 I.C. 53 (2): A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 380.

In a suit for redemption of registered zarpeshgi of 1929, the defence was that by an oral settlement of the same land in 1942 with the defendants they had discharged the liability under the zarpeshgi of 1929, by setting off the amount of salami which they were liable to pay to the plaintiffs against the due which the plaintiffs owed to them under the zarpeshgi. Held, that oral evidence to prove the oral settlement in discharge of the zarpeshgi of 1929 could be admitted because this was a case of total extinguishment of the zarpeshgi and not a case in which the subsequent transaction set up by the defendants amounted to or had the effect of varying or rescinding the agreement between the parties resulting in the transaction of zarpeshgi of December, 1929. Consequently, there was no question of the application of the bar under S. 92, Evidence Act. It is true that proviso (4) of S. 92, Evidence Act, also bars evidence of oral contract which has the effect of rescinding a previous written contract, but rescission of a contract means that the parties thereto agree subsequently to absolve each other from the rights and liabilities accruing to them from the previous transaction. It does not proceed on the basis of the validity and subsistence of the rights and liabilities created by the original contract, but puts an end to it or avoids it. In such circumstances, of course, the law requires that when the original contract is in writing it may not be proved to have been abrogated except by a document in writing; but this is altogether different from an arrangement between the parties subsequent to a contract whereby accepting the rights and liabilities accruing there upon they seek to fulfil the obligations arising therefrom and thereby discharge the liability of one party as against the other; that would be an extinction of the previous contract by performance and not by cancelling it or avoiding it. This is the distinction between the two. And where the nature of the subsequent contract is independent to the operation of the previous contract, it has been held that such a subsequent contract between the parties can be pleaded and proved even though that contract, otherwise valid, is oral. It is not necessary that it should also be in writing and registered to operate effectively for the purposes of the adjustment and fulfilment of the rights and liabilities of the parties under the previous contract which is a registered instrument in writing: 1959 B.L.J.R. 397: A.I.R. 1959 Pat. 531.

A contract of simple money debt is not one required by law to be reduced to the form of a document: 26 Nag.L.R. 320: A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 298.

Where time of payment and conveyance was found to be of the essence of the contract reduced to writing and it was deposed by the plaintiff's witness that in view of another proceeding pending in the Court, the parties had agreed to postpone receipt or payment of money, held, it amounted to modify by oral evidence, a contract reduced to writing; it was impermissible under proviso (4) to S. 92: (1988-2) 102 Mad.L.W. 292 (D.B.).

An oral statement of a promise that he remits the interest payable under a promissory note is not an agreement within the meaning of S. 2 (e) of the Contract Act, but is an one-sided act on the part of the promisee, and it is, therefore, not excluded by S. 92 (4): (1942-43) 47 Cal.W.N. 213: I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 101: A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 481.

Where a promissory note is payable on demand, oral evidence to prove a subsequent agreement to postpone the date of payment is inadmissible under proviso (4) to S. 92, inasmuch as the effect of the subsequent agreement is to alter the terms of the original contract in writing: 1958 An.L.T. 372.

An oral agreement by the executant of a promissory note, that, instead of money being paid, payment shall be made in the form of a transfer of land cannot be proved under S. 92(4): 151 I.C. 398: A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 228. See also A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 521.

S. 92, proviso (4), applies where the original transaction was by a written and registered instrument. Where the subsequent transaction averred by the mortgagee is one converting the mortgage into a sale, it is clearly a modification of that disposition and as such cannot be evidence in a law Court by anything short of deed, which like the deed of the original disposition should be registered: 1962 M.P.L.J. 423: 1962 Jab.L.J. 962.

By a registered deed by way of family arrangement, the family properties including Zamindari properties were divided between the mother and her three sons. The mother was given a life interest in 1/4th share of the properties. After the abolition of Zamindari by the Land Reforms Act, one of the sons filed a suit for payment of compensation in respect of his share. The suit was compromised and a fresh agreement modifying the terms of the family arrangement was arrived at. Under this compromise the mother agreed to forgo her interest in all the family properties including the compensation. In proceedings for compensation payable in respect of the Zamindari situated in Bihar, the mother again claimed a share therein.

Held, that the mother was entitled to claim a share in compensation money in respect of the Zamindari properties vesting in the State of Bihar in accordance with the family arrangement. Since the compromise petition filed in the U. P. Court covered properties in Bihar, which were not the subject-matter of the suit, required registration and being an unregistered document could not be put in evidence by virtue of proviso (4) to S. 92, Evidence Act: 1961 B.L.J.R. 767: A.I.R. 1962 Pat. 215.

Though an agreement for sale or reconveyance is not required by law to be registered but once written and registered, held, any subsequent oral evidence varying the terms of the deed would be inadmissible: A.I.R. 1973 Gau. 132 (D.B.).

An oral agreement that a registered deed of sale should be null and of no effect until the agreement of re-purchase has been executed by the vendee cannot be proved under the provisions of proviso (4): A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 310.

A document purporting to be a sale deed was presented for registration. The executant denied that he had executed a sale deed and stated that he had merely agreed to execute a mortgage deed. After some dispute, the parties agreed that the transaction should be treated as a mortgage and made statements to the Sub-Registrar, who recorded the terms of the mortgage agreed to by the parties and registered the document as a mortgage deed. Held, that proviso (4) did not prevent the successor-in-interest of the executant from proving that the transaction entered into between the parties was really a mortgage and not a sale: 145 I.C. 697 (1): A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 318.

Where the plaintiff alleged that he executed sale deed in lieu of loan taken from the defendant and was not to be acted upon and further alleged agreement to recovery, held, evidence was admissible to show those oral agreements: 1977 Mah.L.J. (Notes) 40.

Plaintiff executed a sale deed to the defendant which was registered. On the same date the defendant executed an agreement to reconvey the properties to the plaintiff which was not registered. The sale deed itself did not contain any reference to the agreement. Plaintiff having sued for specific performance of the agreement, objection was raised to the use of the unregistered agreement under S. 92(4). Held, that no objection under S. 92(4) could arise in view of the fact that the sale was maintained and only the covenant for repurchase was sought to be enforced: A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 703: 67 M.L.J. 635. See also 179 I.C. 172: A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 142.

S. 92 of the Evidence Act excludes extrinsic evidence which modifies or adds to the terms of a written instrument. While proviso (2) to that section deals with the existence of a separate oral agreement contemporaneous with the written instrument, proviso (4) deals with such an agreement entered into subsequently. The latter makes it clear that such an agreement which rescinds or modifies any registered contract cannot be proved except when it is in writing and has been registered according to law. Thus, the document embodying the terms varying or adding to the terms of the registered mortgage deed must be duly registered. In the absence of such a registered deed, no modification or addition to the transaction reduced to writing and duly registered is permissible in law.

Held, that there was no stipulation of interest at the time when the original contract was entered into. All that was agreed upon was that the mortgage would be a mortgage with possession and if the mortgagor failed to redeem on expiry of two years, the mortgagee would be entitled to get back his money due from the hypothecatee and other property and person of the mortgagor. The stipulation of interest is a subsequent feature and as such cannot be permitted to be proved or given effect to in view of S. 92(4) of the Evidence Act: (1968) 1 An.L.T. 341.

If a creditor waives his right under a contract or relinquishes his claim, such an act of grace does not amount to an agreement falling within the exception in proviso (4). A remission or relinquishment or discharge does not come within the mischief of proviso (4). An endorsement of payment on an agreement which, though not registrable, is registered; evidencing the receipt by the creditor of a smaller amount than is due and discharging the debtor, does not fall within the proviso and therefore, parole or oral evidence to prove the creditor's waiver is admissible in evidence, although the endorsement is not itself registered: 20 Mys.L.J. 160: 46 Mys.H.C.R. 516.

Oral evidence to prove satisfaction of a claim is admissible: I.L.R. 6 Rang. 191: A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 144; but not to prove an oral agreement modifying terms of a reference of a registered agreement referring matter to arbitration: 135 I.C. 230: A.I.R. 1932 All. 154.

A C.I.F. contract is not required by law to be in writing; if it is not registered, it can be legally varied by an oral agreement modifying its terms: (1932) 34 Punj.L.R. 266: A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 453.

Where an oral agreement is made by two partners to dissolve the partnership earlier than originally agreed to in their registered agreement, held, the oral agreement and any payment made in accordance therewith is admissible in evidence: 14 Nag.L.J. 179: A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 42.

Arbitration agreement need not be in writing within the meaning of the proviso—Existence of subsequent oral agreement to modify contract may be proved—Contract between A and B—Despatch of letter and telegram by A to B to delete arbitration clause—No response from B—A is bound by arbitration agreement—[Arbitration Act, 1940, S. 2 (a)]—[Contract Act, 1872, S. 62]: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 199.

No oral agreement is admissible to prove variation of the terms of a registered lease including a term as to the payment of rent, although rent at a reduced rate has been paid and accepted for many years: I.L.R. 22 Pat. 5: A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 152.

This proviso bars proof or oral agreement by lessor to release lessee from his liabilities under the personal covenants contained in a registered lease: I.L.R. 60 Bom. 394: (1936) 38 Bom.L.R. 34: A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 88. See also 1937 O.W.N. 477: A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 341.

Where a lease by law is not required to be in writing or registered but the deed embodying it is in fact registered, held, in either case no subsequent oral agreement to rescind or vary its terms is admissible and is hit by S. 92, proviso (4). [A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 400, Disting.]: A.I.R. 1971 Ker. 333.

Flats constructed by promoters and sold to purchasers—Purchasers had no right to open spaces, roof tops, lifts etc. under written agreement—Plaintiff alleging that before he took flats on lease from purchasers, the promoters had orally agreed that plaintiff could construct on roof-top space—Held, such agreement being prior to his written agreement with purchasers, is not covered by proviso (4): 1979 Rajdhani L.R. 7: I.L.R. (1979) 1 Del. 84.

A landlord is entitled to recover enhanced rent on the basis of an oral agreement between him and his lessee subsequent to Coolicharth which is evidenced by an instrument which is neither required by law to be in writing nor to be registered. Such a subsequent oral agreement will be covered by proviso (4) to S. 92, Evidence Act: 1959 Ker.L.T. 247: A.I.R. 1959 Ker. 400.

Where the tenants did not contend that they acquired tenancy rights by a subsequent, separate oral agreement with the landlord, held, it does not amount to varying the terms of a written deed; proviso (4) is not attracted: A.I.R. 1981 P.&H. 73: (1981) 83 Punj.L.R. 104.

Where a mortgagee is also the tenant of the mortgagor and it is agreed upon by oral agreement subsequent to the execution of the mortgage-deed that the rent is to be adjusted towards interest, without affecting the rate of interest as stipulated in the mortgage bond, the subsequent oral agreement merely creates a machinery for discharging the interest and is not hit by S. 92, proviso (4). If on the other hand, the rent is either less or more than the interest stipulated in the mortgage bond, then the subsequent oral agreement either limits or creates an interest in the mortgage security and is not admissible under said proviso: (1969) 11 Ori.J.D. 1.

Where tenancy in the shop was originally created in the name of a partner and after his retirement, it continued to be used and occupied by the reconstituted firm, held, it was permissible for the tenant under proviso (4) to prove the existence of a distinct subsequent oral agreement to modify the original tenancy so as to show that the tenancy was held by the partner on and for behalf of the firm; a 'lessee' or 'tenant' does not necessarily negative agency; proviso (4), however, does not extend to contracts or grants which are by law required to be in writing or have been registered according to the law in force: A.I.R. 1976 S.C. 2400: (1977) 79 Punj.L.R. 57: (1976) 4 S.C.C. 89: 1976 U.J. (S.C.) 802.

Tenancy evidenced by registered lease deed—Variation in rent—Variation must be by another registered instrument: (1969) 2 M.L.J. 8.

Subsequent oral agreement—Contractual tenancy evidenced by registered deed—Proceedings for fixation of standard rent—Tenant contending that proceedings are not with reference to deed to apply S. 92 and hence subsequent oral agreement can be admitted in evidence to prove variation which would make Madras Act (XVIII of 1960) inapplicable to tenancy—Held, to make Madras Act inapplicable contractual or agreed rent had to be found and it was for tenant to prove that same was different from that stipulated in lease—This he could not do except by proof of another registered instrument: (1970) 1 M.L.J. 15.

Where general management of a firm was vested by the partnership deed in the managers and the partners, by a resolution, entrusted purchase of machinery to another person, held, the resolution of the firm, being in consonance with the partnership deed as well as the Partnership Act, could be proved; it was not hit by S. 92: A.I.R. 1976 All. 141 (D.B.).

An oral subsequent agreement to modify the terms of a written contract may be orally proved; where there was no cogent evidence to show that the commission was agreed to reduced from 5 to $2^1/_2$ percent, held, on facts that variation in the written contract was not proved: (1989-1) 30 Guj.L.R. 456: (1989-1) 9 Guj.L.H. 495 (D.B.).

18. Proviso (5).—A custom is no answer to the bar under S. 92; though proviso (5) allows 'any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description' to be proved but it does not warrant demolishing the original contract by substituting new terms enabling it to escape from its obligations under the original contract: (1978) 91 Mad.L.W. (S.N.) 40 (S.C.).

Ss. 91 and 92 do not prohibit the Court from importing into the lease deed reduced to writing the convenants or conditions implied in the tenancies under S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act; a provision of law is neither a statement of a witness nor a document produced for the Court's inspection; Ss. 91 and 92 donot purport to override the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act or any other law; besides, proviso (5) of S. 92, despite the prohibition contained in the section, expressly permits proof of any usage or custom whereby incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description; but such usage or custom must not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the contract's express terms; it would be absurd to suggest that provisions of law whereby such incidents are annexed to contracts should be kept out: A.I.R. 1980 Pat. 120: 1980 B.B.C.J. (H.C.) 123: 1980 B.L.J.R. 255.

Sale of Goods Act, 1930, Ss. 2(2) and (4) and 18—Document of title—Pucca Delivery Orders issued by Jute Mills in accordance with customs prevailing in Calcutta Jute Market are not documents of title—Evidence of trade usage under which such orders are considered as documents of title is barred under proviso (5) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 741.

19. Proviso (6).—This proviso does not apply where the document is clear and unambiguous in its terms: A.I.R. 1939 Sind 200: I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 530.

Where there is no ambiguity which needs explanation and terms of document are quite clear, evidence to explain the terms of the deed should not be allowed: 164 I.C. 463: A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 508. See also 18 Mys.L.J. 196: 45 Mys.H.C.R. 109; 1943 O.W.N. 325: 1943 O.A. (C.C.) 179.

Where the terms of a written contract are perfectly clear, the necessity of deducing the real terms from the conduct of the parties and the reconstituting of the contract in accordance therewith does not arise: 184 I.C. 585 (2): A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 41; A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 492. Per Banerjee, J.—Under proviso (6) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act, any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts. The object of admissibility of the evidence of surrounding circumstances is to ascertain the real intention of the parties, but this intention must be gathered from the language of the document as explained by the extrinsic evidence. No evidence of any intention, inconsistent with the plain meaning of the words used will be admitted, for the object is not to vary the language used, but merely to explain the sense in which the words are used by the parties. The scope and limitation of proviso (6) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act are to be gathered from Ss. 93 to 98 of the Act. Proviso (6) to S. 92 and Ss. 93 to 98 of the Act must be read together: 1958 Cal.L.J. 252; (1959) 2 An.W.R. 23.

Under proviso (6), any fact is provable which shows in what manner language of document is related to fact existing at the time of executing it: (1965-66) 70 Cal.W.N. 982.

Proviso (6) to the section is not an exception to the rule laid down in the main section, as a proviso normally is; it is a substantive provision itself laying down the law as to admissibility of extrinsic evidence as an aid to the construction of a document where it is necessary to co-relate it to the then existing facts; it has nothing whatsoever to do with the question of contradicting, varying, adding to or substracting from the terms of the documents dealt with in the main section: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 365: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 509: 1972 Mah.L.J. 756.

Extrinsic evidence admissible under S. 92, proviso (6) is for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of the words used, that is by translating the documents' language by assigning definite meanings to the words used and their effect in cases where the words used may raise suspicion about the parties' real intention so as to relate them to the circumstances of the writer or to the facts then existing: A.I.R. 1972 Bom. 365: 1972 Mah.L.J. 756: (1972) 74 Bom.L.R. 509.

As S. 92, proviso (6) clearly permits extrinsic evidence of facts to show as to how the language of a document is related to existing facts and since construction of a document is a question of law, held, it can well be considered in a second appeal: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 98: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 363.

Construction and Scope—If to be read with Ss. 94 and 95—Construction of contract — Surrounding circumstances—Extrinsic evidence—Admissibility. See (1981) 83 Bom.L.R. 339.

S. 92 mandates that where a document's terms are clear and unambiguous, extrinsic evidence to ascertain the parties' true intention is inadmissible; their intention must be gathered from the document's language. However, if the language is ambiguous and admits of a variety of meanings, the 6th proviso to the section, permitting extrinsic evidence as to acts, conduct and surrounding circumstances, can be invoked to enable the Court to know the parties' real intention: A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1833.

Proviso (6) to S. 92 is couched in general terms. It embodies an important canon of interpretation of documents. The object of the admissibility of the evidence of surrounding circumstances under this proviso is to ascertain the real intention of the parties when there is latent ambiguity in the document, i.e., when its language is not, prima facie, consistent with the existing facts. It is difficult to define the limits of the rule of interpretation incorporated in proviso (6), but, generally speaking, evidence of surrounding circumstances is admissible only where there is some ambiguity or doubt as to the meaning of the terms of documents. Where, however, the meanings of the words of the document are plain enough and there is no dispute as to its contents are related to existing facts, no extrinsic evidence, inconsistent with that plain meaning, will be admitted. Under this proviso, the terms of an unambiguous document cannot be controlled by the conduct of the parties: 1968 Cur. L.J. 674: (1968) 70 Punj.L.R. 790.

Proviso (6) to S. 92 of the Evidence Act is of an exceptional nature, in so far as it is not an exception to the rule laid down in the main part of the section that no evidence of any oral agreement or statement can be admitted for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of a written document. It is a substantive provision itself laying down the law relating to the admissibility of extrinsic evidence as an aid to the construction of a document in cases in which it is necessary to find out how the document is related to existing facts. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the question of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of the document with which the main part of S. 92 deals. Proviso (6) to S. 92 does not take away or qualify anything that would, but for that proviso, have fallen within the substantive portion of that section. It is significant that, unlike the main portion of S. 92, proviso (6) is not restricted to extrinsic evidence of an 'oral agreement' or statement. Proviso (6) cannot, therefore, be construed as being an exception to S. 92 and controlled by the main part of that section, or even as being a saving clause to the substantive portion of that section since it does not purport to save anything therein contained from the applicability of the substantive portion of the section: A.I.R. 1969 Bom. 231.

Ss. 94 and 95 read with the main rule of law laid down in S. 92, clearly suggest that proviso (6) to S. 92, comes into play only when there is a latent ambiguity in a document, that is, when the language of the document is not prima facie consistent with the existing facts or, in other words when there is a conflict in the plain meaning of the language used in the document and the facts existing or when they put together lead to an ambiguity. In case, therefore, when the language used in a document is plain and not in any way ambiguous in reference to facts, existing, there is no scope for coming into play of the rule of interpretation laid down in proviso (6) to S. 92, Evidence Act. It is doubtful whether proviso (6) to S. 92 is at all available to prove that what is on the face a mortgage document, it is in fact an absolute sale. The very terms of a mortgage deed in general are so different to those of a deed of sale that any attempt to construe such a mortgage deed as a deed of sale will inherently result in the variation and the contradiction of the terms of the mortgage deed. Held, that the documents in dispute were plain and unambiguous and on their face were usufructuary mortgages and apart from the names given to them in their bodies, the terms stipulated thereunder also conclusively proved that they were intended to operate as usufructuary mortgage deeds, and therefore, no parole evidence was admissible to prove that they were in fact intended to operate as deeds of sale: 1954 B.L.J.R. 486: A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 562; A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 673: 1957 B.L.J.R. 70.

What is prohibited under S. 92, Evidence Act, is that evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall not be admitted so as to contradict, vary, add to, or subtract from its terms. Proviso (6) is one of the exceptions to this prohibition, under which it would be permissible for one to establish by oral evidence that the language of the document is not what it purports to be, as it is unrelated to and contrary to existing facts of which oral evidence can be given under the proviso. The evidence of the surrounding circumstances under which the document was brought about may, therefore, be given to show that the transaction is not what it appears to be and that the apparent tenor is not its real character: (1955) 1 M.L.J. 12: A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 78.

It is always open to show how the terms of a document are related to existing state of things and therefore, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the terms of a particular document are those given to a sub-contractor, though the word sub-contractor has not been used in the document: A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 48: (1952-53) 57 Cal.W.N. 743.

Extrinsic circumstances, showing the real intention of the parties, can be proved under S. 92, proviso (6), Evidence Act. These circumstances may be found in the contemporaneous conduct of the parties and may include the fact that the transferee in the same sitting agreed to reconvey the property before the execution of the sale deed and executed a separate document accordingly: A.I.R. 1953 Bhopal 18. Sale-deed to a dancing girl—Contemporaneous oral agreement that it was to take effect as maintenance arrangement is not admissible: 31 Mad.L.W. 516: A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 547.

Where lands sold under a sale deed comprised of bagait and jirayat kinds and dispute arose whether the vendees had the right (denied by the vendors) to use the well on the vendors' adjacent land not sold to the vendees for irrigation of the lands sold, held, under proviso (6), it is permissible to adduce extrinsic evidence to construe the sale deed to decide whether the use of well for irrigation of the lands sold was intended under the deed. [A.I.R. 1950 S.C. 15, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 Guj. 98: (1975) 16 Guj.L.R. 363.

Oral evidence is admissible to show the real nature of the transaction evidenced by the document as, for instance, that a document though styled as a gift is really a will: 117 I.C. 907 (2): A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 875 (2); but not a sale into mortgage: A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 459; A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 182; A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 501: I.L.R. 49 Bom. 662. See also A.I.R. 1939 Sind 200: I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 530.

It is not competent for a Court to look into the evidence of surrounding circumstances to find out whether a document which purported to be an out and out sale, was intended to take effect only as a security bond: (1959) 2 An.W.R. 23.

Where the vendor brought a suit for redemption on the basis of a document which is apparently a sale deed and contends that the document was in real fact a mortgage deed as the language used in the document had no meaning in relation to existing facts. Held, that the Court was right in applying proviso (6) to S. 92, read with Ss. 94 and 95, of the Evidence Act in allowing the existing facts to be proved by the plaintiff in order to show that the suit document was really only a mortgage and not sale deed: A.I.R. 1965 Manipur 31.

Misdescription in designation of Officer authorised to file complaint—Complaint written on form printed during existence of Municipal Board—Extraneous evidence to prove that complaint was made by duly authorised person—Admissibility: 1963 All.L.J. 765: (1964) 1 Cr.L.J. 626: A.I.R. 1964 All. 270.

Oral evidence, to show that at the time of the execution of the document the parties agreed as between themselves that the document was not a sale but a mortgage, will be admissible to show the conduct of the parties showing that it was only a mortgage and not a sale deed. Proviso (6) to S. 92 permits any fact to be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts. Thus, where, for example, a sale deed is executed and the value of the land is found to be far more than the consideration mentioned therein, the vendee does not take possession and allows the vendor to remain in possession, and the vendor continues to pay the revenue and this state of affairs continued for a long time, evidence of these existing facts and the manner in which the language was adopted in the document in respect thereto will certainly have to be allowed. All these facts will really act as an estoppel on the vendee from claiming that the sale deed really conveyed title to him and was not a mortgage: A.I.R. 1962 Manipur 45.

A mortgage by deposit of title deeds, being an oral transaction, does not require any writing; but if the parties contemporaneously enter into a contractual agreement in writing as an integral part of their transaction which by itself is an operative and not merely evidential instrument; in order to decide whether the instrument is operational or evidentiary, the Court may admit evidence contemplated under S. 92, proviso (6): A.I.R. 1994 Guj. 153 (S. B.).

Where a document on its face constitutes a mortgage, and the terms in the bond clearly indicate that the transaction was that of a usufructuary mortgage and not an absolute sale, oral evidence of subsequent events would not be admissible to prove the contrary. Proviso (6) of S. 92 can only be resorted to where there is any ambiguity in the document itself, that is to say, where there is any difficulty in the construction of the language of the document. In a case where the language of a document is plain and unambiguous, there is no room for examining the transaction by reference to subsequent events: A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 126: 1956 B.L.J.R. 83.

Where one rent note created tenancy in favour of one tenant and the other, executed shortly thereafter, in favour of that tenant and another, and there was nothing in them to indicate that the second note had terminated the first tenancy, held, it could not be concluded that they were not two separate tenancies in two portions of a single shop divided by the landlord; no oral evidence contrary to the two notes was admissible: (1993-1) 103 Punj.L.R. 291.

Where there was ambiguity in the lease deed as to whether the lease was only of land or with the building thereon, held, in the facts and circumstances of the case, oral evidence could be considered in terms of proviso (6) to S. 92 in order to find out the subject-matter of lease: A.I.R. 1994 Pat. 91.

Agreement by Hindu father on behalf of minor son to purchase property—Agreement reduced to writing—Suit for rescission of contract—Defendant pleading that contract was also on behalf of the entire joint family—Plea amount to variation or addition to terms of agreement—Not within proviso (6)—Defence held barred by S. 92: 1966 Mah.L.J. 446: (1966) 68 Bom.L.R. 891.

Contract between Board and plaintiff to carry all works of construction during time specified—Contractor also bound to construct original work of value of Rs. 5,000—Contractor doing repair works of value of more than Rs. 5,000—Limit does not apply to repair work and no sanction is required for such work which is covered by contract which is valid—Work held referable to contract and not subsequent agreement of plaintiff giving consent to do repair work—Applicability of S. 92, proviso (6), in matter of construction of the contract: 1969 Jab.L.J. 304: 1968 M.P.L.J. 425.

The Ruler of erstwhile Chamba State had, by a deed, made an inam grant of certain land alongwith Namasi in favour of G and her son D. During regular settlement operation, the cultivable land granted under the deed was mutated in the ownership of D, but Namasi was not mutated in his name and it was recorded as owned by the State Government. The application to record Namasi in his name was dismissed by the Settlement Officer on the ground that grant did not include any area in Namasidhar forest. The appeal was also dismissed. In declaratory suit filed in Civil Court, the heirs of the grantees produced the deed of grant dated 2nd May, 1893, purported to bear signature of the Maharaja, and also produced oral evidence. The deed of grant was nearly 70 years old when tendered in evidence. The respondent, did not lead any evidence to prove that the deed did not bear the signature of the Maharaja and was not properly executed. The grantees also produced the evidence that during the State regime, forest had not been measured and that, therefore, in the grant made by the Ruler, details of the forest area granted were not given and only the name of the forest was specified. Held, on facts that an inam grant was made by the Ruler and besides cultivable land Namasidhar was also granted under the deed.

When nearly 70 years old deed was produced in evidence by the heirs of the grantees, it was produced from proper custody and a presumption arose under S. 90 that the deed bore the signature of the ruler and that it was duly executed. The presumption was strengthened by the evidence of the witnesses. Further, a deed of grant is to be interpreted and construed according to the plain and the ordinary meanings of the words used therein. As the deed contained the words, 'alongwith Namasi' after the description of the cultivable lands, those words indicated that besides cultivable land, Namasi was also granted. Though the word 'namasi' was vague and did not by itself lead to the inference that any area, in Namasidhar forest, was granted but that ambiguity about 'namasi' was a latest one and extrinsic evidence was admissible, under proviso (6) of S. 92, for resolving the ambiguity and for showing that the word Namasi related to some existing state of things. It is also settled rule of construction, that for clearing ambiguities, in ancient documents, resort may be had to any contemporaneous usage: A.I.R. 1966 Him. Pra. 54.

20. Miscellaneous.—Where the drawer of a promissory note mentioning consideration therefor as cash received for family and business expenses pleaded that the consideration therefor was in fact the price for the land sold to him by the drawee which on acquisition by the Government amounted to failure of consideration and rendered the drawee not liable to pay under the note, held, S. 92 was no bar to the plea or its proof by the drawer on whom the burden of proof lies; on facts, burden not discharged: (1994-1) 114 Mad.L.W. 151.

Where a rich lady in affluent circumstances executed a mortgage of a shop owned by her in Ludhiana for a meagre amount of Rs. 5,000 and sued for its redemption wherein the occupant contended that it was a sham transaction to camouflage what in reality was meant to let out the shop on rent to him as a tenant for which he had paid rent and the purported mortgage money was only pugree, held, the Courts below erred in decreeing the suit on the ground that the defendant had adduced no documentary evidence of tenancy or payment of rent; it is unconscionable that the lady would ever have provided documentary evidence contrary to her own stand: (1988-1) 93 Punj.L.R. 478.

Where terms and conditions for opening a cash credit account with the Bank were reduced in writing, held, the document so written and executed constituted the repository of the parties' rights and obligations; as no variation thereof was pleaded by the Bank, Ss. 91 and 92 completely prohibit adduction of any evidence except the document itself as proof of its terms: A.I.R. 1976 Del. 115.

Contract concluded by tender and acceptance followed by signing of printed form contract—Breach—Suit for damages—Plea of non-liability—Tender and acceptance—Admissibility in evidence—If barred. See (1974) 1 M.L.J. 8.

Where a licence to produce and supply electricity was, under the rules, to be granted by notification in the Official Gazette, and the licence agreement was executed after such notification, held, a subsequent 'interpreting statement' by both the parties clarifying that the licence would be deemed to have commenced on the day when the notification was published in the Gazette was not hit by S. 92 it amounted to a clarification of an ambiguity such statements donot always change the meaning of the word or phrase. [A.I.R. 195 S.C. 15, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1975 S.C. 32: (1975) 1 S.C.C. 199: (1975) 2 S.C.R. 42.

Where the Court is merely seeking to construe a registered document purporting to give certain lands by the elder brother to the younger brother for maintenance for himself and his lineal male descendants and finds it to be partition deed, held, it did not involve contravention of S. 92: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 1880.

Where by a registered partition deed, some of the properties were divided and some others were kept joint, held, none of the parties thereto can be permitted to modify, add to o substract from the terms of the agreement by pleading an oral arrangement: A.I.R. 1975 Pat 336 (D.B.).

Issue of commission for examination o interrogatories of council of a deceased party in Pakistan—Evidence sought to be adduced by interrogatories not admissible under Ss. 9 and 127, Evidence Act and as being opposed to defendants' own pleading—Court acts without jurisdiction: A.I.R. 1963 Punj. 27.

Whether a particular place in a route is o is not covered by a permit has to be determined by the Transport Authority by having recourse to the permit itself. Oral admissio by the operator on this matter is inadmissible unless he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of the permit. Such admissions given in ignorance of the legal rights of the operator are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted by him, nor do the operate as estoppel against him: 1967 Raj.L.W 468: I.L.R. (1966) 16 Raj. 682: A.I.R. 1967 Ra 138.

An oral agreement took place on 22n February, 1095 by which the annual patta payable in cash for the holding under th pattomchit of 2nd August, 1082 was agreed be paid partly in kind, held, the main terms the contract were not contradicted or varie A change was made on the mode of discharg of the obligation to suit the convenience of t parties. Instead of the whole pattom bei paid in money as stipulated in the origin document, a portion of it was commuted in paddy at the then prevailing rate and ma payable by the lessee. The agreement wou not offend against the provisions of S. 92. Held, further that pattomchit of 2nd August, 1082 being for a specified period of years and that period having expired before the date of the oral agreement, S. 92 could have no application at all: I.L.R. (1955) Trav.-Co. 106: 1955 Ker.L.T. 1: A.I.R. 1955 Trav.-Co. 69 (F.B.).

Transaction contained in more than one document—Documents should be read and interpreted together—Loan secured from Bank—Letter, promissory note and deed of hypothecation executed in favour of bank by three defendants of which B was one—Held, all documents together satisfied conditions of S. 126 and that B was surety and not co-obligant—S. 92 of Evidence Act did not apply: A.I.R. 1965 S.C. 1856.

Intention of parties—Fire Insurance Policy—Description of building contained in policy, vague and not exhaustive—Oral evidence by agent explaining intention of parties while filling proposal form neither contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from terms of policy, not excluded by S. 92: A.I.R. 1965 All. 561.

Where a bond declares that money is to be repaid with interest at a certain rate, an oral contract to the effect that no interest is to be paid but the person is to be in possession of a certain piece of land and to pay himself the interest out of the usufruct cannot be proved: 122 I.C. 894 (2): A.I.R. 1930 All. 440. See also 1936 A.M.L.J. 107.

Oral evidence may be let in to prove an agreement to pay interest though there is mention of such an agreement in a balance struck in the creditor's book: A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 552.

Where, in a written agreement between a principal and agent, there was a term that the parties would be at liberty to reduce the rate of commission, by mutual consent, and the parties subsequently reduce the rate of commission, oral evidence of such reduction of commission by mutual consent would be admissible in evidence. S. 92 does not bar the admission of such evidence, because what is done is in pursuance of and in compliance with the original agreement or contract of agency and not to vary or modify it: 224 I.C. 273: A.I.R. 1946 All. 489.

Written contract—Plaintiff to supply bhusa at certain stations, in certain quantities at certain period—Agreement containing clause that non-supply of wagons not to be an excuse for non-performance—Oral agreement that Government would supply wagons—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 141.

Where certain terms and trade practices emanating from an agreement falling within the mischief of the Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act were clear and decisive and their meanings were unambiguous, held, no oral evidence could be permitted to deduce their meaning or to vary them; Ss. 91 and 92 were clearly attracted: A.I.R. 1977 S.C. 1285: (1977) 3 S.C.C. 227: (1977) 3 S.C.R. 455.

Bye-laws of East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd. requiring that terms of contract are to be in writing and in the prescribed form i.e., Bought and Sold Notes—Difference in Terms of Bought and Sold Notes—Held, for finding out the contract relating to arbitration the Court cannot go outside the terms of the said Notes and, thus, no evidence, other than that afforded by those notes, could be looked into for the purpose of finding out the terms of the agreement: A.I.R. 1971 S.C. 2289.

While considering whether a particular trade practice set out in an agreement has or may have, the effect of preventing, distorting or restricting competition so as to constitute 'restrictive trade practice' which has to be judged in the light of various relevant considerations which involve contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of the agreement, held, Ss. 91 and 92 are not attracted: A.I.R. 1979 S.C. 798.

93. Exclusion of evidence to explain or amend ambiguous document.—When the language used in a document is, on its face, ambiguous or defective, evidence may not be given of facts which would show its meaning or supply its defects.

(a) A agrees, in writing, to sell a horse to B for "Rs. 1,000, or Rs. 1,500".

Evidence cannot be given to show which price was to be given.

(b) A deed contains blanks. Evidence cannot be given of facts which would show how they were meant to be filled.

When there was no ambiguity in terms and conditions of letters of acceptance that earnest money was to be adjusted, held, it was not permissible to adduce oral evidence in respect thereof: (1985) 1 W.L.N. 780 (Raj.).

Where execution of what purported to be a pre purchase agreement was admitted by the defendant but he was consistent throughout the trial that he had not taken the truck on pre-purchase and had given cogent explanation therefor and having a ring of truth, held, the defendant's evidence was not hit by Ss. 91 and 92: A.I.R. 1978 All. 123 (D.B.).

Where one of the parties to a deed of hypothecation contended despite opposition by other parties, that the survey numbers of the lands in the deed were erroneously mentioned and sought to adduce oral evidence to correct them, held, the party having entered into a wrong contract thereby representing to the other parties to the deed that he was bound by its terms is not entitled as against them to give evidence that in fact he intended something else; unless that were so, there would be no reality in written contracts; oral evidence was barred by S. 92 : A.I.R. 1972 Mys. 184.

Section 93—Notes.

Before S. 93 of the Evidence Act would apply, it must be shown that there was a latent ambiguity. S. 93 cannot possibly be a bar for showing how the challan filed alongwith an election petition is to be interpreted, when there is no ambiguity in the challan at all: A.I.R. 1958 J.&K. 54.

Evidence as regards identity of property leased admissible: 20 All.L.J. 377.

Where the parties described the property as '1 acre of front land' which clearly meant 1 acre of land lying on the northern side of the Engineering College Road, it is difficult to contend that the land intended to be sold was on the extreme northern side of the entire property; the law of contract respects contractual sanctity of contract and gives effect to the reasonable expectation of an honest man; law upholds rather than destroys apparent contracts; they are not to be readily declared invalid for uncertainty or vagueness; the Court must give effect to the parties' ascertainable and determinative intention; the contract will become void only when its terms are vague, uncertain and it cannot be made certain; mere difficulty in interpretation is not synonymous with vagueness; business agreements should be construed fairly and broadly so as to promote business efficacy; as there was no reason for mistake as to the identity of the property intended to be sold, held, S. 93 was not attracted: A.I.R. 1990 Ker. 198.

94. Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts.—When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Appointment of members of notified Area Committee—Latent ambiguity in the name of State Government notification—Extrinsic evidence to prove intention of Government—Admissibility: 1964 B.L.J.R. 890: A.I.R. 1965 Pat. 174.

Where two deeds on their face appear to be separate transactions, another agreement which was not evidenced by any writing cannot be proved to show that the deeds, though apparently two separate transactions were agreed to be treated as one: 175 I.C. 813: A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 242.

Clear language should be used in arbitration agreements which will have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of the Court. If the language of the agreement is not sufficiently clear, it is not permissible to strain the language and supply words to make an indefinite agreement definite, so that the jurisdiction of the Court may be ousted and the disputes adjudicated by arbitration: A.I.R. 1959 Cal. 430.

Plea based on construction of letter—Extrinsic evidence for construction of document—Admissibility. See A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 512.

Where the point in dispute is as to the meaning of a particular word in the document, evidence may be admitted to show in what peculiar sense that particular word was used, and extrinsic evidence including the evidence regarding the subsequent conduct of the parties is admissible to determine the effect of the instrument as well as the intention of the parties: 1969 Raj.L.W. 473: I.L.R. (1969) 19 Raj. 340: A.I.R. 1970 Raj. 36.

Where in the remuneration clause of a deed of contract for the transport of foodgrains, the figure of minimum remuneration to be paid to the contractor was left blank and in suit for damages for breach of contract, the contractor (plaintiff) gave different oral versions regarding filling of the blank space in the remuneration clause, held, apart from destroying his own case the contractor's oral evidence to fill in the aforesaid blank space was inadmissible in evidence under S. 93: (1988) 2 Cal.L.T. (H.C.) 136 (D.B.).

Where a sale deed for agricultural lands by the parties' inadvertent mutual mistake did not mention two khasra numbers and the parties by a subsequent agreement rectified the mistake, held, the subsequent agreement was not hit by the prohibition contained in S. 93; if the parties could get the mistake rectified through the Court under S. 26 of the Specific Relief Act, there can be no bar to their doing so by mutual agreement outside the Court: A.I.R. 1988 P.&H. 88: (1987-1) 91 Punj.L.R. 610: (1988) 1 Rev.L.R. 307.

Where it was not possible to infer from a mere perusal of the notice as to which of the two powers of attorney was intended to be cancelled, held, no evidence could be given to show its meaning or supply its defect: (1977) 13 Del.L.T. 369.

As to oral evidence of one not a party to document. See (1955) 57 Punj.L.R. 1915; 16 O.C. 213: 21 I.C. 429.

Where the language of a document like a deed of compromise is clear and applies without difficulty to the facts of the case, no extrinsic evidence can be admitted for the purpose of affecting its interpretation: 40 I.C. 491: 4 Oudh L.J. 313.

Contemporaneous circumstances and subsequent conduct of the parties are not admissible when there is no ambiguity in the deed and legal construction can be put on it: 195 I.C. 242: A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 507.

Sale deed—Language plain—Mistake in boundaries—Area described correctly—Extrinsic evidence—Admissibility: 150 I.C. 363: (1934) 36 Punj.L.R. 61. On this section, see (1901) 3 Bom.L.R. 768; 1915 Mad.W.N. 325; I.L.R. 38 All. 103; 41 M.L.J. 475; 1939 All.W.R. (H.C.) 173: I.L.R. (1939) All. 309: A.I.R. 1939 All. 231.

Oral evidence to show that one of the executants of a bond signed it only as a surety is not admissible: I.L.R. 5 Rang. 168: A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 199.

S. 94 does not prevent a party to a document, from proving that both the parties to the document were under a mistake of fact as to the contents of the document when they signed it: 122 I.C. 493: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 446.

Where in the case of a sale deed, it is not the seller alone who is trying to get out of the bargain but the seller and the purchaser both agree that the intention was to enter into the deed land bearing different khasra numbers, and that the mistake was mutual, it is open to the parties to produce evidence to show what was intended to be sold and purchased. S. 94 is not applicable in such circumstances: (1940) 42 Punj.L.R. 222: A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 236.

In construing the terms of a security bond, the language of which is plain and applies to existing facts and in which no ambiguity or inconsistency of the kind dealt with by Ss. 95 to 98 exists, it is not permissible to rely on the surrounding circumstances under which the bond came to be executed. S. 94 of the Evidence Act lays down a rule of interpretation of the language of a document when it is plain and applies accurately to existing facts. It says that evidence may be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts. When a Court is asked to interpret a document, it looks at its language. If the language is clear and unambiguous and applies accurately to existing facts, it shall accept the ordinary meaning. Sometimes when it is said that a Court should look in to all the circumstances to find an author's intention, it is only for the purpose of finding out whether the words apply accurately to existing facts. But if the words are clear in the context of the surrounding circumstances, the Court cannot rely on them to attribute to the author an intention contrary to the plain meaning of the words used in the document.

Where a surety bond stated that the defendant has been directed by the Court to furnish security to produce and place at the disposal of the Court the property specified in the schedule and that bound the surety to the Court in that the said defendant shall produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the property (certain bills) or the value of the same.

Held, that the expression 'when required' could only mean 'when required by the Court' and the obligation undertaken by the surety did not arise at all till the Court made the requisition. It was well settled that a surety bond had to be strictly construed and a strict construction of the bond in question led to the only conclusion that demand of the Court on the judgment-debtor and a default made by him were necessary conditions for the enforcement of the bond against the surety. The words 'when required' cannot be confined only to a situation when the property could be produced or the value of the same could be lawfully paid by the judgment-debtor so as to exclude from its scope a case where the judgment-debtor had converted the property into cash and misappropriated it and had become insolvent, on the ground that it would be an empty formality to call upon him to do so in such a case. To accept such a construction of those words would make them unnecessary. To retain those words and yet to give them such meaning, it would be necessary to qualify them by adding 'if the bills could be produced and when the money could lawfully be paid by the judgment-debtor'. But the Court could not add those words because without adding them full meaning could be given to the words 'when required': 1963 M.P.L.J. 738: 1963 Mah.L.J. 730: (1964) 2 S.C.R. 152: A.I.R. 1964 S.C. 859.

Where the language of a document is plain and unambiguous and correctly applies to existing facts, a party will not be permitted to say that the property referred to in that document was some other property. But where the recitals in a sale certificate though plain in themselves do not fit in with the admitted facts, viz., the survey number, the names of the tenants and the area of the plot of land sold and a doubt arises that either the survey number or the names of the tenants and area given must be wrong, extrinsic evidence is admissible under Ss. 95 and 97 of the Evidence Act: I.L.R. (1963) Cut. 189: 29 Cut.L.T. 666: A.I.R. 1964 Ori. 63.

95. Evidence as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts.—When language used in a document is plain in itself, but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

A sells to B, by deed, "my house in Calcutta".

A had no house in Calcutta, but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed.

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howarh.

Section 95—Notes.

Though the sale deeds containing recitals that the property belongs to the vendors is not admissible under S. 13, they are admissible under Ss. 95 and 96 to explain the expression used in the documents that property is the vendor's family property: 1914 Mad.W.N. 779: 26 I.C. 747.

Release deed conditional—Extrinsic evidence of claim released admissible. See I.L.R. 34 Mad. 158: 20 M.L.J. 383; 21 I.C. 69.

Where the recital in the contract as to the names of the transferees in reference to existing facts was unmeaning in the context of earlier recitals and the parties' case, held, it is permissible for the Court to allow oral evidence to ascertain whether transfer was made to a single person having two names or two different persons: A.I.R. 1982 N.O.C. 228 (All.).

Original document in possession of defendant—Document referred to in plaint but not produced—Secondary evidence admissible. See 37 I.C. 794.

Contract—Construction—Offer kept open 'until' and 'up to' a certain date—Oral evidence inadmissible to explain: (1917-18) 22 Cal.W.N. 416: 44 I.C. 305.

Where the second hand note purported to have been executed for a cash consideration of Rs. 4,700 which the Court found was not executed for a fresh cash consideration but only in lieu of the previous dues of the hand note, held, being a clear case of latent ambiguity, oral evidence of circumstances and the existing facts was admissible to show the correct factual position: A.I.R. 1972 Pat. 87: 1971 Pat.L.J.R. 358: 1971 B.L.J.R. 784 (D.B.).

Where there is any doubt about the true construction of the security bond, the bond must be considered in the light of the order directing the security to be given: I.L.R. 61 Cal. 890: A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 569.

Where the surety bond having regard to the nature of the suit and circumstances in which the Court called upon the defendant to furnish security has no meaning, it is permissible to look into the surrounding circumstances and the order of the Court pursuant to which the bond was executed to properly construe its terms: A.I.R. 1959 Mys. 165.

A security bond must be strictly construed according to its own terms when there is no ambiguity in the terms and if there is possible contradiction in the terms of the security bond, S. 95 of the Evidence Act allows reference to the antecedent circumstances and the Court can consider the bond in the light of the order directing the security to be given. [A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 569, Ref.].

A security bond given in favour of the Court can be proceeded with in execution by the decree-holder even without an assignment. The executing Court even if it be a Court to which the decree is transferred for execution, can proceed with the enforcement of the security bond without an assignment or a specific direction from the Court in whose favour the security bond was executed: (1970) 2 M.L.J. 636: (1970) 83 Mad.L.W. 731.

Security bond—Interpretation of—Where words of terms of bond ambiguous, bond to be construed in the light of order directing security to be given: A.I.R. 1965 Cal. 242.

Transfer by mortgagee of mortgaged property—No mention in deed that only mortgage rights were intended to be sold—Latent ambiguity to remove which evidence can be given: 118 I.C. 682: A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 267.

Under Ss. 95 and 98 evidence can be allowed to show interest is payable monthly when document is silent: A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 144. Where just prior to the expiration of three years from the date of the previous pronote, the defendant executed another receipt for the amount already received, evidence is admissible to show that the receipt referred to the original consideration: I.L.R. 8 Luck. 195: A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 80.

96. Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons.—When the facts are such that the language used might have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one, of several persons or things, evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

Order of allotment referring to accommodation situated at particular place, though in fact the accommodation is situated at another place—Parties aware which accommodation was meant—Under S. 95 allottee can adduce evidence to prove to which accommodation the order relates—Slight error in location will not make order invalid: A.I.R. 1964 All. 395.

It is settled law that in a private sale, the area within the boundaries specified prevailed over the area, on the application of the principle of demonstration falsa non noce (false description does not vitiate). Even in the case of sale certificates (issued in Court sales), in the first instance the area within the boundaries must be held to prevail over the extents. But, under Ss. 95 and 97 of the Indian Evidence Act, the parties could lead extrinsic evidence to show what was the true state of affairs, that is to say, whether the whole land lying within the boundaries described was taken possession of and enjoyed in fact or only the extent specified was taken possession of and enjoyed: (1965) 2 An.W.R. 366.

Where there is a conflict between the area and the boundaries as described in a deed, held, it is the description of the boundaries, and not the area, which would prevail. [(1913) 18 Cal.L.J. 541; A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 851; A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 207, Foll.]: A.I.R. 1979 Cal. 50.

Where measurements of land were given in minute details and the boundaries were also mentioned with far greater precision, and nobody contended that there was difficulty about the boundaries, held, the law is well settled that even if there is some discrepancy about the actual area, it is the boundaries which prevail: A.I.R. 1971 Andh. Pra. 74: (1970) 1 An.L.T. 192 (D.B.).

Section 96—Notes.

If the language of a document directly describes two sets of circumstances but could not have been intended to apply to both, evidence may be given to show to which it is intended to apply: 36 I.C. 7: 10 Bur.L.T. 245. Promissory note bearing both English and Malayalam dates—Inconsistency—Evidence as to date of note—Admissible. See (1941) 1 M.L.J. 502: A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 587.

Where a promissory note was made in favour of the Pujari as well as the Temple and the suit was filed by the Executive Officer of the idol, and pleadings and evidence both clearly indicated that the promissory note was only in favour of the temple and not the Pujari in his individual capacity, held, S. 96 was attracted and oral evidence was not barred: (1993-2) 112 Mad.L.W. 377: (1993) 2 M.L.J. 469 (D.B.).

Section 97—Note.

Latent ambiguity—Mortgage deed—Ambiguity in the description of land—Evidence aliunde to clear up ambiguity is admissible: 43 I.C. 721. See also 57 I.C. 2; 58 I.C. 67: A.I.R. 1920 Lah. 322; I.L.R. 18 Bom. 283; I.L.R. 30 Mad. 397.

98. Evidence as to meaning of illegible characters, etc.—Evidence may be given to show the meaning of illegible or not commonly intelligible characters, of foreign, obsolete, technical, local and provincial expressions, of abbreviations and of words used in a peculiar sense.

100. Saving of provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills.—Nothing in this Chapter contained shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (10 of 1865)[1] as to the construction of wills.

Section 99—Notes.

This section is merely an enabling provision: I.L.R. 27 Mad. 329. Evidence by strangers to show real nature of transaction is admissible: 8 I.C. 501; I.L.R. 28 All. 473; 23 Mad.L.W. 664: A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 744; A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 253 (persons not claiming through settler can show that wakf was illusory).

The principle of S. 92 cannot be applied to cases where the dispute is between a party to a document and a third party. This position is made clear by S. 99 which permits a third party to lead evidence not only to vary but also to contradict or subtract from the terms of a document: (1974) 1 M.L.J. 146.

Section 100—Note.

[See also Notes 9 and 10, S. 68, supra].

The mode of proving a will is ordinarily not different from proving any other document except the special requirement of attestation set out in S. 63 of the India Succession Act; in the absence of suspicious circumstances surrounding the will's execution and on proof of testamentary capacity and signature of the testator as required by law as also his sound and disposable state of mind, the will stands proved; suspicious circumstances arise when the will appears to be unnatural, improbable or unfair or where the propounder takes a prominent part in execution of the will which confers on him substantial benefits, the propounder must remove the suspicion by clear and satisfactory evidence; the ultimate test is, however, the balance of probabilities. It is well recognised that as for proof of other documents so for proof of wills, it would be idle to expect proof with mathematical certainty; the satisfaction of the prudent mind is the test applicable to proof of will.
